Foreword

It is documented that for over a thousand years a church building has stood on the site of the present Bothwell Parish Church.

During medieval times most burials were simply into unmarked graves with the exception of the great and the good of society who were buried within their church and commemorated by means of plaques and memorials on walls or slabs on floors. Following the Reformation in Scotland in 1560 such burials within churches became illegal. The erection of memorials to mark the graves of loved ones then developed.

In common with other historic churches, Bothwell Kirk's churchyard reveals much to the keen eye about changes in Scottish social history. Throughout, it boasts many fine examples of the different designs such monuments depict, each telling its tale about the deceased's status, trade or profession: from obelisks and chest tombs to flat stones, free-standing crosses, broken columns and various sculptures.

Working in partnership with South Lanarkshire Council Bereavement Services (Churchyards), the church has undertaken a restoration scheme for the Bothwell churchyard. Sadly, many gravestones are badly weathered or suffering effects of past vandalism. Before more damage takes its toll, members of the Bothwell Historical Society were invited to catalogue those that can still be identified. I happily record our gratitude that members of the Society responded so positively. Over the months such research has taken, people have been spotted with clipboard in one hand and magnifying glass in the other scouring the churchyard in all weathers. Such devotion to heritage and community has been well rewarded however, resulting in the contents of this book.

To all involved, my thanks.

Reverend Jim Gibson
Minister of Bothwell
Chaplain to HM The Queen in Scotland

THE KIRKYARD OF BOTHWELL

Few ecclesiastical buildings in Scotland can claim to be more historic or beautiful than the Parish Church of Bothwell. In its time it has represented the three great strands of the Christian religion in this country. From its early foundations, it was a church for the Roman Catholic faith. In 1398, Archibald, 3rd Earl of Douglas petitioned the Pope to have it elevated to the status of a collegiate church. The choir which he added to the Norman building remains one of the great glories of Scottish church architecture to this day. At the Reformation in 1560 it housed a Presbyterian congregation and from 1667 to 1689 reflecting the torrid history of Christianity in Scotland, it was Episcopalian. Since the restoration of Presbyterianism in 1689, it has been a congregation of the Church of Scotland.

Today, as it has done down the centuries, it dominates the centre of Bothwell and since the building of the Church Centre, it has become an important resource for the whole community .

Reflecting the building's long history is the surrounding kirkyard, containing monuments which in themselves are records in stone of the people who once lived in this community. Sadly with the passing of time and because of the vagaries of Scottish weather, many of the gravestones have deteriorated badly. At the invitation of the Minister, Reverend James Gibson, a group of volunteers from Bothwell Historical Society led by Bill Gow, agreed to photograph and where possible to record the inscriptions on the tombstones. This has proved to be a fascinating project which has added greatly to our knowledge of the history of the Church and the community and will be a valuable resource for future generations.

The efforts of the volunteers have been collated for publication in this book namely Geneva Ritch, Jean Caulfield, George Waterston, Bob Boyle, Nicol Rennie, Iain Inglis, Alan Slater, Anne Ferguson, Tom Abercrombie, Edward Mallinson, Joan and Harry Marsh, Marjory Robertson, Ian Crawford, Ian McKellar, John Hart, Alison Rennie, Brian Sharp, Bill and Christine Jack and Eric Denton. We owe them a great deal of thanks for the time and effort. Thanks also to Liz Denton for her publishing skills. The Historical Society is also indebted to the Minister, Rev James Gibson for his encouragement and support.

2017 has been nominated as Scotland's Year of History, Heritage and Archaeology and it is appropriate that Bothwell Historical Society should have produced this fascinating book in a special year for our country. I have much pleasure in commending this book to the people of Bothwell and beyond.

INTRODUCTORY NOTES

The origins of Bothwell Kirkyard are lost in the mists of time but will be closely aligned with the existence of the Church. It is notable that the stones in the Kirkyard generally face east. In Christian cemeteries, headstones traditionally face in this direction as a symbol of the deceased person's anticipation of the second coming of Christ. This event is foretold in Matthew 24:27 "For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." The oldest known gravestone in the Kirkyard is dated 1422 and is located at F:8.

The only record known to exist of burials in the graveyard is held by the Cemeteries Department of South Lanarkshire Council. The first entry in this ledger is dated May 1933. The maintenance of the Kirkyard was taken over by Lanark County Council on the 8th November 1967.

At the request of the Reverend Jim Gibson, the Historical Society agreed to undertake a survey of the gravestones which commenced in September 2016. The Kirkyard was divided into 13 areas (including the interior of the Quire) and volunteers photographed the stones and transcribed their inscriptions. The inscriptions were recorded exactly as they appear on the gravestone even although in some cases there were obvious spelling curiosities! After each area was completed it was then audited by another member of the volunteer group.

Under the photograph and inscription is added a biography of the person/s where available. The information was gleaned from the National Records for Scotland (births, deaths, marriages and census records) and from the internet. Official registration of births, deaths and marriages commenced in 1855. Prior to that, the Old Parish Records are fragmentary. The first census was held in 1841 but does not contain much information. Accordingly it is unusual for there to be much information for persons dying prior to 1855 unless they were notable in some way.

Between official records, eg the census, and the information on the gravestones there can be discrepancies regarding a persons date of birth or age. Where this is the case, the date is prefixed by 'c' (circa) to signify the approximate date.

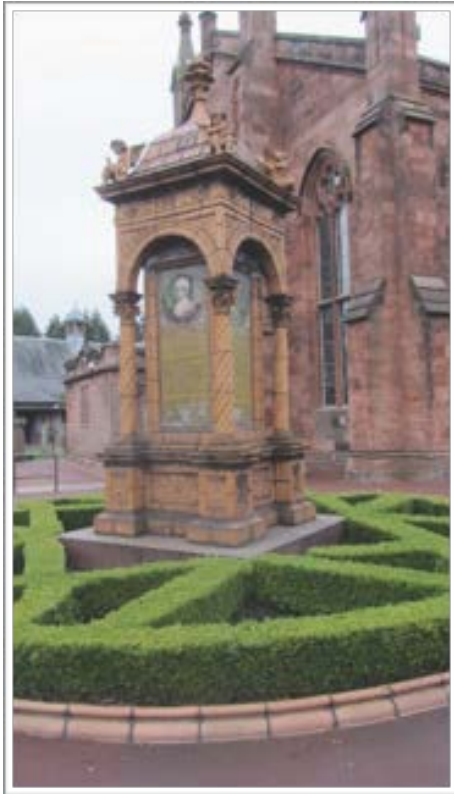

Bothwell Parish Church and its Kirkyard served the Parish of Bothwell. It extended from the village Bothwell eastwards along the line of the South Calder Water to Newarthill and on to Newhouse, its easterly point. The Parish boundary then turned west taking in Chapelhall but passing to the south of Calderbank. It then followed the course of the North Calder Water to Daldowie before following the Clyde eastwards back to the village of Bothwell. The main settlements within Bothwell Parish were Bothwell, Uddingston, Bellshill, New Stevenson, Newarthill, Newhouse, Chapelhall, Holytown, Mossend, Viewpark and Tannochside. In some documentation, particularly the early censuses, people were described as being from Bothwell when they were actually from the Parish of Bothwell. This should be noted when reading the biographical notes.

A number of men buried at Bothwell were described as 'portioner'. A portioner is a Scots term for the proprietor of a small estate or piece of land resulting from the division of an original area of land among co-heirs or otherwise, a small land-owner.

Sadly many of the stones are illegible due to erosion and many have fallen face down and cannot be read. In the book 'By Bothwell Banks' published in 1904 the authors, Henderson and Jeffrey Waddell, recount the story of a stone "which had the head of a dog, with a shuttle in its mouth, carved on the stone". The story accounting for this is said to be well authenticated. It is that a certain weaver, who had his loom at a considerable distance from his home, was wont to use his dog as an intermediary between the weaving shop and his home — the intelligent animal taking the empty pirns back to be refilled, and in return bringing others to his master full. It is pleasant to find the faithful animal thus enjoying what perpetuity of fame there is along with his master." Unfortunately this stone is no longer to be found.

Joanna Baillie

Joanna Baillie, poet and dramatist, was born at Bothwell manse on 11 September 1762. Her father, Rev. James Baillie was Minister of Bothwell Parish Church and a Professor of Divinity at the University of Glasgow. Her mother Dorothea Hunter was a sister of the great physicians and anatomists, William and John Hunter.

Joanna Baillie was the youngest of three children and she grew up in close companionship with her sister Agnes and brother Matthew who became a celebrated London physician. Joanna's early life was marked by a love of the outdoors; playing in the garden, riding her pony, or exploring the banks of the River Clyde. While her brother attended school, Joanna was educated at home by her father. In the early 1770s, both Baillie sisters were sent to a Glasgow boarding school, and it was there that Joanna first developed an interest in books, writing and adapting stories to entertain her classmates. It was in Glasgow that she visited the theatre for the first time, kindling a passion which was to continue for the rest of her life.

Following the death of the Rev Baillie in 1778, the family became dependent on Dorothea's brother, William Hunter, who provided them with financial security as well as residence at his estate in Long Calderwood, near East Kilbride. There they led quiet lives as country gentlewomen. Matthew Baillie went to Balliol College Oxford, following in his uncles' footsteps in the study of medicine. Dr. William Hunter, died in 1783, leaving Matthew Baillie his house at Windmill Street London, his medical school and private museum collection (which is now the University of Glasgow's Hunterian Museum and Art Gallery). Shortly thereafter Joanna, Agnes and their mother moved to London to manage the household for Matthew. There Joanna Baillie met the literary society through her aunt Anne Hunter, the wife of Dr. John Hunter. Mrs. Baillie and her daughters settled, after two or three moves, in Colchester. By 1802 Joanna Baillie had moved from Colchester to Hampstead, then on the outskirts of London, where she and her sister spent the remainder of their lives.

Admired both for her literary powers and her sweetness of disposition, Joanna's home became the centre of a brilliant literary circle and she counted the likes of author Sir Walter Scott and poets William Wordsworth and Lord Byron among her friends. Joanna Baillie's first publication in 1790 was an anonymous volume called Fugitive Verses. In 1798, also anonymously, the first of her "plays on the passions", under the simple title of A Series of Plays was published. This book was highly successful and was followed by a second volume in 1802 and a third in 1812. Her other works included Miscellaneous Plays (1804), the Family Legend (1810), and three volumes of Dramas (1836). While popular in print, Baillie's plays were not successful on the stage. Joanna Baillie was extraordinarily respected in her lifetime. Sir Walter Scott frequently mentioned her in the same breath as Shakespeare. He claimed: "If you want to speak of a real poet, Joanna Baillie is now the highest genius in the country." Lord Byron said, "Women, except Joanna Baillie, cannot write tragedy."

Joanna Baillie died in 1851 in Hampstead aged 88 and is buried alongside her mother in Hampstead parish churchyard.

Walter Beaumont Neilson was born to John Neilson and Janet Montgomerie Neilson. John was an iron master and his wife Janet, born 1838 in Bothwell, was the daughter of James Beaumont Neilson (1792-1865).

James Beaumont Neilson was born in 1792 at Shettleston, Glasgow. He studied at the Andersonian Institution and at the age of 25 he became manager and chief engineer of the Glasgow's first gas works. In 1828, Neilson invented the hot blast oven. Use of the hot blast tripled iron output per ton of coal and permitted the profitable recovery of iron from lower-grade ores. It also made possible the efficient use of raw coal and lower grades of coal instead of coke and permitted the construction of larger smelting furnaces. James patented the process and grew wealthy on the proceeds.

His grandson, Walter Beaumont Neilson was born and died at Cambrae House, Bellshill.

Jane Maitland McMicking was born to Thomas McMicking and Jane Morin at St Ninan's, Stirling in 1816. The McMicking's were a notable family in Wigtownshire with a lineage back to the 12th century. Jane's father Thomas owned an estate at Miltonise. Jane married the Reverend John Harper at St Ninian's in 1845 and there they had four children, Jane Helen, Margaret Davida, John Maitland and George McMicking.

John Harper MA was born in the Parish of Birse (lower Deeside) in 1802. He studied at St Andrews and Aberdeen Universities before being ordained in 1839 at Bannockburn. In 1859 the family moved to Bothwell when John Harper was called to Kirklands Free Church of Scotland, Bothwell. Jane died the following year and John Harper later married Alice D Sorsby, born 1837 in Sheffield).

Robert Scott was born in 1831 at Carluke. His wife Agnes Tudehope was born c1836 at Stonehouse. The couple married in 1854 at Carluke and then lived at Totham Cottage, Uddingston. After Agnes's death in 1871, Robert remarried twice more, firstly to Annie Hamilton, his housekeeper, in 1873 at Hamilton. After Annie died in 1883, he married Annie Sloan, a milliner, in 1883 at Mossend.

Robert 'Bob' Scott was a fruit merchant and had a nursery garden at Gowanglen, Crossford. He did a considerable business in supplying the orchards of the Clyde with fruit trees, and his fame was established as a grafter and pruner. In 1873, he and his brother, William, planted half an acre of strawberry plants at Mashockmill, on the road between Braidwood and Crossford. The success of their venture led them to set up the Carluke firm of R & W Scott, famous makers of jam. Robert Scott died in Carluke in 1906.

FOR 58 YEARS IN SERVICE AS GARDENER
AT BOTHWELL CASTLE

In 1804 Andrew Turnbull was born in Berwickshire, the son of a farm labourer. By the age of 9 he was showing interest in gardening and after schooling at Selkirk, was apprenticed, aged 13, at the Haining. From there, after a short time at the Selkirk Nurseries, he moved to the Duke of Buccleuch's Dalkeith Park where by the age of 21, he was promoted to foreman in charge of all the men and women who worked in the gardens. In 1828 he was appointed Head Gardener to Lord Douglas at Bothwell Castle House. There he lived in the Gardener's cottage with his sister Catherine (died 1875) as his housekeeper: soon he was making a name for himself in the crossing and cultivation of Ericas (heaths) in the greenhouses and his varieties were often shown, not always by Turnbull, in horticultural shows in Glasgow and Edinburgh. Turnbull was known also for raising new varieties of Calceolarias, Camellias and Orchids.

At Bothwell Castle, Turnbull's responsibility extended to the care and maintenance of the whole estate or pleasure-grounds as they were known then: open to the public on certain days of the week, they often drew visitors from Glasgow who arrived by train at Uddingston to see the lawns, trees and roses in particular. When visiting the 'pleasure- grounds', Hugh MacDonald mentions the gentlemanly Mr Turnbull's 'obliging courtesy' and records that 'his fame in his profession has extended even beyond the Tweed.' ('Rambles Round Glasgow' (1854).

By the late 1850s, Turnbull was appearing as a judge at the well-established Bothwell Horticultural shows which were usually held in the schoolroom. Turnbull was known also for his firm and competent training of the under-gardeners and all who tended the estate. The Gardeners' Chronicle, a widely-read specialist British journal in the Victorian era, carried a page-long article in September 1874 about Turnbull's life and career - the first in a series on famous gardeners. Unfortunately in 1878, like many other people and businesses in the West of Scotland, Turnbull, at the age of 74, lost £500 of his well-earned savings in the infamous collapse of the Glasgow City Bank. It seems however that the noble family, as they did quite regularly for all their long-serving workers who fell on hard times, came to the rescue. In 1880 to celebrate Turnbull's 50 years at Bothwell Castle, his friends and horticulturalist colleagues held a reception in St.Enoch's Station Hotel, Glasgow, and presented him with 170 sovereigns, a gold eye-piece and an illuminated address "...as a mark of their profound respect for his private worth, and their high appreciation of his practical ability as a horticulturalist - more especially the wonderful success of his labours in raising many splendid hybrid Heaths, Calceolarias etc and with every good wish for his future prosperity." Turnbull died on 18 April 1886.

Turnbull died on 18 April 1886. He was unmarried. All his siblings pre-deceased him. Obituaries were published in a number of newspapers including the Scotsman, Hamilton Advertiser and the Gardeners' Chronicle.

John Gray was born in 1824 at Kilmaurs, Ayrshire. His wife Jane Clow was born in 1827 at Kilmarnock. They were married in 1851 at Bothwell. They had a daughter, Margaret H Gray, born 1854 in America.

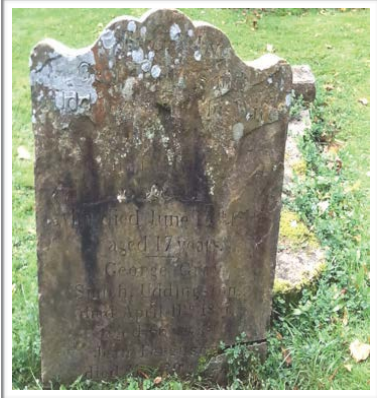

The Uddingston Plough Works was owned by the Gray family, which had been plough making in Uddingston from the late eighteenth century.

The Gray family was at the forefront of plough making in Scotland, also winning numerous awards for ploughs, and was an extensive winner at ploughing matches throughout Scotland. A prize medal was awarded to the family at the Great Exhibition of 1851. A number of medals were awarded for ploughs, harrows and grubbers at the shows of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland. The family's ploughs were also known and renowned throughout the world.

John Gray & Co., also branched out from making ploughs to other agricultural and industrial implements and machines. The company exhibited a portable steam engine and portable steam thrashing machine at the Highland Show of 1861 at Perth, and at the London Exhibition of 1862. In the 1860s the company described itself as “agricultural implement makers, millwrights, engineers, ironfounders, and railway wagon builders”.

GENERAL JOHN WILKIE OF KNOWEHEAD
10TH HUSSARS AND HON COL 14TH HUSSARS
BORN JUNE 1817 DIED 30TH APRIL 1882

John Wilkie was born at Knowhead House in 1817. He joined the 14th (King's) Hussars as a Cornet in 1838 and after various promotions was appointed Colonel of the Regiment in 1854.

John Wilkie commanded the 10th Hussars in the Crimean Campaign from 1855. The regiment had been ordered from India to replace the cavalry lost in the Charge of the Light Brigade at Balaklava. He was involved in the capture of Tchorgaun, the Battle of the Tchernaya and the siege and fall of Sebastopol, for which he received the medal with clasp, fifth class of the Medjidie, and Turkish medal.

Wilkie was appointed General in 1879 and retired to Knowehead House.

The land of the Knowehead estate had been granted to the Wilkie family in 1629 by the Earl of Angus. Knowehead House was demolished in 1968 and is now the site of Knowehead Drive and Knowehead Gardens.

Jacket worn by Lieutenant Colonel John Wilkie, 10th (The Prince of Wales's Own) Royal Regiment of Light Dragoons (Hussars), 1854. On display in the National Army Museum.

His short-frogged jacket is luxuriantly decorated with Vandyke pattern lace and Russia braid. To the centre front are 21 large gilt metal plain ball buttons for fastening the jacket; the other four rows of ornamental buttons are plain gilt metal half domed patterned. The jacket is lined with white silk to the body, while to the waist there is a lining of buff coloured leather.

James Corbett was the licensee of the Green Gate Hotel at Launceston, Tasmania. He and his wife Isabella Wilkie had a son Thomas Corbett who was born in 1813 at Bothwell, and died 1901 at Launceston, Tasmania.

John Wilkie was a blacksmith and first manufactured the famous 'Wilkie plough' around 1825. At a ploughing match in 1829 it outperformed all other ploughs and as a result it was used extensively in Scotland and in many parts of England.

Son James Wilkie continued to make ploughs setting up the business of "James Wilkie & Co". Wilkie ploughs won numerous awards at the main agricultural societies, including the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland. James continued to make ploughs until at least 1850; his sequestrated property was sold in 1856 after his death.

James Macfarlane was born in 1851 at Gartmore, Stirlingshire. He and his wife Agnes Barr (parents William Barr and Helen Kelso - see Stone E:52) married at Uddingston in 1887. After their marriage the couple lived at Sandyford, Glasgow but later moved to Birkhill, Uddingston. James was a 'post and job master' (a person who leased out horses and carriages) and worked at McFarlane Bros, Livery Stable Keepers.

William Barr Macfarlane was born on the 19th March 1888 in Uddingston, Lanarkshire, to James and Agnes. He went to Leys School in Cambridge where his uncle, John MacFarlane, worked.

In 1906 William enrolled at the University of Glasgow and graduated with an MA in 1911. He then returned to study theology, although didn't graduate in this. During this time he also travelled and went on horseback through Syria and Palestine as well as teaching for a brief period in the Orthodox Greek School at Horns in Syria.

Having always wished to enter into the Church of Scotland, he obtained his licence in 1913. William was assistant minister in the South Dalziel Parish Church in Motherwell, a post he held until the outbreak of war.

During his time at University, William had been in the Officer Training Corps and during the war was gazetted to the Kings Own Scottish Borderers. William volunteered for service on the 4th August 1914. He was injured during a charge in Gallipoli by a piece of shrapnel and died on board the hospital ship Asturias aged 27. 2nd Lieutenant William Barr Macfarlane is commemorated on the Helles Memorial on the Gallipoli Peninsula, Turkey.

John Copeland was born c1843 at Auchindoir, Aberdeenshire. His wife Christine Livingston was born c1842 at Fort William. They married in 1866 at Morvern, Argyll. John Copeland was a joiner and house builder and built up a business employing 7 men and 2 boys. In 1881 they lived in Church Street, Uddingston but later moved to Dunollie Cottage, Muiredge, Uddingston.

Alexander Copeland was born c1868 at Uddingston. The date of his death is recorded as 22 October 1892 in the 'Returns of Deaths at Sea'. He was lost from the 'Morayshire', a iron sailing ship built in Govan in 1875. The Morayshire was lost on a voyage from Java to Vancouver, British Columbia. A Board of Trade enquiry into the loss was held in Glasgow in May 1894. It was determined that the Morayshire, owned by William Law of Glasgow, picked up cargo in Rotterdam and sailed for Java in May 1892. She arrived safely at Java, and, having discharged her cargo, loaded a cargo of 2,037 tons of sugar and sailed from Samarang on the 22nd day of October 1892 for Vancouver. Since then nothing had been heard of her. The Inspector for the Board of Trade in his report included the following:

Mr. John Copeland, Uddingston, was permitted to put in a letter he had received from his son. Mr. Copeland's son was third mate of the "Morayshire." The letter which is addressed to his father is headed "Tegal, ship 'Morayshire,' October 1892." There is no date, but from the contents it appears to have been begun shortly after leaving Sourabaya, while at anchor. The contents are chiefly items of a descriptive and social nature and cheery hopes for the future, and expresses thankfulness at getting away from Sourabaya, where cholera has set in badly. In another passage he says: We ought to have been in Tegal to-day, but we ran ashore on a bank in the straits here on Friday night. We are hard and fast now and the old man is away ashore to see what we are to do for a last resource. So we will have to discharge cargo or get the assistance of a passing steamer. Almost in the same sentence he says: "Another scorching day over. The watchman is laid up sick, and I have got to stand watch to-night till 10 o'clock. Then it is all hands on deck. Again, for the last time, if she does not come off at high- water, we have to start and discharge her to lighten her up a bit. This is a proper log I am writing you this time." After giving the Vancouver address, he says: If we have any luck we will be out there between Christmas and New Year," and in a P.S. There is a Scotch concert in the house among the apprentices. Here the letter terminates.

George Copeland was a joiner and at the time of his death was living at Broomhouse Lanarkshire.

James Steel, known as Cosmo, was born on 22 October 1877 at Bothwell. His father James Steel was born in 1846 at Barony, Glasgow and was a drysalter and dyewood manufacturer. In 1870 at Bothwell he married Elizabeth Gordon, a 27 year old Glaswegian. The couple started their married life at Monklands but later moved to Maanar, Fyfe Crescent, Bothwell where they brought up their family. James Steel Snr died there in 1901 while his widow died in 1907 at Hillhead, Glasgow. In 1901 James was living with his parents in Mannar and was working as an Insurance cashier. By 1909 he had moved to Gourock where he was an insurance broker. That year he married Mary Stephenson at Bonhill, Dunbartonshire. After war broke out, James Steel enlisted with the 8th Battalion of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. His battalion was part of the 51st Highland Division and fought at the Battle of Beaumont Hamel. It was during the attack on Beaumont Hamel that Private James Steel was killed in action and he is buried at Maily Wood Cemetery, Maily-Maillet, Somme, France.

Gordon Steel married Mary Dick Cullen in 1898. She was born at Coatbridge but had been living at Bent Farm, Fallside, Bothwell at the time of her marriage. Gordon Steel was a mercantile clerk and by 1901 had moved with his family to Row, Dunbartonshire. Ten years later they had moved to Ruthven Street, Kelvinside, Glasgow.

George Fleming's Bowling Trophy

George Fleming came from Lancashire, England and was the gas manager at Millport. His wife Janet (Jessie) Boyd, came from Greenock and they married at Millport in 1859. The family moved to Main Street, Bothwell where George Fleming Snr set up a plumbing business, eventually to employ 8 men and 2 boys.

George Fleming Jnr. was born on the 11 November 1861 at Millport, Isle of Cumbrae, Scotland.

The Hamilton Advertiser of 22 November 1889 reported on the Annual Dinner of the Bothwell Bowling Club and recorded that George Fleming Jnr had won the Champions Prize. The 1891 census described George as a 29 year old architect living with his parents at Cairns House, Bothwell. The family then moved to Lyleston House, Green Street, Bothwell.

On the 16 July 1913, at the United Free Church, Blantyre, 52 year old George Jnr married Margaret Dunlop, a 36 year old nurse/domestic servant, originally from Kilwinning but now living in Blantyre. The marriage certificate describes George as an architect and plumber. The couple had a daughter, Margaret Paterson Fleming, born on 19 November 1916 at Bothwell.

On the 23 August 1923 61year old George Fleming Jr was found dead in bed at Traquair Place, Langside Road, Bothwell. The cause of death was coal gas poisoning, he had committed suicide. He was described as a master plumber and gas fitter.

In April 1927, George's widow Margaret and her 11 year old daughter sailed from Glasgow to New York. In 1930 Margaret Fleming (and her daughter) are recorded in the Chicago, Illinois census as living her brother Robert Dunlop, a bricklayer.

In 2015 the Bothwell Historical Society received an email from a Mrs Milgram, an American lady, indicating that she had purchased George Fleming's Bowling Award in an antique shop in Illinois. the Award was subsequently purchased by the Historical Society and it has now been returned to Bothwell and is on display in Bothwell Library.

Andrew Hamilton was born in 1853 at Motherwell. In his early 20s he studied Arts and Divinity at Glasgow University. In 1885 he met and had a son by Joan Shanks, a 20 year old girl from Shawhead Farm, Coatbridge. He left for Canada and Miss Shanks raised and was granted a court order against him for £1000 for breach of promise and seduction. On his return from Canada he offered to marry her if she would settle the action. She agreed and they went to Edinburgh where they both signed a document in 1887 called "an Acknowledgement of Marriage". On the evening of her marriage she returned to her father's farm at Shawhead to work as a dairymaid. In 1892 Joan's father brought an action against Hamilton, of Brandon Street, Motherwell, for £228 as aliment for the maintenance of his daughter. Meantime Hamilton had fathered a daughter to Elizabeth Russell. At the Court of Session in 1893 Joan Shanks or Hamilton was granted a divorce.

In 1907 at St Mary's Episcopal Church, Glasgow 55 year old Andrew Hamilton, described as a house proprietor and bachelor, married 30 year old Mary Alexandra Martin. The couple lived at Ralston Drive, Glasgow.

George Manfred Addie was born on 3rd December 1873 at Yews, Hamilton to John Addie and Mary Jardine. He entered Marlborough College (Cotton House) in January 1888. He played for their cricket XI and left in 1890. On December 13th, 1899, the decision to allow volunteer forces serve in the Second Boer War was made. Due to the string of defeats the British government realised they were going to need more troops than just the regular army and thus the Imperial Yeomanry was created. In January 1900 George Addie enlisted in the 16th (Queen's Own Glasgow and Lower Ward of Lanark) Company which was part of the 9th (Scottish) Battalion of the Imperial Yeomanry. The Company sailed for South Africa arriving early in 1900. George Addie was killed near Fredrikstad on 17 October 1900 and a memorial to his honour was dedicated in Bothwell Parish Church. Robert Addie was born in 1798 at Blantyre. Addie's father moved from his position as an overseer on the Earnock estate in Hamilton to another post in Airdrie and it was there that young Addie received his education. When his father leased the Gartlee farm Robert Addie worked alongside him. In 1829 he branched out on his own, leasing Whipperigg farm near Airdrie. After a few years he went into partnership with Robert Miller and together they took the lease of the minerals (coal) at Whipperigg farm. The profits from the Whipperigg colliery allowed them to lease the minerals at Rosehall near Coatbridge. Patrick Rankine, a local landed proprietor, joined the partnership which was known as Messrs Addie, Miller and Rankine. There followed a period of expansion, taking on new mineral leases around Coatbridge and Airdrie. When Miller died in 1852 and Rankine retired, Addie was left sole proprietor. He then brought his sons John, James and Gavin into the business. Into the 1860s and the business continued to grow with expansion into the manufacture of pig iron. Addie's success in business enabled him to acquire the estate of Viewport in 1851. This provided a splendid residence for his wife and family but also allowed his sons James and John to open up the Viewpark colliery. Around this time Addie bought out Rankine's share in the Langloan Iron Company. As a well known coal and iron master, Addie was well respected in the locality and served as a Justice of the Peace.

After Robert Addie's death in 1870, his sons, John, James and Gavin continued to run the business. Gavin died in Australia and his share in the business was managed by a chartered accountant, as trustee. Faced with the uncompetitiveness of small iron companies the Addies withdrew their interest in the Langloan Iron Company and concentrated mainly on coal production. By 1892 they formed a new company Robert Addie and Sons Collieries Ltd controlling collieries at Rosehill (Coatbridge), Benhar (Wishaw), Viewpark and Ashley Grain (Uddingston), Garscube and Killermont (Glasgow) and Herbertshire (Denny). However the expansion of operations into Glasgow and Denny were at a time when development costs were high and profit margins slender. The flooding of the collieries at Killermont and Garscube in 1898 caused further problems for the company. Indebtedness to the bank, coupled with the depression of the 1890s, diminished the value of the Addies holdings. John Addie died in 1904 followed by James the following year, thus ending the family connection with the firm, leaving it as a public company in which the bank had a major share. The whole operation was ultimately bought over by the Wilson and Clyde Company in 1924.

JANE THOMSON, HIS WIFE
BORN 17th SEPTEMBER 1848 DIED 17th JUNE 1913
ANNIE, THEIR DAUGHTER
BORN 5th NOVEMBER 1867, DIED 28th APRIL 1920

James Neilson was born in 1838 in Glasgow to a family that had been closely identified with the iron industry in Scotland for more than a century. His great grand-uncle, Beaumont Neilson, acquired a world-wide reputation as the inventor of the hot blast furnace which revolutionised the manufacture of iron and his grandfather, John Neilson, of Oakbank, built the first iron steamer that ran on the Clyde. James Neilson's wife, Janet (Jane) Paul Thomson was born in 1848 in Govan and they married in 1867 at Newton Place, Glasgow.

Colonel Neilson was Managing Director of the Summerlee and Mossend Iron and Steel Company, a Director of the Caledonian Railway Company, of the Ardrossan Harbour Company, and Chairman of the Lanarkshire and Dumbartonshire Railway Company. He was also for several years Chairman of the School Board of the Parish of Bothwell and for many years the Chairman of the District Committee of the Lanarkshire County Council. He was also a Justice of the Peace for Lanarkshire and after working his way up from Cornet, held the rank of Colonel in the 'Queens Own' Glasgow Imperial Yeomanry until he retired in 1902. He was then appointed Honorary Colonel to the regiment on the 22nd April 1903. He had joined the Yeomanry in 1855, and in 1865 served with the regiment in aid of Civil Power during some riots at Airdrie. He raised and equipped the 18th Company Imperial Yeomanry, consisting of 121 men and 5 officers for service in South Africa during the Boer War. Colonel Neilson raised amongst his friends upwards of £4000 for the better equipment of this Company and out of his own pocket supplied each of the men serge tunic, trousers and field-cap, for the use on board ship and stable duties. When additional Yeomen for service at the front were called for, he raised 609 men, so that altogether he sent to South Africa 730 men. For his services in connection with the yeomanry, he was created Companion of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath in 1902. He was elected an Associate of the Institute of Civil Engineers in 1898. James may have earned a little more notoriety as 'the most vindictive anti-trade union employer in the Scottish iron and steel industry' and at one time even closed Mossend for three years rather than accede to the strikers demands. However, he was held in high esteem as the honorary Colonel of the Queen's Own Lanarkshire Imperial Yeomanry. James Neilson and his family lived in Thankerton House, Bothwell. When his father died in 1882, James inherited Orbiston House, Bellshill. This remained the family home for the next twenty years and was sold in 1905 shortly after James died. The estate became the Bellhill Golf Course with Orbiston House initially serving as the clubhouse. The house was demolished with only the remains of the portico pillars to mark its former glory on the ninth fairway.

Annie Neilson was born in 1868 at Holytown and died in 1920 at The Chestnuts, Field, Berkshire.

James King (1830-1911) was born in Glasgow. He was educated at Glasgow High School and Glasgow University before joining the family business, the Hurler & Campsie Alum Co. He had many other business interests, and was Chairman of the Clydesdale Bank and the Caledonian Railway Co. His service as Dean of Faculties and Chancellor's Assessor at Glasgow University led to his award of an honorary LLD. King was a member of the Glasgow Town Council from 1874 to 1876, and Lord Provost from 1886 to 1889. Among the other important offices he held in Glasgow were those of Dean of Guild, President of the Chamber of Commerce and Chairman of the Clyde Trust. He was knighted in 1887, and created a baronet in 1888.

James Tennant Forgie was born in Coatbridge, educated at Rothesay Academy and served his apprenticeship in Glasgow with Messrs. Simpson and Wilson, civil and mining engineers. He entered the employment of William Baird and Co. Ltd. in 1879, and for five years worked at their Lugar ironworks and collieries, Ayrshire. He was next appointed manager of the company's pits in the Kilsyth and Twechar district, and a few years later his management was extended to the firm's collieries at Bothwell. He was later elected to the board of directors, and in 1923 became chairman of the board. For three years he was president of the Mining Institute of Scotland, and was a member of the council of the Federated Institution of Mining Engineers of Great Britain. In 1919, as president of the Scottish Coal Owners' Association, Mr. Forgie was a member of the Royal Commission appointed under the Coal Industry Commission Act, and for several years he was chairman of the Scottish Coal Conciliation Board. The Scottish coal owners in 1925, in recognition of his services to the coal industry, presented him with his portrait painted by the late Sir William Orpen, R.A. Mr. Forgie represented Scotland on the Committee of Five appointed to investigate the dangers of coal dust in mines, and he was also appointed to the Departmental Committee of Inquiry into the dangers of electricity in mines. He acted before the war as one of the coal masters' referees for Scotland instructed to watch the progress of legislation affecting coal mining. He was, in addition, a director of the National Benzole Co. and of the Sulphate of Ammonia Federation. Mr. Forgie was chairman of the Unionist Association in North-East Lanarkshire, and was elected chairman of the Glasgow Conservative Club in 1912. He was a Justice of the Peace for the county of Lanark. Annie Robertson Cameron was born in 1872 at Kirkintilloch and she and James T Forgie married there in 1904.

Son James Tennant Forgie was a stockbroker. He married Agnes McStay in 1947 at Lesmahgow and died in 1970 at Troon.

In 1851 Robert was a cotton hand loom weaver employing 4 persons and living Glasgow Road. However ten years later Robert was described as an agricultural labourer living with his family at Wside Glasgow Road, Maltkilns, Bothwell. (At Silverwells there was formerly a malt kiln, changed subsequently into a weaving establishment. This was by no means a place of good repute in its day, and enjoyed a most unenviable reputation as a resort of the lawless."From "By Bothwell Banks by Henderson and Waddell, 1904)

By 1871 67 year old Robert was a jobbing gardener and he and wife Marion lived at Hewitt's Close, Main Street, Bothwell. In their latter years they stayed with their son Alexander.

Alexander Mackie was born in 1860 at Bothwell. His wife Isabella Barr Smellie was born c1866 in Rutherglen and they married in 1887 at Coatbridge. Alexander was a joiner and the family lived at Pinkerton House, Green Street, Bothwell

David Drummond was born in 1806 in Leith. His wife Margaret Dickie was born c1807 in Edinburgh and it was there they married in 1832. In 1843, at the age of 37, David Drummond was ordained to the Evangelical Unionists of Galston who had organised themselves into a Church and met in a hall made out of two weavers shops. He then moved to Airdrie in 1845 and later to Wick. In 1853 Mr Drummond was called to Huddersfield, from there to Cumbernauld and in 1859 to Carluke. In 1860 Mr Drummond was inducted to the Church at Bellshill and remained there for eleven years.

His sermons were able and full of the Gospel and his name was a household word in the locality. He was much respected and enjoyed the friendship of some of the ministers of the other denominations in the district. In 1866 he was presented with two pairs of gold rimmed glasses as a token of regard by members of the Church in Bellshill. His wife Margaret died in 1869 at Bellshill.

Two years later in 1871 Revd Drummond became Pastor of the Church at Shotts and then accepted a call to Westhill, Aberdeen. Latterly he had been in poor health. Prior to travelling to Aberdeen 63 year old David married, at Uddingston on the 11 December 1874, Mary Gray, a 34 year old member of his Shotts congregation. From Uddingston they travelled to Glasgow to stay with friends prior to the journey to Aberdeen. In the evening of the 14th David Drummond became seriously ill and died early the following morning. His remains were then taken to the chapel at Bellshill and two days later he was buried at Bothwell Parish Church graveyard.

Gavin Shaw JP was born c1841 in Glasgow. His wife Margaret Perston was also born in Glasgow c1845. After the couple married in Glasgow in 1866 they lived at St Vincent Street and then moved to Gowan Lea, Uddingston. By 1874 the family were living at Earlston, Belleisle Avenue, Uddingston. Gavin Shaw was co-proprietor of the firm Anderson and Shaw, one of the largest wholesale tea, wine and whisky businesses in Glasgow. The firm was founded in 1869 initially at West Campbell Street, and latterly at Morrison Street, Glasgow. His son John worked in his father's business prior to his early death.

David Perston Shaw was born on the 18 July 1876 at Kelvin, Glasgow. In the 1901 census he was described as a clerk living in the family home, Earlston. He served for four years as a private with the Volunteer Force and on the 17 January 1900 he was gazetted 2nd Lieutenant in the 2nd Volunteer Battalion of the Cameronians. Two years later he married Helen Brown Graham, the daughter of a well known Glasgow merchant at Uddingston. In 1912 David Shaw was promoted to Major. At the outbreak of war Major Shaw was sent to France with the 6th Battalion, Cameronians. Following the wounding of the Colonel of the Battalion, Major Shaw was given command and on the 15 June 1915 led an attack the German lines near Festubert. He was first wounded on the chin but still went on encouraging his men till he was shot through the heart. Major Shaw is commemorated at the Le Touret Memorial, France and on a plaque to him in Bothwell Parish Church. His son Gavin 'Guy' Shaw, OBE, was a Lieutenant Colonel in the Welsh Regiment in WW2 and was killed in defence of the Greek island of Leros on 16 November 1943. After the Great War, David Shaw's widow, Mrs Helen Brown Shaw stood unsuccessfully in the 1924 general election for the Bothwell constituency as the Unionist candidate. After two more unsuccessful attempts she was elected Member of Parliament in the Conservative landslide victory of 1931. She held the seat until 1935, when it was regained by Labour. Helen Shaw was awarded an MBE and died in 1964.

Major Shaw

W. MCB. BREAKENRIDGE
ORD. SEAMAN, RN J/47167
H.M.S. VALKYRIE
22ND DECEMBER 1917 AGE 23

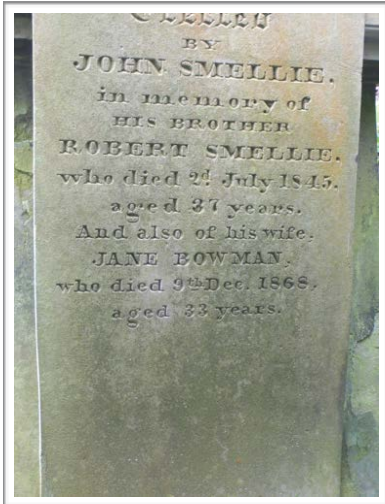

William Macbeth Breakenridge was born on 8 March 1894 at Hamilton. His father, John Breakenridge was born c1855 at Hamilton and was a colliery winding engine keeper. William Breakenridge was a painter and on the 23 November 1915 enlisted with the Royal Navy. He was sent to HMS Vivid 1 a shore training establishment at Devonport, England. On 6 February 1916 Ordinary Seaman Breakenridge was sent to Plymouth to join the 700 crew of HMS Sutlej, an armoured cruiser. After loading provisions and ammunition, on the 10 February the Sutlej slipped anchor and left Plymouth harbour with orders to patrol the west coast of Africa. The ship arrived at Funchal, Madeira six days later before moving on to Tenerife and the Cape Verde Islands. During the next six months, on almost a daily basis, the Sutlej intercepted merchant vessels to establish their legitimacy. At the end of September the Sutlej docked at Gibraltar where she remained for ten weeks, receiving fresh provisions. On the 10 December 1916 the ship was back on patrol, this time off Dakar, Sierra Leone and Ascension Island before returning to Devenport on the 18 April 1917. After helping to off-load stores and ammunition Seaman Breakenridge returned to HMS Vivid 1 on 5 May 1917. A month later on 15 June 1917 he was ordered to join the crew of HMS Valkyrie. HMS Valkyrie's keel was laid on the 25 of May 1916 at the William Denny & Bros. Ltd shipyard in Dumbarton, Scotland and was launched on the 12 March 1917. She was a V class flotilla leader and was commissioned into the Royal Navy on the 16 June 1917. In December 1917 eight Harwich Force destroyers were being despatched to escort a small convoy from the coast of Holland. The rendezvous was off the Maas Light buoy. This was a regular arrangement and the procedure would have been known to the Flanders Flotilla of the German navy. On about the 10 December they laid a new minefield in the area. At about 2200 hours on 23 December, in thick weather, the destroyer Valkyrie hit a mine about five miles west of the Light. There seems to have been some confusion after this, with the other destroyers in doubt as to what was happening, but some time later HMS Torrent was mined and HMS Surprise, whilst attempting to pick up survivors, also struck two mines and sank quickly. HMS Tornado, manoeuvring in the poor visibility to assist the survivors of her companion ships, then struck a mine which broke her in two and she sank quickly. HMS Valkyrie survived and was towed home by the destroyer Sylph. About 240 men died in this incident of which 11 were of the crew of the Valkyrie. Amongst those 11 men fatally injured that night was Ordinary Seaman William Breakenridge.

IN MEMORY OF
WIFE OF JAMES SMITH
BORN AT MONYMUSK
8TH NOVEMBER 1833
DIED AT UDDINGSTON
2ND. DECEMBER 1890

James Smith married Margaret Hutchison in 1843 at Ayr. He was the schoolmaster at the subscription school at Garlieston, Wigtownshire 1843-44, the Free Church schools at Whitletts, Ayr 1844-46, Symington 1846-47, Uddingston 1847-73 and the Public School Uddingston 1873-94. In 1894 he was awarded LL.D by Glasgow University.

Throughout the first half of the nineteenth century there were frequent outbreaks of cholera in Scotland mainly due to the contamination of the drinking water. It is likely that this was the cause of Margaret's death.

In 1856 at Cluny, Aberdeenshire, James married school teacher Jane Reid and the couple lived at Turinzean, Croftbank Crescent, Uddingston.

James Smith was a devoted adherent of the Free Church opposing instrumental music in the church and was not in favour of hymn singing. He walked to the Free Church in Bothwell every Sunday - once only - as he believed the second service to be unscriptural.

He was a man of his time, some may say misogynistic as the following story reveals. In the classroom he was fond of speculating on what careers the boys might follow, possibly some might become an M.P. or even a Prime Minister. On one occasion when the girls hinted at the possibility of their careers he said, "Well girls, I cannot say any one of you will be an M.P. or a Prime Minister but possibly you might be the wife of an M.P. or Prime Minister."

Hugh McDugald (McDougall) was born c1803 in Bothwell. His wife Margaret Sinclair was born c1822 in Edinburgh and the couple married in Bothwell in 1846. In 1861 the family were living at W side Glasgow Road, Maltkiln, Bothwell, with Hugh working as a hand loom weaver employing 4 people. (At Silverwells there was formerly a malt kiln, changed subsequently into a weaving establishment. This was by no means a place of good repute in its day, and enjoyed a most unenviable reputation as a resort of the lawless. From 'By Bothwell Banks' by Henderson and Waddell, 1904)

Their son James McDougall was born c1833 in Bothwell. His wife, Elizabeth Mathieson was born c1805 at Lochalsh, Ross-shire and in 1881 was working as a housemaid at The Anchorage, Bothwell. James was a tapedresser in a weaving mill and the couple lived at London Road, Glasgow.

Harriet, daughter of James and Elizabeth was born c1883 in Glasgow was a hand loom weaver and latterly a dyer's warehouse woman.

ARCHIBALD FISKIN
TO THE MEMORY
OF HIS FATHER AND MOTHER

Archibald Fiskin was born on 27 August 1829 in the Parish of Bothwell, son of Archibald Fiskin and his wife Eliza Inglis. Archibald started his schooling in Bothwell. In 1840 the family emigrated to Australia. Young Archibald attended the Scots' School in Melbourne. At 17 he was given charge of his uncle's cattle stations. He won repute as a stockman and as a daring horseman.

The gold rush to Ballarat made Fiskin a fortune by slaughtering meat for the diggings. With his profits he bought the two stations from his uncle. On one he built a homestead and became recognized as one of Victoria's best judges of cattle. In 1873 moved to Melbourne where he could give better attention to his many commitments in Australia and Scotland.

A staunch Presbyterian, he was an active member of Scots Church, Melbourne, and a trustee of church property. He died in East Melbourne on 13 June 1907, survived by his wife Charlotte Emily McNamara whom he had married in July 1859, and by three of their seven children.

Dr James S Dixon

James Stedman Dixon was born in Glasgow on 8 January 1845, son of Peter Watson Dixon, stockbroker and accountant, and Jane Dow. The family moved to Tuphall House, Hamilton, around 1845 probably to escape the unhealthy smoke and grime of the developing industrial city.

James attended Hamilton Academy and then evening classes in Engineering at Glasgow University. He joined Simpson's Mining Engineers as an apprentice in 1863, learning his trade and rising to become a partner six years later. When Simpson died in 1871, Dixon, still in his twenties, took over the firm. The next year Dixon formed a mining company to set up the Bent Colliery at Hamilton, within walking distance of his parents' home, though he lived in Glasgow at the time. He was appointed Managing Director with a salary of £300. It was the largest mining operation in the Hamilton area and its productivity soon soared. The tragic Blantyre pit disaster of 1878, in which more than 200 miners lost their lives, provoked Dixon and other local mine-owners to form 'The Lanarkshire Coal Masters' Association' and then the 'West of Scotland Mining Institute' with aims of improving mine-safety, increasing coal production, developing innovative techniques and disseminating advice and advances both in Britain and abroad. Later it embraced all of Scotland becoming 'The Mining institute of Scotland'. Twice Dixon was President of these associations; he was also for some time a President of the Coal Masters' Insurance Association which paid out some £100,000 p.a. to injured miners and miners' widows and families. In 1901 he was appointed as the Scottish representative of the Government's Royal Commission on Coal Supplies which looked into every aspect of the industry; he produced the separate report, Part VII (District F) for Scotland, published in 1905.

In 1883 Dixon's Bent Colliery Co leased mineral rights from the Duke of Hamilton to some 800 acres in the North Haugh, near Bothwell. There, as Managing Director, Dixon established an even larger coal operation than at Bent. He called it Hamilton Palace Colliery, known locally as 'The Pailis'. Two deep mine-shafts were sunk and Dixon began to construct houses of a high standard for his workers. Soon the village bore the name, Bothwellhaugh. By 1891 more than 1000 people were employed above and below ground; coal production ran at around 1000 tons per 8 hour shift, and most workers and their families lived in the 320 mine-owner's houses; it was a highly successful enterprise and the village streets and coal production continued to grow rapidly in the years before the outbreak of War in 1914. In 1899 such was its fame that the Mining Institute members chose to visit the colliery in preference to a sail down the Clyde. In a few years a school, a co-operative shop, a hall for church services and the Miners' Welfare Association meetings, concerts and dances, allotments, a bowling club, and football ground were established, much of them at the insistence of Dixon. The mining families even had an annual day excursion by railway from Bothwell, mostly to the Ayrshire coast or Arran. Although there was no passenger station, the colliery was served by a branch line of the Caledonian and North British Railways which took the coal shipments to many parts of the world through both the west and east ports of Scotland as well as to more local consumption in homes and industries .

In the 1890s Dixon moved in to run also the mining division of Dunlop and Co of the Clyde Iron Works for a short time, then took the chairmanship of the Broxburn Oil Company, and directorships of both the Edinburgh Colliery Co and the Plean Colliery Co soon after. However it was Bent and Hamilton Palace Collieries that were always his main business.

On the day, 8th November 1883, Dixon married Isabella Douglas at Castle Douglas. The pit-head at Bent had flags and bunting flying; all the mine workers had a day's holiday and a celebration party in the Harmonic Hall, Hamilton. In the evening entertainment included the Bent Glee Party and the McPake Brothers, champion clog dancers! After their marriage, the Dixons moved to Bothwell to Mount Pleasant House and by 1890 had moved again, to Fairleigh House overlooking Bothwell Bridge. From Fairleigh, Dixon could actually see Bothwellhaugh village and its colliery.

Dixon had many interests beyond his businesses. He was an active member of the Conservative Party and sometime President of the N-E Lanarkshire Association, he was put forward as a candidate to succeed Rattigan as MP when tragically the latter and his wife were killed in a car accident near London in 1904. Dixon declined the honour. His clubs were the Constitutional in London, the New in Glasgow and the Conservative in Edinburgh. In 1902 he endowed Glasgow University with £10000 to set up a lectureship in Mining. This he increased to a Professorship five years later and as a result Dixon's name is read annually on Commemoration Day at the University. He donated land to Hamilton Town Council to build a public park, and sums of money to build a Lodge house, gates and railings at the Park entrance on Bothwell Road. In addition he donated £1000 to top up the Donald legacy to build the Miners' Institute in Bothwell (now the Library); he made several donations to Bothwell Parish Church, where he was an active member and a leading personality in the so-called 'Bothwell Case' (1909), to help fund the restoration of the old church, a peal of bells and clock and to enhance the graveyard entrance (the Dixon gates) from the Main Street. In 1903 he gave the vote of thanks at the ceremony unveiling the Covenanters' Memorial, across the road from his home, and held a garden party for the guests. For relaxation he enjoyed angling and shooting.

Dixon was honoured by Glasgow University with a LLD in 1906 and in 1907 he received the freedom of the Burgh of Hamilton-with Andrew Carnegie- at the opening ceremony of the Public library.

Ill health struck him around 1909 and after an enjoyable holiday in the south of England, Dixon died at Fairleigh at the age of 66 in 1910. He and his wife had no children. His funeral was one of the biggest events in Bothwell that year. His will left funds to his family members and to Hamilton School Board £2000 setting up bursaries for promising pupils at Hamilton Academy and at Glasgow University; to Hamilton Town Council £2000 for a scheme to aid former colliery workers at his Bent Company who did not qualify for the newly introduced National pension; £1000 to Bothwell Parish Church for a similar purpose and to each of his four domestic staff at Fairleigh £10 for each complete year of service. Other sums were donated to various local hospitals and charities.

Dixon in life and death was a generous benefactor. He was one of the most successful of Bothwell's business-men and entrepreneurs in the late Victorian and Edwardian era.

DIED SOUTH AFRICA 1913

GAVIN LANG PAGAN, B.D.,
BORN BOTHWELL 1873,
KILLED IN ACTION 1917

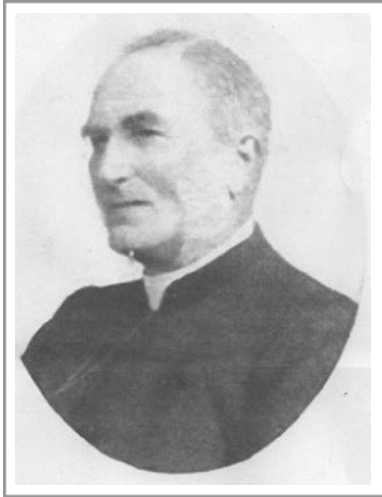

The Very Reverend John Pagan was born at Wamphray , Dumfriesshire, in 1830, the eldest son of a farmer. He was educated at Wamphray and Glasgow University where he gained a BA in 1853, an MA in 1854 and, later, a DD in 1886. He was assistant minister at St. Mungo's, Rosneath and at then at Park Church, Glasgow before his first charge in 1861 in the village of Forgandenny, Perthshire. He was called to Bothwell Parish Church four years later.

Throughout his ministry at Bothwell he played a very significant role in the Church of Scotland generally, being Joint Convener of the Foreign Mission Committee (1884); Moderator of the General Assembly (1899); and Convener of the Committee on Christian Liberality (1906 – 1909). His interests were wide- ranging especially in religious education for the young and the use of illustration in lectures and sermons. A number of his later sermons are held in the archives of the University of Glasgow.

In 1892 he published a pamphlet mostly for ministers on “The Needs of The Church in Mining Districts” which reflected his views and recommendations in response to the setting up of coal-mines and mining communities throughout his Parish, particularly in the late 1870s in Bothwell itself and at Bothwellhaugh in the 1890s.

He was an “indefatigable workman in his own parish”, serving as chairman of the School Board for many years, overseeing, as a result of the expansion of mining and the steel industry, great increases in the number of children requiring to be schooled, instigating the building of new schools in Uddingston, Bellshill, Bothwell and Bothwellhaugh etc, and appointing well-qualified teachers to serve in them. This role was not without political controversy but he was often praised for his commitment and expertise.

His other great contribution to Bothwell was his drive for the restoration of the old part of the Church in the late 1890s – “the restoration of its ancient church was the crown and memorial of his long labours there”. Pagan rallied many of the wealthier Church members, mostly mine and factory owners, such as Dixon, Forgie and Donald, to donate funds for the enhancement of the whole church as well as the restored part, the removal of the Kirkstyle houses to install a new impressive entry with the statue of Joanna Baillie as its centrepiece, another entrance (the Dixon gates) to the graveyard from the Main street so that inhabitants could easily see the whole church, stained glass windows such as that by Burne-Jones, an organ and a peal of bells. The Church and grounds we see today are very much the result of Pagan’s efforts. Pagan even found time to sell his apples regularly from the Manse orchard to the inhabitants of Bothwell and to exhibit mushrooms at the first Horticultural Fungi show in Scotland, held at Aberdeen on September 18 1874!

Pagan’s retirement from the ministry and unexpectedly sudden death in January 1909 led to the somewhat controversial appointment of the Rev Samuel Hamilton, as his successor, but only after ‘The Bothwell Case’ had been examined by the ministers and elders of the Presbytery of Hamilton.

His wife, Margaret Wiseman Lang survived him. She was born in 1843 at Glassford and was the daughter of Rev Gavin Lang, Minister of Glassford Church. She and John Pagan married in 1870 and had four children, all born at Bothwell manse.

Their son John Hamilton Pagan was born in 1871 and graduated MA from Glasgow University in 1891. Three years later he gained his BD and was licensed as a minister by Hamilton Presbytery in 1894. He became an Assistant Minister at Ayr before emigrating in 1900, on account of his poor health, to South Africa where he became minister at Naswaport, Ladybrand and finally Kimberley. He married Agnes Blair in 1906. When he died in 1913 the General Assembly recorded that “No minister of the Church has been more widely and more deeply beloved”. In 1892 while he was a student at Glasgow, John Hamilton Pagan delivered a lecture to the Bothwell Literary Association entitled “The Antiquities of Bothwell” which in book-form ran to two editions and is even today relied on by local historians for its insights into Bothwell’s past. At Ayr in 1897, as an assistant minister, he wrote ‘The Annals of Ayr in the Olden Time’.

Son Gavin Lang Pagan was born in 1873. After schooling at Hamilton Academy, he studied at Glasgow University where he gained a first-class Honours degree in Philosophy before entering the Ministry. In 1889 he was called as minister to Callander. Three years later he was translated to Largs and in 1909 he became minister of the prestigious charge of St. George’s, Edinburgh. He married Jessie Douglas in Edinburgh in 1915. The outbreak of the First World War brought controversy into the minds of ministers who wanted to serve their country in the fighting forces as they could enlist only as chaplains with the rank of officers: Gavin Pagan was determined to fight alongside the men and managed to enlist as an ordinary private, thus defying the bar against ministers of religion taking up arms. After training he was gazetted as Captain in the 16th Royal Scots regiment and was sent to France where he fought on the Somme. He was killed in action in an attack near Rouex on 29th April 1917 and is commemorated on the huge memorial at Arras. (cf. ‘Lest We Forget’ published by the Bothwell Historical Society, 2014)

Son Alexander Pagan was born in 1875 in Bothwell. He married Rosalie Wyatt and emigrated to be a farmer and merchant in South Africa. Often he travelled between his sister’s home at Saughtrees, Biggar and his farm in South Africa, where he died in 1968.

Daughter Anna Pagan was born in 1879 in Bothwell and died at Saughtrees, Biggar in 1971.

IN PROUD AND LOVING MEMORY OF
LIEUTENANT COLONEL
CROFTON BURY VANDELEUR
LATE THE CAMERONIANS
(SCOTTISH RIFLES)
DIED ON SEPTEMBER 22nd 1947
AGED 81 YEARS
E.M.V. J.O.E.V.

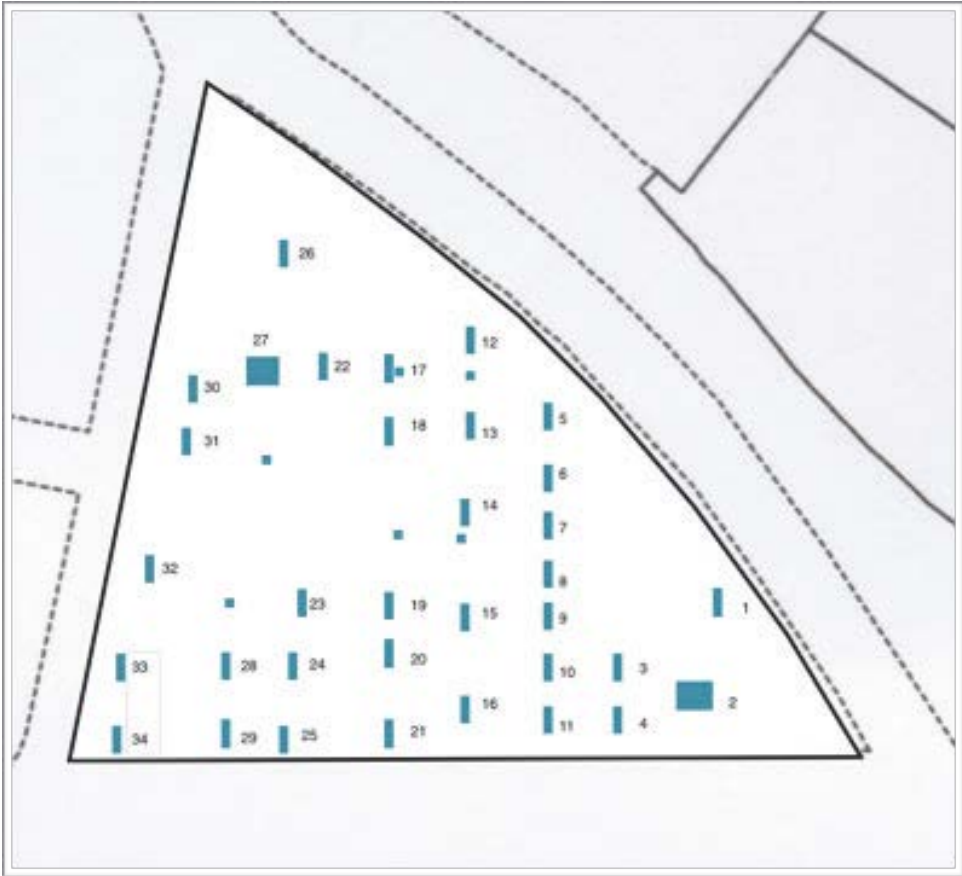

Crofton Bury Vandeleur was born on 28th March 1867 in India where his father was an Army Captain. Crofton spent some considerable time in Germany as a young boy, and learned to speak the language fluently. Following the family military tradition, Crofton, at the age of 19, signed up to join the Cameronians in 1886. After his training at Sandhurst, he joined the regiment in India, where he earned the reputation of being an excellent shot. The outbreak of the Boer War in 1899 gave the young soldier his first taste of active service.

After the Boer War, Crofton returned to London where he was married to Evelyn Hamilton in 1902. Crofton and his new wife immediately left for India where he rejoined his regiment. The family were then reposted to South Africa where Crofton developed an interest in botany. It was on a trip to the Transvaal that he discovered a new species of Streptocarpus, subsequently named after him 'Vandeleurii.' When war was declared in 1914 the battalion was recalled from exercises in Scotland. Crofton Bury with the battalion entrained at midnight from Maryhill station and two days later the battalion was in France. There they took part in fighting at Mons and on the Marne and Crofton Bury was appointed Lieutenant Colonel.

Towards the end of 1914, Vandeleur was wounded and taken prisoner. He was interred in Crefeld POW Camp in Germany. Six weeks later he 'borrowed' a German uniform and walked out the main gate of the camp. He took a train and, with great panache, puffed cigars in the carriage with German officers. With great ingenuity he made his way back to allied lines via Holland turning up at his club at St Jame's still wearing his German uniform. Vandeleur's ability to speak German would have been invaluable, and he was the first British officer to escape from the Germans during the First World War. Crofton Vandeleur was granted an audience with King George V to recount the story of his capture and ill-treatment whilst being held as prisoner. Although he returned to active duty with the 2nd Battalion in France in 1915, Vandeleur's war did not last much longer, as he was wounded at the Battle of Festaubert near Aubers Ridge. He received serious wounds to his hip, which led to the arthritis which plagued him for the rest of his life. Following a long spell in hospital, Vandeleur returned to command the Regimental Depot in Hamilton. For his gallant and distinguished service in France he was mentioned in Despatches and received the Distinguished Service Order in 1919. He retired from the army in 1922. Crofton Bury Vandeleur lived at Inverclyde, Orchard Avenue, Bothwell. During his retirement he devoted his time and energy to the welfare of the old comrades of his regiment, organizing clubs, hospital homes and recreational facilities as well as his involvement with other local community activities. The Cameronian Memorial which stands at the side of Glasgow Art Gallery owes much to Lt Col Vandeleur's fund raising ability. He was appointed President of the Bothwell Horticultural Society in 1937. He died in Canniesburn Hospital on September 26th 1947 aged 80. His funeral service was held in Glasgow Cathedral prior to his burial at the Parish Church, Bothwell.

William Gilchrist was born c1830 at Cardross, Dunbartonshire. His father was a farmer at Whistleberry Road, Blantyre and having worked there William later became a tenant farmer at the 85 acre Bothwell Park Farm. His wife Margaret Williamson was born in 1829 at Burnbank Farm, Hamilton and they married in 1853 at Bothwell. The year after Margaret's death he married his sister-in-law, Catherine Williamson, by declaration at Holyrood Palace, Edinburgh.

John Gilchrist was a land valuer, grain merchant and farmer at Orbiston Mains, Bellshill.

Marion Gilchrist was born at Bothwell Park Farm on 5th February 1864. She left the local school at 13 but later attended Hamilton Academy. In 1887 she studied Arts at the Queen Margaret College for Women, University of Glasgow. In 1890, Marion Gilchrist was awarded the degree of Lady Literate in Arts (LLA). She then studied medicine at the College graduating MB and CM in 1894 with a high commendation, becoming the first woman to gain a medical degree in Scotland and also becoming the first female graduate of the University. While at university she was active in the Students Union, the Literary and Debating Society, the University Liberal Club. After graduation Marion Gilchrist entered general practice setting up at 5 Buckingham Terrace, Glasgow, remaining at that address for the rest of her life. Specialising in ophthalmology, Gilchrist was appointed Assistant Surgeon for Diseases of the Eye at the Glasgow Victoria Infirmary, a post she was to hold from 1914 to 1930. Marion Gilchrist was an active, but not militant suffragette. She was also an early motoring enthusiast and her garage and chauffeur's flat were situated in Ashton Lane for her Wolseley Landalette. In 1936, Marion commissioned a stained glass window in the north transept of Bothwell Parish Church to the memory of her family. In 1940, Marion donated an area of ground off Green Street, (The Gilchrist Gardens) as a garden of rest for the residents of Bothwell.

An affectionate sister erected this Monument to the Rev. Michael MacCulloch D.D. who died May 26th 1801 in the .... year of his age and the 34th of his ministry. Distinguished by unaffected Simplicity of manners, by strict probity, by warm Benevolence and by unfeigned Piety he possessed the esteem and affection of all who were acquainted with him Beloved as a Man, as a Preacher, he was much admired. To useful and interesting observation, he added the graces of Impressive eloquence. Having thro' life been faithful in the performance of every duty that was incumbent upon him, the prospect of dissolution excited in his bosom no uneasy thoughts. He looked forward to Death with tranquility in the joyful hope of rising again in the Resurrection of the life. Mark the Righteous and behold the upright for the end of that man is peace.

Dr MacCulloch was involved in one of the most famous cases in the late 18th century in Scotland. It concerned the appointment of William Allan as schoolmaster at Bothwell. He had been appointed to the position by the majority of the heritors of the Parish and the Hamilton Presbytery found him qualified for the office. However Dr MacCulloch opposed the appointment and appealed to the Synod of Glasgow and Ayr. Mr Allan protested that according to law, only presbyteries could appoint a schoolmaster and it was not competent for a synod to review the case. The matter was referred to the General Assembly in 1791 from where it was passed to the Court of Session. In 1793 the Court of Session found it was they and not the Church Courts who were were competent to deal with matters regarding parochial schoolmasters. On hearing this Dr McCulloch and the Synod appealed to the House of Lords who found that it was a matter for the Church Courts. However by this time William Allan was established in his position went on to be schoolmaster at Bothwell for the next 40 years and he is depicted on the carved external hood moulds of the Church. In his position as Parish Minister Dr McCulloch was the author of the 1st Statistical Account for the Parish of Bothwell, published in the 1790s.

Dr McCulloch's grave is in the south west corner of the churchyard but could not be found, possibly the inscription eroded or lying face down. However the epitaph on the stone, written by another minister, has been recorded as follows.

' There lies interred beneath this sod,
A sycophantish man of God,
Who taught an easy way to Heaven,
Which to the rich was always given.
If he gets in hell look and stare,
To find some out that he put there.'

Henry Montague Hozier was born in 1838. He was educated at Rugby and at Edinburgh Academy, and then at the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich. He became a Lieutenant in the Royal Artillery, and Lieutenant in the Life Guards. Hozier served with the Royal Artillery Expedition in the Second Chinese War in 1857 and was Assistant Military Secretary to Lord Napier in the Abyssinian Expedition. He gained the rank of Colonel in the 3rd Dragoon Guards. In 1866 he was with the German army and was Assistant Military Attache in the Franco-Prussian War of 1870-1871. He received the Iron Cross from the German Emperor for his service in the 1870-1871 war. His publications include 'Seven weeks' war' and 'The History of British expedition to Abyssinia'.

In 1874 he left the Army and became Secretary to Lloyd's of London, where his principal responsibilities were the world wide organisation of Lloyd's agents and sign stations including the promotion of the new radio-telegraphy. He was a flamboyant figure in the City of London and an assiduous and effective lobbyist in Parliament. In 1885, he contested Woolwich as a moderate Liberal but was defeated. For his many varied services he was awarded the C.B. in 1897 and created a K.C.B. in 1903.

In 1873 Hozier married Henrietta Blanche Ogilvy, daughter of David Ogilvy, 7th Earl of Airlie. In September 1908, their second daughter named Clementine. The marriage was not a success and the couple became estranged to the extent that Lady Blanche was forced to bring up her children in straitened circumstances.

After a long illness Sir Henry died of septicemia at Panama in 1907 and is buried there.

In September 1908, their daughter Clementine married future Prime Minister, Sir Winston Churchill,.

AND ALSO CECILIA DOUGLAS OF ORBISTON

Gilbert Douglas was a West India merchant in Glasgow, who had large plantations in the Island of St. Vincent. At the time of his death, he owned a sugar plantation, Mount Pleasant, in St Vincent and a cotton plantation, Fairfield, in Demerara.

In 1794, aged 45, Gilbert Douglas married 23 year old Cecilia Douglas, daughter of John Douglas, merchant in Glasgow, and Cecilia Buchanan. (The Buchanans originally owed their wealth largely to their important tobacco plantations in Virginia.)

In 1800 Gilbert Douglas bought a mansion located on the north bank of the River Calder in what is now Strathclyde Park. The house was renamed Douglas Park. Gilbert Douglas died in 1807 without issue, and his widow inherited his estates of Douglas Park and Boggs, to which she added by purchase the remainder of the estate of Orbiston. She then renamed Douglas Park, Orbiston House.

Following the emancipation of slaves by the British in 1834 Cecilia Douglas received compensation of over £6,000 for the estate at St Vincent. (Over half a million pounds at today's prices).

Cecilia also inherited her husband's art collection, accumulated from the proceeds of his West Indies estates. The collection including an Old Master has been housed in Kelvingrove Art Gallery since being donated by Cecilia Douglas on her death in 1862. In 2012, it was questioned as to whether it was appropriate to display works of art acquired through wealth accumulated through the proceeds of slavery.

Matthew Gardiner was born in Glasgow in 1776 and graduated from the University of Glasgow MA in 1793. He was licensed by the Presbytery of Hamilton in 1798 and ordained in 1802. Matthew was then awarded a Doctorate in Divinity in 1831 at Glasgow University. His wife, Sarah Forrest, was born in 1776 to John Forrest, an Edinburgh merchant. The couple married in 1808 in Edinburgh. Matthew Gardiner was Moderator of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland in 1837.

He was a long serving minister of Bothwell, who experienced, like so many of his parishioners, the loss of children in early life – a consequence of the rampant water-borne diseases and childhood illnesses which accounted for the tragic levels of infant mortality afflicting society throughout the 19th Century. His sermon on the “The Folly and Danger of Departing from the Living God”, was published in 1820.

Gardiner, however, is perhaps best remembered for his authorship of the Bothwell Parish entry in Vol 6 of the 2nd Statistical Account of Scotland (1845). In fact, he compiled his information around 1836-40 at a time when, as Moderator he must have had much wider Church concerns in mind. Today it is an excellent source for the local historian as it provides comprehensive details on agriculture, industry, weather, climate, roads, population, schools and religion etc. He concluded with a number of quite significant ‘observations’: the population of the Parish had doubled between 1795 and 1836; railways and the Monkland Canal had been built, “opening up the treasures of this district”; and coal mining had expanded with the number of miners increased from 50 to 260. He also asserted that “a great improvement has also taken place in the style of building and the accommodation of the cottages and farm-houses which have lately been erected”. And not only in homes – Gardiner was minister of Bothwell during the building of the present Parish Church in the years 1828 to 1833, to the design of the famous Glasgow architect, David Hamilton.

Their daughter Rebecca was born in 1812 in Bothwell and died in 1820 aged 8 years.

Daughter Marion Aikman was born in 1817 in Bothwell and died in 1919 when she was 1 year old.

Son John was born in 1815 in Bothwell and died at South Park, Campbeltown aged 62.

Son James, born 1811 in Bothwell, married Charlotte Ferrier (widow of Sir John Eaton Campbell) in 1855 at Campbeltown.

Elizabeth Forrest was born in 1776 in Edinburgh, twin sister to Sarah.

Skipness Castle

Walter William Thomas Beaujolais Campbell, 10th of Skipness was born in 1807 at Edinburgh to Robert Campbell of Skipness and Eugenia Josephine Wynne from Lincolnshire. (See O:17)

The family lived at Skipness Castle, Kintyre, surrounded by the estate of 15,000 acres. His father died when he was seven and he was brought up by his mother. He and his brother enjoyed the outdoor life, wandering the hills of Kintyre wearing only a kilt and a flannel shirt. They rode unbroken highland ponies and went to sea in open boats in all weathers. In the six winter months he attended the High School in Edinburgh and spent the summer months at Skipness studying under a private tutor. As he grew up he was taught by the estate gamekeeper how to stalk and shoot game and the skills of fishing.

He joined the army at the age of 17 and soon became a lieutenant. In 1830 he sailed for India with the 62nd (Wiltshire) Regiment of Foot. Campbell later described his experiences in "My Indian Journal" published in 1864. Whilst in India he was appointed Aide-de-camp to General Sir John Dalrymple and returned with him to Britain. In 1838 he married Anna Henrietta Loring and the same year was appointed captain of the 7th Royal Fusiliers.

Colonel Campbell sold Skipness Castle in 1853 and by 1861 the family were living at Carmyle, Glasgow. He later moved to Barncluith House, Hamilton where he died in 1877 aged 69 years.

Walter Lorne Campbell was born in 1846 in England. He attended a private school in Surrey and there he met Frederick Meinertzhagen. The two became firm friends spending school holidays together, on occasion with Walter's parents at their home at Carmyle. In 1866, the two young men decided to seek their fortune in New Zealand and sailed from Gravesend in May of that year on the "Sir Ralph Abercrombie" arriving in Lyttleton in September.

After two years they formed the partnership of Campbell and Mienertzhagen and took the lease of land at Okaihau giving them 31,000 acres with 11,000 sheep and 46 head of cattle. Campbell formed a real rapport with the local Maori community and recorded his dealings with them in his diary writings. The two friends were avid collectors of Maori artefacts and the collection was later sold to the British Museum by Mienertzhagen's widow. In 1872 Walter Campbell returned to Britain and donated a Maori stone axe to Edinburgh Museum.

Walter Campbell arrived back in New Zealand in February 1874. Six months later tragedy overtook Campbell. While working on a raft of timber he fell into the Tukituki River and was drowned. He was buried in Napier Cemetery.

David Perston Shaw was born on the 18 July 1876 at Kelvin Glasgow. The 1881 census records him living with his parents and siblings at Black Pow, Earlston Villa, Uddingston. By 1901 he was still living there and was described as a clerk in the census. He served for four years as a private with the Volunteer Force and on the 17 January 1900 he was gazetted 2nd Lieutenant in the 2ns Volunteer Battalion of the Cameronians. Two years later he married Helen Brown Graham, the daughter of a well known Glasgow merchant, in 1902 at Uddingston. They had two children. In 1912 David Shaw was promoted to Major.

At the outbreak of the First World War Major Shaw was sent to France with the 6th Battalion, Cameronians. Following the wounding of the Colonel of the Battalion, Major Shaw was given command and on the 15th June 1915 led an attack on the German lines near Festubert. He was first wounded on the chin but still went on encouraging his men till he was shot through the heart. Major Shaw is commemorated at the Le Touret Memorial, France.

MARTON DALRYMPLE ESQUIRE
OF FORDEL AND CLELAND
IN WHOSE MEMORY THIS STONE
IS ERECTED BY HIS WIDOW
FRANCES INGRAM SPENCE

Marton Dalrymple was born c1748 and in 1798 at London married Frances Ingram Spence. He was a landed gentleman whose estate at Cleland possessed rich resources of coal and iron. He owned the Omoa Iron Works at Shotts which had been established by his father Colonel William Dalrymple.

Marten proposed 'an iron rail road' from the Monkland Canal to Lanark, Peebles, Kelso, and Berwick-upon-Tweed' in June 1809, to carry coal, iron, slates, limestone, freestone, lead, corn, and cotton at 'One Penny per Ton per Mile'. A committee was appointed to commission a survey which was undertaken in September 1809 by Thomas Telford. However the project was cut short by Dalrymple's death two months later.

His widow was visiting an art shop in Edinburgh and was entranced by an oil painting of 'The Falls of Foyers'. She arranged to meet the artist, the Rev John Thomson of Duddingston and in December 1813 they were married.

Caledonian Mercury of 4 December 1809 contained this obituary.

'DIED. At Cleland House, on the 23d ult. much and deservedly regretted, Marton Dalrymple, Esq. of Fordel; eminently distinguished for the best qualities both of the head and heart. He was a warm friend, a tender parent, an affectionate husband, an indulgent master, an able man of business, and a most excellent country gentleman. The great national design of a Rail Road from Glasgow to Berwick, now in contemplation, owed its origin to his ingenuity; and, when carried into execution, it will remain an honourable monument of his enlightened views, his sound judgement, and his indefatigable and persevering activity. While private worth and public usefulness are held in esteem, the memory of this gentleman will be dear to his numerous friends, and to the populous neighbourhood in which he resided.'

Patrick Russell's gravestone
at Fort Tuli Pioneer Cemetery

Patrick Brown Russell was born in 1857 at Cambuslang. His grandfather was Archibald Russell 'Old King Coal', owner of a number of collieries in the Hamilton area.

Patrick married Margaret Downie Wylie Walker in 1882 at Shettleston. By 1891 Patrick was a coal master living with his family at Newfield House, Burbank Road, Hamilton. Five years later in 1896 the Company, Archibald Russell Ltd, owned 6 collieries with 2465 employees.

On 13th December 1899 the War Office decided to allow a contingent of volunteer forces, based on the standing Yeomanry Regiments, to serve in the Boer War. The 70th Scottish Sharpshooters were raised shortly thereafter as part of the 18th Battalion and embarked from Southampton on the 6th April 1900. Eight months later Patrick died of enteric fever and was buried at Fort Tuli Pioneer Cemetery.

His grieving widow Anne, herself the heiress to her family, set up this monument (the fame of which will never die), sacred to the memory of most illustrious chief William the second Duke of Hamilton, Marquis of Clydesdale, Count of Arran [and] Lanark, Prince of Avania, Polmont, [and] Machan, oldest son of the Highest Marquis of the Douglasses, from his second marriage to Maria Gordon, daughter of the Marquis of Huntly, everlasting Guardian of the royal palace of the Holy Cross, often Viceroy in Councils of the Three Orders of the Kingdom, President of the Secret Council of the Kingdom of Scotland, likewise from the innermost councils of the Kingdom of England Count of the Sacred Treasury for three successive kings, extraordinary senator in the supreme court of law, Lord Admiral of the kingdom of Scotland, allied knight of the most noble order of the garter, energetic defender of his country, restorer of his family as if sent from heaven (after a series of thirteen high chiefs of the family). Besides his heir James, he left five other sons, likewise three daughters settled in marriage to most illustrious families. He was born 24th December 1634, [and] died 18th April 1694.

The reference to William as being the second Duke of Hamilton is incorrect. He was the third Duke of Hamilton.

Avania refers to Aven or, as in present day, Avon. Machan is an area associated with Larkhall.

The monument was made in Paris which may account for the mistake in the inscription.

William Hamilton, 3rd Duke of Hamilton
by Peter Vanderbank
© National Portrait Gallery, London

Lord William Douglas was born 24th December 1634, the eldest son of William Douglas, 1st Marquess of Douglas by his second wife Lady Mary Gordon, a daughter of George Gordon, 1st Marquess of Huntly. He was created 1st Earl of Selkirk in 1646, at the age of 11. On 29 April 1656, he married Anne Hamilton, Duchess of Hamilton in her own right. Her father, James, 1st Duke of Hamilton, was executed by the English in 1649 at the end of the Second English Civil War and her uncle, William, 2nd Duke of Hamilton, died following the Battle of Worcester in 1651.

Subsequent to marrying Anne Hamilton, 3rd Duchess of Hamilton, he was created Duke of Hamilton, which also allowed him to use his wife's subsidiary titles during his lifetime and to take the name Hamilton for him and their descendents.

He was President of the Scottish Privy Council in the 1680s and occupied other high offices including that of Lord High Admiral and was an extraordinary Lord of Session. However, he was dismissed from the Privy Council in 1676, and on a subsequent visit to London, Charles II refused to receive him. On the accession of James VII & II he received numerous honours, but he was one of the first to enter into communication with the Prince of Orange. He presided over the Convention of Edinburgh, summoned at his request, which offered the Scottish crown to William and Mary in March 1689. His death took place at Holyrood Palace on 18th April 1694.

The monument to William, 3rd Duke of Hamilton, was carved from Dutch marble and was originally in Hamilton Old Parish Church located near the Mausoleum. This church was demolished in 1732 and the monument was moved to its present position at that time.

The monument, designed by James Smith, is a tall structure with imposing columns, two mourning boys with extinguished torches flanking an inscribed plinth with an urn surmounted by a cherub beneath draperies. One foot rests on a detailed and life-like skull, representing death while the inverted torch symbolises the snuffing out of the duke's life. At the top is the Duke's coat of arms.

IN LOVING MEMORY OF
JEAN ARTHUR, BELOVED DAUGHTER
OF JOHN & JANE WORDIE
WHO DIED 22nd FEBRUARY 1902
IN HER FIFTEENTH YEAR

Jean Arthur Wordie was born in 1887 at Glasgow to John Wordie, born c1841, Stirling and Jane Catherine Mathers Mann born c1860 in Bothwell.

Jane C M Mann's family lived at Fairfield Lodge, Green Street, Bothwell. Her father was a warehouseman with 480 employees.

John Wordie's father was a carter in Stirling and from humble beginnings built up a substantial business as agent to railway companies. Following his father's death in 1874 John Wordie built a family home at Cleveden Drive in Glasgow's west end.

It was there that Jean Arthur Wordie died in 1902.

Following her father's death in 1910 the thriving business of John Wordie & Co haulage contractors, passed to eldest son William (1884 - 1952). He had obtained an MA at Glasgow University and during the First World War served with the Royal Army Service Corps, gaining the rank of Colonel and being awarded an OBE. In 1945 Colonel Wordie was appointed Deputy Lord Lieutenant of Glasgow and shortly thereafter the firm of John Wordie & Co, the biggest carrier and haulage firm in Scotland, was nationalised as part of British Road Services.

John and Jane Wordie's second eldest son James (1889 - 1962) studied geology at Glasgow University gaining a BSc. He continued to study geology gaining an advanced degree from St John's College, Cambridge.

In 1914 he joined Sir Ernest Shackleton's ill fated expedition to the Antarctic where he was geologist and chief of scientific staff. On his return he was presented with a Royal Geographical Society's Award in 1920. James Wordie subsequently sailed on 9 polar expeditions and for his work in the polar regions he was knighted in 1957.

John Roberton of Lauchope married Catherine Hozier in 1805 in Glasgow. Their eldest son was Captain William Roberton who inherited the estate following the death of his father in 1850.

Their second eldest son James Roberton was born c1811 at Lauchope. He married Annistatia Hopkins (born 1827 in Ireland) and they started their married life living at Lauchope Cottage. James was a farmer of 20 acres employing one farm hand. After his brother William died in 1856 without issue, James inherited the estate and moved into Lauchope House with his family. Their son William died in 1870, James Roberton died in 1888 followed by his widow, Annistatia in 1906

Lauchope House was located on the north side of the A8 at Newhouse. The house was burned by English dragoons because James Muirhead of Lauchope provided shelter to his brother-in-law, Hamilton of Bothellwelhaugh, the assassin of James, Earl of Moray and Regent of Scotland in January 1570. The Muirheads of Lauchope kept Lauchope House until the line ended in 1738 and were succeeded by a cadet branch the Muirheads of Bredisholm. The house subsequently became the property of the Roberton family who rebuilt the same.

IN THE 33d YEAR OF HIS AGE

Walter Campbell was born c1702 to Daniel Campbell and Margaret Leckie. In 1728 he married Marian, daughter of Sir James Campbell 13th of Ardkinglass.

His father, Daniel Campbell was the eldest son of Walter Campbell of Skipnish, and was born c1671. At the age of 22 he set up business in New England, before settling in Glasgow, where he traded tobacco for iron ore. He also engaged in the slave trade and in finance. He was very successful as a merchant, and in 1707 purchased the estate of Shawfield in Rutherglen from Sir James Hamilton. He also came to possess the valuable estate of Woodhall, near Holytown.

He represented Inverary in the Scottish parliament from 1702 till the union, and was one of the commissioners who signed the treaty. He also sat in the first Parliament of Great Britain, 1707-8, and represented the Glasgow burghs from 1716 to 1734.

Campbell had voted for the imposition of an unpopular malt tax in Scotland. During the riots at Glasgow against the malt tax in 1725, the interior of the fine house which he had built at Shawfield was demolished by the mob. The provost and magistrates were arrested on the grounds of having favoured the mob, and Campbell received £9,000 from the city as compensation for the damages caused by the riot. Soon afterwards he purchased the island of Islay, the sum obtained from the city forming a large part of the money paid for it.

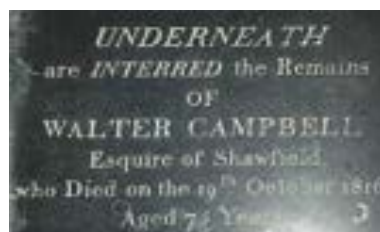

John Campbell, born 1696, was the eldest son of Daniel Campbell and Margaret Leckie. In 1728 he married Lady Margaret Campbell daughter of the Earl of Loudoun. In 1735 at Argyll he married Lady Henrietta Cunningham daughter of William twelfth Earl of Glencairn. John Campbell died at Kilsyth in 1746.

Their eldest son Daniel inherited the titles and was responsible for much of the improvements to Islay including a ferry to the mainland, schools and the building of the village of Bowmore with its famous Round Church. He died at Islay House in 1777.
