PROPOSAL: Sheriff considering taking over Animal Services, A3

Brakes put on red-light camera repeal

The News Service of Florida

Red-light cameras won't be turned off in Florida this year.

Without enough votes lined up, Senate Transportation Chairman Jeff Brandes put the brakes on a bill (SB 144) that focused on repealing the state's red-light camera law. Instead, he proposed changes to increase regulations on the use of the devices.

But Brandes' Transportation Committee on Wednesday didn't act on the proposed changes, deciding to postpone a vote on his rewritten bill.

"That shows you the power of this (red light camera) industry," said Brandes who maintained his opposition to the Mark Wandall Traffic Safety Act of 2010, the state's red-light camera law, after the postponement. "What you're seeing is municipalities that have become addicted to the funds, and in many of these cities it's not about safety," Brandes added. "It's become a backdoor tax increase." While moving away from a repeal, Brandes proposed changes that would allow new cameras at intersections but only if their use is justified through traffic engineering studies — a requirement that is included in a House bill. Also, money generated from red-light camera tickets would have to be used for traffic safety improvements, and jurisdictions wouldn't be able to use the cameras if they fail to provide annual camera-enforcement reports to the state.

In early February, Brandes and Rep. Frank Artiles, R-Miami, held a press conference in the Capitol

Picture the 226-foottall Florida Citrus Tower in Clermont turned into a giant Muslim Mosque, where an Islamic call to worship would be broadcasted from its speakers across the countryside. It's hard to imagine, but not for longtime resident Greg Homan, who wants to sell the iconic tourist attraction to the city for $2.5 million. Although he's considered putting the tower on the market officially, the thought of unknown private buyers makes > him nervous. "I've always said all along that Clermont, or the Chamber (of Commerce), or something along those lines, should be the next owners of the tower," Homan said, ake County commissioners are moving forward with plans to ban the sale of synthetic marijuana countywide.

Commissioners this week agreed to advertise an ordinance banning the drug, which health experts and the Lake County Sheriff's Office say has an adverse effect on children.

Commonly marketed as potpourri, incense or bath salts, and packaged in colorful cellophane wrappers with brand names like Mr. Happy, synthetic marijuana is frequently sold in convenience stores and smoke shops. Health experts say the substances can cause

Bath salts, meanwhile, are often sold as over-the-counter products used for bathing, but can be swallowed, snorted, smoked or injected to obtain a euphoric effect. Commissioner Sean Parks pushed for the ordinance after hearing about a child who went into cardiac arrest from taking the drug.

"The chemicals we are discussing today pose a big danger to our residents," he said. "They are poisons that are being marketed to our kids. As the father of three young kids, it scares me. I think this will give the sheriff's department a tool to help tackle this issue."

The drugs are sold as "incense," with exotic names like K2, Black Mamba and Spice. Other brands names appear to target children, like Scooby Snacks, Mad Hatter and Joker.

The products are made from crushed leaves or garden trash

"The other thing I thought of is that if I found a worthy private investor of the tower, and they turned around and sold it to a Muslim Mosque, and they did a call to worship off the top of it a couple of times a day ... I'm just throwing (out) an example and not trying to spook you, but it's important for the city that you control it," he told city council members at a workshop this week.

The tower was built in 1956 to allow visitors to observe the miles of Central Florida orange groves before they turned into rooftops. At more than 500 feet above sea level, it is the highest observation point in the state.

The tower was one of several attractions that tourists went out of their way to visit before Walt Disney ever considered building a theme park in Orlando. Other old-time tower's profitability and whether it was the city's place to take on the task of running a business.

Mayor Pro Tem Keith Mullins said he would like to hear what people in the area had to say about the issue.

"I think I'd rather see it in quasi-government hands," he said.

City Manager Darren Gray and Councilman Tim Bates were worried about the cost.

"I agree with Greg that the Citrus Tower is a landmark for us," Gray said. "But I just look at finances and how there are other needs the community wants, and other needs out there, and do we have the funding to actually purchase this?" Gray asked. "... I'm not saying we can't work with other groups."

At the end of the workshop, the consensus among council members — since no votes can be taken at workshops was to advance the issue to a future council meeting, where council members, with public input, can discuss whether or not to purchase.

Youth Substance Abuse Survey of ninth to 12th graders in Lake and Sumter counties found that 5.8 percent of Lake and 4.2 percent of Sumter students reported synthetic marijuana use in the past 30 days. In the first six months of 2012 there were 375 calls per month of people becoming ill on Spice, according to the Florida Poison Information Center.

Those calls are trending upward, according to county officials.

Hillsborough, Broward, Miami-Dade, Hernando and Pasco counties have instituted similar ordinances, and officials claim these laws have been effective in deterring the problem.

In Hillsborough County, the sale of the drug has almost been wiped out, according to Larry McKinnon, detective with the Hillsborough County Sheriff's Office.

If the ordinance is adopted in the county, those who violate it will face a civil fine of $500 for the first offense and $1,000 for any repeat violation within five years of a previous offense, according to the ordinance.

to highlight a report from the Office of Program Policy Analysis & Government Accountability, the Legislature's non-partisan policy office. The report found there were fewer fatalities but more crashes at electronically monitored intersections and that fines issued due to the technology cost motorists nearly $119 million last year.

That is the central question fueling a debate over red light cameras in Clermont. City officials implemented cameras at six intersections in January in what they said was an effort to improve safety at State Road 50 intersections. The public outcry was almost immediate, however. Ninety percent of the more than 3,000 citations issued between early January and mid-February were to motorists turning right on red, which city officials said was not their intent when they installed the cameras. Clermont officials reviewed video of all the infractions and ended up dismissing 70 percent. They further pledged to exercise more discretion in issuing citations for righton-red turns. Sen. Jeff Clemens, a Lake Worth Democrat who made a motion Wednesday for postponement, said the delay will give committee members "time to step back and take a better look at" the proposed changes. Brandes, R-St. Petersburg, views the cameras as simply a revenue generator for local communities. But he acknowledged that there isn't enough support in the Senate to repeal the cameras. That was evident Wednesday when he couldn't get his own

committee to approve three amendments to his rewritten bill. Two of the amendments failed on 4-4 partly line votes, with Republican Senators Greg Evers of Baker and Miguel Diaz de la Portilla of Miami absent. One of those amendments, opposed by the Florida Police Chiefs Association and Florida Sheriffs Association, would have allowed motorists to employ a "rolling stop" at speeds up to 15 mph when taking a right-on-red turns if no pedestrians were in the crosswalk at camera-monitored intersections. The committee also rejected, by a 5-3 vote, an amendment that would have required only warnings to be issued to owners of vehicles caught on camera going through traffic signals 0.5 seconds after the colors changed from yellow to red. Brandes said might reintroduce the amendments when the bill returns next week.

country's most polarizing figures, announced she would run for president in the May 25 vote — a move sure to usher in strong emotions in Ukraine's turbulent politics. Barack President

Obama called the swell of international support a "concrete signal of how the world is united with Ukraine." "The decision to go forward with an IMF program is going to require a lot of courage," Obama said, speaking in Rome. "It will require some tough decisions."

Russia shrugged off the torrent of criticism directed at its annexation of Crimea. President Vladimir Putin's government announced it would set up its own payment system to rival Visa and MasterCard after the two companies pulled their services from some Russian banks in the wake of international sanctions. In a passionate address to parliament in Kiev, Prime Minister Arseniy Yatsenyuk warned that Ukraine was "on the brink of economic and financial bankruptcy" and laid out the fixes needed to put the country back on track. "The time has come to tell the truth, to do difficult and unpopular things," Yatsenyuk said, adding Ukraine was short $25.8 billion — "equivalent to the entire state budget for this year." The IMF loan, which is expected to range between $14 billion and $18 billion, hinges on structural reforms that Ukraine has pledged to undertake.

Ukraine's new government finds itself caught between the demands of international creditors and a restive population that has endured decades of economic stagnation, corruption and mismanagement. The reforms demanded by the IMF — which include raising taxes, freezing the minimum wage and hiking energy prices — will hit households hard and are likely to strain the interim government's tenuous hold on power. Ukraine, a nation of 46 million people, is battling to install a semblance of normalcy since President Viktor Yanukovych was ousted in February after months of protests ignited by his decision to back away from closer relations with the EU and turn toward Russia. Over the last few weeks, an interim government has formed, Ukraine lost Crimea to Russia and further possible military incursions by Russia are feared.

Crews begin the first phase of the Tremain Street Greenway project by installing driveway aprons on the east side of the street and milling asphalt.

MOUNT DORA

Tremain Street to be converted into trail

Beginning Tuesday, Tremain Street from Fifth Avenue to Lincoln Avenue in Mount Dora will be converted from a two-way road to a one-way road in preparation of the Tremain Street Greenway.

The Tremain Street Greenway project involves the conversion of a 12 foot-wide one-way northbound residential street into a 10 footwide multi-use trail, Kelda Senior, the city's public information officer, said in a press release. The trail will be constructed on the west side of the road (current southbound lane), while the east side of the road will remain open for northbound vehicular traffic.

During this transition, Tremain Street will be divided with traffic barrels providing the new one-way road on the east side of the existing road and the construction zone for the future multi-use trail on the west side of the existing road.

Road signs and additional barricades will be installed to provide direction and delineation for the new one-way road. Properties on the west side of Tremain Street will continue to be provided access to the new northbound one-way road across the construction zone throughout the remainder of the project.

Cross street access will also be maintained throughout the duration of the project, except for limited closures which may occur due to construction activity within the vicinity of the cross street.

Those traveling near this section of Tremain Street beginning in April are encouraged to use caution and following traffic signs during this transition period, Senior said.

Gus Gianikas, the city's assistant director of Planning and Development, anticipates the project will take about four months. It is being done in conjunction with stormwater improvements to Seventh Avenue and is being largely funded through $600,000 in grant money. For more information about the

Sheriff may take over Animal Services

LIVI STANFORD | Staff Writer livi.stanford@dailycommercial.com

Commissioner Leslie Campione and Lake County Sheriff Gary Borders have had preliminary talks about having the Sheriff's Office take over the county's troubled Animal Services department.

Campione said this week that she would bring the idea to the full County Commission at its next meeting and make a request to put a proposal together.

"There would have to be performance criteria or specific goals set out that would have to be accomplished," she said of the sheriff taking over the Animal Services. "The euthanization rate and adoption rate continue to be number one concerns of mine."

Borders said in an email statement: "We are willing to work with the county, but we have not been formally approached to take over animal control."

Commissioner Sean Parks said he is also open to the idea.

The proposal comes days after the head of the Animal Services division announced her resignation, citing a tight budget and public pressure over the department's euthanization rate.

of a job," Commissioner Jimmy Conner said of Nason's resigna-

Parks said he was concerned about the treatment shelter employees, such as Nason, receive from the public.

"We need to support our staff better on this issue," he said.

Brenda Weber, president of Misfit Animal Rescue, said she has a great relationship with shelter employees, stating many call her pleading with her to save animals' lives before they are put to sleep.

But the public criticism is only a partial reason for the resignations, county officials said, pointing to funding issues that kept the county from hiring a field supervisor and rescue coordinator to help take the pressure off of the director.

County commissioners agreed in a meeting on March 11 to delay funding those positions until Campione, who proposed funding the rescue coordinator position in making a midyear budget adjustment, said when the board decided not to fund the position immediately, it was the final straw for Nason.

Before Nason assumed the position last May, two critical internal audits in April 2013 cited at least 45 areas for improvement at the shelter. Some of the primary recommendations involved better record keeping and better care of animals.

Since then, the shelter has put in a new computer software system, which keeps better track of animals and is addressing lighting issues in the facility.

But without a rescue coordinator position in place, euthanization numbers could creep back up, according to Linda Coletta, a concerned citizen and president of Hound Haven, a rescue organization.

will pasteurize the sewage, Eco Sciences President Gary Hammond said. The pasteurization process is more eco-friendly than traditional pasteurization that relies on electricity or other energy sources, since the Eco Sciences' process relies on solar energy, he said.

He added Eco Sciences has already filed some of the paperwork with the Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services to register the fertilizer. Hammond said possibilities for the fertilizer other than selling it would be to use it in areas like parks or give it to citizens, but that decision is up to the city.

According to testimony in the trial that started Tuesday, there had been an ongoing dispute between the two men over accusations that Infante had taken sexual advantage of one of Henrickson's relatives after a night of drinking.

Assistant Public Defender Wanda Greene said Henrickson started tormenting his landlord with names such as "queer," "pedophile" and "child rapist."

Infante started an injunction for protection against Henrickson on Oct. 23, 2012 but never completed it.

On Oct. 24, after Henrickson arrived home with his ex-wife and grandchild, the men began to argue. Prosecutors say Infante walked into his home, grabbed a .22-caliber rifle and chased Henrickson around the vehicle while firing several shots.

As he held his grandchild, Henrickson was struck in the back and chest as he tried to hand off the child to his ex-wife.

The defense argued that Infante shot him because he believed Henrickson was going into his vehicle for a gun and that the victim kicked at him.

Infante, who took the stand Wednesday, said he initially didn't claim self-defense when talking to detectives because it would have made him look weak to admit he was afraid of Henrickson. He said he had slept in a closet out of fear.

(Henrickson) "He was capable of killing someone like Pablo Infante and Mr. Infante knew that in his heart and his mind," Carranza said.

No gun was ever found in Henrickson's vehicle and he later died at the hospital. Assistant State Attorney Hugh Bass, who co-prosecuted the case, said Infante had tried to take the law into his own hands and there was a trail of live and spent rounds at the murder scene that indicates Infante was chasing the victim.

"The jury had a tough decision to make," Bass said shortly after leaving the courtroom.

Lake County Sheriff's deputies who arrived on the scene testified Infante told them, "I shot him," and the victim "kept (messing) with him" and "I didn't mean for it to go this far. I just got upset." Deputies say the defendant didn't say anything about self-defense.

Carranza told the jury Thursday during closing arguments that Infante had just moved from Cuba to America in 1995 and didn't know at first that self-defense could be used in this country as justification for killing someone.

Public gets unsearched bags of old U.S. Gov't issued coins Free

U.S. residents rush to claim Unsearched Vault Bags loaded with nearly 100 year old coins issued by the U.S. Gov't, but only those callers who beat the 48 hour order deadline to cover just the $29 shipping, handling and vault processing fee are getting the Unsearched Vault Bags free

NATIONWIDE

Public Release begins 8:30am today

It's like finding buried treasure.

That's because for the next 48 hours Unsearched Vault Bags loaded with nearly 100 year old coins issued by the U.S. Gov't are actually being handed over to U.S. residents for

"There's no telling what you'll find in these Unsearched Vault Bags until you sort through all the coins. That's because after the Vault Bags were loaded with over 100 valuable Wheat Coins issued by the U.S. Gov't the dates were never searched and the Vault Bags were sealed for good. Vault Bags they can get their hands on before they're all gone," said Timothy J. Shissler, Director of Vault Operations for the private World

And here's the best part. Since U.S. residents are getting the Unsearched Vault Bags free they cover just $29 for shipping, handling and vault processing per bag which is a real steal since each bag is loaded with over 100 U.S. Gov't issued coins and just one scarce coin alone, like those shown below could be worth hundreds of dollars in collector value.

The only thing residents need to do is call the Toll Free Hotline at 1-866-205-7852 beginning precisely at 8:30am this morning. Everyone who does is getting the Vault Bags

And remember, these currently circulated coins date clear back to Shissler.

VALUABLE: U.S. residents are scrambling to get their hands on these Unsearched Vault Bags because just one scarce coin alone, like those shown below, could be worth hundreds of dollars in collector value. Public forum requested for Wellness Way plan

ROXANNE BROWN and LIVI STANFORD news@dailycommercial.com

On Tuesday night, Clermont City Council members expressed interest in holding a public forum about the Wellness Way Sector Plan near Clermont to give city officials and the public a chance to weigh in on plans for the 16,000-acre project.

City Manager Darren Gray said he had spoken to Lake County Commissioner Sean Parks, one of the key movers behind the Wellness Way effort, to relay "concerns the council had about public input and the amount of time, that we don't want to be rushed or pushed."

He noted that a consultant working on the plan — a mix of homes and businesses that will transform that corner of the county — has proposed some changes.

"You know when we first heard that, about three or four months ago, by a consultant that came here, we were all not in favor of it the way it was presented."

Gray said the consultant wanted to make that presentation to the county commissioners and to the council at the same time.

After Gray's appeal, the council considered having a regular city council meeting following the presentation, then scheduling a public forum between the county and the city, but that idea was dismissed quickly.

"You know, this is the future of the city and to try to cut and not have any public input is wrong," Councilman Ray Goodgame said.

Council members ultimately agreed to have Gray set up a joint meeting with the county directly following the presentation by the consultant. The meeting with the county could occur on April 22 at the community center rather than the council chambers and would be the night's city council meeting, with the sector plan as the only item on the agenda.

"I don't care what the county commissioners say, the ones that want to stay can stay," Goodgame said. "If they don't want to stay past 6 o'clock then fine, but I think we ought to start at 7 o'clock and have public input and discuss the sector plan and discuss the sector plan with the public, give them our ideas, because they'll probably be a little different than what the county wants to do." Goodgame even said he wouldn't mind foregoing a city meeting on that night to have the joint meeting instead.

Goodgame, however, expressed reservations about whether the county was really interested in the city's opinions about the project, or those of Clermont residents.

"I don't think the county wants to hear what we have to say," he said.

Councilman Rick Van Wagner agreed with Goodgame and said it's exactly why the joint meeting and public forum is a must.

However, county officials said it is premature to say Clermont's concerns have not been heard because the plan has not been finalized.

There have been several public meetings on Wellness Way, county officials also said, where public comment has been allowed.

"The concerns that were raised by the city of Clermont and residents several months ago were all heard by our staff," Commissioner Leslie Campione said. "I don't think anyone is withholding information. The final product is going to be presented to both boards on April 22."

Campione added, "There were a series of public meetings so we could get input from property owners, stakeholders, and everyone that cared enough to attend those meetings had an opportunity to have their concerns heard. There has been an ample opportunity for concerns and issues to be raised."

There will be a public hearing on the plan before it is adopted.

Speed limit bill racing through Senate measure (SB 392) that

JIM TURNER

News Service of Florida

A measure that could raise the speed limits by 5 mph on Florida roads zipped through its final Senate stop on Thursday, despite bumping up against Appropriations Committee Chairman Joe w.

With a 15-4 vote, the panel approved the directs the state Department of Transportation to determine the safe minimum and maximum speed limits on all divided highways that have at least four lanes.

Supporters of the bill say many drivers are already going faster than the current top rate of 70 mph. But critics, including Negron, say increasing speeds could lead to more accidents.

R-Stuart, Negron, contends that government-imposed speed limits have helped decrease highway injuries and fatalities because studies show that drivers have a greater likelihood of crashing at higher speeds.

"I think that once you start getting into the 80s and 90s that the opportunity for serious injury and death go up significantly," said Negron, who noted that many motorists already drive nine to 10 mph above the posted limit. The bill could eventually allow state transportation officials to increase speed limits on Florida's "limited access highways" to 75 mph and raise the maximum posted limits on divided four-lane highways in sparsely populated rural areas from 65 mph to 70 mph. The transportation department could hike speeds to 60 mph on other roads they deem safe. And the department would also have the authority to set minimum speeds on certain highways.

"What's important is that people travel at the same speeds," Sen. Jeff Clemens, a Lake Worth Democrat and co-sponsor of the bill, said after the meeting. "If you have people who are able to travel at a much higher speed, traveling with people who are traveling at a much lower speed, that's what's actually creating a much more dangerous situation on our highways."

SANFORD — Finishing strong.

The idea of players ending a game with as much — or more — intensity than they started the game with, is what every coach drives his players to achieve.

The Eustis baseball team likely made coach David Lee happy with its effort in Thursday's Florida League High School Invitational tournament game against Hollywood McArthur Michael Koenig hit a walk off tworun homer and Wesley Moulden tossed a one hitter to lead the Panthers to a 10-0 win. The game was stopped after five innings, due to the 10run mercy rule.

No. 10 Stanford (23-13) had the superior post play, but it wasn't enough. Chasson Randle led the Cardinal with 21 points, but shot 5 of 21 from the field. Dwight Powell added 17 and Stefan Nastic — who fouled out with more than five minutes left — had 15.

Kentucky, Louisville rekindle Bluegrass rivalry

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS John Calipari sent Andrew and Aaron Harrison and three other freshmen to sit behind the microphones quesand answer tions about Kentucky's upcoming Sweet 16 matchup against Bluegrass State rival Louisville.

Rick Pitino sent up seniors Russ Smith and Luke Hancock.

That, as much as the 70 miles that separates the schools, is the gulf between the neighbors who play today in one of the most important meetings in their long, colorful and not-sofriendly rivalry.

Eighth-seeded Kentucky plays the oneand-done game and won a title that way in 2012. Fourth-seeded Louisville goes for a more long-term approach and took home its own championship trophy last season.

"There's so many arguments," Pitino said. I think the best of all worlds, me personally, I would like to see exactly what football has."

Whether they stay a minimum of three (football), one years year (basketball) or something else, the issue of how athletes fit into a college campus was thrust into the spotlight by this week's Louisville head coach Rick Pitino talks to his players during Thursday's practice for the NCAA Midwest Regional semifinals in Indianapolis. Louisville plays Kentucky today.

National Labor Relations Board decision that defined football players at Northwestern as employees.

Neither coach would bite when asked how they felt about the ruling. "Has nothing to do with this game, so I leave it alone," Calipari said.

But both are well aware of the business side of their game that fosters the tenuous relationships between players, coaches and schools. The one-anddone rule has been key in Calipari's re-emergence as a Final Four coach over the last six years, and has weighed on the minds of other coaches, like Pitino, who don't land the NBA-ready kids as frequently but often find themselves competing against them.

"I think we're all playing the hand we're dealt," Calipari said. "Kids are going on to the league from us and performing, and I'm proud of that. Would I like to have had them for four years? Yes. But I also like what's happened for them and their families."

Calipari, whose 2012

title team came behind one-and-doner Anthony Davis, now of the Pelicans, saw the negatives of having to rebuild every year play out in stark detail this season. A starting lineup with five freshmen struggled with expectations, sharing, listening and handling criticism.

Now comes the payoff. Calipari has figured out how to get the most from the Wildcats (26-10) and, as a result, they are clicking. Aaron Harrison has scored 18 and 19 points in the last two games. His brother had 20 in Kentucky's 78-76 upset over Wichita State. Yet anothfreshman, James Young, made a 3-pointer that gave Kentucky the lead in that game with less than 2 minutes to go.

"They had to hear how bad they were as players, how selfish they were, they're not together, this isn't a team," Calipari said. "Instead of separating, they stuck together. They kept believing in the staff and wanted answers, 'How do we get this right?' and they accepted answers."

Not that managing a more experienced roster, with seven players coming off a national title, has been all smooth sailing for Pitino and the Cardinals (31-5).

dismissed Chane Behanan in December for violating school rules. The focal point of last year's title run, Kevin Ware, took a medical redshirt for more recovery on the right leg he snapped gruesomely during last year's regional final, also in Indianapolis.

"I know everyone wants to talk about experience," Hancock said when asked about the differences between what a senior knows and what a freshman knows come this time of year. "But they've got six, seven, eight, nine, 10 guys that are going to play real hard. We have the same. It's not going to be too big an advantage either way."

Since 1983, the teams have met in the regular season every year.

This season's game was a 73-66 Kentucky victory that served as only a brief respite for the Wildcats, who sank from top-ranked team at the beginning of the season to out of the poll by March 10.

The Cardinals were hardly a finished product at the time, either. Like Kentucky, they've saved their best basketball for March. They won their conference tournament games by an average of 33, then figured ways to grind out ugly wins against Manhattan and St. Louis.

Pitino said he's been in the state for 20 years — first as coach of Kentucky — "and the game, to me, has really only had difficult consequences for the loser twice."

No. 1 was the 2012 Final Four meeting, won by Kentucky. No. 2 will be today's game.

"People grieve for a year after the game. People celebrate for a year after the game," Calipari said. "I've tried to not make it bigger than it is. But it doesn't work."

Landmark union ruling comes at bad time for NCAA

TIM DAHLBERG Associated Press

They're battling in courtrooms, and could one day meet over a bargaining table. About the only things the two sides in the debate over big-time college athletics agree on is that things are changing.

Schools bringing in hundreds of millions in television contracts. Coaches making kind of salaries that the late UCLA legend John Wooden wouldn't recognize. Athletes insisting on rights, if not outright cash.

And now a union for football players at Northwestern that would previously have been unthinkable in college sports.

A ruling that the Northwestern football team can bargain with the school as employees represented by a union may not by itself change the way amateur sports operate. But it figures to put more pressure on the NCAA and the major conferences to give something back to the players to justify the billions of dollars the players bring in — and never see.

"While improvements need to be made,

we do not need to completely throw away a system that has helped literally millions of students over the past decade alone attend college," The NCAA said in a statement.

There's huge monev at stake – nearly $18 billion alone just in television rights for the NCAA basketball tournament and bowl games. Already fighting a flurry of antitrust lawsuits challenging its control of college athletics, the NCAA can't afford too many more

'This is a colossal victory for student athletes coming on the heels of their recent victories," said Marc Edelman, an associate professor of law at City University of New York who specializes in sports and antitrust law. "It seems not only the tide of public sentiment but also the tide of legal rulings has finally turned in the direction of college athletes and against the NCAA."

For the NCAA, the timing of a National Labor Relations Board opinion allowing union at Northwestern couldn't have been worse. In the middle of a tournament that earns schools close to $1 billion a year, it is being taken to task not only for not paying players, but for not ensuring their health and future welfare.

Add in revelations like Florida coach Billy Donovan's new $3.7 million-a-year tract and the $18,000 bonus that Ohio State athletic director Gene Smith got for one of the school's wrestlers winning an NCAA title, and some are frustrated with the NCAA's contention that everything it does is done for the benefit of athletes who play for the glory of their school.

"Fifty years ago the NCAA invented the student-athlete to try and make sure this day never came," said former UCLA linebacker Ramogi Huma, the designated president of Northwestern's would-be football players' union. "Northwestern players who stood up for their rights took a giant step for justice. It's going to set a precedent for college players across the nation to do the same." The players currently at Northwestern may have already graduated by the time the team gets a chance to bargain — if it ever does.

According to federal law, Northwestern football players have 30 days from Wednesday's decision to vote on whether to authorize on whether to formally authorize the College Athletes Players Association, or CAPA, to represent them. But Northwestern is expected to appeal the landmark ruling to the National Labor Relations Board by an April 9 deadline, potentially stalling the union vote. The NCAA is also likely to continue to fight the description of college athletes as employees.

It was that love of the sport that drew outgoing Wildcats quarterback Kain Colter - as well as a scholarship worth up to about $75,000 annually. But Colter, backed by lawyers with the United Steelworkers union, began the union push after growing disenchanted with the time demands placed on him in football that forced him to drop his plans to go to medical school.

Colter also worried about the long-term health risks of football long after players have left school. Players have said they want more research into concussions and other traumatic injuries and insurance and guarantees that they will be covered for medical issues later in life. They also want money for continuing education and for schools to offer four-year scholarship deals instead of yearto-year pacts.

One day that could mean money, over and above the $2,000 extra annual stipend that NCAA president Mark Emmert proposed but failed to get implemented over the objections of small-budget schools. There's plenty to go around, with a $10.6 billion contract for television rights to the NCAA basketball tournament and a recent $7.2 billion deal for football bowl games.

The NLRB ruling described how the life of a Northwestern football player is far more regimented than that of a typical student, down to requirements about what they can eat and whether they can live off campus or purchase a car. At times, players put 50 or 60 hours a week into football, the ruling said, qualifying them to be treated as employees of the university and eligible for a union. By itself, the ruling could be little more than an irritant to private universities and the NCAA. But combined with the antitrust lawsuits — one filed just last week by a prominent attorney called the organization an "unlawful cartel" — they present a clear challenge to the unique way college sports operates.

The model of coaches and administrators making millions while the athletes providing the labor are paid in room and board and books is one that could be difficult to defend in court.

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL

High-tech replay room opening for business

RONALD BLUM Associated Press

NEW YORK — After deciding close calls on the field since 1876, baseball opens a hightech control room this weekend where the fates of batters, pitchers, runners and fielders will be decided by umpires up to 2,600 miles away in the building where the Oreo cookie was invented.

Starting with the Los Angeles Dodgers' game at the San Diego Padres on Sunday night, the U.S. opener of the 2014 season, players, managers and fans will turn their attention to the ROC — the Replay Operations Center.

In a dimly lit room of just under 1,000 square feet in the Chelsea Market in Manhattan's Meatpacking District, umpires and technicians will make the decisions that could games decide championships.

More than $10 million has been spent wiring the 30 big league ballparks with Fiberlink cable that will transmit the images from at least 12 cameras at every site, and Major League Baseball says it will take just 400 milliseconds for each image to arrive at the command center.

All in an effort to prevent the type of botched calls that cost Detroit's Armando Galarraga a perfect game in 2010.

"I'm happy for the managers," said Joe Torre, an MLB executive vice president overseeing the new system. "Maybe it will keep them from having one or two more sleepless nights if they are able to grab one and overturn it.

Chris Marinak sits in front of a bank of television screens during a preview of Major League Baseball's Replay Operations Center on Wednesday in New York. Less than a week before most teams open, MLB is working on the unveiling of its new instant replay system, which it hopes will vastly reduce incorrect calls by umpires.

fices of Major League Baseball Advanced Media, the room has its own power supply in case of a blackout with batteries as a second auxiliary — and a stand-alone heating, ventilation and air conditioning system that keeps the temperature at 72 degrees. Cell phones don't have reception.

There are dozens of televisions, more than enough to make it resemble NASA's Mission Control. Outside the room, next to a modernist black sofa, is a 55-inch NEC screen, with another just inside the entrance. Walk in, and there's 65-inch Pentus TV to your left.

On each side are three stations, each to be staffed with a technician on the left and a major league umpire on the right. Three more "floater" stations stretch across the back well.

Every station has four 46-inch screens — three Planars for each pod, with a higher-quality Sony directly in front of each umpire's seat. The umps will wear headsets and can push a button to speak with their colleagues at any stadium.

Fifteen Asus computer monitors are scattered about, four on a wavy table in the center where supervisors will monitor the review umpires and up to 15 simultaneous games (there would only be the maximum if weather delays the action in the eastern half of North America).

The nine circular overhead lights kept low, the walls are gray and the carpeting is dark — all so that the televised images will stand out more for the umpires. There is a sink and a microwave — the food court on the first floor is filled with dozens of options.

than the Fan Cave," quipped Justin Klemm, a former minor league umpire and big league fill-in who was hired last month as MLB's director of instant replay.

Baseball ignored replay even as it was first used by the NFL in 1986, the NHL in 1991, the NBA in 2002 and the Little League World Series in 2008.

MLB took a tentative step toward replay in August 2008, when it first used video to decide boundary calls such as home runs at the top of fences or near foul poles.

Torre long opposed review changed his mind in October 2012, when umpire Jeff Nelson missed a call on Robinson Cano's two-out tag of Omar Infante at second base in the AL championship series, calling the runner safe. Detroit went on to win Game 2 and sweep the

"That's when I realized that we certainly can't ignore the technology and the fact that this seemed to be what the people want or think they want," Torre

Eight umpires will be assigned to the replay room each week, with generally six on duty for a full schedule and each monitoring two games at a time.

When an umpire has a decision to make, screens for their other game will go dark. If an ump has simultaneous challenges in both games, one will "cascade" to the next pod

Baseball established a "clear and convincing" standard for overturning calls. The replay decision will be either the call is confirmed, stands (if there is no conclusive evidence) or is overturned.

Managers get one challenge per game, and if that challenge is successful, they receive a second. If a manager is out of challenges, from the seventh inning on an umpire can call for a replay on his own. In addition, home runs and plate collisions are subject to unlimited review at the discretion of the crew

Baseball hopes it will take no more than an average of 3 minutes for the decision. The average length of a nine-inning game was a record 2:59 last year, according to STATS. Torre said pace-of-game rules will be enforced more strictly.

"In order to make this thing work and not have it make the games longer is the fact that we have to start really disciplining and paying attention to the repeat violators," he said.

Open for replay challenges are force plays, tags plays, fair-foul in the outfield, traps in the outfield, hit batters, retouching, passing runners, ground-rule doubles, fan interference and home runs (at the umpires' discretion).

Among the excluded decisions are ballstrike calls, check swings, foul tips making contact with the bat, balks, interference and obstruction calls, the neighborhood play at second on double plays, running out of the basepath or runner's lane, tagging up and catches in the infield.

MLB says that among incorrect calls last year were 156 force plays, 60 tags on steals and 76 other tags — totaling 86 percent of all missed decisions.

Torre said he expects more dropped balls during pivots at second base will be called safe rather than forceouts, and that MLB will monitor phone traffic between team replay personnel and dugouts to ensure the video isn't used for sign stealing.

About 75 umpires came to New York for training, and MLB sat down with all managers during spring training and will have a conference call with them this week.

Umpiring's new era has arrived.

"I could tell you, one, I'm glad we didn't have replay," Torre said, an apparent reference to Richie Garcia calling a 2-2 pitch to Tino Martinez a ball in the 1998 World Series opener. Martinez hit a grand slam on the next pitch, and the Yankees swept San Diego.

"I'm wearing that ring right now," Torre said.

The always flashy Manziel was true to his over-the-top Johnny Football persona, trotting into the facility with his receivers as a tune by his buddy Drake blasted through the building. He wore camouflage shorts, a black Nike jersey with his white No. 2 and caused a stir by wearing shoulder pads and a helmet. Manziel didn't under-

Rising college costs add to $1T student loan debt

CAROLYN THOMPSON Associated Press

Every month that Gregory Zbylut pays $1,300 toward his law school loans is another month of not qualifying for a decent mortgage.

Every payment toward their student loans is $900 Dr. Nida Degesys and her husband aren't putting in their retirement savings account.

They believe they'll eventually climb from debt and begin using their earnings to build assets rather than fill holes. But, like the roughly 37 million others in the U.S. saddled with $1 trillion in student debt, they may never catch up with wealthy peers who began life after college free from the burden.

The disparity, experts say, is contributing to the widening of the gap between rich and everyone else in the country. "If you graduate with a B.A. or doctorate and you get the same job at the same place, you make the same amount of money," said William Elliott III, director of the Assets and Education Initiative at the University of Kansas. "But that money will actually mean less to you in the sense of accumulating assets in the long term."

Graduates who can immediately begin building equity in housing or stocks and bonds get more time to see their investments grow, while indebted graduates spend years paying principal and interest on loans. The standard student loan repayment schedule is 10 years but can be much longer.

The median 2009 net worth for a household without outstanding student debt was $117,700, nearly three times the $42,800 worth in a household with outstanding student debt, according to a report co-written by Elliott last November.

About 40 percent of households led by someone 35 or younger have student loan debt, a 2012 Pew Research

SOME OF THE PROPOSALS FOR TACKLING STUDENT DEBT

President Barack Obama and lawmakers in Congress are debating how to address the issue of rising student loan debt, something experts say is contributing to the widening between the rich and everyone else. Some of the proposals:

- Sen. Marco Rubio, R-Fla., has called for "student investment plans." Private investment firms would cover tuition costs that could be repaid later as a fixed percentage of a graduate's income for a set number of years, regardless of whether that amount covers the total debt. Rubio said that he still owed more than $100,000 in student loans when he became a senator in 2011. His office said he repaid his student loans in December 2012 with proceeds from his autobiography.
- Rep. Frederica Wilson, D-Fla., introduced the Student Loan Borrowers' Bill of Rights Act, which would remove educational loans from the list of debts that can't be discharged in bankruptcy.
- Obama has proposed extending the "pay-as-youearn" repayment plan to all student borrowers. The program limits student loan payments based on income but is currently only available to borrowers who took out loans after October 2007.
- The Student Right to Know Before You Go Act of 2013, with Republican and Democratic sponsors, require colleges to report data to offer students cost-benefit analyses comparing how much they can expect to earn in a particular field with how much they will owe after earning a degree in a given subject.

Center analysis of government data found.

Allen Aston is one of the lucky ones, having landed a full academic and financial-need scholarship at Ohio State University. The 22-year-old software engineer from Columbus estimates it let him avoid about $100,000 in debt.

Without loans to repay, Aston is already contributing 6 percent of his salary to a retirement fund that is matched in part by his employer and doesn't have the same financial concerns his friends do.

"I'm making the same money as them, but they have student loans they're paying back that I don't. So, it definitely seems noticeable," he said.

At the other end of the spectrum is Zbylut, an accountant-turned-attorney in Glendale, Calif. He's been chipping away at nearly $160,000 in student debt since graduating in 2005 from law school at Loyola University in Chicago. Now 48, the tax attorney estimates he could have $150,000 to $200,000 in cedes behind me and a 401(k) had the money he's paid toward loans "I'm sitting here in traffic. I've got a Merleave college with six an Audi in front of me and I'm thinking, 'What did they do that I didn't do?'" Zbylut said by cellphone from his Chevrolet. He's been turned down twice for the type of mortgage he needs to buy a home big enough for himself, the fiancee he would have married already if not for his debts and her 10-year-old son.

"I have more education and more degrees than my father, as does she than her parents, and yet our parents are better off than we are. What's wrong with this picture?" he said.

Student debt is the only kind of household debt that rose through Great Recession and now totals more than either credit card or auto loan debt, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. Both the number of borrowers and amount borrowed ballooned by 70 percent from 2004 to 2012.

Of the nearly 20 million Americans who attend college each year, about 12 million borrow, according to the Almanac of Higher Education. Estimates show that the average fouryear graduate accumulates $26,000 to $29,000 in loans, and some figures worth of debt.

Cuban restaurant negotiating for Lake Square Mall location

AUSTIN FULLER | Staff Writer austin.fuller@dailycommercial.com

The owners of Pichy's Cuban 2 Go are in negotiations for an approximately 6,000 square-foot space for a Cuban fine-dining restaurant at the Lake Square Mall, according to one of the restaurant's owners.

William Arias, who co-owns Pichy's with his wife and daughterin-law, said he hopes the restaurant will be able to open this June.

While Pichy's Cuban 2 Go is a lunch sandwich-oriented restaurant, the new restaurant, called Cuba Pichy's Cuisine, will be a fine-dining Cuban-style restaurant, Arias said.

The new restaurant will feature traditional Cuban dishes, Cuban-style seafood and new menu creations, according to Arias.

The restaurant will be near the mall's main entrance and the current J.C. Penney's store, in the spot that formerly housed Garfield's

Robert Sargent, public information officer for the city of Leesburg, said after Garfield's closed, the mall location temporarily was a drinking establishment called Rumors. He said it is a great location for a restaurant because of the movie theater in the mall.

You have a very popular movie theater there. You have movies, you have shopping, so it's a great venue to go to and having a restaurant added to it makes it even better," Sargent said. He added the mall is at a turning point.

"As their spaces (become) available, it becomes important that the mall sees new tenants come in. So, they're kind of at a turning point right now," Sargent said.

Sandi Moore, the executive director of the Leesburg Area Chamber of Commerce, said she was happy that a local business was expanding, and that it also will help the mall.

"It's a great thing for the mall," she said. "It's a great thing to have another restaurant in our area that is a nicer restaurant."

Stretching every penny in today's economy

y parents had four young children to care for during the Depression. From them I learned that there are many ways to economize without neglecting the essentials for keeping a family housed and healthy.

Just before the Depression hit my parents built a house on a lot Granddad gave them. The man who held the mortgage let them stay there until things got better by paying the interest on the loan. Daddy raised chickens and rabbits and picked wild berries, nuts and greens wherever he could find them. He kept us supplied with meat and eggs and the delicious water from the cress he found in the woods below town.

Mom raised a vegetable garden and fruit trees in our backvard. We had fresh fruit and vegetables in the summer and home-canned tomatoes, green beans, cherries, black berries and peaches in the winter.

We had other exotic foods to eat like dandelion greens, horseradish, sassafras root for tea and black walnuts. Mom made the best salad with dandelion greens you have ever tasted. She washed them real well and tossed them with chopped onions, hard-boiled eggs and bacon bits and make a salad dressing of vinegar and bacon drippings.

When the corn was ripe in the farmer's fields, they would sell it from door to door for 25 cents a dozen. It was fresh from the field and delicious.

Today folks who are having a difficult time feeding their families have several alternatives that we didn't have. We didn't have food banks or food stamps, but most folks don't grow fruits and vegetables in their backyard. I understand that the rules about chickens have been modified so folks in town can raise them in their backyard for eggs.

Every time I go to the grocery store I am shocked at the prices. It wasn't that long ago that I bought a gallon of milk for a dollar. Today it is four times that much and one small box of oatmeal is over $2. It must make it hard to feed a family on a limited budget.

I have never been any good at gardening like my mother was, and I am afraid of chickens. (Have you ever been chased by a mean rooster?) I have learned to use some of that same kind of initiative that my parents

Our first baby was born while my husband was going to school under the GI Bill. Our subsistence check was $124 a month. (Don't hold me to that amount. That was a long time ago.) I worked in an office as long as I could and then used the $40 my boss gave me as a bonus to buy the things I needed for the baby. I stretched every nickel of that $40.

I bought a secondhand crib after shopping around to get the best one I could. I made bumpers for the crib, crib sheets, crib pads, nighties and even receiving blankets and diapers. I bought an unpainted three-drawer chest, a diaper pail and a plastic bathtub that I kept under the crib. (If you don't sew or knit you may have a wonderful relative who does.)

We moved into public housing along with many of my husband's fellow students.

The rent for our apartment was just $24 a month, adjusted for our meager income. When Ralph began working part time as a draftsman, we had to pay a little more according to our income.

Public housing in those days did not have the accoutrements that it has today. We lived in Lomita, a little town just west of Los Angeles, Calif., so the buildings were earthquake proof. Everything was concrete: the steps, the porch, the floors. The floors were made of painted concrete and the walls were all buff-colored rough plaster. The only interiors doors were on the bedroom and bathroom. The kitchen cabinets had no doors on them and neither did the broom closet. The lower cabinets were fitted with doors to keep out little crawling children.

In those days (1951-57) you could buy a yard of cotton fabric for less than 50 cents, so I made curtains for the kitchen cabinets and the closets. Do you remember those awful plastic drapes? That is what I used on the living room and bedroom. I made curtains for the kitch-

We furnished our little concrete love nest with the money we were able to save from my pension and Ralph's mustering-out pay.

First we bought a good bed and the rest of the furniture didn't matter. The apartment was fitted with a tiny gas refrigerator and range, but we had to buy a washing machine with a baby on the way.

It took a lot of work to keep that apartment looking nice but we were quite comfortable in it. We found a store where we could get rib steaks for 69 cents a pound and a farmer's market where we bought our fresh fruit and vegetables. We ate a lot of beans and macaroni and cheese.

The best advice I can give to a young woman today who is expecting her first child on a shoestring budget is that she should invest in at least two dozen cloth diapers. Oh yes, I've checked — Walmart has them. I would also buy a pail with a lid and a box of Borax to soak the diapers. Thrift stores are a good place to look for baby items and inexpensive household items like towels, dishes, flat wear, pots and pans.

Babies don't need a lot of fancy furniture to be healthy and happy. What they need most are two loving parents to cuddle them and care for y search for information about the editor of an early Lake County magazine yielded some more nuggets over the weekend.

Last week I mentioned what little I knew about Antoinette Mullikin, editor of The Sandpiper, first published July 1, 1928. According to her college annual, Mullikin graduated from the Florida State College for Women in 1922 with a Bachelor of Arts degree. The yearbook also mentioned to which organizations Mullikin belonged.

While checking out the 1924-25 Polk Directory, I learned her mother, Allie S. Mulliken, was a cashier for the Atlantic Coast Line and owned a home at 224 E. Woodward Ave. in Eustis. Her deceased husband went Did you notice the spelling discrepancy I found with the last name? Her name in the directory listings was spelled Mulliken, but was listed as Mrs. A.S. Mullikin under the street guide and householder's directory portion of the book.

Antoinette had her own listing, and it was also spelled differently: Mulliken, Antoinette. The college yearbook used Millikin.

Since she was editor of The Sandpiper and her name was listed there as Mullikin, I'm confident that is the correct spelling. I guess I learned a lesson because I've pretty much relied on the spelling found in the Polk Directory to be correct.

My search also yielded another Lake County magazine. At least The Panther called itself a magazine in the dedication on the cover. It also beats *The Sandpip*er as it was published June 1, 1928, a month before The Sandpiper's first issue.

It was dedicated to Virginia Caldwell, "the able sponsor of the Panther, in loving appreciation of her unceasing efforts during the past year, and in token of our increasing affection and gratitude, and of the love we have in common for Eustis High School, we dedicate this magazine."

So there you have it, The Panther was a magazine. More on The Panther later.

I also learned in the Polk Directory that Antoinette Mullikin was a public school teacher and lived with her mother. My guess was she was a high school teacher because of her interest in publishing a magazine. I felt she must have taken some writing or English courses in college.

It was verified when I looked at The Panther, a Eustis High School publication of 1928. She was mentioned with the high school faculty, teaching English, civics and geography. She was also doing postgraduate work at Columbia University.

Alas, The Panther also spelled her name Mulliken. She was the sponsor or homeroom teacher for the juniors.

So, for now, that is what I know about Antoinette Mullikin. I plan to visit the Eustis Memorial Library and the local museum to learn more. In the meantime, let's look at The Panther, which had elements of a high school annual.

It was a 12-page magazine printed on slick 11-by-14-inch paper and stapled together. And the edition of June 1, 1928 was Volume 1, No. 1. But it was also described as a paper in a blurb about appreciation for the Panther staff.

In reading this edition I tend to think The Panther was a one-time publication. At the end of the tribute to the staff was "Thus ends the Panther's Tale." Of the staff, all but two were seniors.An appreciation also was written for the editor-in-chief, Mary Daniels, a senior.

The associate editor was Jean Hazelton, the society editor was Dorothy Smoak, the sports editor was Bill Curtis, a sophomore, the features editor Marjorie Richardson, Annie Jackson was the other non-senior and a reporter, the circulation manager was Bleeker Bailes and the business manager was Francis Savage.

The last two staffers received a special mention in the staff appreciation.

"We are especially grateful to Francis Savage, our invaluable business manager, without whose excellent ability this Panther would have been an impossibility, and to Bleeker Bailes, whose pep and enthusiasm have aided us so greatly in the circulation of our paper and whose interest has been shown in every phase of the work," praised The Panther.

More was written about the publication's sponsor, Miss Virginia Caldwell.

Caldwell was the Spanish teacher and served as secretary for Professor W.L. Goette, who also was in charge of vocational guidance. She graduated from Winthrop College in 1925 and taught at Ocala High School for a couple of years before heading to Eustis.

"Eustis was indeed fortunate to secure the services of this optimistic, industrious and conscientious worker," gushed the publication. "She has such a pleasing personality, and is such a 'good sport,' that every student considers her to be a true friend."

Bailes was mentioned in several categories of the senior class, including wittiest girl, biggest flirt (girl), most popular girl, most athletic girl and peppiest girl.

For the boys it was Bill Calvin, the most diplomatic boy, the most popular boy, the cutest boy and the peppiest boy.

They didn't list the most likely to succeed, but the best students were Fitch Etheridge for the boys and Mary Daniels for the girls.

More on The Sandpiper next week, and I welcome information on the magazine or Antoinette Mullikin.

Medical wake-up call prompts questions about life, marriage

DEAR ABBY: I have been married almost four years. Recently I had some medical problems that were my wake-up call. I'm fine now, but I no longer am willing to wait for "someday.'

I decided to try some new hobbies, one of which is skydiving. I had said for years I'd never do it because I'm afraid of heights. But I have changed my mind, and for me, this is a big deal.

When I asked my husband what he thought, his response was, "I'm not spending the day just to see you jump out of an airplane." Talk about disappointing!

I have always "gone with the flow" when he has wanted to do something. I know he doesn't want to go skydiving, but all I wanted was his support, and maybe someone to take a video or pictures. His response has left me wondering about a lot of things. I have had enough of his negativity. He doesn't do anything except stay home. I guess I expected him to be excited for me, or to say he didn't want me doing it. The first is what I would have preferred. Now I'm not sure where I go from here. - DISAPPOINTED IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: I hope you realize this letter isn't about skydiving, but your husband's refusal to help you celebrate your new lease on life.

A successful marriage is one in which a couple ideally grows TO-GETHER. If your husband is unwilling or unable to do that, then "where you go from here" is to first ask him if he's willing to talk to a marriage counselor with you. If he's not, then schedule some sessions for yourself with a licensed professional and discuss the circumstances that led to your "wake-up call." It will help you rationally - and unemotionally — decide how best to enjoy this gift of life you have been given.

DEAR ABBY: You have addressed cellphone etiquette in your column before, but in this day and age it bears repeating.

We attended a meeting for parents and students last night at our child's high school. Inevitably, a cellphone rang, which can happen to anyone. The ring was quickly silenced.

A few minutes later, another cellphone started ringing. Rather than mute it, the parent answered it and proceeded to have a conversation during the meeting while a school staff person was making a presentation. It wasn't a long conversation, but it wasn't quiet either. The parent was sitting in the back row slipped out to have this "important" conversa-

Thanks for letting me vent. It was extremely annoying and rude. Now I know why his son has no common sense. - ANNOYED IN IOWA

DEAR ANNOYED: At most events an announcement is made beforehand that cellphones should be turned off. If there is an interruption, an experienced speaker will pause until the interruption ceases. From your letter, I assume that isn't what happened last night.

Children learn manners and common sense by watching their parents. If consideration for others isn't modeled for them, they don't learn it.

Bidding Quiz

You are South and hold the following hand:

♠ ĂJ96 ♥ KQ853 ♦ 10 ♣ KJ4 The bidding has gone: North 1 ♣ 2 ♥

What would you bid next if North

1. Two notrump.

2. Three clubs

3. Three hearts.

1. Four hearts. You know at this point that partner started with a minimum opening bid (he raised one heart to only two); that he has only three-card heart support (he would not bid two notrump with four hearts); and that he probably has a balanced hand that includes at least one diamond stopper (judging from his two-notrump bid) There is consequently very little chance for a slam, so you should settle for game in hearts. A typical hand for partner on this auction might be something like: ♠ Q4 ♥ AJ7 ♠ K83 ♠ Q9762, which would offer an excellent chance for 10 tricks in hearts, a lesser chance of 11 tricks in five clubs, and almost no chance of making nine tricks in three notrump after a diamond lead.

derstanding.

Tomorrow: A necessary assumption.

with the situation is to use Blackwood. If partner shows either two or three aces, you next bid six hearts. The key here is to recognize that partner's jump to four hearts, after his minimum raise on the last round, indicates that he has four-card trump support as well as a maximum for his previous bids.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, March 28, 2014:

This year you will be open to a changing situation that could affect your daily life. You feel more in touch with your creativity than you have in a while. Understand what is happening within your immediate circle. If you are single, use caution around any new person who enters your life. He or she could be emotionally unavailable. Unless you are, too, relating could become stressful at best. If you are attached, the two of you have a way of changing directions when you need to. No matter what age you are, summer triggers even more romance. PISCES makes a great healer for you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your intuition might cloud what normally would appear as a straightforward issue. You seem to be picking up the nuances of the situation. Understand what is happening around you, but try not to put yourself in any difficult situations.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You will move forward with clarity and direction. You know what is doable under the present circumstanc-

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Realize what a weekend away could do for you. You might want to mellow out to great music. Others simply might need to find themselves surrounded by nature. Break away from the

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You have strong ideas, especially when it comes to maximizing the good times. It appears as though someone close to you also has a great idea, perhaps for tonight. There is no reason to say anything negative; try it this person's way.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You might feel as if you have lost control of a situation and want to regain it. Unfortunately, the best you can do at the moment is to let others do what they need to do. Be direct with a loved one, as you might not understand his or her choices. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) An associate cares far more about a joint effort or project than you realize. This person might not understand what is happening within you, but you both could be developing strong feelings for each other. Stay aware.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You'll have a better chance of discovering what is happening with a loved one by saying less and not being so stern or withdrawn. You could be taken aback by how much you care about this person. Feelings day at a time and express more enthusiasm for a project than you have in the past. You could be working through a problem without really acknowledging it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You might consider taking some time off with a friend, close relative or neighbor. Others will seek you out for various reasons, but make a point of scheduling time with a person of importance. Your words will trigger others' imaginations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Your ability to move past what others often resist might need to emerge with a money matter. You'll see this situation as being far more profitable than others do. You might choose not to explain what is going on, yet others still will grasp your enthusiasm.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You could be taken aback by what is happening, as your imagination seems to come up with one creative idea after the other. Realize that you have a lot to accomplish. A child or loved one might become effusive in expressing his or her caring.

New composite decking is more durable or the last 20 years, composite decking products have grown in popularity primarily because of their long-term finished appearance versus wood decking, which takes a beating in the weather. Composite decking is typically comprised of wood fibers mixed with a base polyethylene plastic or PVC base material. The material is then shaped into solid or hollow deck boards about an inch thick.

The older generation of composite deck boards had many advantages, including the look and strength; however, it was very susceptible to stains and scratches because of the wood fibers in the product. Just imagine, you had a beautiful brown composite deck installed and during your very first party someone either dragged a chair across the surface, creating a deep scratch, or worse, the night ended with a huge greasy spot on the deck because someone dropped a hamburger.

Over the last couple of years, the next generation of composite decking has been developed, which incorporates a hard shell solid cap to seal the strength of the composite substrate while offering superior scratch and stain resistance benefits. Trex Company is one of the leading manufacturers in composite decking and their new line features shell technology, which fully wraps the composite decking. This new line of deck has a 25-year warranty against fade and stain while offering a surface that is significantly more resistant to scratches.

The new hard shell technology from Trex Company offers another huge benefit — the look of real wood. Older composite decking offered very little in a natural wood grain look, but the outer shell technology looks like wood that has been stained or painted. The system has opened the doors to new exciting colors.

With new hidden fastening systems, an allcapped shell composite deck brings a sleekness and elegance to outside areas, which should last significantly longer. New railing and lighting systems have been developed that are much easier to install but still offer a look featured at five-star resorts. Instead of manufacturers offering a composite deck board, they have developed complete systems that enhance a backyard lifestyle.

Most composite decking still lacks the strength to be used for the structural part of the deck, but the components are designed to mask the treated lumber or steel structural components. The next step in composite deck construction projects is Trex Company's new Elevations structural steel system. The steel structural system is a truer and provides a more level surface for deck boards versus structural treated lumber, which is subject to crowning and warping issues.

If installed correctly, a little soap and water is all that should be needed to keep your new hard shell composite deck looking great for years to come. These new composite decking materials continue the trend in building innovations, which are creating products that appear more realistic, last longer and require less maintenance. The challenge for homeowners is to change old building paradigms of the past, especially in remodeling.

Buying a home: 5 tips for first timers

The Orange County Register

With two daughters and a baby on the way, Carlos and Cinthya Jijon decided last year to buy a house for about the same monthly cost as a bigger apartment. But they couldn't find a home.

Supply was tight. And investors armed with fistfuls of cash outbid them every time.

Today, however, the Jijons are unpacking, settling into a one-story house in Buena Park, Calif. The auto parts deliveryman and the nurse made the transition from renters to first-time homebuyers.

The market is tough for first-timers such as the Jijons.

Statistics show that number of first-time buyers is falling. A California Association of Realtors survey showed, for example, that about half as many first-timers bought houses in 2013 as in 2009.

But the Jijons persevered, taking an eight-hour homebuying course, learning about cash assistance programs, and getting loads of practical advice. They beat the odds.

Tips for keeping walls and woodwork clean

Associated Press

Walls can get dirty before you know it from a splatter of spaghetti dinner to the crayon artistry of a roaming toddler to fingers simply reaching for a light switch.

It's easy to pass by walls and woodwork every day without a second glance, but spring-cleaning season is a great time to give them the attention they Like many housekeeping tasks, regular cleaning can help avoid bigger cleanup work later on.

"It doesn't have to be as difficult of a job as it sounds," said Amy Panos, senior editor at fingers or with crayons Better Homes and Gardens.

The easier you can make it on yourself, the more likely you are to

DIRT AND SCUFFS

Walls tend to get dirtiest around light switches and door knobs.

"Even if a hand looks clean, it still has a little dirt and oils that over time build up and eventually make that area of the wall dirty," Panos said.

Walls also get marked up from accidental kicks or the brush of a bag near the baseboards. Parents know how toddlers' hands often find their way to walls, either with filthy or markers.

These fingerprints and other blemishes are best tackled right away. "The sooner you can get to a mark that is noticeable, the easier it will be" to clean, said Sharon Grech, a color and design expert for Benjamin Moore.

People are wary of cleaning or washing painted surfaces because they fear the process will remove the paint. But Grech said the technology has improved over the last decade, and paints now are more stain-resistant and durable for cleaning.

Still, it's important to use the right products.

To remove everyday marks, Grech suggested using a clean cellulose sponge with a little warm water.

"Just give it a good rub," she said. "Wait for it to dry and see if it's clean.'

If the dirt is still evident, repeat the process using a dab of dish detergent and wipe the area dry with a clean sponge, rag or paper towel.

"Warm water does miracles with a sponge," Grech said. "You want to avoid using regular household cleaners that have ammonia and other products in them" because they can change the sheen of the paint.

Panos likes the ease of a foam eraser pad, like Mr. Clean Magic Eraser, though be sure to test it first in an inconspicuous area to make sure it won't remove the color or finish. Mr. Clean Magic Eraser is approved by the manufacturer for use on most paints, including flat and semi-gloss paint.

"They're quite incredible," Panos said. "They take care of a lot.'

Don't forget doorways and trim, often coated in easy-to-wipe paints but in light colors like white and cream that make marks especially visible. Cleaning those areas can instantly make the room seem brighter.

"It really glistens," Grech said. "It's like putting on a nice lip gloss.'

unsightly mark, many overlook cleaning the whole wall, Panos said. Once you have a fresh coat of paint, lightly dust the walls about every three months.

"You don't need to get a bucket and soap and sponge and completely wash down the walls," she said. "Make it easy on yourself by getting a tool with an extension pole so that you can stand on the ground and take care of the job in just a few minutes rather than having to drag out a ladder."

Clean the ceiling first, with a dust-attracting microfiber mop on the extension pole for smooth ceilings, or a slightly damp paint roller on the pole for a popcorn ceiling, she said. The walls can be cleaned from top to bottom with the mop (dry or slightly damp), and the baseboards hand-cleaned with a microfiber cloth.

"Keeping the environment as dust-free as possible is helpful for a good interior air quality," Panos said.

Grech recommends regular cleaning where dusts collects, such as on baseboards, and on window ledges, where it can mix with moisture and turn into a mess.

While cleaning the walls won't prolong the paint job, she said, it will help keep them looking their best.

"You want to clean the areas that are getting a little bit more abused to keep it fresh," she said.

sor and author Carolyn Warren, is to blab to an agent that this is their first time and that they really need his or her guidance. It's like wearing a sign: "Charge me more." 3) Shop for a mortgage. Don't use whatever lender your agent recommends without doing some independent shopping. Another classic mistake: calling 10 lenders and asking for their interest rates. A lender can't be held to those quotes, so "it's just going to lead you to the smoothest-talking liar," Warren said.

It's better to look up mortgage rates online, then call three or four lenders and mortgage brokers and ask them for a written list showing their fees.

'The lowest rate is no good if you're paying too much in fees," Warren said. 4) Check down-payment assistance. Before you shop, check to see if you qualify for one of the

down-payment assistance programs.

"Don't assume your income is too high," said Karla Lopez del Rio of NeighborWorks Orange County, a housing assistance agency approved by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

5) Get pre-approved. Getting a lender to pre-approve a loan before you shop can make your offers more attractive, while avoiding deals falling apart because loans don't get approved during escrow. Get all the documentation you'll need for the loan process — W2s, tax returns, pay stubs, bank account statements. Find out from your lender exactly what you'll need. And go to Annual-CreditReport.com to get your free credit reports from all three major credit agencies. Experts recommend you TransUnion, contact Equifax or Experian and pay $8 to $10 to get your credit score as well. (You don't have to subscribe to their monthly monitoring or other services.)
