CINCINNATI ERECT.

AS a capital for all grades and qualities of manufacturers Cincinnati is no longer an experiment. All men familiar with engineering will know what we mean when we say that Cincinnati has passed her center. Like the great City of Brotherly Love, she has not only a great many large manufacturers, manufacturers who represent the superlative degree in their kind, both in quantity and quality of product, but she has countless numbers of small concerns hidden away on the upper floors of many of her large buildings. To illustrate: Some time ago the National Association of Manufacturers, whose headquarters are in Philadelphia, wrote to Mr. E. P. Wilson, of this city, who is the secretary of that association, saying that they were in receipt of a communication from Venezuela, inquiring for a certain kind of machinery, and that after a thorough investigation they had discovered that Cincinnati was the only place in the world where that particular product was turned out.

And this is not an isolated case.

It has often been said that as a commercial city, or to be more explicit, as a jobbing center, Cincinnati had gone backward in the past few years. The figures show that in the last fiscal year Cincinnati's jobbing trade has been larger than at any period in her entire history.

With her unexampled natural advantages, both climatic and geographical, together with her rare facilities for shipping, it could scarcely be otherwise than that she should take a leading place among the manufacturing cities of the world. Early in her history her river advantages gave her exporters access to all the navigable streams and bayous of the South and Northwest, and these helped to make her the Queen of the West. To these advantages the railroad interests have been added in the last forty years, until the city has become one of the most important railroad centers in the world; so important, indeed, that any of her manufacturers can to-day load a freight car on a Cincinnati side-track, and, without break of bulk, deliver it at any station over a railroad system aggregating more than 180,000 miles.

This statement is a formidable one, but the facts bear it out. Any one who has the railroad business of the country in hand can corroborate it by a glance at the map. Centering in Cincinnati is the Erie Railroad, the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern, the Grand Rapids & Indiana, Pan-Handle Route, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis, the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railway, the Cincinnati & Muskingum Valley, the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton, the Louisville & Nashville, with its Kentucky Central Division, the Queen & Crescent, the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, Cincinnati Northern, Cincinnati, Portsmouth & Virginia, the Cincinnati, Lebanon & Northern, the Cincinnati & Northwestern, the Ohio River & Charleston Railway Company, Ft. Wayne, Cincinnati & Louisville Railway

Co., Cincinnati, Georgetown & Portsmouth, the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Indianapolis, the South Carolina & Georgia Extension Railway, the Cincinnati & Westwood Railway, the Covington & Cincinnati Elevated Railroad, Wharfage & Bridge Company, beside a constantly growing number of inter-urban traction companies, that are reaching out from Cincinnati to the limits, not only of this State, but to the limits of Indiana and Kentucky; traction companies whose charters provide not only for carrying passengers but freight.

The cost of the transportation of Cincinnati products compares favorably with that of the products of any other city in America. Even were this not the case her manufacturers have a way of overcoming all obstacles, which enables them to place their output in every quarter of the world. The competition of rival cities only emphasizes Cincinnati's thrift and push. In the forceful words of a well known Cincinnati optimist: "If a Cincinnati manufacturer chances now and then to have a sore toe, he simply walks on the other foot." The Cincinnati manufacturer is resourceful.

Cincinnati's advantages, natural and artificial, the superior quality of her products, the push and enterprise, together with the resourceful character of her manufacturers, have enabled her to make tremendous strides in an increase of business, both at home and abroad, in the past year. Her clearing house transactions were larger than ever before in her history; her credit in the financial centers of the world has no peer. That Cincinnati securities command the highest premium of any municipal securities in this country goes without saying.

The Queen of the West has thrown off her bucolic characteristics, once conspicuous. She is no longer provincial, she is cosmopolitan and metropolitan.

The part of this country that is to-day making the most rapid advances in point of increase in population and wealth is that part located between the Ohio River and the Gulf of Mexico, and that is the particular part that is a natural tributary to Cincinnati. The city's resources have but just begun to be developed. The facts already recited, together with the important fact that all parts of the United States can be reached by Cincinnati products in less average time and at less average cost for freight, express, telegraph or passenger service than by the products of any other important city, make the future for the great capital of the Ohio Valley more flattering than at any period of her history.

STREET DIRECTORY.

THE Street Directory is an alphabetical arrangement of the names of the Streets and Avenues of the city. By the decimal system of numbering houses, one hundred numbers are allotted to each square. On streets running north and south the numbering begins at the Ohio River. The streets running east and west are numbered East and West from Vine street. All other streets not commencing at either of the above points are numbered in accordance with this system. To such of the streets as are of any considerable importance the names and numbers of intersecting streets and avenues are given in the order in which they occur, which enables one to tell between what streets a certain number is. For instance, you have 430 W. 6th street: by reference to the Street Directory, you find 400 at Central Av. and 500 at John street; consequently, the place you wish to find is between Central Av. and John.
