History Channel's 'American Pickers' show pays visit to Eustis

The many buildings that house Dr. Jack Cassell's collection of oddities include a little bit of everything, from a 1950s-era electric shock machine to a metal detector to a replica of an electric chair.

Cassell even has an autopsy table from the 1800s and a mad scientist control panel.

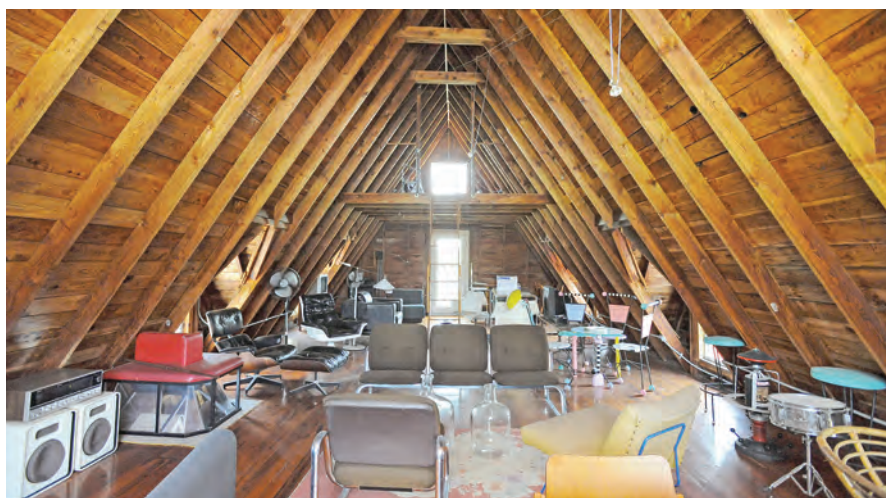

Then there is the statue of Albert Einstein, a Sputnik-style lamp, Jenson speakers from the 1950s and even a red survivor pod used on oil rigs planted outside the red storage building.

"I wanted to put it in Lake Dora and putt around the waterways," Cassell said.

There is also the yellow submarine Cassell bought with every intention to take into the ocean.

This does not even cover a fraction of the more than 1,500 accent pieces from all walks of life Cassell has been collecting for the past 22 years.

His collection caught the eye of American Pickers, a popular hit show on the History channel, where cast members Mike Wolfe and Frank Fritz "scour the country for hidden gems in junkyards, basements, garages and barns, meeting quirky characters," according to the History Channel website.

Cassell, who is the husband of County Commissioner Leslie Campione, said he contacted the show three years ago and forgot about it.

So, when he recently received a phone call from the show's producers, he was pleasantly surprised.

"It was really a lot of fun," he said of being featured on the show. "I had a lot of laughs with David Ohrt (who filled in for Mike) and Fritz."

The experience was fun for the whole family, Cassell contended. At least a dozen crew members showed up and set up a trailer,

Victims fell for hackers' oldest tricks

Chinese military used bad email attachments

JACK GILLUM and ERIC TUCKER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The victims were their own worst enemies.

The hacking techniques the U.S. government says China used against American companies turned out to be disappointingly mundane, tricking employees into opening email attachments or clicking on innocent-looking website links.

The scariest part might be how successfully the ruses worked. With a mouse click or two, employees at big-name American makers of nuclear and solar technology gave away the keys to their computer networks.

In a 31-count indictment on Monday the Justice Department said five Chinese military officials operating under hacker aliases such as "Ugly Gorilla," "KandyGoo" and "Jack Sun" stole confidential business information, sensitive trade secrets and internal communications for competitive advantage. The U.S. identified the alleged victims as Alcoa World Alumina, Westinghouse, Allegheny Technologies, U.S. Steel, United Steelworkers Union and SolarWorld.

China denied it all on Tuesday.

"The Chinese government and Chinese military as well as relevant personnel have never engaged and never participated in so-called cybertheft of trade secrets," Foreign Ministry spokesman Hong Lei said in Beijing. "What the United States should do now is withdraw its indictment."

Meet some special seniors from this year's graduating class

A walk through the campus of South Sumter High reveals a number of anti-smoking signs aimed at students.

It is a subject that 18-year-old graduating senior Elijah English is well familiar with, but not through cigarettes.

English was a finalist in last week's Intel International Science and Engineering Fair in California, where he presented a project to determine if a shiitake mushroom extract was an effective treatment for lung cancer.

He conducted a similar science project last year.

English will attend Georgetown University in Washington D.C. where he will take up pre-medicine as part of his journey to become an orthopedic surgeon.

He said he likes the investigation and problem solving that comes with science.

"I've just always had an interest in science," said English, shortly before helping underclassmen dissect a fetal pig in class Tuesday.

Not-so-homeless man faces charges

Staff Report

A 46-year-old man, who lives in a trailer park on Picciola Road, was charged with disorderly intoxication and possession of marijuana while apparently begging for money as a homeless person, authorities said.

According to an arrest affidavit, a Lake County Sheriff's deputy said he spotted William Zink at about noon on Sunday, passed out while propped up against a stop sign in front of a church on Picciola Road. The stop sign was less than five feet from the road and near the church's driveway where congregation members were driving away after the service was over.

The deputy said he spotted a handwritten sign stating "Homeless, anything will help" next to Zink, who had fallen over and was still passed out, as the officer approached.

The deputy said there was a complaint on Friday about Zink passed out on the side of the road at an intersection about a quarter-mile away. Another deputy reportedly gave Zink a ride home to a mobile home he is staying at in Duke's Landing on Picciola Road and warned him about the possibility of arrest.

On Sunday, however, Zink was taken into custody for disorderly intoxication. The deputy said the drug charge came from a hand-rolled cigar containing marijuana that allegedly was found in the man's right front pocket.

Jail records show Zink has been arrested 24 times since 2007, many of them for trespassing after warning or alcohol violations.

That's unlikely. What the Justice Department is doing is spelling out exactly how it says China pulled it off.

The U.S. says the break-ins were more Austin Powers than James Bond. In some cases, the government says, the hackers used "spear-phishing" — a well-known scam to trick specific companies or employees into infecting their own computers.

The hackers are said to have created a fake email account under the misspelled name of a then-Alcoa director and fooled an employee into opening an email attachment called "agenda.zip," billed as the agenda to a 2008 shareholders' meeting. It exposed the company's network. At another time, a hacker allegedly emailed company employees with a link to what appeared to be a report about industry observations, but the link instead installed malicious software that created a back door into the company's network.

"We are so used to solving problems by clicking an email link, looking at the information and forwarding it on," said Chris Wysopal, a computer security expert and chief technology officer of the software-security firm Veracode. "And if hackers know about you and your company, they can create really realistic-looking messages."

And use of the rudimentary efforts the Justice Department described doesn't mean foreign governments and others won't use more sophisticated and harder-to-detect techniques, said Joshua Corman, the chief technology officer for Sonatype, which helps businesses make their software development secure. Determined hackers escalate their attacks when necessary, he said, but in the cases cited in Monday's federal indictment they didn't have to escalate very far.

Corman noted that the U.S. has much higher investments in research and intellectual property, making America's risk of loss in such thefts disproportionately higher than China's.

Other security layers failed in the hackings blamed on China, too. More-effective antivirus or security software could have blocked the malicious attachments or prevented users from visiting risky web links. Backend server filters could have prevented dangerous emails from reaching employees. Intrusion-detection systems on corporate networks could have more quickly raised red flags internally after a successful break-in.

"The problem is the technology hasn't advanced enough to detect malicious code," said Kevin Mitnick. Tricking someone to let you into the system is far easier than identifying hidden vulnerabilities that can be exploited.

He will also give a speech during his graduation Friday as his class' salutatorian.

"He has always worked so hard," said Karen Ray, one of English's biology teachers.

He also has at least three scholarship awards.

English was also a three-sport athlete at South Sumter, playing defensive back on the football team, center on the basketball team and running the 400 Meters in track.

But he has been taking part in science fairs since middle school and his high school studies have taken him to labs at the University of Florida and Moffitt Cancer Center in Tampa, which he said had the ventilated lab hoods and electro-forensics machines that he needed for cancer research.

Last week, he was one of nearly 1,800 winners of national competitions who were invited to participate in the week-long celebration of science, technology, engineering and math at the International Science and Engineering Fair in Los Angeles.

While Cassell's segment lasted a little more than 15 minutes, Cassell said he walked around with crew members all day of-fering history on every item he had.

"Some of the items I forgot I had," he said with a chuckle.

The show, which originally aired on May 14, will re-air again tonight from 8 to 9 p.m.; 12 to 1 a.m. Thursday; 10 to 11 p.m. Friday; and 2 to 3 a.m. Saturday.

Cassell said he began his collection by focusing on art décor, glass and furniture.

"I started expanding my collection of modernist items from the 50s and 60s," he said.

At that point, Cassell said he became interested in kitsch, which he refers to as weird, unusual and applied arts.

"A lot of it has to do with what is termed eye candy," he said of the art, which he collected at garage sales and bought from his own pickers. "There is something you find appealing."

"Kitsch has been used to talk about culture that is considered inferior," said Charles Emmer, professor of philosophy at Emporia State University. Emmer has studied aesthetics and worked in the art world in New York City.

"The idea of culture in bad taste, it has been associated with the idea of sentimentality and nostalgia."

BRETT LE BLANC / DAILY COMMERCIAL

Jack Cassell's collection includes an array of medical implements.

There are new attitudes about kitsch today in the art world and wider culture, he said.

"Most of these things Cassell collected are old remnants of a bygone era," Emmer said.

Cassell agreed, pointing to the 50s and 60s furniture he has collected.

"It brings imagery of the past," he said.

Cassell's favorite piece is the yellow submarine, which friends have referred to as the "yellow coffin."

But he was surprised at which items American Pickers purchased.

"They bought 30 items and half of the items were for their personal collections," he said.

They walked away with two Egyptian lamps, which Cassell said were hard to part with.

Cassell bought one of the lamps years ago and only recently found the matching one.

Hurricane season to be below average

LIVI STANFORD | Staff Writer
livi.stanford@dailycommercial.com

The forecast for the 2014 hurricane season, which begins June 1, is expected to be below average, according to Thomas Carpenter, Lake County Emergency Management Division manager.

Carpenter explained moderate El Nino conditions typically make tropical cyclone formation unfavorable.

Colorado State University has predicted nine named storms, compared to the average of 12; three hurricanes, compared to the average of six; and one major hurricane, compared to the average of two, Carpenter's presentation showed.

While the hurricane season is expected to be less busy, Carpenter said by no means should people be complacent.

"Even though we are seeing a below normal season, it only takes one," he said.

It was also a below average season in 1992, but it did produce Hurricane Andrew, devastating south Florida, Carpenter said.

In 1960, Hurricane Donna was the last to strike Lake County, Carpenter confirmed.

While confirming the number of storms is projected to be below average, Dan Kottlowski, expert senior meteorologist at AccuWeather.com, said it does not mean hurricanes will not make landfall.

"All it takes is for one large hurricane to make landfall on a given area and it can totally make what may be an inactive season, a very active one for that particular place," he said. "It takes one hurricane or one tropical storm to ruin a person's

Lake Tech graduate wins Iron Pie Maker Challenge

THERESA CAMPBELL | Staff Writer

Baby Capule, 41, tickled her culinary instructors at Lake Technical College by winning first place and the "Judges' Favorite" for her Four Seasons pie, which was created in 20 minutes in the Iron Pie Maker Challenge at the 13th annual Great American Pie Festival in Celebration.

The Filipino native, who currently lives in Leesburg, was recruited on a whim from the crowd to participate in the April 26 contest before graduating last week from the technical college where she honed her culinary skills.

Capule's award-winning, no-bake pie featured pineapple, bananas, strawberries, coconut flakes, caramel and whipped cream inside a chocolate-pretzel crust.

"I made my pie to represent the United States of America with its four seasons of winter, spring, summer and fall," she said. "I was thinking that everybody would have a regular pie and I wanted to make it look different, sort of like a volcano, with a high shape. This was my thank you to America."

Capule competed against 12 other contestants.

"I thought the pie was fantastic; it tasted great to me," said Chef Ken Koenig, commercial foods and culinary arts instructor at Lake Tech, who was pleased that Capule recreated the pie for him to sample.

FRUITLAND PARK

Another grant to help build bigger library

STEVE FUSSELL
Special to The Daily Commercial

Fruitland Park's Library is about to get bigger, and smarter too.

The Lake County Library Advisory Board recently approved a $322,500 grant from the county's Library Impact Fees and Library Director Jo-Ann Glendinning said she expects Lake County commissioners to approve the measure on June 10.

Last year Glendinning won approval of another $250,000 grant — also from Library Impact Fees

— but that project had to wait for the city to acquire a 40-foot strip of land next door to the Berckman Street building.

Community Development Director Charlie Rector told city commissioners recently that the extra property significantly reduces the cost of expansion. By adding on to the building's west side, utilities on the south side won't have to be moved.

The delay was fortuitous. Now, Glendinning is planning on two new wings that will total about 5,000 square feet with an indoor courtyard between them. The library, built in 2000, includes about 7,200 square feet.

The wing closest to Berckman Street will be reserved for library programs, Glendinning said.

Over the past 12 months the library's three-person staff and volunteers produced 210 adult programs and 12 more for young adults. The programs ranged from AARP meetings to classes on nutrition and cooking.

Glendinning said the new wing can also host community functions when the library is closed since it has access to the indoor courtyard and restrooms.

The back wing, at the building's southwest corner, will serve as a children's area, which will also access the courtyard.

"The courtyard will give us about 1,000 square feet of secure space for a fraction of the cost of building indoor facilities," Glendinning said.

City commissioners must first approve the expansion and close on the adjacent property purchase, which Glendinning said she hopes to start construction in the fall. Barring unforeseen difficulties, the expanded library facility could open before the arrival of an estimated 4,000 new residents next year in the proposed Villages of Fruitland Park. The grants include money for computers and audio-visual equipment and new shelving for the library's main stacks.

"The new Villages residents will create significant demand for library services and we expect a huge influx of volunteer activities as well," Glendinning said.

"We're going to be a much bigger city and I think the library will be ready to accommodate that," she said.

Hurricane conditions are unfavorable, Kottlowski said, because water temperatures are not as warm as they have been and westerly winds dip down into the tropics, decreasing the number of storms.

Kottlowski said AccuWeather is projecting two storms to make landfall this year, but he could not yet predict the type of storm.

Carpenter advised there are several ways to prepare for hurricane season including creating a disaster supply kit, knowing shelter locations, taking First Aid/CPR classes, making sure to have a communications plan to notify family, friends and neighbors, and having a NOAA weather radio.

"You should have a gallon of water per person per day and nonperishable food items," he said.

Oasis Bar Sunday.

The bar's owner and victim, who is 67, told police he found Priest partially inside the bar's backlit sign.

The sign is approximately three feet off the ground and police said Priest had torn apart one side of the 10-foot by five-foot sign and was partially inside of it shattering fluorescent tubes.

According to police, Priest, after being found by the owner, fled carrying a fluorescent lighting tube. Priest reportedly knocked the man to the ground, causing a minor scrape on one hand.

The damage was estimated by the victim at $500.

Priest remained in the Lake County Jail on Tuesday in lieu of $2,250 bail.

Jail records indicate there may be probable cause to charge him with violating his probation. Lake County Clerk of Courts records show Priest was charged with battery in 2011 and pleaded no contest last October, receiving 18 months of probation.

people inside, including a 14 year old. When the unidentified 23-year-old man reached for the shotgun, a fight started between the two in which Sumner allegedly stabbed him.

Lt. Bobby Caruthers, sheriff's spokesman, said it is not clear why Sumner would have pointed a shotgun at the occupants but the suspect was apparently intoxicated at the time. The affidavit adds there had been a separate physical altercation at the home earlier in the day.

Deputies recovered the shotgun and both men were treated for non-life threatening injuries.

The charges against Sumner include aggravated assault and battery. He remained in the Sumner County Jail Tuesday in lieu of $13,500 bail.

management, said she felt lost in the beginning in her culinary classes.

"I really wanted to learn the science behind it," she said of her desire to study culinary arts. "Yet, the language of the chefs and the way that they communicate and the way that I communicated was different. There was a little bit of a language barrier."

She said Koenig inspired her to take time to jot down observations in a notebook. She took it to the next level by adding photos.

"I started taking pictures of what I was doing and what I would see, because I didn't want to rely on my memory," she said.

The notes and photos also helped Capule when she had a leave of absence from Lake Tech for a few weeks after she and Clermont, her husband of nine years, had a baby on Oct. 29. They also have a 7-year-old son.

Koenig believes Capule has gained skills that will be valuable in her career as a chef.

"She's now staying home because her husband is getting ready to take our class," Koenig said. "Once she goes back to the Philippines, she and her husband want to open their own restaurant, and that was their whole goal; it's why they're both coming to the school."

Capule said it will be a while before her family heads to the Philippines, as they will need to save money to start a business, yet she's grateful to have mastered culinary studies and the Iron Pie Maker Challenge.

"Sometimes you really have to try new things because you really don't know what is in store for you," she said, "and then you find out that it was fun."

Lake Tech averages about 50 students a year in the culinary arts program. To learn more about Lake Technical, go to laketechnical.org or call 352-589-2250.

Police: Actor told 911 he shot wife in Los Angeles

TAMI ABDOLLAH and ANTHONY MCCARTNEY
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Actor Michael Jace, who played a police officer on the hit TV show “The Shield,” was arrested Tuesday after authorities said he called 911 and told an operator he shot his wife.

Detectives were investigating whether the couple's financial problems or other marital difficulties played a role in the killing that police said occurred during an argument Monday night while the couple's two sons, both under 10, were in the house.

Police were unsure if the children witnessed the argument or gunfire. They were placed with relatives.

April Jace, 40, was shot multiple times and was found dead in a hallway of the family home in the quiet, modest Hyde Park neighborhood of Los Angeles. Police recovered a handgun believed to belong to her husband, Los Angeles police Detective Dean Vinluan said.

“She came home with the kids and then the dispute happened and the shooting happened,” he said.

Jace called 911, said he'd shot his wife and then was seen walking out of the home as officers arrived, Vinluan said. He was detained and later arrested.

Jace was booked on suspicion of homicide, and detectives intend to review the full 911 call and other calls from neighbors reporting that shots had been fired before he is formally charged.

Jace, 51, is best known for his role as LAPD Officer Julien Lowe in “The Shield.” He also appeared on the show “Southland” and had small roles in the movies “Planet of the Apes,” “Boogie Nights” and “Forrest Gump.”

Vinluan said there had been no reports of domestic violence at the home. However, the actor had been under financial pressure in recent years. He declared bankruptcy in 2011 and had been delinquent on payments as recently as December.

Gay marriage ban struck in Pennsylvania

MARYCLAIRE DALE
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Pennsylvania's ban on gay marriage was overturned by a federal judge Tuesday in a decision that legalized the practice throughout the Northeast and sent couples racing to pick up licenses.

U.S. District Judge John E. Jones III called the plaintiffs — a widow, 11 couples and one couple's teenage daughters — courageous for challenging the constitutionality of the ban passed by lawmakers in 1996.

“We are a better people than what these laws represent, and it is time to discard them into the ash heap of history,” the judge wrote.

The judge declined to put his ruling on hold for a possible appeal by Republican Gov. Tom Corbett, so it went into immediate effect. The governor, who opposes gay marriage, did not issue a statement or indicate whether he would appeal. However, his state party chairman complained that an “activist” judge had usurped the power of the Legislature.

Amid a frenzy of celebration across the state, county offices in Philadelphia stayed open late to handle marriage applications, while officials in Pittsburgh were closed for election day but accepting them online. Couples must wait three days before getting married, unless a sympathetic judge grants a waiver.

Joe Parisi told his partner to “jet out of work” and get to Philadelphia City Hall.

“We didn't want to take the chance of having this be challenged and missing out on our opportunity,” said Parisi, a Philadelphia resident who plans to marry Steven Seminelli.

They were among the first to get a license Tuesday afternoon, just hours after the judge's ruling.

The judge also ordered Pennsylvania to recognize same-sex marriages performed elsewhere.

Vic Walczak, legal director of the American Civil Liberties Union of Pennsylvania, which pursued the case, said of the ruling: “It's everything we had hoped for.”

State marriage bans have been falling around the country since the U.S. Supreme Court last year struck down part of the federal Defense of Marriage Act. If Tuesday's decision stands, Pennsylvania would become the 19th state to legalize gay marriage, according to the advocacy group Freedom to Marry.

The ACLU had argued that the bans deprive same-sex couples and their families of the legal protections, tax benefits and social statuses afforded to married couples.

Corbett's office was left to defend the law after Democratic Attorney General Kathleen Kane refused to do so. A spokesman for Corbett's office said it was reviewing the opinion.

The Pennsylvania lawsuit, filed July 9, was the first known challenge to the state ban. At least five later test cases emerged, including one over a suburban county's decision last year to issue 174 marriage licenses to same-sex couples.

Bomb blasts in Nigeria kill at least 118

AHMED SAKA and MICHELLE FAUL
Associated Press

JOS, Nigeria — Two car bombs exploded at a bustling bus terminal and market in Nigeria's central city of Jos on Tuesday, killing at least 118 people, wounding dozens and leaving bloodied bodies amid the flaming debris.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the twin car bombs. But they bore the hallmarks of Boko Haram, the Islamic extremist group that abducted nearly 300 schoolgirls last month and has repeatedly targeted bus stations and other locations where large numbers of people gather in its campaign to impose Islamic law on Nigeria.

The second blast came half an hour after the first, killing some of the rescue workers who had rushed to the scene, which was obscured by billows of black smoke.

"It's horrifying, terrible," said Mark Lipdo of the Stefanos Foundation, a Christian charity based in Jos, who described the sickening smell of burning human flesh.

Smoke rises after a bomb blast at a bus terminal in Jos, Nigeria, on Tuesday.

A woman's body, her legs blown off, lay on the edge of an inferno consuming other bodies. In the middle of the flames, an arm reached up. Another woman, unconscious and wrapped in a brightly colored cloth, was being carried away in a wheelbarrow on a road strewn with glass shards.

Dozens of bodies and body parts were covered in grain that had been loaded in the second car bomb, witnesses said. A Terminus Market official said he helped remove 50 casualties, most of them dead. He spoke on condition of anonymity because he is not allowed to give information to reporters.

At least 118 people were killed and dozens wounded in the bombings, which ignited fires that were still burning eight hours later, according to Nigeria's National Emergency Management Agency.

"Firemen are still trying to put them out. We believe we will find more bodies," Mohammed Abdulsalam, zonal coordinator for the agency, told The Associated Press. He said the fires were being fueled by flammable goods at the market, including rubber sandals.

Tensions have been rising between Christians and Muslims in Jos, the capital of Plateau state in Nigeria's Middle Belt region that divides the country into the predominantly Muslim north and Christian south. It is a flashpoint for religious violence, and there were fears the attacks could ignite a new round of sectarian violence.

President Goodluck Jonathan indicated he blamed Boko Haram for Tuesday's bombings, extending sympathies to affected families in a statement and assuring "all Nigerians that the government remains fully committed to winning the war against terror."

N. Korea building collapse kept in secret for 5 days

Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — When a South Korean ferry sank with hundreds trapped inside last month, the whole world knew about it. But in North Korea, there was utter silence about the collapse of a 23-story apartment building for five days, until state media issued a rare apology.

The North is not a black hole for information. More than 2 million people have cellphones. Hundreds of foreigners live in Pyongyang, the showcase capital where the collapse occurred a week ago Tuesday. A handful of international news bureaus, including The Associated Press, operate there, and the city sees a steady procession of visiting tourists, academics and diplomats.

But with no Internet for most citizens, a local press that operates as the government's propaganda wing and a security apparatus that severely curbs foreigners and citizens alike, if North Koreans get news about something, it is almost always because the nation's young leader, Kim Jong Un, wants them to get it.

Kim may not have meant for his people to know anything about the collapse at first. Three days after it happened, a North Korean state-run newspaper carried a photo of the beaming leader watching a soccer match. The date shown on a screen display of a telephone beside Kim was a day after the collapse, according to a South Korean official who spoke on condition of anonymity because the official was not authorized to speak to media about the matter.

Chang Yong Seok, an analyst at Seoul National University, said North Korea may have finally publicized the building collapse because news was likely spreading among citizens in Pyongyang via the domestic cellphone service.

In any case, the delay in reporting gave North Korea's propaganda makers more time to spin the narrative in a way that glorified the ruling Kim family.

Should Bashar Assad face trial?

Reports have circulated over the last several weeks that Syrian President Bashar Assad's forces are gaining the upper hand in that nation's ugly civil war — and are once again committing atrocities using internationally banned chemical weapons.

If an investigation underway by the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons confirms the latest allegation — leveled by France, among others — it will be time to bring Assad before the International Criminal Court to answer war crimes charges.

Why now? Why not a year ago, when Assad used chemical weapons, including deadly sarin gas? Because until recently there remained a chance — slim though it was — for a diplomatic solution to the Syrian crisis and for Assad's negotiated exit.

Members of the U.N. Security Council are reportedly drafting a letter to refer Assad's actions to the ICC. One challenge will be to win the backing of the United States; to that end, the letter has apparently been written specifically to allay U.S. concerns that American troops or the Israeli government will somehow end up before the tribunal.

The second — and far greater — challenge will be to win Russian support. As one of the council's five permanent members, Russia has a veto, and President Vladimir Putin has been in Assad's corner from the start of the civil war.

There is narrow cause for optimism. It was Russian intervention (after the threat of U.S. military action) that led Assad to admit last fall that he had chemical weapons, and to accept their supervised removal from his country.

Chlorine, because of its pervasive use in industry, is not covered under the reporting requirements of the international Chemical Weapons Convention. But that convention, which Syria signed when it promised to give up chemical weapons, does ban using chlorine gas as a weapon.

Mind the opportunity gap

Ever since the financial crash of 2008, we've been having an anxious national debate about the growing income gap. What does it mean for American society when most workers' wages are flat and almost all economic gains flow to the top 1 percent — or to the top one-tenth of 1 percent?

But it's a discussion that too often turns into a sterile squabble over economic theology between liberal populists, who want to tax the rich, and supply-siders, who say that cutting taxes will add jobs, reward entrepreneurship and raise all boats.

So maybe it would be helpful to set the problem of the income gap aside for a while and focus instead on a problem everyone can agree on: the opportunity gap.

The American dream is the idea that anyone can get ahead in life with talent and hard work. But that ideal of wide-open opportunity has been dented quite a bit in the economic stagnation of the last few years.

And that's a problem that Republicans as well as Democrats recognize.

"What I believe unites the people of this nation ... is the simple, profound belief in opportunity for all — the notion that if you work hard and take responsibility, you can get ahead," President Obama said in his State of the Union address this year.

"The income gap gets the headlines," said Sen. Rob Portman, R-Ohio, in a speech last week. "But it's the opportunity gap that should concern us all."

In recent months, Rep. Paul D. Ryan, R-Wis., Sen. Marco Rubio, R-Fla., and other potential GOP presidential candidates have made a point of calling for a new conservative agenda to help the poor and the struggling middle class. Their ideas all build around the emollient idea of increasing opportunity for everyone.

"If we focus on the question

Doyle McManus
McCLATCHY-TRIBUNE NEWS SERVICE

of opportunity, the two political parties may actually be able to have a respectful, fact-based discussion, even though they obviously won't agree on every solution," said William A. Galston, a former Clinton aide now at the Brookings Institution.

But here's a starting point for that discussion: education. Education has long been the traditional route to opportunity for American families of modest means.

But a growing educational achievement gap between low-income and affluent kids is making that path both harder and less accessible.

And the gap is getting wider, mostly because wealthy kids' test scores have been improving dramatically while middle-class kids' have improved only slightly over time.

Strikingly, much of that income differential in test scores shows up among kids who are tested in the first months of kindergarten, before they've spent significant time in school. "It's preschool," Reardon said, along with "the out-of-school environment, that creates the gap."

And the gap only widens from there. Other scholars found in 2006, that parents in the top one-fifth of households spent about $7,500 more each year on their children — on child care, tutors, after-school programs and athletics — than households in the bottom fifth. Much of that spending, of course, was designed to improve kids' chances of getting into a good college, the biggest toll-booth on the opportunity trail.

Canadian writer Chrystia Freeland calls this "the educational arms race."

"We're all going to do everything we can for our kids, of course; there's no way to stop that," she told me. "But it creates a huge difference in where people are at the starting line."

One obvious way to address the problem would be with free, high-quality preschool for all children. Thirty states have already established universal preschool programs, including conservative Oklahoma and Georgia.

So far, Republicans in Congress have resisted Obama's proposal for a federal program that would help fund pre-K programs across the entire country. But if they start seeing results from states that aren't controlled by Democrats, perhaps they can be brought around.

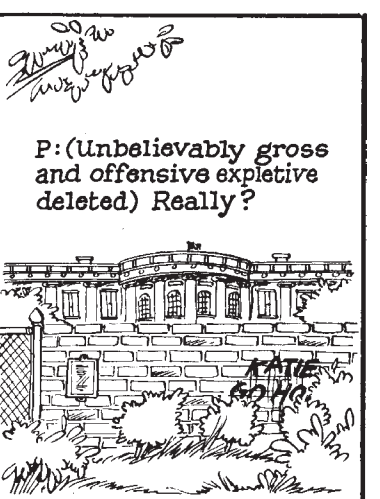

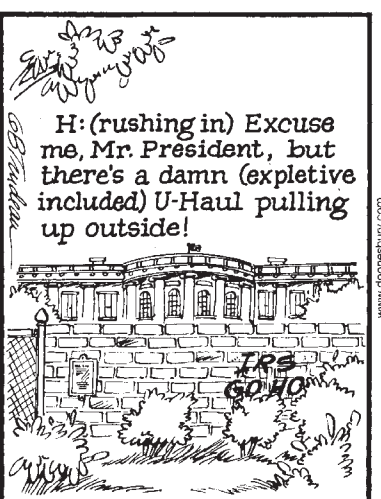

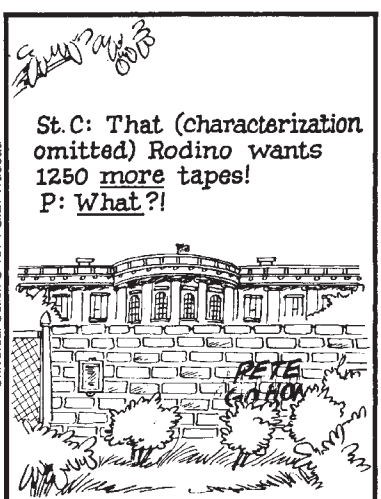

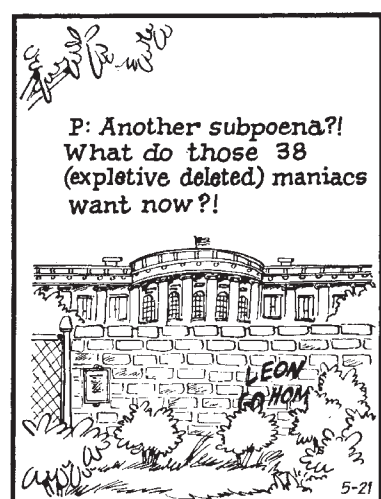

Another important element for leveling the educational playing fields is community colleges, which have historically been a route both to four-year degrees and to better jobs for low-income students.

But community colleges are struggling in both blue and red states. During the recession, states made deep cuts in their funding. The Center on Budget and Policy Priorities reported this month that state spending on both two-year and four-year public colleges has declined 23 percent per student since 2007.

Providing universal preschool and improving community colleges won't close the opportunity gap. But with both parties agreeing that the gap needs attention, they might provide a starting point for creative politicians to find some common ground — and even to seize an opportunity.

'He put Lake County girls basketball on the map'

Mark Oates honored by players, contemporaries

FRANK JOLLEY | Staff Writer
frank.jolley@dailycommercial.com

Mark Oates was a football coach when he arrived at Leesburg High School. He's leaving as the architect of one of Lake County's most dominant girls basketball programs.

Oates resigned on Monday after 11 seasons and three state semifinal appearances with the Yellow Jackets. He compiled a 224-84 mark at the school and produced countless college signees.

Oates said he hung up his whistle to return to his native North Carolina and be closer to his mother and other family members.

The importance he has always placed on family has a great deal to do with Oates' success, many former players believe. Almost in spite of his winning percentage, Oates has always been about more than wins and losses.

He often wrapped up practice by talking about life lessons. Former players said he rarely spoke about basketball during his daily "rap sessions" — conversations that could take as long as 30 minutes to complete.

Instead, he used the time to remind his pupils about life off the basketball court.

"There is no substitute for hard work,"

Cavs maintain lottery luck, get No. 1 pick again in NBA Draft

Orlando will have fourth, 12th picks

BRIAN MAHONEY
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Cleveland Cavaliers continued their remarkable lottery luck Tuesday, winning the No. 1 pick in the NBA draft for the second straight year.

It's the third time in four years the Cavs will be atop the draft after moving up from the ninth spot. They had just a 1.7 percent chance of winning the top selection.

They drafted Kyrie Irving first in 2011 and will hope to do better with this win than last year, when they took Anthony Bennett, who had a forgettable rookie season.

Even changing up their lottery representative couldn't change the Cavs' luck. Nick Gilbert, the son of Cleveland owner Dan Gilbert, was on the podium for the previous two wins, but general manager David Griffin was there this time.

Minneapolis awarded 2018 Super Bowl

BARRY WILNER
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Minneapolis will host the 2018 Super Bowl after a vote by owners Tuesday rewarded the city for its new stadium deal.

The owners chose Minneapolis and the $1 billion stadium planned for the site of the old Metrodome to host the championship over New Orleans and Indianapolis.

"It's been 10 years and we've always been driving to build a stadium," Vikings owner Zygi Wilf said. "We can rejoice right now for being rewarded this, but the hard work comes now."

New Orleans bid committee members believed the new Minneapolis stadium, set to open in 2012, swung the vote. The stadium will hold up to 72,000 for the Super Bowl.

"The new stadium was absolutely the deciding factor," Jay Cicero said.

Age really knows no limits in golf

Billy Payne wore a smile as wide as the Augusta National fairways as he watched eight kids file out of the room with their trophies from the inaugural Drive, Chip and Putt Championship on the Sunday before the Masters.

"We're going to be hearing from some of these kids again," he said.

Yes, but six weeks later?

An 11-year-old girl who won her age group in the youth competition before the Masters has played her way into the U.S. Women's Open next month at Pinehurst No. 2.

Lucy Li, a sixth grader with braces and a sharp short game, made history Monday at Half Moon Bay with rounds of 74-68 to become the youngest player to qualify for the U.S. Women's Open. Not only did she earn a spot at the biggest event in women's golf, she won the 36-hole qualifier by seven shots.

It's another example that golf has no age limits.

The record for youngest qualifier had belonged to Lexi Thompson, who was 12 when she made it to the 2007 Women's Open at Pine Needles. It's only fitting that when Li signed up for the Drive, Chip and Putt, she listed Thompson as among said Baylie Bridges, who graduated from Leesburg in 2012 as the Yellow Jackets' leading scorer under Oates and a key player in Leesburg's 2011 run to the state semifinals. "That was always a big point with him. He doesn't believe in taking shortcuts. Part of his job as a coach and a teacher was to get us ready to succeed in life and everything he did was done with that goal in mind.

"Coach Oates wanted to win basketball games when we played, but he was just as concerned — may be even more concerned — with making sure we had the tools to win in the game of life."

Said Pearl Johnson, a former All-State point guard for the Yellow Jackets, "He has been a father figure in my life since high school not only on the basketball court, but as much off the court. He never gave up on me and always led me in the right direction of success. I love him as if he was my dad."

Johnson might be Oates' most-decorated player for multiple reasons. Not only did she lead the Yellow Jackets to back-to-back state semifinal appearances (2007, 2008), but she also put her playing career on hold in college and enlisted in the U.S. Army.

She eventually served in Iraq.

"I've always been proud of Pearl," Oates said.

Oates stressed that his "muffins and rock-heads" — the nicknames he gave his players — were the most important people to him, outside of his immediate family. Partly because of his devotion to his players, Oates didn't marry until last summer, when he startled many by announcing on Facebook that he had gotten married.

"I knew he had a girlfriend, but I never saw her until they got married," Johnson said.

It wasn't uncommon for Oates to make evening drives to support a former player competing at the college level. When the Florida College Systems Activities Association held its state tournament at the College of Central Florida in Ocala, Oates was in attendance to watch four of his former players — Johnson, Joharra Russell, and Bridges from St. Petersburg College, and Ashley Perry from Northwest Florida State.

"These girls are my family," Oates said. "For a long time, they were the only family I had in Florida. They've always meant a lot to me. They did everything I asked of them and my end of the deal was to do everything I could to support them."

Leesburg enjoyed tremendous success on the basketball court during Oates' tenure. The Yellow Jackets reached the Final Four — state semifinals — in 2007, 2008 and 2011.

No other Lake County girls program advanced to the state semifinals while Oates was in Leesburg.

Still, just reaching the biggest stage for girls basketball in Florida wasn't enough for Oates. He said the inability to deliver a state championship continues to gnaw at him and likely will for the rest of his coaching career.

"We had teams capable of winning state championships," Oates said. "In 2008, I thought we were the best team in the state. For whatever reason, we just never got over the hump when we got to Lakeland (site of the Florida High School Athletic Association state championships)."

While the lack of a state title is a blemish in Oates' eyes, the lime-light he helped to shine on girls basketball in Lake County is something for which many coaches believe he should be credited.

"He put Lake County girls basketball on the map," said Walter Banks, former girls coach at South Lake. "It's as simple as that. Nobody from around the state really paid attention to girls basketball in Lake County until Mark Oates took over at Leesburg. He turned Leesburg into a powerhouse and did it the right way — by working his kids hard and making sure his teams were ready to play."

"The state of Florida, Lake County and the city of Leesburg are losing an incredible educator and coach."

Banks said he doesn't envy Oates' replacement. He said that person would be the high school equivalent of stepping in for a legendary and highly successful coach at the college or professional level.

Oates' successor would get one benefit, however, Banks said.

"Mark is leaving the program in great shape," Banks said. "Nobody will fill his shoes, but they'll have a solid foundation to build on. I just hope whoever they hire is not a part-time coach looking to supplement his or her salary."

"It would be a shame to see that program go down because whoever was hired didn't share Mark's work ethic or drive."

The task of replacing Oates will be a priority for Leesburg Principal Bill Miller.

Miller said he will listen to any suggestions Oates might have for a new coach and he hopes to make an official announcement sometime in June.

Regardless, whoever takes Oates' seat on the Yellow Jackets bench should share many of the traits as his or her predecessor, Miller said.

"Mark was much more than a father figure and a coach to his student-athletes," Miller said. "He was always a positive presence, not only to student-athletes on his team, but to other students and even members of our faculty. The expectations and demands that he placed on his student-athletes resulted in so much success and not all of it was on the court."

"He helped so many girls earn scholarships and enjoy a great deal of success beyond high school. Our school and our community is losing much more than a girls basketball coach."

Said Bridges, "I'm very happy that he gets to go back home, but the Yellow Jacket Nation is losing a great man."

apolis, with Indianapolis the first city eliminated. Indy was praised for a highly successful 2012 Super Bowl, but could have been hurt by the recent legal troubles of Colts owner Jim Irsay.

Irsay underwent treatment after he was arrested and accused of having $29,000 in cash and bottles of prescription drugs in his car. He made his first public appearance since the arrest.

Irsay said Indianapolis will bid again.

New Orleans was considered the favorite and has staged the Super Bowl 10 times, tied with South Florida for the most. Its bid might have been damaged by the blackout that interrupted the 2013 title game.

Next year's game is in Glendale, Arizona, followed by Santa Clara, California, for the 50th Super Bowl, then Houston.

Earlier at their spring meetings, NFL owners tabled any vote expanding the playoffs to 14 teams.

There is strong sentiment among the owners to add a wild-card team in each conference to the postseason, most likely beginning in 2015. Under such a setup only the team with the best record in each conference will get a week off at the beginning of the playoffs.

New York Giants owner John Mara, who is against adding more playoff teams, said the topic probably will come up for more discussion in October.

The players' union says it needs to be consulted on an expanded postseason, and Mara said that would happen at some point if the owners decide to expand the playoff field.

A committee examining the time, length and site of the draft reported to the owners. Commissioner Roger Goodell has said the league is considering several options:

- keeping the draft in May; it drew record TV ratings this year after it was moved back two weeks from its usual late April slot;
- adding a fourth day;
- moving it from its traditional spot in New York to a variety of NFL cities, with a dozen already having expressed interest;

"If I was king of the world, I'd put it right back where it was," Mara said, referring to the April dates.

her favorite players.

Li, from the suburbs south of San Francisco, still won't be the youngest player. Beverly Klass was 10 when she played in 1967, but that was when the U.S. Women's Open didn't have qualifying.

Judy Rankin was a 14-year-old prodigy from Missouri when she entered the 1959 U.S. Women's Open at Churchill Valley Country Club in Pittsburgh.

"When I went to register, they asked me if I was registering for my mother," Rankin said Tuesday. "I weighed 80 pounds. I remember the first tee was way up high. I was shaking. I was so scared, so nervous. I thought I could fall off. I didn't even make the cut. I was probably ill-prepared to be playing. But the next year, I was low amateur."

Teenagers in the U.S. Women's Open are nothing new.

Morgan Pressel, who went on to become the youngest major champion in LPGA Tour history at 18, qualified for the U.S. Women's Open in 2001 when she 12. Michelle Wie was 12 when she qualified for her first LPGA Tour event, and she was in the final group at a major when she was 13.

Lydia Ko was 15 when she won the Canadian Women's Open two years ago, making her the youngest winner in LPGA history. Now she's in range of becoming No. 1 in the world.

In men's golf, Matteo Manassero won twice on the European Tour before he had his driver's license. Ryo Ishikawa won his first professional tournament when he was 15. Jordan Spieth nearly won the Masters last month at age 20. And who can forget Guan Tianlang, the 14-year-old from China who made the cut at the Masters last year?

Even so, two numbers are enough to get anyone's attention — "11" and "sixth grade."

"This is ridiculous," Dottie Pepper said Tuesday, more amazed than concerned. Earlier in the day, Pepper was on Twitter and tried to get her head around an 11-year-old teeing it up at Pinehurst No. 2 when she noted that Li's date of birth was "THIS CENTURY. Whoa!"

Rankin and Pepper both attributed the increasing achievements by teens — pre-teens in Li's case — to modern equipment and coaching.

Bobcats officially become Hornets in Charlotte

STEVE REED
Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — The Charlotte Hornets are back.

The NBA franchise announced Tuesday at a press conference it has officially changed its name back to the Hornets after 10 years of being known as the Bobcats.

The change comes nearly one year after owner Michael Jordan indicated he wanted to change the name back to the Hornets.

The league approved the change last July.

Jordan didn't attend the press conference, but issued a statement saying it's a "historic day for our franchise, our city and our fans."

The Hornets resided in Charlotte from 1988-2002 before George Shinn moved the team — and name — to New Orleans after a messy divorce from the city. The name became available again when New Orleans owner Tom Benson changed his team's name from the Hornets to the Pelicans.

Several hundred fans showed up at the downtown arena for the formal announcement.

Hornets president and CEO Fred Whitfield said the goal is to restore the energy the Hornets brought to the city when they were in Charlotte 12 years ago playing at the Charlotte Coliseum, which was known by fans simply as "The Hive."

It was there the Hornets were consistently among the league leaders in attendance.

"For me this day is almost surreal because I was a Hornets season ticket holder," Whitfield said. "I know what it felt like in the old Hive and the energy and excitement that happened to be there. Michael talks fondly about the days he came in and played against the Hornets and what a challenge it was not only to battle a good team, but also the fans."

Whitfield also announced that in collaboration with the NBA and the Pelicans, all of the statistical information, records and history of the Charlotte NBA basketball will be restored to the franchise.

That means the Hornets will now own and have access to all of the historical elements from the recent Bobcats' era (2004-14) as well as the original Hornets teams that played in Charlotte — including stats from stars such as Larry Johnson, Alonzo Mourning and Muggsy Bogues.

All of the Hornets records from their years in New Orleans will revert to the Pelicans' history, Whitfield said.

"That was a piece that was really important to us because we knew how important that was to our fans," Whitfield said. "Being able to have the old Hornets alumni back and be a part of family was important. We can say to them, 'Hey, you are welcome back and you are a part of the family.'"

Whitfield estimates the name change will cost Jordan more than $4 million before all is said and done. The team is still working through the tedious process of rebranding the arena.

But Hornets logos have begun to spring up inside and outside of the arena.

"It's been well worth it," Whitfield said. "And it couldn't have happened without the financial commitment of our owner."

The Hornets unveiled their new logos in December.

They'll unveil their new uniforms on June 19 and the playing floor design on June 26. The Hornets' name will return to NBA action at the 2014 Summer League in Las Vegas.

The popular Hugo the Hornet mascot will make his official return on June 5.

Pete Guelli, the team's executive vice president and chief sales and marketing officer, said fans have embraced the name change.

He said 90 percent of last year's season ticket holders have renewed for the 2014-15 season. He also said the Hornets are currently No. 1 in the league for new season tickets sales.

HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL

$60M Texas high school stadium closed by cracks

Associated Press

ALLEN, Texas — A $60 million high school football stadium that opened to massive fanfare in 2012 will be shut down for the upcoming season after cracks were found in the building's concrete concourse.

Administrators in Allen, Texas, northeast of Dallas, had hoped to have Eagle Stadium ready for this fall's games, but said further inspections found the structural problems will need significant repair. They insist the architectural firm and construction company will fund any repairs.

The district said Tuesday that both companies had offered $1 million each to allow repairs to begin, but that their insurance companies refused to make the payments.

"Our commitment to Allen students and taxpayers remains firm that the stadium be repaired properly at the expense of those responsible for the failure: the architect and the builder," superintendent Lance Hindt said in a statement.

Allen taxpayers approved a $119 million bond issue that included funding for the 18,000-seat stadium, with a high-definition video board, a second deck on one sideline and vendor stands hawking Chick-fil-A and Texas barbecue. The facility is the flashiest example of the grandeur of high school football in Texas, where the "Friday Night Lights" have been glamorized in books, movies and television.

But the district had to close the stadium in February after extensive cracks were discovered in the concourse. An outside consulting firm hired by the district has found further building code violations, including parts of the stadium where seating capacity exceeds the legal maximum by more than 70 percent.

Allen, which won the Class 5A Division I state championship last year, will not sell football season tickets this year. It will host three "home" games at two stadiums in neighboring Plano and switch two other home games to road games.

NATIONAL FOOTBALL LEAGUE

Ex-players file lawsuit over use of painkillers

BEN NUCKOLS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Opening another legal attack on the NFL over the long-term health of its athletes, a group of retired players accused the league in a lawsuit Tuesday of cynically supplying them with powerful painkillers and other drugs that kept them in the game but led to serious complications down the road.

The lawsuit, which seeks unspecified damages on behalf of more than 500 ex-athletes, charges the NFL with chasing profits over protecting its players' health.

To speed injured athletes' return to the field, team doctors and trainers administered drugs illegally, without obtaining prescriptions or warning of the possible side effects, the plaintiffs contend.

Some football players said they were never told they had broken legs or ankles and were instead fed pills to mask the pain. One said that instead of surgery, he was given anti-inflammatory drugs and excused from practices so he could play in games. Others said that after years of free pills from the NFL, they retired addicted to the painkillers.

NFL spokesman Brian McCarthy, in Atlanta for the league's spring meetings, said: "We have not seen the lawsuit, and our attorneys have not had an opportunity to review it."

The case comes less than a year after the NFL agreed to pay $765 million to settle lawsuits from thousands of retired players who accused it of concealing the risks of concussions. A judge has yet to approve the settlement, expressing concern the amount is too small.

The athletes in the concussion case blamed dementia and other health problems on the bone-crushing hits that helped lift pro football to new heights of popularity.

The new lawsuit was filed in federal court in San Francisco and names eight players as plaintiffs, including three members of the NFL champion 1985 Chicago Bears: quarterback Jim McMahon, Hall of Fame defensive end Richard Dent and offensive lineman Keith Van Horne.

More than 500 other former players have signed on to the lawsuit, according to lawyers, who are seeking class-action status for the case. Six of the plaintiffs also took part in the concussion-related litigation, including McMahon and Van Horne.

According to the lawsuit, players were routinely given cocktails of drugs that included narcotic painkillers Percodan, Percoset and Viodin, anti-inflammatories such as Toradol, and sleep aids such as Ambien.

Toradol, which can be injected, was described as "the current game-day drug of choice of the NFL." The medication can raise the risk of heart attack, stroke or intestinal bleeding.

After receiving numbing injections and pills before games, players got more drugs and sleep aids after games, "to be washed down by beer," the lawsuit says.

Kyle Turley, who played for four teams in his eight-year career, said drugs were "handed out to us like candy."

"There was a room set up near the locker room and you got in line," Turley said. "Obviously, we were grown adults and we had a choice. But when a team doctor is saying this will take the pain away, you trust them."

ICE CREAM: 3 chilly recipes to start the season / C4

Macaron: Quest for perfection

HEATHER SCHROERING
MCT

Surely, all home chefs have experienced a kitchen catastrophe so great they will likely never revisit the recipe in fear of evoking those jarring feelings of defeat. For me, that dreadful recipe was a tiny French cookie that so destroyed my culinary confidence, I vowed to never tell a soul of my failure. Until now.

Success in the kitchen has always come quite naturally to me. With fond memories of family recipes, cooking is a therapeutic hobby. If I'm feeling unimpressive, I take to the kitchen, and in 20 minutes I'm feeling as accomplished as Fannie Farmer. However, I always have more fun than Fannie.

Improvisation with ingredients suited me more than Farmer's penchant for exact measurements. Who can be bothered with systematic use of cups and spoons when everyone in your kitchen is drooling from anticipation of your banana bread with tangy lemon cream cheese frosting?

For years, modifying recipes with nary a glance at the adorable porcelain kitty cat measuring cups that my sister gave me one Christmas had worked for me. As much as I enjoyed the baking process, I was more concerned with making a recipe my own and racing to feed my fans, because the flattery that followed tasted so good.

But my rebel chef swagger was challenged when I met the macaron, the tiny French cookie sandwich that appears deceptively carefree in its delightful pastel colors and creamy fillings but has a wicked reputation for being difficult to make.

A few years ago, in the midst of a surge in macaron popularity, I turned to my prized book, "Baking" by James Peterson, for a recipe. Skipping over all of the textbook hoopla, I looked at the ingredients: "What's so hard about whipping together sugar and egg whites?" I thought. Little did

I know how crucial was this seemingly simple task.

My first attempt, involving a smoky oven and someone else's confusion of wax paper for parchment, shan't be detailed here. But it wasn't enough for me to refuse to try again. Attempt No. 2 was just as tragic.

That second time, I hastily whipped the meringue, taking great care in crafting the perfect color batter. The additional food coloring may have caused it to be a bit runny, but never mind that. The color, Purple Mountains' Majesty, was impeccable. I gingerly squeezed each shell into little half-dollar-size circles on the parchment. I smiled at them, and, as they gleamed back at me, I placed them into the oven. This would be the last time I would see my precious cookies whole.

As I was fitting a bag with a pastry tip to pipe the filling, I heard a strange sizzling in the oven. It was the batter, melting from the pan and dripping onto the bottom of the oven. Three open windows, one fight with the smoke detector and

American's Paris kitchen is a way of life

LORI HINNANT

PARIS — David Lebovitz snaps a photo of a practically perfect croissant before taking a bite, then smiling slightly.

He'll probably be asked for the recipe later, though he did not bake the croissant, nor was it made in his kitchen. But after six cookbooks, more than 27,000 tweets and a food website dating to the early years of html, readers expect recipes to go with the photos of Parisian food most can only crave from a distance.

Lebovitz spent 13 years as a chef at Alice Waters' Chez Panisse, quit to write books in 1999, then like many an American author before him moved to Paris in 2004 without a plan.

"I thought, maybe I'll move to Paris because I can write there," he said in a recent interview after ruefully acknowledging his lack of a dramatic backstory.

A decade later, he has no intention of opening his own restaurant or bakery — France's bureaucracy is daunting even for natives.

"All the rumors you hear about French paperwork are true. I love cooking and I love baking but owning a business it's probably 10 percent cooking and baking and 90 percent paperwork and bureaucracy," he said. "I decided to take a pass."

His latest book, "My Paris Kitchen," feeds into the desire to cook, shop and eat in the city that prides itself on being the culinary center of the world. Half cookbook, half musings on everything from line etiquette (watch out for unexpectedly tough little old ladies) to the acronym-filled documentation that floods every French household (going paperless is a distant dream).

Though practically none of Lebovitz's readers have tasted his food, he has a vicarious following all his own. And his readers — more than a third are from outside the U.S. — don't hesitate to tell him when they think a photo is blurry, a recipe seems off or his take on barbecue is out of line.

"One of the reasons I started my website in 1999 was I wanted people to be able to get in touch with me after my first cookbook.

Recipe for sweet-and-tangy shrimp tacos in less time than takeout pizza

J.M. HIRSCH
AP Food Editor

What I really wanted was pizza. But I was too lazy to drive down to the pizza shop to get it, and they only deliver if you order $40 or more. And as much as I like pizza, that's a lot of pizza.

So I needed a dinner that was equally comforting, equally flavorful, but required even less effort and time than heading into town. My inspiration? Well, aside from the pizza I wasn't having, that is... A 1-pound bag of frozen raw shrimp.

Aside from the cooking of the shrimp, use this recipe just as a guide. I like to top my tacos with soft goat cheese and avocado, but use whatever you like. Ditto for the flour tortillas; corn would be fine, too. Or if you really want, take all

Tea cakes are a Southern favorite

The Melon Patch Theater in Leesburg is closing out its 62nd season with a drama called "The Little Foxes," set in the year 1900 in Alabama. I have had the pleasure of being a part of the cast led by Director J. Scott Berry. This play takes place after slavery, but my role is that of a head house servant. I am expected to make sure everyone is fed. I have some freedom to decide what to serve, so one afternoon I make cakes, also known to us as cookies. I asked myself what kind of cakes Addie, my character, would actually make and the answer was a Southern favorite, tea cakes. I went online and through my cookbook and came up with this recipe, but I have not had time to make it. I have a favor to ask this week. Can someone make these and tell me what you think? I would be interested in the outcome of what is simple, tried and true. The other favor I ask is that you call The Mel-the same ingredients and dump them over a plate of tortilla chips for easy nachos. Whatever you do, don't skip the tiny amount of sugar added when cooking the shrimp. It's a trick I learned from Alex Guarnaschelli. It acts like salt to help highlight the natural briny-sweet flavor of the shrimp.

- SWEET-AND-TANGY SHRIMP TACOS
- Start to finish: 20 minutes
  - Servings: 4

- INGREDIENTS:
- 2 tablespoons butter
  - 1/2 medium red onion, diced
  - 1 pound shelled, raw large shrimp
  - 1 teaspoon sugar
  - 1/2 teaspoon red pepper flakes
  - 1/2 cup thinly sliced Peppadew peppers
  - Ground black pepper
  - Four 8-inch flour tortillas
  - 1 heart romaine lettuce, finely chopped
  - 2 ounces crumbled fresh goat cheese
  - 1 avocado, peeled, pitted and sliced

DIRECTIONS:

1) In a large saute pan over medium-high heat, melt the butter. Add the onion and saute until translucent, about 5 minutes. Add the shrimp and sugar and saute until just barely pink and firm, 3 to 5 minutes. Stir in the red pepper flakes and Peppadews, then heat for another minute. Season with black pepper.

2) Arrange a quarter of the romaine down the center of each tortilla, then top with a quarter of the shrimp and Peppadew mixture. Top each serving with a quarter of the cheese and avocado slices. Serve immediately.

From that 'What was I thinking?' file," he said. "It's what the web is all about. It's an interaction of ideas." Being a cookbook author is something of a strange calling, especially in a city where the average apartment is roughly one-third the size of an American home. It meant that the renovation of Lebovitz's kitchen — the room he considers his office — took on outsized drama, especially when his manuscript disappeared in the disorder. "I have two ovens. I have the largest refrigerator in Paris — that's my desk," he said, seated at a cafe table outside a favorite bakery. Every few minutes someone would stop to greet him, a sign of neighborhood integration hard-won in reserved Paris. France has changed his cooking in surprising ways. "I started relying on things you can buy. Americans are into this whole DIY thing, but in France if you want a pate you go to the charcuterie and there are like 15 kinds of amazing

And, though "My Paris Kitchen" is filled with accessible recipes that reflect how Lebovitz cooks at home, he said when he cooks for French friends, he tends toward Mexican — and he tries to counter his native country's reputation for indifference toward food. "The image of that is changing," he said. "People used to think all Americans ate at McDonalds because that's all they saw."

FATTOUSH

- "I love nothing more than a big bowl heaped with salads of all kinds, especially one dressed with a pungent lemony garlic dressing and a jumble of ingredients," Lebovitz writes in his new cookbook, "My Paris Kitchen." "And one of the most interesting salads is fattoush, a Middle Eastern dish that's sprinkled with ground sumac, a powder that's both a little fruity and a little tart, and tossed with fatteh, the Arabic word for shards of toasted pita bread, which gives the salad its name."

- Start to finish: 30 minutes
- Servings: 6

- INGREDIENTS:
- 2 large or 4 small rounds of pita bread
  - 1/2 cup olive oil, plus extra for brushing the pita
  - 1/3 cup lemon juice
  - 1 teaspoon sea salt or kosher salt
  - 2 cloves garlic, peeled and minced
  - 1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
  - 8 cups torn or wide-cut ribbons of romaine lettuce

- 4 scallions, white and tender green parts, thinly sliced
- 1 cucumber, peeled, seeded and cut into large dice
- 20 cherry tomatoes, halved
- 1/2 cup coarsely chopped fresh flat-leaf parsley
- 1/2 cup coarsely chopped fresh mint
- 1/2 bunch radishes, thinly sliced
- 1 1/2 teaspoons ground sumac
- Ground black pepper

DIRECTIONS:

1) Heat the oven to 350 F. Put the pita breads on a baking sheet, brush them evenly with olive oil, then toast for 10 to 12 minutes, or until crisp. Remove from the oven and let cool completely.

2) In a large serving bowl, whisk together the lemon juice, salt, garlic and mustard. Whisk in the 1/2 cup of olive oil.

3) Add the lettuce, scallions, cucumber, tomatoes, parsley, mint and radishes. Toss the salad with 1 teaspoon of the sumac and a few generous grinds of pepper. Crumble the pita into irregular pieces that are slightly larger than bite-size and gently toss until the pieces of pita are coated with the dressing. Sprinkle the salad with the remaining 1/2 teaspoon of sumac and serve.

MACARON

several dirty dish towels later, I hung up my apron, closed my "Baking" book and promised to never revisit that page, or any macaron recipe, ever again.

So when my editor gave me a stack of new macaron books recently and inquired about my interest in doing a story, I was conflicted.

After weeks of staring at the covers with those glossy meringue biscuits oozing with ganaches and butter creams, I decided I was not going to be defeated by these pretentious, dastardly French confections.

I signed up for a class, "Being a Chef: Le Macaron with Madelaine Bullwinkel," at Alliance Francaise de Chicago.

Bullwinkel, who's been teaching French cuisine at Chez Madelaine cooking school for nearly four decades, learned this macaron recipe from Paris' Le-notre cooking school and tea house on the Champs-Elysees. The macaron is said to have been introduced to France in the 16th century by Catherine de' Medici, an Italian noblewoman and queen to King Henry II.

My main advice: Get all of the tools. You'll thank yourself. The time it will take you to run to a specialty store to pick up a tamis — the only tool missing from the Tribune's test kitchen — will be less than what it'll take to try to push the almond meal and sugar mixture through a typical wire sieve. My arms and I learned this the hard way.

I arose from the kitchen with sore arms but better off than my first and second attempts — I had macarons to share.

VANILLA MACARONS

■ Prep: 1 hour / Cook: 30 minutes / Makes: 50 to 60 macarons

■ Adapted from Madelaine Bullwinkel of Chez Madelaine cooking school. It's best to weigh out all ingredients on a digital scale before beginning. Because precision is imperative to the process, measurements and instructions must be followed exactly. Modifications or substitutions will only make the recipe harder, not easier. Keep the eggs out on the counter overnight and separate them in the morning.

TIPS FROM BULLWINKEL

■ A tamis (pronounced TAM-mee) is a very fine sieve with a flat bottom and can be much wider than the typical strainer. Press as much of the almond meal and sugar mixture through the tamis as possible so the batter doesn't come out too thin.

■ Clean the metal bowl of a stand mixer with distilled white vinegar, which acidulates egg whites so they don't yellow and allows them to rise. It also removes detergent and soap residue from the bowl.

■ You can't always trust temperature settings on an oven. Put an oven thermometer inside for best results.

■ If working alone, stand the pastry bag in a tall beer glass to free both hands for pouring the batter.

■ If you get small peaks on the tops of the shells when squeezing the batter onto the parchment, wet your finger with water, then smooth it over.

■ Bob's Red Mill brand of almond meal passes the easiest through a tamis.

- Parchment paper
- Food processor with blade attachment
- Tamis, see tips
- Curved hard plastic bowl scraper
- Stand mixer, whisk attachment
- Large rubber spatula
- Large durable pastry bag (18-inch)
- #7 or #10 pastry tip
- Macaron shells:
- 250 grams finely ground almonds (almond flour or almond meal), see tips
- 350 grams confectioners' sugar
- 200 grams egg whites, at room temperature (save 4 yolks for the filling)
- 50 grams granulated sugar (sifted to avoid lumps)
- 100 grams confectioners' sugar
- 1/2 tablespoon vanilla extract
- Distilled white vinegar, for cleaning bowl

DIRECTIONS:

1) Heat oven to 300 degrees. Cover 4 cookie sheets with parchment paper. Place 4 more cookie sheets in freezer. (If you have fewer cookie sheets, you can make the cookies in batches, using 2 or more sheets at a time.)

2) Combine almond meal and 350 grams confectioners' sugar in a food processor with blade attachment. Process for 2 minutes, stopping once to scrape the bottom and sides of bowl.

3) Empty mixture into tamis; use a hard plastic bowl scraper to scrape the mixture through the tamis into a bowl. Add any residual pieces of almond meal that won't pass through sieve, or else the batter will be too thin.

4) Clean the metal bowl of a stand mixer with distilled white vinegar. Beat egg whites in mixer at level 2 (or low), for 2 minutes. Turn setting to 4 (or medium); add the granulated sugar a little at a time over a period of 1 minute, letting each addition dissolve before adding more. When the whites are thick enough so that the beater leaves a noticeable trace, turn mixer off; add remaining 100 grams confectioners' sugar. Turn mixer to level 10 (high); beat until the whites have risen and are stiff, about 1 minute. They will appear firm and glossy. Add vanilla; beat briefly to mix.

5) Remove bowl from stand; fold in ground almond mixture in three additions with a large rubber spatula.

6) With a curved plastic scraper, repeatedly smooth the batter up along the side of the mixing bowl to work out air pockets: Starting with the scraper at the bottom of the bowl, lift the batter up from the bottom center, pushing it into the sides as you go. Continue to scrape the sides of the bowl, pushing the batter back down, and then up again. You want to apply firm pressure to get the air out. When the batter looks smooth and falls from the scraper in a steady stream, it is the proper consistency. This may take longer than expected. The batter will go from looking fluffy and airy to being thicker, with no bubbles.

7) Fit a #7 or #10 pastry tip inside the pastry bag. Twist the bag right above the pastry tip and push the twisted portion into the pastry tip so the batter won't drip out. Scrape batter into bag. (If working alone, stand bag in a tall empty beer glass.) If your pastry bag is not large enough to hold all the batter, do this in batches. When it's full, twist top of bag and turn over in the ball of your hand.

8) Dot corner of cookie sheets with a little batter to anchor parchment in place. While holding bag from the top, hold tip close to parchment, squeeze from the top of the bag, counting to 5 to form 1 1/2- to 2-inch circular cushions of batter. When squeezing, do not move bag or raise tip from parchment. At 5, stop applying pressure, and twist in a quick motion of the wrist. Repeat to fill the baking pans with macaron shells. Frequently, stop to push batter down in the bag with the scraper to avoid air pockets.

9) Bake macarons, 5 minutes at 300 degrees. Turn the heat down to 250 degrees; bake another 15 minutes. The batter will have risen and the tops will have a smooth, firm surface. The macarons are done when they do not move when pushed lightly from the side with a finger. Remove the macarons from the oven.

10) To chill the bottom of the macarons and stop them from overcooking, first remove cookie sheets that are in the freezer. Slide parchment with macarons onto a cold sheet and let it rest, 30 seconds. Then slide parchment onto a cake rack to cool completely. Repeat with remaining parchment sheets full of macarons. When the macaron shells are thoroughly cooled, loosen them one by one. Then fill.

VANILLA BUTTERCREAM FILLING

■ You will have extra frosting to freeze for another use.

TOOLS:

- Thermometer
- Stand mixer, paddle attachment
- Decorating bag
- Filling:
- 140 grams whole milk
- 60 grams granulated sugar
- 1 vanilla bean, seeds and pod, see note
- 60 grams egg yolks (about 4 large)
- 60 grams granulated sugar
- 400 grams unsalted butter (3 1/2 sticks), cut in 2 tablespoon pieces

DIRECTIONS:

1) Heat milk to a simmer in a saucepan with 60 grams sugar and the vanilla bean seeds and pod until a skin forms. Stir together yolks and 60 grams sugar in a small bowl. Stir hot milk into yolks a little at a time so that the eggs don't curdle. Remove vanilla pod; transfer custard mixture to a clean saucepan.

2) Heat liquid over medium-low until it coats the sides of the pan (it should be about 180 degrees). Pour custard into a mixer bowl; beat on medium until it cools to 86 degrees. Beat in soft butter 2 tablespoons at a time. Set aside in a cool place until ready to use.

3) Spoon buttercream into a decorating bag. For each macaron, squeeze a 1/4-inch thick layer of filling over 1 macaron shell. Cover with another macaron shell. Repeat.

Triple-decker confection wins national pie contest

Chocolate, pecans, cream cheese and caramel — what more could a pie lover ask?

The combination impressed judges for the amateur division of this year's National Pie Championships enough to win a best-of-show award for John Sunvold of Winter Springs. John came to this year's competition as a three-time winner of the coveted award and once more took home a nice stack of ribbons.

John won his first championship in 2008 when he became the first man in the history of the National Pie Championships to take the amateur division's best-of-show rosette. His U.S. Route 1 Pie: Florida Key Lime with Maine Blueberries used a Key lime foundation, followed by a dividing line of blueberry preserves. The finishing touch was a crown of white chocolate mousse sprinkled with fresh Maine blueberries.

The following year he won best of show with the Iron Chef Pie, a pleasantly wicked creation, with a Key lime foundation and a whipped cream and white chocolate crown over a layer made with semisweet chocolate chips.

In 2012, John again won best of show with Peg's Banana Cream Supreme Pie, combining a graham cracker and walnut crust with a cream cheese layer topped with bananas and cream.

This year, in addition to the blue ribbon in the chocolate crème category and the best-of-show rosette for Ruthie's Park Avenue Chocolatier, he took first prize in both the apple and crème categories, second place in both the open category and the special Paramount Pictures Peach category and third place in Key lime.

Paramount Pictures Peach, a special category for this year's competition, was sponsored by the film company to promote the movie, "Labor Day," which features a pie-making scene. John lost first place in that category to young Devin Davis of Plant City, who won best of show in the Junior Chefs division for two consecutive years before graduating to the adult competition.

Notice the pasteurized eggs specified for the French silk chocolate layer of John's championship pie.

RUTHIE'S PARK AVENUE CHOCOLATIER

FOR THE CRUST:

- 1 1/2 cups graham cracker crumbs
  - 6 Tablespoons melted butter
  - 3 Tablespoons granulated sugar
- 1) Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Combine graham cracker crumbs and sugar. Mix in melted butter. Press evenly into pie plate (9- or 10-inch size recommended) and bake for 8-10 minutes. Allow to cool.

CARAMEL AND PECAN LAYER:

- 30 wrapped caramels
- 1/4 cup milk

- 3/4 cup pecan pieces
- 2) Unwrap caramels and melt slowly in small pot with milk, stirring until smooth. Add pecan pieces, and pour mixture onto bottom of crust. Let cool, then chill.

CREAM CHEESE LAYER:

- 4 ounces softened cream cheese
- 1/4 cup powdered sugar
- 4 ounces Cool Whip

3) Mix cream cheese with powdered sugar; fold in Cool Whip. Spread over caramel-pecan layer, and chill. (If you have a larger pan, you may use 6 ounces of cream cheese, 1/3 cup powdered sugar and 6 ounces of Cool Whip.)

FRENCH SILK CHOCOLATE LAYER:

- 3 ounces melted and cooled bittersweet or unsweetened chocolate
  - 1 teaspoon vanilla
  - 3/4 cup butter
  - 1 1/8 cup fine sugar
  - 3 cold pasteurized eggs
- 4) Measure sugar into food processor and pulse 10 times or until the sugar begins to look like powdered sugar. In a mixer, cream together butter and sugar. Add the melted chocolate and vanilla, and beat with a mixer for 2 minutes. Scrape bowl well. Add an egg and beat for 5 minutes. Scrape the bowl. Add another egg and beat for 5 minutes. Scrape the bowl. If chocolate mixture is not fluffy at this point, you may need to chill the mixture. It whips better if it is cold. If needed, place bowl and beaters in the freezer for about 10 minutes. Add the last egg and beat for 5 minutes. Scrape the bowl and beat for 1 more minute.

5) Spread on the pie, cover and place in the refrigerator for 2 hours. Top with favorite whipped topping (use real whipping cream). Garnish with caramel topping, chocolate or nuts, as desired. Chill for at least 4 hours.

6) Allow slices to sit at room temperature for 5-10 minutes before serving. This allows the French silk layer to soften to the desired consistency.

3 chilly recipes for ice cream season

ALISON LADMAN
Associated Press

Ready to move beyond basic vanilla or chocolate this ice cream season?

Much as we love those classics, with so many crazy — and crazy delicious — flavor combinations flooding the freezer aisle of the supermarket, it's hard to resist making some big, boldly flavored frozen concoctions of our own. We started with a bee sting parfait, inspired by the honey, almond and coconut-studded pastry of the same name.

For a cool and so-very-adult frappe, we combine strawberry ice cream with elderflower liqueur. And to cool off a crowd, we layer on the flavor with a salted caramel malted mocha ice cream cake.

BEE STING PARFAIT

- Start to finish: 20 minutes
- Servings: 2

INGREDIENTS:

- 2 tablespoons slivered almonds
- 2 tablespoons grated coconut, large flakes if available
- 2 tablespoons honey
- 1 banana, diced

This photo shows a strawberry elderflower frappe for ice cream season in Concord, N.H.

- 1 pint vanilla ice cream

DIRECTIONS:

1) Heat the oven to 350 F. Spread the almonds and coconut on a rimmed baking sheet and bake for 8 to 10 minutes, or until lightly golden brown. Place in the freezer to chill for 5 minutes.

2) To assemble the parfaits, add a teaspoon of coconut and almonds to the bottom of each parfait glass. Top with a tablespoon of banana and a drizzle of honey. Add a scoop of vanilla ice cream. Continue layering in this order until you've used all the ingredients and filled the glass. Serve immediately.

STRAWBERRY ELDERFLOWER FRAPPE

■ The elderflower liqueur makes this a grown-up frappe. For a kid-friendly version, substitute an equal amount of juice or milk.

- Start to finish: 5 minutes
- Servings: 2

INGREDIENTS:

- 1 cup sliced fresh strawberries
- 1 cup strawberry ice cream

Oven baking ensures perfect frittatas

JEANMARIE BROWNSON
MCT

Our spring entertaining often centers on brunch after an early morning bike ride or hike in the woods with friends. Hungry, we're looking for strong coffee and an easy to assemble main course. Enter the oven-baked frittata. Fresh eggs, beaten with cream or milk, embrace tender vegetables and fresh herbs.

Easier than an omelet, Italian-inspired frittatas are cooked in a skillet with the vegetables stirred in rather than used as a filling for folded eggs. Frittatas can be cooked completely on the stove top. I prefer to cook them in a low oven where the steady heat prevents excess browning and overcooking.

As for the flavorings, fresh, tender spring vegetables, briefly cooked in advance, welcome the velvety texture of gently cooked eggs. Think asparagus, new potatoes, skinny tender carrots, baby spinach and sweet onions.

In the first recipe, fresh mozzarella offers silken bits in between the eggs and vegetables. When the asparagus is very tender and fresh, I skip peeling the stalks. Fingerling potatoes, cut into 1-inch rounds, can stand in for round new potatoes. Green onions and fresh dill perfume the whole dish.

Bagged, peeled baby carrots work OK in a lunchbox. For a special brunch dish, I seek out the superslender carrots in various shades of orange and yellow sold at specialty markets. Two cups diced butternut squash or sweet potatoes can be subbed for the carrots. With the veggies roasted until tender, then mixed with baby spinach and fresh garlic, this frittata is then cooked in a baking pan for easy transport and serving.

Both dishes taste great served at room temperature or even chilled. Accompany the asparagus frittata with thickly sliced ripe tomatoes and crusty bread. Serve the carrot and spinach version with a mixed-berry fruit cup and toasted raisin bread. Brew fresh coffee, offer a mimosa of fresh grapefruit juice and sparkling wine and you'll have happy friends.

ASPARAGUS, NEW POTATO AND FRESH MOZZARELLA FRITTATA

■ Prep: 25 minutes / Cook: 35 minutes / Makes: 6 servings

INGREDIENTS:

- 8 small (1-inch diameter) new potatoes (12 ounces total), scrubbed clean,

quartered

- 1 bunch (12 ounces) asparagus, tough ends trimmed

- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 4 green onions, trimmed, chopped
- 1 tablespoon chopped fresh dill
- 10 large eggs
- 1/2 cup whole milk or half-and-half
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
- 1 cup diced (4 ounces total) fresh mozzarella or brick cheese
- Chopped fresh dill, for garnish

DIRECTIONS:

1) Heat oven to 325 degrees. Put potatoes into a large microwave-safe bowl. Add water to barely cover potatoes. Cover with a lid or plastic wrap vented at one corner. Microwave on high (100 percent power), stirring once, until nearly fork-tender, 4-5 minutes. Drain.

2) Meanwhile, cut asparagus into 1 inch lengths and set tips aside. Heat olive oil in a 12-inch ovenproof skillet over medium heat. Add asparagus stalks; cook until nearly fork-tender, about 3 minutes. Stir in asparagus tips and green onions; cook 1 minute. Remove from heat; stir in potatoes and dill. (Mixture can be made ahead up to 2 days; re-warm before continuing.)

3) Whisk together eggs, milk, salt and pepper in a medium bowl.

4) Place skillet with vegetables over medium heat. When hot, sprinkle cheese over vegetables. Reduce heat to low; gently pour egg mixture over vegetables. Cook until bottom is nearly set, about 3 minutes. Transfer to oven; cook until a knife inserted in center comes out clean, about 20 minutes. Serve warm sprinkled with more dill.

St. Michaels icon serving up artisanal ice cream

JOSH BOLLINGER
Associated Press

ST. MICHAELS, Md. — Justine's Ice Cream Parlour is mixing old traditions with new flavors with the help of new small-batch, artisanal ice cream.

The recipes come from the handiwork of 20-year-old Tyler Heim, the general manager of Justine's who recently completed an ice cream making course at Penn State University, and is mixing up fresh, local ingredients in the ice cream to satisfy anyone's sweet tooth.

Heim, who has been working in ice cream parlors since he was 13 and described himself as always being an "ice cream parlor kind of guy," said instructors at Penn State really pushed for buying ice cream mix from a manufacturer.

"I figured, why can't I just make my own mix?" Heim said. "I don't want guar gum in my ice cream. I don't want high fructose corn syrup. I want cane sugar, and I want fresh heavy cream, fresh milk."

It's a food science, as opposed to a culinary art, Heim said, and it's all about composition, which he said is something he learned at Penn State.

"We have a secret ingredient that helps our texture become what it is, and that secret ingredient is booze. There's a little bit of Sailor Jerry in there. It really takes it to the next level," Heim said, who added that all the alcohol ends up being cooked out by the time the final product is ready.

"What it does is it affects the freezing temperature, so when your freezing temperature is a little bit below what it should be, it gives it that soft, really emulsified, nice taste to it."

Justine's is now making a french-style ice cream with a crème anglaise base. Heim said Justine's has three or four flavors right now, including strawberry cheesecake and raspberry Oreo, which he said is selling faster than the normal ice cream Justine's uses, Jack & Jill.

"When people tell me my ice cream is better, I don't think they understand what they're doing for me," Heim said. "That is the biggest favor, the biggest push for me."

Other spring flavors include coffee toffee, which uses roasted coffee beans from Rise Up Coffee in Easton, chocolate chip cookie, cocoa dream, New Hampshire Maple, which uses maple syrup from Olivin's in St. Michaels, and a gollywobbler sorbet, which uses sweet blackberry wine from the St. Michaels Winery.

The spring flavors will be sold both at Justine's, 106 N. Talbot St., St. Michaels, and from Justine's ice cream cart at various farmer's markets and events in the area during the summer.

Besides what can be bought locally, Heim said he and his team at Justine's make everything else that goes into the ice cream from scratch, except for the Oreos, and each flavor is done one batch at a time.

Justine's reopened for the spring in about mid-March.

Heim said that his aunt, Kathy Lash, who is the third owner, bought the business about three years ago from the second owners and worked to return it to what it was originally known for as an icon of St. Michaels — a friendly atmosphere with a wall of milkshakes and "awesome combinations."

With the help of the original owner, Tom Quimby, they worked to restore Justine's to its original state, and Quimby trained Heim how to run the business.

"Our whole motto here is you can do whatever you want. Our wall of shakes is a guideline," Heim said. "If you want to have a sorbet shake with cookies and cream in it, we're not going to stop you. You can do whatever you want."

But, Heim said this whole venture couldn't have been accomplished without the rest of his team, including sous-chef Stormi Coram and assistant manager Francis Malzone.

What's more, Heim, who has lived in St. Michaels his whole life, said Justine's couldn't have done it without those in the community, too.

"I really do it for the smiles," Heim said.

"Nobody comes into Justine's unhappy, and especially nobody leaves unhappy."

SALTED CARAMEL MALTED MOCHA ICE CREAM CAKE

- Start to finish: 2 hours (30 minutes active)
- Servings: 8

INGREDIENTS:

- 2 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 1/2 cups packed brown sugar
- 1/2 cup cocoa powder
- 1 1/2 teaspoons baking soda
- 3/4 teaspoon kosher salt
- 1 tablespoon instant coffee
- 1/2 cup Ovaltine Classic Malt mix
- 1 1/2 cups water
- 1 tablespoon cider or white vinegar
- 1/2 cup vegetable or canola oil

MATTHEW MEAD / AP

This bee sting parfait is a chilly treat for ice cream season in Concord, N.H.

- 1 pint coffee ice cream
- 1/2 cup caramel sauce
- Coarse or flake sea salt
- Fresh berries

DIRECTIONS:

1) Heat the oven to 350 F. Coat a rimmed baking sheet with cooking spray and line it with kitchen parchment.
2) In a medium bowl, sift together the flour, brown sugar, cocoa powder, baking soda and salt. In a liquid measuring cup, whisk together the instant coffee, malt powder, water and vinegar. Add the oil, then add the liquid ingredients to the dry ingredients. Whisk until smooth. Pour into the prepared pan and bake for 20 minutes, or until a toothpick inserted at the center comes out clean. Allow to cool completely.

3) When ready to assemble the cake, microwave the ice cream in 10-second increments until just slightly softened. Flip the cake out of the pan onto a cutting board. Remove the parchment and trim the edges off to make a neat rectangle. Cut the cake in half down the center (the short way), then cut each half in half again to create 4 even rectangles.

4) Place 1 piece of cake on a serving platter, then spread a third of the coffee ice cream over it. Top with a second piece of cake, then spread another third of ice cream over that. Repeat one more time, finishing with the last piece of cake. Place the assembled cake in the freezer to firm up for 20 minutes. The cake also can be tightly wrapped in plastic and frozen overnight. If so, let stand at room temperature for 10 minutes before slicing.

5) To serve, slice the cake into squares, then drizzle each serving with caramel sauce. Sprinkle with a few grains of sea salt and serve with fresh berries.

Oysters on the grill are a fine start to summer

J.M. HIRSCH
AP Food Editor

Of the many — Many! — delicious things I've tossed on the grill over the years, I'll confess that oysters never made it onto my menu.

It simply never occurred to me that my experience of this simple raw bar treat could be elevated by the application of a few flames. That is, until I recently attended an oyster event at the South Beach Wine and Food Festival in Miami Beach. At this rooftop oyster outing, numerous chefs were offering up grilled oysters fresh off the flames.

One variation topped the oyster with a thick slab of chorizo and manchego cheese. Amazing. But my favorite was from Hung Huynh, the chef at Catch Miami and winner of the third season of Bravo's "Top Chef." He topped the oysters with a sauce that was deeply savory and had just a bit of heat from jalapenos. I decided I had to make them for myself, and that these oysters would make a fantastic starter for a cookout kicking off summer.

(Recipe adapted from chef Hung Huynh.)

GRILLED OYSTERS WITH MISO BLACK BEANS AND CHILI GARLIC

■ Start to finish: 15 minutes, plus shucking time
■ Makes 3 dozen oysters

INGREDIENTS:

- 3 tablespoons sesame oil
- 2 teaspoons minced garlic
- 1 teaspoon minced fresh ginger
- 2 tablespoons chopped canned black beans
- 2 teaspoons dark miso
- 2 tablespoons minced red onion
- 1 tablespoon minced

Peppadew peppers

- 1 tablespoon minced jalapeno peppers
- 1 tablespoon sliced scallions
- 1 tablespoon chopped fresh cilantro
- 3 tablespoons oyster sauce
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- 2 teaspoons sugar
- 1/4 cup sake
- 1/4 cup water, plus 1 tablespoon, divided
- 2 tablespoons orange juice
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 3 dozen oysters

DIRECTIONS:

1) In a small skillet over medium-high, heat the oil until lightly smoking. Add the garlic and saute for 1 minute. Add the ginger, then saute for another minute. Add the black beans, miso, red onion, Peppadews, jalapenos, scallions and cilantro. Saute for 1 minute, then stir in the oyster sauce, soy sauce, sugar, sake, 1/4 cup of water and orange juice.

Bring to a boil, then simmer for 2 minutes.

2) In a small glass, stir together the cornstarch and remaining 1 tablespoon of water. Stir into the sauce and cook, stirring, for another minute. The sauce will be very thick and chunky. Set aside.

3) Heat the grill to high.

4) Shuck the oysters, pouring off any extra juice and leaving the oyster in the bottom half of the shell. Top each oyster with 1 teaspoon of the sauce. Set the oysters directly on the grill grates and cook for about 30 seconds, or until just barely heated. Use tongs to carefully transfer the oysters (the shells will be hot) to a platter. Serve immediately.
