Endorsements nixed by area Chamber of Commerce

By K.C. MEADOWS The Daily Journal

The Greater Ukiah Chamber of Commerce has decided to get out of politics.

At a planning session May 23, the chamber's board agreed to discontinue the chamber's political endorsements, a move announced Tuesday.

"The chamber will focus on providing information to its members and the community on business-related issues," said chamber CEO Bert Mosier.

The chamber began endorsing candidates in the November 2002 Ukiah City Council race, and the new policy was immediately controversial.

While he was not heading the chamber at the time, board member and later chamber president Jim Mulheren is widely thought to have pushed the endorsements.

"I did have a lot to do with it. I it's a good idea," Mulheren said Tuesday. He said endorsements allowed the chamber to urge votes for candidates the chamber felt would be best for the business community and

Skate Park plans refocus on first site

By KATIE MINTZ The Daily Journal

Plans for the Ukiah Skate Park are back on track.

On Monday, J.T. Wick, a representative from North Coast Rail Authority operator Northwestern Pacific Railroad Company, informed the city that his company was no longer pursuing analysis of an alternate site.

After meeting with members of the Ukiah Skate Park Committee last week at the site, located across East Perkins Street along the railroad tracks, Wick said he recommended to his colleagues to discontinue what could have been a $6,000 comparative analysis.

"I got their rank, looked at the constraints that we identified, and we realized it would be a difficult fit," Wick said.

According to Carole Aleshire, secretary and 10-year member of Ukiah Skate Park Committee, based on the same criteria used to rank 18 locations over the seven-year siteselection process, the property came in fourth

A new report from Children Now, which provides a look at how children are faring county to county has both good and bad news for California and Mendocino County.

Mendocino County has 20,615 children 17 years old and younger. The average per-capita family income in Mendocino County is $22,487, compared to a state average of $26,800. Ninety-one percent of households in Mendocino County have at least one working parent; the state average is also 91 percent. Sixteen percent of households in Mendocino County are receiving food stamps, as compared to 10 percent statewide.

In terms of health, Mendocino County is ranked 52 out of 58 counties in the number of children with health insurance, however, 88 percent of children in Mendocino County do have health insurance, according to the report. Additionally, the report found that Mendocino County did better than the statewide average in terms of nutrition, with 29 percent of children physically fit as opposed to a statewide average of 28 percent. The report also found that 30 percent of children in Mendocino County were overweight, as opposed to a statewide average of 33 percent, and 25 percent of children had eaten fast food in the last day as opposed to 34 percent statewide.

According to the report, 68 percent of mothers received prenatal care in Mendocino County, compared to 86 percent statewide. Low birth weight infants were the same as the state average at 7 percent. The teen birth rate per

SF seeks energy from tides beneath Golden Gate

By TERENCE CHEA

Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — City officials announced plans Tuesday to explore the potential the powerful tides beneath the Golden Gate Bridge hold for generating electricity, a project they hope would make San Francisco a showcase for the experimental field of tidal energy.

Officials from San Francisco, Pacific Gas & Electric Co. and Golden Gate Energy Co. signed an agreement to conduct the largest study to date on producing emission-free power in the busy waterway that connects San Francisco Bay to the Pacific Ocean.

"This is not science fiction," Mayor Gavin Newsom said at a signing ceremony next to the world-famous span. "The future is today. The technology exists."

The $1.8 million study would seek to determine how much electricity could be generated, what kind of technology would work best and whether the project makes sense economically. It would also examine the project's possible impacts on marine life and the environment.

The year-long study, which is expected to begin this summer, could lead to a pilot project in which an underwater turbine resembling a windmill would be installed and tested. If studies are successful, it

As worries over climate change rise, many see the powerful underwater currents in rivers, seas and oceans as a potential source of renewable energy that does not emit greenhouse gases blamed for warming the planet.

"I think it will play a role in diversifying our nation's energy resources and reducing greenhouse gas emissions," said Carolyn Elefant of the Ocean Renewable Energy Coalition in Washington.

Several pilot projects have begun generating electricity in Europe and Asia, but tidal energy still isn't being generated commercially. The most advanced project in the United States is in New York City's East River, where underwater turbines are supplying power to a supermarket on Roosevelt Island.

Backers say tidal energy is still in its early stages of development, comparing it to where wind power stood two decades ago. The cost of generating electricity from tides will improve as the technology advances and more underwater turbines are installed, they say.

resource. If we didn't explore it, we would be crazy.'

A study last year by the Electric Power Research Institute identified San Francisco Bay as one of the most promising sites for tidal energy production because of its strong underwater flows.

The project faces many possible obstacles, however. The bay is heavily traveled by boats and container ships. It's also heavily regulated, so a pilot project would require permits from more than two dozen state and federal agencies.

Environmentalists are concerned about what underwater turbines might do to fish, whales and marine mammals that pass through the Golden Gate.

"We're going to be looking very closely to make sure there's no impact on marine life," said Sejal Choksi of San Francisco Baykeeper.

PG&E, which supplies electricity to much of Northern California, provided $1.5 million to fund the study because the utility is searching for new sources of renewable energy, said Chief Executive Tom King.

PHILADELPHIA — It looks like the U.S. Mint has struck again — or actually, not struck again.

Some of the new dollar coins featuring John Adams are missing edge inscriptions including "In God We Trust," according to the Professional Coin Grading Service, a Newport Beach-based rare coin authentication company.

State economy sluggish through 2008 due to housing slump

By ALEX VEIGA AP Business Writer

LOS ANGELES -- California home sales will remain weak and prices flat or slightly down overall through late 2008, translating into a sluggish economy, weaker job growth and a rise in unemployment, according to a new economic report.

"We think it will be some time before the economy is able to work through the real estate doldrums, and even longer before we see a normal housing market again," economist Ryan Ratcliff wrote in the quarterly Anderson Report to be released Tuesday by the University of California, Los

While construction and other employment sectors related to the real estate market have shed jobs as a result of the housing downturn, the impact on the rest of California's economy has been

Job growth has slowed marginally and unemployment has gone up slightly.

Among the biggest real estaterelated job losses this year have occurred in the mortgage business, which has been rocked in recent month by a dozens of lenders going out of business or seeking bankruptcy protection amid a spike in subprime mortgage defaults.

Annual construction employment peaked last year. So far this year, construction growth has been flat, according to the report.

Ratcliff expects that the state's economy will see a wider impact from the weak housing market this year and in the beginning of

As a result, the forecast calls for overall payroll growth to slow to less than 1 percent through late 2008. Ratcliff also expects unemployment to jump to 5.5 percent and personal income growth to slow to less than 3 percent.

els returning by the end of the year, Ratcliff wrote.

The report also calls for housing prices to remain flat or slight-state, with some once high-flying counties seeing year-over-year declines, while others have been flat or posted single-digit percentage increases.

The median price of a home sold in California last month was $484,000, according to real estate research firm DataQuick Information Systems.

In recent months, sales of pricier homes have outpaced purchases of lower-priced dwellings, helping to skew the median price figure higher.

Foreclosures have been climbing, but haven't resulted into a major pullback in prices.

Still, the number of mortgage defaults and foreclosures is expected to increase over the next couple of years as the volume of adjustable rate mortgages due to reset peaks.

"While we don't see any calamitous implosion of home prices in the near future, this pattern of flat to slight falling prices and weak sales volumes will be the norm for some time to come,' Ratcliff concluded.

Nationally, the housing slowdown will continue to be a drag on the U.S. economy through early 2008.

David Shulman, a co-author of the Anderson Forecast, expects gross domestic product -- a measure of the economy's output -will be less than 2 percent for Shulman expects the Federal Reserve won't cut interest rates before the fourth quarter. That will delay a housing market recovery until mid-2008, the economist concluded.

I got several smiles and comments from folks who read last week's item on Rick LeBurkien, who left the Promotional Alliance after a short few months. After the column was published we got the official press release from the alliance about Rick's departure which also noted that there would be no rush to replace the executive director position and that the Alliance board members would be going into their annual retreat soon to discuss staffing.

Someone said to me that perhaps that Alliance ought not to think about hiring someone who is primarily an administrator, but someone who is more project oriented. After all, the Alliance has few staff to administer but needs someone who can simply get events and other things accomplished.

The Alliance is currently in negotiations with the County of Mendocino for the 2007-08 fiscal year contract. The MCPA manages the GoMendo.com website (which will undergo a major redesign in July) and now collaborates promotional efforts with the newly formed Mendocino Winegrape and Wine Commission as well as the Mendocino County Lodging Association BID.

Public employee groups sent out a press release last week about a study by Sacramento State University which concludes that retired state employees and retired teachers pump nearly $1.4 billion per year into counties of Northern California through Retirees of the California Public Employees' Retirement System (CalPERS) and the California State Teachers' Retirement System (CalSTRS)

The study by the Applied Research Center of Sacramento State University found that 47,000 retirees living in Northern California counties get $1.1 billion per year in CalPERS and CalSTRS pension benefits. The counties include Butte, Colusa, Del Norte, Glenn, Humboldt, Lake, Lassen, Mendocino, Modoc, Nevada, Plumas, Shasta, Sierra, Siskiyou, Sutter, Tehama, Trinity,

When those retirees spend their retirement income, they produce an additional $265 million of economic activity, commonly called a "ripple effect," for a total impact of $1.4 billion on the regional economy, says the release.

"This is powerful evidence of the positive economic impact of CalPERS pension benefits," said CalPERS Chief Executive Officer Fred Buenrostro.

Is this study intended to assauge the fears of all of us out here in the private sector who worry about the crashing financial crisis that is coming with the enormous cost of retirement for public employees? Who do they think pays that $1.1 billion a year to those retired employees -- and that's just the ones living in Northern California?

WASHINGTON -- They can be found rallying union workers, walking picket lines or helping sign up new members. Democrats running for president are after something else this time of year: the endorsements of the ohso-important labor unions.

When organized labor calls, the Democratic candidates are there.

"You take politics seriously," Democratic front-runner Hillary Rodham Clinton told the green-shirted American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees union at a candidates forum Tuesday morning. "You understand that we have to organize in order to change the direction of this country.'

Clinton isn't alone in courting labor to get a push in the early primary states.

Rep. Dennis Kucinich, D-Ohio, begins union speeches with "Solidarity Forever!" Sen. Barack Obama, D-III., relocated an

More than for any other interest groups, Democratic candidates line up to participate in union presidential forums, like the AFSCME one on Tuesday, or the 10-million member AFL-CIO's candidate forums, in which candidates speak in town hall-style formats in different cities, to curry favor.

Unions place a high value on that face time. "If someone says, 'I don't care enough about your organization to come and talk to you,' that might knock them out," said Edward J. McElroy, president of the American Federation of Teachers, whose executive

In another initiative unveiled this year, Google and the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum are calling attention to atrocities in the Darfur region of Sudan. And last year, Google Earth joined forces with the United Nations Environmental Program to show users areas of environmental destruction, and with the Jane Goodall Institute to panzees and African deforesta-

"At Google, we feel an obligation to help groups like this when it is so clear that our tools can make an important positive impact," spokeswoman Megan Quinn said.

Chief Almir Eventually, Narayamoga Surui envisions many of the 1,200 members of his Surui tribe using computers with satellite Internet connections and high-resolution images from Google Earth to police all corners of their 618,000-acre reservation.

They could then offer proof to authorities that the destruction is occurring and demand action, or possibly spook the loggers and miners away because they would know they are being monitored, said Surui, who uses his tribes' name as his last, like many Brazilian Indians.

The loggers and miners "will certainly be scared, because we'll be watching all the time and denouncing the invasions," the chief said in an e-mail interview from Switzerland, where he was meeting with environmentalists and United Nations officials.

Surui came up with the idea some time ago when he was tooling around Google Earth and saw thin whitish lines suggesting deforestation in the vast verdant zoomed in on his reservation.

With help from the U.S.-based Amazon Conservation Team nonprofit group, Surui met last month with Google Earth executives in California, wowing them with a vision of how Google technology could help stop the devastation, said Quinn.

"If you look at the Surui land today in Google Earth, you'll see their "island" of healthy green rainforest is surrounded almost completely by clear-cut, barren land," she said. "The stark contrast at their boundary is dramatic, and conveys vividly what is at stake.'

Google Earth will now try to buy better satellite images of the Surui reservation from vendors to ramp up the quality of shots that turn extremely blurry when users try to focus in closer on the reservation, Quinn said.

The division of Google also committed to providing "layering" to accompany images of the Indians' land, including photos and other information about "the Surui's struggle to preserve their land and culture," she said. Quinn declined comment on Google Earth's financial commitment, and did not know how often the images of the reservation might be updated once the project gets under way.

Meanwhile, Chief Surui is lobbying for donations of computers and other equipment from companies or non-profit groups, and hopes to persuade the Brazilian government to include his tribe in a new program to provide Indians with satellite Internet connec-

The tribe has already proved its technological prowess, creating sophisticated maps of the reservation after receiving handheld Global Positioning System devices and laptop computers from the Amazon Conservation

'We gave them GPS and told them how to use it and they took it from there," said the group's president, Mark Plotkin.

About 400,000 Brazilian Indians still live on reservations, the majority of them in Amazon rainforest.

Indian reservations are among the best preserved areas of the 1.6 million-square-mile Amazon region, which has lost about 20 percent of its forest cover to loggers and ranchers in recent years. OnNet:the Amazon

Health care reform - just do it

To the Editor:

Isn't it way about time we did this... aren't we all tired of the ever-rising health care costs that have crippled our nation? We must put our health care in the same stature as our worldly neighbors who have successfully covered every citizen without bankrupting them -- France, Canada and even Great Britain have exemplary coverage and it is top-notch care as well. Do it!

Can't hear in court

To the Editor:

Open letter to Yolanda Nunez Judicial Calender Coordinator:

On Monday, May 17, I stopped into your office to tell you that it is impossible to hear what is being said in any of the courtrooms. Because of my age, my hearing is not as good as it was, but it is not that bad, and my son, whose hearing is just fine also cannot hear what's being said in the courtrooms. You said that if I let you know ahead of time you would supply me with the one hearing aid you have. The people who wrote the U.S. Constitution made it very clear that they wanted this country to be an open society, because secrecy leads to bad government. This gadget you can supply does not answer the problem of most people, many with worse hearing than mine, going in and knowing what is being said. That's like watching TV without sound. The only way lawyers, judges, and anybody is held accountable is by the openness of what's happening in our courtrooms, and everywhere. Unfortunately, we are not full of saints in our legal system.

Last year, while being interrogated here in county jail by a detective with only six months on our force about my graffiti in the Philo and Boonville Post Offices, which were respectively "Impeach Bush" and "Impeach Bush, Rainbow of Ft. Bragg for pres.", we were interrupted by Detective Lieutenant Smallcomb, who after greeting me turned to the detective and said "just remember, when talking to Peter, he's a genius.

I now hope to illustrate the point by addressing each subject on your editorial page of Tuesday June 5.

Hemp is hemp is hemp, and is a documented medicine for so many illnesses. Its efficiency is not in question scientifically. It was included in the American books of pharmaceuticals up until 1936, when Randolph Hearst and criminal corporations succeeded in having it made illegal and classed a drug or narcotic. There are three species of cannabis: Indica, Sativa, and Rudaralis. I have grown and profited from all three in the 1980s. I did not get rich as that was never my goal.

It is true, Jimmy Rickel and Carrie Jungworth, that legal medical hemp has and is being taken advantage of by unscrupulous greedy people. However, it is also true that millions of people benefit from its daily or occasional use. Period. Young people are smart, and know full well the dangers of truly dangerous drugs like meth, heroin, cocaine, alcohol and nicotine. Also caffeine, for that matter.

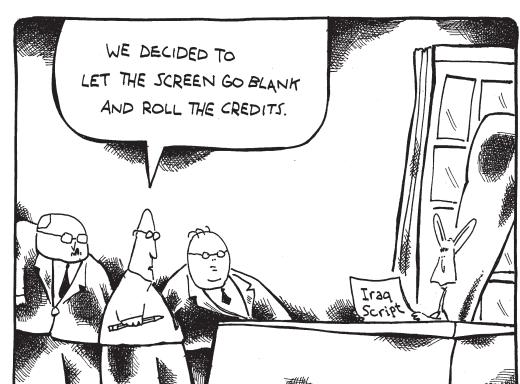

In 2005 I worked as an outreach worker on the coast for the Mental Health Department and my 40.5 cents mileage was more than enough. This year I get mileage from A Healing Cooperative for a training I'm taking in Willits, and the $34 for a 77mile round trip is more than sufficient. I say no raise for the supervisors, who in my opinion are lazy on the job, and absolutely no increase in mileage reimbursement.

My first job at 11 for babysitting paid 35 cents an hour; my first neighborhood gardening job paid 50 cents an hour. My first part-time job as an usher/doorman/candy counterman for Fox West Coast Theaters paid minimum wage, 75 cents an hour, and so on and so on.

As a Private First Class in the 504th Airborne in Germany, where I was victim of an extension to my three-year Army enlistment, my pay was less than $300 a month, including jump pay.

LETTER POLICY

The Daily Journal welcomes letters to the editor. All letters must include a clear name, signature, return address and phone number. Letters chosen for publication are generally published in the order they are received, but shorter, concise letters are given preference. We publish most of the letters we receive, but we cannot guarantee publication. Names will not be withheld for any reason. If we are aware that you are connected to a local organization or are an elected official writing about the organization or body on which you serve, that will be included in your signature. All letters are subject to editing without notice. You may drop letters off at our office at 590 S. School St., or fax letters to 468-3544, mail to Letters to the Editor, P.O. Box 749, Ukiah, 95482 or e-mail them to udj@pacific.net. E-mail letters should also include hometown and a phone number.

My family business (foreverwater.com) can make ethanol fuel grade for pennies a gallon using any biomass with enough starch. Corn, sugar beets, industrial hemp, emerald triangle throw away leaves, etc etc. No need for LNG or gasoline.

Our water processors can make pure water at the rate of six gallons per day (home unit) 50 gallons per hour, 200 gallons per hour, or more. Info online, prices available from me at 964-6288 (message) or 813-6825 (after June 12). Free or low cost medicine, clean water in any mount, and biofuel for under a dollar a gallon!

The water processors are available now, the alcohol fuel awaits local investors. Think G.P. Mill site, remco site, etc and et.

Supes raise just wrong

To the Editor:

I would like to go on the record as opposed to the raise for the Mendocino County Board of Supervisors. It is morally wrong to vote yourself a raise! Wouldn't we all love to do that! And tie it to judges salaries? While I understand that the role of a Supervisor has changed, they do not have to have college educations or law degrees. They are Joe Blow citizens! How dare they and how can they show their face in public? I have paid taxes in this county for 45 years and think it appropriate to have some say in how our dollars are spent. How can you even think about a raise like this when the county employees in the trenches are always having to deal with cutbacks and layoffs due to lack of revenue? If there is that kind of money in the county budget, why not share it with the employees who work for $30,000 a year and try to make ends meet? This is exactly why Mendocino loses so many competent employees to Sonoma and other counties. (I left Mendocino County employment for state employment to avoid the commute to Sonoma County. My husband, left Mendo County employment and had to bite the bullet and make the drive to Sonoma.) If Mendocino County paid their rank and file employees equal salaries to other counties or maybe just slightly less, they would have their pick of employees because who wouldn't love to live in beautiful Mendocino County if we could survive. Get over yourself! Thank you for letting me voice my opinion.

New school schedule hard on kids, parents

EXCEPT NOBODY WANTS CREDIT.

To the Editor:

I am writing in hopes of reaching parents of school-aged children in Ukiah who may not know about the changes for the upcoming school year 07-08 for the Ukiah Unified School District. In a recent newsletter sent home from my children's school, it states that all times for UUSD schools will change next year. The reason behind the move is to save money in transportation costs.

While I applaud the initiative to save money, I have to question the schedule, which is as follows. The High School will start at 7:30 a.m. and end at 2:40 p.m. (zero period is eliminated). All middle schools will start at 9 a.m. and end at 3:25 p.m. All Elementary schools will start at 8:45 a.m. and end at 2:55 p.m.

I have a hard time believing that this schedule (with all levels starting at the same time) can save money. I would like to see how they came up with the figures on how this will work. It would seem to me that if schools don't stagger schedules you would need that many more buses out on the roads at a given time.

However, that is not my real concern. My main concern is the late starting time for the younger kids. How do they expect those of us who work from 8 to 5 to make sure our kids get to school if we are not home to enforce it? Do the expect those parents who have children in kindergarten (or any elementary grade) to leave the children at home for an hour and get on the bus by themselves? Do they expect working parents to bring our children into work, and then drive them to school at 9 a.m.? Has the UUSD thought through this issue? Are they (UUSD) going to have a before school program as well as an after school program?

As parents, we want to and have a right to know how they plan on making this schedule work and why it would save them money. And why has there not been a letter from the Ukiah Unified School District to all parents informing them of this change? Why are we hearing this through rumors or a small blot on a school newsletter, or as in the case of some schools, not heard about it at all yet?

If as a parent you are wondering how this is going to work for you come next September, I urge you to call UUSD district office today, to voice your concerns.

NAT HENTOFF

Demonizing Israel

I dearly wish I were a member of this British journalists' union, so that I could immediately resign. England's National Union of Journalists is proposing a boycott of Israeli goods to protest Israel's "occupation" of the Palestinians. Anywhere in the world, journalists become untrustworthy advocates if they lose their credibility. The British reporters have done exactly

These British journalists also forget that throughout the world, their peers continually fight -- often against dangerous odds -- for a free press. The National Union of Journalist fails to mention that nowhere in the Middle East or many other places is there a freer press than in Israel, which continually criticizes the government and exposes its deceits and incompetence while also giving voice to supporters of Palestinian rights.

This righteous rush to boycott Israel has infected hordes of previously independent minds not only among British journalists, but also among those at the University and College Union, the largest academic union in the United Kingdom. Sue Blackwell, an activist UCU member, is quoted in the June 2 Financial Times responding to critics of the boycott:

"This is the typical response of the Israeli lobby, which will do anything to avoid debating the real issue -- the 40-year occupation of Palestine.'

A boycott is a debate? How do you debate those with whom you cut off relations?

There are British students of these politically correct academics who are not impressed by the posturing of their teachers who rail against "the complicity of Israeli academia in the occupation of (Palestinian land.)" Declares the national Union of Students, in "(A) boycott undermines the Israeli academics who support Palestinian rights -- and hinders the building of bridges between Israelis and Palestinians." If any of the members of this clear-eyed students' union are in the classes conducted by the boycotting professors and lecturers, I hope their grades will not be affected by their libertarian heresy.

The University and College Union, meanwhile, is encouraging all its members to "consider the moral implications of existing and proposed links with Israeli academic institutions.

I find it peculiar -- not necessarily anti-Semitic -that these acutely sensitive moralists are boycotting only Israel. Their indignation does not include academics in Gen. Omar al-Bashir's Sudan, Russia, or those still loyal to Zimbabwe's "liberator," Robert Mugabe.

And consider the perils of bravely independent academics in Egypt, Syria, Saudi Arabia and Burma, among other governments intent on controlling their citizens' minds. Iran is another country where academics who speak too freely may no longer be literally free, as well as tortured.

Also with regard to Iran, I assume that members of the British University and College Union are concerned with students' academic freedom. And as the May 31 Jerusalem Post suggests, these eager purifiers of Israeli universities might reach out to the "the brave Iranian students who just three weeks ago were brutally attacked as they sought to hold elections for their pro-democratic organizations.'

Israeli students, including the Palestinians among them, are not muzzled, let along clubbed, when they express differences with the Israel government's poli-

But in England, the boycott fever mounts. There are British doctors and architects mulling boycotts of their counterparts in Israel; and The New York Sun's exemplary journalist, Benny Avni, reports (June 1-3) that the largest British labor union, the 1.5 million member UNISON, has threatened to launch a drive to boycott Israel. ... None of the unions has called for similar boycotts against Sudan, Burma, Russia, China or other human rights violators.'

If this mighty union enacts a boycott, none of its pension funds could be invested in Israel -- and its members would be prohibited from buying Israeli goods. Possibly if UNISON has members in British stores who recognize erring fellow workers buying anything Israeli, maybe they'll dutifully report and blacklist these betrayers of lockstep labor solidarity.

During this rising zeal of British boycotters to demonstrate their moral superiority to Israeli academics, labor union members, doctors and architects, I expect the democratically elected Palestinian leaders of Hamas will applaud their support but will continue to absolutely oppose the very existence of the state of Israel. So what effect are these boycotts supposed to have -- except to make these compassionate humanrights inspectors feel good about themselves?

Yahoo replaces CEO Terry Semel; co-founder takes over

By MICHAEL LIEDTKE AP Business Writer

SAN FRANCISCO -- Yahoo Inc. Chairman Terry Semel stepped down as chief executive in a surprise move Monday, ending his increasingly ineffectual pursuit of online search leader Google Inc. -- a losing battle that had demoralized Yahoo's shareholders and employees.

The Sunnyvale-based company appointed cofounder Jerry Yang as its new CEO and named Susan Decker as its president. Decker, who had been touted as Semel's heir apparent, was recently promoted from Yahoo's chief financial officer to oversee the company's advertising operations.

Semel, 64, will remain chairman in a non-executive role after spending the past six years running the company.

"I saw myself as more of a coach than a player going forward," Semel told analysts and media during a Monday conference call.

Signaling Semel's decision was voluntary, Yahoo said he will not receive a severance package. The former movie studio executive already has made a fortune since joining Yahoo in May 2001, having realized nearly $450 million in gains by exercising some of the stock options that he received during his tenure.

Despite Yahoo's recent struggles, Semel received another big bundle of stock options last year that boosted the value of his 2006 compensation package to $71.7 million. That was more than any other CEO among 386 publicly held companies covered in an Associated Press analysis of executive compensation using new rules dictated by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

In Monday's conference call, an emotional Yang hailed Semel as "a role model and mentor" and then sought to defuse recent speculation that Yahoo might be sold to Microsoft Corp. or another suitor hoping to exploit the recent turmoil at the company.

"I am totally excited and energized about assuming the leadership of this great company," Yang said. "We have a long and prosperous future if we execute correctly."

Yang, 38, still owns a 4 percent stake in the company. Fellow co-founder David Filo, who is helping to run Yahoo's technology group after the sudden retirement of the department's leader earlier this month, owns a 6 percent stake.

Monday's shake-up unfolded less than a week after Semel faced off with shareholders disillusioned with a nearly 30 percent drop in Yahoo's stock price during the past 18 months as its financial growth fell further behind Google's torrid pace. Mountain View-based Google now makes more money in a single quarter than Yahoo does in an entire year. The contrast represents a startling comedown for Yahoo, which was the larger of the two companies when Google went public in August 2004.

Since then, Google has steadily expanded upon the Internet's largest advertising network to create nearly $140 billion in shareholder wealth as its stock price increased by more than six-fold. Yahoo's stock, meanwhile, is worth a little bit less than when Google went public.

Vitamin D's for Dad

Q: My 78-year-old father, who lives with me, has been diagnosed with osteopenia, described by his doctor as a mild thinning of the bones -not as severe as osteoporosis but perhaps the first step toward it. The doctor told me to try to increase his calcium intake, but then a friend told me that Dad may need more vitamin D. The doctor didn't mention this to me and has not returned my call. Do you know where I could find good information on this?

A: Based on the information we have found, it appears that your friend is correct. Because Vitamin D promotes the absorption of calcium, a Vitamin D deficiency contributes to osteoporosis.

According to the National Institutes of Health (NIH), people with vitamin D insufficiency absorb less than 10 percent of available calcium. In other words, even if you have an adequate intake of calcium (which for men and women over 50 is 1,200 mg daily), you might not absorb it effectively if you have low levels of vitamin D. Vitamin D deficiency is most often seen in post-menopausal women and older adults. (It's estimated that as many as 30 to 40 percent of older adults with hip fractures are vitamin D insufficient. The insufficiency rate is especially high among the elderly living in nursing homes.)

While most people know that women are at risk for osteoporosis, only 39 percent of Americans believe the same to be true for men, according to a recent study brought to our attention by Tropicana, the orange juice maker. But 20 percent of those affected by osteoporosis are men. So while your Dad doesn't yet have osteoporosis, he could be at risk for the disease, defined as having low bone density and therefore having bones that are prone to shatter.

Next steps By Jan Warner and Jan Collins

How much Vitamin D is enough? At the moment, most medical authorities say that average adults need 200 IU (International Units) of Vitamin D daily, while adults over age 50 need 400 IU and people over 70 years of age need 600 IU daily. (The upper safe level of vitamin D, according to Dr. Mark Andon, director of nutrition for Tropicana, is 2,000 IU daily.)

How does one get an adequate amount of vitamin D? Sunshine is a significant source, and 10-15 minutes of sun exposure at least twice a week to the face, arms, hands or back is usually sufficient to provide adequate vitamin D, says the NIH. But if you slather on sunscreen with a sun protection factor (SPF) of 8 or greater to block the sun's UV rays -- and this is very important to protect against skin cancer -- the ability of the body to synthesize the rays into vitamin D is blocked. So, if you choose the sun route to get enough vitamin D, follow the 10-15 minutes of sun exposure with a sunscreen of at least 15 SPF to protect yourself from the sun's negative effects.

Something else to know about the sun and vitamin D: as we age and our skin thins, our body's ability to make vitamin D from sunlight decreases, says Dr. Andon. He adds that people living in northern climes will not be able to get as much vitamin D from exposure to the sun as, say, people living near the Equator.

So, how else to obtain vitamin D? There are food sources, such as fortified orange juice, cod liver oil, fatty fish (salmon, tuna, mackerel and sardines), fortified milk and fortified breakfast food products such as yogurt and cereal. But it's often difficult to obtain enough vitamin D from natural food sources. So vitamin D supplements, which you can buy over the counter at pharmacies, health food stores, and supermarkets, are often recommended.

One final note: NIH warns that high caffeine intake (defined as more than 300 mg per day of caffeine, equivalent to approximately 18 ounces of caffeinated coffee) may accelerate bone loss, because caffeine is thought to inhibit vitamin D receptors.

A new study released earlier this month out of Creighton University in Omaha indicates that high amounts of Vitamin D may well reduce the risk of several types of cancer for older women by 60 percent. The amount of Vitamin D used in the study was 1,000 IU daily, and more studies are needed to determine whether the study holds true for large groups of men as well as women, researchers say. Still, the study results are considered significant.

council held private interviews with five of the Democratic candidates in May and plans to do more in July.

National Education Association President Reg Weaver points out even today that Democratic presidential candidate John Kerry didn't come to their representative assembly. Kerry had a good reason, though. It was the same day he announced that Edwards would be his running mate, Weaver said.

Still, it "really, really did not sit well with people," said Weaver, who expects six or seven candidates to show up at the meeting in Philadelphia the first week in July.

Despite their shrinking numbers, union support is still vital for Democrats.

Last year, there were 15.4 million union members, making up 12 percent of the work force. That's down from a high of 21 million union workers in 1978.

But organized labor is still a key fundraising target for Democrats. In the 2004 elections, organized labor gave $53.6 million to Democratic candidates and party committees in a losing effort to capture both the White House and Congress, according to the Center for Responsive Politics.

Unions expect to surpass both numbers for the 2008 elections, an amount any of the Democratic candidates would covet. Yet the money is only one aspect, said Richard Hurd, professor of labor studies at Cornell University.

"More important is the people to work on the ground campaigns. That's where the labor movement excels," Hurd said. "And even though the numbers have declined in terms of labor's membership, the effectiveness of unions at getting their members to volunteer and work on campaigns and turning out members and actually influencing the votes of nonmembers, all of that has improved."

Despite all the candidates' wooing, there's no guarantee that the major unions will endorse anyone, at least before the Democratic primary is over.

They don't have a great track record of picking a winner recently: The only union endorsing Kerry early in his 2004 run for president was the International Association of Fire Fighters. Most instead endorsed former Missouri Rep. Dick Gephardt or former Vermont Gov. Howard Dean, neither of whom made it out of the early primaries.

"The risk with an early endorsement is that the early endorsement flames out, and you're left with no one owing you anything," said Gary Chaison, professor of industrial relations at Clark University.

The AFL-CIO, the nation's largest federation of labor unions, didn't endorse anyone in the primary last time. Its rules say two-thirds of the individual unions that make up the AFL-CIO must agree on a candidate before an endorsement, and that didn't happen.

Other unions seem to be considering that route.

"With so many friends of labor on the Democratic side, we have not determined whether or not we will move forward with an endorsement process at this time," said Bret Caldwell, spokesman for the International Brotherhood of Teamsters.

Added McElroy: "Part of this is electability. Everybody wants to be in on the right horse. But I'm not as worried about that as I am worried about making sure that whoever we end up behind is basically in support of the values we hold near and dear, and also is somebody who can win."

Beckham still set to join Galaxy in mid-July

By BETH HARRIS

AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES — David Beckham is still expected to join the Los Angeles Galaxy in mid-July despite an ankle injury sustained in his final game with Real Madrid.

Beckham ended a four-year stint with the Spanish club Sunday, leaving in the second half of its 3-1 victory over Mallorca that clinched the Spanish League title on the final day of the season.

He originally injured his off," Lalas said. "Everything qualifier on June 6 and it flared up again Sunday.

"I felt it snap again," Beckham said. "There was a lot of pain."

Galaxy general manager Alexi Lalas said the team has been in contact with Beckham's camp.

"We are confident he's getting the treatment necessary for an injury that we believe is going to require some time left ankle playing for England in a European Championship we've heard is he just needs some time, and luckily he has time."

Because Beckham's contract with Real Madrid runs through June 30, Lalas declined to comment in detail on Beckham's treatment or give a timetable for his recovery. But Lalas said it won't delay his mid-July arrival in Los Angeles.

The Galaxy is waiting for the expiration of Beckham's Real Madrid contract to announce the date of his first star leagues around the game with the MLS team.

Lalas also clarified comments published Tuesday in London's The Guardian and The Mirror newspapers in which he called England's Premier League "an interior product."

"I have a tremendous amount of respect for English football, but I stand by my comments and my belief that Major League Soccer is as good, and in many cases, better than some of the perceived world," Lalas said.

He finds overseas suggestions that Beckham is going into semiretirement by joining MLS to be annoying.

"This is something, as American soccer players, we've had to deal with for years. It's an ignorance fueled by an arrogance," said Lalas, a former star on the U.S. national team. "We understand it. We still have a long way to go. I make no apologies for supporting a league and a sport that I completely believe in."

Owls and Beavers rest without elimination stresses

By OSKAR GARCIA

OMAHA, Neb. — Oregon State and Rice both had a chance to relax Tuesday, knowing they were one win away from the championship game of the College World Series.

And as long as his team plays well, OSU coach Pat Casey doesn't care how his players spend their free time.

"I'm not worried about what our guys are doing before the game, I'm really not worried," Casey said. "If Darwin (Barney) likes to text message somebody and somebody else likes to sleep somebody else likes to play ping pong and I like to watch video of the other team — I ask them when they cross the line that we're going to do it together."

Both teams practiced Tuesday. Rice, which last played Sunday in a 14-4 win against North Carolina, visited an orphanage Monday and Wednesday's game, freshman third baseman Diego Seastrunk said.

"We're not getting into too much," he said. "I think we're going to have an autograph session for most of the guys. Nothing too stressful, just trying to keep everybody relaxed."

But the Owls still paid attention to the game, listening on the radio and watching on TV to learn they would play North Carolina again.

"We went and ate at some steak place and watched some of it there, then watched the rest of it at the hotel," Seastrunk said. Tuesday's day off was a welcome change for Oregon State, a team that spent most of the series last year trying to stave off elimination.

"Having this day off is just going to be relaxing," Barney said. "It's nice to be able to watch the club that you're going to play, just get mental nator for baseball umpires. Five more players were hit by pitches Tuesday in the North Carolina-Louisville game, bringing the nine-game CWS total to 33 hit batsmen

Highway for Olympic torch

By SCOTT McDONALD

BEIJING — China plans to build a highway on the side of Mount Everest to ease the Olympic torch's journey to the peak of the world's tallest mountain before the 2008 Beijing Games, state media reported Tuesday.

Construction of the road, budgeted at $19.7 million would turn a 67-mile rough path from the foot of the mountain to a base camp at 17,060 feet "into a blacktop highway fenced by undulating guardrails," the Xinhua News Agency said.

Xinhua said construction, which would start next week, would take about four months. The new highway would become a major route for tourists and mountaineers, it said.

In April, organizers for the Beijing Summer Olympics announced ambitious plans for the longest torch relay in Olympic history — an 85,000-mile, 130-day route that would cross five continents and reach the 29,035foot summit of Everest.

Taking the Olympic torch to the top of the mountain, seen by some as a way for Beijing to underscore its claims to Tibet, is expected to be one of the relay's highlights.

China says it has ruled Tibet for centuries, although many Tibetans say their homeland was essentially an independent state for most of that time. Chinese communist troops occupied Tibet in 1951, and Beijing continues to rule the region with a heavy hand.

The day before the route of the torch relay was announced by the Beijing organizers of the Olympics, five Americans unfurled banners at a base camp calling for an independent Tibet.

The five, from the Students for a Free Tibet group, were briefly held and then expelled from China.

Officials from the Beijing organizing committee did not immediately return phone calls asking for comment.

Ed Viesturs, one of the most accomplished American climbers, said he thought a paved road, as opposed to the current dirt one, might make access to base camp easier for tour groups, but he did not climbers will be attracted to think it would affect climbers significantly. "It's not going to matter to a climber whether it's paved or not," he said. "Big deal."

Viesturs, who has summitted Everest six times, noted that no matter how well maintained the road is, climbers must ascend slowly to give them time to acclimatize to the steadily dropping oxygen

Associated Press Writer Although he acknowledged that the bumpy, dusty ride up to base camp on the north face of the mountain helps to make "you feel like you're in the middle of nowhere," he was reluctant to criticize the plan. "I can't make a decision to say it's good for me to be alone. That's hypocritical," Viesturs said. "I know it would be nice to have less people there, but that's self-

Viesturs added climbers who prefer trekking to base camp already choose to approach the mountain from the Nepalese side, where there is no road.

Mark Bain, the director of Cornell University's Center for the Environment, said the environmental impact of new roads in relatively pristine areas is more severe than in places where similar infrastructure already exists.

Roads, in general, are a minor source of pollutants, he said, like tire dust, oil and the pavement itself.

The most significant concerns in such projects, however, is that they create "the opportunity for further development," Bain said, like the need for a parking lot at the end of the road and then perhaps a restaurant.

Phil Powers, executive director of the American Alpine Club, said he also was concerned the road would be going into an "arid and fragile environment.'

"Any time the margins of the wildernesses of the world get encroached upon, we get concerned," Powers said.

Matt Schonwald, the North America program director for MountainMadness.com, said Everest, at least on the Tibetan side, is no longer the pristine environment many imagine.

"The sanctity left that mountain a long time ago," he said. "The north side is already being exploited by poorly equipped people. That's the tragedy — not the praised the plan. "It is a good thing for the local development and the local people, because more tourists and mountain the region," said Zhang Mingxing, general-secretary of the Tibetan Mountaineering Association.

"The road now is a very shabby. People have to spend one day to get the base from the foot of the mountain. Mountain climbers will be able to save their energy for climbing," Zhang said.

Willis has bright future with 49ers

By GREG BEACHAM AP Sports Writer

SANTA CLARA — Mike Singletary didn't say a word to Patrick Willis during the first week they knew each

These days, the Hall of Fame linebacker can't stop talking to his new protege with the San Francisco 49ers.

"The 49ers' coaching staff was coaching us at the Senior Bowl (in January), and Coach Singletary was always working with somebody else," Willis said with a shrug. "I didn't know what to think about it."

There's no ambiguity now: Willis, the former Mississippi standout chosen to be a cornerstone of San Francisco's defense, is a masterwork in progress for Singletary and coach Mike Nolan, a longtime defensive coordinator. Nolan coached Baltimore's Ray Lewis — whose No. 52 is conspicuously on Willis' red jerseys.

During almost every recent practice at the 49ers' training complex, Singletary provided several daily earfuls of private instruction for the highestprofile pupil of his three years in San Francisco.

"He's going to coach you to perfection," Willis said. "He never throws it in your face, saying, 'I did this when I played. I won the Super Bowl.' He's just here to help you be the best."

And if Willis is to become the leader and signal-caller of the 49ers' defense, he believes he'll need all the help he can icon, epitomizing defensive intensity — but his new goal is to calmly transform an eager 22-year-old with stunning athleticism into a complete player.

"He's a good student," said Singletary, who learned plenty about Willis at the Senior Bowl without any real conversation. "He wants to improve, and he wants to be a great player in this league. He's a young player who can do some great things for us.'

Though the 49ers expect their draft prize to begin his NFL career as a backup, Willis is in competition for playing time at inside linebacker with Derek Smith, the 49ers' longtime leading tackler and defensive signal-caller who struggled with a nowhealed eye injury last season.

When Willis first realized the 49ers might be interested in choosing him, he didn't know the names of any of San Francisco's linebackers except Manny Lawson, a converted defensive end chosen in the first round in 2006.

Though largely unknown outside the San Francisco Bay area, Smith has been a tremendously productive linebacker throughout his lengthy career with the Redskins and the 49ers — just the kind of player Willis hopes to emu-

"I looked at his numbers, and I was like, this guy is for real," said Willis, who won the Butkus Award last season as the nation's top linebacker. "Derek is a great guy. I didn't know he's been in the league get. Singletary still is an NFL for as long as he has. My head was spinning for a while, but Derek and Manny and the other guys here make sure I'm doing it right."

Willis' teammates also are watching over him off the field, where the native Southerner is getting used to Northern California's chilly nights. When the 49ers wrap up workouts on Thursday, Willis plans to make a quick trip back East before returning in early July to get back to work in Santa Clara.

While his agents work on a contract, Willis hopes to finish the offseason strong.

His goal at Ole Miss was to make at least one spectacular play per practice — an interception, a forced fumble or a display of the athleticism that made him the 11th overall pick in April's draft. Big plays aren't as easy while wearing the 49ers' helmet and shorts.

"You've got so much to learn," Willis said. "You've got to have everything down, especially at the position I play. I always thought I had the athletic ability to play at this level, but now I'm seeing that the mental part of the game is so crucial.'

Notes: DT Ronald Fields bruised his elbow during Tuesday's workouts. He's expected to be fine. Nolan said OL Justin Smiley went home to Georgia to deal with an issue in his family.

Schmidt to have shoulder surgery in his labrum and will be out TORONTO indefinitely.

Associated Press

Angeles Dodgers right-hander Jason Schmidt will have shoulder surgery in Los Angeles on Wednesday and his return date is uncertain.

"It's very discouraging," Dodgers general manager Ned Colletti said before Tuesday's game in Toronto.

Schmidt, who signed a $47 million, three-year contract as a free agent during the offseason, was placed on the disabled list in April with bursitis in his shoulder after going 1-2 with a 7.36 ERA in three

Following a 45-game absence, Schmidt returned June 5 and threw six shutout innings in San Diego, consistently reaching 89 mph and topping out at 91 mph.

But the 34-year-old rightas well in his last two starts, and his velocity was down.

Saturday's game that he was still not at full strength.

"I just haven't felt like myself," he said.

Schmidt was placed on the disabled list Monday and utilityman Marlon Anderson was activated from the disabled list to take his place.

Also Tuesday, the Dodgers announced that right-hander Yhency Brazoban will have surgery Friday to repair a tear

"The timing on him coming back doesn't look that good,' manager Grady Little said. Brazoban, who missed 29 hander didn't perform nearly Jason Schmidt had another tough day on June 10, as the Blue Jays had a five run precarious endeavor," he said. Schmidt admitted after fifth inning and beat the Dodgers 11-5.

> games earlier his year because of a sore elbow, has appeared in just four games for Los Angeles this season, allowing three runs in 1 2-3 innings.

Despite the rash of injuries to its pitching staff, Los Angeles is ranked second in the National League with a team ERA of 3.67.

"The pitching has been solid, whether it's the starters or the relievers," Colletti said. "We asked the starters in the winter to give us more innings, to give the bullpen a chance to catch its breath once in a while, and they have."

Of greater concern to Colletti is the offense. Los Angeles has a team batting average of .259 and has scored just 294 runs, the fifthlowest total in the NL.

"Our primary objective is a way to jump-start the offense, whether it's internally with the younger players or going outside (through a trade), Colletti said.

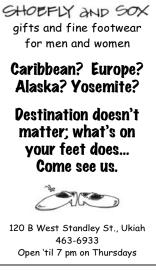

Colletti said a trade would not be his first choice.

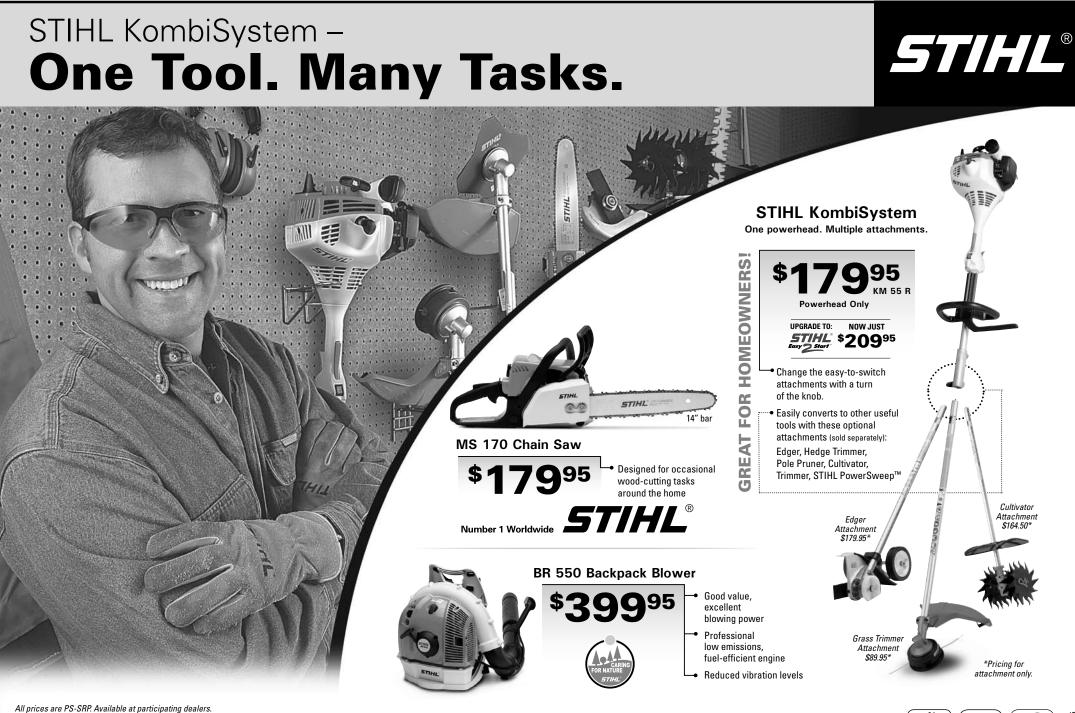

"I still find the outside a Those players you think you might be able to acquire are struggling through really down years, really uncharacteristic type years, but the asking-price is still as if they were on their way to the All-Star game.'

ASTROGRAPH

By Bernice Bede Osol

Thursday, June 21, 2007 Conditions that have a direct bearing upon your work or career will be quite promising for you in the year ahead. Your chances for bettering yourself in work-related situations will be heightened and rewarded accordingly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) -- Don't waste your time on petty activities because you tend to operate better in areas where your targets are meaningful. Pursue objectives that assure large returns for effort expended.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) --Trust your thinking and have faith in your assessments of the conditions at hand. If you keep a positive mind-set, vou will see windows of opportunities where others only see problems.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) -- You should be able to comfortably alter a ticklish situation with one who shares a joint interest with you. Do it now while the conditions support what you're attempting to change.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) -- Deal with others in a thoughtful, diplomatic manner, which will instill a desire in them to treat you similarly. With each party willing to cooperate, your joint affairs will turn out well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) -- Those ugly tasks that, up until now, you've been reluctant to tackle because you felt they were just too challenging or demanding will not be that threatening for you. Move on them now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) - Others will revere any compliments you extend because they'll recognize that what you say is what you truly mean, and you're not simply voicing niceties for the effects.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) -- Events will play a hand in how your affairs turn out, but it'll all be good. Things should work out to your complete satisfaction, especially if there is something personal at stake.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) -- Thinking big is something that usually comes natural to you. What looks like a grandiose scheme to others will be well within your capabilities to carry out and find success.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) -- Again, your material prospects will be favorably trending to your liking. Something that doesn't look possible to others will develop for you through a rather circuitous route.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) -- Something new and different might attract your fancy. It will be worth exploring to see if it could possibly be the purveyor of an opportunity that can be developed and nurtured.

TAURUS (April 20-May

20) -- The good that befalls you might not come through your own efforts but from events or happenings over which you have little or no control. Make the most of what's handed to you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) -- A friend with whom you are presently involved may be destined to play an active role in your personal affairs. Your pal will put himself out for you, as you once did for him.

Don't sympathize too much, or Tandy will see herself only as a victim. Be as positive and as empowering as you can. Tandy is not too young to understand that those who demean others are on a power trip, and can only build themselves up by dragging someone else down. And worse, they feed off her reaction. Help her see that these immature girls are not worth her time, energy or emotional investment. Teach her to ignore them and to find other, more decent, classmates to befriend. It's a hard road, but in the long run, she will be better off and can hold her head up with pride.

Dear Asphyxiated: There were some studies done a few years ago that looked for links between cancer and aluminum chlorohydrate in antiperspirants, and parabens in both antiperspirants and deodorants. been a trying year." Volunteer Terry Montgomery runs the "cattery" and the kitten infirmary at the shelter. She volunteers seven days a week, often putting in eight hours a day. She takes kittens home that need to be bottle fed, waking in the night every two hours to provide care.

"We've got more kittens than we have sense," said Montgomery. "Like most shelters across the country we are bursting at the seams. We also have kittens out in foster care.'

Each of these kittens will need to be spayed and neutered and receive a battery of vaccines before being put up for adoption. The costs of this treatment will be covered by the Humane Society, and its only source of income is the kindness of others.

"We have no government funding, no county funding, no state funding," said Mitcham. "We operate strictly on donations, membership and our fundraisers. . . We're hoping the bird houses will be a huge success and we can do this as a yearly thing."

The Humane Society is a no-kill shelter, dedicated to finding a home for all of these kittens. Left on their own in the wild, these kittens would have ended up feral, and been subject to disease, being hit by cars or killed by other animals.

"We've had a number of bottle babies this year." Montgomery said. "They come in, they still have their eyes closed, some of them still have their umbilical cords attached. They're absolute newborns. The biggest tragedy is that they were born in the first place because people don't spay and neuter their pets. It doesn't take very long at all for a feral cat colony to get started."

The Humane Society will be holding its annual board of directors meeting tonight at Selzer Realty on Gobbi Street at 6 p.m. The public is invited to attend. Tonight will also be the drawing for its annual raffle. For more information on these and other programs, call the Humane Society at 485-0123.

between the railroad tracks and businesses on Mason Street, the widest part of the park would be located behind a building, impeding visibility and safety.

The plot selected for the skate park in 2004 -- land the city leases from the NCRA beside the Depot Park on Leslie Street -- ranks first based on the criteria that also includes area for parking, ease of development and room for expansion.

'Our other site has just so much space that there's room for all these other things,' Aleshire said.

She said she's happy to finally see some resolution to the situation, which she estimated delayed the design process approximately four weeks.

"We're excited about moving forward at our site and having this little diversion behind us," Aleshire said.

Wick's request to consider a new location first surfaced at the Ukiah City Council's May 16 meeting, when it was set to select a designer for the skate park. An e-mail from Wick indicated that NWP Co. had an interest in preserving potential business opportunities on the current site and suggested considering the alternative. On June 6, the City Council gave Wick the go-ahead to pursue a feasibili-

With the study -- estimated to take six weeks -- nixed, the design process can now move forward.

Community Services Supervisor Maya Simerson said design firm Wormhoudt, Inc. will hold the first community meeting mid-July to begin the design process.

Pending funding, she said it is still possible that ground will be broken on the 20,000square-foot park before the rainy season begins in the fall.

"The Skate Park Committee is still looking for additional funding in the ballpark of $50,000 to $100,000," Simerson said.

While the committee has met the $214,286 needed in matching funds and non-monetary contributions to release the $500,000 state grant awarded to the park in 2005, the rising cost of construction materials continues increase the amount needed to complete the project.

Donations to the Ukiah Skate Park can be made at the Community Foundation of Mendocino County, 135 W. Gobbi St., Suite 204; the Ukiah Main Street Program office at the Ukiah Conference Center, 200 S. School St.; and at any Ukiah branch of the Savings Bank of Mendocino. Receipts for taxdeduction are available only at the Community Foundation of Mendocino County.

Chamber

That first year, however, some sitting City Council candidates questioned the chamber's right to involve itself in a council election while at the same time accepting funding from the city of Ukiah, an objection the chamber rejected, citing its charter, which it said allows it to express political views. Certain local nonprofit organizations which are prohibited from political activity felt they had to separate from the chamber as a result, and many local business owners who favored difcandidates ferent angered by the chamber's choices.

As it turned out, the three candidates endorsed by the chamber that year -- Kathy Libby and Mary Lindley for

Since then the controversy over the chamber's political activities seems to have died down, but many local businesses still opposed the endorsements.

In fact, said Mosier, it was the results of a recent chamber member survey that convinced the board to discontinber may try hosting political debates or providing candidate questionnaires in the chamber newsletter as an alternative.

Paredes said the driver of the Grand Am would be taken to UVMC to be checked out before being booked into jail.

The driver of the Camry was wearing her seat belt at the time of the accident, and the air bags of both vehicles deployed.

East Gobbi Street was closed briefly while CHP officers investigated the accident.

In terms of education, the report is mixed. It found 82 percent of children are in school in Mendocino County, compared to a state average of 90 percent.

Mendocino County ranked 35 out of 58 counties in the percentage of children ages 3 and 4 years attending preschool, but showed student achievements at higher grades that were lower than state averages.

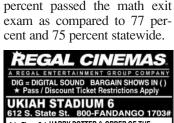

Among children in second through sixth grade, 37 percent were proficient or advanced in English language arts vs. 43 percent statewide.

In the same grade range, 42 percent were proficient or advanced in math compared to 52 percent statewide.

Between seventh and 11th grade, proficiency in language arts rose to 39 percent, vs. 40 percent statewide. Proficiency in math fell to 23 percent vs. 28 percent statewide.

5-25,6-1,8/07 NOTICE OF PROPERTY TAX DELINQUENCY

AND IMPENDING DEFAULT Made pursuant to Sections 3351, Revenue and Taxation Code (DELINQUENCY NOTICES PROVIDED)

I SHARI L. SCHAPMIRE, Mendocino County Tax Collector, State of California,

That at 12:01 a.m. on July 1, 2007, by operation of law, any real property (unless previously tax-defaulted and not redeemed) for which taxes, assessments, and other charges levied for the fiscal year 2006-07 or supplemental taxes levied for any year prior to 2006-07 are delinquent shall be declared tax-defaulted. A detailed list of all property tax-defaulted of July 1, 2007, and not redeemed prior to being submitted for publication, shall be published on or before September 8, 2010. Real property remaining in tax-defaulted status for five or more years will become subject to the tax collector's power to sell. In the case of property upon which a nuisance abatement lien has been recorded, that property shall become subject to the tax collector's power to sell after three years of tax-default. In the case of real property that can serve the public benefit by providing housing or services directly related to low-income persons when three or more years have elapsed and a request has been made by a city, county, city and county, or nonprofit organization, that property will become subject to the tax collector's power to sell. Once subject to the power to sell, real property may be sold at public auction or otherwise conveyed to new ownership.

The owner may avoid the power to sell status by initiating and maintaining an installment plan of redemption prior to the date when the tax collector obtains the power to sell the property or by completely redeeming the property through payment of all unpaid amounts, together with penalties and fees prescribed by law, before the subject property is sold.

The right of redemption survives the property becoming subject to the power to sell, but it terminates at 5 p.m. on the last business day before the actual sale of the property by the tax collector.

Information concerning redemption or the initiation of an installment plan of redemption of tax-defaulted property will be furnished, upon request, by Shari L. Schapmire, 501 Low Gap Road, Room 1060, Ukiah CA 95482, (707) 463-4323.

I certify (or declare) under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. /s/Shari L. Schapmire

Mendocino County Tax Collector

Executed at Ukiah, Mendocino County, California, May 25, 2007 Published in Ukiah Daily Journal on May 25, June 1, & June 8, 2007

NOTICE OF IMPENDING POWER TO SELL TAX-DEFAULTED PROPERTY

Notice is hereby given that real property taxes and assessments on the parcel described below will have been defaulted for five or more years, or in the case of property on which nuisance abatement lien has been recorded or can serve the public benefit by providing housing or services directly related to low-income persons, when three or more years have elapsed and a request has been made by a city, county, city and county, or nonprofit organization, that property will become subject to the tax collector's power to sell. Parcels listed will become subjected to tax collectors power to sell on July 1st, 2007 at 12:01am by operation of law. The tax collectors power to sell will arise unless the property is either redeemed or made subject to an installment plan of redemption initiated as provided by law prior to 5 p.m. on June 29, 2007. The right to an installment plan terminates on June 29, 2007, and after that date the entire balance due must be paid in full to prevent sale of the property at public auction.

The right of redemption survives the property becoming subject to the power to sell, but it terminates at 5 p.m. on the last business day before actual sale of the property by the tax collector.

All information concerning redemption or the initiation of an installment plan of redemption will be furnished, upon request, by Shari L. Schapmire, 501 Low Gap Rd. Room 1060, Ukiah, CA 95482, (707) 463-4323.

The unpaid amount, in dollars and cents, originally declared tax-defaulted is set forth opposite its parcel number. This amount does not include additional defaulted taxes, penalties and fees that have accrued since the date of tax-default. PARCEL NUMBERING SYSTEM EXPLANATION

The Assessor's parcel number (APN), when used to describe property in this list, refers to the assessor's map book, the map page, the block on the map, if applicable, and the individual parcel on the map page or in the block.
