FIRST ANNUAL BANQUET WAS A PRONOUNCED SUCCESS

The Northville Auto Club Was Generous Host At Notable Gathering—Sumptuous Banquet Delightfully Served By Methodist Ladies—Commissioner Rogers And Other Good Roads-Enthusiasts Guests Of Honor.

NORTHVILLE IS ON THE PAVED HIGHWAY MAP.

Linked To The City Of Detroit By Ties Of Mutual Interests—Friends Gather At The Banquet Tables And Pledge Their Co-operation And Support To The Cause Of Good Roads

The first annual banquet of the Northville Automobile Club, which was held at the high school gym on Tuesday evening, was an unqualified success from first to last, and the officers and committees of the club having the matter in charge have cause to congratulate themselves. To plan a function of that character requires a great deal of careful planning and painstaking effort and it is always a matter of a good deal of satisfaction to have things shape themselves to the delight of all who participate. The committee having charge of the banquet was most fortunate in being able to arrange with the Methodist ladies to serve the splendid feast and it would have been impossible to have suggested anything that could have added to that feature of the meeting.

The tables, four long ones and the speakers' table at which the guests of five, the color scheme of pink attractive the color scheme of pink and white being carried out faultlessly. A miniature automobile in pink demure enough for a Ford and handsome enough for a Cadillac, graced the speakers' table.

The new dishes and silver recently purchased by the Alumni Association were used for the first time and they added greatly to the attractiveness of the tables. The lights about the room were subdued with festoons of pink and white the whole setting making a picture long to be remembered by the large company of banqueters, and brought forth many words of praise and commendation. Flags were draped about the hall and a picture of Washington looked down upon the banqueters from the graceful folds of Old Glory. The banquetes gathered in the assembly room and when all had arrived the banquet was announced and being led by the officers of the club and the guests from out of town they proceeded to the dining room, to music furnished by Montgomery's orchestra and during the evening of the meal that splendid organization rendered a number of selections. The assemblage was called to order by President C. C. Yerkes of the club and the invocation was offered by Rev. D. V. Pallas, while the guests were seated. The menu served was as follows:

—MENU—

- Oyster Cocktail
- Crab Cakes
- Chives
- Cream of Celery Soup
- Roast Pork and Dressing
- Apple Sauce
- Mashed Potatoes—Brown Gravy
- Salad with Waters
- Pineapple Pie
- Icc Cream
- Coffee
- Cigars

The guests were served by a number of young ladies and young gentlemen of Northville and the manner in which they discharged their duty reflected credit upon them and the ladies who directed their efforts. Everything passed off with precision and in splendid order and the young people were given unstinted praise by those gathered about the tables.

When the splendid feast had been partaken of cigars were passed and the banqueters adjusted themselves for the "talkfest" which was to follow. C. C. Yerkes, president of the Auto Club, presided as toastmaster and discharged the functions of his position in a manner that kept the assemblage in good humor and provided a most delightful program. No set speeches were given, as the toastmaster was unable to assign any special subject to any of those who took part, but the general theme was "Roads" and the subject was discussed from all its various phases. The attractive menus which graced each plate bore the motto of the club—"Good roads here and everywhere, for everybody"—and the sentiment served as an inspiration to all. Mr. Yerkes introduced each of the gentlemen called upon with a fitting story or some pleasantry and they retailed in kind, to the delight and merriment of all. In his opening remarks he expressed the appreciation and thanks of Northville people to the members of the Detroit Automobile Club, the Wayne county board of supervisors and the members of the Wayne County Highway Commission for the kindly interest and co-operation they had shown in behalf of this community and for the splendid highway that was constructed through this village and township last year. He urged that this good work might be continued until every portion of the county had received its just share and that the example set by Wayne county might exert itself throughout the state.

Capt. W. S. Gibbreath, secretary of the Detroit Automobile Club, was the first speaker and he expressed his delight at being present and being able to bring words of greeting from the splendid organization he had the honor to represent. He told of some of the work they had done and were doing, and assured his hearers that they would gladly cooperate in every way possible with the local organization and with all similar organizations in directors of the club and to work for

He urged the members to give loyal and hearty support to the officers and directors of the club and to work for a larger membership, because in organized numbers lies the strength of the good roads movement. In behalf of W. E. Metzger he expressed deep regret that Mr. Metzger could not be present, but owing to illness he was compelled to forego the pleasure of attending the gathering.

Rev. W. S. Smith of Belleville was next introduced and acquitted himself very creditably with some "four and eight cylinder" stories and an appeal for co-operation among the good road enthusiasts of the county. George Walters, secretary to the Detroit Valley Commission, and who is claimed by Northville as being one of her adopted ones, was the next speaker, and after professing to be utterly unprepared to make any extended remarks gave a splendid talk. He stated he had been confidentially informed by Commissioner Rogers that it was contemplated to annex Detroit to Northville and he assured his hearers that the residents of the city might well count such a fate.

Case E. Burton was announced as Northville's most distinguished citizen and in his remarks he reflected credit upon the community he represented. He expressed his pleasure in being able to present and extend a great honor to Northville to have as our guests the splendid men who had assisted in pulling Michigan out of the mud. He discussed the growth and development of the good roads movement in the county and state and paid most flattering tributes to Commissioner Rogers, Hon. W. J. Johnson and John C. Nagle for the efforts they had put forth in the cause of good roads, and to Supervisor W. J. Lanning for the manner in which he had represented Northville township upon the board of supervisors. These men had always been loyal to the cause of good roads and to the best interests of the people who had placed them in positions of honor and responsibility.

W. G. Bryant, one of the pioneers in Michigan's good road movement and who is one of the city's leading attorneys, told of his interest in the good road movement and explained some of his activities in behalf of nation-wide highway improvement. His first efforts in behalf of better roads was the construction of a cedar bicycle path from Mt. Clemens to Lakeside and he related some of the obstacles he had to overcome in his efforts to secure funds to build that little stretch, using the incident as a point to illustrate the growth of the good roads movement. In those days people were skeptical and backward regarding the expenditure of funds for good roads, but the movement had now reached that point where it was an easy matter to "sell good roads" because people of the cities as well as the dwellers on the farms realized the benefits to be derived from good highways.

John C. Nagle, who is regarded as Northville benefactor, was the next speaker and he aroused the enthusiasm of his hearers by the references he made to the proposed sanatorium

Suffered with Lame Back and Swollen Limbs

Wild Rose, Wis.—"I have used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and I was so well pleased with it that I like to do all in my power to help other sufferers. I suffered with lame back and swollen limbs. I was so weak and dizzy that I couldn't take care of my baby and family. I suffered and worked till I finally took to my bed, and after spending $90.00 with our home doctor, my husband saw Dr. Pierce's remedies advertised. He at once bought a bottle of both 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery.' As my case was of long standing and I was in such bad condition, I used nine bottles of each, and thank God I am healthy and happy. I hope that all sufferers will do as I did—give the medicine a trial and be convinced. Anybody who would like to know more about my case, please write to me and send a stamped envelope and I will gladly answer." MRS. AUGUSTA WEGNER, Route 3, Box 24.

A Woman's Trouble

Hillsdale, Mich.—"I am pleased to give a testimonial in regard to the value of Dr. Pierce's Remedies. I suffered for three years with the trouble I brought on through motherhood. I tried several different kinds of medicine, but got no relief. Finally I got Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it cured me in six months. I have never had any more of the trouble. I also have it to my daughter and it worked fine in her case. I have used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Pellets, too, and found them splendid as well. I can highly recommend all of Dr. Pierce's medicines; they have always done for me what they were intended to do." MRS. EMMA GREEN, 33 McClellan Street.

Belgium Sketches

Glory of the Morning

By Katharine Eggleston Roberts

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

The world was opaline. From high up in the citadel I looked down into the heart of it. The sun, half hidden by a cloud, sent streaks of flame across the pearl-gray sky. Within the shadowy girdle of the hills a rainbow haze enmeshed the valley. It melted the red and yellow of the peaked roofs that crowded by the streams of flowing gold, thinning where the waters met. There in the weird and mystic light lay the unreal earth, and I was far away—up there alone in reality. Suddenly I longed for some one else to look with me and feel the eerie beauty of it all. The loneliness punched at my heart and made it ache.

And then a force within the spots behind me cried: "I built this citadel long centuries ago and every day I've watched the journey of the sun from dawn to night. I've watched the sun's living underneath those peaked roofs. You cannot see them, you have not eyes—always I watch the people of Namur."

The voice did not seem strange to me. It was an answer to me, longing for some one. I feared that it might go—might leave me here alone above the world. I leaped it. Tell me what you've seen, what you are seeing now.

"Oh, I can't tell you. It takes too long; but something—yes. You see that house down near the church, the one who passed, hoping to find the features of Marcel. A spy might not be in Germany; he might be here amidst the army of the conquerors in Belgium, in Namur, and any time. But all her hopes were vain and, as the minutes dragged into years and no news came, she ceased to look at every passerby, for disappointment only emphasized her fear.

"Then one night, when the lights were out and all was still, she heard a gentle tapping at the door. Her mother opened it a little way, and through the space a man's voice whispered: "I'm weary; I have traveled far today. Once, long ago, they told me if I visited Namur, I'd find safe shelter in your home." Her heart beat quickly as they let him in. "Was it Marcel? At least, perhaps some news. But no, the stranger knew only that once—two years ago—he and Duval had been together on a bit of work in Austria. Duval had said that if he should reach Namur, they'd give him lodging in that house. Duval had sent a message, but that was long ago, and since then—well, no one had heard from him. The stranger hid these all next day, and then at night departed and was swallowed by the dark.

"Five years of hopeful tomorrows turned to dreary yesterdays. To me, who has lived for centuries, five years is 12 1/2 a minute of the day. To Jeanne, each year out of the five was a century. It was the imprisonment, not the Boche, that crushed her soul. The Boches were driven back to their own land. Namur was free and, one by one, the soldiers who had been ordered to stay at home again, and no one could tell the fate of the missing Duval. And then—"

The voice broke off, for down below it began to ring, the chiming that drew the cloud from off the sun. The opaline sky turned turquoise blue. The sunlight bore the rainbow haze and a golden shower across the valley. And from the church door came a bridal pair. I heard a whisper

DIASMUCH

By FELICIA TERRY.

(Copyright, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

For many weeks Ruth Stanton had planned for this vacation day which now seemed a reality. Her ardor was not dampened on awakening when she beheld rain driven in gusts, as the wind bowed around her comfortable home.

While Ruth dressed she thought aloud: "Not going out today! A whole day in the house! No typewriting, no notes, no bells!"

She hurried downstairs to help with the breakfast, but found everything prepared, and disappointedly cried: "Mother, dear, why did you not rest? Did you forget this is my vacation day? We are to have a whole day to ourselves!"

Mrs. Stanton quietly answered: "That's why I arose early. The sooner our work is done, the more time we shall have. My little girl needs a rest."

While eating in their pleasant dining room the telephone bell rang. Ruth answered, and heard a troubled voice say: "Mrs. Stanton, will you please make a cake for Mrs. Parker's sale this afternoon? I promised to, but have fallen and hurt my ankle."

"Why, yes, indeed," Ruth answered. "Around ten o'clock Ruth kissed her mother good-bye. With the cake securely protected, as well as herself, she started for Mrs. Parker's home, some two miles away. Ruth was young and energetic."

The only one heard a voice calling: "Ruth, oh Ruth!" She turned back with a pleasant "Yes!" to agitated Mrs. Brown, who began: "If you are going past the school will you please take Dean's dinner. He forgot it, and his rubbers are worn out. If his father doesn't forget, he will get him some and leave them later at the school."

"Of course I'll not mind, Mrs. Brown. Why not let me get the rubbers at your usual store and then if Mr. Brown remembers, they can tell him?"

"Oh, Ruth, would you? It is asking too much." In the end Ruth won and started on. Putting Dean's rubbers meant another half mile.

She carried the cake to its destination, bought and delivered the rubbers with the dinner, then decided to stop around to see Mrs. Reynolds a few moments. When she arrived Mrs. Reynolds was in a great agony awaiting the physician. The tires were out and no work done.

"Without in the least Ruth removed her wet wraps, donned a big apron, built the tires and gave Mrs. Reynolds a warm, refreshing drink.

She explained her mother, explained the situation and received first aid directions. Repeating a sigh, Ruth said: "Don't wait for dinner for me and don't worry, please, mother. I shall get along fine, and be home later." Then she hastened to relieve Mrs. Reynolds, and so efficient did the directions prove that by one o'clock her patient was comfortable and sound asleep. Soon Ruth had the housework done.

When the doctor finally arrived he gave the ankle a thorough examination, and said: "It is not broken, and your little nurse has done just right."

"The credit is due mother, for she told me how," said modest Ruth.

Mr. Reynolds came home at four o'clock. Mrs. Reynolds called Ruth to her: "Thanks or money cannot pay you adequately for what you did today, my dear child," she said, "but the Lord will surely bless and keep you." Ruth refused money, thought a second of that easy chair before the open fire at home, but her words were as she felt: "I am happy to have served you."

It was still storming when Ruth started homeward. She was hurrying along, umbrella almost enveloping her, when she nearly ran into an aged woman who lived alone on the outskirts of the town. "Why, for pity's sake where are you going, Aunty Morris, on such a day, and getting dark, too?" Ruth exclaimed. "Oh, honey, I'm out of oil and sugar and out of matches and flour. I've waited all day for the store man to come along."

"At once Ruth said: "Now aunty, you go right up to my home, only a step away. Please give me your oil can and basket, and I'll get your things. Tell mother I sent you, and rest your bones." No little persuasion urged Aunty Morris, as nearly all called her, to go back.

It was dark when Ruth reached the store. Imagining aunt's scanty larder, she ordered many extra things to be carried out. With her own money she paid for all, while seeing a vision of a much-louder hat fly off into space.

Taking the oil and other things she thought necessary, Ruth once more started for home. The storm raged but her thoughts were cheerful as she mused: "Poor old aunty. How lucky I met her! I'll walk part way home with her."

Ruth reached home, to find a mother's fond welcome and a delicious warm supper, with Aunty Morris as a guest, who finally yielded to Mrs. Stanton's insistent urgings to remain for the night, because of the storm.

A few friends came in to spend the evening. After all had departed a tired Ruth sought her bed. Passing her room, Mrs. Stanton glanced in, and saw her daughter sleeping peacefully. The mother thought: "I was glad to have done it, and I am glad to see you here."

"Five years ago the troops were ordered out to fight in orders far across the Rhine. To that house came Marcel Duval to tell his Jeanne 'Good-bye.' They were to have been married the next month, and it was very hard for them to part. Marcel had light hair and blue eyes; he could talk German better than the rest, and he was not to fight with gun and sword, but with the cunning of his mind—to be a spy."

"I looked down at them as they stood before the house. The evening wrapped them close, but I could see Jeanne's eyes were wet—gray like the twilight woven through the mist. Her dark head pressed against his coat. The curve of her arms gleamed white about his neck. They kissed. She looked her sobs and smiled. He looked at her a long time—then he turned and ran. He dared not look again. The smile died on her lips. She sank upon the door step and her shoulders shook.

"It wasn't long before the German horde came to the hills about the town. They stormed the forts for three days, till at last they won their entrance into old Namur. They occupied the place. They took the best and sold the leavings to Namur folk at triple price. They occupied my home, paraded round about my walks; I knew them well, and I was sorry for the people in the city down below. I saw Jeanne and her mother trying to live on nothing, but it wasn't only lack of food that made Jeanne's eyes so big and dark in the pale ivory of her face.

MANY VILLAGES NOW IN DUST

Not Even Walls Remain to Mark Towns That Existed Before Arrival of Spiked Helmet Men.

Of many smaller villages not even the ruins remain, the walls having long since been reduced to store dust. Of old magnificent forests there are only occasional naked tree stems with a few leafless branches. There is no living tree for miles and miles. German gas did it.

The old inferno of sound has given place to a more terrible silence—a silence unbroken by living creature. No birds, no moving things in the grass, nothing but the absolute silence of a man-made desert.

From the agricultural point of view the country is years in the future. Every square foot must be leveled and restored. The undertaking is a Herculean task. Any moment the workman may run into an unexpected shell or a hidden death trap.

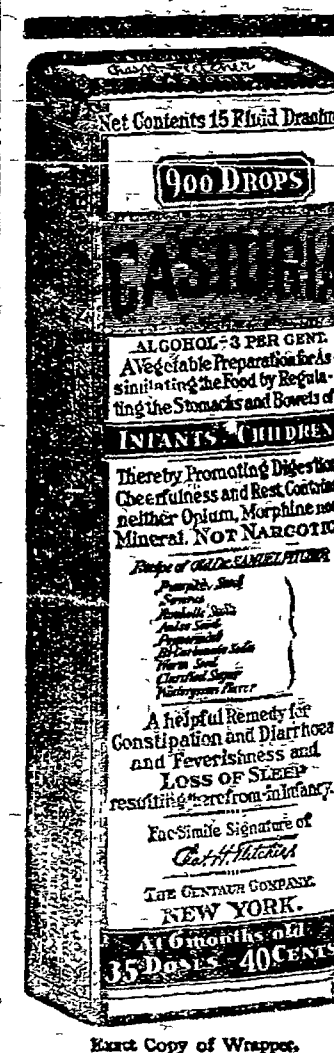

Every farm will have to be equipped with a complete new drainage system. The old pipes were ripped out during the early part of the bombardment, allowing the waste water to spread out over the flat countryside and collect in depressions.

AS BELGIUM APPEARS TODAY

Country's Condition as War-Torn and Barren as When the Armistice Was Signed.

Although small swarms of men, mostly German prisoners, have been working nearly a year, devastated Belgium looks today just as barren and war-torn as when the armistice sent the German armies hurrying back into the distance from which they had come. So immense is the reclamation task before them, it is not noticeable that the workers have made any impression at all.

Ypres itself, a collection of ruins, has hardly been touched. The debris has been swept from the streets and a bean-to station just up near the site of the old. A few restaurants have been reopened for tourists and relatives of fallen soldiers visiting the zone. A small gantlet of postal card sellers and curio venders forms regularly outside the station a few minutes before train time. Several livermen and garage owners do a fine business

PREPARING FOR THE FUTURE

Small Town People Had a Great Idea, but it Was Disappointing to the "Drummer."

A commercial traveler arrived for the first time at a small country town one evening. Early next morning he was awakened by a great blowing of whistles, steam sirens, buzzers, etc.

Rejoicing in the thought of doing a lot of business, he asked the hotel proprietor: "Inter on?"

"This is quite a manufacturing town, isn't it?"

"Oh, yes; we're pretty busy," was the proud reply.

"What kind of factories have you?"

"Well—this time more slowly—flour principally."

"Only flour?"

"Yes, that's all as yet. But our flour mill's a good one."

"But I heard at least a dozen whistles going this morning."

"You did," agreed the proprietor, dropping his voice confidentially "but they are all of the flour mill. You see, we got the whistles we should want for the factories we are going to have, and put them in to make the town sound more lively. Quite a number, ain't it?"

SOME DIFFERENT MEATS.

Where rabbits are abundant, one need not worry about the price of meat, if there is a hunter in the family. Squirrel, grouse, quail, rice hens are cooked, or may be, as one does rabbit:

Fricassee of Rabbit.—Cut a nicely dressed and cleaned rabbit into light pieces, cover with a quart or more of boiling water and boil for five minutes, then simmer on the back of the stove for two hours until the rabbit is tender. Take up the meat, place on a hot platter, melt one tablespoonful of butter, add one tablespoonful of flour, one-half cupful of the liquid from the kettle, one-half cupful of sweet milk, the yolks of two eggs beaten with two tablespoonfuls of cold milk, salt, pepper to season; boil up once and pour over the stewed rabbit.

Virginia Brunswick Stew.—Into a kettle put four onions chopped fine, three cupfuls of tomatoes, cut in pieces, two slices of fat bacon, one large chicken or two squirrels disjointed. Pour over all four quarts of boiling water and cook for 20 minutes over the heat; then place on the back part of the stove and simmer for several hours or until the meat is tender. When tender remove the bones, skip, grate and chop fine, return to the kettle with one can of corn, one cupful of sugar, one cupful of salt and pepper to taste. Cook for a few minutes until boiling hot, then serve.

Stewed Pigeons.—Clean and since and drain two pigeons, wipe carefully. Melt one tablespoonful of butter for each pigeon, lay in the birds, seasoned and dusted with flour. Brown on both sides, and add sufficient broth or hot water to cover. Add one tablespoonful of rice to each pigeon two tablespoonfuls of cream and cover closely. Simmer for several hours until the birds are tender.

Pickled Lamb's Hearts.—Clean six lamb's hearts, add a tablespoonful of salt and cover with boiling water and cook for half an hour at the boiling point, then simmer for two hours. Cool in the liquor. Next day slice the hearts and pack them into an earthen jar, sprinkle each layer with salt and pepper. Chop one large onion fine, add two bay leaves, 12 cloves and a teaspoonful of peppercorns. Boil the spices for five minutes in two cupfuls of vinegar and pour over the hearts. They will be ready to use in three or four days.

To be good is noble, but to teach others to be good is nobler—and less trouble.—Mark Twain

SEASONABLE DISHES.

Those who refuse the old-fashioned boiled dinner because of the odor in the house may cook it very satisfactorily in the freless cooker. If such dishes are cooked in an open kettle the odor will not be as strong or so lasting. An excellent preparation for such meats as liver, veal and other somewhat tasteless meats is to put them for two or three days in winter, one day in hot weather, into a strong pickle made with salt, saltpepper and brown sugar, seasoned to taste, either with spice, pepper sauce, onions, or any other seasoning; then cook with cabbage, turnips, carrots, corned beef and potatoes. Such a meal should be taken only by people active enough to digest it.

Indian Pudding.—Scald one quart of milk and add three-fourths of a cupful of cornmeal mixed with a little cold milk, stir and cook for a few minutes, then pour into a large stone baking dish, add another quart of milk, one cupful of brown sugar, one cupful of suet, and one cupful of raisins and two well-beaten eggs. Put into a slow oven and stir every half hour for the first half of the cooking, then dredge with flour and brown. Bake for five or six hours. The pudding is done when it is covered with a rich brown crust. This dish may be reheated any number of times. Serve with a hard sauce made by creaming butter and sugar, adding nutmeg for flavoring.

Buckwheat Cakes.—Take one yeast cake dissolved in half a cupful of water, add a pint or more of warm water and buckwheat flour to make a thick mixture. Do this in the morning and let stand to rise until the next morning, when it is ready to use. Take one cupful of the thick batter for the next day's cakes, add water and buckwheat flour to thicken and set away as before. The batter that is left is salted, and a half cupful of milk, sour or sweet, added, then a little soda dissolved in hot water which will thin the cakes to the right consistency. Never mix any of this soda and milk batter with that which is to be used the following day. This may be repeated as long as one likes cakes for the morning meal.

A Team of Horses Wont Accomplish Much Unless It's Hitched Up!

Every farmer knows that and every progressive farmer realizes that he must team up with his fellow agriculturists if either of them is going to get the most out of the business of farming.

The Michigan State Farm Bureau

is going to harness the farmers of Michigan into one unit for the purpose of pulling agriculture out of danger into prosperity. The drive starts in Wayne County on Monday, February 23rd. Any day thereafter you may expect to be visited by farmers who know the farmers' problems and how the re-organized farm bureau is going to solve them. Every farmer in Wayne County will be visited and given an opportunity to join the Farm Bureau Federation, which must have the solid support of the majority of the agriculturalists of the state to act efficiently and successfully in promoting farm interests.

A Square Deal-That's All

The major aims of the Michigan State Farm Bureau are to improve marketing and transportation conditions—correlate and strengthen activities of all existing farm organizations—get closer to the consumer and teach the general public farmers are not rolling in wealth, as is the city belief—promote rural educational methods and advise farmers of everything pertinent to their welfare; deal with measures rather than men in politics and insist constantly on a "square deal" for agriculture—in short, to do anything and everything that will make farming more profitable and attractive.

You Can't Get Something For Nothing

Everybody knows that. So to supply necessary funds to carry on this great work the membership fee is set at $10—$5 to the County Bureau and $5 to the State. In Michigan to date seventeen counties have conducted membership campaigns and 90 per cent of the farmers solicited have joined in this great advance movement. Wayne Wont Shirk. Don't ask solicitors to call again. Do it the first time. Campaign starts Monday, February 23, 1920.

BONUS OR RECOMPENSATION.

The American Legion objects strenuously to the word "bonus" as applied to the government's anticipated action of giving the returned soldiers some tangible recognition of their services in the world war.

In this they have grounds for objections as the word "bonus" implies a donation when the word compensation implies pay for value received. No one can reckon in dollars and cents the value of the services these boys rendered—and yet very few, if any of the soldiers ever asked for anything, even when they returned penniless and in debt.

The wiseachers will say they squandered their money. Let's see. He gets $30 per month. His insurance is about $8 per month; his allotment about $12. This leaves $8 spending money for tobacco, candy, movies and the many little necessities which soon eat up this amount and in consequence he is in debt to the canteen long before pay day.

A nice example may be cited to elucidate the feeling of our statesmen in this matter and if I could mention names this family living within a few miles of Northville undoubtedly are known to all of us.

Two brothers aged 19 and 21 applied to the recruiting office early in the war. The younger lad was accepted but the older boy owing to heart disease was rejected. The younger lad was sent across and saw nearly two years of active service during which time he was severely wounded and is today slightly crippled to one foot as the result. The older boy having had some experience laying brick went to Camp Custer and accepted a job as brick layer at $1.50 per hour and double pay for over time. Now to cut the story short he was employed for about twenty-two months and in that time accumulated upwards of $5000 clear of all expenses. The other lad arrived home, broken down, penniless and unable to work as before. Now is it fair to this lad that he should have his life in his hand for twenty-two months and suffer as a cripple the rest of his days with no recognition or compensation or, is it fair that his brother should be taxed a few pennies extra in order to pay the soldier brother a few hundred dollars to get a start in some business again? Which he in his crippled condition may handle and make out a living?

It is fair that aliens, declaring their status to get out of the draft should be allowed to remain in this country to compete with this soldier who fought this war, battle as well as his own and who will in this soldier's place and judge things from that angle before forming an opinion.

L. P. HAS SPECIAL FARM CROP EXHIBIT.

A special exhibit of Upper Peninsula farm crops was one of the features of the recent Farmers' Week display at the Michigan Agricultural College. The L. P. division of the display was practically identical with the entry which was made in the 20th International Grain and Livestock Show last November where it attracted much able comment for the upper country.

Red Rock wheat, Rosen's red clover and standard's played prominent parts in the exhibits. That these crops are so successfully handled in the Upper Peninsula was demonstrated when a sample of Red Rock shown by John Dunbar, of Chippewa county, won second place in its class at the International show. Mr. Dunbar also took a second place in his class for red clover and a fourth in the six-row barley class. Experiments carried out with sunflowers last year at the Upper Peninsula experimental station at Chatham yielded 20 tons of ensilage material to the acre.

The U. P. display at Farmers' week was arranged by G. W. Putman farm crops experimenter for the Upper Peninsula.

DO WAYNE COUNTY CHILDREN GET ENOUGH MILK?

A campaign to emphasize the value of milk as a food for children will be held in Wayne county February 23rd to March 6th, thru the cooperation of the Wayne County Farm Bureau, the Michigan Agricultural college and the United States government.

Milk as a food for which there is no substitute in the diet of a growing child. The medical examiner, Dr. Brown, of the schools of Seattle, Wash., found that many children who were sent to him for treatment needed nourishment, not drugs. While these children might be getting all they wanted to eat, they were not eating the right things. As early as 1916, a plan was started thru school distribution of milk to see that every child got all the milk he wanted to drink.

The results of such a system have been seen in the schools in increased mental efficiency, better behavior, and better attendance. Anemia and malnourished children have disappeared from the school clinics. Seattle is enthusiastic over the plan.

At the state college of Agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y., ten undernourished children were given a quart of milk a day. At the end of a month their gain in weight ranged from 9 to 18%. One result of many similar investigations made all over the United States has been campaigns held in several different states to increase the amount of milk use.

ADVERTISING THE CHURCH.

Window card evangelism is the newest thing in the field of religious effort. As Herbert C. Hoover popularized food saving and Mr. McAdoo profited bond buying during the war by means of window cards, so the practical mind of Bishop Theodore S. Henderson of the Detroit area of the Methodist Episcopal church conceived the idea of making evangelism effective by the same method.

It is awakening of the church to the call of the new evangel (campaign of the contemporary movement of Methodists) in a new day of religious prayer and progress. One million new converts to be won from the constituency of the Methodist church to a new life of christian experience and service is the objective of the church. Such a movement calls for the awakening of the prayer life and the consecration of time and talent of the membership is a prerequisite to the success of the movement, all of which predicts a new day for vital religion in America.

The window card evangelism which is a remarkable piece of religious psychology, is the particular task of the Minute Men of the church, the men who popularized the $115,000,000 campaign of the Christian movement. These men will conduct a house to house visitation within the bounds of their own parish and solicit the cooperation of the people in this great religious movement. A red especially for this campaign is a window card. It is a most attractive window card in color in red, white and blue. Being try on them, at the Michigan Agricultural College following words: "Christ Dies. This home supports the Orange County Campaign Methodist Church."

It is expected that the Minute Men will place thousands of these cards in homes where they will have secured the endorsement and co-operation of the people. Such a campaign is altogether new to the church, and is already commending itself to other churches as a most successful evangelistic agency.

GRANDMA DIXON

By HELEN FATTERSON.

(Copyright, 1919, by Helen Fatterson. All rights reserved.)

Carefully Grandmother Dixon loosened the most cherished roots of her famous larkspur, shook the particles of dirt from the flower and, before standing erect, touched the tender shoots lovingly with her fingers.

The larkspur meant more than tall blue flowers to her. It meant memories of the past; memories of the morning when a young soldier in a faded blue uniform had found her rejoicing over their first blossom. These had been four weary years of war and this, their first meeting, the larkspur had witnessed. Since that morning the flower had occupied a place of honor in her garden.

"Want any help grandma?" asked a young man looking over the fence.

"You know, I'm great on digging."

"Bless you, Dick. Of course I know it, when I look at this garden, but there is nothing to do this morning. Thank you. Come here and tell me about your work."

"I'll come over, but there is nothing to tell. I have my net."

"Do you mean to say Richard Hawkins, that you are not going back to your old work?" asked grandma, as the young man vaulted the low fence and stood beside her.

"That's just it, grandma. Your humble servant has had a new job. You know, the girls are doing our work so well that many firms are keeping them, and Bolton & Mason's is one of them."

"But the girls will certainly resign when they know you are home again," said grandma. "I remember when Abner came home from the Civil war, I gave up his school I had been teaching and we were married."

"But you didn't answer Richard, but whose coming through the gate?"

"Why, bless me, if it isn't Betty!" said grandma, hurrying to meet a young girl dressed in a stylish suit and a very becoming hat. "Come on Dick, get your hat. Why you used to play with her when she was a tiny girl. You remember she is the only grandchild I have."

Nothing but Richard followed Grandma Dixon down the garden path and was introduced to Betty. For a moment a pair of laughing blue eyes, the color of the larkspur, looked into his while they uttered a few commonplace remarks, and then Betty followed a young man into the house. It was not until Richard had walked the length of the garden that he remembered, with a queer feeling that he had seen those same blue eyes in the girl that occupied his desk at Bolton & Mason's office.

In the meantime, Betty in the house, had casually asked grandma "When had Richard's people moved back to the old house?"

"They haven't moved back," answered grandma. "Richard is spending the week with me, trying to recapture his old work of the last two years."

"Was he in all of his work?" asked Betty.

"Most of it," replied grandma, "although it's little he talks about it. Her now he gets all his work over not getting as old with work."

But grandma, noting Betty's interest, she said to her, "I know some of the girls in our office are taking care of our mothers, a sad case indeed."

"I may be all right for the girls to keep our returned soldiers out of a job but what about the girls like you, Betty Dixon, that got a really good work? indignantly asked grandma.

"Why, grandma, you know the girls took up their work, the boys ought to go and fight, and we have all fought Liberty Bonds and worked for the Red Cross," stammered Betty as she thought of the young man she had casually glanced at at the cement works yesterday.

"Yes, you all did your best while the war was being fought and won, but now that it's over, show your gratitude to the boys in a more substantial way than cheers. I'm ashamed of you."

"You won't need to be ashamed of me any longer, grandma," said Betty meekly. "I'll make good. I just hadn't thought about it before, and now I'm going to look at your tulips."

But it wasn't tulips: it was Richard that Betty found sitting down on the old seat by the larkspur. No one could resist Betty when she wanted to be extra charming and soon they were talking and laughing like children.

The next day Betty returned home and the day afterwards Richard received two letters, one was from Betty, which after reading, he kissed and put in his inside pocket. The other one was from Bolton & Mason, inviting him to call at their office.

It was at the close of the summer, on one moonlight night that the tall blue flowers awoke from their sleep to bear a low voice say:

"Betty, I'm to be made sales manager next week and the salary is very good—and oh, Betty, dear, I've always loved and wanted you. Won't you please say 'Yes'?"

But as Richard's arms closed around Betty the larkspur discreetly turned away and whispered:

"Did you hear that?"

"Yes," answered another sleepily, "and it reminds me of the story of another young girl and the soldier in blue."

GOV.-GENERAL OF PHILIPPINES FOR FREEDOM

Declares It Not Right That Freedom Should Longer Be Withheld.

By FRANCIS BURTON HARRISON, Governor-General of the Philippines (First Article)

My six years experience as governor-general of the Philippine Islands have convinced me that the only people to whom the Philippines should be granted independence is the Filipino people.

As to the question of the stability of government, I wish to say to the American people upon any responsibility as the governor-general that in my opinion there exists today in the Philippine Islands a stable government.

I have recommended to Congress that the Philippine independence statute should be amended to what is known as the "Cuba" amendment.

The movement for independence is a peaceful one. No territory was more loyal to Uncle Sam during the war.

The Philippines are a misshapen and misrepresented race. The Filipino people are a much misrepresented race.

BIG ROAD PROGRAM.

Only one barrier stands in the way of a record breaking program of highway construction in Michigan - this year, and that will be the inability of the state highway department to obtain reasonable estimates from contractors. So Highway Commissioner Frank Rogers informed the state association of supervisors today. The department was compelled to reject all bids on four new projects recently because the estimates were too high.

This year's program, according to Commissioner Rogers, calls for the construction of 1,250 miles of improved highways. Already contracts have been entered into for the construction of 367 miles of trunk line roads which will cost $4,600,000.

Bids will be obtained for 350 miles of hard surface highways, either brick or concrete, 150 miles of macadam road, and 300 miles of gravel highway.

YOUR INCOME TAXES.

If your net income equals or exceeds $1,000 and you are single, regardless of your exemption, you are liable for an Income Tax return.

If your net income equals or exceeds $2,000 and you are married, regardless of your exemption, you are liable for an Income Tax return.

Net income represents all that you receive proper deduction, allowed by law before you take your exemption. Your exemption does not determine your net income.

Fill out your own income tax returns and have it sworn to before a notary public or a United States officer then mail your blank and check in payment of tax shown to be due, to the collector of Internal revenue, Detroit, Michigan.

If you do not understand the proper procedure or if you have not received a blank consult your banker or the collector John A. Grogan, at Detroit, for information.

Remember, March 15th is the last day for filing and you make yourself liable for a $1,000 fine if you have not filed on time.

PETITION FOR NEW ROAD.

The city previously proposed and petitioned for a road to connect Milford with Grand River by means of a gravel road, having seemingly reached a deadlock, residents further east have taken the matter in hand and created a petition for a road to run from Milford to Grand River by way of Weston. This petition circulated some weeks ago, in said to have received a petition of 90 per cent or more of the property owners along the proposed route and has been duly presented to the county road commission.

The route proposed by the petition is started as follows: Milford postoffice east on Liberty street to First street, south on First to Canal East on Canal to Houghton, east on Houghton to Atlantic, east Atlantic east to the corner formerly occupied by the Gamble schoolhouse, then south one-half mile and east 1/2 mile to the township line (North corner). From there it goes south 1/2 mile, east 1/2 mile and south 2 1/2 miles to Weston. Here it crosses the line of Weston and goes a mile east and then south about 1/2 mile to the Grand River road. The road is about nine miles long.

It is expected that the survey of the road will be completed by county commissioners in Milford time.

AGRICULTURAL MEN FACE BIG ISSUE.

Discussing and emphasizing the fundamental issues of present-day American agricultural life, leading speakers who appeared before the general sessions of Farmers' Week at the Michigan Agricultural college last week went to the heart of farm problems and offered solutions which won enthusiastic support from the thousands of farmers in attendance at the big convention.

A remarkable similarity of views on the basic problems which face the rural workers of today was shown by all the prominent speakers. An analysis of the addresses of such men as Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, Dean Alfred Viaan of Ohio State University, Pres Keryon L. Butterfield of Massachusetts Agricultural college, Pres J. R. Howard of the American Farm Bureau and Dean Ernest W. Croves of New Hampshire State college showed that three main points were brought out by all: first the farmer must have a better financial return for his efforts; second, rural life must be made more satisfying in social and intellectual ways; and third the farmer must have a greater voice in the public affairs of state and nation.

Extensive exhibits of farm crops, horticultural poultry, livestock dairy products, household conveniences and farm machinery were on display at the college during the week. Ten state agricultural associations held enthusiastic annual meetings.

The attendance at the meetings of the week was estimated at close to 5,000, in spite of the fact that the state-wide epidemic of influenza kept the people away from the Lansing

COUNTY FARM

BUREAU DRIVE

A membership campaign of the Wayne County Farm Bureau will be started on Monday morning, Feb. 23rd, bright and early regardless of weather conditions and continue for a period of ten days during which time every nook and corner of the agricultural sections of Wayne county will be visited. Twenty solicitors, every one real live Michigan farmers representing the State Farm Bureau, will do the canvassing, working in two crews. One will be stationed at Belleville during the work and its activities will be guided by County Agent O. I. Gregg; the other will make headquarters at Plymouth, and be in charge of Samuel Spicer, president of the Wayne County Farm Bureau. Two hundred volunteer drivers and guides have been mustered in the various township to aid in the work and they will each have an allotted territory, seeing that each state representative calls upon all of the farmers in a specified territory.

The Wayne County Farm Bureau, under whose guidance a lot of good work has been done during the past three years, has been greatly handicapped by the want of money to help carry out important projects. When this campaign is over it will be possible to make out a three year program along advanced lines. The present staff of the Farm Bureau consists of O. I. Gregg, county agent, G. O. Stewart, boys and girls club leader, and Miss Merion Rogers, home demonstration agent. They all work out of the Detroit office of the Bureau and visit frequently every rural county community during the year. The work outlined for the present year is sufficiently broad to insure benefits to every branch of the farm industry in Wayne county from the youngest child to the veteran preparing to retire.

The farmer solicitors will work a township per day for each crew and will not make return calls so farmers are urged to be ready when the man arrives during the coming week.

The following are the township chairman and drivers crews that have volunteered their services for this campaign and who will serve in the township of Plymouth: Northville and Livonia. Plymouth township, A. M. Lickles, chairman, drivers O. H. Loomis, Walter Postiff, James Gates, John Reed Homer, H. Dowell, Lloyd Williams. Northville township, Floyd Northrup, chairman, drivers Chas. Young, F. Foreman, G. C. Benton, Albert Ehrnsale. Livonia township, Dan McKinney, chairman.

SALEM COUPLE IN COURT.

John W. Bell has filed a cross bill in the divorce suit brought by Rose Bell, in which the wife is accused of improper relations with J. Wesley MacPadden.

According to the original bill of complaint, filed by Mrs. Bell, her name before her marriage to John Bell was Rose E. MacPadden. The cross bill filed by John Bell, denies this charge, stating that the wife's name before she married Bell was Rose E. Dudley.

The cross bill further charges that Mrs. Bell, in violation of MacPadden's probable cause, left her to the care of a man named J. Wesley MacPadden.

The cross bill further states that on one occasion Bell went to MacPadden's house and found Mrs. Bell there. The bill charges that Mrs. Bell used to go home with her husband and that when he took hold of her foot to put her shoes on she protested, agreeing to accompany her husband only after the sheriff had been called by telephone.—Ann Arbor News.

Allies' Unity Means Peace Exceeding All Guarantees Put on Paper.

By GEORGES CLEMENCEAU, Retiring President Peace Conference.

From Western Newspaper, London.

If Great Britain, the United States, Italy, Japan and France remain united, there is a guarantee of peace which exceeds all those guarantees which can be put on paper. If one day these nations are separated I have not thought of the misfortunes which may result.

We arrived here somewhat disconcerted by the gravity of the problems set and the difficulty of solving them. When fighting the enemy all necessarily were in agreement, each joyfully giving his life for his country. But it is not necessarily the same when one is to calculate and realize the fruits of victory and to settle each one's share. We have defended what we believed to be the interest of our countries, but never has the necessity of a common understanding been lost sight of. I further believe that we are all agreed to say that the special interests of each nationality must be considered and respected; there cannot be a tranquil Europe if the rights of each one are not recognized.

I have been sometimes reproached for making too many concessions. The same reproach has been made against other heads of governments, but I am calm in the knowledge—and I am sure you all are—of never having been guided in stating my opinions or in the conclusions we have reached, except by the single idea that the nations who shed so much blood had the right, first of all, to have their national claims satisfied and then to have those claims reconciled each to the other and embodied in one great peace inspired by common interest.

I shall not lose sight of the peace we are completing and shall continue to follow its progress until my last breath. I shall try by all good wishes at least to do all in my power for the solidity of that peace, for, indeed, if by misfortune the elements of discord should arise among you, how terrible the thought that the best blood of the civilized world, the blood of our soldiers, should be shed in vain for hopes that would not be realized.

Machinery Must Replace Men That the City Takes Away From the Farm.

By A. R. KROH, Author of "The Man of the Farm."

Every farmer knows that the most efficient way to adjust the cost of living to the cost of production is to reduce the cost of living. One of the most effective ways to do this is to increase production. In the past, this has been done by increasing the number of men on the farm. But now, the city takes away the men from the farm, and the farmer must find other ways to increase production.

No nation has ever been able to sustain a large foreign population to remain on the farm. We are not able to do so in America. The only solution to the problem is to use modern methods and improved machinery.

In many countries in the United States, farmers are compelled to pay taxes on their land. This is a heavy burden, and it is one that can only be met by increasing production. The farmer must use modern machinery to do this. The tractor, the motor truck, and the motor plow are the tools that will allow the farmer to produce more with fewer men.

The tractor or motor truck alone cannot solve the problem. Complete motorization of farms, including stationary gas engines, tractors, and motor trucks, is our only solution. Machinery must be made to do the work of human hands that are hard to get and too costly. The complete motorization of farms has been economical in many instances in the central agricultural section of the United States. This argument is no longer based upon theory, but upon facts.

Power machinery is only when it works, and then a commodity that is pumped from beneath the surface of the soil and cannot be used as food. When machinery fails, it is the only expense of interest on the investment.

Feeble Mindedness and Moronism Are at the Root of Our Social Problems.

By DR. WILLIAM S. SALTER, Chicago.

Experts tell us that insanity is increasing 360 times faster than the population in this country. I don't believe it. I am not alarmed about that, but I am tremendously alarmed about something that I know is increasing, even if insanity isn't, and that is feeble-mindedness, moronism, degeneracy. You can talk about immigration laws all you are a mind to. I don't care whether a man can read or write. I want to know before we let him in this land of ours whether there is imbecility, insanity, feeble-mindedness or moronism in his veins. If there is, then I want the gates closed absolutely against him. We have all we can absorb in a thousand years and get away with it.

Feeble-mindedness and moronism are at the root of 75 per cent of all our social problems, whether that be inebriety, pauperism, criminality or prostitution.

We have labored under the delusion that in America we had a mystic melting-pot that you could put anything in it you wanted to and get 100 per cent good, sound, wholesome, red-blooded, pure-blooded Americans out of it, but it is a lie. You know we don't get it and you know it now to your sorrow. When you take the feeble-minded, degenerate stock of southern Europe and mix it up in the American matrimonial melting-pot it doesn't go. It comes out a crippled, weak and degenerate stock which cannot be altered by the institutions of democracy.

We have gone so far to protect the weak against the strong that legislation will be demanded in the next generation to protect the strong against the weak, for the weak threaten us now with a sociological deluge of race defectiveness.

F. W. Ives, Vice-President American Society of Agricultural Engineers. The future of American farming lies not in more intensive cultivation of small acreage, but in the extension of the acreage one man can bring into cultivation. What the American farmer needs is the replacement of every possible of hand labor by machine.

FARMER SHOULD BE MORE FAMILIAR WITH GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF JUDGING STOCK

The Farmer Who Is Equipped to Do His Own Stock Judging, as These Farmers Are Doing, Has an Asset of Special Value.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
A good knowledge of the principles of stock judging is more widespread knowledge of any one of the arts in which man excels. It is the art of selecting the best animals from a group, and it is a knowledge that is essential to the success of the farmer. The farmer who is equipped to do his own stock judging has an asset of special value.

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

NOW WEAK AND HEARTBROKEN

In Mourning and Poverty She Counts Her Dead and Looks With Eyes of Sadness Toward the Threatening Future.

Article II.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

August 1, 1914, was the day that Germany declared war on Russia. The fire alarm rang around the world. Peasants in the field straightened their backs, listened and looked into the sun confused, wondering. Flags were unfurled, bands played, faces were white, tense and serious. Men left their work and walked in groups of the street corners. Women laid down their brooms, put aside their washing, and talked in whispers; sad lights were in their eyes. Children stopped playing. Something had happened. Evil things were ahead. August 3 and 4 found France and Great Britain mobilizing their sons. The torch was sweeping Europe—the fire of death had started.

For four long years—heart-sickening years—the world ran red. Men waded through mud and blood, fought, suffered, cursed, played, while back home in the mantel houses women and children worked, cried, prayed and waited. The world was mad. Death poisoned every breath the people breathed.

It is over now, it is finished. A stunned, numbed, weak-hearted Europe is again sitting in the sun of peace. Europe is in dirty black rags. The black is mourning, the rags are poverty. Her face is deeply lined—trenches made by suffering. Her eyes are downcast and dead. Hope flutters weakly in her breast, faith has faded from her soul. Her home is a house of darkness. The fire on the hearth has turned to cold gray ashes. The kettle no longer sings, it moans. Her mind is weary, her body is wasted. Hunger has robbed her of her strength. Her stockings, shodless feet, are blue from the cold. Her lips are starvation color. Ice in the winter's wind lashes her shivering, half-naked body. She shudders as she glares vacantly into space—she is tired so tired. As I behold her it seemed to me that a face so troubled and sad must never have known a smile.

I listened to her mutterings I found that she was counting. Over and over again she counted on her thin, tired, worn hands—she was counting her dead.

Thinking of Her Loss.

She was thinking. Her eyes looked over the hundreds of thousands of square miles of war zone, slashed with trenches pitted and pockmarked by shells. She sees where they fell. 15 tears are in her eyes. Long ago the dirt had reached the point where tears dry up. Row upon row, line upon line, mile upon mile, white-painted wooden crosses mark their graves. For the most part they were her youngest born, her most beloved, who dug deep in the soil to sleep forever in the dark dugouts.

As they fell bleeding from steel and lead, choking from gas, writhing in agony from fire, they proved in the dying word they spoke that they were mere boys as they had shown in their fighting, that they were brave men. To the poppies they entrusted their message, and the red-poppies remember the last word of Europe's dying sons, who went out into the great beyond with this last word on their lips, "Mother."

She has finished counting; an ache raddlers through her bent body. She sighs and sobs, "Seven and a half million of my sons are dead."

Her thoughts turn to the living, her arms open to receive them, she holds them to her heart. They have come, but how?

Some with sightless eyes doomed to grope through the world in a never-ending darkness, a night without stars or moon; sunless, black, hopeless days, and these, too, young men in the very morning of their day.

Others sentenced to silence—deaf and dumb. Never again will they hear their voices nor will they hear hers.

Still others in wheel chairs, dwarfed, legless. More hobbling on crutches, limping on canes. Many with empty sleeves. Some with great scars, where once was a handsome face.

She sees them all, her heart bleeds, she twists the mangled, the torn. She is counting them, the 12,616,017, the wounded of the war.

War's Frightful Cost.

Her voice is husky, her hands are tired, but she must count on. Six and a half million of her sons were marked "missing and prisoners" in the official war score. Many of these have come back to her, but she does not question them—she dare not. Their faces tell of the unspeakable horrors they endured. She sees in their eyes a depth of pain that is unathomable. It is a mother—she knows.

The war is over, but she is not over the war. Must she never stop counting? Is there no end to her losses? The graveyards are crowded. Her thoughts turn to the dead who, while they did not die in the war, died because of the war. Those who went out to battle left life in a burst of glory. Others there were who fell in their tracks—exhaustion, broken hearts sent them "west." She has not forgotten how the home flank suffered. The stay-at-homes were not all slackers. They fought hunger and cold, bent their backs beyond the straining point. Worst of all, they waited. It is estimated that 20,000,000 civilians died from weakness, fatigue, strain, broken hearts—the horror of waiting destroyed resistance. These were the underfed older men and women, the scared, undernourished children. Is there any wonder that Europe has a death look in her eyes? Death has been her morning thought, it has been her night sob, and for four years made up of months, weeks, days, hours, minutes and seconds death has been her Nemesis.

She is now totaling. The figures are appalling. They stagger her imagination. It is easy to write them, impossible to understand their full meaning. The mind can't grasp it; the world is bewildered by the number. It is too stupendous, too horrible for understanding. Think of it, seven and a half million young men, for the most part between the ages of eighteen and thirty, the youth, the strength, the spirit, the man power of Europe, dead—twenty million from civil life dead, over twelve and a half million wounded.

Who can measure this loss? War brought death. It did more—it stopped birth. In the devastated regions of Belgium, France, Italy, Poland, parts of Russia and the Balkan countries, the birth rate fell to almost nothing. In England and Wales the birth rate in the last part of 1915 was 29.5, the lowest on record. Mallett calculated that the birth rate had fallen 12 per cent in England and Wales by 1918.

The Journal of Heredity quotes Savorgnan as having estimated that it will take England at least ten years, Germany 12 years, Italy 38 years and France 36 years to recuperate their populations. These calculations by Savorgnan were made before the fearful losses of the campaign of 1918.

A village in France, Blercourt, tells what the war has done to the man power of Europe. This village, which is in the Chateau Thierry-Soissons district, had a population of a thousand people before the war. Its losses have been tabulated. Twenty six soldiers from this village were killed in the war. Ninety seven of the villagers died from war privations. The total of 123 is the death toll of a village of a thousand.

The figures I have quoted from the calculations of Savorgnan and Mallett were made before the war was finished. Since the war, estimates have been made, and these estimates show the situation to be even worse. In France I was told that 67 per cent of the men between twenty and forty years were listed as dead or incapacitated for work. Further, that it would take France over 70 years to recover her normal population.

It is said that it will take Italy 50 years and England 25 years to regain normality of population.

The human waste of the war is more than sad memories. The loss of man power makes a grave problem. It has thrown out of balance the domestic scheme of the world. It will be felt for years. There are a great many more young women than men. Home life is bound to suffer. There will be fewer marriages, fewer children. Statistics only tell part of the story. European Tarantula.

An eminent authority in such matters, in remarking that the tarantula is a spider, says of that terrifying creature that it is the Lycosa Tarantula, a species of spider found in some of the warmer parts of Italy and Spain. When full grown it is about the size of a chestnut and of a brown color. Its bite was at one time supposed to be dangerous and to induce a kind of "dancing disease," but now it is known not to be worse than the sting of a common wasp.

It is an old fable, extending to remote times, that the bite of this spider would produce epilepsy or a strange dancing mania in its victims and that this epilepsy or madness could be relieved only by a particular kind of music. The tarantula of Italy and Spain—and it is found in those countries today—has hairy legs with black markings on them.

America's Debt to Jews.

Jews figured very prominently in the discovery of America by Columbus according to Rabbi David Philipson of Cincinnati. The first man who stepped on the shore of the new world was the interpreter of the expedition, Luis de Torres a Jew. Bernal, the ship surgeon, was also a Jew, as were several members of the crew.

It is also now said to be established that the long-credited belief that Queen Isabella pawned her Jew's to furnish Columbus with the funds for the trip is a legend. These funds, it is said, were furnished by two Jews, Luis de Santangel and Gabriel Sanchez. A letter by Columbus to St. James is still extant, in which he gives some account of his exploits.

Who Knows?

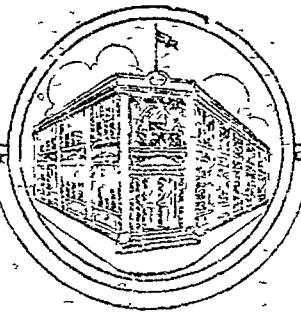

A friend of mine called upon a newly wedded pair and I happened to drop in. The bride had been a widow. My friend remarked to me, "You introduced them to each other, didn't you?" "Why, yes," I facetiously replied. "I introduced her to her first and second husbands and who knows but what I'll be the one to introduce her to her third one?"—Exchange.

Leon Stuart, Northville, who lost cattle in an electrical storm while the stock were in the Wayne county portion of his farm was denied payment by a rising vote. He told the body he felt that he had no legal claim for the loss, as the accident which caused the death of a cow and colt occurred in Wayne county still he believed the regulations could be set aside in this instance but the vote was emphatic against creating a precedent.

YOU MAY HELP

The new dishes and silverware purchased by the Alumni association were so secured for the exclusive use of members of the association but rather for the use of general public, whenever gatherings of any kind are held at the school house. With that understanding any one desiring to contribute toward the fund being raised to pay for them may hand their contribution to Floyd Lanning and the credit will be given. It is a fine thing for the community to have these dishes and they will be frequently used by the public and any financial assistance they may receive will be greatly appreciated by the members of the Alumni Association.

Insyde Tyres are made of especially tough fabric vulcanized together over tire moulds so they will be shaped to fit exactly the inside of the casing for which they are made. This prevents wrinkles which might pinch the tube. The outside is coated with rubber, which vulcanizes itself to the inside of the casing to prevent slipping. The part of Insyde Tyres which comes in contact with the tube is coated with rubber and so treated that the tube cannot stick.
