Eleventh crash victim found

ORLANDO -- A pickup truck involved in a deadly Florida interstate pileup was so badly burned and crushed that it took investigators more than two days to find a third body inside, authorities said Wednesday.

The discovery brings the death toll from the weekend crashes on Interstate 75 to 11. The condition of the wreckage has also prompted investigators to enlist anthropologists to help identify victims.

The newly discovered victim was inside a Dodge pickup truck that crashed into a tractor trailer as it traveled south early Sunday in smoky and foggy conditions, authorities determined Tuesday. The pickup's driver and another passenger were discovered before, but none of the three had been identified vvednesday

Anthropologists from the University of Florida were looking for any bone fragments and teeth that may help identify the bodies.

Convention cops' hotels will cost $2M

TAMPA — Tampa police said it's going to cost around $2 million for hotel rooms to house outof-town law enforcement officers for the Republican National Convention this summer.

The Tampa Bay Times reported that 3,000 outside officers will be in town for the event at the end of August. Federal money awarded to the city for convention security will pay the bills. Once they get there, the out-of-town officers will work a variety of assignments, including traffic control, security details, marine patrol, and dignitary protection and escort.

CRYSTAL RIVER — Workers are clearing a parcel of land near the heart of downtown that will become a quaint neighborhood of old Florida Cracker homes, sidewalks and leafy landscapes. Romney says GOP fight gives campaign strength

Associated Press

TAMPA — Barreling out of Florida with money and momentum on his side, Republican presidential frontrunner Mitt Romney said Wednesday that the bareknuckled nomination fight thus far has toughened him up for contests to come. Chief rival Newt Gingrich is regrouping after a significant loss and faces serious disadvantages in the next states to vote.

Romney, who won big in Florida with a barrage of negative ads, predicted the tone of the GOP campaign was "just a precursor to what you'll see" from President Barack Obama in the general election. And he said voters paid more attention to what they heard in the campaign debates than whatever ads were flooding the airwaves.

"Perhaps what we're getting now inoculates us, or at least prepares us, for what will come down the road," Romney said as he made the rounds of morning television shows.

House Speaker John Boehner dismissed any notion that the bitter tone of the GOP race and the prospect of a drawn-out battle for the nomination is worrisome for Republicans.

"I understand that people are concerned about how long the primary process is dragging out," Boehner said. "I would remind people that President Obama and Secretary of State Hillary Clinton had a fight that went through June of 2008. I think everybody just needs to realize that this will resolve itself."

Looking ahead, Romney said his campaign is focused squarely on middleincome Americans — to the exclusion of others at either end of the spectrum. But his comments Wednesday about the poor appeared certain to be fodder for critics.

A woman infected with the Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV) who was arrested less than a year ago for reportedly having unprotected sex with unsuspecting men has been arrested again two on a similar charge, according to the Citrus County Sheriff's Office.

"I'm not concerned about the very poor," he said on CNN. "We have a safety net there. If it needs repair, I'll fix it. I'm not concerned about the very rich. They're doing just fine. I'm concerned about the very heart of America, the 90-95 percent of Americans who are struggling.'

Questioned about his comment on the poor, Romney reiterated that they have "a very ample safety net" but that "we can talk about whether it needs to be strengthened.'

Obama's campaign, looking to make some money off the GOP squabbling, issued fundraising appeal Wednesday focused on the millions that Romney and his supporters had poured into negative ads.

'That's ugly, and it tells us a lot about what to expect from Romney if he wins the Republican nomination,' said campaign manager Jim Messina. "They're going to try to spend and smear their way to the White House."

Romney said his path ahead "is looking very good" as he heads to Minnesota and Nevada for campaign stops Wednesday. Gingrich, meanwhile, worked to convince supporters that the primary is a two-person race.

Vowing to stay the course, Gingrich said Tuesday, "We are going to contest everyplace." He planned one appearance in Reno, Nev., on Wednesday.

Nevada and Maine have caucuses on Saturday. Minnesota and Colorado have contests on Tuesday. Michigan and Arizona have primaries on Feb. 28.

Romney begins February with formidable advantages in fundraising and organization. His campaign raised $24 million in the final months of 2011, dwarfing his competitors and leaving him with $20 million to fight a primary battle that's increasingly spread across many states.

The former Massachusetts governor has had staff and volunteers on the ground in upcoming states for months as he's prepared for a drawnout fight for delegates to the Republican National Convention in August. Gingrich, meanwhile, doesn't have a strong ground game as he looks to contests in states that could prove problematic for him. And in a nomination fight so far defined by debates — typically a strong point for the former House speaker - he faces a threeweek stretch without one. The candidates will next debate in Arizona on Feb. 22.

Romney won Nevada's caucuses in 2008, and a substantial Mormon population there could propel him to victory. Still, Texas Rep. Ron Paul has been organizing in the state for months and could pose a strong challenge.

area. It will help add to all the other things that are happening in the downtown, and the future homeowners can easily walk to all the amenities in the area," he said Tuesday.

Ensing told the panel despite the current economic times, the project is workable and they planned to keep the home prices affordable.

Other members of the panel were all happy to see new additions to the percolating downtown core. Work was completed last summer on a portion of Citrus Avenue, transforming it into a walkable area of businesses, cobbled sidewalks and decorative street lights.

The memorials ask Congress to direct the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to reconsider the proposed rule and instead work with state and local governments in seeking joint long-term solutions to protect manatees.

Smith said he realizes the resolution lacks enforcement but it's the best the Legislature can do.

"I can't make somebody listen to me," he said. "It's our due diligence to have that voice and speak to Congress. Even though they may not listen, it's still my duty to speak up."

While it's uncertain what Congress would do with the request, U.S. Rep. Rich Nugent supports it.

Nugent, R-Brooksville, has tried to remove funding from the agency's budget to enforce the rule. He said Wednesday he would welcome a state request to intervene.

"All people are asking for is to slow down, pay attention to the stakeholders, be open and transparent," Nugent said. "We've been on it, and this adds more pressure for them to do the right thing."

Judge rules against Florida explorers in treasure dispute

Associated Press

TAMPA — An attorney for the Spanish government said a federal judge's ruling Tuesday means Florida deep-sea explorers will have to start making plans to hand over 17 tons of silver coins and other treasure from a 19th sunken century galleon.

Tampa-based Odyssey Marine Exploration Inc. found the treasure off the Portuguese coast in 2007 in the wreck of what is believed to be the Nuestra Senora de las Mercedes, which was sunk by British warships in 1804.

Last year, a federal appeals court in Atlanta affirmed a Tampa judge's ruling that Odyssey must give the treasure back to Spain. The company then requested a stay of court proceedings as it continued its legal fight to keep the treasure.

In court documents, the exploration firm said a stay of the court proceedings is needed to prevent Spain from keeping the treasure as U.S. courts continue to consider the case. But in an order Tuesday, a federal judge in Atlanta denied Odyssey's motion for a stay.

James Goold, a Washington lawyer representthe Spanish government, said once the mandate is returned to the Goold said that means ture Minister Jose Ignacio Odyssey will have to return Wert said Tuesday's decithe treasure to Spain within 10 days, although he expects another hearing in Tampa soon so he and Odyssey attorneys can again discuss the situation with a judge. Odyssey said it will ask the U.S. Supreme Court to consider the case, but Goold said the request doesn't stop the clock on the company being forced to hand over the treasure to Spain. Tuesday's decision, he said, "removes the latest effort by Odyssey to delay the inevitable."

"Odyssey, I believe, will have to explain how they are going to comply with the orders, how they are going to do it properly and in a timely fashion," Goold said.

Melinda MacConnel, Odyssey vice president and general counsel, declined to comment in an emailed search and exhibition," he statement because the Wert said Spanish authorities are already making plans for how to carefully transport the treasure from Florida to Spain and inspect the coins after arrival. They plan to "put all the coins and objects in the hands of spefor cialists proper restoration and to prevent future damage," Wert said in the statement.

"After the restoration, we'll proceed to distribute the objects between collections of natural museums where they will be the subjects of study, resaid.

Stocks get boost from manufacturing report

Associated Press

U.S. stocks had a big January, and they're starting February strong, too.

Stocks climbed Wednesday after strong manufacturing data and encouraging reports about the Greek debt crisis. The Dow Jones industrial average closed within 100 points of its post-2008 financial crisis peak. Factories raised output in

Facebook to go for IPO

Facebook, which is now based in Menlo Park, Calif., hopes to list its stock under the ticker symbol, "FB," on the New York Stock Exchange or Nasdaq Stock Market. In its regulatory filing with the Securities

City Manager Andy Houston this is fair to city residents.

He is clear that his concern is not about the level of service provided by the sheriff's office under its contract with the city, which Houston says saves the city $500,000 annually compared to the cost of maintaining its own police department.

Rather, Houston's concern is that in addition can easily get into a complex to the taxes residents pay the city for enhanced law enforcement, they also pay county taxes for basic road patrol services that all other residents of the county receive.

Romney needs to get angry

f Mitt Romney wants to win the Republican nomination for president this year, which he clearly does, he has one big hurdle to overcome: it has something to do with his anger.

During the final debefore the Florida primary, former Pennsylvania senator — and winner of the Iowa caucus Rick Santorum took the opportunity to show some clear that taxpayer money will contrast between himself, frontrunner Romney and former speaker of the House Newt Gingrich. He homed in, as he had in the previous Florida debate, on the health-care plan that Romney shepherded into law while governor of Massachusetts.

Romney stunned my typical tweeting-at-the-TV self into silence as he responded to Santorum: "It's not worth getting angry about.

For conservative voters who don't trust Romney, period, and trust him even less on health care who are worried that he did, in fact, set the stage for Obamacare - it was not the best answer. It wasn't the best answer, because Santorum's point was that a government approach to health-care reform isn't the best one, and that the discussion of health-care reform has to start from a position of freedom, not federal mandates. It wasn't the best answer because one of the most energetic and vital grassroots movements to strike a chord with voters in recent years — the tea party — angry at the terrible state of the status quo.

It wasn't the best answer, either, because in the coming weeks and months, I predict that we will see a whole new engagement from religious Americans concerned about the things they will be forced to accept from government-controlled health care. The Obama administration has made fund contraceptives, sterilization and some drugs that could cause abortions. Furthermore, religious organizations that oppose such things will be forced under the law to provide them in employee health-care plans, regardless. The rhetoric this campaign season has suggested that radical, religious Republicans want to take away your personal choice to use birth control. To the contrary: This radical administration wants to insist that things like abortion are part and parcel of basic health care, and that everyone will be forced to pay for it. That's clearly worth a lit-

True, Romney is wise not to join the Occupy screamers, campaign-rally hecklers and talkinghead interrupters. And yet, there is clearly something that resonates with voters about Gingrich. Is it because he is the most entertaining? Maybe for some. Because he never hesitates to challenge anyone who questions him? Maybe for others. Is it because he is the ultimate Beltway outsider? Not so much. But could sprung from activists it be that he seems to embody a sense of immediacy and impatience that voters across the board seem to be feeling?

When Romney quotes lyrics from patriotic songs, recalling his youthful cross-country trips with his parents in their Rambler, this is actually what he's trying to relay: a conservatism, a desire to preserve the country of his youth, the country he was raised to love - a country that won't last, unless people are willing to fight for it, in principle and policy.

But an understandably skeptical voting public needs more. And Romney hurts himself—and shortchanges his experience and his message — when he dismisses anger. People are disappointed, hurting, and, yes, angry. They rightly feel this way about a government that not only gets involved in private matters where it has no business butting in, but that blatantly violates what I and many people believe, forcing mass violations of conscience.

And people are worried: Once the government gets its way on health care, what's next? Romney doesn't have to, and shouldn't, raise his voice or bully anybody. But he does have to demonstrate that he not only understands the concerns that Rick Santorum voiced, but that he can unite Americans and raise up that which is best about this land we love: her freedom.

Alaskan snow

Thus far, Alaska has had a record snowfall of 323 inches and it is only mid-January. Boston, Kansas City and Boise, Montana, don't cry.

Minus cost plus

Reading the "Silver lining to defense budget cuts in defense spending." It is absolutely necessary to cut back, especially on any cost plus programs or items. During the war, that might have been necessary. Once the war was over in 1945, cost plus should have stopped, yet it was going on in 1957. Been there, done that, per orders from above, as well as costs on items that are not for military use, like bathroom handles and things and all that other stuff. It's a waste of our tax money.

Thanks, folks

I was at Cowboy Junction yesterday (Jan. 17) and I was walking through and I was going across the asphalt onto the sidewalk with the curbing on it and I tripped on the curbing and I fell on the other curbing with my forehead and I was kind of in a daze for a while and a lady, a vendor, came over and she said, "You're bleeding." And I had a gentleman friend of mine next to me trying to get me to talk and everything else. And I just want to thank the people that tried to help me get situated and get up so my friend could take me to the hospital. Thanks to all the people that helped at Cowboy

Truck tonnage

While the sheriff's deputies are tracking down the speeders, they also should go through the rules and regulations and see the signs at both entrances of Crystal Oaks subdivision — "No trucks over 10 tons.

Cashier theft

Thanks to the cashier at a store who shortchanged us $10 when we made a $5.30 purchase with a $20 bill.

Another customer told us she saw the cashier put the $10 bill in her pocket. We questioned the cashier and she got her assistant manager and they counted the cash drawer. Of course it came out to the exact amount.

When I questioned her about the $10 bill she put in her pocket, she screamed at me, "Are you calling me a thief?" I calmly said,

She yelled at me a four-letter word. We calmly left the store. That $20 was to last us until we get our Social Security check Jan. 25. We don't need crooks and thieves handling the cash drawers in our stores.

Accept responsibility

There is an old gospel song that goes, "It's me O Lord, it's me O Lord, standing in the need of Prayer, it's me O Lord."

A person who wants to live life positively is in a dangerous position when they feel that when a problematic situation in life develops, the difficulty always lies with someone else.

There is no one that is perfect, no, not one! But it is also true that one begins to move more toward perfection when they begin to understand and accept that in interpersonal activity, no matter what a situation is with any two people, both personalities are in some measure responsible in both the creation and the resolution.

Stonewalling is not an option to resolve difficulties of any kind. Keeping an open door to thoughtful understanding and personal questioning definitely is, and, consequently, allows for expanding the totality of questionable dialogue, leading toward making things better.

Thinking, feeling, verbalizing and/or singing "It's them, it's them, O Lord, standing in need of Divine help," will not cut the mustard, nor resolve very many problems; accepting some interpersonal responsibility just might.

It's not working

I have said many times that socialism doesn't work. It's a tried and failed system. We have ample proof that it's not working by the fact that we will very shortly need an additional $1 trillion increase in the debt ceiling. Didn't we just do that last month, or was it the month before last? No government in recorded history has ever burned through $1 trillion in such a short time. Just wait until Obamacare really kicks in.

Obama and his socialist crowd insist that they can fix it all if they could just tax the rich their fair share. "Fair share" is the Crystal River new buzzword for wealth redistribution, so let's put it to the test. Let's not do it with taxes, but by seizure. Let's take the entire wealth of the 408 billionaires in this country and apply it to the general fund and the budget. That got us $1.3 trillion, plus or minus a little and a balanced budget for this year. However, it does nothing for next year and the year after, and we have destroyed the real wealth producers of the country.

I can hear the cries now that we didn't go far enough. Let's turn our attention to all the millionaires and seize all their wealth. Combined with the $1.3 trillion from the billionaires that gets us up to $15.1 trillion and we can pay off the national debt and be reborn as a debt-free nation. However, without major cuts in spending we will be right back to $15.1 trillion in debt in five years.

Our budget is for about $3.7 trillion in expenses each year, of which we get $2.4 trillion in taxes and $1.3 trillion from the sale of bonds. The billionaires and millionaires contributed 70 percent of that $2.4 trillion and they are penniless now. Now we are $3 trillion short of being able to live a $3.7 trillion lifestyle.

That's the true promise of socialism. You can't make everybody rich, but you can make everybody poor. It's your choice in 2012.

Lewd acts

A student enters into Miramontes Elementary School on Tuesday in Los Angeles. Veteran Miramontes Elementary school teacher Mark Berndt, 61, was arrested Monday on charges of lewd conduct with 23 children after a film processor gave police photos showing blindfolded children with their mouths taped and cockroaches on their faces.

Film developing leads to arrest

LOS ANGELES — It wasn't a veteran crime detective or a neighborhood watch group or even a suspicious parent who helped put a 61vear-old elementary school teacher with no previous criminal record in jail for allegedly committing lewd acts on nearly two dozen children.

It was one of the anonymous photo processing guys at the neighborhood CVS store where Mark Berndt dropped off his old-fashioned 35-mm film to be developed.

Police were called as soon as the film processor saw photos last year of children blindfolded and their mouths covered in clear tape. The yearlong investigation resulted in Berndt's arrest earlier this week. His bail was set at $23 million.

Berndt is charged with committing lewd acts on 23 boys and girls, ages 6 to 10, between 2008 and 2010 at Miramonte Elementary School, where he had taught for more than 30 years.

Egypt soccer fans rush field, 74 dead

CAIRO - At least 74 people were killed and hundreds injured after soccer fans rushed the field in the seaside city of Port Said Wednesday following an upset victory by the home team over Egypt's top club, setting off clashes and a stampede as riot police largely failed to intervene.

It was a bloody reminder of the deteriorating security in the Arab world's most populous country as instability continues nearly a year after former President Hosni Mubarak was swept out of power in a popular uprising.

The melee — which followed an Egyptian league match between Al-Masry, the home team in the Mediterranean city, and Al-Ahly, based in Cairo and one of Egypt's most popular teams was the worst case of soccer violence in Egypt and the deadliest worldwide since 1996. Not even Bill Murray as a movie weatherman escaped a couple of nips from the furry rodents on the set of his popular "Groundhog Day" that put the annual shadow or no shadow ritual on a loop in 1993.

"Of course, the groundhog's most glaring offense is that its legendary weather predictions are complete bunk," said Linda Lombardi, a former zookeeper who has a blog and a book called "Animals Behaving Badly.'

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration analyzed the forecasts of groundhog prognosticators from 1988 to 2010 and concluded there was no correlation between predictions and the length of winter weather in a given year.

Bad forecasting aside, history has a few ugly moments involving groundhog misbehavior on the big day, when designated groundhogs — and some notable surrogates — are supposed to step into the sun each Feb. 2 and predict six more weeks of winter, or not. Treasure hunter says he found $3B WWII wreck

BroundHawg's Day - February 2nd

PORTLAND, Maine — A treasure Wednesday he has located the wreck of a British merchant ship that was torpedoed by a German U-boat off Cape Cod during World War II while carrying what he claims was a load of platinum bars now worth more than $3 billion.

If the claim proves true, it could be one of the richest sunken treasures ever discovered.

But an attorney for the British government expressed doubt the vessel was carrying platinum. And if it hoard could become a matter of international dispute.

Treasure hunter Greg hunter said Brooks of Sub Sea Research in Gorham, Maine, announced that a wreck found sitting in 700 feet of water 50 miles offshore is that of the S.S. Port Nicholson, sunk in 1942.

He said he and his crew identified it via the hull number using an underwater camera, and he hopes to begin raising the treasure later this month or in early March with the help of a remotely operated underwater vessel.

"I'm going to get it, one way or another, even if I was, in fact, laden with pre- have to lift the ship out of cious metals, who owns the the water," Brooks said.

Syria opens new front against rebels

Associated Press

BEIRUT — Heavy gunfire and shelling rattled towns in a mountain valley outside Damascus on Wednesday, as Syrian troops opened a new front in their campaign to crush rebels who have taken control of areas around the capital.

The assault in the mountains overlooking Damascus from the northwest came a day after regime troops largely succeeded in retaking suburbs on the eastern side of the city in an offensive over the past week.

With activists reporting more than 30 killed in violence Wednesday, U.N. ambassadors held a second day of talks in a closed session at the Security Council, trying to win the agreement of Syria's ally Russia to a draft resolution calling for President Bashar Assad to surrender power.

Moscow says it would veto the draft because it believes it opens the way for eventual international military action. Western and Arab diplomats at a high-level Council session Monday that grouped U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton and the British and French foreign ministers insisted no such intervention was in the works.

U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon hoped the Council will respond with a "unified voice," spokesman Martin Nesirky said.

"He's concerned that as time passes, more people are being killed," Nesirky

The United Nations estimated several weeks ago that more than 5,400 people had been killed since March in the Assad regime's crackdown on the uprising. It has been unable to update its count since, and the bloodshed has continued. More than 300 were killed the past week alone.

The escalation in fighting appears to reflect the regime's growing concern over the threat posed by army defectors who have sided with protesters demanding Assad's ouster.

Defectors have appeared in towns and cities around the country, protecting protests, defending neighborhoods from regime assault and launching attacks on military forces and infrastructure.

In recent weeks, the rebels appeared in greater numbers in the towns and suburbs surrounding Damascus, which has been tightly controlled by the regime throughout the country's turmoil.

On Wednesday, regime forces pushed their way up Wadi Barada, a valley in the mountains a few miles northwest of Damascus near the Lebanese border. Battles with rebels appeared heavy. The state news agency reported a brigadier general and two other high-ranking officers in the government forces were killed, and activists said between six and 14 army defectors died.

The valley leads to the mountain resort town of Zabadani, an opposition stronghold that has been under the control of rebel soldiers and protesters for several weeks.

At least 24 civilians were killed as government forces battered Deir Qanoun, Ein al-Fija and other towns in the valley, according to the British-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights. Another activist group, the Local Coordination Committees, put the toll at 36.

title of Citrus County girls weightlifting team champion. Citrus came out on top with a total score of 57 to Lecanto's score of 36 and Crystal River's 14 points.

With the added excitement of the county championship present, the competitors gave it their all. The Hurricanes' Savannah Bingham just did accomplish that by taking first with a clean and jerk of 150 lbs. in the 129 pound weight class for a total of 295 lbs.

Bingham was one of eight Citrus girls to be crowned individual county champion.

"This win tonight makes four county championships in a row for our girls," Citrus head coach Tia Nelson said. "We had eight county champs first out of ten weight classes today.

Melanesia Thomas, who qualified for the state meet at 183 pounds, also won a county championship by hoisting 295 pounds total for Lecanto.

Tonight a lot of my confidence was within my mind as I do work very hard on improving different muscles in my body, working every day at practice and I do run and walk a lot when I am at home," Thomas said.

'Our whole team supports each other as well as our coach and we are a close-knit family," Thomas added.

The Lecanto High catcher competed in the Citrus County girls weightlifting championship before she played in the Citrus Preseason Softball Classic at Vicki Overman Field at Citrus High School.

Florida signs 23 players to letters of intent

GAINESVILLE Will Florida coach Muschamp believes the best way to challenge for the Southeastern Conference title is to be stout on both lines of scrimmage.

He moved closer to making it happen Wednesday.

Muschamp's second recruiting class included eight defensive linemen and the top-rated offensive tackle in the country. The ferred Auburn. The Gators did get two late additions, with defensive end Dante Fowler Jr. switching from Florida State and receiver Raphael Andrades signing with Florida.

Fowler was part of a standout group of defensive linemen.

"If you watched in our league this year, the two dominant teams were very good on both lines of scrimmage,' Muschamp said.

Although the Gators ranked eighth in the nation in total defense in 2011, their line got pushed around in losses to Alabama, LSU, Auburn, Georgia and South Carolina. Even lower-division Furman ran for 233 yards against Florida.

So several defensive linemen in Florida's signing class should be able to help right away.

Both gave their version of the Tomahawk Chop when announcing their school choice on national television.

Boxing legend Dundee passes away at 90

Trainer best known for working with Muhammad Ali

Associated Press

Angelo Dundee, the brilliant motivator who worked the corner for Muhammad Ali in his greatest fights and willed Sugar Ray Leonard to victory in his biggest bout, died Wednesday in Tampa. He was 90.

The genial Dundee was best known for being in Ali's corner for almost his entire career, but those in boxing also knew him as an ambassador for boxing and a figure of integrity in a sport that often lacked it.

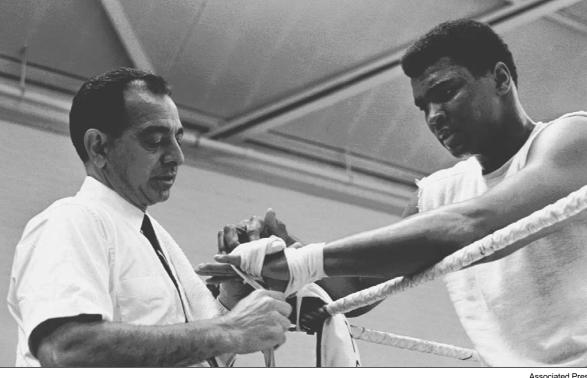

He died with his family surrounding him, said son, Jimmy Dundee, but not before being able to attend Ali's 70th birthday bash in Louisville, Ky., last month.

"It was the way he wanted to go," Jimmy Dundee said. "He did everything he wanted to do."

Promoter Bob Arum said he had been planning to bring Dundee to Las Vegas for a Feb. 18 charity gala headlined by Ali. He called Dundee a legend in the sport, someone who worked the corner for some of the greatest fights of the times.

"He was wonderful, he was the whole package," Arum said. "Angelo was the greatest motivator of all time. No matter how bad things were, Angelo always put a positive spin on them. That's what Ali loved so much about him.'

Arum credited Dundee with persuading Ali to continue in his third fight against Joe Frazier when Frazier was coming on strong in the "Thrilla in Manilla." Without Dundee, Arum said, Ali may not fighter-trainer relationships in have had the strength to come back and stop Frazier after the 14th round in what became an iconic title three times. The pair would fight.

In this 1966 photo, Muhammad Ali looks on as his hands are taped by trainer Angelo Dundee before sparing with Jimmy Ellis during a training session at the Territorial Army Centre in London, England. Dundee, the trainer who helped groom Ali and Sugar Ray Leonard into world champions and became one of boxing's most recognizable figures, died Wednesday at age 90.

"You're blowing it son. You're blowing it" when Leonard fell behind in his 1981 fight with Tommy Hearns — a fight he would rally to win by knockout.

A master motivator and clever corner man, Dundee was regarded as one of the sport's great ambassadors. He was inducted into the International Boxing Hall of Fame in 1994 after a career that spanned six decades, training 15 world champions, including Leonard, George Foreman, Carmen Basilio and Jose Napoles.

But he will always be linked to Ali as one of the most successful boxing history, helping Ali become the first to win the heavyweight travel around the world for fights a 2005 interview with The Associated Press.

Their partnership began in Louisville, Ali's hometown, in 1959. Dundee was there with light heavyweight Willie Pastrano when the young Ali, then known as Cassius Clay, called their room from a hotel phone to ask if he could have five minutes. Clay, a local Golden Gloves champion, kept asking the men boxing questions in a conversation that lasted 3½ hours, according to Dundee's autobiography, "My View From the Corner: A Life in Boxing.'

Dundee also worked the corner to such obscure places as Ali's Oc- with a gold medal at the 1960 for Leonard, famously shouting tober 1974 bout in Zaire against Olympics, Dundee ran into him in Foreman dubbed "The Rumble in Louisville and invited him to come to Miami Beach to train. Ali declined. But that December, Dundee "I just put the reflexes in the got a call from one of Ali's han-proper direction," Dundee said in dlers, seeking to hire Dundee. After Ali won his first pro fight, Dundee accepted.

He helped Ali claim the heavyweight title for the first time on Feb. 25, 1964, when Sonny Liston quit on his stool after the sixth round during their fight in Miami Beach.

In an age of boxing when fightermanager relationships rarely last, Dundee and Ali would never split.

When Cassius Clay angered white America by joining the Black Muslims and become Muhammad Ali, Dundee never wavered. When Ali defied the draft at the height of the Vietnam war, losing 3 1/2 years After Ali returned from Rome from the prime of his career, once said of Dundee.

Dundee was there waiting for the heavyweight's return. And when Ali would make bold projections, spewing poetry that made headlines across the world and gave him the nickname "The Louisville Lip," Dundee never asked him to keep

"Through all those days of controversy, and the many that followed, Angelo never got involved," Ali wrote in the foreword to Dundee's book. "He let me be exactly who I wanted to be, and he was loyal. That is the reason I love Angelo.'

Born Angelo Mirena on Aug. 30, 1921. in south Philadelphia. Dundee's boxing career was propelled largely by his older brother, Chris, a promoter. After returning from World War II — "We won, but not because of anything I did"—he ioined Chris in the boxing game in New York, serving as his "go-fer" and getting the tag "Chris' kid brother." Angelo and Chris followed another brother Joe, who was a fighter, in changing their surname to Dundee so their parents wouldn't know they worked in box-

He learned to tape hands and handle cuts as a corner man in the late 1940s, building his knowledge by watching and learning as a "bucket boy" in New York for trainers like Chickie Ferrara, Charlie Goldman and Ray Arcel among others. Word of Dundee's expertise spread, and seasoned fighters lined up to have him in their corner.

He worked major boxing scenes with Chris, with stops at the famed Stillman's Gym in New York and Miami Beach's 5th Street Gym. Dundee's fun-loving attitude combined with his powerful Philly accent made him a joy to be around. His lifelong love and respect for the sport earned him praise from those across the boxing world.

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Ryan Callahan scored the decisive goal in the shootout and Henrik Lundqvist stopped 34 shots to lead the New York Rangers to a 1-0 win over the Buffalo Sabres on Wednesday night.

Callahan scored in the fifth round of the shootout by driving in on Ryan Miller, leaning to his right and snapping a shot into the open left side. Marian Gaborik had scored in the first round of the shootout and the Sabres' Jason Pominville answered in the third round, beating Lundqvist on the stick side. Both goalies earned a from Mikhail Grabovski and

TORONTO — James Reimer stopped all 25 shots he faced and Clarke MacArthur scored in the third period to lift Toronto over Pittsburgh.

The win gave the Maple Leafs a split of a home-andhome set with Pittsburgh one night after the Penguins erased a 4-1 deficit in the third period before pulling out a 5-4 shootout win.

It looked as if overtime would again be necessary Wednesday until MacArthur took a pass chmann had a pair of assists for the Panthers, who moved one point ahead of the Capitals in the division. Brooks Laich and John Carlson scored for the Capitals, and Michal Neuvirth had 35 saves. Samuelsson's second goal came during a power play and

Miramar CB Howard best in nice class

Associated Press

Tracy MIRAMAR Howard knows Miami's future is uncertain.

He also believes it's bright.

The nation's top-rated cornerback announced his decision to play for the Hurricanes on Wednesday, giving Miami's signing-day class a huge boost and spurning offers from Florida and Florida State in the process. Howard visited Miami's campus last weekend and made up his mind, saying he was undeterred by the ongoing NCAA inquiry into the actions of a former booster who provided extra benefits from athletes and recruits from 2002 through 2010.

Miami self-imposed a bowl ban this past season, and eight players were suspended for at least one game because of their interactions with the former booster, convicted Ponzi scheme architect Nevin Shapiro.

"Nobody knows what's going to happen," Howard class, one that already insaid. "Nobody knows what the sanctions are going to be. ... They took a bowl game away this year and players got suspended. They did their punishment. So what more can there be? There's going to be a Lauderdale, wide receiver sanction. No doubt about it. Angelo Jean-Louis of Palm Florida on the notion of Miami.

said Romney's campaign didn't seek approval to use the song, and he would not have granted permission if it had.

The Somali-born, Canadian-based rapper said he would happily grant President Barack Obama's campaign the use of the song.

K'Naan said he wants to make sure Romney does not use his song again and is seeking legal action.

Romney spokesman Rick Gorka said the song was used through the campaign's regular blanket license but, out of respect for K'Naan's statement, won't be used again.

'Wavin' Flag'' was an international hit for K'Naan in 2010, co-written and coproduced by Bruno Mars' production team, The Smeezingtons.

Filmmaker arrested at hearing

WASHINGTON - An Oscar-nominated documentary filmmaker was arrested at a House hearing Wednesday after trying to film the proceedings without the required media credentials.

Joshua Fox of Milanville, Pa., was led out of the room in handcuffs and charged by Capitol Police with unlawful entry.

Fox directed the antidrilling documentary "Gasland," which was nominated last year for an Oscar. Fox is also an activist who has spoken out against hydraulic fracturing, or fracking, the subject of the House Science, Space and Technology subcommittee hearing.

Fracking takes place when large volumes of water, sand and chemicals are injected into wells to break up underground rock formations, allowing natural gas to escape.

The oil and gas industry has criticized Fox and his film for what they say is a sensationalized attack on fracking.

Democrats forced two votes one to allow Fox to film the hearing and a second to recess the hearing for a week so that Fox could obtain credentials. Both motions were defeated on a party-line vote.

Committee Republicans issued a statement saying that committee rules state, "Personnel providing coverage by the television and radio media shall be currently accredited to the Radio and Television Correspondents' Galleries.'

"The individual removed was not accredited by the House Radio and TV Gallery and had refused to turn off his camera upon request by Capitol Police.'

LOS ANGELES — "Soul Train" host Don Cornelius was the arbiter of cool, a brilliant TV showman who used his purring, baritone voice to seduce mainstream America into embracing black music and artists.

But the "love, peace and SOUL!" he wished viewers as he closed each show for decades escaped him as his life descended into marital trouble, illness and, finally, a fatal self-inflicted gunshot wound Wednesday.

Police said they went to his Mulholland Drive home around 4 a.m. after receiving a call from one of his sons, who became concerned after being contacted by his father. Cornelius, 75, was found shot and was pronounced dead an hour later at a nearby hospital.

Authorities ruled out foul play, but have not found a suicide note and are talking to relatives about his mental state. To music-hungry viewers, he was a smooth, sharp-dressed man who got them dancing to the hottest tracks going. The pop world's biggest stars recalled him as much more: A cultural groundbreaker who advanced African-American music and culture; a black entrepreneur who overcame racism by strength of will; a visionary who understood rap's emergence but criticized its rawness. Aretha Franklin, an early "Soul Train" performer, called him "an American treasure."

God bless him for the solid, good and wholesome foundation he provided for young adults worldwide," she said, "and the unity and brotherhood he singlehandedly brought about with his most memorable creation of 'Soul Train.'

Debra Lee, who is chairman and chief executive of Black Entertainment Television, was one of those youngsters who tuned in to the show. She said she would finish her chores early so she could check out the latest music, fashions and dance moves.

"His reach is just amazing, and personally he was such a charming man," she said, calling Cornelius a role dancing and I knew black kids can model and "a great interviewer who knew how to connect to artists" and had "the best voice in the world."

acts to TV. It was one of the first TV shows to showcase African-American artists including Franklin, Marvin Gaye and Barry White.

"You have to dream," Cornelius said in a 1995 interview. "I dreamed everything. I used to introduce Marvin Gaye in my living room. So when the time came that I was going to really introduce guys like Marvin Gaye and Steve Wonder, I had done it before.'

"Soul Train" had a whimsical cartoon train and whistle that opened each show. And Cornelius would close each show with his sign-off: 'Love, peace and SOUL!" drawing out the pronunciation of the last word with his deep voice.

Cornelius' world grew dark in recent years as he faced fallout from a divorce and other pressures. In 2009, he was sentenced to three years' probation after pleading no contest to misdemeanor spousal battery and, in his divorce case that year, he also mentioned having significant health problems.

He has two children, Anthony and Raymond, with his first wife, Delores ocal wine shops sell wines ranging from $4 to $400. The big question is what level of value (wine quality) do you get for your money? And what do we mean by QPR (Quality to Price Ratio)?

As with most retail products, wine is divided into a number of price categories. Generally, we get what we pay for. So if you choose a BMW over a Chevy, the known as the "law of diminishing reprice difference of more than $50,000 is turns." A the price goes up and up, at worth it. Or is it? Now what about wine prices? Is the question is how close does price come to $50 bottle of wine fives times as good and one costing $10?

The rub here is QPR. The issue of wine prices is a tough one to explain to folks who are conditioned to believe somehow the higher the price the better the wine. This is true to a point and that point is some point you, the consumer, start getting less value for your money.

Retail wine prices can vary by more than a thousand fold. The important determining quality, and the quick answer is not very. Let me explain. The price of a wine is t's a bit early in the year to be talking about ice cream, but there is good news for fans of a southern Ohio brand soon to be in our Publix Supermarkets.

"Snowbirds from Ohio have shipped Graeter's Ice Cream to Florida for years, spreading the secret of Cincinnati's iconic ice cream brand," according to a product spokesman. "Now, the brand is available in four signature-chip flavors at Publix grocery stores. When heavy hitters like Emeril Lagasse and Bobby Flay Graeter's, you know it has to be good."

This is a fourthgeneration, family-owned company that pioneered the French Pot process of making only two gallons at a time with all-natural ingredients like heavy cream and pure cane sugar. The end result is a dense, creamy texture and massive chocolate chips.

Black raspberry chocolate chip in a pint is Graeter's best-selling flavor. The other flavors to be available at Publix are vanilla chocolate chip, mint chocolate chip and double chocolate chip.

I've heard and read a lot about Graeter's special ice cream and can't wait to try it.

Food Network, book take on weight issues

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Paula Deen's diabetes revelation pretty much sums it up: Kitchen pros at all levels struggle with obesity and its dangerous aftertaste in the high-pressure, high-calorie world of food.

The queen of Southern comfort cooking, now a spokeswoman for a diabetes drugmaker's health initiative, announced last week she hid her Type 2 diabetes for three years while continuing to cook up deep-fried cheesecake and bacon-andegg burgers between doughnuts on TV.

Choosing to digest her ill health privately all those years, Deen's story is familiar to those in chef's jackets who already had gone public with the question few in their world love to talk about: How do you stay healthy while trying to earn a living making food?

On Thursday, a dozen chefs, restaurant owners, caterers and others will search for the answer. That's when the Food Network premieres "Fat Chef," which follows participants for 16 weeks as they struggle to lose weight and learn a healthier way of life with the help of trainers, nutritionists and therapists.

'You have this abundance of food all around you," said pastry chef Michael Mignano, who's one of the dozen. "You're doing parties, you have weddings. There's always a lot of food left over. You're constantly tasting, working late hours, eating

Mignano, 36, owns a bakery in Port Washington, N.Y. At 6 foot 2, he weighed about 500 pounds soon after he was diagnosed with Type 2 diabetes in 2010, before "Fat Chef" went into production last October. His resolve to do something about his weight grew stronger as the result of a different Food Network show on which he appeared in September, "Sweet Genius." that show, but I was nervous about whether the jacket would fit me," said Mignano, who now weighs about 400 clares:

ahead to reach his goal weight of 250. "Watching myself on that show, I was the fat guy. That's all I saw. I felt almost like a drunk seeing himself on the floor passed

Going public with his weight loss journey hasn't been easy for Mignano and others in similar unhealthy dire straits. As chefs, the constant food stimulation by sight, smell and taste was compounded by personal struggles and family obligations.

Art Smith, who doesn't appear on the show, is a child of fried chicken and other Southern staples like his old pal Deen. Like Deen, he was diagnosed with Type 2 diabetes about three years ago.

Also 6 foot 2, Smith ballooned to 325 pounds while gorging on refined sugar, caffeine, PB&Js — anything that gave him an instant energy boost or filled him up at the end of an exhausting day as a chef for Oprah Winfrey.

Exercise? He could barely walk a block, until he decided to turn it all around and lost 118 pounds. Now 51, the Jasper, Fla., native, restaurant owner, cookbook author and food TV personality has kept the weight off.

Smith has run marathons, eats oatmeal and egg whites for breakfast, drinks plenty "I wasn't nervous about of water and has expanded Threads, his Common low-income kids. He de-"I've got my sexy struggle with obesity and serious health threats like diabetes, but most do think about weight and how to hold back the extra pounds.

Allison Adato, a senior edwriter for People magazine, is out in April with a book, "Smart Chefs Stay Slim." offering insights and tips from three dozen of the biggest names in the industry.

"Paula Deen's revelation may mark a turning point for some viewers and diners," Adato said. "My hope is this moment creates a broader awareness that the way a person eats does have an impact on his or her health. Fortunately, there are a lot of chefs who have already thought about how balance a healthy lifestyle with enjoying wonderful food."

Surrounded by rich, decadent food and their need to earn a living from it, Adato's chefs stay fit by keeping hyper-aware of every calorie. Some balance out their food excesses over a few days, indulging one day, but "eating clean" the next. They know the difference between tasting the food they prepare without gorging on it, and exactly how much dessert to enjoy.

As a pastry chef, Mignano said his problem wasn't so much the chocolate he was healthy eating initiative for surrounded by. It was the insulin or do not use it effijunk food he'd slam down ciently, allowing excess before and after work.

Ally Vitella, 41, a New mulate in the blood.

Obviously not all chefs York City caterer, discovered she had Type 2 diabetes at the first health check-in for "Fat Chef." At 5-9, she weighed 345 pounds and was forced to sit guiltily by as her husband and itor and former food beat mother-in-law lugged catering ovens and other equipment up and down the stairs of their Manhattan clients.

After a job, "You're kind of a scavenger. I was eating hors d'oeuvres for lunch and dinner. I would scoop up half a tray of food and eat it. We were ordering pizza and Chinese food at home because we were exhausted all the time," she said. "We cook things you're supposed to eat once in a while, but I was eating them every day.'

Vitella, who lives in North Caldwell, N.J., dropped from a size 28 to a size 16 during the show, losing nearly 60 pounds. Her goal weight is 190, but the important thing, she said, is she can play again with her 7year-old son and 9-year-old daughter.

"I've learn that tasting means tasting, not tasting the same dish five times, Vitella said.

Escalation of Type 2 disease in the U.S. has been closely tied to obesity. Roughly 23 million Americans are believed to have the most common Type 2 diabetes; patients' bodies either do not produce enough sugar, or glucose, to accu-

This still beats driving in an open buggy, though, like we used in Indiana before we moved here to Michigan. Some people have windshield wipers on their buggies, but the wipers have to be flipped back and forth by hand by turning a knob on the inside.

As fast as this snow was coming down, it would have been hard to keep up. The horses have a special shoe that gives them a good grip on snow and ice, but the buggy slides back and forth on ice, especially going around corners.

We brought Jacob and Emma's 4-year-old son, Steven, home with us from church. We told Jacob and Emma to come for supper later on. Steven sure felt proud for all of the attention from us.

He was like medicine for Kevin, who was looking out in the window when we came home. When he saw we brought Steven with us, he started jumping up and down with excitement.

Daughters Verena, 14, and Lovina, 7, played Aggravation with Steven and Kevin. It was so cute to see Steven act so grown-up while playing. Jacob and Emma arrived around 5 p.m. to pick him up and have supper. Joe grilled 20 was more than enough.

It was put to use in today's lunches for whoever will take the leftover macaroni and cheese, but he would much rather have macaroni and cheese or soup or something like it than meat in his lunch.

On the menu for Sunday supper besides barbecued chicken was mashed potatoes, gravy, macaroni and cheese, corn, bread and butter, onion slices, hot peppers, ice cream and chocolate cake. Emma brought the cake.

Kevin doesn't want to let the fever keep him down. After he had his medicine and his fever went down. he said,"Mama I am better." I told him "your forehead still feels warm." So he comes back with his hair damp and said "now feel my forehead." He was in the bathroom holding a cold washcloth to his forehead. He asked if he could take his temperature by himself and he said, "the score is 100."

We have a lot of laundry waiting to be washed. Daughter Elizabeth is starting, so I best go help her.

Susan is washing the dishes and going to mop the floors while we do laundry and keep an eye out for Kevin who keeps going even with a fever.

Kevin told me yesterday when we came home from church, "Mom, I think Susan really cares for me, because she told Verena and Loretta to keep an eye out for Kevin while we are at church." Needless to say, he is keeping us entertained even though he is running a fever.

I will share the apple dump cake recipe that Verena made at school and now makes for us here at

The key to ensuring dinner is substantial and healthy? Fiber.

Adding plenty of whole grains and vegetables not only provides piles of nutrients, it also fills you up and keeps you full for long after the meal has finished. These foods also tend to be lower in calories, which means you can load up without getting weighed down.

This one-dish meal is rich in savory flavors thanks to a blend of mushrooms and cheese, as well as plenty of fiber from the farro.

Mass. watercolorist returns for Citrus workshop few years ago, artist Paul George at the monthly meeting of the Citrus Watercolor Club (CWC). George is a masterful watercolorist and, should anyone purchase one his paintings, they fetch a substantial sum. When the

As I was president of the CWC at the time, he entrusted the painting to me. I loaded the art piece into the back of my SUV, being careful to lay it flat so that it would not be damaged. Then I proceeded to load some audio equipment further into the back and headed for Ho-

As I traveled down County Road 581, a vehicle suddenly pulled out in front of me. I slammed on the brakes and heard the awful noise of audio equipment tumbling over in back of me. Upon inspection, I found the Paul George painting had sustained a huge black mark across part of it.

Good grief! How could I face Paul George with this disaster? I decided to come clean with him, and the next morning rushed it where he was conducting a workshop. He kind of scowled at me when he saw what I had done, but then commented, "Not to fear.'

He is a signature member of the National Watercolor Society and an active member of the New England Watercolor Society, Cape Cod Art Association and North Shore Art Association. PHILLIP ALDER Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Mark Twain said, "My mother had a great deal of trouble with me, but I think she enjoyed it.'

Many players would have a great deal of trouble with this deal, but if West found the winning defense, he and his partner would enjoy it.

Look at the West and North hands. South is in four spades. West leads the heart ace: five, two, jack. What should West do next? Where will he find three more tricks?

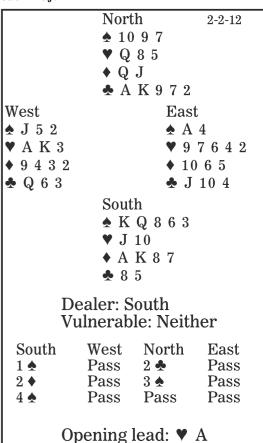

North was right to force to game on the second round of the auction, his queen-jack of diamonds having been improved by South's rebid in that suit. When West leads the heart ace, promising the ace and king, East is normally expected to indicate whether he has the queen. However, when that card is in the dummy, East should signal count; here, playing his lowest heart with an odd number of cards in the suit. This tells West that South has a second heart. (South cannot have four hearts, because he would have rebid two hearts.)

Then West thinks about high-card points. He has 10 and dummy 12. That leaves only 18 for East and South. East can have only one helpful card. If that is the diamond ace, the contract is probably unbeatable. But if it is the spade ace, there is a

West should cash his heart king and play a third round to dummy's queen.

South discards a diamond and plays a trump, but East can win this trick or the next trump trick and lead a heart, which promotes West's spade jack to a winner, giving the defenders two tricks in each major.

freshman. My "Katie," is a sophomore in you should express your concern

"Jessie," is a bit wild. In November, Jessie messaged me on Facebook. She said she had transferred to a private school because the public school good for "wasn't rebels." She told me she drank and attended crazy parties. She said she often does her homework and she was writing me during Spanish class.

When I came home for winter break, I mentioned the conversation to Katie. She believes if I send this to Jessie's parents, it will cause a huge rift between our families. She thinks I should send it to Jessie's school because they are the only ones who can effect any change.

Should I send this to her school? Wouldn't they question my motives, especially since I've waited so long to do anything?

Dear Student: You have no idea whether Jessie is telling the truth or simply trying to shock you. The message could even be a cry for help, in the hope someone will care enough to be upset with her. Her parents are already aware of her problems, and we doubt the school is oblivious. On your next trip home, it ear Annie: I am a college how she's doing. If they think attend the wedding as a guest. sister, their daughter has shaped up, > this may not be so. You also can suggest to Jessie she talk to the school counselor. But beyond that, we caution you to stay out of

> Dear Annie: My fiancé, "Steve," has a rockv with his sister, "Sara." We live in New York and are planning to marry next year in Georgia.

The problem is, Steve doesn't want

Sara to be a bridesmaid, because he thinks she will create drama, and he doesn't want our day to be about her. But she is going to be my sister-in-law, and I'd like her to be one of my bridesmaids. I hope to build a close relationship with her in the future.

Since she will have to travel from New York to Georgia to attend the wedding anyway, I cannot imagine not asking her to be in the bridal party. My sister and brother will be attendants, along with one of my cousins. Steve has promised to abide by your advice. — New York

Dear New York: We think you should give Sara the opportunity to do the right thing. It could be a good way for her to make amends for past hurts and be closer to her brother. Everyone deserves a second chance.

Dear Annie: I'd like to tell "In Doubt" if she has a gut feeling her husband is having an affair, he probably is.

Had anyone asked who had the most perfect marriage, the answer would have been my husband and me. After 40 years, I believed he was honest and sincere, but he began flirting with a younger woman in our neighborrelationship hood. When I asked him about little things that bothered me, he always assured me there was nothing going on.

When I finally discovered the truth, the affair had gone on for four years. He'd taken this woman on vacation (supposedly a men's fishing trip) and met up with her for sex in all sorts of places. It was new and exciting to him.

So, if you have that gut feeling and there are worrisome signs, hire a detective. You may not think he would lie, but men get so carried away and feel so young they would say anything to be able to continue. — Been There
