Kappy's reopens after renovation

BY RICK KAMBIC

rkambic@pioneerlocal.com | @rick_kambic

The renamed and reinvented Kappy's American Grill is now open for business, and loyal customers are seeing a dining room, menu and uniforms like they haven't seen in 34 years.

With 23 fewer seats in the house, Kappy's is now a wide-open dining area with more intimate two-seat tables instead of booths, and no dividing walls anymore. A redesigned menu also offers 15 new dinner items — the main driving force behind the renovation.

"I told George that we have to take dinner more seriously," said co-owner Manolis Alpogianis. "BLT sandwiches, burgers and our Greek chicken are classic dinner items we kept, but we eliminated a ton of other things to make room for our new grilled and barbecue items."

The new dinner menu includes Blue Moon-infused skirt steak and brown sugar pork chops in the eight-item grilled section, as well as slow-smoked chicken, baby-back ribs and beef candy baskets in the seven-item smoked sections.

Hardwood flooring is atop the noticeable physical changes at Kappy's. The wood replaces green carpet and rugs.

All wood used for the floors, booths and new tabletops were from trees that fell naturally in the Midwest instead of from South American deforestation, Manolis Alpogianis said. Furthermore, he said the American workers in the Midwest also sowed the upholstery for the seat cushions.

"It cost us about 20 percent more, but my brother George was very adamant about being pro-America and environmentally friendly," Manolis Alpogianis said.

Kappy's traditional maroon uniforms have been handed in for collared black shirts with a yellow tie, creating the more elegant image the Alpogianis family wanted.

"We're quite good at the cooking, but there's also a presentation element to this business and we've stepped up our game so people can truly enjoy their experience," said co-owner George Alpogianis, a member of the Niles Village Board.

An imitation brick wall and two flat-screen TVs replace George Alpogianis' wall of fame behind the eat-in counter — another fashion statement and transition in service.

The televisions will help turn the eat-in counter into a casual hangout later in the evening, when alcohol will be sold.

Though Kappy's does not have its liquor license just yet, George Alpogianis said the paperwork was filed and should be approved soon. Kappy's plans to sell five beers and six wines.

"We want people to feel comfortable having a beer with their meal while still being able to bring their kids with," Manolis Alpogianis said.

Kristina Otte brings her children to Kappy's once a week and said she takes no issue with the potential future alcohol sales.

"The whole project has made Kappy's much more contemporary," said Otte, who's also manager of the Morton Grove Farmers Market. "I'm glad Morton Grove has another elegant place for couples and families who like to go out."

Longtime Kappy's customer Edie Schuller said the wide-open dining room and surplus of natural light immediately caught her attention when she first visited the remodeled restaurant. The new menu also captured her attention.

"It's great to see all the breakfast items still here, because Kappy's has the best omelet in town and too much change can push your regulars away," Schuller said. "This is a good balance of traditional and brand new."

Kappy's closed on Sept. 15 and reopened Oct. 15, a feat the family was told couldn't happen.

"A lot of places say they'll be closed a month and then don't reopen for three months," George Alpogianis said. "We were firm with our timeline because we wanted to hold the contractors accountable on everything else too. Changes like this don't happen everyday."

Kappy's is also hiring waiters and bus boys because several members of the old staff couldn't go four weeks without pay and took other jobs.

"We have just enough employees to run the restaurant, but we need to hire quickly before we burn anyone out," George Alpogianis said.

Niles man charged with shooting family member in home

BY JENNIFER JOHNSON

A 60-year-old Niles man has been charged with shooting his 25-year-old son inside their home Sunday.

Chris Gianakopoulos, of 7233 W. Greenleaf Ave., was charged with one count of aggravated battery with a firearm in connection with the shooting, which officials said happened after an argument about the son's heroin use.

According to Assistant Cook County State's Attorney Christina Kye, Gianakopoulos' wife was arguing with their son, when the father tried to intervene.

When Gianakopoulos was unsuccessful in breaking up the argument, Kye said, he went to get a 9mm Glock handgun that was loaded with one bullet.

Police said earlier that other family members inside the home heard the two men arguing before someone said, "I will shoot you," and a single gunshot was heard.

The victim was shot in the left arm and leg and was transported to Advocate Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge, police said. Assistant Public Defender Wendy Zun said the son was in detox for heroin use, and was initially unable to speak with investigators.

Gianakopoulos was taken into custody after he was allegedly seen running from the home. Police initially released his age as 52, but Monday said he is 60 years old.

Gianakopoulos is an engineer for Motorola who formerly served in the National Guard, Zun said.

His bond was set at $100,000.

Morton Grove Hookah Lounge manager charged with theft after robbery report

BY RICK KAMBIC
rkambic@pioneerlocal.com | @rick_kambic

A manager at Argila Hookah Lounge, 6322 Dempster St., Morton Grove, has been arrested after allegedly staging an armed robbery at the business. | RICK KAMBIC/SUN-TIMES MEDIA

A manager at Argila Hookah Lounge, 6322 Dempster Street, Morton Grove, is being charged with felony disorderly conduct and theft after police say he and an accomplice staged an armed robbery.

Moustafa Abdel-Salal, the 23-year old manager, called police in the early morning hours of Monday, Oct. 21 claiming a man wearing a hooded sweatshirt and mask was robbing the lounge at knifepoint.

Cmdr. Paul Yaras of the Morton Grove Police Department said officers created a perimeter around Argila while attempting to determine if the scene was safe.

About $260, several pieces of hookah equipment, a laptop and cell-phone were reported stolen in the robbery, Yaras said. Abdel-Salal also suffered bruises in the alleged attack, Yaras said.

In the meantime, a patrol officer noticed a man in a hooded sweatshirt parked in a car further down Dempster Street. Police approached 19-year-old Michael S. Marrougi and found the stolen items in his back seat.

Yaras said the two men gave statements that had some differing facts, and both ended up allegedly confessing to the staged robbery. Marrougi was reportedly waiting in a parking lot to meet Abdel-Salal, Yaras said.

Abdel-Salal was charged later that day with felony disorderly conduct and theft, while Marrougi was charged with theft.

Camera footage clearly shows a confrontation and struggle, Yaras said, but no property was damaged in the staged fight.

Village Board still not sure how to deal with term limit conflicts

BY NATASHA WASINSKI
For Sun-Times Media | @natwaz

Niles voters passed two different — and contradictory — term limit referenda in the spring.

One proposal has already gone into effect. The other hangs in limbo.

Officials are now considering whether it's the responsibility of the village to ensure the legal mess gets sorted out.

Trustee Rosemary Palicki brought the conflicting referenda issue back to the table last week, saying the matter should undergo a judicial review.

"That's the issue here — which one is valid?" she said. "We should follow this to the best of our ability legally, which means it's not our decision, it's the decision of a judge ... This is beyond our scope of authority."

Back in April, voters approved a citizens' petition to limit service on the Village Board to 16 years.

A second referendum, put forth by Niles and also passed by voters, revised an ordinance to allow trustees to serve a maximum of three full terms, equal to 12 years, and to limit the mayor to two full terms in office, or eight years.

After the results came in, Village Attorney Joe Annunzio consulted with outside legal counsel about the village's options for remedying the conflicting language.

According to documents obtained by the Pioneer Press, the village enlisted the assistance of attorneys from Holland & Knight three days after the referenda passed.

The firm found that, based on the ruling of a previous case heard in court, "a municipality has no obligation to implement (and a court will not enforce) a voter-approved referendum that is not clear and self-executing."

A second legal opinion — from Chicago-based Ancel Glink, which specializes in government law — also determined the matter hinged on whether the referenda met the requirements for being enforceable.

Both firms found the village's resolution question to be a valid and binding referendum. The petition question, however, was not self-executing and contained "a number of ambiguities inherent in the wording," reads a memo from Ancel Glink attorney Paul Keller.

"I recommend the Village Board simply acknowledge that term limits have been adopted in Niles and take no other action," he stated.

Barbara Adams, of Holland & Knight, reached a similar conclusion in her report, noting Niles "has no obligation to, and is unable to, enforce the terms" of the petition question.

For their services rendered, the village paid Holland & Knight and Ancel Glink $4,691.53 and $450, respectively, according to village documents.

Trustee Chris Hanusiak pointed out on Sept. 24 that legal opinions are, after all, just opinions. He sided with Palicki and called on the village to let the courts decide.

"It would be better for us to resolve it for the people," he said.

Yet not all Village Board members were convinced anything more had to be done on their end at taxpayers' expense.

A few officials agreed that Niles resident Joe Makula, who organized the citizens' petition, should be the one settling the matter through the appropriate legal channels, if he so desired.

"We did everything correct, in my opinion, and we're back here talking about it again," Trustee Joe LoVerde said. "We have term limits."

"Why is it up to us to defend someone else's position?" added Mayor Andrew Przybylo, who initially expressed skepticism over the value in obtaining a judge's ruling.

The first-term mayor previously served as a village trustee for 24 years. He noted the possibility of losing his seat if the current term-limit rule is replaced by the measure limiting service to 16 years.

"I don't think it would be a fair thing to do (to voters)," Przybylo said.

Palicki said wanting to resolve the referenda conflict was not means for booting someone out of office. Rather, the residents of Niles "deserve a decision to be made, whatever is correct," she said.

Przybylo said he would see that trustees vote on sending the matter for judicial review. If the Village Board were split on its decision, Przybylo noted he would vote "yes" to letting the courts decide.

Niles testing local sewers by pumping in smoke

BY IGOR STUDENKOV
For Sun-Times Media | @istudenkov

If you see the smoke coming out of the ground over the next few weeks, don't worry. The world isn't ending. It's just the Village of Niles Department of Public Services testing its sewers.

Smoke testing allows the village to find leaks, cracks and other sewer damage that would otherwise be hard to detect. The smoke isn't dangerous, but if it enters a home, it shows that something far more dangerous may already be leaking into the building. If that happens, residents are strongly urged to notify the work crews as soon as possible.

Smoke-testing has been used to find leaks in sewers since the late 19th century. According to Scott Jochim, director of the Department of Public Services, Niles has done smoke-testing before, approximately 20 years ago. This time, the village has contracted Chicago-based Hey and Associates Inc., a water resources consulting agency, to help handle the project.

Testing for leaks serves several purposes. It helps keep rain water and ground water from entering the sewers, which can put a strain on sewer pipes and sewage treatment facilities. And according to Jochim, finding and plugging the leaks could prevent sewer back-ups and help reduce flooding.

"We are looking for undetected cross connections between the sanitary and storm sewers," he said. "By eliminating these, we can hopefully reduce flooding in basements — assuming we find some."

The village will be smoke-testing the sewers section by section. The crews will hang notices on the doors of all the buildings within the testing area before the actual testing starts. However, according to the statement on the Niles website, the testing may be postponed due to bad weather.

Ideally, the smoke would never enter the homes. But if it does, it would indicate that there is a leak inside the building and dangerous sewer gases may be seeping into the house. Public Services is urging residents to report the smoke as soon as they see it — either to the crews working outside or by calling (262) 366-5879.

Jochim didn't think the test would impact too many property owners.

"We have no idea how many homes may have smoke entering their homes," he said. "Last time, we had one or two homes that reported smoke."

If plumbing issues are discovered, it will be up to the property owner to fix them. But Jochim told Niles Herald-Spectator that the issues may be easy to fix.

"[It] could be as simple as pouring water in the drain," he said.

Jochim emphasized that spoke wasn't dangerous. But according to the village statement, it may affect people with respiratory problems. If anyone who has mobility and respiratory problems lives in the building within the testing area, Public Services is encouraging them to contact the village before the testing begins.

Because of potential weather-related delays, the village hasn't set concrete dates, but Public Services expects the tests to run though October and wrap up by mid-November.

Morton Grove asks residents: 'What do you want in town?'

BY RICK KAMBIC
rkambic@pioneerlocal.com |
@rick_kambic

Morton Grove is building a road map for the future, and the village wants to know what residents are looking for.

A consultant was hired in August for $43,800 to evaluate assets in Morton Grove, available resources, stakeholders' wants and projected trends before building a strategic plan that future government officials can follow.

The project is expected to run eight months. An Oct. 30 workshop at the American Legion Civic Center is the first scheduled opportunity for residents and business owners to chime in on what they want. The forum starts at 7 p.m. and will run as long as needed.

"Citizen input is vital in strategic planning. Who knows our needs and wants better than our own Morton Grove residents," Mayor Dan DiMaria said. "We have scheduled this community workshop meeting to allow residents to learn about the strategic planning process, but more importantly, to gather their ideas and suggestions for how to move Morton Grove forward."

Suggestions could include road upgrades, the addition or revision of village services, changes in how future home construction is regulated, or desires for new types of restaurants, among others.

The consultant, Houseal Lavigne Associates, also plans to create small focus groups later in the process to further gather information and run possible solutions past selected demographics.

Other town hall meeting-type workshops may be scheduled in the future too.

Morton Grove's Economic Development Commission is also working toward getting feedback from local businesses so the village can better retain current companies and attract new ones.

Morton Grove may get two more restaurants with video gaming

BY RICK KAMBIC
rkambic@pioneerlocal.com |
@rick_kambic

Two new restaurants may be coming to Morton Grove — and they both could have video gambling.

Blackhawk Restaurant Group has 39 pending applications with the Illinois Gaming Commission for new bistros throughout suburban Cook County, Will, McHenry and DuPage counties. Two of the applications list Morton Grove as places of business.

One of the proposed Betty's Bistro restaurants would be at 7152 Dempster St., near the intersection of Harlem Avenue, while the other would be at 7921

Golf Road, near Washington Avenue.

Four establishments in Morton Grove already have gaming licenses — Bringer Inn at 6230 Lincoln Ave., Tommy's at 9005 Waukegan Rd., the Moose Lodge 376 at 6419 Chestnut St., and Morton Grove American Legion Post 134 at 6140 Dempster St.

Earlier this year, Blackhawk told officials in Bartlett that Betty's will offer wine, beer and specialty beverages, and serve light breakfast and lunch, according to the Daily Herald. The Bartlett restaurant is slated to have five video gaming machines.

Morton Grove trustees approved the creation of five new liquor licenses in July to help make the town look more viable to businesses, instead of having only a few available licenses in each category.

Trustee John Thill voiced concerns over whether the new licenses would legitimately attract restaurants or serve a video gaming purpose. Mayor Dan DiMaria assured him that restaurants were the target and video gaming was inconsequential.

Neither DiMaria nor Thill were available for comment at the time of publication. A timeline for the opening of Betty's Bistro is still unknown as well.

Errol Borci, 24, of 8880 W. Golf Rd., unincorporated Maine Township, was charged with driving under the influence and driving with expired registration on the morning of Oct. 12. He was taken into custody near the intersection of Ozanam and Milwaukee Avenues at 4:04 a.m. after police reported

MORTON GROVE

BATTERY

Police say no major injuries were reported, no weapons were involved, and no gang activity is suspected.

Hanibal Chaharbakhshi, 52, of Niles, was charged Oct. 4 with battery after allegedly pushing a cashier at Aldi Foods, 7905 Golf Road. Police say a dispute over prices led to the altercation.

CRIMINAL TRESSPASS

Ioan Tiran, 64, of Skokie, was charged Oct. 15 with criminal trespass after loss prevention officers noticed him as a banned customer for previous retail thefts. He is scheduled in court Nov. 25.

DUI

Police say Groner told an elderly woman that he was a police officer and needed the $500 she withdrew from an ATM. Police believe he selected the woman randomly. Police found Groner because the ATM camera captured the license plate number on his getaway vehicle. He is scheduled in court Oct. 25.

POSSESSION OF A CONTROLLED SUBSTANCE

Dawn T. Alumkal, 25, of Morton Grove, was charged Oct. 13 with driving under the influence of alcohol and possession of a controlled substance. After being apprehended for the DUI, police searched her car and found cocaine.

EDUCATION

Retired teachers band to protect their pensions

New group pickets in front of Biss's Skokie office

BY MIKE ISAACS
misaacs@pioneerlocal.com | @SKReview_Mike

The retired teachers say they had a deal about their pensions and now state legislators like Sen. Daniel Biss, D-9, are trying to break it.

"It's like Obamacare and what the Tea Partiers tried to do," said retired Park Ridge teacher Fred Klonsky, who is leading a new group called S.O.R.E. — Skokie Organization of Retired Educators — to try to protect their pensions. "It was settled. You can't come back and say let's do Obamacare over again."

But Biss sees little way out of a massive pension debt problem for the state unless everyone gives.

"Most far-reaching pieces of pension legislation that I have supported," Biss said, "are ones that would decrease the unfunded liabilities by virtue of benefit reforms by less than a third."

In other words, $30 billion or so of the approximately $100 billion of pension debt would come in changes to benefits to decrease the liability.

"When you say changes in the benefits, you mean decreasing the benefits," Klonsky shot back. "It means those who receive benefits now would receive less benefits if your plan would go into effect."

The feisty exchange occurred Friday outside the senator's Skokie office where 50 or so retired and a few current teachers picketed.

They held up signs as they faced busy Dempster Street — "Don't mess with our TRS," "If you can read this, thank a teacher," "We paid you promised" and "Don't steal our pension" — among them.

Retired teacher Fred Klonsky engages State Sen. Daniel Biss (D-9th) about pension reform outside his Skokie office. The newly-formed S.O.R.E. — Skokie Organization of Retired Educators — picketed there Friday afternoon. | MIKE ISAACS/SUN-TIMES MEDIA

Biss was patient and listened, and the teachers were respectful during the exchange. But they pulled no punches in letting the senator know that they were unhappy with the proposals he has supported.

While pensions were the main topic of the day, teachers also asserted that proposed changes in health care and Medicare are evidence that they are under attack.

"I feel it should be the principle of my party to speak for middle class and working people to maintain those benefits, and I really would like to have your cooperation on that," retired Wheeling-Buffalo Grove teacher and current Skokie resident Harriet Sheeley told Biss.

Agree on the problem

The two sides agree that the state was woefully negligent in not making mandated actuarial payments into the pension system for decades. It created one of the worst pension crises in the country.

"What everyone agrees about is that we have a very, very massive pension debt," Biss said. "I think what is empirically true is that there is a gap between the assets available in the pension system today and the agreement that has been made to people who have already carried out service. And that is a very, very expensive problem."

The differences come in how to solve the crisis.

Biss believes reform proposals he supports take "a balanced approach" and spread out the burden among all parties. Less than one-third of the debt would come from workers, he repeated, the rest from the state through new revenue and other means.

"Instead of using the rhetoric about how proposed pension reforms are placing the entire burden on the back of the workers, instead say it will place a little less than a third of the burden on the back of the workers," Biss said. "I think that would be a better characterization."

Not to the teachers who assert they already kept their end of the bargain and paid their share. Their pensions, they say, are protected under the state Constitution.

Teachers contribute 9.4 percent of their salary to their pension fund and receive no social security, according to S.O.R.E. It wasn't teachers who failed to pay into the system and create the crisis, the group maintains.

"This should not be the office we're marching in front of," Klonsky said. "The fact that we should be marching in front of the offices of Democrats to defend our pensions is crazy."

But the debt has become so

TWO PENSION PERSPECTIVES

- Skokie Organization of Retired Educators (S.O.R.E.) is a new chapter of retirees from the Illinois Education Association. More information on pensions can be found at www.ieanea.org/resources/pensions.

large, Biss insisted, that there is no viable solution other than sharing the pain.

S.O.R.E. supports a more graduated, progressive income tax to raise revenue in Illinois.

"Penny Pritzker who (owned) the Hyatt Hotel pays the same income tax rate as the people who clean the rooms in the hotel," Klonsky said. "We're not proposing higher taxes, but what we're proposing is those who have more should pay more and those who have less would be paying less."

What is uncertain is how much additional revenue would be generated under this change as well as closing corporate tax loopholes that S.O.R.E. also recommends.

What is more certain is that S.O.R.E. is not going away. The impassioned group was planning to head to Springfield this week to stand up for protecting pensions they say teachers were promised.

"I turned 20 years old in 1968," Klonsky said. "Those who turned 20 in 1968 are turning 65 this year. They're entering Medicare and social security. We bring with us a 60s sensibility. We fight for what is ours. We know how to fight and win."

Unpaid student fees piling up at District 64

BY NATASHA WASINSKI
For Sun-Times Media | @natwaz

Unpaid student fees are piling up at Park Ridge-Niles District 64, prompting officials to contemplate how to recover some of the roughly $94,000 in lost revenue from the last two years.

Business Manager Rebecca Allard reported a growing trend in the number of outstanding balances at the district's seven schools and its special-needs preschool.

After one month of schools being back in session, the district had yet to receive payments for one out of every five students.

In the 2011-12 school year, $40,952 in fees for 157 pupils — equal to 3.7 percent of student accounts — went unpaid. Last year the number of outstanding balances rose to 198, or 4.6 percent of accounts, for a total loss of $52,668.

Students with fee waivers, such as those who qualify for the federal free lunch and breakfast program, were not included in the figures.

Annual registration fees vary by grade level, and families have the option to pay for additional services like busing, sports, lunch and extended care.

Allard on Sept. 23 noted that 894 students had charges on their accounts for 2013-14, which she said is typical for this time of year, yet nonetheless troubling.

All student fees were due by Aug. 1. The average amount per child owed is $260.

"The question becomes, do you write them off as the cost of doing business or do we secure the services of a collection agency to collect those fees?" Allard said.

District 64, to date, has not used a third-party vendor to recoup money it is due. Current procedures have the business office mailing quarterly statements to families with outstanding accounts. The next bills are scheduled to go out Oct. 31.

Staff does not take further action to settle delinquent accounts after final notices are sent April 30. Late fees aren't assessed, and past-due accounts do not get reported to credit bureaus.

The district could only speculate why some families hadn't paid the out-of-pocket costs, though the bottom-line for most officials was that fairness and accountability need be considered.

"I'm very sad about this,"

said board member Vicki Lee. "We all work hard, we all pay our property taxes, we all pay our fees."

Board President Anthony Borrelli acknowledged District 64's fees are higher than some of its neighboring districts, and suggested improvements could be made to the payment process to lessen the burden on families.

Installment plans are available by request, Allard said.

Board members proposed phone call follow-ups or having notices come from personnel at the schools since they interact with families more regularly.

Enlisting the services of a collection agency is another option the administration may explore.

"We definitely want to keep a level of sensitivity," noted Superintendent Philip Bender.

Park Ridge Arts Council offering new grants

BY NATASHA WASINSKI
For Sun-Times Media | @natwaz

When it comes to creative expression, Perry Fisher believes Park Ridge stands out from the crowd.

The proof is in the sheer number of civic arts and music organizations in town, said the president of the Park Ridge Cultural Arts Council.

"Park Ridge is a very special community in the cultural arts," he said. "Businesses coming in should hear that message. It's what separates us from other communities."

Fisher added: "It's a quality of life issue."

Recognizing the unique and valuable role culture plays in the city, Park Ridge joined state and federal officials in declaring October as National Arts and Humanities Month.

PRCAC is marking the momentous month by rolling out a new grant program during an Oct. 20 reception to encourage cross-sector collaboration among arts organizations.

To date, the 17-year-old foundation has doled out more than $100,000 in grants for special projects and general operating expenses, as well as scholarships for students to attend summer art and music camps.

NILES PARK DISTRICT

New commissioner joins park board

Niles businessman Chris Zalinski is the newest Niles Park District commissioner, replacing Commissioner William Terpinas, who died of natural causes during the Independence Day parade.

Zalinski was appointed Oct. 2 and joined the board on Oct. 15.

Zalinski has been a Niles resident since 2001. He owns Chris' Landscape Inc, a Niles-based landscaping company.

While he hasn't worked with the park district before, he's been involved in the village government for many years as a member of the Niles Environmental Practices Committee. Zalinski helped plan and design the Niles Community Rain Garden, as well as the rain garden at Culver Elementary School. In the community garden, he personally built a path free of charge.

With the appointment, Za-linski will finish Terpinas' term, which ends in April 2017.

The new commissioner told Niles Herald-Spectator that he's hopeful about the future.

"I'm looking forward to serving out the rest of the term as part of this great organization," said Zalinski. "And I look forward to serve the really great programs and activities for children of all ages."

NILES LIBRARY

Library unveils new website

When the Niles Public Library planned its renovation project, it was thinking beyond the physical structures.

The library website, which was last redesigned in April 2009, was due for a significant update.

That update arrived in the beginning October. The new website features a different color scheme, a better-organized layout, greater social media integration and more resources than ever before.

"The Library wanted an easy-to-navigate website with a clean layout," explained Vasilic. "We chose a new color scheme with brighter colors for the new website."

The library also wanted to make it easier for patrons to find and use its online resources. This included research databases, job search tools, and resources for English language learners.

While most of the site's content carried over from the previous design, the library did add a few new features. It launched a new Community section, which offers links to websites of local services, schools, hospitals and transportation providers. Patrons who want to know more about how local veterans participated in various wars can access the Veterans History Project, an online multimedia collection.

The library is also expanding its ebook offerings. In the past, the library only subscribed to MyMediaMall digital library service, which only offered ebooks from certain publishers. It recently subscribed to 3M Cloud, another digital library. While it doesn't fill all the gaps, it significantly expanded the library's digital offerings.

The redesigned website was officially unveiled at the beginning of October.

The expiration date for NFL running backs seems to be age 30. Entering the 2013 season, backs older than 30 have rushed for more than 1,000 yards in a season just 44 times, although 16 of those had occurred in the previous decade. But perhaps more important than age is number of carries. Entering 2013, 74 runners in league history had carried the ball 1,500 times, but only 33 had topped 2,000 carries. For the record, the only back over 30 years of age to rush for 1,000 yards and win a Super Bowl in the same season was Corey Dillon for New England in 2004

What would you guess is the record for pounds bench-pressed by a person older than 90? The previous record had been 135 pounds, until it was broken in June of 2013 by Sy Perils, age 91, from of Surprise, Arizona. Neither his last name nor his hometown is made up. The new record? Get this - 187.2 pounds, smashing the old mark by an astonishing 52 pounds.

For all the hoopla about college football super conferences and national champions from the SEC and TV channels devoted to one university, Notre Dame continues to stand out as the sport's most fabled program. Here's just one measurement: According to Forbes Magazine, the average price for a 2013 Notre Dame football ticket in secondary markets was $293.90, the highest in the country. By the way, the school that Notre Dame had played the most games against in its history entering 2013 was Navy - 86 times.

E-reader refund is on the books

HELP SQUAD
BY
JACKIE PILOSSOPH

Dear Help Squad,
I returned a Nook to Barnes & Noble by mail after receiving a return merchandise authorization number. They have acknowledged they received it on March 21st. I still have not received a credit on my credit card for the return.

I have called them several times, and every time they acknowledge receipt of the Nook, that it was in good condition and I should be receiving a credit in 1 to 2 billing periods.

On August 28th, I was assured I would receive an email in 1 to 5 business days. I have not heard from Barnes & Noble at all. Can you please help?

Bonnie M. McLeod
Lake Zurich

Dear Bonnie,

This was a pretty simple fix for us, with a result that we think will make you happy. We called Barnes & Noble and spoke with a manager, who explained that the problem was, they don't give credit card refunds for store purchases, so whoever you were speaking with was mistaken. Instead, you will be receiving a check in the mail for the entire refund amount within seven days of the phone call we placed.

On another note, I remember you told me that you returned the Nook because you had a change of heart when it came to what kind of electronic book reader you preferred, choosing in the end to purchase an iPad.

It got the Help Squad thinking about all the possibilities there are on the market for e-readers and tablets. So, we spoke with Edwon Lighthall, a Microsoft Advisor for Best Buy in Melrose Park, and asked him to share the features and costs of a few great options.

The first thing Lighthall explained was the difference between an e-reader and a tablet, which is that an e-reader is strictly used for reading. A tablet, on the other hand, can serve as a portable computer, with the ability to play movies and music, take photos and video, check email, and create documents.

Here are some of Lighthall's favorite e-readers and tablets:

1. Samsung Galaxy Note 10.1 2014 Edition: Lighthall explained that this tablet is Apple iPad's biggest competitor. He described it as "absolutely beautiful" with its wide screen and dual-view option. Another big plus: a quick response time. Starts at $549.99

2. Barnes & Noble Nook HD+: This is a tablet with a slightly bigger screen size than most. According to Lighthall, the Nook offers more books than Kindle, and you are guaranteed one free book per day. One specific demographic for the Nook seems to be college students, as the Nook offers download options for a lot of college-required reading. Starts at $129.99.

3. Microsoft Surface RT: With a Windows operating screen and an HD touch screen, this tablet comes pre-installed with Word, Excel and PowerPoint. If you're willing to upgrade to the Microsoft Surface Pro 2, you get one year of free unlimited voice calling to landlines in more than 60 countries, free Skype in 2 million hot spots, and additional storage for two years. Both Microsoft Surface tablets have high-resolution screens. Starts at $399.99 for RT and $899.99 for Pro 2.

4. Kindle Fire HDX: "This gives you a beautiful screen and better resolution than a television," said Lighthall. Additionally, it's easy to navigate, very user-friendly, and it's very lightweight. It also lets you set up individual profiles and time limits for your children. Starts at $229.99.

5. Apple iPad: According to Lighthall, because it's Apple, it's reliable, durable, and you get automatic updates. Lighthall said Apple is always rated one of the best. His favorites: iPad with Retina display, starts at $499.99; and iPad Mini, starts at $329.99.

Something spooky this way comes

Pioneer Press put out the call for its annual Scary Stories contest and local third-, fourth- and fifth-graders did not disappoint.

More than 700 stories were turned in for the contest. Zombies, dolls and declarations of "The End... or is it?" were popular with the young authors. Artwork depicting haunted houses, ghosts and witches were also shared.

The stories are being judged by local authors J.T. Holden, Jack Fredrickson, Libby Fischer Hellmann and Alec Nevala-Lee.

Navy recruits deserve a great Thanksgiving Day

On Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 28, the Morton Grove American Legion Post 134 will be celebrating their 7th Adopt a Sailor Navy Day.

We will host 50 recruits from Great Lakes. They will arrive at 8 a.m. by bus, donated by the Golf School District 67, who will also return them by 5 p.m. They will be greeted by legion members, village officials, friends, and whomever else wishes to greet them and thank them for their service.

There will be refreshments donated by legion members, friends, and local merchants. They will be served a full Thanksgiving dinner with all the trimmings. Entertainment will be available along with nationwide long distance and international phone service all day long, compliments of AT&T. Computers will also be available. They will have the opportunity to talk and email their loved ones throughout the day.

After graduation many of these young men and women will be sent into harm's way. The day's events will be filmed and a DVD will be sent to their families. We owe them a thank you for their service. Let's show them a beautiful day to remember.

We also contribute to and support the Comfort/Wounded Warrior Fund. We take pride in entertaining our troops each year. We want to continue to support them if they should fall victim in harms way.

Anyone wishing to make a donation, please make checks payable to:

Thanksgiving Committee, American Legion Post 134, American Legion Post 134, 6144 Dempster St., Morton Grove, IL 60053.

Fifty years later and Kennedy assassination still stings

BY RANDY BLASER

I was walking home from school. My best friend asked if I had heard the president was shot. I hadn't. I thought it was some sort of joke

I said I didn't believe him, but he insisted, adding that our principal came into class and said so. At this Chicago Catholic school where most of the teachers were nuns, the principal's word was divine truth.

"She didn't come into our class," I countered.

By then I was home, and when I walked into the kitchen I saw my mother was crying. She didn't have to say anything. I knew it was true.

And that's where I was when I learned President Kennedy had been assassinated.

The 50th anniversary of his assassination is still a month away, but articles are already being published about the assassination and his presidency, new books are being released, new conspiracies are being put forward and old ones are being rehashed.

For those of you who don't remember Kennedy or the times, I'd recommend a couple of books. One is President Kennedy: Profile of Power, by Richard Reeves, where I learned that Eisenhower didn't like him and JFK didn't exactly realize the influence his own words had on the Civil Rights movement.

"Understanding my obsession with all things JFK, and obviously I am not alone in this obsession, might help the younger generation understand us Baby Boomers. We forever long for it to be noon on Nov. 22, 1963, because the downward spiral leading to exactly where we are today began at 12:30 p.m. with those three shots. For us, the Kennedy assassination will always be an open wound that will never heal."

Another good biography is An Unfinished Life, by Robert Dallek, where I learned that when asked if he was a liberal or conservative, JFK answered: "I'm a realist."

Like many of my generation who remember exactly where we were when we heard the awful news, I've spent the last 50 years asking why, wondering who did it, and imagining all the what-if scenarios.

I've read many of the conspiracy books. It was easy to see conspiracies everywhere after a decade of Vietnam, the assassinations of Martin Luther King and Bobby Kennedy, and then Nixon's fall.

After considering Kennedy was killed by a government plot, or by a power-hungry Lyndon Johnson, or by an out-of-control CIA, or by organized crime or, finally, by a Secret Service agent in an incredibly tragic accident, I've come to the conclusion that Oswald did it and he acted alone. Everything else is bunk. Modern technology and ballistics prove it.

The realization that Oswald acting alone killed Kennedy leads one to the disorienting conclusion that Kennedy was killed for no reason. It was a senseless act with no overarching meaning. It changed the trajectory of the nation, but in a way that was just one of thousands of random possibilities.

Maybe we would have avoided Vietnam, maybe not. The breakdown in society we experienced in the years that followed was probably inevitable. But no Johnson and maybe no Nixon to follow? It is an interesting parlor game to consider.

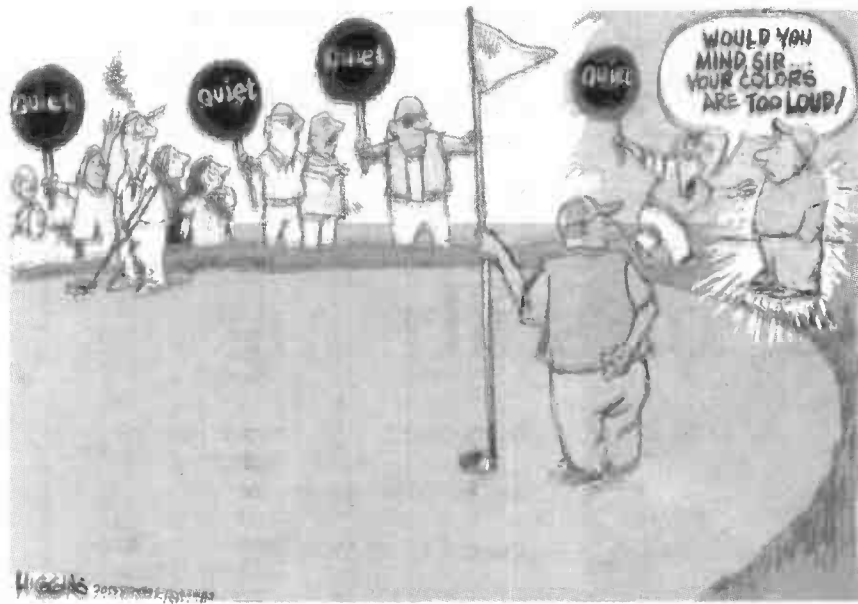

Understanding my obsession with all things JFK, and obviously I am not alone in this obsession, might help the younger generation understand us Baby Boomers.

We forever long for it to be noon on Nov. 22, 1963, because the downward spiral leading to exactly where we are today began at 12:30 p.m. with those three shots. For us, the Kennedy assassination will always be an open wound that will never heal.

Sales encroach on Thanksgiving's purity, and it's our fault

BY PAUL SASSONE

The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars, but in ourselves ... "We have met the enemy and he is us."

Cassius and Pogo are right.

I could dig out more quotations, but you get the idea. We want to blame others for our misfortunes. But often the one to blame is ourselves.

Which is why I hesitate to add my voice completely to the chorus of condemnation that Thanksgiving is about to be destroyed.

Macy's recently announced it will open for business at 8 p.m. on Thanksgiving. And where one store goes others will follow. And if 8 p.m. is a good time to open on Thanksgiving, why not 7, or 6, or 5, or 4?

Soon, it is feared, all stores will be open all day Thanksgiving. Store personnel and their families will be denied a Thanksgiving. Families will cut short their holiday celebration to go shopping, or maybe have no Thanksgiving dinner at all to save time and energy for hitting the stores.

And before we know it, Thanksgiving will have vanished.

That would be a pity. Thanksgiving is the least commercial, most family-oriented holiday we have. It's the holiday that most resembles the way Norman Rockwell painted Americans.

And, it seems a good bet that commerce will nibble away at Thanksgiving until the holiday — though it might not disappear — will lose much of its meaning and specialness.

And whose fault will that be?

Business? Yes, I suppose. But blaming merchants would be like blaming a lion for killing and eating a zebra. It is the nature of a lion to kill prey and eat it. And it is in the nature of business to make money.

Once, business may have claimed, and even believed, that customer service, quality merchandise and partnership with employees was part of its mission. But it's pretty much a given today that the sole mission of a business is to maximize the stockholders' return on investment.

But you and I don't answer to stockholders. So, even more culpable has to be — us. Shopping takes two, the seller and the buyer.

We — you and I — are the second half of the shopping equation.

No store can succeed without customers. If we declined to shop on Thanksgiving, stores would not be open on Thanksgiving.

We have the power to prevent the death or crippling of Thanksgiving.

If we want to.

It's a question of our priorities.

What's more important to us, Thanksgiving and all that it means? Or buying a smartphone at a bargain price?

If the latter is your priority, then don't complain.

Park Ridge native in running for 'best job around the world'

BY JENNIFER JOHNSON
jjohnson@pioneerlocal.com | @Jan_Pioneer

It's one of those too-good-to-be-true job advertisements. For one thing, the tagline calls it "the best job around the world!" (And yes, the exclamation mark is included). The "chief world explorer" also promises a year of international travel, napping on beaches and a $100,000 paycheck. The company is Jauntaroo, and it helps match people with the perfect vacation destination — hence the need for a new chief world explorer to essentially promote the company.

Park Ridge native and 2005 Maine South graduate Mickey Mangan admits it's a long shot, but he's among 50 applicants up for the job, thanks to videos he created and submitted as part of the application process. His first short video highlighted Cologne, Germany, where he had been living and working for two years. The second, which can be viewed at www.bestjobaroundtheworld.com, is a two-and-a-half-minute piece highlighting the people and places of Bayonne, N.J., a city of 63,000 east of Newark. Mangan produced the film "over the course of two sleepless days," he says.

"I honestly do believe I have the best two videos of anyone who applied," he said. "I get the sense the applicants were putting an emphasis on themselves, but I decided to not include a single word about myself and just show the quality material I am able to produce all on my own."

Mangan sees the job promotion as an ad campaign for Jauntaroo, as the company has received free nationwide publicity as a result of the unusual position. But he doesn't mind — he's having fun and hopes he'll be among the final five contestants chosen for an in-person interview later this month.

But Mangan's material isn't the only thing that will determine if he gets the job; he also needs to accumulate as many "likes" on the video as possible.

The winner is expected to be announced this November. If he doesn't win, Mangan is looking to focus on another endeavor, his "Lernen to Talk Show." It's a video project showing how ordinary people learn languages while living abroad.

Q: What made you want to apply for the chief world explorer job?

A: I first heard of it because a friend of mine emailed me a link to the job opening. I had never heard of the company Jauntaroo before. When I read the job description, I thought it spoke to me specifically because it talked about needing somebody who loves to travel, connect with local cultures and produce video content to be published online.

Q: What made you choose Bayonne, N.J. as the town you profiled?

A: I got an email from the company saying they liked my first video and I was one of the people chosen for the top 50 (finalists). I had only seven days to do the video. I was on tour with my brother's band, Jet W. Lee. I play bass when they tour sometimes, and we were in New Jersey. The task was to make a video of your town as if you were the chief world explorer. I would have done it for Park Ridge, but I wasn't going to be in Park Ridge until after the deadline. So I picked Bayonne because I wanted a smaller place, I wanted a place that would highlight my abilities as a travel host. I thought if I could make a small town exciting, then that says a lot about what I can do on camera.

The one thing that surprised me was that trying to tell a story about the place you're in can help you appreciate that place. I never went to Bayonne before, but I love it now. When you try to be creative about something, you end up caring about it more.

Q: If you did a travel video on Park Ridge, what would you highlight?

A: I would combine it with my own story. When I talk about Park Ridge with anyone, I always emphasize the vertical street signs and how we're all better at reading vertically because of the signs. I'd also mention that Hillary Clinton lived here and how I loved the Pickwick. The Pickwick would definitely be in it. I like District 64 so I'd definitely show Lincoln Middle School and Roosevelt (where I went to school). I'd talk about the new development in Uptown, too, and about my favorite restaurant, Siam Thai. That's the first place I tried pad thai.

Since I've been back to Park Ridge, I've been appreciating it in a different light. Like how the trees look when the sun shines. That's something I never noticed before, until I came back.

Q: If you're chosen as chief world explorer, what exactly would your job be?

A: They've kept it kind of vague. They said in the job description that the chief world explorer would be something of a figurehead of the company and do media appearances.

It would be a lot of going to particular travel destinations and essentially advertising different places. Personally, I would love to have this job because it would be a way to practice my filmmaking. I'm pretty much self-taught when it comes to making videos and when I think about making 50 videos in one year, I couldn't imagine a better way to practice. That's what really appeals to me: supporting myself while cutting my teeth on filmmaking.

Party in pink with Giuliana Rancic

BY KARIE ANGELL LUC
For Sun-Times Media

Hot pink umbrellas toted by professional models at Night Bright at the Cube, where Giuliana Rancic welcomed fans to Westfield Old Orchard mall in Skokie on Sept. 28, even brighter.

Those fans stood in line for hours waiting, for a chance to rock the hot pink carpet before entering a cubist's house of glass.

People of all ages witnessed a sparkling fashion show evening to benefit Bright Pink, a national non-profit that supports breast and ovarian health in young women.

"I'm very involved in this charity which is actually based here in downtown Chicago," said Rancic. "Bright Pink focuses on supporting and educating young women who are going through breast and ovarian cancer," said Rancic.

Dazzling in a short bob coiffure, tall dark patent dress pumps and short bright pink party dress with lace at its neckline, Rancic explained that "It's just a very big part of my life, I've been through breast cancer.

"It's really about getting out there, encouraging everyone to have fun, look at beautiful fashion here, great music, but, at the same time, to hear the message that, 'Hey, you know what, if breast cancer can happen to me, it can happen to you and what are you doing to make sure, that God forbid you get breast cancer, you catch it early,'" Rancic said.

Rancic is at about the two-year mark of celebrating breast cancer survival. "That's huge, 98 percent is huge."

The debut rock group, GRL, performed to a screaming throng of girls, girls, girls. But men could be seen in the sea of happy faces, and Rancic acknowledged them.

"Actually, those guys are the smartest people in the house, right," she said. "Because they're like, 'I'm gonna go out to this event, all of these beautiful women are here!'"

"It's very empowering when you're around a lot of women," said Rancic.

Hot coats for cold days

BY LYNN TAYLOR SCHWAAB
For Sun-Times Media

Forget the statement necklace. And the statement handbag. With cooler weather, it's now about the statement coat.

And your coat should speak up, loud and clear. It's a wardrobe staple that can make your look.

A coat should never be a second thought or late addition to your wardrobe. It's part of your look. Whether you favor one that's oversized, double-breasted, walking length, in leather, fur or colorful wool, make sure it complements you and your style.

We pinned down some experts on what's great this season.

Kathy Rezny of York Furrier, an expert in the coat field, notes the best she's found.

"The York Collection will feature gorgeous colors, bold patterns and shapely silhouettes. Rich colors this season include plum, merlot, tangerine, emerald, saffron and vivid red. Figure-flattering styles range from adorable boleros to floor-grazing evening coats with a myriad of in-between lengths. For the North Shore woman on the go, York Furrier recommends the knee-length walking coat for versatile wear."

This season capes are in full swing, too. Pair them with skinny pants or jeans, a slim pencil skirt or dress to balance the look. You don't want all over volume, just that great swish of cape. To complete your outfit, add a pair of long leather gloves. It's the perfect finishing touch — and warm, too.

Lisa DeVries from the Westfield Malls sees leather. "From leather motorcycle jackets to subtle accents on a something like classic trench or pea coat, leather will be present in every fashion-forward woman's closet this fall."

She warns not to underestimate the coat's power. "It's no secret that coats are an investment that can be costly. However, not only are they necessary for surviving the harsh winter month, but they are the first thing people notice about your outfit. So why not make it your seasonal splurge?"

Film lovers direct their dream wedding

Jennifer Zimmer and Sean Dyra

BY CAITLIN MULLEN
Contributing Writer

As the events coordinator for Oak Park restaurant Maya Del Sol, Jennifer Zimmer has dealt with her share of weddings, and knows what she likes and doesn't like.

While she and her husband Sean Dyra planned their wedding, she appreciated how involved he was in the process.

"I thought the thing that was really wonderful was planning it together," Jennifer said.

Because they wanted a unique place to get married, their ceremony took place at the Patio Theater in Chicago, with the reception following at the Chateau Ritz in Niles.

The couple met more than eight years ago at a party in Chicago. It wasn't love at first interaction.

"Oh, I hated him," Jennifer said. By the end of the night, she had changed her mind, and fell in love with his sense of humor and tenacity.

He proposed in May 2012: The two had spent the day in Milwaukee to celebrate their dating anniversary, and because Sean had been too nervous all day to propose, he asked Jennifer to marry him in their hotel room that evening.

Sean was able to put his creativity on display during their April 13 wedding with a preview film on the theater's big screen, splicing together clips from movies like "When Harry Met Sally" and "Dirty Dancing."

Following that was a slideshow of old photos of Jennifer and Sean, including a treasured photo of Jennifer as a child, sitting on her dad's lap while wearing her mom's wedding veil.

And their officiant made things personal with stories of their past, which guests loved.

"It was really cool to completely customize it ourselves," Jennifer said. "It was just really personal and I think that's what we both liked."

Instead of table numbers in the reception space, Jennifer and Sean used movies that had a significance to them or their guests to identify tables, including "Roadhouse," "Bring It On," "Mary Poppins" and "The Big Lebowski."

And the couple's first dance — to Chuck Berry's "You Never Can Tell" — was a nod to film "Pulp Fiction."

Jennifer said she was impressed with all of her vendors, who worked hard to make the day run smoothly.

Sean works for an environmental consulting firm in Elmhurst. The couple live in Forest Park.

RLX top Acura for technology

BY JOHN STEIN
For Sun-Times Media

As Acura's flagship sedan, the all-new 2014 RLX, which replaces the RL, is the most technologically advanced and most spacious in the luxury brand's stable.

Powered by an all-new 310-horsepower direct-injected V-6 engine, the new RLX is the most powerful Acura sedan and it easily maintains equality with the middle-ground luxury competition in the class.

The RLX is available in five trim levels. Starting at $48,450 for the Base, Navi ($50,950); Tech ($54,450); Krell ($56,950); and the Advance ($60,450), there is a level of equipment for a wide range of budgets. According to Acura, there also is an RLX Sport Hybrid scheduled for release next year.

Visually, the all-new Acura RLX blends a flowing cabin silhouette with close tolerances for the wheel wells and body-panel gaps for heightened elegance and aerodynamics. For me, the real signature style begins with a prolific front-end featuring the RLX's signature Jewel Eye LED headlights and the big swooping grille impact that imparts a look of athleticism with elegance.

My tester was the top-of-the-line RLX Advance, which featured a stunning metallic black exterior finish. I immediately noticed the lines that ride high along the hood and sweep over the front wheel arches, along the sides, to the rear of the lithe RLX. Alloy rims provide a great look, planting the RLX to the pavement.

Inside the quiet cabin is a vast array of standard advanced technology and convenience features, as well as a longer list of options for higher-level RLX models.

The inside of the RLX Advance model was spacious, plush and refined. Seating in the front is wide and spacious with ample head and legroom; rear seating offers comparable space for three adults.

Dash design is refined and gauges are easy to read, while centerstack controls are intuitive and easily handled.

Acura signature technologies include Precision All-Wheel Steer, Jewel Eye LED headlights, and the next generation of the AcuraLink connected car system.

Power for RLX models is provided by a transversely mounted 3.5-liter, 24-valve, i-VTEC V-6 engine with Direct Injection, Earth Dreams Technology, Variable Cylinder Management and drive-by-wire throttle.

The RLX powerplant develops 310 horsepower at 6,500 rpm along with 272 lb.-ft. of torque at 4,500 rpm coupled to a six-speed automatic transmission with Sequential SportShift paddle shifters.

I found the RLX Advance to provide spirited acceleration, precise handling characteristics and a comfortable ride quality that provided comfort for short and long-term trips.

Wolf Ridge offers 'immediate' homes, discount

Buyers seeking an immediate-occupancy residence can lock in 5 percent down payment financing and receive two free parking spaces at Wolf Ridge Condominiums, a unique city-owned new-construction 60-unit residential development in downtown Northlake.

"For a limited time, the developer — the City of Northlake — is offering to give the buyers both a heated indoor parking space and an outdoor parking space," said Paul Dincin, partner in Catapult Real Estate Group, the exclusive marketing agent for Wolf Ridge Condominiums, 77 N. Wolf Road, just north of North Avenue (Route 64).

The heated indoor parking is valued at $7,500, and the outdoor spaced is worth $2,000, Dincin said.

"Our unique seller-financing program is offering 30-year fixed-rate conventional financing for the next five qualified buyers with a low 5-percent down payment," said Jeffrey T. Sherwin, mayor of Northlake.

"A Designer-Upgrades Package featuring granite countertops and a two-sided breakfast bar also is available at Wolf Ridge," said Terrie Whittaker, director of brokerage services for Catapult Realty, LLC. The upgrades package is available for $4,500.

Today, buyers who act quickly also can take advantage of recently reduced prices on move-in-now homes at the community, Whittaker said.

The Phase II sales at Wolf Ridge Condominium currently are underway. Twelve immediate-occupancy luxury condominiums have been released for sale, Whittaker said. Thirty units already are sold and occupied in Phase I of the development, and sales have reached the 60-percent mark.

"These spacious homes were designed to provide a high quality of life for their owners," said Whittaker.

Each condo features a private balcony with park or city view, a great room and open kitchen, in-unit laundry room, indoor heated garage plus additional private outdoor parking.

Two-bedroom residences with one or two baths and 1,180 to 1,463 square feet of living area are offered at prices ranging from $135,900 to $182,900. Monthly assessments range from $249 to $280.

New furnished models showcasing designer upgrades soon will open for viewing at Wolf Ridge.

Here are details on some of the immediate-occupancy homes:

■ Residence 201, the two-bedroom, two-bath Addison plan, which features 1,180 square feet of living space and includes both indoor heated parking as well as an outdoor spot. It is priced at $135,900.

■ Residence 312, the two-bedroom, two-bath Belmont plan, which showcases 1,240 square feet of living space and features wood laminate floors in the living areas. The home has upgraded ceramic tile in both baths and a jetted Jacuzzi soaker tub in the master bath. It is priced at $156,900.

■ Residence 310, the two-bedroom, two-bath Palmer plan, which showcases 1,493 square feet of living space and features a southwest corner view. It is priced at $178,900.

■ Residence 611, the two-bedroom, two-bath Lake plan, which features 1,344 square feet of living space and a west view. This top-floor penthouse unit showcases extra ceiling height as well as additional transom windows. The home also has the granite kitchen counters and island and new carpeting.

It is priced at $182,900.

"The City of Northlake developed Wolf Ridge to provide new market-rate housing in the suburb, and this unique community offers homes with developer stability and a warranty of quality," said Dincin. "Buyers will have the security of knowing the City of Northlake is there to stand behind and warrant the quality of this building."

"We are experiencing strong traffic and sales momentum at Wolf Ridge Condominiums," Whittaker said. "The development is attracting many buyers who work, rent an apartment or own a home in Northlake or the nearby suburbs of Melrose Park, Franklin Park, Elmhurst and Bensenville," said Whittaker.

The Wolf Ridge Condominiums sales center and models at 77 N. Wolf Road in Northlake are open Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m., and by appointment on Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Sunday. For more information, call Terrie Whittaker at (708) 492-1010, or visit www.wolfridgecondos.com.

Easy-to-update items make your new home yours

This year more than 5.4 million homes were sold by the end of August, according to the National Association of Realtors.

If you are included, you've most likely felt the urge to settle in immediately. However, before making any major renovations, it's a good idea to live in a new home a while to see how the space is meeting your needs. Here are a few swift swaps that will have a big impact in making that new house feel like home sweet home.

■ Personalized paint: It may be the most obvious update but painting is an easy solution to change the look of a room in an instant. Whether you paint an entire room, create a bold accent wall or incorporate glossy white trim, paint is an affordable fix for any home. You can easily and quickly bring your design ideas to life with tape to outline your designs.

■ Fabulous frames: When moving into a new space, the things you love should take center stage. Once your home reflects who you are, the rest will slowly fall into place. Photo frames are the ideal choice to add a decorative and personalized touch to any room. Bring this common decor pick into the modern age by creating a personal gallery and displaying frames of varying shapes and sizes. To do this, plan the layout of the frames before hanging, either with paper on the wall or by arranging them on the floor. Or, you can simply purchase pre-arranged frame galleries at home decor retailers.

■ Faucet focus: New homeowners strapped for cash may not have the budget for a full-scale bathroom remodel, so they can try a swap: replace its hardest-working fixture, the faucet. There different styles, designs, finishes, even colors available.

■ Energy-saving essentials: When you go from renter to owner, it's important to fix energy-draining areas before bills pile up. Caulking around windows and spaces between the floor, and baseboards in attics and sun rooms will help prevent drafts. Additionally, service your furnace so it produces more heat while using less energy.

■ Let there be light: Lighting is a great way to add warmth to a sparse space. If you're looking to create an intimate atmosphere, place several table lamps throughout the room. You can also amp up energy savings by switching to LED bulbs; they don't cause heat buildup and last up to 10 times as long as compact fluorescents and 20 times longer than incandescent bulbs.

Employee Engagement and Creativeship: Lessons for Evolving Leaders

By: Bob Kelleher, author of Creativeship - A Novel for Evolving Leaders (BLKB Publishing, Sept 2012)

I've often defined leadership, which originally morphed from management, as the ability to lead people, build fellowship, and make money. But I've realized that this archaic definition is so yesterday!

While employee engagement remains the secret sauce that separates you from your competition, engaged employees alone will not guarantee business success.

Just look at iconic companies such as Digital Equipment Corporation, Polaroid, and Arthur D. Little. They were led by extraordinary leaders and had strong employee satisfaction and engagement, yet they went bankrupt.

Why? Because employee engagement, profit, growth, client satisfaction and even solid leadership by themselves are not sustainable.

Today, leadership is about Creativeship, defined as the creation of sustainable cultures and business models.

Creativeship will allow a business to compete and thrive in this world of unprecedented technological advances, globalization, shifting economic drivers, government intervention, changing workforce demographics, vastly different motivational drivers with Gen X, and the emergence of corporate social responsibility as a motivational driver.

Last year, I had the pleasure of leading a Monster webinar, Creativeship: The Evolution from Management to Leadership to Creativeship. The overwhelming response told me that both the Creativeship theme and the messenger were resonating with a wide range of people.

The themes of job creation AND organizational greed are hot topics with people across the board -- and these themes are woven throughout Creativeship.

The Six Pillars of Creativeship

Sustainability requires that firms shift their leadership model to Creativeship and invest their energies and resources in six prominent and interconnected business priorities: Purpose, Engagement, Performance, Innovation, Branding, and Growth.

Purpose. Generation Y is motivated by purpose as they become a substantial part of the workforce. A parallel trend is the increasing role Baby Boomers are playing in leading corporate social responsibility activities. After years of focusing on wealth accumulation and career advancement, boomers are now shifting their priorities.

Engagement. I define employee engagement as the unlocking of employee potential to drive high performance. To help employees reach their potential, leaders must tap into the intrinsic motivational drivers of their employees and develop a job match that finds symbiosis between what an employee is great at, what they love to do, and what needs to get done.

Performance. Fair and equal are not always one in the same. Recently, a major Internet company announced plans to reward all of their employees (regardless of merit) with a 10 percent pay increase just because the company was doing well.

Over time, such a decision erodes employee performance and creates disengagement. There is no incentive for employees to be high performers when mediocrity is rewarded in kind.

Innovation. It seems axiomatic: companies fail when they cease evolving their product or service, or internal processes. And yet many organizations are slow to learn this lesson, leading their organizations for today rather than creating cultures of innovation and sustainability.

Creating this sort of company culture requires investing today's cash to discover tomorrow's technologies, products, services, geographies, and approaches. The mantra "innovate or die" has never been more prescient.

Tri-branding. Creativeship is all about leveraging your employment brand to position oneself as an employer of choice.

Building sustainable cultures and business models with the valences that are now so much a part of everyday life requires tri-branding. This occurs when companies build tenacious customer brand loyalty and passion that customers and employees then feel compelled to communicate.

In his book, The Tipping Point, Malcolm Gladwell discusses connectors, defined as sociable personalities who bring people together.

Given social media's role as a brand accelerator, connectors -- also a key point of Creativeship's tri-branding message -- have never been more relevant than today.

Global growth. Technology is creating a level playing field regardless of where a product is produced or a service is performed. And with younger employees increasingly motivated more by career development opportunities than financial rewards, an organization will seem hopelessly retrograde if it does not find its footing in the greater realm.

Having spoken to audiences worldwide since the Monster Webinar, Creativeship's theme of global growth continues to be a driver for markets and talent.

Today's Millennials WANT to work for global companies, given their experience in studying abroad and their "flat" worldview.

To be truly sustainable, companies that are local need to think regional; companies that are regional need to think national; companies that are national need to think global.

The interdependence of these individual pillars is what defines Creativeship.

To build a sustainable corporate culture, you've got to ask, "What's next?" You also need to wonder, "Why?" and "Why not?"

And you can never take "because" as an answer.

Employee Engagement and Creativeship: Lessons for Evolving Leaders

By: Bob Kelleher, author of Creativeship - A Novel for Evolving Leaders (BLKB Publishing, Sept 2012)

I've often defined leadership, which originally morphed from management, as the ability to lead people, build fellowship, and make money. But I've realized that this archaic definition is so yesterday!

While employee engagement remains the secret sauce that separates you from your competition, engaged employees alone will not guarantee business success.

Just look at iconic companies such as Digital Equipment Corporation, Polaroid, and Arthur D. Little. They were led by extraordinary leaders and had strong employee satisfaction and engagement, yet they went bankrupt.

Why? Because employee engagement, profit, growth, client satisfaction and even solid leadership by themselves are not sustainable.

Today, leadership is about Creativeship, defined as the creation of sustainable cultures and business models.

Creativeship will allow a business to compete and thrive in this world of unprecedented technological advances, globalization, shifting economic drivers, government intervention, changing workforce demographics, vastly different motivational drivers with Gen X, and the emergence of corporate social responsibility as a motivational driver.

Last year, I had the pleasure of leading a Monster webinar, Creativeship: The Evolution from Management to Leadership to Creativeship. The overwhelming response told me that both the Creativeship theme and the messenger were resonating with a wide range of people.

The themes of job creation AND organizational greed are hot topics with people across the board -- and these themes are woven throughout Creativeship.

The Six Pillars of Creativeship

Sustainability requires that firms shift their leadership model to Creativeship and invest their energies and resources in six prominent and interconnected business priorities: Purpose, Engagement, Performance, Innovation, Branding, and Growth.

Purpose. Generation Y is motivated by purpose as they become a substantial part of the workforce. A parallel trend is the increasing role Baby Boomers are playing in leading corporate social responsibility activities. After years of focusing on wealth accumulation and career advancement, boomers are now shifting their priorities.

Engagement. I define employee engagement as the unlocking of employee potential to drive high performance. To help employees reach their potential, leaders must tap into the intrinsic motivational drivers of their employees and develop a job match that finds symbiosis between what an employee is great at, what they love to do, and what needs to get done.

Performance. Fair and equal are not always one in the same. Recently, a major Internet company announced plans to reward all of their employees (regardless of merit) with a 10 percent pay increase just because the company was doing well.

Over time, such a decision erodes employee performance and creates disengagement. There is no incentive for employees to be high performers when mediocrity is rewarded in kind.

Innovation. It seems axiomatic: companies fail when they cease evolving their product or service, or internal processes. And yet many organizations are slow to learn this lesson, leading their organizations for today rather than creating cultures of innovation and sustainability.

Creating this sort of company culture requires investing today's cash to discover tomorrow's technologies, products, services, geographies, and approaches. The mantra "innovate or die" has never been more prescient.

Tri-branding. Creativeship is all about leveraging your employment brand to position oneself as an employer of choice.

Building sustainable cultures and business models with the valences that are now so much a part of everyday life requires tri-branding. This occurs when companies build tenacious customer brand loyalty and passion that customers and employees then feel compelled to communicate.

In his book, The Tipping Point, Malcolm Gladwell discusses connectors, defined as sociable personalities who bring people together.

Given social media's role as a brand accelerator, connectors -- also a key point of Creativeship's tri-branding message -- have never been more relevant than today.

Global growth. Technology is creating a level playing field regardless of where a product is produced or a service is performed. And with younger employees increasingly motivated more by career development opportunities than financial rewards, an organization will seem hopelessly retrograde if it does not find its footing in the greater realm.

Having spoken to audiences worldwide since the Monster Webinar, Creativeship's theme of global growth continues to be a driver for markets and talent.

Today's Millennials WANT to work for global companies, given their experience in studying abroad and their "flat" worldview.

To be truly sustainable, companies that are local need to think regional; companies that are regional need to think national; companies that are national need to think global.

The interdependence of these individual pillars is what defines Creativeship.

To build a sustainable corporate culture, you've got to ask, "What's next?" You also need to wonder, "Why?" and "Why not?"

And you can never take "because" as an answer.

If you and the petitioner have minor children, documents setting forth the percentage standard for child support established by the department under Section 49.22(9), Wis. Stats., and the factors that a court may consider for modification of that standard under Section 767.511(1m), Wis. Stats., are available upon your request from the Clerk of Court.

It's time to join the navy ... and the aqua, cerulean, midnight and sapphire. Though blue never goes out of style, this season there's a whole new way to rock the look: Match it with black. Conventional wisdom has taught us that navy and black shouldn't cohabitate, but designers like Andrew Gn and Marni are tossing that rule aside, pairing blue dresses with black tights, clutches, furs and wraps. Keep things cool by accentuating the look with dark jewel tones on lips and nails, or warm up your ensemble with soft pinks and nudes. The key to nailing the look is simplicity, so choose your statement piece (whether it's the dress, jacket, necklace or bag) and let it run the show. Follow these rules, and you'll never feel the fashion blues.

NATIONAL MS SOCIETY ANNUAL DINNER

CHAMPIONING THE CAUSE

Madison Dearborn Partners, LLC Chairman John Canning Jr. stepped into the spotlight at the 34th annual National Multiple Sclerosis Society, Greater Illinois Chapter's Dinner of Champions Oct. 3. Surrounded by 350 supporters at the Four Seasons Chicago (120 E. Delaware), Canning was honored for his work over the past decade with the organization. Afterward, guests enjoyed dinner and a performance from Chicago native Jim Belushi and his band, The Sacred Hearts. The evening raised more than $650,000 to support research, programs and services for the 20,000 individuals affected by MS throughout Illinois.

The Sun-Times was the media sponsor of this event.

Vibe: An eye-catching mural and equally vivid, modern bar set the tone: This restaurant, though serious about food, is all about fun. Grab a cocktail at a high-top table, or cozy into a booth for dinner. Servers are well-educated about the food and culture and happy to impart their knowledge in an unpretentious way.

PERUVIAN PLATES

Gastón Acurio brings his world-renowned fare to Chicago with Tanta BY SAMANTHA LANDE

Must-try dish: The pulpo anti-cucho ($14), a traditional Peruvian street-food skewer, is made of tender octopus that's massaged, marinated in olive oil and garlic, and slow-cooked for two hours. It's served over potatoes decorated with fried garlic chips and drizzled with a creamy purple olive sauce.

When chef and restaurateur Gastón Acurio decides to open a restaurant in Chicago, people pay attention. And for good reason: Acurio is behind more than 30 restaurants worldwide, and his Astrid y Gastón in Lima, Peru, was recognized as the 14th best restaurant in the world and the No. 1 restaurant in Latin America, according to the prestigious World's 50 Best Restaurants list. Tanta, his first foray into the Chicago dining scene, is carving out a reputation of its own; it's a hip, fun restaurant rife with traditional Peruvian fare. "Peruvian food is influenced by many cultures — Chinese, Japanese, African — all showcased in our dishes," says chef de cuisine Jesus Delgado.

The menu runs the gamut from smaller shared plates to street-food skewers to larger entrees. The vibrant ceviches are a highlight: There's the acidic clásico with fluke, red onion and cilantro ($12), and the sweeter, Japanese-inspired nikei with ahi tuna, avocado, cucumber and tamarind ($12).

The pescado frito ($43), one of the larger entrees, tops a beautifully plated fried striped bass with baby bok choy, nikei sauce and chaufa rice. Here's what else you'll find at Tanta:

Chef stats: Delgado, a native of Peru, has worked for Acurio for a good part of his career, most recently at La Mar Cebicheria Peruana in San Francisco. Prior to that, he worked throughout Peru in various Chinese and Japanese restaurants.

Top: Lima Llama, $11
Bottom: The colorful decor at Tanta

National spirit: Pisco, an immensely popular spirit in Peru, is spotlighted on the cocktail menu. "It's fun, and the result is a very fresh, vibrant high-acidity drink," says beverage director Tomy Lokvicic. The Lima Llama ($11), Tanta's version of the Moscow Mule, mixes Pisco with lime and ginger beer in a copper mug, while the Pisco Punch combines the spirit with pineapple gomme syrup and lemon ($11).

Bundle up: As temperatures begin to drop, Delgado will introduce his winter menu. "I'm planning more soups, heartier dishes," he says. While we can safely expect Peruvian flavors and an abundance of local ingredients, Delgado himself has no idea what's in store weatherwise. "Honestly, I don't know what to expect from a Chicago winter," he laughs. "I have no idea what's coming."

Ace of Spade

Deborah Lloyd, president and chief creative officer of Kate Spade New York, designs a colorful day in Chicago BY ZAK STEINER

Deborah Lloyd is a woman in love. She's in love with color, she's in love with leopard print and — most importantly — she's in love with the brand she oversees as president and chief creative officer: Kate Spade New York. But it's not just her — according to Lloyd, Chicago women share her passions. “Our Chicago woman loves pops of color, she loves standing out in the crowd,” she says. “We really think about Chicago when we're designing.”

Because of the brand's allegiance to the city, Lloyd had no qualms about opening a second Kate Spade New York location in the 900 Shops (900 N. Michigan) this month, focusing primarily on a wide array of accessories, like handbags, shoes and jewelry. “We started off as a handbag brand, and now we've introduced so many new categories,” she says. “We're going beyond what [our customer] is wearing and making forays into her home and life.”

Lloyd has overseen all aspects and designs of the fashion house since 2007, when founder and brand namesake Kate Spade left the line. A soft-spoken Brit with an elegant accent, Lloyd had more than proven her mettle in the fashion industry, previously holding high-profile positions at Banana Republic and Burberry (she was the woman who put Kate Moss in a barely there plaid bikini, generating instant press for the latter).

For her latest collection, the launch of which falls on the brand's 20th anniversary, Lloyd is channeling the vivaciousness that the Kate Spade New York girl embodies. “The whole idea of this collection was dancing on tables,” she says. “I was inspired by Studio 54. I never got to go, and that's my biggest regret. I just love the idea of celebration.” The influence of Studio 54's wild glamour is obvious in some of Lloyd's favorite pieces this season, especially the leopard-print jeans, which match the leopard-print banquettes that once lined the infamous hot spot.

Lloyd is as practical as she is playful — she's quick to dole out suggestions for those set to brave the winter. “Chicago women love our coats,” she says. “They're sort of uplifting and whimsical, and you can wear them for years. The color gives them flair, or if you like black, you can add the pop of color with a bag.”

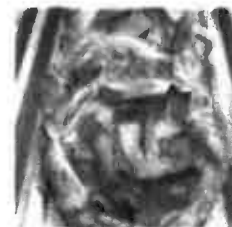

Lloyd credits her visits to the city for helping her understand what makes Chicago stylish. “I love coming to Chicago and having such a great time — any excuse to come,” she says. Luckily, she doesn't have to wait long: Lloyd will be visiting town this week.

Here, the style sage plans out her Sunday of celebration in Chicago.

9 A.M.

Lloyd wakes up at The James Hotel (55 E. Ontario), her favorite spot to stay in the city.

10 A.M.

The designer heads north to Floriole Cafe & Bakery (1220 W. Webster) to satisfy her morning sweet tooth.

NOON

A trip to Jayson Home (1885 N. Clybourn) is a must for Lloyd. She especially loves searching the Flea Market section for unique finds.

2 P.M.

Lloyd stops for a quick lunch at sustainable eatery Lula Café (2537 N. Kedzie).

4 P.M.

Even with an entire fashion brand at her fingertips, Lloyd makes sure to check out local style haven Ikram (15 E. Huron).

8 P.M.

After dinner at Bavette's Bar & Boeuf (218 W. Kinzie), Lloyd takes in some jazz at the Zebra Lounge (left, 1220 N. State).

GO CRAZY, HABIT HER ABOUT

SARAH MICHELLE GELLAR roundhouse-kicked her way to pop icon status as the lovely-but-lethal Buffy the Vampire Slayer. But that was more than 15 years ago. Since then, the actress has been busy: She's starred in films like "The Grudge," lent her voice to Seth Green's stopmotion show "Robot Chicken," married '90s (and current) heartthrob Freddie Prinze Jr., and given birth to two children, Charlotte Grace (4) and Rocky (1). While some celebs might take a minute to breathe — or even decide to call it quits and rest on their laurels — Gellar, 36, is back in the television saddle, starting alongside comedy legend Robin Williams in this fall's No. 1 new show, "The Crazy Ones," which drew more than 15 million viewers for its Sept. 26 pilot episode.

Set in Chicago, the show stars Williams and Gellar as Simon and Sydney Roberts, a father-daughter team running a major ad firm. For Gellar, stepping into her role as Sydney, the pragmatic counterpart to Williams' creative chaos, involved taking in a lot of television. "Watching commercials and thinking about the most memorable ones, that was my research," Gellar says. "[Wendy's] 'Where's the beef' is the commercial that really stuck with me."

"The Crazy Ones" is a horse of a different color for Gellar, which she readily admits. "The bond we formed [as a cast] is really different," she says. "We say that we're like a mini theater troupe." While a sitcom is uncharted territory, Gellar is proving that comedy is right in her wheelhouse. "Part of what made 'Buffy' so great was its comedy. And I've always been lucky to keep my feet wet, whether it was with 'Saturday Night Live' or [other projects]."

Not that Gellar needs to prove her mettle or Hollywood worth. In her 33-year career (she started modeling at age 4), she's earned a Daytime Emmy for her long-running role on "All My Children," and "Buffy" was named one of Entertainment Weekly's 10 greatest TV shows of all time. Even on the big screen, Gellar is certified gold. Her horror flick "The Grudge" earned more than $110 million at the U.S. box office, making it the No. 8 domestic grossing horror film ever. Though her career might have cooled while she grew her picture-perfect family with Prinze (whom she met on the set of the cult classic "I Know What You Did Last Summer"), it's never really lost momentum.

Now, she's moving faster than ever. In just the first three episodes of "The Crazy Ones," Gellar has belted out an off-key song in a crowded restaurant in front of Kelly Clarkson, flooded Daley Plaza, and crashed a car alongside Williams. Between takes, she's equally playful with the cast. "When we were shooting the pilot, all the lights went down on the set; it was complete darkness," remembers John Montgomery, the show's executive producer and former executive creative director of Leo Burnett ad agency (see sidebar). "The lights came up and Sarah was lying on the floor like she'd been murdered, like she was a character in 'Clue.' She's always looking for opportunities to keep things fun and light."

Montgomery is just as quick to sing Gellar's praises onscreen. "Sarah is able to mine different human foibles, like insecurity. She finds the truth in the scene and makes it funny," he says. "I think we've tapped into something that she hasn't been able to put on display before, but must have been there all the time."

Clockwise from top: Sarah Michelle Gellar and Robin Williams in "The Crazy Ones"; Gellar, husband Freddie Prinze Jr. and their daughter Charlotte, meet Rapunzel at Disneyland in Anaheim, Calif.; Gellar with David Boreanaz in "Buffy."

Though the show is filmed almost exclusively in LA, it's set in Chicago, a city that Gellar is a big fan of — despite having a rough experience on her last visit. "I was going to dinner three blocks from my hotel and [the doorman] was like, 'Do you want us to get you a cab?' It was three blocks! I was like, 'I'm from New York, I'm fine,'" she says. "It was the longest, coldest three blocks I've ever walked in my life. I had to stop halfway and take a break. I took a cab on the way home."

When Gellar isn't filming, she's juggling life as a wife and mother. She's been married to Prinze for 11 years, and the pair appears happy as ever, recently moving into a sprawling new house to accommodate their growing clan. Gellar makes it a point to carve out family time, taking Charlotte to school every day and to ballet class. Yet the actress stays mum on how she spends her days off, doing her best to retain a normal life. "I think any working parent will tell you it's about having help," she says. "I'm lucky to have great friends and family around, whether it's my husband or my mother. It's a challenge, but you set an example for your kids by showing them what hard work looks like." Charlotte and Rocky see their mom in action when Prinze brings them by the set. "Sarah is just a great, warmhearted person. [She creates] a nice family atmosphere [on set]," Montgomery says.

Even with the stress of being back in the public eye and starring in a top-rated show, Gellar is keeping her cool, knowing she doesn't need to prove herself. "It takes the pressure off," Gellar says of "Buffy's" success. "Buffy" was so incredible and you can't recreate that. Now everything is gravy. I'm having the time of my life and I'm one of the few people who wake up every morning and go to a job they love. I'm just so happy and so lucky."

Though the ad firm on the show is called Roberts & Roberts, it's based on Chicago agency Leo Burnett and the experiences of former Executive Creative Director and Executive Vice President John Montgomery (above), now the series's executive producer. Here's a glimpse at the oft-crazy world of advertising:

Award-Winning Props

In the pilot (above), as Williams and Gellar are about to be fired by McDonald's (actually a client of Leo Burnett), Williams goes into his office, holds up a Clio Award and asks, "How much do you think a Clio goes for on eBay?" That Clio was one of many earned by Montgomery that now decorate the set.

The Spectacular Failure

In episode two, Gellar plans a "spectacular," an advertising event designed to get press, with a giant coffee pot. What she doesn't plan for is Chicago's wind — and she proceeds to flood Daley Plaza (above). That actually happened to Montgomery. "We had a spectacular in New York that had a coffee-related disaster. We had forgotten to factor for wind when we floated a coffee pot above a billboard."

Is That On?

On an upcoming episode, the ad gang has a major 'oops' moment when they're on the phone with a client: They think the mute button is on and spill their real thoughts. The client hears it all. "We've all been on conference calls when we thought the mute button was on and it was, in fact, off," Montgomery admits.

How to deal with an intrusive mother-in-law

Dear Jenny,
My husband and I live close to our families and see them regularly. Recently, I had a baby and my mother-in-law has been very pushy and controlling since he arrived. He is our first child and she's making me feel like I have no idea what I'm doing. I understand she has experience, but it's getting intrusive. How can I get her to back off?

— Sara from KY

Jenny says: I'm sure a lot of new mothers can relate to this question! It's hard dealing with a pushy mother-in-law anyway, but it's especially hard dealing with one when you have a newborn. While you and your husband are adjusting to parenthood, even under ideal circumstances, this transitional period can take its toll. Even the tiniest bit of criticism can feel like the first act of war when you're sleep-deprived and figuring out how to handle a baby. Remember, most mothers-in-law have good intentions, even though their advice may be unwanted and seem like a big intrusion.

I've learned over the years that well-meaning relatives and friends may feel compelled to share their experiences and bits of wisdom. They do this to make sure you are doing things the "right" way — meaning, their way. For the sake of the family and peace of mind, there may be some comments or behaviors you will have to let go. You have to pick your battles. Let the small things slide to alleviate tension; however, do not feel obligated to bite your tongue when it comes to more serious matters. You deserve respect, and there will be times when you have to assert yourself and enforce boundaries as needed.

When that time comes, communicate honestly with your mother-in-law. It is better to set clear expectations than to grow resentful toward her. You may not always be able to change her behavior, but hopefully with patience, understanding and love you will both be able to work together to establish a healthy relationship for everyone involved. Good luck!

IN WITH THE OLD

For the right owner, two historic houses are worth the extra work BY MADELINE NUSSER

Old-house lovers crave the chance to purchase a vintage home and fix it up. Imagine: buying a rundown residence, giving it a little love and suddenly, it's worth twice the price you originally paid. Sounds good, right? Well, it's not quite that easy — but renovation can be very rewarding. As two history-laden fixer-uppers hit the market this month, we ask brokers what it takes to turn an old house — with many original details intact — into a hot property.

GOLD COAST DREAM HOUSE

Legendary Chicago engineer Dankmar Adler built at 55 W. Schiller in 1868, even before the term "Gold Coast" was coined. "There was nothing across the street," says @properties broker Kim Kerbis (call 773-305-0585) of the land just north of the property. Many years later, the three-bedroom row house remains nearly untouched, with its original façade, plaster ceiling medallions, walnut banister and brass hardware. Kerbis' mother — distinguished architect Gertrude Lempp Kerbis — purchased the home from a longtime owner in 2007, planning to remodel it before she fell ill. "She loved high ceilings, big windows — a diamond in the rough," says the younger Kerbis, who saved the architect's plans to expand up a floor and back into the tree-lined yard. The asking price is $985,000, and Kerbis estimates the renovation cost could be halved to around $250,000 if the buyer doesn't seek zoning permits for expansion. The city designated the property "orange," a potential landmark. The upshot: Landmark status can provide tax incentives and other perks for a rehabilitation.

BROOKFIELD'S PRAIRIE GEM

With its horizontal bands and overhanging eaves, this charming 1911 three-bedroom in Brookfield epitomizes Prairie School design. Before listing 3601 Forest, Charles Rutenberg Realty broker Katrina Pekovic-Dobrovoly (call 847-502-4150) did some research, digging up blueprints drawn by architect William Drummond, who served as chief draftsman for Frank Lloyd Wright. She discovered the house boasts an original Roman brick fireplace and tessellated windows. A charming second-floor "projection room" with built-in cabinetry (the home originally housed a private kindergarden) also remains intact. Architecture aficionados will want to remove the carpet covering terrazzo flooring and eliminate walls dividing up the airy space. The house, at $399,000, is not protected by landmark status — which Pekovic-Dobrovoly describes as "bad news, good news." A new owner might tear it down or, on the bright side, have a little more leeway when renovating it. "It needs someone who's going to appreciate it, fix it up and stay in it," Pekovic-Dobrovoly says.

Stephanie Izard & Gary Valentine

BY KATERINA BIZIOS

Celebrity chef Stephanie Izard's and craft-beer consultant Gary Valentine's worlds first collided in the summer of 2010. Izard — the executive chef and owner of West Loop hot spots Girl & the Goat and Little Goat — stopped into Lillie's Q in pursuit of good barbecue, where Valentine happened to be consulting. The two immediately hit it off as friends, and a year later, began dating. In 2012, Valentine popped the question in true Chicago fashion: He got down on one knee next to Buckingham Fountain. The two tied the knot Oct. 6 in front of 200 friends and family members at the Bridgeport Art Center (1200 W. 35th). Izard and Valentine's close pal Lincoln Anderson officiated the ceremony, and the couple danced down the aisle to music from James Johnston and his band, Bumpus. Guests then headed to a food-filled reception, where beloved local chefs and good friends Giuseppe Tentori, Chris Pandel and Bill Kim crafted a mouthwatering menu that included pasta cavatelli, smoked eggplant and heirloom tomatoes and red wine-braised beef short ribs. The drinks were just as delicious: Haymarket specially brewed a batch of My Sweetie's Melons beer and poured it into personalized tulip glasses, while the pair's friends from Solemn Oath, Three Floyds and New Belgium breweries served their own concoctions. Mathew Rice created a custom cake that incorporated Cheez-Its — one of Izard's favorite foods — and topped it with a bobblehead of the couple. Beyond the tasty treats, Izard's most memorable moment was her first dance with Valentine. "[It was] choreographed by Amy 'Sauce' Probasco from Girl & the Goat," she says. "We did a variety of moves to about eight songs. Definitely a highlight."

CHEERS!

• Congrats to Embeya partner Attila Gyulai and executive chef/partner Thai Dan (above), whose restaurant was named one of Esquire magazine's Best New Restaurants earlier this month.

• Hats off to Sophisticate's Hair-style Guide Editor-in-Chief Bonnie L. Krueger-Spurlock and her staff. The Chicago-based publication celebrates its 35th year as the best-selling national hair/beauty magazine in the consumer field.

Mertzluft combined the three businesses to create HMR Designs (1200 N. Branch), which provides floral, lighting, fabric, furniture, décor, arts and graphics and fabrication services.

• Cheers to Jack and Judy Glunz, Beer, Inc. President Jack Glunz and his family, who celebrate 125 years of business this fall, and rank as Chicago-land's largest craft and specialty import distributors.

Walk this way

The Museum of Contemporary Photography examines how we move through the world BY THOMAS CONNORS

Walking, one could argue, hasn't been the same since the invention of the wheel — but it's also changed since the rise of the smartphone. With our heads perpetually cocked at a 45-degree angle, our eyes glued to the screen, our thoughts anywhere but where we are, the world often passes us by.

To discover what you've been missing, visit "Of Walking," an exhibition at the Museum of Contemporary Photography featuring eight contemporary artists whose works involve putting one foot in front of the other. Though you may never have strolled the streets or landscapes referenced in these works — which stretch far beyond simple travelogues — the ways in which these artists ponder the world, and the way they walk through it, brings to mind naturalist John Muir's remark that "going out, I found, was really going in." For some of the artists, "corporeal movement is key to their process, even though, interestingly, it is not directly depicted," says curator Karen Irvine.

Simryn Gill catalogs her neighborhood outside Sydney, snapping gutters, trees, cars and people. British artist Hamish Fulton has been ambulating since 1973, when he completed a 1,022-mile trek. Sohei Nishino walks around a chosen city shooting as he goes, then arranges the myriad images in a composite view in which the various angles and perspectives result in a swirling, almost expressionist rendering of the place. Paulien Oltheten, who captures people re-enacting the gestures of other people, and Jim Campbell, who reduces bodies in motion to pixels of light, are "interested in how the body moves through space when unobserved," Irvine says. Overall, she suggests, the works displayed in the show "link more to mapping, and trying to create a sense of duration/experience through still, individual images, mostly."

"Of Walking," which runs through Dec. 20, includes a companion piece — a talk by Andrew Forsthofel on Nov. 13. Three years ago, Forsthofel, then 23, set out from his home in Pennsylvania and walked 4,000 miles to the Pacific Coast, wearing a sign on his back that read, "walking to listen." Along the way he recorded interviews with a range of people, conversations that form their own multifaceted snapshot of life, an audio map generated the old-fashioned way: step-by-step.

Alexandra Mikhaylova & Nencho Spasov

Alexandra, who was born in Kiev, Ukraine, and Nencho, a Plovdiv, Bulgaria native, met in Michigan through friends. Alexandra grew up in the Metro Detroit area, and Nencho lived in Grand Rapids, Mich. Because the couple had friends and family flying in from all over the world, they chose to wed in the Chicago area. They married Aug. 17 in a traditional Orthodox ceremony at St. Sophia Bulgarian Orthodox Church in Des Plaines with the reception at Avalon Banquets in Elk Grove Village. They plan to move to Los Angeles by the end of the year.

Tips for planning the perfect destination wedding

By Matthew Villanueva

While some couples still choose a very standard, traditional wedding at a venue close to home, destination weddings are steadily gaining in popularity. A destination wedding can be a good diplomatic choice if the bride's and groom's families live far away from one another, and it can also be attractive to friends and family members who want to combine wedding travel with a vacation. To plan a flawless destination wedding, you should:

Select an attractive setting

Your friends and family will be more willing to pay their own expenses to attend your destination wedding if you choose a warm, inviting, tropical location. The islands of Sanibel and Captiva on Florida's Gulf Coast provide an ideal setting for a destination wedding, with miles of pristine, uncrowded beaches. When you select a warm-weather setting, you also have the option to get married in the off-season, when it's winter elsewhere.

Reserve everything as early as possible

You should make your plans at least a year in advance, not only to secure the venue that you most want for your wedding, but also to ensure that your wedding party and preferred guests have the time they need to save up for the trip. You will also need to fulfill the legal requirements of the county where you are getting married, taking all necessary blood tests and obtaining the proper licenses.

Take care of your guests

When a guest RSVPs "yes" to your destination wedding, recognize the financial and time commitment this represents. You should make it clear in your invitation that gifts are optional, and prepare a gift basket as a thank you for each attendee. This can include take-home gifts such as food and wine, and trip essentials such as sunscreen and bug spray.

Exploring the historic lighthouses of Lake Michigan

By Matthew Villanueva

From the Straits of Mackinac in the north to the Indian shore in the South, Lake Michigan is ringed with historic lighthouses that were built to help guide ships navigating the Great Lake's waters to safe harbors. Some of the more remarkable lighthouses in Wisconsin are located at Lake Michigan.

Seul Choix Point

This lighthouse is located on Michigan's Upper Peninsula, in the small town of Gulliver. Built on a hill that was the town's highest point, the lighthouse allowed watchmen to locate and assist ships in need. Construction of the lighthouse was completed in 1849, but the tower was then rebuilt in 1860. Now a historic site owned and operated by the town, you can visit the museum and climb the tower during the day in the high season.

Menominee North Pier

Though it is in disrepair, this lighthouse is still an impressive site. Located on the northern shore of Green Bay near the mouth of the Menominee River on the Wisconsin-Michigan border, the Menominee North Pier offers an impressive view of Green Bay.

Rawley Point

First lit in 1874, the Rawley Point lighthouse in Two Rivers, Wisconsin is still operational today. Over a century later, by 1979, the lighthouse became fully automated and the lighthouse keepers' home was converted into a cottage rented out to the Coast Guard.

Port Washington Harbor

The city's first lighthouse was built on the north side of the harbor in 1849, and replaced in 1860. When the Federal Government provided funds to build two new breakwaters here in the 1930s, a new tower was built out on the pier. The old lighthouse dwelling is currently a museum run by the Port Washington Historical Society, featuring educational exhibits about local history.

'Odd Couple' turns on its feminine charm

BY MYRNA PETLICKI
For Sun-Times Media

Can two divorced women live together without driving each other crazy?

That question is familiar to fans of a certain long-running TV comedy series, as well as the equally funny Neil Simon play. But the sexes are switched in "The Odd Couple—Female Version" at James Downing Theatre, Oct. 26-Nov. 10.

Beth Goldberg of Deerfield plays Olive Madison, the sloppy roommate. Valerie Querns is neat freak Florence Unger.

"I create a mess for her and she cleans up after me, which drives me crazy," said Goldberg, slipping into character. She slipped out again to admit that there's a bit of Olive in her.

"There is a part of me that can be a slob, especially when it comes to putting away laundry," the actor admitted. "But I don't have as many sloppy tendencies as the character I play."

There's more to Olive than just a messy space, though. "Olive is an independent woman who's had to become independent because she's divorced," Goldberg said. Back in character, she added, "I produce a prime time news television show so, in that respect, I handle everything at work and I have to be pretty organized. But at home I'm completely uninterested in anything domestic."

"I'm lonely," she continued in character. "I love companionship. That's why I have my friends come over every week where we can play Trivial Pursuit. I don't like living on my own. That's why I take Florence in."

Querns also connects with her character. "I find myself doing things in rehearsal that I would do at home," she laughingly admitted.

Querns described Florence as "a little anxious and definitely dramatic. She likes the attention from her friends, but doesn't ask for it right away. She is very particular, and somewhat fragile."

Florence and Olive are long-time friends but living together forces them to get to know each other on a different level.

The pair are also friends with four women (played by Pam David, Janice Hurley, Laurel Kaish and Carla Lewandowski) who come for weekly game time. Despite the closeness, Querns noted, "Florence definitely gets on their nerves."

That might have to do with the fact that she cleans whenever she's upset, and it doesn't take much to upset her.

Both roomies could use a little romance. The question is whether they can find it with their neighbors the Costazuela Brothers (actors Charles Wimmer and Steve Zeal).

"We complement each other," Goldberg said of the characters that she and Querns play. "There's a little bit of Olive and a little bit of Florence in all of us. Our intention in the play is to help each other out. Without giving too much away, it doesn't really work."

Lives intersect in 'Port Authority'

BY MYRNA PETLICKI
For Sun-Times Media

Three Irish men, from different generations, are all at turning points in their lives. Although they sit next to each other, and their tales are interwoven, they speak directly to the audience in "Port Authority," Conor McPherson's lyrical play that is having its Midwest premiere at Writers' Theatre.

Rob Fenton plays Kevin, the youngest member of the trio in the show directed by William Brown.

"Kevin is a young 20-year-old who is trying to move out of his house for the first time and excited about the adventure of life but doesn't necessarily know where he's going with his own," Fenton said. "I think he's searching for what makes him fit in and what makes him happy."

John Hoogenakker plays Dermot, a middle aged man.

"Dermot is a guy who has had a lot of let-downs in life," Hoogenakker said. "He seems to be a person who wants to take all of the problems that the world has dealt him and put them on someone else's shoulders."

Dermot is dealing with the fact that he has been hired for an amazing job with a prestigious money management firm. "He is completely unqualified for it," Hoogenakker related. His discomfort leads to shameful — although somewhat amusing — behavior at a corporate party.

The oldest member of the trio, Joe, who lives in a group home, is played by Patrick Clear.

"Joe reminds me a lot of my father's generation," Clear said. "Someone who grew up Irish Catholic pre-Vatican II. He's essentially a conventional man who grew up in the '50s and '60s and worked in business. He sort of saw the world in very black and white terms."

"I was raised this way, too, as an Irish Catholic," the actor revealed. "You felt that God was watching you all the time and judging your actions."

Joe's tale is filled with regret. "To me, it's heartbreaking to think you've reached the very latter part of your life and realize that you didn't ask enough of life," Clear said.

Fenton noted that even though the three characters are basically delivering monologues and not interacting with each other, "We're aware of one another and kind of pick up the common humanity that threads the three of us together and makes our stories interconnected."

"It's a beautiful piece," Hoogenakker added, "and the more we rehearse, the more we learn about it. I'm sure once we add the audience component, it's going to bloom on a lot of other levels as well."

Gaucha grilled meats star at Fogo de Chão

BY LEE A. LITAS
Dining Columnist

You can take the cowboy out of the country but he'll just bring the country right along with him. That's what the Coser brothers and business partners Jorge and Aleixo Ongaratto did when they opened their first Fogo de Chão in Porto Alegre, Brazil, in 1981.

The name literally means fire in the ground, or campfire. The 'churrasco' method of slowly roasting the freshest cuts of meat and eating them immediately, is the traditional heart of the gaucha (rancher/cowboy) diet. Fogo offers prix fixe menus that feature generous carvings of freshly-grilled meats and an extensive salad bar.

Diners dictate how their meat service will go by controlling it with tableside cards they flip from red to green. Fogo's expert servers are trained to spot the small discs and be tableside within seconds.

Offerings include tender filet mignon, Alcatra (top sirloin), Fraldinha (bottom sirloin), Beef Ancho (prime rib eye), and the tender Picanha (prime sirloin). In addition, there are velvety mini lamb chops, succulent pork ribs, chicken and Linguíça, a slow-roasted pork sausage.

The 16 cuts offered are the best parts of the animals, according to Ronaldo Chiesa, assistant general manager.

The staff recommends having small portions to experience the wide variety of meats but, for those who prefer to keep it even lighter, Fogo's salad bar has more than 40 freshly-made items including chilled salads, rustic artisan breads, aromatic cheeses and house-smoked salmon. Portions are the same for both lunch and dinner but prices do vary. Lunch is $26.50; salad bar only, $19.50. Dinner is $46.50; salad bar only $22.50.

Gluten-free and other dietary restriction menus are also available. Let the reservationist know when you call so the staff can be alerted even before you're seated.

"It's a unique experience in that it is customizable by the guest," explained Adam Jurczak, general manager. "If you're looking for that in-and-out quick business lunch, you can do that. If you're looking for a full-on, two-and-a-half-hour culinary experience, you can have that, too."

Picanha, a prime sirloin, is a must-try. Served in choice of doneness, the sizzling and aromatic cut is a fiesta in your mouth.

Fogo's signature papaya cream is the perfect after-dinner treat at Fogo de Chão. | LEE A. LITAS/FOR SUN-TIMES MEDIA

The melt-in-your-mouth mini lamb chops are seasoned with mint leaves that reduce the gaminess; and the Fraldinha, flank or London Broil, is cut from the bottom of the sirloin, seasoned and cooked tender to desired doneness. Roasted bananas, fried polenta and garlic mashed potatoes accompany every meal.

If there's room for dessert, Jurczak suggests Fogo's signature papaya cream, said to contain enzymes that aid digestion.

III FOOD

A light sprinkling of powdered sugar accents a baked American Persimmon Pie made by Paula Haney.

Paula Haney, owner of Hoosier Mama Pie Co. at 1618 1/2 W. Chicago Ave., Chicago. She plans to open a second shop in Evanston around Nov. 1 in conjunction with the Dollop Coffee Co.

Hoosier Mama's Life of Pie

With her new cookbook out, Paula Haney is set to open a second pie shop in Evanston

BY VERONICA HINKE
For Sun-Times Media

Few could turn down a piece of pie made by Paula Haney, aka Hoosier Mama. And in her new cookbook, The Hoosier Mama Book of Pie (Agate Midway, August 2013), Haney, the founder of celebrated Hoosier Mama Pie Company, with a shop in Chicago's Ukrainian Village, serves up plenty of tried-and-true secrets about making what she considers "the most unpretentious food in the world."

"I was afraid this classic American food was being forgotten," she said. "In fact, more and more people I talked to had only eaten pie from the freezer case at the grocery store.

I was afraid we were forgetting what real pie was supposed to taste like."

In reviving the tradition, Haney has injected a few modern techniques. One example is the red wine vinegar she likes to include as an ingredient in pie crust. "It helps with flavor, as well as texture," she said. "The vinegar in the pie crust inhibits gluten formation which would make the dough tough." She suggested apple cider vinegar or white distilled vinegar as other options.

The vinegar is a key ingredient in Haney's recipe for All Butter Pie Dough. She estimated that about 90 percent of Hoosier Mama pies are made with this recipe. "It's the most important recipe at the pie shop," she said.

But another of her favorite ingredients is as traditional as apple pie. This is persimmon season, and Haney is working the bright orange-colored fruits — which resemble small tomatoes — into plenty of pies.

AMERICAN PERSIMMON PIE (MAKES ONE 9-INCH PIE)

1 single-crust, blind-baked All Butter Pie Dough shell (Use a favorite shell recipe or work with a store-bought shell.)

1 cup strained American persimmon pulp

Zest of 1/2 orange

3 large eggs

1 cup heavy cream

1 tablespoon unsalted butter, melted

1 teaspoon vanilla paste

2/3 cup granulated sugar

2 tablespoons dark brown sugar

1 teaspoon ground cinnamon

1/4 teaspoon ground mace

1/4 teaspoon kosher salt

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Using a spatula or the back of a serving spoon, press pulp through a fine-mesh strainer.

Place persimmon pulp in medium bowl and sprinkle the orange zest over it.

Whisk in eggs, cream, butter and vanilla paste, stirring well after each addition.

In separate bowl, combine granulated sugar, brown sugar, cinnamon, mace and salt. Whisk or mix with hands to break up brown sugar until thoroughly combined. Add dry ingredients to persimmon mixture and whisk until just combined. Pour filling into pie shell and bake for 45 minutes to one hour, or until edge of pie is slightly puffed and center is dry to the touch. The top of the pie will color slightly.

Cool to room temperature and then chill in the refrigerator for at least two hours, up to overnight, before slicing.

— Paula Haney,
Hoosier Mama Pie Company

In her book, she describes their flavor as "like a cross between pumpkins and apricots, with some orange zest and allspice thrown in."

Persimmons are especially big in Indiana, Haney's home state.

"In many Southern Indiana homes, including the one my husband grew up in, persimmon pudding — not pumpkin pie — is the holiday dessert de rigueur," Haney said.

"It's like a brownie without chocolate," said Helen Roney, co-owner of Tuttle Orchards in Greenfield, Ind. Roney and her daughter make Persimmon Pudding. They also sell frozen pulp from persimmons grown by a local farmer.

Persimmons aren't commercially-grown due to their astringent flavor while they are still hanging on a tree. But when the skin shrivels and the fruit falls off the tree, the flesh turns sweet and pudding-like. Farmers rig nets under their persimmon trees to catch the fruit before it hits the ground. They scoop out the pulp and sell it frozen to vendors like Tuttle Orchards.

Tuttle Orchards is one of many resources for pie ingredients included in a seven-page directory in the back of Haney's book.

With her book complete, Haney's next project is to open a second pie shop at 749 Chicago Ave. in Evanston around Nov. 1. The shop will be in conjunction with Dollop Coffee Co.

In the meantime, look for Haney at the Bookstall at Chestnut Court in Winnetka, www.thebookstall.com, at 3 p.m. Oct. 27. She and cookbook collaborator Allison Scott will chat about pie — and serve some slices, too — with enough forks to go around.

OPENING HURRAY

ALL IS LOST

Rated PG-13 for brief strong language

Stars: Robert Redford

At least there's no Bengal tiger. That's about the only break the unnamed hero gets, however, in this deeply affecting survival-at-sea drama. The 77-year-old Redford gives one of his best performances as the yachtsman struggling to keep his ship afloat after a crippling accident in the Indian Ocean, with ever-diminishing hopes for rescue. With one actor, one location, almost zero dialogue and minimal, old-school special effects, writer/director J.C. Chandor ("Margin Call") turns the man's long ordeal into compelling drama as he keeps struggling through disaster after disaster. It's the struggle that counts, "All Is Lost" seems to be saying, and that's a very personal matter. One that Redford expresses with a performance so personal it almost seems no performance at all.

ARGENTO'S DRACULA 3-D

No MPAA rating

Stars: Thomas Kretschmann, Asia Argento, Marta Gastini

The worst thing about the extraordinarily awful "Argento's Dracula 3-D" is that it's not quite eccentric enough to be unintentionally funny. It's bad, make no mistake, jaw-droppingly bad. But it also seems to want to be taken seriously, even when that giant, cartoonish, paper-thin praying mantis comes creeping up the stairs. Directed by the '70s/'80s Italian horror-meister Dario Argento ("Suspiria"), "Dracula 3-D" is a surprisingly old-fashioned and flat-footed plod-through of the Bram Stoker classic. Despite occasional outbursts of gore and nudity, including a queasy-making ogle of the director's daughter (frequently topless Euro-star Asia Argento) enjoying a sponge bath, tedium sets in quickly. And it doesn't help that the whole production seems afflicted with terminal cheapness from the ookie-spooky score to the almost unbelievably lame computer-generated imagery, including the aforementioned oversized insect — not only absurd, but smashed-flat 2-D.

Chiwetel Ejiofor and Michael Fassbender star in "12 Years a Slave."

BAD GRANDPA

Rated R for strong crude and sexual content throughout, language, some graphic nudity and brief drug use

Stars: Johnny Knoxville, Jackson Nicoll, Spike Jonze, Georgina Cates

Octogenarian "Jackass" character Irving Zisman (Knoxville) makes a cross-country trip with his 8-year-old grandson Billy (Nicoll), trying to throw a shock into unsuspecting citizens along the way. Jeff Tremaine, director of all the "Jackass" hidden-camera stunt/prank films, returns.

THE COUNSELOR

Rated R for graphic violence, some grisly images, strong sexual content and language

Stars: Michael Fassbender, Brad Pitt, Cameron Diaz, Javier Bardem, Penelope Cruz

A greedy attorney (Fassbender) finds that he's gotten in over his head when he becomes involved in drug trafficking. Ridley Scott ("Prometheus") directed the crime drama from novelist Cormac McCarthy's first original screenplay.

STILL PLAYING

12 YEARS A SLAVE

Rated R for violence/cruelty, some nudity and brief sexuality

Stars: Chiwetel Ejiofor, Michael

Fassbender, Benedict Cumberbatch

An almost unimaginably harrowing depiction of slavery in the United States, "12 Years a Slave" is also an inspiring story of a man who refused to give in to despair despite extreme physical, emotional and spiritual suffering. In a profoundly affecting performance, a certain Best Actor contender, Chiwetel Ejiofor plays Solomon Northup, a free black man who was kidnapped from Saratoga, N.Y. in 1841 and sold into slavery. "12 Years" is a showcase for a parade of white actors behaving abominably (especially Fassbender as a religious maniac plantation owner), but it's the genuineness of Ejiofor's performance, with its innumerable shadings of acute anguish, that gives the film its devastating emotional impact. That and the terrible realism with which director Steve McQueen ("Shame") presents the story's nonstop cruelties.

CARRIE

Rated R for bloody violence, disturbing images, language and some sexual content

Stars: Julianne Moore, Chloe Grace Moretz

A cruelly mistreated teenage girl (Moretz), who has been abused by her religiously crazed mother (Moore), wreaks vengeance using telekinetic powers.

ESCAPE PLAN

Rated R for violence and language throughout

Stars: Sylvester Stallone, Arnold Schwarzenegger, 50 Cent
Sure, it's fun to see the Governator and the Italian Stallion he-manning it up together feature length for the first time, but this dull prison break movie is unworthy of the momentous occasion. Stallone plays a consultant who's hired to find flaws in prison security systems by busting out of them after being incarcerated. Not exactly nice work if you can get it, but it pays well. Things get out of hand, though, when he finds himself betrayed and locked away in a private super-hoosgow, with only one similarly aged, similarly muy-macho ally (Schwarzenegger).

THE FIFTH ESTATE

Rated R for language and some violence

Stars: Benedict Cumberbatch, Daniel Bruhl, David Thewlis, Peter Capaldi

After exposing numerous corporate and government secrets in the interest of bringing the truth to light, the founders of Wikileaks (Cumberbatch, Bruhl) clash over how to handle a large number of particularly sensitive American intelligence documents.

ROMEO & JULIET

Rated PG-13 for some violence and thematic elements

Stars: Hailee Steinfeld, Stellan Skarsgard, Paul Giamatti, Douglas Booth

It's a pity, in the age of the casual hookup, that the "Romeo & Juliet" being served up to the present generation is, for the most part, such an overly pretty and artificial bore. From the first introduction of his two young leads (Steinfeld, Oscar-nominated for "True Grit," and Booth), who stare at each other stricken with slow-motion, sparkly-eyed, love at first sight, this clichéd, excessively lavish doublet-and-hoser is a miserable chore to sit through — with the exception of a few strong supporting performances, especially Giamatti's excellent turn as Friar Laurence. Shakespeare's poetry also provides occasional compensation. This is an experience in exasperation that even seems to have affected Giamatti at one point, when he smacks the petulant Romeo on the side of the head — by far the film's most satisfying moment.

NICKY'S FAMILY

No MPAA rating

Stars: Nicholas Winton, the Dalai Lama, Ben Abeles

In the 1930s, responding to a friend's request for help, British stockbroker Nicholas Winton took it upon himself to rescue 669 children from pre-World War II Czechoslovakia and find homes for them in England. And he then told no one about what he had done until his wife accidentally discovered his old records in 1988 and alerted the BBC. Very much alive at age 104 and honored with a much-deserved knighthood, Winton presents his own modest perspective on the story in Matej Minac's inspirational documentary — which also employs archival footage and dramatic reenactments to keep things lively. It's the now-aged children he rescued, though, who offer the most moving testament to Winton's good work, along with the remarkable fact that their descendants now number almost 6,000.

THE INEVITABLE DEFEAT OF MISTER & PETE

Rated R for language, some drug use and sexual content

Stars: Skylan Brooks, Ethan Dizon, Jennifer Hudson, Anthony Mackie, Jeffrey Wright

Director George Tillman Jr. ("Soul Food," "Men of Honor") doesn't shy away from gritty details in this drama about kids from the Brooklyn projects trying to survive on their own after their junkie prostitute mothers are arrested. But he also imbues it with warmth and occasional humor. Outwardly tough 13-year-old Mister and younger, much more naive Pete (Brooks and Dizon, both excellent) are forced to fend for themselves one summer if they want to avoid a dangerous public group home, which means begging, hustling and ultimately stealing. Tillman keeps the mood remarkably light, though, largely because Mister has a plan. An aspiring actor, he's certain he's going to be flying to Beverly Hills after an upcoming TV series audition. Yet, as the title suggests, this isn't a fairy tale.

Carlos Lara's 2008 Ford Shelby GT 500

By Kevin Griffin - kevin.griffin@wrapports.com

Carlos Lara admits that when he was a kid, there was only one thing he wanted to see at local car shows: a Ford Shelby GT 500. Now he owns one: a 2008 model.

He bought it in Springfield, Miss. After returning from his deployment in the US Military. Lara found the car online and said he just had to have it. Since purchasing it, Lara has added new tires and rims, side scoops, and a pulley on the supercharger and hood struts. Now, he estimates, the car is pushing 600 horsepower.

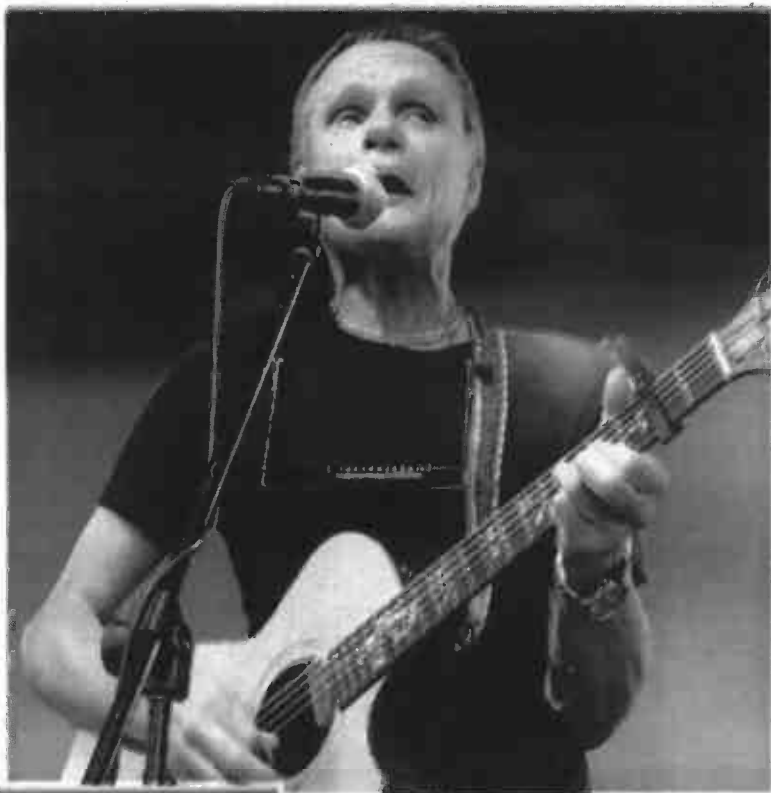

Ford recently announced that starting in 2015, the Shelby name will be removed from the special editions of the Ford Mustang. While it may not be apparent now, the decision will one day likely make Lara's Mustang a high-priced collector's item.

Lara's Mustang sports a white paint job with a blue double stripe, what he says is a tribute to the original Shelby Mustang, first marketed in the 1960s. For now, Lara says his mustang doesn't make it much further than cruises around the suburbs and car shows. It's longest trip so far has been the drive back after Lara picked it up in Missouri.

Used cars make up 55 percent of sales

TODRIVE.COM
NEWS SERVICE

In the month of July, Niles residents chose Toyota more often than any other make when purchasing pre-owned vehicles and again opted for Toyota above all other makes when buying new.

All told, new car sales accounted for 45 percent of overall auto sales to residents of Niles, totaling 141 of the 315 overall auto sales in the month. Following Toyota as the most popular brands bought new by residents in July were Nissan and Ford. Residents purchased a total of 19 new Toyota vehicles, 18 new Nissan cars, and 18 new Ford vehicles in the month.

Used car sales brought in 55 percent of overall auto sales, bringing in 174 of the 315 overall car sales. Toyota led the way as the most popular used auto brand, totaling 31 sales. Ford and Chevrolet came in second and third, respectively, in the used car sales category, with 27 and 15 sales.

Over the course of the month, local dealers accounted for 69 percent of overall car sales to Niles residents, while private parties accounted for 31 percent of auto sales. The 69 percent originating from auto dealerships translated to 217 total dealer sales in the month.

Golf Mill Ford led the way with eight sales of used cars to Niles residents in July, trailed by Star Nissan (four sales) and Jennings Volkswagen (four). The three most popular dealers of new cars to Niles residents in the month were Golf Mill Ford with 16 sales, Star Nissan (11 sales) and Bredemann Toyota (11).

Galloway goes the distance for Dons

Senior from Lake Zurich brings his versatility and consistency

BY MIKE NELSON
For Sun-Times Media, @HSCNewsNorth

Monday through Friday, Matt Galloway rises before the sun.

Up by 5:30 a.m., 5:45 at the latest. Out the door by 6 a.m., 6:20 at the latest.

At that point, Galloway endures about a 60-minute car ride from his home in Lake Zurich to Notre Dame in Niles.

"On a good day, I can get it in 45 minutes. But normally about an hour," Galloway said. "The drive is really long, so that's hard to get used to."

If not for his Advanced Placement chemistry course, Galloway could enjoy another 25 minutes of sleep. But that class commences at 7:25. Most don't begin until 7:50.

Galloway said he does all that to receive a top-notch education and for football.

Galloway, a senior on Notre Dame's football team, opted to become a Don four years ago after attending Northridge in Niles from sixth through eighth grade and St. Theresa School in Palatine through fifth grade.

He could have remained at Northridge for high school with his brother Nick, who is three years older. But Northridge lacked a football team — a "game changer" for Matt Galloway.

With Matt Galloway unwilling to concede his football dreams, his parents afforded him the opportunity to tour various Catholic schools in the area.

Having watched Nick Galloway play soccer for the Knights at Notre Dame and been impressed by the football field, Matt Galloway said the Dons rose up his list quickly.

He toured Notre Dame first.

"I knew it was sort of the same environment so I thought I'd check it out," Matt Galloway said. "Once I saw it, I really liked it and I didn't need to check out any other schools."

Two other options for Matt Galloway were Carmel and St. Viator. Both are "probably half the distance" from his house when compared to Notre Dame.

But Matt Galloway said he chose

Notre Dame because of the football program and the school's academics.

Notre Dame coach Mike Hennessey declared Matt Galloway a "tremendous student." On the field, he is "probably one of the most consistent players we have," according to Hennessey.

Matt Galloway starts at outside linebacker and fullback, but various injuries and formations have garnered him time at defensive tackle, defensive end, inside linebacker, running back and wide receiver.

"You can put him anywhere and he's going to do a great job," Hennessey said. "He will do anything that is necessary to help his team win. And he has the talent to do anything."

To secure a 45-35 victory over Marist on Oct. 11, Hennessey said Matt Galloway gained "the most important first down of the game in the fourth quarter that kept our drive alive and made it so we could keep the football and win the game" on a halfback screen.

Showcasing his versatility, Matt Galloway logged extended time at running back and moved from outside to inside linebacker that day.

"He was the hero of the game," Hennessey said.

That job title has its perks.

"He's probably one of the most popular guys on the team," Hennessey said. But it wasn't always that way.

"I didn't feel like I really belonged until junior year," said Matt Galloway, who knew no one and had no connection to Notre Dame prior to his first day of football practice.

"But now I've got all my friends here and I really don't feel like the oddball out anymore," Matt Galloway said. "I love these guys."

GAME RECAP

Joliet Catholic 37
Notre Dame 14

THE SKINNY

Joliet Catholic (7-1 overall, 5-1 ESCC) outscored Notre Dame (6-2, 3-2) 23-0 in the second half to break away from a 14-14 tie and clinch the East Suburban Catholic title.

TURNING POINT

Notre Dame mounted a 6 1/2-minute drive to open the third quarter but came up empty on a missed field goal. Joliet Catholic's Mike Ivlow then averted disaster when he got off a 21-yard punt after chasing down a high snap. A couple of long Ivlow runs later, and the Hilltoppers were in command.

THE STAR

Besides his save on the high punt snap, Ivlow rushed for 299 yards in 29 carries and scored four touchdowns.

BY THE NUMBERS

Joliet Catholic rushed for 349 yards and totaled 380. Notre Dame rushed for 197 and Quarterback Ryan Greene completed 12 of 26 passes for 153 yards.

QUOTABLE

It was nerve-racking. I was freaking out." — Ivlow, on what he felt when the punt snap sailed over his head.

Undersized Reinemann representative of Wolves

BY DAN SHALIN
For Sun-Times Media, @danshalin

NORTHFIELD — Niles West senior Isaac Reinemann may be small, but he's got big ability and big hair.

Generously listed at 5-foot-8 and 165 pounds (he said he's really 5-7 and 155 pounds), the linebacker with the flowing locks is in his second season as a starter for the Wolves, who bring a 6-2 overall record into Friday's regular-season finale at Glenbrook South.

This will be the second straight season Niles West makes the playoffs after missing out for eight straight years.

Though the talent-level in the program has grown in recent seasons, the Wolves are hardly bursting with Division I players. With a 41-man squad, their numbers remain lower than many opponents in the CSL South.

Yet, with quality wins over Glenbrook North and Evanston and a fairly close 35-20 loss to powerhouse Maine South, the Wolves have shown an ability to punch slightly above their weight, which is just what Reinemann has been doing for years.

"(Reinemann) is one of those kids who comes in and you go, 'How the heck does he do this?' And he has for four years," Niles West coach Scott Baum said. "He's a spark plug, energy, call it what you will. That's him. He doesn't talk a lot. He just goes out and does it and does a nice job at it."

When he arrived at Niles West, Reinemann said he was about 5-3 and 110 pounds and he played on the Freshman B team. Coaches struggled to find the right position for him, using him in several spots: fullback, quarterback, cornerback and linebacker.

Sophomore season he was moved to linebacker full time and that's where he's remained, starting at strong side outside linebacker as a junior and now at weak side middle linebacker, or WILL.

"(Moving to linebacker) I really found the position I could flourish in," said Reinemann, whose twin brother Louis plays on the Niles West offensive and defensive lines. "I think I'm a good tackler and good at reading the linemen and the backs and where they're going to go, and getting off blocks."

Reinemann — a wrestler who went 31-9, won conference and reached the sectional at 132 pounds last season — said his experience on the mat helps him overcome a lack of size on the football field.

"I don't think about my size too much," said Reinemann, who also is a pole vaulter. "I use my hands a lot. As a wrestler, it's about getting people off of you, and I kind of use wrestling moves with the linemen who try to block me. That helps."

Niles West senior receiver and defensive back Andrew Mihulet has played football with Reinemann since the two were middle schoolers and he said he's always been impressed by his teammate's ability.

"(Reinemann is) a scrappy guy, and not afraid of contact," Mihulet said. "He knows how to play football. He's so athletic. He's a three-sport athlete, a pure athlete, and just an awesome guy to have on your side."

Reinemann also stands out on the gridiron because of his hair, which now goes beyond his shoulders and brings to mind Green Bay Packers linebacker Clay Matthews.

Reinemann said wearing his hair long is not a recent development.

"I started growing it out in second or third grade, though it's not always been this long," he said. "I guess I've just grown to like it and it's unique on the field. People know who I am. (At first) I just wanted to see how it went, and then it became my thing."

Has anyone asked him to cut it off?

"Definitely," said Reinemann, who puts his hair up in a skull cap for wrestling. "Some girls, my dad, my brother, they've asked me to cut it. But I've never wanted to."

Reinemann added: "I'll get it cut one day. But I don't see it (happening) any time soon."

Lee caps career with best finish

Niles West senior finishes tied for 16th in his fourth trip to Bloomington

BY MATT HARNESSE
mharnesse@pioneerlocal.com, @harnessepreps

BLOOMINGTON — Nate Lee stood in the tent next to the clubhouse staring at the scoreboard.

The Niles West senior didn't like what he saw on his Saturday card, but he said he was happy to be where he was one last time.

Lee played at the Class 3A state tournament all four years in high school and improved each season. In his final appearance at The Den at Fox Creek, Lee shot 72-80 to post an 8-over 152 that tied him for 16th. He finished tied for 25th as a junior, tied for 86th as a sophomore and tied for 93rd as a freshman.

"Even though I didn't play that well (in the second round), I am glad I got to end it here," Lee said. "I couldn't imagine not playing here one last time."

Lee said it's not clear if competitive golf is in his future. He remains undecided on whether or not to play in college.

He's set on studying aerospace engineering somewhere, a field he's been interested in since he was a young boy.

"Nothing grabbed me like that did," he said. "Things like planes, missiles. I'd eventually like to get a Ph.D. in aerospace engineering."

Lee is considering attending Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Embry-Riddle, Illinois Wesleyan and Carthage.

"I do still want to play, but I am not sure right now," he said.

For the first time in his career, Lee had company in Bloomington. Wolves sophomore Skylar LeVine tied for 74th in his inaugural appearance at the state tournament. He shot rounds of 80-85 for a 21-over 165.

TAP-INS

Like most players Saturday,

Maine East junior Orion Yamat struggled in cold and windy conditions during the second round of the Class 3A tournament. After posting a 2-over 74 Friday, he slipped to an 82 to finish tied for 31st with a 12-over 156 in his first trip to the state tournament. ... Notre Dame senior Sean Furman got off to one of the best starts Friday by making four birdies in his first six holes to briefly lead the field. But he ultimately fell down the leaderboard and finished tied for 70th (78-86). ... Loyola sophomore Michael Banas impressed in his rookie appearance at The Den at Fox Creek by tying for 49th following rounds of 78-82. Teammate Chris Nolan, a senior, tied for 74th (82-83). ... The second-shortest hole on the course proved to be one of the most difficult, especially Saturday. The 160-yard, par-3 17th, framed by water on the left and bunkers on the right, surrendered only three birdies over two rounds. On Saturday, with the wind howling, more than half of the 111 players carded a bogey or worse.

Knights mount attacks from the corners

BY JAKUB RUDNIK
For Sun-Times Media, @jakubrudnik

RIVER GROVE — After losing in the regional finals last season, the Northridge boys soccer team would not be denied a second time.

The team's eight seniors helped the Knights capture the Class 1A Guerin Regional championship with a 3-0 victory Saturday over the host Gators.

"We started sophomore year playing on varsity together," senior midfielder Peter Fonseca said. "We just grew up playing together, learning what each other's strengths and flaws are."

That experience and knowledge has shaped how the Knights look to attack against opposing teams.

"We have to get the ball to the central players," Fonseca said. "Then distribute the ball to the corners and go to goal or cross it."

He followed that strategy when he assisted on the go-ahead goal in the second half of the final, playing a ball to the corner for senior forward Mike Kane.

"I went down the line, got past the first defender, then brought it to goal and took a shot," Kane said. "In the first half I saw a lot of the same kind of situation, but that time I just put it on goal."

Five minutes later, Kane found himself with the ball in the corner again, but instead of looking to score he chose to cross the ball.

"My friend Mike Kane took it to the side, down the line," senior midfielder Pedro Acosta said. "I was sitting at the top of the box and I hit it one-time just under the crossbar."

"I was coming from the right," Kane said. "I just saw Pedro open, so I got him the ball."

It was the second senior-to-senior goal of the game. For Kane and Acosta, it was a play that showed off just how long they've been teammates.

"Me and Mike have been playing together since sixth grade," Acosta said. "We have a lot of chemistry together."

"We've been friends through high school and middle school," Kane said. "We're always stretching together and juggling together during practice."

Kane's assist to Acosta gave him 10 for the season — rare at a position in which the primary objective is to score goals. But for Northridge, that's just the way they have learned to play together.

"For most teams it's usually the midfielders distributing out," Kane said. "It happens quite often for us where the forwards take it to the sideline, and the midfielders step up to score."

Rodriguez transfers his energy to Niles North offense

A summer of hard work pays off for senior wide receiver

BY JAKUB RUDNIK
For Sun-Times Media, @jakubrudnik

SKOKIE — Before the 2013 season, Eddie Rodriguez wasn't even sure he would play football for Niles North. Now the senior wide receiver is one of the Vikings' top offensive threats.

Rodriguez played for Evanston as a freshman and sophomore, but he sat out his junior year because he knew his family was moving. He transferred to Niles North near the end of the 2012 football season. He wasn't sure how well he could compete for playing time with players who had been with the program for years.

"I took the entire year off," he said. "I didn't play any other sports; I only did the occasional workout."

It was encouragement from an old friend that helped convince Rodriguez to play as a senior.

"We played Junior Vikings together, but lost touch when he moved to Evanston," said senior Michael Marek, a Niles North offensive lineman. "When he came to North we became friends again. We talked to coach (Mark) Egofski about Eddie playing."

"The times in the summer when I wasn't motivated to go to practice, Michael would call me up and have me sleep over," Rodriguez said. "He lives near the school, and we'd go to the morning practices together."

It was during those summer workouts that teammates saw Rodriguez's potential.

"We both play wide receiver, so I was always doing drills with him," senior J.J. Myles said. "He was lost at first, but he's got great hands and he always runs hard."

Rodriguez saw he could learn a lot from Myles, the team's top returning receiver. During practice, Myles would help with his technique, showing him things like how to properly stand at the line before the snap. Eventually, they began to get extra workouts in after practices.

"There were times in the summer where we'd have morning practices, then go to the field when nobody else was there," Myles said. "Me, Eddie, Mike, we'd get (senior quarterback) Charlie (Long), and just go work on routes, run 1-on-1s."

There were nights, Rodriguez said, when they would work on their routes until it was dark, and they'd ask a security guard to turn the lights on in the stadium.

That extra work helped Rodriguez earn a starting spot at wide receiver for the Vikings, and he's taken advantage of the opportunity.

In a 21-20 loss to Highland Park on Friday, Rodriguez caught five passes for a game-high 121 yards. His fifth reception was a 36-yard touchdown on a corner route that put the Vikings up 18-14. On the ensuing two-point conversion, Long again found Rodriguez in the end zone.

"I was actually the second option on the play," Rodriguez said. "When I hit my break I shoved off on (No.) 7, and I noticed I was open, so I started clapping for Charlie."

Although Highland Park would go on to win the game and drop Niles North to 3-5 overall and 2-2 in the CSL North, Rodriguez picked a great time to have his best performance of the season.

"The defensive coordinator and recruiter from Aurora (University) came to watch me and Mike," Rodriguez said. "We had no idea he'd be there."

MacKinnon makes big impact in first season with Trevians

Evanston's Ampel rides powerful serve to state

BY JONAH ROSENBLUM
For Sun-Times Media, @jonahrosenblum

SKOKIE — Home schooling for part of the day worked out pretty well for Catherine MacKinnon as an eighth-grader.

She would wake up at 8 a.m., play tennis, take online classes, shower, show up for middle school at noon and then play tennis again after school let out.

"I liked it," MacKinnon said. "I got to sleep in and do my own schedule and play tennis whenever I wanted."

As a ninth grader though, MacKinnon made a last-minute decision to enroll at New Trier.

"My parents really wanted me to home school and I didn't really want to and eventually when all of my friends went to school, I just really wanted to go," MacKinnon said.

She elected not to go out for tennis last year after she didn't attend classes on the first day of school at New Trier.

The talented sophomore demonstrated her potential Saturday in the Niles North Sectional doubles final as she and senior teammate Alex Wolkoff nearly upset fellow Trevians Cammy Frei and Lily Schroeder. Frei, a sophomore, and Schroeder, a senior, won 6-4, 2-6, 6-4.

Trailing 4-3 in the first set, MacKinnon won a battle at the net to go up 15-0 and then her winner to the left knotted the score at four games apiece. In the next game, MacKinnon hit a perfect lob off the back line that neither Frei nor Schroeder could get to.

"Catherine's playing awesome," teammate and four-time sectional singles champion Carol Finke said. "She moves really well. She's super aggressive at the net. She brings such a positive attitude to our team."

After falling behind 2-0 in the second set, MacKinnon recovered from a pair of early double faults with consecutive aces to win the first of what would be six straight games for MacKinnon and Wolkoff.

MacKinnon played several matches at No. 1 doubles earlier this season, but she is happy with both her position and her partner, boasting a 7-2 record with Wolkoff.

"I like playing with Alex," MacKinnon said. "She's my favorite to play with. I'd rather play two with her than one with anyone else. We just click well."

She's also happy to be going to state for the first time.

"I'm curious to see where it goes," MacKinnon said. "It's just a tournament I guess. I'm just scared about missing school."

NORTH SHORE COUNTRY DAY

The last victory of Madison Morgensai's high school tennis career certainly was memorable.

In a Round of 16 matchup that lasted an astonishing three and a half hours Friday, the North Shore Country Day senior bested Niles West junior Katie Chleboun 5-7, 7-6 (2), 7-6 (5).

"I just wanted to move on and I found the motivation to move on and push forward and win," Morgensai said.

Morgensai didn't lead until she took a 6-5 advantage in the second set.

Oddly enough, she led most of the way through both tiebreakers.

"It took a lot of weight off my shoulders," Morgensai said. "It feels better always to be up and I tend to get really overwhelmed. It just relieved a lot of that pressure and that overwhelming feeling."

If she was overwhelmed, she didn't show it, rebounding from 5-2 deficits in the first and second sets by consistently extending points.

"It really is frustrating," Chleboun said. "You run out of energy and everything"

Twenty minutes after the victory, Morgensai was back on the court, falling to New Trier senior and eventual champion Carol Finke 6-0, 6-0.

At day's end, only one word could describe how she felt.

"Tired," Morgensai said.

NILES WEST

Katie Chleboun, a junior at Niles West, ended 2013 with a 14-9 record, never going to a third set until her 23rd and final match of the year.

After barely holding onto a 5-2 lead against North Shore Country Day senior Madison Morgensai in the first set, Chleboun let a 5-2 lead slip away in the second set of Friday's Round of 16 match.

"I was tired so I couldn't really hit out on the ball or anything," Chleboun said. "I was just like, '... this match is taking so long.'"

In the third set, she did find her aggression, striking the ball harder.

"I was like, 'Well, it's a third set, how I play is how I play,'" Chleboun said.

Chleboun dropped the match 5-7, 7-6 (2), 7-6 (5).

Two Niles West entrants advanced beyond the sectional tournament. Freshman Eliza Kirov finished third in singles to earn a state berth and the doubles team of seniors Kristine Park and Andra Sabou are moving on thanks to a fourth-place finish.

EVANSTON

Jessica Ampel spent over an hour awaiting the winner of a play-in match between Lane's Alison Wall and Von Steuben's Brigette Pulido. It was worth the wait.

The Evanston sophomore secured her first trip to state with a 6-0, 6-0 win over Wall and a 6-3, 7-5 victory over Niles North freshman Sabrina Palavra.

Her backhand clicked throughout. So did her serve — which features a toss that soars 6 feet above her head.

"My coach likes to think that the high toss gives me more time to bend down because I'm pretty short but I have muscular legs so it gives me more time to get low and then spring up to the ball," Ampel said.

The Evanston doubles team of senior Olivia Luby and sophomore Kate Kremin also made state.

NILES NORTH

Sabrina Palavra is a freshman at Niles North.

You wouldn't know it from her mature approach to her season-ending 6-3, 7-5 loss to Evanston's Jessica Ampel.

"My mom told me if it's meant to be, it would happen so I was just thinking about that," Palavra said. "I gave my best and she played better than me so you can't really do anything about it. I don't think you should be sad."

Palavra said that Ampel surprised her. Palavra was able to defeat the Evanston sophomore 6-2, 6-4 less than a month ago.

"She really played her best game and I wasn't prepared for it," Palavra said. "I literally told myself, 'I don't know what to do right now.' There's literally nothing I can do except keep the ball in play and hope that she makes a mistake because her game was on point."

High School Cube News, Sun-Times Media's new high school sports website, launched this week. It's the latest evolution in Chicago area prep sports coverage. High School Cube News will integrate all the highlights and live games from HighSchoolCube.com with the comprehensive coverage formerly provided by Season Pass.

High School Cube News features school and team pages for every area high school, with live game coverage and highlights from participating schools. Now, all 32 Pioneer Press weekly publications have their very own High School Cube News sites with a hyper-local focus on your favorite teams.

Go to highschoolcubenews.com or click "SPORTS" on your local newspaper site.
