President, Louis H. Buck; Vice President, Gerald D. Stoltz; Secretary, Jeffrey R. Krull, 408 Davis Rd., Mansfield, Ohio 44907: Treasurer, Edwin H. May III; Agent, W. Lawrence Hollar; Planned Giving Chairman. Robert R. Stone

Secretary Krull reports:

Those of you who received my last mailer will know that I messed up this time on my deadline. The mailers went out very late, and only a few faithful classmates managed to get them back in time to include them in this column. This is entirely my fault, and I take full responsibility. I should have lots more to report next time. I do want to thank the people who returned their mailers in record time and prevented a complete washout for '70 in this issue of the Review.

Chip Baker was elected to the Society of University Surgeons in February. The Bakers saw Pete Forssell '71 in New Hampshire for a rainy New Year's celebration, and were skiing at Snowbird in Utah in January. Dan Frost is currently practicing surgical oncology at Southern California Kaiser Permanente Regional Cancer Center. The Frosts are a year into the remodeling of their 50-year-old house in Pasadena, where they entertained the Joel Sklars over New Year's. Dan says he would like to locate Ben Guy '69.

Amy and Phil Geier report: "The Geiers joyfully announce the arrival of son Christopher, born Jan. 21, 1984, who joins siblings Kate (6) and Elizabeth (3) at home in Newfane, Vt. Around that occasion we have seen a number of Ephs, including New Yorkers Michael Goodbody '69, Alan Twaits and John Cornwall, Bostonians Bill Sammons and Peter Navins, mentor Fred Rudolph '42, the peripatetic boatman Jim Slade, Vermont neighbor Mark Richards '67 and New Hampshire neighbor Bill Hamilton." In between reminiscing with old college friends, Phil is vice president for external affairs of the Experiment in International Living and its School for International Training, where Sluggo Stearns got his M.A. I wonder if the Newfane Inn is still there. I remember it from my days with New England Tel. and Tel., where I spent a very brief career eating well and running up outrageous bar bills courtesy of Ma Bell's obliging customers. Such unconscionable behavior! Why, it makes me wonder why I ever left the phone company.

Ray Kimball writes: "I continue to practice communications and administrative law in Washington, and live in Bethesda, Md., with Rosemary and the two kids (Peter, 7, and Elizabeth, 4). I was PTA president for a year, and don't recommend it to anybody! Went to a recent citizens' association meeting, and there was Harvey Levin and his wife, who had just moved into the neighborhood. See Larry Hollar quite often. He coaches a Little League baseball team, and still has visions of playing pro ball. We miss Linda and Tom Crowley, who moved to New York last year. Tom's in corporate development at HBO, and I see him at the cable conventions. We're looking forward to the Reunion next year!"

Reed Gramse will finish his orthopedic residence at Yale in July, and then will be moving to Portland, Maine, to join a group of three other orthopedic surgeons. The Gramses are expecting their third child in August, to join Amanda (4) and Tyler (14 months). Doug Curtiss writes from Avon, Conn.: "Debbie and I have two daughters, Sierra, 3, and Alexandra, 1. It seems like the week before finals, year round Sonitrol Security has prospered, and we've jumped into the telephone free-for-all with Telemax Inc., which installs business telephone systems. See Ted May in Hartford frequently, and Russ MacDonnell down in Stamford. Saw David Norris recently in New York. He had just returned from Botswana, where he supervised construction of a house for the A.I.D. Administration. This is David's first house in his budding architectural career.'

Joel Hoff expects to receive his Ph.D. from Harvard in June, and then will continue to teach French literature to Harvard undergraduates in September. When he wrote to me, he was spending his spring break writing his dissertation, and wondering how he would ever finish it by the end of May.

And that is it for news from classmates. As I said, more next time. For anyone who wants to know. things here in Ohio are going along satisfactorily. We have acquired a professional-quality dart board and some good darts, and I now spend an absurd amount of time every day chunking away while listening to WGCL, my son's favorite Cleveland rock music station. And let me tell you, I'm getting damn good! I'm also becoming very knowledgeable about current rock groups and personalities. Some of this can be attributed to the fact that we are exposed to MTV 18 hours a day. A teenager has a way of making his presence known. Actually, I must say that we have two good kids. Rob will be 15 this fall. He plans to attend a swim camp at Kenyon College this summer, and will play football and swim for his high school again next year. Marla is 11, and is into music in a big way. She plays violin, piano and saxophone. She's also developing into a good basketball player Alice's second year teaching fifth grade at one of the city's toughest elementary schools is going better than her first-at least she's been screaming less lately. And the gin has been lasting a bit longer. As for me, I've just got time for a quick round the clock on the old dart board before bed. Keep the news coming, and so long till next time.

Editor's notes: Neal M. Soss recently joined the First Boston Corporation as a vice president in the Economist Department. He was formerly a vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. From 1982 to 1983 he served as assistant to Chairman Paul Volcker of the Federal Reserve Board. Several years prior to that he was director of the banking research and economic analysis division in the U.S. Office of the Comptroller of the Currency.

Robert R. Stone will take over as senior vice president of the New York City executive recruiting firm Haley Associates at the end of this year. He is currently vice president of another executive search firm, Eastman and Beaudine of New York City. Previously he was an executive in commercial banking and in the pension and group insurance business. He will utilize that background in his new position, working on search assignments in the financial services field.

The following members of the Class are on the "lost list." If you know their whereabouts, please notify the Alumni Office: Christopher B. Bryan, Robert Alan Delfausse, Glenn Forrest, David L. Hegland, Norman I. Hirsch, Karl E. Johnson Jr., Richard E. Levinson, John Love, Ronald X. Massa, James F. Moore, Davidson Norris, John L. Obourn, Fred T. Rhame, David M. Smith, Robin L. Whittlesey, Frank A. Willison.

President, C. Bernard Brush; Vice President, Stephen D. Brown; Secretary, John A. Chambers, R.R. 2—Dingee Rd., South Salem, N.Y. 10590; Treasurer, O. Jackson Sands; Agent, Robert D. Farnham; Planned Giving Chairman, John A. MacKinnon

Secretary Chambers reports:

Just lately, classmates, my mailbox is not bursting with news. Please do not construe that as a complaint, because I am sure the explanation is tied up in your efforts to put Rob Farnham at the top of your mailing list. A very large number of you did so, resulting in a 67 percent participation in the Alumni Fund drive. No mathematician is your Secretary, but isn't that something like two of every three? The dollar total was impressive as well, topping out at over $30,000. That helps keep Williams going, even if some of the lovely old trees along Main Street are gone since our time.

Another piece of good news has come along in the form of a clipping about the marriage of our own Tony Goodwin to Emily Janeway Apthorp on Dec. 17. Dedicated archivists of these notes will remember a recent plug for Tony's book on ski touring, and the fact that he has a most appropriate job managing the Mt. Hovenberg Cross-Country Ski Area in Lake Placid. Tony's spouse is a speechlanguage pathologist, who did her studies at the University of Colorado and the University of Vermont. I wonder if she knows that her husband once snowshoed up and down the roof of the Lansing-Chapman Rink?

The rest of my news is not good. It concerns the death of a classmate, James C. Leake, on Nov. 7. After Williams, Jim earned his doctorate in political science from Boston College. While I cannot offer much more information at this writing, I suspect that my memory of him tallies with most of yours—Jim was the kind of person Luther Mansfield meant to describe when he used the phrase, "a gentleman and a scholar." His loss, while not the first from our number, leaves us poorer in many ways.

Editor's note: The following members of the Class are on the "lost list." If you know their whereabouts, please notify the Alumni Office: David Howard Albert, Andres K. Arbenz, Thomas H. Baker, James F. Dissell II, James C. Fitter Jr., Eugene W. Ford III, David A. Goldenberg, Russell D. Goldsmith, Miguel A. Guzman-Fabian, Thomas H. Martin, William E. Merrick, John T. Plunket Jr., David L. Rogers, John S. Shahan, Carl Stewart, John T. Taylor, Kenneth C. Trian, Court C. Walters.

President, Ronald B. Durning Jr.; Vice President, David Webster; Secretary, Paul J. Isaac, P.O. Box 456, Tuckahoe, N.Y. 10707; Treasurer, John V. E. Brewer; Agent, Robert M. Gordon; Planned Giving Chairman, C. Payson Coleman

Secretary Isaac reports:

For those now sore of pocketbook from Bob Gordon's tender efforts on behalf of the Alumni Fund, take heart. In a recent poll of 662 college presidents by U.S. News & World Report, your humble Alma Mater tied for second place behind Amherst as most esteemed among liberal arts colleges with a national reputation.

Some of our number haven't resisted the siren call of academe. Grant Jeffers, for example, after moving from L.A. on three days notice last summer, is now assistant professor of music at Lycoming College in Williamsport, Pa. Grant, who arrived at Lycoming after receiving a master's degree in French horn at the Cincinnati College Conservatory and a Ph.D. in composition from UCLA, is teaching music theory and electronic music and directing the school band. He describes Williamsport, the Little League capital of the world, as "very pretty and very small." With two children, Maria (7) and David (4), Williamsport has taken some settling into. Says Grant, "I never realized what it's like to shovel walks."

Ernie Wolfe started at the top, with a Winter Study course on utilitarian objects as primitive art, complete with field trip to the Smithsonian and a room-sized exhibit at the College art museum. Ernie liked teaching, although, "Everyone called me 'Mr. Wolfe,' which was terrible." He also reports Dean Hyde did a double take when Ernie arrived. Fresh from his academic endeavors, Ernie has now opened a gallery, Turkana, in Los Angeles.

For those who have awaited the inevitable, Lew Steele made the front page of the Jan. 11 New York Times, blasting an out of court settlement to clean up an Occidental Petroleum chemical dump near Niagara Falls. As lawyer for Niagara Environmental Action, Lew, questioning the technology, asked, "To what extent is this all a gigantic experiment?" As a member of the new public interest law firm of Seeger ('77), Steele and Galeziowski, Lew is still very much involved with environmental concerns. He is now also on the board of directors of the New York State Environmental Planning Lobby, the largest state environmental lobbying group.

Still in relatively pristine environments, Dick Skrocki is still farming, and says his brood is now up to two girls. John Malcolm is also still farming, in Pawlet, Vt.

Mike Blumm is teaching law and doing some pro bono counseling in Portland, Ore. Sal Basta is a staff physician in anaesthesiology at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston. He reports a new baby and a new house out in Andover. Also with a new baby is John King, who reports the arrival of Abigail, now one year old. Brad Paul is still trying to turn the Tenderloin, a.k.a. North of Market Street, in downtown San Francisco, into filet mignon. Reg Pierce has moved in his advertising odyssey from pantyhose to Hellman's Mayonnaise, and is now mastering the arcana of Nehi soda. Bill Greville has moved from Litton to CIT, where he's doing PR in their financial editorial services area.

Julie Rose is still a budget analyst with the State of Texas. Sally Stern says she is "undecided." notes don't indicate whether that is with respect to a career or a contribution. Judith Garlock Cheek opened her own medical practice last year, specializing in Ob/Gyn. Vin Raskopf is running the computer department for a shipping company, and reports two boys. Mary Fillback Widger is working as a librarian at the Rochester Historical Society; she says Stan is practicing corporate law in Rochester. We've got 'em coming and going. Stan gets the rate increase along the Mohawk, and Lew sues to rescind. Jim Marver, adding another chevron, has been named a senior vice president at L.F. Rothschild, Unterberg, Towbin, based in San Francisco. Jim Armstrong just moved to Harper and Row from McGraw-Hill, where he was an editing supervisor.

Chris Cassell, also in publishing, is based in New York as marketing manager for MacMillan's Berlitz line of travel and phrase books. He was delighted to see that in Martha Hamilton-Phillips' ('73) recent Review picture, she had one of their guides to Ireland proudly displayed. Dave Farren uses the guides rather than produces them. As head of overseas textbook sales for Houghton Mifflin, Dave spends about 20 percent of his time traveling overseas, covering what he calls the "8th largest school system" in the country. He says 1983 was a banner year. Dave's wife, Barbara, bore son Adam the day she finished her residency; she is going back for a master's degree in public health. Barbara is now working on a fellowship in infectious diseases at Brown. While overseas Dave saw Sam Moss, his wife and two children, Lauren (1) and Sam (4).

Also in Europe, Barney Feder, who has been regularly gracing The New York Times business section with long feature articles on English bell casters and profiles of the prominent, has been enduring the privations of expatriate life. Reliable sources report that Barney sent out an urgent call for Doobie pads from U.S.-based friends last year.

Also in the press, the Jan. 23 Business Week quoted Kevin Ulmer, vice president of advanced technologies at Genex, a biotechnology company. Kevin's daughter, Ashley, was born the day before the article appeared.

Nick Travis has set up his own venture capital firm in Salt Lake City, specializing in turn-around situations. Kitty and Brad Babson have been busy settling into a new house for the last year and keeping up with their brood, all of whom seem to be playing soccer. Jane Bryson has moved to Los Angeles; she is now a psychologist at Cedars of Lebanon-Mt. Sinai Hospital.

Dave Shawan was caught just as he arrived back from a full Saturday playing Dave Stockman for the Banc One office he manages in Columbus. Tank accompanied Frank Miller when Frank addressed a rotary club in Lancaster, Ohio, to express the Defense Department's viewpoint on strategic arms. Frank apparently does this frequently as part of his DOD work, and Dave reports being mightily impressed with Frank's presentation.

Dan Lindley, an attorney in Wilmington and World Series spectator last year, managed to snag a foul ball during a game while on national TV. It was quite a catch, earning an on the air plaudit from Howard Cosell: "He's not a player, but he's from Williams!" Lindsay Beaman is working as a free-lance writer in Greenbrae, Calif. Peter Adams is working for Fonda Paper Products in New York City. Dan Emery is doing general corporate and environmental law regarding paper companies, air, water and hazardous waste. Ron King is supervisor of analysis at Southern Services, the holding company for Georgia Power in Atlanta. Ron reports receiving his M.B.A. last August.

Toby Garfield is working on his Ph.D. in physical oceanography at University of Rhode Island, and his wife, Paula, is working on her Ph.D. in chemical oceanography at the joint MIT/Woods Hole program. Makes one feel guilty taking an evening out to see Splash

Bob Seebacher is practicing orthopedics in Tarrytown, N.Y. Bob just remarried and built a new house. He also reports working on a greenhouse and generally enjoying life. Phil Youderian has received his Ph.D.; he just moved to Los Angeles as an assistant professor of biological sciences at USC with his own lab. Cindy Tether is working at IBM; after a stint in finance, she has switched to marketing and is now selling computer systems to banks. Dick Easton sold his business and is now a vice president of Land East Co. in Vermont, managing 50,000 acres of timberland and a drying kiln. Dick and his wife just bought 14 acres for themselves and are building a house on it.

Many of our number have become instant parents

—John LuValle has gone one better. Married last July, John says he became an "instant grandparent."
John is working at Jet Propulsion Laboratories in Pasadena on deep space probes. He says his specialty is very long base line infrarometry, and refers the technically adept to a "very good" Scientific American article that appeared in 1965 or 1966. In addition, John has become systems manager for a medium-sized computer at JPL. At JPL a big computer is a Cray.

In his spare time, John and his wife do a lot of bicycle touring. John has run in 13 marathons since graduation, including ones in Athens and Paris. When I caught up with him, he was getting ready for a second hiking trip to the Grand Canyon.

That exhausts my news file. Please think of your humble correspondent the next time you're feeling anecdotal—or this will be a very short column next time around.

Editor's note: The following members of the Class are on the "lost list." If you know their whereabouts, please notify the Alumni Office: Thomas D. Ashman. Edward M. Baran, Larry H. Blassingame, Michael E. Boyd, Leigh M. Freeman, Raymond H. Goodrich III, Margaret Harlam, Mary E. Hetzler, Robert C. Hill, Keith Andrew Hurst, Paul Landau, James C. Lavigne, Fred Santiago, Charles N. Waigi, Irvin W. Weaver, Winston R. Williams.

President, W. Stephen Harty; Vice President, Morris Goodwin Jr.; Secretary, Sandy Read, P.O. Box 4307, Aspen, Colo. 81612; Treasurer and Planned Giving Chairman, Robert B. Koegel; Agent, Thomas M. Hyndman III

Secretary Read reports:

Well, it's 40 degrees out, the sky is Caribbean blue, and we just had a foot of fresh powder. Now that I have caught your attention, I think I'll play hookey and go skiing—just kidding. I know what you're thinking—I spend all my time skiing and cavorting about. Partially true—but I do actually have gainful employment. Somehow in our achievementand career-oriented environment, I never quite imagined that I'd be working in a ski shop. However, what better way to scout around for material for my class notes. You might snicker, but when one leaves the Hub of News (N.Y.C. to most), one has a certain image to maintain. Besides, you'd be amazed at who has unknowingly passed through the portals of L'Equipe, Hyman Mall, Aspen, Colo. (the Frog Team to the locals). As I am typing this column, Robert Wagner and his latest, Jill St. John, have unsuspectingly come into my lair .

Danny Davison '77 said that in December he brunched with John Knapp, who had tap-danced up from Houston to attend an elegant affair given by Duke Bascom, now residing in Fort Worth and lending his advice to Haydn Catler, real estate investors.

Laura and Tom Hyndman spent the night at my abode on their way to Snowmass. Tom has been made district sales manager of the Los Angeles territory for S. D. Warren; therefore, they are moving to the Olympic arena in mid-May. Laura was able to transfer to P & G's L.A. office and, best of all, she wheedled a car out of them. Tom's new area will be southern California, Phoenix, Tucson and Las Vegas ... need we say more?

A small gathering at Ellen (sorry about last time) and Rich Muglia's house in Maplewood, N.J., bid adieu to the Hyndman's and welcome to the Muglia's. Sam is keeping Ellen busy while Rich toils away on the legal beat. Speaking of upholders of justice, in appears that, contrary to previous information, Jol Gallagher is an Assistant U.S. Attorney (Steve-Harty said John's FBI clearance took an extra two months because he listed The Prospect Group as references). Bill Cunningham and John are in the same office. Both John and Maureen were in attendance in Maplewood, as were Patti and Marty Doggett, up from Lawrenceville for the occasion.

The following announcements were perused in the national press recently: Steve Hauge, St. Bernard's star teacher, will be formally uniting with Jennifer Chandler, a B.C. law student, on Aug. 12 (no, she is not John Chandler's daughter—but her father's name is James John—is there a link there?). Joe Standart and Clinton Savage did just that in New York on March 15. I am sure that there were a few purple cows grazing through the hors d'oeuvres, but I have yet to hear from them. Alexander Schade Hearne joined Bicky Jr. and his parents, Nancy Schade and Rob Hearne '75, in mid-February. Mom and Dad will be making a pilgrimage from Toronto to Connecticut for Peter "Zac" Zaccagnino's ('75) wedding.

Lawrence E. Heiges (Lar to his friends) has been made a special limited partner at Robertson Colman & Stephens in San Francisco. Steve Cohen, history teacher and now academic dean at The Cambridge School, is the author of Vietnam: an Anthology and Guide to a Television History. It is the textbook that accompanies the 13-part series on PBS, Vietnam: a Television History.

My mailbox has gotten lucky lately. First the bad news: Ernie Wolfe III no longer wishes to be a member of our Class. Instead, he has asked for, and been granted, a transfer to the Class of 1972. We are sorry to loose him. The good news is that Ernie has been very successful in collecting African sculpture. The College art museum just featured his collection in a show entitled Vigango. It was "e exhibition of life-size, commemorative sculpture che Mijikenda of southeastern Kenya," according to the invitation. If you missed it, stop by his gallery, Turkana Fine Arts, the next time you're in L.A.

I received the usual government stationary from Janet Brown, letting me know that she had, once again, a new job. She is now the special assistant to the administrator of ERISA Funds for the Labor Department. (I wonder if you get paid by the number of words in your title?) She and her husband, Michael Brewer '65, have been prepping Elliot Richardson for his run in the Massachusetts Senate race. JB reports that Camille Jensen married Peter Douglas, a lawyer with Davis Polk in N.Y.C. She also said that Ross, Dixon & Masback are so busy they are afraid to answer their phones in case it's a new client. It must be due to that P.R. agent that Skip paid to put that plant in the National Law Journal.

Pamela Hartford and Steve Harty attended the opening of Janet's mother's watercolors show. Steve (who, as McKelden Smith '74 points out, "is not the tallest WHF, but he is taller than William Webster, his boss) is busy traveling and working on the Yale Alumni Fund (tsk-tsk). Pamela is now with the public affairs division of the Wilderness Society, and enjoying herself.

Rob Duisberg dropped me a note to say that he was coming to N.Y.C. and could we get together. I, unfortunately, was out here, so we missed. Rob was back East, for the first time in 10 years, on a mission of academic research for Atari. In a short 10 days, he was visiting New York City, MIT, Atari's Cambridge labs, Yale, Penn, Bucknell and then back to Seattle. Who said academics had an easy life.

And squeaking under the wire, was a letter from Rick Reckman, one of my more creative correspondents. After attending Alan Palevsky's March 10 wedding in Boston, Rick felt moved to say: "Alan married a roller skating instructor he met on th Commons last summer, named Mary Quinella. She's terrific! Chip Horne, Bill (Dr. Feelgood) Bodenstab, Bud Ruf, Jim Clemons '74, Norton Rosenthal, and Tim Tasker were all there (no. Sandy, Tim
