No. 2

The front cover is an elegant sport of Esther Smith and the inside front cover is a Showtime, both grown in Bill & Molly Howell's yard in Wilmington, NC. Bill would like to see more shows held before Christmas to showcase such beauties which bloom at the wrong time to make later shows. Gibberelic acid makes shows possible beginning in mid-October through bloom-out in late spring.

Plan to attend this year's ACCS Convention!
September 14-15 at the
Litchfield Beach and Golf Resort

President's Message Mack McKinnon

Unusually moderate temperatures in winter and spring produced outstanding camellia blooms and larger than average shows and is now part of our “eye candy” history. Greenhouse growers enjoyed lower power bills and unprotected growers were inundated with great numbers of quality blooms. I trust you enjoyed the shows as much as I and, hopefully, placed blooms on the head table. It is great fun to work at a show, enjoy camellia blooms you may have never seen and remember the old ones that may have significance to you and be a part of pleasant memories. Greeting old friends and watching excited exhibitors groom a bloom and “do their thing” to enter the prize winning bloom is always exciting.

Almost everyone has a personal technique for handling blooms and will happily share techniques with you when you seek advice. Many things are also learned by making your own observations when you know the exhibitor is under pressure and might not have time to answer your questions and get their blooms in by the designated cut-off time. Sometimes it is best to hold our questions to make conversation after entering and before judging.

This mild season was not only a blessing but also a curse for many growers. The curse was that flower blight showed up with vengeance and many inside growers as well as outside growers bloomed out before a normal season usually ends.

A major problem has been weeds, some of which your agricultural University would have trouble identifying. Dave Blackwell (who has gone to the camellia greenhouse in Heaven) coined a name for one of the more prolific weeds which I have in great abundance-- "chickweed supreme." If anyone wants a scion of this variety, it can be in the mail tomorrow.

Mark your calendar for the fall ACCS Convention this coming September 14 & 15 at the Litchfield Beach & Golf Resort. We know from past experiences that we will have a wonderful time and an informative convention. The ACCS Board meeting was held on April 28 prior to the picnic with the Mid-Carolina Camellia Society at the home of Pete and Donna Denton in West Columbia.

In the meantime, don't forget to start putting aside your plants and items for the fundraiser at Litchfield. You probably have a duplicate air layer or graft that someone would love to have in their collection. We depend upon these contributions from members to provide moneys from the raffles and auction for this publication and projects.

Presentation Preparation (The Story Behind The Story)

By A Ghost Writer

Many of us just cannot fathom all the time and aggravation that goes into preparing a program for the Atlantic Coast Camellia Society Convention. I thought it would enlighten the minds of many members to go behind the scenes and pick up the myriad factors and details that went into the preparation of the outstanding program on preparing and transporting camellias for show exhibition that was presented by champion exhibitors Buck and Tyler Mizzell from Santee, South Carolina at the 2011 Convention at Litchfield Beach.

Tyler took out her pad and pen and started the outline for their program. She asked Buck about an appropriate starting point. Buck replied, “I ain’t know what ta do. Mah pink radio where I plays dat cowboy music to mah camellias done gone on de blink. Heah it is Septemba and ah jes got to get dem camelliahs ready to produce dem prize winnahs for de early fall shos.”

Tyler replied, “Buck, don’t bother me now with such petty complaining. You know that I am preparing a ‘state of the art’ educational program for the ACCS Convention and I am seeking your input.”

Buck—“What in the worl you spect me ta do. De only way I can keep your and my repotation spectable is to take care of dese camelliahs eva day of mah life. Yenna and me jes got to stay at de top o de stack in de winnah’s circle or dem people at ACCS wouldn’t respect us enough to eenvite us to the convention much less teach dem bout what de Mizzell’s does. Anyways, takin caeh of planning dat program jes got to wait til I take dis out-o-wack radio down de road to Bonnie’s repaih shop.”

The back screen door slams indicating that Buck has delivered the radio to Bonnie and is back. “Tylah! Tylah! Ah’s back and am buckin to hep you all wit that ACCS presentation.”

“Very well, Buck,” said Tyler. “Let us again start at the beginning.” As usual Buck interrupts with, “Da beginning? Ah’l tel you de beginning. De beginning is to go out among de gnats and skeeters in August an start treatin yo camelliah buds. Dat fust show gonna be at de Jawjah National Fair, den to South Calina Fair, den Wilmington, den Jacksonville, NC, den Byron, Jawjah, den Ginia and Flahda. Dat means we gib five weeks runnin and den we'll wait til Thanksgiving and gib each week after dat fo de shows beginnin in January."

Buck—"Tylah, you de one who do the gibbin so you knows where ahm comin from. Heh, heh, heh, Tylah, ya gits whea ahm comin from? Even a pin head jes have ta know you can't tell people how ta pack up flowahs and prepare them for a show if yenna don't have any flowahs to take ta a show and you hav ta gib ta git dem. Ya git dat? Hey, hey, hey." (ring ... ring ... ring ... ring ...) "Tylah, ansah dat telephone. Dat ring gonna be in mah ear all de blasted day."

Tyler—"It's Bonnie's repair shop. She has your pink radio repaired but is warning you that new radio parts have been invented and parts are no longer available for your pink radio. She used the last tube from an antique radio she purchased at an auction to get your pink radio playin again. If it breaks again you will have to order one from the Sears Roebuck catalog—be certain not to tear out the radio pages from the catalog in the outhouse on our farm. Not only will you have to look at the pictures before you tear, you also must read because radios have changed shapes since your childhood. You will probably have to paint a new radio pink yourself. I understand that avocado, yellow, and pink are now passé."

Buck takes leave long enough to get the radio from Bonnie and take it to the greenhouse to provide music to his camellias. The long new growth shoots began to sway rhythmically to beautiful, show-stopping cowboy songs like: Let's Go Ride Our Horse Before We Get A Divorce, You Thought That Vixen Had Stolen My Heart But I had Already Given My Heart To Camellia, I Was Slipping Out On You But Slipped On The Ice And Broke My—Well There Was No Reason Then To Slip Out.

On his way back to the house and Tyler, Buck had a revelation. He slammed the screen door hollering, "Tylah! Tylah! I knows jes how to start our program at the ACCS convention. We gona make dem fokes drawahs droop by showin em how we puts layers of blooms in Styrofoam boxes separated by fibah. We jes got to be shoah dat we tell dem bout buying an using de right fiber that springs back sort of makin blooms weightless so dey don't buy dat stuff that packs and will brooze de blooms. Now dat gasline prices are too high and cahs got to be smallah, dis is probably de most impotant think we can tell dem. On second thawt, we awt to tell em ta double the preservative cause dem flowers take up every drap."

“Good idea, Buck. I must tell you that while you were out entertaining your camellias I decided to take the ‘Bucky Bull by the horns’ and write the outline myself. I think the most important thing you can do in Litchfield is just to stand up front and grin and just let me take care of the presentation. You are really handsome when you stand up front and put on that toothy grin.”

Buck—“I knows dat, I jes caint hep been good lookin. Les go upstairs.”

Tyler—“Buck, quit being silly!”

Buck—“Stayin quiet is a great idea. Ahm jes gonna hold back mah voice so ah can raise boo koo dollahs at de auction. Dis yeah, ahm gonna make somebody pay too hunded dollah foh dat bes camellia. Ahm gonna take a gamble and keep mah eyes on a possible sukkah from Fort Valley, Ga. Tylah! Ahm sho glad ah married you.”

How to Plant a Beautiful Camellia

By Richard C. Buggeln

So you purchased a beautiful camellia from a local nursery or at the recent plant sale of the Tidewater Camellia Club. It looks nice in the pot, but at some point to ensure that you continue to get those beautiful blooms, you will need to plant it in the ground. There are several things to consider before you plant a camellia.

When should I plant a camellia?

Where should I plant a camellia?

What do I need to do to the soil before I plant my camellia?

How do I plant a camellia?

WHEN TO PLANT: The first question is easy to answer. As with most everything in hot, humid North Carolina you definitely do not want to plant in the heat of the summer – April through September. Whenever you plant anything, the plant undergoes a lot of stress. The heat of summer is just one more major stress factor that you can avoid by planting in the time period from early fall through late winter. During this time period, the roots will grow into the native soil, preparing for the heat of the upcoming summer. It is rare for the soil to freeze in the Cape Fear Region, so unless there is a cold snap in the winter, you have about five prime months to plant. If there is a very cold stretch just wait a few days until things warm up a bit.

WHERE TO PLANT: Where to plant a camellia depends on which type of camellia you have purchased. There are primarily two types of camellias that are sold in the Cape Fear Region.

Camellia japonica – Winter Blooming & Shade Loving

Camellia sasanqua – Fall Blooming & Sun Loving

When most people in this area talk about a camellia they are referring to a Camellia japonica. This is the winter blooming variety which has a large leaf and bloom. As with most plants, if the leaf is larger, the plant needs less sun. Camellia japonicas need filtered sun light or dappled shade. The preferred location for planting camellias is under pine trees or live oaks. If some sun is unavoidable, morning sun is preferable to afternoon sun as the afternoon sun is more intense.

The fall blooming Camellia sasanqua has smaller leaves and smaller more numerous blooms and prefers full sun. The blooms appear along a branch, unlike japonica blooms which tend to bloom on the tips of branches. When Camellia sasanqua is planted in the shade, the number and size of the blooms will be much smaller.

If you live on the inter-coastal waterway, you should not plant your camellia on the water side. Camellias do not like salt. In addition, the winds from the water tend to dry out both the plant and sometime the buds. If the buds get too dried out, they will not open.

WHAT SHOULD I DO TO MY SOIL; Contrary to popular opinion, camellias are not strongly acid-loving plants like azaleas and blueberries. The recommended pH for camellias is 5.5 – 6.5, slightly acidic. A neutral pH is 7.0 – neither acid nor alkaline. In the Cape Fear Region, as in most regions that have heavy rainfall, the soils tend to be acidic, in some cases as low as 4.0. With a pH this low, the absorption of micro-nutrients by camellias is high and in some cases, can be toxic to the plant.

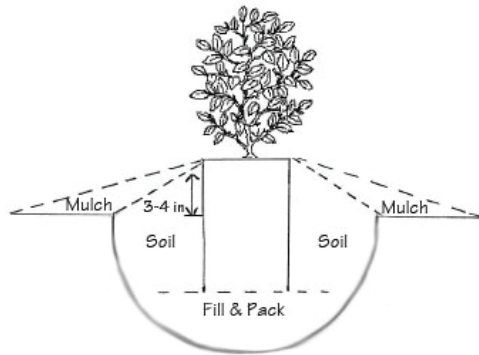

The first thing to do is to get a soil test. Go to the New Hanover County Arboretum, pick up a FREE soil testing kit, follow the instructions and bring the soil sample back to the Arboretum. They will send it off to Raleigh and in 4 -10 weeks (depending upon the time of the year) they will email you your test result. This will include fertilizer requirements and the amount of limestone required to obtain what North Carolina thinks is the correct pH for camellia. Unfortunately, North Carolina thinks that a proper pH for camellias is 4.8 or less, so their recommendation does not conform to the America Camellia Society recommendation of 5.5 – 6.5. The test report, however, does give you the measured pH and so you can use the simple formula:

To raise the pH of sandy soil by $\frac{1}{2}$ pH add 4 pounds of limestone per 100 feet² area

Suppose your test sample comes back with a pH of 5.0 and you want to raise your pH to 6.0. Then you would add limestone at the rate of 8 pounds per 100 feet², a 10 feet x 10 feet area. I suggest that you use pelletized limestone so as not to have the dust associated with ground limestone. The cost of pelletized limestone is only marginally greater than that of ground limestone. Because we live in a coastal area, the soils tend to be deficient in magnesium. Therefore, it is suggested that you use dolomitic limestone which contains magnesium. Expect the pH of your soil to rise slowly, achieving your target value after about a year. The pH will remain at your target value for a couple of years and then will slowly decrease, so you need to have your soil tested every few years. Most people will normally test their soil only after planting their camellia, so what is presented as step three in most cases will become step four.

HOW TO PLANT A CAMELLIA: Now that you have completed your preparations, you are ready to actually plant your camellia. These instructions come from Mark Crawford of Loch Laurel Nursery of Valdosta, Georgia, a grower of show quality camellias. This is a nine step process – see below figure:

Dig hole wider and slightly deeper than container

Remove the plant from its container by slowly tapping the top of the container

Cut the roots of the plant – both sides and bottom if they are encircling the pot.

Position plant 3-4 inches above grade

Back-fill and pack soil

Do not cover top of root ball with soil

Apply mulch so that soil doesn't erode from root ball

Keep well-watered the first year

Spray with dormant oil if needed for occasional pests and tea scale

When digging the hole, it is easier to put the soil in a wheel barrow. If the soil is very sandy add peat moss or composted cow manure and maybe a little limestone. The soil media in the pot is normally not compacted and will tend to sink over time. By planting 3" – 4" above grade, you are compensating for this situation. The easiest way to kill a camellia is to plant it too deep.

Enjoy your camellias and their beautiful blooms.
