ov. Rick Scott had a yellow legal pad in hand for note taking as he listened to 16 seniors talk about Medicare Advantage cuts, rising prescription costs and their concerns about losing their doctors, during a round-table discussion in The Villages on Wednesday.

"I just want to hear your stories," Scott said, specifically the residents' concerns regarding Medicare Advantage and Medicare cuts, which the governor attributed to the Affordable Care Act. ## School uniforms back in spotlight

LIVI STANFORD | Staff Writer livi.stanford@dailycommercial.com

The Lake County School Board is again floating the idea of requiring students district-wide to wear school uniforms, an idea that has been rejected several times because of backlash by parents.

As the board reviews its Student Code of Conduct policy, which is updated every year, the dress code could become part of the discussion if a board member brings it up, school board members said.

As a result of the numerous emails board members received in regard to school uniforms, Chairwoman Debbie Stivender asked members at a board meeting Monday if they wanted to ask Superintendent Susan Moxley to form a team to come up with a dress code.

Board members were split on the idea.

If approved, the team would compile data and make a recommendation to the school board on student uniforms.

"As long as board members are willing to follow the data and recommendations the ... committee comes up with, then I support sending it there," said School Board Member Tod Howard, who is in favor of school uniforms. "If we have board members who are unwilling to listen to the data, I am not inclined to waste committee time on something that is already decided."

WINTER PARK — A car smashed into an Orlando-area day care Wednesday, killing a girl and injuring 14 others, at least a dozen of them children, authorities said.

Florida Highway Patrol spokesman Wanda Diaz said a girl died at Arnold Palmer Hospital for Children, but she didn't have any more information on her.

One person at the hospital was in critical condition and five others were in serious condition, said spokeswoman Katie Dagenais.

In all, 13 people were hospitalized and two others were treated at the scene, said John Mulhall, a spokesman for the Orange County Fire Rescue.

Several of the injured at the KinderCare building in Winter Park were reported to be in "very, very serious condition," Diaz said.

Diaz said the Toyota Solara convertible had gone out of control after it was struck by a Dodge Durango, jumped a curb and smashed into the day care, breaking through the wall and into the building. That driver was not hurt.

The Durango fled the scene but was found almost two hours later after it had been left at a home. Highway patrol said it is looking for 26-yearold Robert Corchado. Troopers said he was the driver of the Durango.

Board Member Rosanne Brandeburg, who previously voted against school uniforms after parents voiced opposition, said there are many other more important issues to discuss.

"We have listened," she said. "My concern is if we go back to the public again, I think there are going to be people who are going to ask, 'Don't you have more important issues such as funding our schools, educating our children and having the best qualified teachers working in our school system?'" Jim Miller has been pushing for school uniforms since early 2011, when he was a member of the School Board. Miller handed out a flier to board members with statistics highlighting how the uniforms implemented in Osceola County have reduced discipline referrals by 30 percent, classroom disruptions by 35 percent and gang activity by 75 percent. The board has tried several times to change the dress code policy, even giving a tentative OK to a stricter policy in 2012, only to reverse itself when parents protested. Clothing options proposed by the board included plain, solid-colored polo shirts and blouses over solid colored pants, skirts, jumpers, shorts or skorts. In an email to board members, Montverde Academy Headmaster Kasey Kesselring expressed support for school uniforms. "I cannot offer you enough encouragement to implement school uniforms at Lake County Public Schools and what it will (do) to initiate positive change in the culture of your school communities in a relatively short time," he wrote. Clinton Powell, chair of the South Lake Chamber of Commerce Education Committee, among other parents, also wrote emails in support of school uniforms.

"Instead of blaming us, they need to have a serious discussion with the drug companies about lowering the ogists and cancer doctors in the top cost of these drugs. If they want us to stop taking care of patients, then tell us that — but don't blame us for costs."

the Mayo Clinic in Minnesota says a large number of tests are billed under the name of its Dr. Franklin Cockerill, chairman of laboratory medicine and pathology. According to the Medicare database, Cockerill was paid more than $11 million.

"Dr. Cockerill is a salaried employee of Mayo Clinic and is not making big money from Medicare," said spokesman Bryan Anderson. Medicare officials said multiple providers should not be using a doctor's identification number to bill.

The American Medical Association has expressed concern that laypersons may draw wrong conclusions from seeing large dollar signs next to a physician's name.

But another case, from Michigan, suggests that following the money can turn up potential problems. cuts and changes stood out in his mind, said Scott, who had a similar discussion Wednesday morning in that city.

"She's worried about her losing her house," the governor said, adding other South Florida seniors told him their rising prescriptions costs is affecting their ability to put food on the table.

From the low-income seniors he met in Miami, to the more affluent residents of The Villages, Scott said he is hearing that seniors throughout the State are concerned about not being able to go to providers in their Medicare Advantage plans, which has a limited network of providers. Traditional Medicare has no networks, so participants can go to any Medicare-eligible provider — if they can find one.

Villager Joan Cady was among residents who spoke to the governor about her concerns.

"We all have the same problems and it's all coming down to that it's (Medicare) not what we had last year; its changed and it has changed a lot. Every time we go (to doctor or pharmacy) there is vet another change," Cady said. "It's making it hard." She was touched that the governor took time to listen.

"How often would a governor from any state come and talk to anybody? This is absolutely wonderful," Cady said. "And the fact that we were already his second stop, after being in Miami earlier doing the same thing, is all the better. He is getting two vastly different perspectives, and yet we all share the same problems."

"In all candor, a magistrate probably would not have averted that horrible tragedy," Fruitland Park City Attorney Scott Gerken explained.

But, he added, a magistrate can solve a number of other problems that typically plague volunteer code enforcement boards.

"Many municipalities are turning to magistrates in order to enforce their codes equitably and consistently," he said.

"Code enforcement boards are citizen volunteers who sometimes have to sit in judgment of their friends, relatives or even next-door neighbors," Gerken said.

A magistrate would likely be more objective, Gerken added.

Leesburg attorney Chuck Johnson, who serves as special master in Lake County for code enforcement and animal control complaints, said a good magistrate is like a baseball umpire.

"The magistrate's objective is to protect the community by achieving voluntary compliance with the code requirements," Johnson said.

"Usually, that just requires a little coaxing. Sometimes, it's a matter of negotiation. But sometimes only the full force of law will do, and that can be thorny when civic-minded volunteers have to weigh in against their friends and neighbors," he said.

Many Fruitland Park residents and a few commissioners have complained that the city's code enforcement efforts are sometimes ineffective.

The most frequent complaint involves homes in foreclosure whose owners have abandoned basic maintenance efforts such as mowing the lawn.

"They are eyesores, and they make our whole community look bad," Commissioner Sharon Kelly said.

Three people remain hospitalized following a head-on crash that killed one man Friday night in Marion County.

Jeffrey Allen Bowman, 46, of Lady Lake, was in critical condition, while Sean Michael Healy, 25, of Lehigh, and Amber Grace Puckett, 22, of Umatilla, were listed in fair condition, said Suzanne Santangelo, a spokeswoman at Ocala Regional Medical Center.

Deanna Katherine Hickey, 22, of Fort Myers, has been released, Santangelo said. She, too, was at ORMC.

Florida Highway Patrol troopers said a white 2007 Nissan Altima with three occupants - Bowman, Healy and Hickey - was headed west on County Road 42 at about 8:12 p.m. Friday. A white 2003 Kia Spectra with two occupants - Puckett and Braxton Alan Reed, 20, of Ocala was headed east.

Officials said the Altima, driven by Hickey, crossed the center line and into the path of the Kia, striking it head-on. Reed died at the scene.

The man appears to be walking with Cheri Amber Houston, 28, at the store at 6:15 p.m. on April 2.

"She can be seen with an unknown African-American man on the store's security camera footage and detectives are releasing the photographs in an effort to identify this man," said Lt. John Herrell, sheriff's spokesman. "He was driving a late-90s model black Ford Explorer."

Herrell said the sheriff's office is not referring to the man as a suspect or person of interest, only "someone detectives want to speak with."

Houston was found early in the morning on Friday near the intersection of Hancock and Hartwood Marsh roads. A cause of death has not been released, but detectives said it is "suspicious."

Houston was a transient and over the past 8-10 weeks had moved from Miami to Nashville, on to North Carolina, then to the Atlanta area before coming to Orlando, detectives said. They also learned she has a history of drug abuse.

STEVE FUSSELL Special to the Daily Commercial

Fruitland Park commissioners will have the chance tonight to revisit the controversial apartment development proposal that packed commission chambers with opponents in January.

Coral Gables developer Jonathan Penner wants to build the apartments on a 14.27acre site at the intersection of Spring Lake Road and Poinsettia Avenue in Fruitland Park.

In January, Penner asked commissioners to approve a 156-unit apartment complex with three-story buildings. After initially approving the request, commissioners voted unanimously to deny Penner's application.

Community Development Director Charlie Rector said tonight commissioners will consider whether to accept the project for reconsideration. "Development regulations allow the developer to return to the commission any time within 12 months of a project denial to request reconsideration so long as substantial changes to the original plan have been made," Rector said. Penner's new plan reduces the total number of units to 110 and promises that no buildings will be taller than two stories.

"I plan to be at the meeting but I don't plan to speak against the project," Waye said. "My personal preference would be no development, but that's not practical," he said.

Waye said commissioners should expect to see some opposition.

"I don't know who or how many, but I expect some of our neighbors to speak against the project," he said.

Rector said that if commissioners agree to consider Penner's plan, they will then consider ordinances to rezone the property and amend the city's comprehensive plan.

Both ordinances will have to come before the commission for a second reading, and residents will have another chance to voice their concerns.

Putin turns up economic heat before Ukraine talks

PETER LEONARD and VLADIMIR ISACHENKOV Associated Press

MOSCOW — Russian President Vladimir Putin turned up the heat on Ukraine on Wednesday by threatening to demand advance payment for gas supplies, a move designed to exert economic pressure as Ukraine confronts possible bankruptcy, a mutiny by pro-Russian separatists in the east and a Russian military buildup across the border.

Taking a tough stance set for next week, Putin instructed the government to be prepared to charge Ukraine in advance for gas supplies – a step that would inflict more pain on a nation already teetering on the verge of bankruptcy. He said the change needed to be taken if "additional consultations" with the European Union fail to yield results.

DETROIT — Big U.S. recalls by General Motors and Toyota have put the auto industry on a record pace as companies try to avoid bad publicity and punishment from an increasingly aggressive government.

On Wednesday, Toyota announced it was recalling nearly 1.8 million vehicles in the U.S. to fix a spate of problems, including air bags that might not inflate. It's part of a worldwide recall of 6.4 million cars and trucks.

So far this year, automakers have recalled about 9 million vehicles in the U.S. If that pace continues, the nation would break the record of 30.8 million recalled vehicles set in 2004.

Most of the recalls are from Toyota and General Motors, two automakers that are under government scrutiny and facing bad publicity and allegations that issues.

After highly pubunintended acceleration problems and Ford's trouble with Explorers and Firestone tires in the late 1990s, automakers at first quickly issued recalls. But recalls dropped off as the bad publicity faded, Ditlow said.

But this time may be different because of the Justice Department's investigation of Toyota and the prospect of criminal charges against GM and some of its employees in what lawmakers have called a cover-up of the ignition switch problem.

"That can be a real game-changer," Ditlow said. "There's nothing that changes corporate behavior as much as criminal prosecutions."

Jessica Caldwell, senior analyst for the Edmunds.com auto website, said things changed when NHT-SA got more aggressive with fines and enforcement against Toyota in 2009 and 2010. "But the GM recall has compounded the fact that they have to be more proactive," she said.

The high number of recalls could also be attributed to the use of common parts across

Spotlight on Rite Aid

Wall Street predicts that Rite Aid made a profit for the fiscal fourth quarter. It would be the drugstore chain's sixth consecutive quarter in the black. Financial analysts expect Rite Aid will report today that earnings declined from a year ago. The company lowered its 2014 earnings forecast in December, citing drug cost increases and lower profits from new generic drugs.

Improved sales trends?

Family Dollar Stores' fiscal year is off to a bumpy start. The discount retailer cut its earnings forecast for the year in January after consumers made fewer purchases and spent less on average per transaction in the first quarter. Financial analysts anticipate Family Dollar Stores will report today that its second-quarter earnings and revenue declined from a year ago.

AVOICE To curb school lunch waste, ease the fruit and vegetable rules

o one should have expected that putting more vegetables in front of elementary school students would instantly turn them into an army of broccoli fans. Plenty of food has been thrown out since new federal rules took effect in 2011 requiring students in the subsidized school lunch program to choose a fruit or vegetable each day. Nevertheless, studies find that continued exposure to produce is resulting in more children eating at least some of it.

That's worth a certain amount of wasted food. The new lunch rules, pushed by the Obama administration and passed by Congress, provide better nutrition and introduce more students to healthful eating habits that they will, it's hoped, carry into adulthood.

Still, the program is afflicted by rigid, overreaching regulations that defy common sense. Schools must provide items from five food groups, including a fruit and a vegetable, every day. Students must choose three items, even if they're not hungry enough for all of them, and at least one must be produce. But fruits and vegetables rank as the least popular items, so requiring schools to offer one of each for each student practically guarantees that an enormous amount of fruits and vegetables will go to waste.

Even worse are the rules about what kinds of produce must be offered and in what form. They make it nearly impossible, for example, to hide the vegetables in soups or lasagna, where they might be more palatable to students. It took a long, intense lobbying effort for schools to get permission to serve smoothies; even though cafeterias are encouraged to serve yogurt and fruit, they weren't allowed until just recently to combine them into a healthful drink.

The federal rules even prohibit students from taking food out of the cafeteria to eat later.

No wonder so much ends up in garbage cans. In the Los Angeles Unified School District, as the Los Angeles Times recently reported, it adds up to $100,000 in wasted food each day.

Congress is supposed to reauthorize the school lunch bill in 2015, and there are many changes it should make. Though the law should continue to require all students to take a fruit or vegetable, it should allow them to take only as much food as they want. Children should be able to pick two fruits or two vegetables in a day, which they can't do now, and eat their leftovers later. Schools should be free to mix vegetables together in appealing and healthful dishes. Lawmakers need to think more like budget-conscious parents and less like detail-obsessed regulators.

here's a dangerous human tendency to gradually pay less attention to crises that unfold over long periods of time. That, of course, is possible only for those whose daily lives are not directly affected. For everyone else, it creates an unconscious illusion that the situation can be ignored without consequences.

More than three years have passed since the war in Syria began. Since then, the human suffering has been incalculable. Other aspects of the conflict, however, can be measured, and the statistics are not only grim, they are ominous.

The U.N.'s refugee agency just announced that the number of Syrian refugees in Lebanon has topped 1 million people, half of them children. U.N. offi cials called it a "devastating milestone." Altogether, the war has uprooted an incredible 9 million Syrians from their homes. About 2.5 million of them live the dismal existence of refugees in neighboring countries. The total number of dead is calculated by exiled groups at more than 150,000. Every single individual in all these numbers represents a focus of suffering that is beyond our comprehension. And yet, the war in Syria is about more than the pain of the Syrian people. Syria has become the fulcrum of instability in the Middle East. The continuing fighting, the endless violence, is shooting sparks across all the country's borders. It is creating deep rifts throughout the region and planting political landmines in an area of heavy traffic. It's tempting to dismiss the fighting as just another humanitarian catastrophe, and wash the world's hands of it by saying bad guys are killing bad guys and, sadly, civilians are suffering. But it is not that simple.

Political divisions over Syria have caused a crisis in relations between Saudi Arabia and Qatar, each of which is arming rival factions of the anti-government forces.

urgent human and strategic crisis

Syria remains the world's most

I KNOW-I CAN

Indeed, extremists of all stripes are dying in Syria. But pernicious powers are growing strong, moderate forces are losing ground, the region is becoming more fragmented, and thousands of individuals from multiple countries — including Westerners — are becoming radicalized and trained. The Šyrian president, Iran's very close friend, Bashar Assad, has grown stronger in the last year, according the U.S. intelligence chief James Clapper. Iran's allied militia from Lebanon, Hezbollah, is helping cement his position in Damascus and, as a result, fortifying the Iranian regime. In Lebanon, the Syrian war is destabilizing the country more each day. The country that endured a 15-year civil war that left 200,000 dead is teetering. The Sunni population is seething at Shiia Hezbollah's intervention in Syria. That has prompted Lebanese Sunnis to mobilize, as well. Bursts of deadly fighting have erupted inside Lebanon. Top politicians have been assassinated. Dozens have died in shoot-outs. More than a dozen car bombs have exploded in the last year. Violence has similarly escalated in Iraq, partly as a result of events in Syria. Turkey, also, is all but at war with Syria. A few days ago, Turkey shot down a Syrian warplane. And Israel, too, has seen live fire across the border.

Political divisions over Syria have caused a crisis in relations between Saudi Arabia and Qatar, each of which is arming rival factions of the anti-government forces.

When President Barack Obama traveled to Riyadh a few days ago, he agreed to consider providing Syrian rebels with "MAN-PADS," shoulder-fired anti-aircraft weapons.

While the Manpads are a terrible idea — they could be used against civilian aircraft the United States and its allies should step up their assistance to the moderate opposition before it disappears.

The reason for not doing so in the early stages of the civil war ha become a self-fulfilling prophecy. Washington worried that the rebel forces would become radicalized. But by refusing to provide meaningful help, the moderate forces lost out to other rebels, who received massive support from Islamist groups and their supporters, leaving the secular opposition demoralized, unable to hold its ground and incapable of attracting young Syrians eager to join the fight against Assad. There is no way of knowing how this war would have unfolded if the West had provided support to the moderate opposition early on, but there is no question that the current state of affairs is a gruesome disaster with the potential to become even worse. The Syrian crisis, now in its fourth year, is one we must not allow to drift from our attention. Whether we care more about the humanitarian imperative or about strategic considerations, Syria must remain at the top of the global agenda.

MOUNT DORA MDB trio invited to camp

FRANK JOLLEY | Staff Writer frank.jolley@dailycommercial.com

Three football playing student-athletes from Mount Dora Bible have been invited to attend the Football University Top Gun camp.

Mount Dora Bible coach Dennis Cardoso announced Wednesday that juniors John Grant and Chad Simmons received invitations to the camp, as did eighth dent-athletes grader Eric Seidelman.

Scheduled for July 17 to 19 at Jerome High the showcase camp is earned "reserved only for the best of the best to showcase their talent on a national stage," according to the camp's website. "To be eligible, an athlete must be chosen from among the top 15 percent of athletes at his regional Football University camp and be specifically invited to Top Gun."

The top 750 stufrom around the world are invited to the camp.

Cardoso said the School in Dublin, Ohio, Mount Dora Bible trio

EUSTIS Moulden tosses gem for Panthers

FRANK JOLLEY | Staff Writer frank.jolley@dailycommercial.com

Wesley Moulden has been like Picasso on the mound this season for the Eustis High School baseball team.

Each time the southpaw takes the ball for the Panthers, he is capable of dominating an opponent and tossing a masterpiece.

Tuesday's performance against Mount Dora was no different. Moulden improved to 6-1 on the season with a two-hit, 13 strikeout effort in a 6-0 win against the Hurricanes at Stuart Cottrell Field. The win helped Eustis boost its mark to 13-7 overall and 4-1 in Class 5A-District 13.

A five-run fourth inning blew a tight game and gave Moulden all the insurance he would need for the win. The complete-game effort was Moulden's fifth of the season and lowered

pitcher called up by NY Yankees

FRANK JOLLEY | Staff Writer frank.jolley@dailycommercial.com

The Show!

It's the ultimate goal for baseball players ... the Major Leagues.

Shane Greene is one of the few who gets to realize that dream. The former East Ridge High pitcher School was recalled by the New York Yankees on Wednesday from Scranton-Wilkes Barre, the team's Triple-A affiliate.

Greene was recalled after the Yankees optioned catcher Austin Romine down to Scranton-Wilkes Barre following Tuesday's 14-5 loss to Baltimore at Yankee Stadium. Greene, a right hander, was eligible to pitch in Wednesday's game, which was not completed in time for this edition.

He wore uniform No. 39.

The first player from East Ridge to reach the major leagues, Greene was selected in the 15th round by the Yankees in the 2009 June Amateur Draft. After graduating went on to play at Day- the Week.

tona Beach Community College, now known as Daytona State College.

After being drafted, Greene spent the next five seasons pitching between the rookies leagues and Double-A. Greene produced his best season in 2013 > with Trenton in the Double-A Eastern League, where he had an 8-4 record with a 3.18 ERA.

He also pitched for the Tampa Yankees in the Single-A Florida State League and was 4-6 with a 3.60 ERA.

In five seasons as a professional, Greene has compiled a 24-41 record with a 4.35 ERA. He has struck out 452 batters in 496 innings.

Greene has appeared in 105 games in his career — 90 as a starter.

He was named to the Florida State League All-Star team in 2013 and was selected as an Organization All-Star by MinorLeagueBaseball.com. In 2012, while pitching for Tampa, he was named Florida from East Ridge, Greene State League Pitcher of

UConn routs Notre Dame, wins ninth title

DOUG FEINBERG Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. -With Breanna Stewart back for two more seasons, Geno Auriemma and UConn are in position to win a few more titles.

None may be sweeter than the record ninth championship the Huskies won Tuesday night in unprecedented fashion.

Connecticut reached the pinnacle in style, routing Notre Dame in the first NCAA women's basketball championship game featuring undefeated teams.

Auriemma and his Huskies have one more title than Pat Summitt and Tennessee for most all time, and they did it in the Hall of Famer's backyard.

The 79-58 rout of the Irish capped the careers of seniors Stefanie Dolson and Bria Hartley. The pair were the final remaining links to the Huskies' NCAA-record 90-game winning streak that ended when they were freshman. The duo finished their careers with back-to-back championships.

"It's overwhelming," an emotional Auriemma said. "Those two kids are two of the most unbelievable kids I've ever been around my whole life and to see their faces when they walked off the court, I don't usually get this emotional, but this one got to me."

UConn President Suan Herbst said it is hard to quantify the effect the titles will have on donations and student applications, but she's sure they'll increase. "They get the attention, they win, and then I take that attention and turn it toward the academic mission," she said Tuesday. "People are thinking about UConn and when they get to me with congratulations, then, I have to talk about our health center, our excellence in education, our student success." Brian Otis, vice presithe University of Con-Foundation, necticut "It's amazing. much of an effect the wins will have on licensing revenue. But, he said, the two biggest periods in the school's licensing royalty history were in 2004-2005 and 1999-2000. That corresponds with the dual titles in 2004 and the first men's title in 1999. A typical year for the school results in over $500,000 in net licensing revenue, he said. A men's basketball championship increases that number to anywhere from $750,000 (2011) to $1.2 million (2004). The titles combined with a new Husky logo could shatter that mark. He said the 2004 mark was well within reach. The school's rise over the past 20 years as an athletic power has coincided with a rise in academic prowess. More than 29,500 students applied for enrollment next fall. That is more than double the applications the school received in 2001. And the school has said the pool of applicants also has higher SAT scores and more diversity than previous classes. Applications for undergraduate admission at UConn have risen each year for over a decade, from 13,600 in 2001 to nearly 30,000 this year. Nathan Fuerst, the admissions director, said it's hard to measure the impact of national titles on enrollment, but the championships do raise national awareness of UConn.

Campus celebrations are winding down after two nights of championship parties, yet the off-court excitement could be just beginning at the University of Connecticut.

With students, faculty and alumni beaming with pride following the men's and women's basketball team's national titles, the university administration is looking far beyond the Gampel Pavilion sports arena for a payoff.

The teams' accomplishments led national news and sports broadcasts and appeared on news or sports pages of dent of development at newspapers across the world.

The UConn women's team was expected to return home Wednesday afternoon and celebrate with a "victory lap" around campus in an open-air, double-decker bus and speeches Gov. Dannel P. Malloy announced that a parade for both teams will be held Sunday in Hartford.

The NCAA basketball titles — a record ninth for the women — deliver a boost to the UConn brand, Herbst said.

The school's image took a hit in 2013 bewas banned from the NCAA tournament over academic performance issues. The school also is facing a Title IX lawsuit over its response to sexual assault allegations on campus. Those headlines have been replaced by stories about men and women performing at a high level on and off the court and the school celebrating both championships. "We're still top dogs," UConn men's coach Kevin Ollie said. "When you doubt us, that's when we fight our hardest. We're still on top, we didn't go nowhere.'

UConn expects the titles to help recruiting.

were among the nation's elite in attracting bascause of the men's team ketball talent. But Ollie says winning another title a year after the ban sends a message to potential student athletes that the program isn't on the decline.

> The championships also provide a financial windfall.

Checkout lines snaked around the inside of the UConn Coop bookstore Tuesday as fans purchased championship gear. The school is planning several new designs to honor both the men's and the women's teams.

Cage seeks a comeback with indie drama 'Joe'

ROGER MOORE McClatchy-Tribune News Service

A decade-and-a-half removed from his Oscar-winning turn in "Leaving Las Vegas," Nicolas Cage was an actor on a treadmill of ever decreasing returns.

Years and years of cutrate sci-fi ("Knowing"), bargain-basement action ("Bangkok Dan-gerous," "Stolen") and lesser comic book fare ("Ghost Rider" I & II) had done a number on his reputation in Hollywood, and among film fans. And the ongoing tabloid attention and tax problems didn't help.

So on the cusp of turning 50, Cage took a year off.

"He'd done a ton of movies, and was finally stopping for a while to think about that," director David Gordon Green says.

"I knew I was going to be very selective about what I would do next," Cage says.

He was. Cage's comeback — which he won't call a "comeback" would be a movie with Green, who is famous SEE CAGE | C2

An endearing comedy that resonates with grandparents and adult grandchildren, "Over the River and Through the Woods" is generating rave reviews from audiences at Sonnetag Theatre at IceHouse.

"It's bittersweet, it's funsame time," said Darlin Barry, managing artistic director of the Mount Dora theater.

for "Pineapple Express," but whose career was built on indie films ("All the Real Girls") and whose passion is Southern Gothic cinema ("Undertow"). And unlike some in Hollywood, Green is still a fan.

"He's fascinating to me," Green says of Cage. "He's gone off in so many different directions, switched gears so many times in so many different genres, that I loved the idea of creating this role that was unlike anything he'd ever done."

Green wrote Cage "a sweet-talking letter" with this screenplay adaptation that Green's college professor had written based on a hard-boiled, Southern-fried Larry Brown efforts at restraint, Joe

"He has this Robert Mitchum quality," Green says. "That's who I was thinking of as I read the novel. Something kind of creepy about Joe, something kind of scary. You want that dude to be your friend, because if he was on your bad side, you'd be scared."

Cage says he felt an instant connection to the character. What he doesn't say is that working with Green on an indie film could be a way of setting his career's reset button. Green has made a few Hollywood hits ("The Sitter"). But his indie credibility is built on such movies as the recent "Prince Avalanche" or "Snow Angels."

"No one can really tell how a movie will come out," Cage says. "But this, to me, seemed like the best chance to be something special. You look at David's previous work, his talents and his vision of this South that we never see on the screen, and you figure this is a pretty good bet I hope, on the screen."

to make."

"Joe" lives in a dump of a house in a corner of East Texas where "dump" is redundant filled with hard country folk battered by hard lives, prone to skinning a deer that they "just got" in their ruin of a kitchen, where guns and bourbon and knives are the essentials of life. Joe runs a work crew for a timber company, a pick-up labor force of people even lower on the economic ladder than him. And he drinks.

"I've never thought of him as an alcoholic," Green says. "But I guess he does have a beverage in hand. In pretty much every scene."

It's hard not to see Cage himself in this guy a man with demons, substance-abusing а past, but a man with a strong work ethic and " a code," kind-hearted enough to take a homeless kid onto his crew because the boy needs a break. Joe is a man in search of redemption.

The movie, which goes into limited release Wednesday, and the role are causing critics such as David Rooney (The Hollywood Reporter) to see Cage's portrayal as "bone-deep," with Eric Kohn (Indiewire) suggesting that the film "marks a new beginning for some of its characters ... and (its) star."

"I always want to take negatives and turn them into positives," Cage says. "Being blessed with this career and this life in the arts has enabled me to channel my dreams and my frustrations, my problems and my bad times, into something positive, these award shows are ... ill-advised. The ACMs pulled off two strong mashups, though, teaming Lady Antebellum and Stevie Nicks on their songs "Golden" and "Rhiannon" and Blake Shelton and Shakira on their duet "Medicine."

■ The Band Perry put on one of the night's most memorable performances for a couple of reasons. The show-opening performance of "Chainsaw" by the brother-sister trio was among the night's most energetic. It also was accompanied by so much confetti that it looked like snow was drifting across the first three rows of celebrities. "There's $20 million in hairdos down here and it all has confetti in it," Bryan joked. ACMs head to Jerry's World: Cowboys owner Jerry Jones got a mixed reaction when he appeared on the show to help announce the 50th anniversary of the ACM Awards next year at his AT&T stadium in Dallas. He was initially booed by some fans — a day after he was also booed at the NCAA Final Four - and took the brunt of a joke from Bryan about his team's checkered playoff history. "Is he laughing?" Bryan asked. He will be next year when his stadium will be the centerpiece of what's already being billed the world's largest awards show.

Daft Punks: Bryan and Shelton channeled another pop culture moment brilliantly when they arrived on stage as "Get Lucky" played in the background wearing Daft Punk-style helmets and tuxedos just like the Pharell Williams-accompanied electronica stars did at the Grammy Awards. After a few seconds to let the effect settle in, the duo ripped off their helmets and pretended to be out of breath. "Man, where the hell is Pharrell at," Shelton said. "He was supposed to read the nominees." Bryan responds: "How the hell you supposed to get lucky in that thing. I couldn't even breathe."

Kevin Costner tackles football in 'Draft Day'

STEVEN REA The Philadelphia Inquirer

Kevin Costner is the general manager of the Cleveland Browns in his new movie, "Draft Day." The Ivan Reitman-directed project — a kind of gridiron "Moneyball" - takes place on that fateful spring day when the 32 teams in the National Football League go hunting for the cream of the year's college crop, signing, trading, strategizing, looking to fill holes in their lineups and, hopefully, find the real talent out there, and the players their competition might have missed.

The NFL draft has become a big deal in its own right, a spectator sport, with the successive rounds of picks taking place over a long weekend. (The 2014 draft: May 8-10 on the NFL Network.)

Costner, who has had a good run when it comes to sports movies — "Field of Dreams" and "Bull Durham" (baseball), "Tin Cup" (golf) — related to to "Draft Day's" go-myown-way protagonist, Sonny Weaver Jr., a GM being second-guessed by just about everyone from his coaches to his coworker and lover (Jennifer Garner) to his mom (Ellen Burstyn).

Costner is 59 now and has been in movies since the start of the '80s ("Frat Boy #1" in Ron Howard's "Night Shift" was an early job). He was Elliot Ness in "The Untouchables" (1987) and received best actor, picture Oscar nomina- movie biz.

Man is patient as independent woman struggles with intimacy

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 27-year-old woman who has never had a boyfriend or been kissed. I was never interested in romance or having a significant other. I felt strong being independent and taking care of myself. Now that I have a degree, a career and a house, I feel ready to try to let a man into my life.

I met a really nice guy a month ago. "Brian" and I have gone out several times and have a lot in common. He's a gentleman, and he says he's willing to wait for me.

I have been having a difficult time letting myself be physical with him. Even hugging is uncomfortable for me. I know it's because I have been a shy loner my whole life and I'm unaccustomed to being close to people.

Even though Brian says he'll be patient, I can sense his frustration. Physical closeness should come easily if you like and are attracted to someone. I feel abnormal. I don't know if I'll be this way forever or get one. more comfortable the more I know him.

I'm afraid Brian — and most men – won't be willing to wait that long. I'm afraid if I don't move faster I'll lose a great guy and never get another chance. What do you think? – BLOCKED IN BOISE

DEAR BLOCKED: Being intimate with someone because you're afraid you'll lose him or it will be your last chance is the wrong reason. I have worked at my job for a year, and I haven't always been treated well by a few co-workers. I am reluctant to invite these people because I'm worried about the repercussions if I do. I know they will judge every aspect because they did it to another co-worker.

The Rule of Eleven

deal. After declarer follows low from dummy to West's opening lead, the outcome rests on which heart East chooses to play. If he plays the seven, South goes down; if he plays the ten or king, declarer makes the contract.

The Rule of Eleven directs East to the winning play. Applying the rule, East knows that South has only one heart higher than the five. He determines this by subtracting five, the card led, from 11, which tells him that there are six cards higher than the five in the North, East and South hands combined.

East sees three cards higher in his own hand and two in dummy, so he knows declarer has only one card higher than the five. Since South opened with one notrump, he is likely to have the ace of hearts. Playing the seven will consequently force the ace and hold South to one heart trick, while playing the ten or king establishes a second heart trick in dummy

Declarer is helpless against the seven play. When he takes it with the ace and leads the king of clubs, West wins and plays another heart, trapping dummy's Q-9. Since the dia-monds don't break 3-3, and the spade finesse, if attempted, fails, South must go down regardless of how he proceeds

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Thursday, April 10, 2014:

This year you make waves because of your ability to brainstorm and find answers. This quality will be emphasized even more come summertime. To others, it seems as though you don't believe in the word "no." If you are single, you enter one of the most romantic periods of your life from July on. You could meet someone who fulfills many of your fantasies. If you are attached, you can be found happily together at home this spring. You are likely to plan a special vacation or fulfill an important mutual goal this summer. VIRGO to work from home. Make it OK to extend your weekend once in a while. You will come back feeling much more refreshed.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Look at the long-term implications of someone's resistance at work. The problem could be bigger for this person than for you. In the afternoon, you might want to check on a real estate investment or the possibility of a change around your home.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be aware of your finances, and make a decision that allows greater flow for you. This ease might come from saying "no" to some ARIES (March 21-April 19) You refuse to accept "no" as an answer right now. You will find a way of using a problem to pave your way to a goal. What seems to be an obstacle will vanish given creative brainstorming.

TAURUS (April 20-May

20) You might not want to budge in the morning or even in the afternoon. If you can, take a day off or try
