Jewish Communities Dwindling From Emigration

PARIS — The once-flourishing Jewish communities in several countries of the Arab Middle East are dwindling steadily, according to a report released by the American Jewish Committee in Paris.

In Iraq, which in 1946 had a community of 120,000 Jews, the largest in the area, the community shrank to fewer than 400, through intermittently authorized emigration, according to reports reaching the committee.

Only about 6,000 Jews remain in the Moslem lands most closely involved with the Arab-Israeli conflict — Syria, Iraq, Egypt, Libya and Lebanon — an area where there were 308,000 fewer Jews than 30 years ago.

The committees charged that in Iraq, at least 23 Jews were murdered in the last year, the highest such total.

Fifteen Jewish men and three women arrested over a period of eight months have not been heard from since and "must be presumed dead," the report said. Five members of a family were reported to have been shot as "vengeance" following an Israeli command raid in Beirut in April.

NEW SETTLEMENTS

JERUSALEM — A plan for the establishment of 20 new settlements and two new regional centers in the Arava district of the Negev during the next seven years was disclosed in Jerusalem by Raanan Weitz, head of the Jewish Agency's settlement department. Weitz said the plan called for intensive agricultural projects in the region. He said a population of close to 10,000 was expected in the sparsely inhabited Arava region once the plan materialized.

Guerrillas Warn Austria Not To Back Out

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Palestinian guerrillas warned Austria against going back on a commitment to discontinue transit facilities for Jews emigrating from the Soviet Union to Israel.

The warning came in a statement published here by the "Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution," the group that claimed responsibility for the kidnapping of three hostages from a train carrying Jewish emigrants from the Soviet Union into Austria last week.

The hostages and an Austrian customs guard were released unharmed by the two guerrillas after Bruno Kreisky, the Austrian Chancellor, agreed to their demands that Austria halt the transit of groups of Jewish emigrants and close a receiving center for them near Vienna.

In a statement published in Al Moharrer, a newspaper with close ties to the Palestinians, the guerrilla group said:

"We warn that any backing down of any kind on the moral commitment expressed in the decision to stop the emigration

No Agreement Reached In Austria-Israel Talks

VIENNA — Premier Golda Meir of Israel and Chancellor Bruno Kreisky of Austria conferred for nearly two hours but were unable to reach any agreement on facilities for the continued transit of Soviet Jews through Austria.

Dr. Kreisky said at a news conference that the atmosphere in the meeting had been "very serious," and that both sides had "outlined their differences."

"I made it clear to her that the special facilities we have been granting for the transiting Soviet Jews in the past will no longer be available in the future," he said brusquely.

Center Will Be Closed

Dr. Kreisky added that Schönau Castle, the Jewish Agency's transit facility, would have to be closed, but that individual Soviet Jews could still pass through Austria "by the shortest route and with the shortest possible stop."

The meeting was obviously a major disappointment to Mrs. Meir, who had said on the way here from Strasbourg, France, that she hoped to reach a compromise under which Schönau Castle would remain open and the large-scale transit of Soviet emigrants would continue.

Dr. Kreisky announced recently that the transiting through Austria of groups of Soviet Jews would cease and that Schönau Castle would be closed.

He acceded to the demands of two Palestinian terrorists who boarded a train carrying Jewish emigrants from Moscow to Vienna, took four hostages — three Jews and an Austrian Customs guard — threatened to kill them unless Vienna made concessions on the transit issue.

Cancels Press Conference

Mrs. Meir canceled a scheduled appearance before the press gathered outside the Chancellor's ornate, chandeliered office in the Ballhaus, a Baroque palace that housed the Congress of Vienna in 1815.

Without a word to anyone, the Premier's party headed in limousines for Vienna's Schwechat Airport and took off for Israel immediately, carrying with them about 90 Soviet Jews who had arrived at Schönau Castle during the last 24 hours. Itzhak Patish, the Israeli Ambassador to Austria who accompanied Mrs. Meir in the meeting and to the airport, said that she was "very tired but not morose."

Earlier Mrs. Meir had made it clear that the issue of continued immigration of Soviet Jews through Austria was vital to Israel. If the Arab guerrillas succeeded in forcing Austria to close her transit facilities at the point of a gun, she said, "they'll try the same thing in other countries."

Kreisky Is Blunt

As Mrs. Meir was on the way to the airport, Dr. Kreisky called a news conference. He was blunt, uncompromising and at times sarcastic as he answered questions in English and German from more than 100 Austrian and foreign newsmen.

"I cannot speak for Mrs. Meir, who is not here to express her point of view," he said in a flat voice. "I can only tell you what our disagreements are."

Dr. Kreisky said he had proposed that Schönau Castle be placed under the protection of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, rather than the Jewish Agency, which is run by Israeli and international Zionists. Mrs. Meir, he said dryly, "was not impressed."

Under U.N. Auspices

Nonetheless, he said, the proposal would be submitted to Prince Sadruddin Khan, the High Commissioner.

If it was accepted, he said, it was conceivable that Schönau Castle would be reopened under United Nations auspices. "I would be happy to see it happen," he said, "because the risk under the United Nations would be less."

Dr. Kreisky declined under persistent questioning to say when the Jewish Agency would be required to close the facility. "That's a technical question," he said, "but it will be closed."

would not serve the interests and stability of Austria, or the safety of its citizens."

Neither the Palestine Liberation Organization, the umbrella group for the guerrillas headed by Yasser Arafat, nor any of the armed groups that make up the Palestinian resistance, have made any comment on the Austrian operation. But the publication of the statement in Al Moharrer indicated that the previously unknown "Eagles" group is officially approved.

The Arab press has been exultant over the success of the operation by the two guerrillas, who gave a news conference in Libya. They were given the right to land there in a small private plane on which they were allowed to leave Austria after surrendering the hostages of Vienna airport.

The two unidentified guerrillas said that an assertion by Defense Minister Moshe Dayan of Israel that Israel would fight the commandos wherever they may be "gives us the right to fight the Zionists everywhere."

In the statement published here, the Eagles group said that Austria had violated her traditional neutrality by allowing the Jewish Agency to set up transit facilities that enabled thousands of emigrants to move from the Soviet Union to Israel. The Jewish Agency is made up of Israeli and international Zionist groups and is charged with the affairs of migrants to Israel.

The Palestinians continued: "The Jewish emigrant, once he leaves the Soviet Union, becomes a Zionist under Israel's control and a potential recruit in Israel's Army. This gives us the right to confront him before he reaches our occupied country."

The Austrian operation was hailed by Al Hayat, a conservative newspaper here backed by Saudi Arabia, as "the most effective commando action since Munich."

And An Nahar, Lebanon's major independent daily, said that the guerrillas had been more successful than anyone before in seeking to influence the Soviet Union against allowing the emigration of Jews to Israel.

UNOFFICIAL PROMISE
 WASHINGTON — Israeli Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir told some 700 American and Canadian Jewish community leaders that he has "an unofficial promise" that 30-40,000 Jews will arrive in Israel from the Soviet Union in a year and that he expects 18,000 families "from everywhere" to immigrate in 1974.

Obituaries

OTTO SEIDNER
 Funeral services for Otto Seidner, 79, a Westerly mayonnaise manufacturer who turned his small business into a national corporation, were held Tuesday at the Harvey W. Buckler Funeral Home in Westerly. Mr. Seidner died on September 29. Burial was in the Sons of Israel and David Cemetery.

Mr. Seidner was the husband of Gertrude Seidner. He was born in Stonington, Connecticut, a son of the late Jacob and Emma Seidner. A major innovator in the processed food industry, he developed and directed the family delicatessen and mayonnaise business and bottled potato salad company until 1970.

He expanded the Stonington delicatessen of the newly arrived immigrant Jacob Seidner to Mystic, Connecticut, in 1919, when he began to produce mayonnaise on a commercial scale. Moving the plant to Friendship Drive in Westerly in 1921, Mr. Seidner expanded the business by manufacturing the first hermetically sealed bottled potato salad.

In 1933, Admiral Richard Byrd brought Seidner's mayonnaise on his South Pole expedition, claiming it was one of the best in nutritional value.

His son Arnold, who managed the business until it was sold to a Providence firm in July, credited his father with "maintaining by sheer force of personality and character, a small business despite difficulties in today's economic climate."

An avid yachtsman and sports fisherman, Mr. Seidner was a founding member of the Westerly Yacht Club which named him honorary commodore in 1971. He often shared the magnificent yachts, all named Muriel, with community groups like the Boy Scouts and the YMCA.

Active in the war effort during World War II, he gave his 46-foot cruiser, the Muriel III, to the U.S. Coast Guard as part of the auxiliary fleet. Refitted in Boston, the yacht patrolled coastal shores. Mr. Seidner was named commander of the Rhode Island Area Coast Guard Auxiliary and held the rank of lieutenant during the war.

Mr. Seidner was one of Westerly's outstanding citizens and was deeply involved in community affairs as a founding member of the Westerly YMCA and as a trustee of the Westerly Hospital. He was an original officer of the Rhode Island Cancer Association and donated land for a scout camp in nearby Queguatag.

During the 1950s Mr. Seidner was director of the New England Council, president of the Mayonnaise and Salad Manufacturers Association and chairman of the committee which planned the Westerly police station.

He was a 32nd degree Mason and a member of the Masonic Officers Club, the Sojourners.

Survivors, in addition to his wife, are a daughter, Muriel Dove of Mailbu, California, and a son, Arnold Seidner of Denver, Colorado, and a sister, Olga Friedman of California.

MRS. JACOB WOLF
 Funeral services for Rose Wolf, 77, formerly of 344 O'Connor Street who died September 30 after a four week illness, were held Wednesday from the Sugarman Memorial Chapel. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

Mrs. Wolf changed the spelling of her name after the death of her husband, Jacob Woolfe.

She was born in Russia, a daughter of the late Simon and Etta Chorney, and had lived in Providence for more than 60 years.

She is survived by a son, Sidney Woolfe of Las Vegas, Nevada; a step-brother, Daniel Chorney of Providence and two grandchildren.

MOWRY LOWE
 Funeral services for Mowry Lowe, 63 of 121 Hazard Avenue; a prominent local radio personality, who died Monday, were held Wednesday from Temple Beth El. Burial was in Sons of Israel and David Cemetery.

Mr. Lowe was promotional director for the Warwick Mall. He began his long career in radio in 1931 when he joined the staff of WEAN, one of the Journal-Bulletin stations. His "Man on the Street" broadcasts were among the most popular programs in the 1930s.

In 1948 he was appointed WEAN sales manager and in 1950 he became station general manager.

In 1955 he became station manager of WTRY in Troy, New York, and president of Tri-City Radio. When radio station WLKW went on the air here in 1961, Mr. Lowe returned to Providence and served as that station's general manager.

Besides being a member of Governor Chafee's Commission on Tourism, Mr. Lowe was a director of the Rhode Island Tourist-Travel Association. He was also chairman of the communications committee of the Rhode Island Heart Association. He was associated with Yankee Communications Inc., an applicant for a cable television franchise.

He was a past president of the Ledgemont Country Club, a founder and past president of the Rhode Island Broadcasters Association and a past director of the Rhode Island Heritage Hall of Fame.

Mr. Lowe was born in Pawtucket in 1910, a son of the late Samuel and Fanny (Udler) Perlow.

His first wife, the former Sally Deluty, died in 1947. In 1956 he married Edna M. Giblin.

Besides his wife, he is survived by a daughter, Roberta Allen of Providence; three brothers, Peter Perlow and Joseph Perlow, both of Providence and Fred Perlow of Cranston, and three grandchildren.

DR. MANUEL HORWITZ
 Funeral services for Dr. Manuel Horwitz, 63, of 25 Bedford Road, Pawtucket, who died September 30 were held from Temple Beth El on Tuesday. Burial was in Sons of Israel and David Cemetery.

Dr. Horwitz, a radiologist in Rhode Island for more than 30 years, was the husband of Minette (Adler) Horwitz. He was born in Brooklyn in 1910. In 1932 he was graduated from City College of New York and in 1936 from Long Island College of Medicine.

He came to Rhode Island in 1941 to be an associate of the late Dr. Isaac Gerber. During World War II he served in the Army as a lieutenant colonel and was chief radiologist at the 165th General Hospital in France.

Dr. Horwitz maintained an office at 407 Brook Street and was on the staff of Chapin Hospital, Butler Health Center and the U.S. Veterans' Service and was a consultant at The Miriam Hospital.

A member of Temple Beth El, he was a past vice president of that temple and was a member of the Rhode Island Medical Society, the American Board of Radiology and the New England Roentgen Ray Society. He was also active in the Boy Scouts in Providence for many years.

Besides his wife, he is survived by two sons, Dr. Harold Horwitz of Lafayetteville, North Carolina, and Bruce Horwitz of Rochester, New York; a sister, Sadie Schachter of Brooklyn and two grandchildren.

JOHN SILVERMAN
 Funeral services for John Silverman, 81, formerly of 94 Carr Street, who died on September 26 after a nine year illness, were held September 28 from the Sugarman Memorial Chapel. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

Mr. Silverman, a used car dealer for three decades, who operated John's Used Cars on Allens Avenue until his retirement 11 years ago, was married to the late Jeanette Silverman, who died on September 9 of this year.

Born in Austria, a son of the late Samuel and Rachael Silverman, he had been a resident of Providence for 35 years.

He was a member of the Touro Fraternal Association and an Army veteran of World War I.

He is survived by a son, Eugene Silverman of Cranston; a daughter, Dr. Mary Ravin of Southfield, Michigan; six grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

MRS. MURRAY TRINKLE
 Funeral services for Helen Trinkle, 61, of 7 Doane Avenue, who died September 29 after an 18 month illness, were held September 30 from the Sugarman Memorial Chapel. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

She was born in Newark, New Jersey, a daughter of the late Jacob and Lena Jacobson. She had been a resident of Providence for the last 31 years.

She was a member of Temple Beth El and its Sisterhood, the B'nai B'rith, The Miriam Hospital Women's Association, the Hadasah, and was active in the Hope High School Parents Council Association.

Besides her husband, she is survived by a son, Bernard L. Trinkle of Providence; two daughters, Roberta Andreozzi of Barrington and Linda Woolf of Scarsdale, New York; two brothers, Larry Jacobson of Chicago and Robert Jacobson of Rochester, New York; a sister, Judith Miller of New York City and four grandchildren.

MAX GREENSTEIN
 Graveside services for Max Greenstein, 68, of 93 Caporal Street, Cranston, who died September 25, were held the following day at the Swan Point Cemetery.

The husband of Eleanor (Spitz) Greenstein, he was born in Providence, a son of the late Frank and Jennie (Gernick) Greenstein. He was a tire salesman.

Besides his wife, he is survived by three sons, Howard Greenstein of California, and David and Neil Greenstein of Coventry; a sister, Bessie Harris of Pawtucket, and four grandchildren.

ABRAHAM J. LECHTMAN
 Funeral services for Abraham Jacob Lechtman, 77, of 900 Post Road, Warwick, who died September 26, were held at the graveside in Lincoln Park Cemetery on the same day.

Home Is Still In Need Of Financial Support

Dear Mr. Segal,

I appreciate very much the kind praise you have given to the Ladies Association of the Jewish Home for the Aged. However, I do feel that perhaps your information is not quite correct when you say that the Home is in good condition financially.

Because of our difficulty in meeting our commitments we were forced to turn to the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island, very much against our will. A great many of our residents are on old age assistance and this aid is in no way enough to pay for the daily care that they receive. We must never lose sight of the need of the people in the Home and for this reason the Ladies Association is the "lively" group that you mention. Perhaps the Federation has lightened the financial cloud but I assure you that it has far from eliminated it.

We do hope that people will continue to support us in the future as they have in the past. We are very proud of the superior care that our residents receive in our Home and only by the aid of concerned people can we continue to maintain its standards.

Your Money's Worth

By Sylvia Porter

The Three Foundations

Your financial independence in your retirement years will rest on three foundations: your Social Security benefits, your individual savings and investments in all mediums, your private pension, if any.

Of all three, only the Social Security foundation is solid.

Your private pension could turn out an empty benefit.

It will be that your fringe benefits include a relatively generous retirement pension plan promising to provide you and your spouse with a decent living standard when added to your Social Security, private savings and insurance. It is possible too that at least part of your accumulated pension coverage is "portable" to another job under certain conditions.

But the fact is that millions of you are drifting along under the dangerous illusion that your pension is safe and will be substantial. For many reasons, your plan may not pay off at all. As for size, today's average monthly pension benefit is only about $100 to $125, and even after long service, newly retiring employees are getting only $200-$250.

Take this as a warning to check up at once on the vital details of your pension plan and to get the facts straight. You cannot plan intelligently if you are deluding yourself and your family.

Your life insurance is probably designed primarily to create an instant estate for your family in the event of your death.

But let's say you have an endowment type of policy — the most expensive kind — which guarantees you a specified income for life when you are ready to retire.

This type of program would free you from the responsibilities of money management or investment decisions, would guarantee you a fixed monthly payment and would assure you that you would never outlive your capital.

It should NOT, however, be your entire retirement program in an age of inflation.

Although an annuity can generate a good monthly return — far more than bank savings — you may be able to do much better by investing at a young age in real estate or stocks.

Remember, even if you can manage a retirement income equal to your actual earnings today, it will put you way, way down the living scale of 20 or 30 years from now.

Ownership of stocks involves inherent risks.

Despite this fact and despite the miserable performance of the vast majority of stocks in recent years, the long-term trend of stock prices is up. If you invest in stocks of sound, growing companies, your dividends plus your capital gains should provide you with an average annual return of around 8 to 9 per cent.

Do, therefore, put part of your retirement funds in carefully selected stocks (or mutual funds or similar investments). Don't ever forget your basic objective is long-term appreciation and do not be sidetracked into dangerously risky, speculative situations. History strongly suggests that you'll come out ahead.

Ownership of bonds involves unavoidable risks too.

But again, despite this and the fact that bonds are fixed income investments, today's historically high interest rates also strongly suggest that you place another part of your retirement funds in high-grade corporate or tax-exempt bonds. Don't buy low-grade securities which might default and

Orinin — My Shtetl

By BERYL SEGAL

My generation was perhaps the last one to be born, raised and educated in the Shtetl. We were fortunate enough to escape annihilation by the hands of the Nazis and their collaborators on the Ukraine, in Poland, Lithuania and elsewhere in Eastern Europe.

We are the remnant of those who still remember the Shtetl with all its spiritual riches and depressing poverty, its inner beauty and repulsive ugliness. We also remember — it is engraved in our hearts and minds — the tragic end of the Shtetl and all who lived in it at the unclean hands of the enemy.

Yet the Shtetl lives in hundreds of volumes written by survivors who, though they live in comfort now, cannot forget their roots. It also lives in the imagination of poets and novelists who once touched by the afterglow of the Shtetl stand in awe of its inspiring heights.

And the reader is never tired of Shtetl stories, Shtetl reminiscences, nor do we ever exhaust our stores of tales, probably embellished, now that it is gone.

The reasons for this are many. To the immigrant, like myself the Shtetl brings back memories of the days when we were young and we were dreaming dreams. It is also a reminder of helplessness and hopelessness.

To the sons and daughters of immigrants, tales of the Shtetl still their thirst for understanding the lives of their parents. Stories told to them in childhood come back to them and they exclaim:

"This is exactly what my mother told me when I was a child."

Or:
 "My father told me of the poverty in the Shtetl and I could not believe it."

Then there are the readers of the third and fourth generation, they who have no romantic memories of anything connected with the Shtetl. For them it is at once a puzzle, a mystery, a wonder that defies definition.

At Columbia University Summer School students studied the Shtetl all during the summer. Elsewhere the social and cultural aspects of the Shtetl, particularly the tongue of the Shtetl, Yiddish, were examined at length. The Shtetl is an absorbing object of study.

Yet the appetite grows with the eating. The more the Shtetl is studied the greater the demand for additional understanding of this unique phenomenon in Jewish life.

Let us contribute to this vast amount of knowledge, out of our own experience, and describe the little town of our birth and youth on the Ukraine, Orinin in Podolia, hard by the Austrian border.

You are a traveler visiting the town of Orinin for the first time. Coming down the hill from the East side, or approaching Orinin from the West side down a rocky prominence, the town reveals itself suddenly as lying in a pleasant valley, surrounded on three sides by a river. The river marks the limits of Orinin and its Jewish population. On the other side of the river are the villages and farms and these are off limits to the Jews of Orinin. So are the lands above the Eastern hill. They, too, are for Christians only.

There are two landmarks of the town. On the Eastern entrance stands the Kloister, the Greek-Orthodox church, which is also known as the Russian church or the Pravoslavny house of worship. It dominates the town and its surroundings with its green cupolas and gold crosses, and when the big bells begin to toll, calling the people to worship, the tone reverberates far and wide in the countryside. The Kloister marks the Eastern limits of Orinin and is a constant reminder to the Jews that up to here they can build their houses and no further. The tolling of the church bells sent shivers through the heart of every Jew, and the sight of its onion-shaped cupolas scares every Jewish child.

The other landmark is on the Western side of Orinin. There, by the river, hidden in a luxurious garden surrounded by a tall stone wall is the Roman-Catholic church, or the Polish Kostiol. It is a modest wooden building and the worshippers are few.

Opposite the Kostiol is the water mill which is the last structure in Orinin. The river falls on the big wheels of the mill and forms a waterfall which is the wonder of the children of the town, and from there the river curves around and laps the foundations of the houses, runs by the Great Shul and the ritual bath, the Mikveh.

This is, or rather was, Orinin. A person walking at a normal pace could cross the length and breadth of Orinin in half an hour. Within the limits of the town lived about three hundred families. When children were married an addition was made to the house, a room built on, or a spare room enlarged to accommodate the newly-married couple. Within our memory only two new houses were allowed to be built on two vacant lots.

Fortunately, many of the young people either went to live in the big city, Kamenetz-Podolsk, and elsewhere. Many found their way to America. A very few were lost in Moscow, Petrograd (now Leningrad) and other cities in Great Russia. It was rumored that they must have "exchanged their coin," which was another way of saying that they had left the faith of their fathers, and their names were never mentioned in Orinin.

The streets of Orinin had distinct names. Some of them made sense, others were derogatory. The street in which a man lived designated his profession and also his rank in the Shtetl. In general, people of the Post Road were merchants and men of standing in the Shtetl. People living in Yatke Gass, the Butchers' Alley, were simple folk who smelled of blood and of the dung of cattle. And those living in the vicinity and around the Big Shul and the Houses of Worship near it, were tailors, shoemakers, water carriers, carpenters, furriers and also the poor.

The Ober Gass, the upper district, and the Hinter Gass, the lower district of Orinin, seldom crossed lines. It was a novelty when a family from the Ober Gass married someone from the Hinter Gass. People of the Ober Gass were Hasidim, men of learning and men of means. The Hinter Gass, on the other hand, were not much on learning but strong in skill and were adept in forming get-togethers to enjoy the Sabbaths and Holidays when they had respite from work.

The greater part of Orinin was of the Hinter Gass, and they worshipped in the largest congregation, the Big Shul. It was not very big or tall and it stood in the lowest part of town by the water of the Wide River. But the Big Shul was old and no one remembered when and by whom it was built. The people of the Ober Gass worshipped in small houses called either a Kloister or a Beth Hamidrosch, where they also studied after worship.

This was Orinin. Within these limits we had to live, some three hundred families of us.

And we also had limitations on what we could do and what we couldn't do.

Of these we will tell in another column.

ISRAELI MUSICIANS: At the annual Sherry Welcome Party for Foreign Students at Boston's Berklee College of Music, the Israeli contingent was comprised of, counter clockwise, Guri Teuchler, a saxophonist from Tel Aviv majoring in arranging and composition; Orpheus Gaitanopoulos, also a saxophone player in the same program and a member of Berklee's Thursday Night Dues Band; and Yuval Havatzelet from Tel Aviv, a pianist in composition. Berklee is known for its major contribution in helping establish the first school of jazz now operating in Tel Aviv.

Sapir Says Arab Terrorism Costs Israel $25 Million Per Year

NEW YORK — Israel's Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir disclosed here that Arab terrorism costs his country $25 million a year just to protect its embassies and facilities abroad. That figure was cited by the Israeli leader as only part of the growing economic burden Israel must bear to meet the soaring costs of defense, immigrant absorption and necessary imports.

Addressing a meeting of American Zionist Federation leaders, Sapir said the cost of living in Israel is one of the highest in the world. He said the government cannot raise prices and, therefore, must subsidize basic products in the amounts of IL 1.3 billion annually.

He noted that Israel must pay

$300 million more for "basic commodities" imported from the U.S. than it paid in 1971. He said that oil consumption in Israel has soared from eight million barrels per annum in 1958 to 63 million barrels by the end of this year. "And oil is much more expensive now and is going to be even higher in the near future," he said.

Sapir predicted that Israel's gross national product would reach IL 42 billion ($10 billion) in 1977, compared to IL 31 billion ($7.4 billion) in 1972. He said this represented an aggregate growth rate of 35 percent in four years or an average rise of eight percent a year. He also estimated that industrial production would show an increase of 10 percent by 1977, up from IL 22 billion ($5 billion) to IL 30 billion ($7 billion).

Status Of Cuban Jews Seen Unchanged By Break

MONTREAL — A Jewish leader familiar with Cuba stated that he didn't expect any change in the status of that country's small Jewish community to follow Premier Fidel Castro's surprise announcement that Cuba was breaking diplomatic relations with Israel. "There is no deducing from this any anti-Jewish feeling" in Cuba said Lavy Becker, honorary consultant to the World Jewish Congress on inter-community affairs.

Becker, who visited Havana last February, said he was "thoroughly surprised" by the break. He said that his talks with Israeli diplomats in Cuba last winter and with the Cuban Minister to Israel in July gave him no hint that a rupture was imminent. Cuba's Jewish community, which Becker estimated at about 1200, enjoyed a "benevolent relationship with the Castro regime." He noted that Jews in Havana have always been well treated and had access to the Israeli legation. There is no evidence of a change of attitude, Becker said.

(Israeli radio quoted Moses Baldas, head of the Cuban Jewish community, as saying the community was surprised by Castro's announcement. Baldas said there had never been any anti-Semitism in Cuba and expressed hope that the Jewish community would not suffer now. Israeli Foreign Ministry sources said there were no Israeli experts in Cuba lately, although up to two or three years ago Castro had asked for Israeli experts to instruct Cuban farmers in agriculture and irrigation.)

Becker also revealed that he was in the process of negotiating with Cuban authorities for the removal of the Jewish archives from that country to Israel. He said the reason for the move was the absence of Jewish scholars in Cuba, who could study the archives. Although the first Jew in Cuba landed with Columbus, the modern Cuban Jewish community dates from 1906 and in its heyday after World War II numbered no more than 14,000, most of them in Havana.

Soviets End Jamming Of Some Broadcasts

WASHINGTON — The Soviet government has ceased jamming the broadcasts to the Soviet Union of the Voice of America, the British Broadcasting Corporation and the West German Radio (Deutschwelle) but is continuing to drown the programs from Radio Israel, Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty, the State Department said on September 13.

The jamming which was ended September 10 had been in effect with one exception since June 21, 1968 when Soviet military forces entered Czechoslovakia. The exception was the VOA's broadcast of Soviet Communist Party Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev's speech while he was visiting the United States last June.

MONKS HONORED

JERUSALEM — Two Italian monks were recently honored here for saving Jews during World War II at the risk of their own lives. In a special ceremony, trees in their names were planted in the "Avenue of the Righteous Gentiles" at Yad Vashem.

Only In America

By Harry Golden

Nixon's Nobel Peace Prize

As if he didn't have enough trouble, Richard Nixon is again the nominee for the Nobel Prize for Peace.

Tito of Yugoslavia is also a candidate, but Tito is in better shape than the President. Tito is an old-fashioned iron-fisted dictator. Mr. Nixon is a secret bomber. Ask the Cambodian to whom Mr. Nixon says he owes no apology.

Only two American Presidents have won the Nobel Prize for Peace: Theodore Roosevelt in 1906 and Woodrow Wilson in 1919. Three American Secretaries of State have also been recipients, Cordell Hull in 1945 and George C. Marshall in 1953 as well as Frank B. Kellogg in 1929. And one Vice President also won, Charles G. Dawes in 1925.

I would still think the odds on Richard Nixon, Spiro Agnew and Henry Kissinger were long ones.

August Shou, the director of the Norwegian Nobel Institute also disclosed that there were 45 other candidates besides Dick and Teet. Usually the institute reveals the names of none of the contenders but in this instance, Mr. Shou wanted to make sure John Ehrlichman and H. R. Haldeman didn't hold their breaths until December 10.

The Swedish Academy of Science picks the Nobel Prize winners in physics, chemistry and economics; the Swedish Royal Caroline Medico-Surgical Institute in Physiology on medicine, and the Swedish Academy in literature. The Norwegian Parliament picks a committee to bestow the Peace Prize which is how Mr. Shou got into the act.

These days the prize is worth $70,000 in addition to the gold medal which might come in handy for repaying Aplanap or Bebe.

It may be, of course, that the committee is not considering Richard Nixon in context of peace in Southeast Asia. Maybe they want to give him the prize for devaluing the dollar or appointing Henry as secretary of state or even pushing Ron Zeigler.

The Norwegian Nobel Institute works in mysterious ways its wonders to perform. It has managed not to give the Peace Prize to Mahatma Ghandi or Pope John XXIII.

As criminal lawyers say 12 men in a room alone can go crazy. They may come out with a vote of confidence for Richard Nixon.

But it's not the way to be.

NICKNAMES FOR BIG SHOTS

Nicknaming the big shots is a game I have played with friends and readers all my life. I want to share the dramatis persona of the Watergate affair.

First of all there is Richard Nixon. Norman Mailer once called him Uriah Heap, Dicken's unctuous, oily bookkeeper. Uriah Heap will do, except Uriah never commanded. Ajax of the Greek forces besieging Troy did.

Ajax has the fleetest of the Greek generals and the bravest. But he failed to win Achilles' armor and the disappointment drove him momentarily mad. He slaughtered a herd of sheep thinking them Trojans. His men could never believe again that he was what he represented himself to be Carding is a term meaning in certain definite situations which card you play to give a signal either to count, come-on or suit-preference. As a Defender, it is imperative to try to give one's partner an accurate picture of the hand so in normal circumstances one should always play the proper card for the only one a false card fools most of the time is one's own partner. The Declarer knows what is out against him. On the other hand, the Declarer has no one to account to. The Dummy has nothing to do about whatever card his Partner might play so with that in mind Declarer can play whatever he wants to. Unfortunately, players have been taught how to Card in Defense but carry the same rigidity into their Declarer Play. This can tend to give out too much information to their opponents. Such was the case in today's hand.

No names will be mentioned for although some made the hand and some didn't, I could not be sure how and why this happened. I did watch it played a few times and did see how the automatic play to the first trick by the Declarer gave enough information so that the Defenders were able to defend properly had they taken the right view of what the first play told them. East-West were vulnerable, East Dealer with this bidding:

 P INT P 3NT

The bidding was automatic, no North-South pair should have made a problem there. The idea was to make the nine tricks after the lead of a Spade, either the 8 or 7. East playing the Jack with South winning the trick with either the King or Queen. Many players take the attitude of "What's the difference, they're both the same?" Yes, they have equal value but there is a definite reason why one may be played rather than the other. On Defense, one should always win a trick with the lowest card he can, it may not make a difference to him but it certainly will to the partner. In this case, a Defender says he has no card lower he could have played to either win the trick or force something out. East's play of the Jack did not deny the Queen but did the 10. West had that card so he gained no knowledge there. Some Souths, taught to show the right cards as Defenders do the same as Declarer. This often is like a Blue Print to the Defense. If South won the trick with the Queen he would also tell West that he must have the King, too, for East would have played that card if he had it. But if South wins the first trick with the King, a false card, as they say, no one would be certain where the Queen was. This is what often happened when each card was played.

If South won with the King and then took the Diamond finesse, West would win it and wonder what to do next. Not sure where the Queen was, but knowing South's opening bid almost guaranteed both red Aces and possibly the Club Queen and Jack. West might very well play another Spade, it doesn't matter which, the Ace or a low one, either will give Declarer his ninth trick. Any other lead will not help and left to his own devices, Declarer must go down. As soon as East gets in another Spade from him leads to four tricks in that suit for the Defense.

If South wins that first trick with the Queen he will tell West that he also has the King for if East had had it he would have played it at trick one. Now when West wins the Diamond King he will know that if he does play another Spade it will make South's King good, something South can't do himself. Therefore, he will play something else and eventually East will have to get in and lead through the other Spade honor. Declarer can cash but eight tricks.

True, this does take a bit of thought by the West defender but at least does give him the ammunition needed to steer him in the right direction.

Moral: As Defender always play the correct card to give your partner the most vital information but as Declarer you have no partner to account to so play any false card you want to throw the Defense off.

ENGAGED: Mrs. Sol Rabinowitz of 839 Edgewood Drive, Westbury, New York announces the engagement of her daughter, Ellen Carol to Lee Alan Grebstein, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Grebstein of 15 Lookoff Road, Cranston.

American Jewish Youths Fill Hindu Ashrams

CARBONDALE — Having just returned from a nine week tour of India and other Far-Eastern countries, Southern Illinois University's Hillel Rabbi, Earl Vinecour, reports that he found "that Buddhist meditation centers and Hindu Ashrams had many expatriate American Jewish youth."

"A guru with a large following on American campuses," the Rabbi said, "is Sai Baba. He has his Ashram near Bangalore, India. When I visited an Indian Jewish Family in Bangalore their first question was 'what is wrong with American Jewish youth?'"

"It seems that the Rubin family has observed that a good many of the foreign following of Sai Baba who come to Bangalore are American Jews.

"Through the Rubins I met some of these young people. One, Jay Mazo, from Brooklyn, has become the main disciple of Sri SivaBaba Yogi. Jay claimed that there are many Jews in the movement and that there is hardly an Ashram in India where one can't find American Jews.

"Sri Vibudhesha Theertha, the chief swami of one of India's most prestigious Krishna Temples in Udipi, told me in a personal interview that each year brings more American youth to India and among them are many Jews. He, himself, was interested to know what there was about American Judaism which was driving away its youth.

"It was the same sad story everywhere I went," the Rabbi said, "from the enormous Sri Aribindo Ashram in Pondicherry, South India, to the hundreds of little Ashrams around the Hindu holy city of Varanasi in the north, to the many Buddhist meditation centers I visited in Sarnath, Bodh Gaya, Lumbini and Darjeeling."

"Katmandu, Nepal, is loaded with American youth because hashish and pot are legal; the beaches of Goa are crowded with American hippies, so much so that the Indian government has debated deporting them — even near the luxurious Taj Mahal Hotel in Bombay there is an entire district of foreign youth, mainly American, heavily Jewish. Some are followers of various Eastern cults.

"It's impossible to estimate the numbers," the Rabbi concluded, "but I am afraid there are very many young American Jews who, unable to meet their spiritual needs in American synagogues, have been attracted to Far-Eastern religions."

SAFE LANDING
TEL AVIV — An El Al Boeing 707 made a successful emergency landing after circling Lod Airport for 25 minutes because a red warning light indicated that the landing gear was not functioning properly. The plane was inbound from Johannesburg when the pilot notified the Lod control tower of the possible emergency. Ground crews, ambulances and fire-fighting apparatus were alerted. An inspection afterwards showed that the malfunction was in the warning light, not the landing gear.

TO TEACH COURSE: Rabbi Saul Leeman of Temple Beth Torah will teach a course in Judaism at Providence College this academic year. The resident lectureship has been endowed by the Jewish Chautauqua Society.

The Society, founded in 1893, is the educational project of the National Federation of Temple Brotherhoods.

With this course, the society has initiated 147 courses in Judaism, a number of which are being continued by the colleges under their own funding.

Israeli Exports Drop 19 Per Cent In August

TEL AVIV — Israeli exports dropped by 19 percent during August, the Central Bureau of Statistics has reported. Goods worth 44 million pounds were sold overseas last month compared with exports worth 53½ million pounds in August last year.

This surprisingly large reduction in exports is reported after the announcement that Israel's trade deficit has increased by 71 percent during the first seven months of this year.

Diamonds make up the biggest single item of exports, but the cost of the unpolished diamonds imported by Israel limits the added value of the exported product to less than a quarter of the price.

The 15 percent gain in exports during the first half of this year was due to higher prices, the Bureau stated. It is generally agreed that the August drop in exports has been caused by increased consumption of the home market.

Opening Of Palestinian Mission Angers Jews In West Berlin

BERLIN — The opening of a Palestinian guerrilla mission in East Berlin and other undercover Arab activities have stirred a furor in West Berlin, particularly among the Jewish population.

In a passionate personal appeal to Erich Honecker, the East German party chief, Heinz Galinski, head of the Jewish community in West Berlin, asked the Communist leader to reconsider granting the Arab guerrillas formal accommodation.

"Every German Government must bear moral and political responsibility to ward off attacks on those who suffered from the criminal actions of earlier German regimes," he said.

Mr. Galinski and other German and Jewish leaders expressed suspicion that the Palestinians would use their mission in East Berlin as a base for terrorist activities in the West.

The guerrilla group, the Palestine Liberation Organization, opened its office on the basis of a formal agreement reached in August between Mr. Honecker and Yasir Arafat, the guerrilla leader. It is the first such official guerrilla mission established in an East bloc city.

Its purpose, according to an East German announcement, is to increase solidarity between the East Germans and the guerrillas in the joint struggle against Hello Again!

News of the Sports World by Warren Walden

A QUESTION OF TIME: "So what's the use in worrying, they all get theirs in time!" If I were a major baseball manager, I think I'd be constantly concerned with my job. Maybe the psychological effect has something to do with the building of a winner? It may affect some subconsciously more than others. Maybe the jeopardy of the position has some managers always looking over their shoulders for the proverbial ax to fall. Such a position hinders concentration.

THE LONG LINE: Now Eddie Kasko of the Red Sox and Ralph Houk of the Yankees join the long line. One relieved of his job by request, the other tendering his own resignation. Both have seen the handwriting on the wall. How long have the spectres of dismissal been hovering over their shoulders? How has the thought of being fired affected their spirit of domination, aggressiveness, taking a chance — leadership? Ah, uneasy is the head that wears the crown, etc.

EXCEPTIONS: Baseball managers have never been sure of their jobs. But there have been exceptions — to a degree. John McGraw of THE New York Giants, was at the helm for years, winning ten pennants and three World Series; Connie Mack of the famed Philadelphia Athletics, won at least eight times and captured the big series five times. Both those pilots were on the job over a span of 20 years. Miller Huggins won pennants for the Yankees from 1921 through 1928 and Joe McCarthy held managerial reins for a number of years, first with the Cubs and then with the Yankees for more than ten years before going to the Red Sox. Casey Stengel's career as a pilot started as a flop with the old Braves but endured for more than a decade with the Yanks. Some of them held on and on but just when some others were thinking they had a steady job — Bingo!

NOT YET: Time was that when the regular big league pennant races were over interest would build to fever pitch in the World Series. It's different now. How can you start getting interested in the World Series when Baltimore has to play Oakland in the American League and the National League has a similar "play-off" going on at the same time. Here is definitely a situation "where you can't tell the players without a program." You just have to have eyes in the back of your head, as tiz said, to keep tab on the baseball situation as you wait for the World Series while watching the excitement of football, hockey and basketball at the same time. Anybody see that movie on TV that included some of the Scottish Games? Serene interest and a relief from our professional presentations with big crowds; where winning seems to be all-important and the sport of the presentation many times is forgotten.

R.I. REDS: I wish I could spell "Albuquerque." It reminds of the fellow who wanted his name changed. It was "John Albuquerque." The recorder at City Hall said, "With a name like that, I don't blame you." "Thank you," replied Mr. Albuquerque, "I'd like it changed to 'Charlie.'" Anihoo, the R.I. Reds of hockey have sent Nick Polano and Wayne Wood to the Albuquerque farm team along with six other players, subject to recall at any time. Maybe Mr. Polano will come up with a challenge for Cassius Clay while he is farming, judging from reports of his battle with Matt Ravlich last Sunday. The Reds will play Nova Scotia on Sunday while preparing to open the regular American League season at Boston on October 11. Great spirit in the teams, prospects for an exciting season. Coach John Muckler on the threshold of a successful start. And, you'll have to go there and see them and if you can't get there, there's no way for keeping in touch with the excitement because no radio broadcasts are scheduled at this time which is too bad when viewed community-spirit angle. Out of town games are being aired; those of our own State College and only professional representatives are not! — So, go get 'em anyway, R.I. Reds — Pip pip, tallyho and CARRY ON!

— a fierce soldier. He was forever compromised.

I imagine Ajax would have the "Let us all pull together" speech of which Nixon divested himself in August.

Spiro Agnew is Polonius of Shakespeare's "Hamlet." Polonius was a big mouth, Claudius's prime minister. He was filled with ethical advice except that Polonius had no reservations about siccing his daughter, Ophelia, on Hamlet to find out what was bothering the boy. Hamlet eventually put a dagger in him just as the Maryland United States Attorney and Eliot Richardson are about to skewer Spiro.

H.R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman are the Hanky and Panky of Samuel Butler's "Erewhon." Hanky and Panky are the two Erewhonian administrators who explain to the hero that Erewhon is a perfect society because it treats the sick as though they were criminals and the criminals as though they were sick, a point of view, I suspect, to which Haldeman and Ehrlichman might now subscribe.

John Dean is Hyacinth Ro of Henry James's "The Princess Casamassima." Hyacinth is the young bookbinder who falls in with the anarchists and promises to perform one dangerous mission. But before he fulfills his duty he comes to a profound appreciation of the beauty of the established order. When, at last, the anarchists command Hyacinth to perpetrate an assassination, Hyacinth cannot. But neither can he break his promise. He commits suicide.

John Mitchell is Pliny, the great Roman letter writer. He was the Emperor's man in Asia Minor. Pliny was always considering vast plans for the greater good of Rome without ever coming to a decision. On one occasion he wrote the Emperor Trojan that it was terrible what was transpiring in the boondocks. The constituency had put together the money to build a viaduct and embezzlers had doomed the project.

"Use treasury funds," replied Trojan, "and catch the thieves." Later historians learned there was no viaduct ever planned.

SOCER TEAM CANNOT GO

TEL AVIV — Thailand has decided not to invite the Israeli junior soccer team to compete in the Asian junior tournament next year in Bangkok, according to reports received here. The reason given was that extra security measures would be needed to safeguard the Israeli team from Arab terrorist attacks which would entail high expenses. The Israelis won the Asian junior cup in Bangkok last year but was unable to defend it in Teheran last April because Iran refused to invite them.

NO HEAD COVER

JERUSALEM — The visit to Yad Vashem is a formality that every visiting dignitary performs. But the recent visit to the memorial by UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim was marred when he refused to cover his head as he entered the tent a few minutes before the religious ceremony started. He was asked twice to cover his head and refused both times. During the memorial prayer for the six million Jews who dies in the Holocaust, Waldheim seemed visibly moved as a cantor recited Yizkor. A spokesman for the Secretary General issued a statement afterwards that Waldheim, a Catholic, had not been informed of the significance of wearing headgear during the religious portion of the ceremonies at the Yad Vashem. His head was covered when he visited a synagogue later in his tour.

YESHIVA GRAD CHARGED
NEW YORK — Howard Z. Fuchs, a 27-year-old graduate of Yeshiva University, was charged on July 25 with conspiracy to sell narcotics and was identified by Mario Merola, the Bronx District

Attorney, as the mastermind of an international narcotics ring. Another 60 persons, "nearly all of them in their 20's, middle class and well-educated" had been indicted or arrested in connection with the ring's activities, according to Merola. An official of the Federal Drug Enforcement Administration said "among the Bronx investigators, this group was known as the Jewish cocaine connection."

Think Twice

The problems of poverty, education, youth, and the aged are very real to us when we see them in our own communities. We must answer this call for help.

But for us there can be no geographical boundaries when it comes to a fellow Jew in need. We must also respond to the call of the new immigrants to Israel . . . those courageous, determined Jews who are removed from us only by distance.

70,000 immigrants will come to Israel this year. Many have given up everything for the opportunity to live as Jews among their brethren. Their needs for housing, education, health care and job retraining are our responsibility. A responsibility we accept proudly. A tribute to the heritage we, as Jews, claim as our own.

We keep the promise when we help build Jewish lives here at home . . . and in Israel . . . wherever a Jew is in need.

Hamilton Income Fund Recommended

Q: Please advise on the suitability of Hamilton Funds HDA for retirement income. We hold 1,100 shares. Also what is the growth potential for this fund? W.F.

A: The Hamilton group of funds includes an Income Fund which would be a more appropriate investment for you. Your Series HDA shares are exchangeable at net asset value plus a $5 fee for the Hamilton Income Fund shares. This latter fund yields 4.3% currently on its 26¢ annual income dividend rate and in January, 1973, distributed 14¢ in capital gains, up from 11¢ the previous year. Established in 1970, the fund increased net asset value by 24% in 1971 and 12% in 1972. In the first 7 months of 1973, NAV declined 9%. The HDA series showed a 10% and 5% gain in 1971 and 1972 and a 15% decline in the comparable 1973 period.

Q: My mother is 67, a widow with her only income from Social Security. In addition she has $10,000 in capital and $10,000 equity in her home where she would like to remain. What is the best type of investment for maximum return and safety? Should she try to live on her interest or gradually draw from the principal? R.G.

A: Because your mother's capital is limited she should try not to draw on it if possible. However, if the $10,000 is invested at 8% and she withdraws $1,000 or 10% annually it will last 20 years.

There are at least two types of investments which are suitable for your mother, U.S. Treasury bills, yielding 8.7% for 6-month maturities, and 4-year savings certificates paying around 8%. In the case of the latter, however, check carefully all the terms under which these certificates are issued. Early withdrawals are subject to penalties and in some cases interest must be left in for the full term in order to collect the higher interest rates. With Treasury bills, because they are short term, the rate of return is subject to money conditions existing at the time of issue. Therefore, in 6 months when these expire the return could be higher or lower.

Savings Bond Information

Q: I would like to calculate the value of my Series E Government bonds held since 1963. How do I find their current value? N.H.

A: Series E bonds purchased in 1963 are currently worth about $29 for each $25 face amount. The exact value depends on what month in 1963 the purchase was made. In order to calculate their worth more exactly, you should write to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402 for the Table of Redemption Values for $25 Series E Savings Bonds. The table (form PD3600) is printed semi-annually and costs 20¢.

Q: I have some U.S. Savings Bonds which I would like to do something with but hesitate to because of the tax due on the interest. How much interest do old bonds pay, 5%? D.R.

A: If redemption value of your E bonds (paying 5½% at maturity) is $500 or more, they may be exchanged for H bonds without incurring income tax liability. Owners who have deferred paying tax on E bond interest may extend this privilege until the H bonds are redeemed, disposed of or reach their final maturity. However, interest on the new H bonds, which is paid semi-annually, is subject to federal, but not state or local tax in the year received.

The interest on H Bonds is paid on a sliding scale which averages 5½% annually if bonds are held to maturity in 10 years. However, the return is 4.49% the first year; 5.30% the next four years and then 6% for the final five years. Two extension periods have been granted for older H bonds bought between 1952 and 1957. The exchange on these two series should be made at any Federal Reserve Bank or branch office. However, other banks will forward such applications to the nearest office of the Federal Reserve Bank for the transaction.

Slowing Demands For Mobile Homes

Q: I bought Philips Industries (NYSE) at $20 and it is now below $7. I wonder if I should sell or if there is some chance of recovery. M.B.

A: With 65% of sales derived from the mobile home and recreational vehicle industry, Philips has been affected by the problems in that group. Beset by such factors as reduced demand, price competition, soaring materials prices, the gas shortage and high interest rates, the group has not fared well in the stock market. In Philips' case, sales increase of 7% in the June quarter came from operations other than the MH/RV division, which experienced only a small rise in revenues. Net income for the quarter showed less than a 1% gain over the previous year, thus earnings were flat.

The company's other major market, the conventional housing industry, has also entered a period of weakness, reflecting reduced government funding, rising mortgage rates and shortages in several strategic materials. Neither of these two major markets appears likely to shift into a boom phase over the next several quarters. While Philips' shares should respond to any improvement in housing or mobile home demand, this may be some time away. Therefore I would advise sale.

Q: With the enclosed favorable reports on Central Telephone & Util. (NYSE) why is the $2.55 preferred so depressed? Should one sell if growth is desired? I am now retired. S.M.

A: Straight preferred stocks generally trade on a yield basis, since, unlike common shareholders, preferred holders do not participate in earnings growth through dividend increases. Thus in periods like the present one, when interest rates soar, preferred stocks drop in price. In this way the market adjusts the price of the stock to the point here the yield is near that of other money rate securities. Should interest rates move down the share price would work higher once again. Since you are seeking growth, this type of security is not a suitable holding.

Standard Oil Of Calif. Issues New Letter

LOS ANGELES — The Jewish Federation Council said that Standard Oil of California has sent a new letter to its 300,000 stockholders and employees "clarifying" an earlier letter in which it urged the U.S. to be more cognizant of Arab aspirations in the Middle East.

The text of the new letter was not disclosed by the firm. A Federation spokesman said, however, that it was "a constructive step to clear the air of confusion caused by the first letter." The new letter reportedly calls for a "peace agreement fair and equitable to all states" in the Mideast.

The earlier letter which linked the possibility of an oil shortage with the Arab-Israeli dispute and implied that American support for Israel was responsible, aroused protests from Jewish groups all over the country.

Trinity To Open Season Oct. 24

Trinity Square Repertory Company opens its tenth season in its new home on October 24.

The Lederer Theatre Project, formerly the Majestic Theatre will be the new home of the group. The theatre has been remodeled with two new theatre spaces. The lobby and exterior of the building have been restored to the 1920 era of the downtown theatre's golden days.

Brother to Dragons, Robert Penn Warren's play about a racial scandal in the family of Thomas Jefferson will open in the downstairs 280 seat new Trinity Playhouse on Wednesday, October 24. Adrian Hall will direct the play.

Upstairs at Trinity, the new 800 seat Lederer Theatre will open on Thursday, November 1 with the premiere of Ghost Dance. Playwrite Stuart Vaughan will direct his work about Chief Sitting Bull.

On December 26 through January 6, Trinity will present a festival of six productions in repertory performance. In addition to two plays rotating in the upstairs theatre and three alternating in the downstairs playhouse, a "very special event" will take place according to Adrian Hall.

Community Center Opens Registration

The Jewish Community Center of Rhode Island is starting its fall-winter season with a family registration day featuring games, entertainment, activities in the pool and gym, exhibits and demonstrations. The registration day is scheduled for Sunday, October 7.

Registration will be from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the social hall. Staff and instructors will be available to answer questions and take suggestions. Members are requested to bring their current cards with them.

Refreshments will be available during the day at a Booster booth and areas will be set up for those who wish to picnic.

At 4 p.m. a program of entertainment is planned for the social hall.

Participants will be able to register for all adult, youth and children's classes, all sports, swimming and physical education activities. A brochure may be obtained at the Center or by calling 861-8800.

Industrial National Announces New VP

Providence, Rhode Island, William J. Penn, 30, has joined the Retail Banking Division of Industrial National Bank as vice president, it was announced here by John H. Gallion, senior vice president in charge of the division.

Mr. Penn was previously associated with Chase Manhattan Bank, New York, since 1966 where he was a vice president in the Banking Department. In his new position, he will supervise all commercial lending activities of Industrial National Bank's statewide system of 50 branch offices.

A native of Summit, New Jersey, Mr. Penn is a graduate of Rutgers University, New Brunswick, New Jersey. A former officer of several civic and charitable organizations in Chatham, New Jersey, Mr. Penn is married and the father of two children. The family resides in Providence and Block Island.

Search For Energy Taken Up In Israel

WASHINGTON — Pincus Sapir, Israel's Finance Minister, told American and Canadian Jewish leaders that Israel would intensify her search for oil in the near future, based on encouraging reports by geologists.

"There is a good chance of finding real quantities of oil in the Negev region of our country," Sapir told 650 delegates to the annual National Leadership Conference of the Israel Bond Organization.

Sapir also disclosed that his nation was in the process of establishing an atomic plant to produce electric power. He said the plant was needed because of "the sharp rise in the consumption of electricity, which is expected to increase electric power production by 60 percent in the next four years."

In referring to Israel's need for new sources of oil, Sapir said the only operating oil fields in Israel, discovered at Heletz in 1955, "have almost completely dried up."

Sapir was instrumental in stimulating exploration activities at Heletz 18 years ago, when he served as director general of the Finance Ministry.

Sapir indicated that Israel expected Russian Jews to emigrate in large numbers to Israel, estimating that, in the next four years, 65,000 would emigrate from

HIAS Will Not Give Aid To Jews Leaving Israel

NEW YORK — An understanding was reached in Jerusalem recently that the United HIAS will not aid Soviet Jews who wish to leave Israel, particularly after they have been provided with jobs and housing there. The understanding was reached between the Jewish Agency and several Jewish organizations, including HIAS. According to the understanding, the reason for this is that those Jews cannot be considered as people in distress and Israel cannot be regarded as a country of distress.

Responding to inquiries based on news reports from Israel, Carl Glick, president of the United HIAS, confirmed that officers of HIAS and others recently met with representatives of the Jewish Agency to discuss matters of common concern relating to Russian immigrants Glick's statement said:

"To date, the situation has been of limited concern. Almost 70,000 Russians have come to Israel in the Soviet Union and other countries.

Based on this figure and the natural increase in Israel's present population of 3.3 million, Sapir predicted that Israel's population would increase by more than 500,000 by 1977.

He also said that Israel would have to spend an average of $1.7 billion a year for defense in the next four years. He added that Israel was committed to spending at least an equal amount on education and social welfare to improve the standard of living of the depressed sectors of his country.

Sam Rothberg, general chairman of the Israel Bond organization, told the delegates that the expansion of Israel's economic framework was essential to provide employment for Russian Jews, who are arriving in Israel at a rate of 2,500 a month.

He said Israel must spend an average of $10,000 to create a job for the head of an immigrant family.

The proceeds from the sale of Israel bonds is the major source of development capital for Israel.

The three-day meeting here marked the opening of the second phase of the 1973 campaign to sell $360-million in Israel in the United States and other non-Communist countries.

recent years and less than 500 have come from Israel and applied to HIAS in Rome for assistance to immigrate to the United States, Canada and other Western countries. All these Russian immigrants who received HIAS assistance had been cleared and referred to HIAS by the Jewish Agency. The fact that less than one percent of the USSR Jews came to Rome from Israel is a great tribute to Israel, its people involved with absorption and the Russian immigrants in Israel.

"After a full discussion, it was agreed that to keep out-migration at minimal levels the Jewish Agency would provide intensive counselling and guidance for Russian immigrants in Vienna and Israel. HIAS, as an independent American migration agency, would continue to assist Jewish refugees in connection with family reunion and compassionate situations throughout the world.

Geologists Report Petroleum Deposits

JERUSALEM — Jerusalem correspondents report that geologists have determined Israel possesses large petroleum deposits in 12 different areas of the country, with good prospects of yielding oil.

According to this report, the experts believe these deposits contain between 70 to 285 tons of crude, and undetermined amounts of natural gas. Israel's present oil consumption is 6.5 million tons annually, and demand is expected to rise.

If these new domestic oil deposits are exploited, Israel could cover its own requirements for a number of years. Otherwise, she will have to depend on imports from abroad.

wipe you out; you can get 8 1/2 per cent a year in interest on a top-grade AA rated corporation bond and that's a living wage. Do get guidance from a broker or banker you respect who knows you and your circumstances. Make sure you are dealing with a reputable firm. Use your head, curb your greed. You'll come out ahead.

SUMMING UP: There is no magic formula which dictates the precise percentage of your funds that you should place in each type of investment to provide a maximum retirement income. If, though, you diversify your financial program — in real estate (a home), stocks, bonds, cash savings, life insurance and similar mediums — you will have done your best to add solidity to the other two foundations of your financial independence in retirement. (That is what my husband and I are doing.)

Just by realizing the obstacles, just by being aware of how imperative it is for you to start planning as early as you can, you will have taken a giant step toward achieving your retirement income goals.

Kreisky, Man In The Middle

VIENNA — Bruno Kreisky, the 62 year old Chancellor of Austria said in a recent interview that his country would maintain its neutrality and not become a second arena for the Middle East conflict. "We shall maintain our humanitarian tradition," he said.

Chancellor Kreisky finds himself in the middle of the Arab-Israeli conflict because of the Austrian decision to close transit centers for Jewish emigrants from the Soviet Union under the recent threat from Arab guerrillas.

Suspected as a Socialist in his younger life, he was later imprisoned by the Gestapo under the Nazi occupation of Austria because he was the son of a wealthy Jewish industrialist. After the war he rose to power despite the fear that his party was a cover for the Communists.

Negotiation, Not Gesture

The New York Times calls Dr. Kreisky one of the new breed of European statesmen who emerged after World War II — undramatic, patient, given to careful negotiation rather than the grand gesture. Recently he handled the negotiations with the Arab guerrillas and with the governments of Israel, Malta and Algeria rattling between his office and the Cabinet hall.

In dealing with Golda Meir and Dom Mintoff, the Maltese Prime Minister, the Chancellor was able to use their mutual bonds as fellow Socialists who had frequently met at meetings of the Socialist International. Dr. Kreisky was Mrs. Meir's genial host at a Vienna meeting of the international last summer.

The Chancellor has been the principal architect of Austria's twin postwar goals — a hard-won neutrality and full participation in European economic integration. Domestically, he has established a social welfare state on the model of Sweden, where he spent the war years in exile. Though he describes himself as an agnostic, he is considered the first Jewish Chancellor of Austria, a country where anti-Semitism has a long tradition.

Accent Bespeaks Old Vienna

Dr. Kreisky speaks German in the mildly ironic accents of the old Viennese haute bourgeoisie. Habitually urbane and well-groomed, the bulky chancellor seems far more the former diplomat and Foreign Minister than an advocate of class struggle.

"With Dr. Kreisky, only the hair is red," a veteran of "Austromarxism," Austria's militant socialism that arose between the world wars, once remarked. The Socialist leader himself has joked that while his hair may be thinning, its color will always remain the same.

Dr. Kreisky was born in Vienna on January 22, 1911, of Jewish parents. His father was director general of a big textile company and a member of the board of the Austrian National Bank. The youth studied law, sociology and economics at the University of Vienna.

He became a Socialist at 15 and was soon an active participant in Austria's turbulent politics, in which the Right ultimately won the upper hand. He was arrested in 1934 and again in 1935, when he served 18 months in prison. In March, 1938, when Hitler's troops marched into Austria, he was again arrested. He was released in the fall and, narrowly escaping another arrest, fled to Sweden and exile.

In neutral Sweden, he worked as a journalist and advised the Government on Austrian affairs. He met many exiled Socialists, including Willy Brandt of Germany, with whom he formed a lasting friendship. He also found a wife, Vera Furth, whom he married in 1942. The Kreiskys have two Swedish-born children, a son and daughter, and still speak Swedish at home.

Diplomacy and Government

After the war, Dr. Kreisky entered the Austrian foreign service in Stockholm and in 1951 was moved to Vienna as an aide to President Theodore Korner, a Socialist. He became Deputy Foreign Minister in 1953 and was a member of the delegation to Moscow that, in 1955, negotiated the state treaty that provided for the independence of neutral Austria. He was Foreign Minister from 1959 to 1966, when the coalition government broke up and the Socialists fell from power. He became his party's chairman, and Federal Chancellor after the Socialist victory of 1970.

Dr. Kreisky is a lover of quiet pursuits, such as music and poetry. He is widely read in American literature, from Sinclair Lewis to Susan Sontag. At the end of his tight work schedule he often entertains friends. "Taste this wine," he will urge a guest. "A Socialist wine grower sent me a demijohn. Look at the beautiful light red color."

Jordan, Egypt, Syria To Take Common Stand

AMMAN, Jordan — Jordan, Egypt and Syria have agreed to take a common stand on political issues concerning the Middle East at the United Nations and in the face of a possible new American peace initiative, Jordanian officials said.

This, according to the officials, was one of the main results of a meeting in Cairo of King Hussein, President Anwar el-Sadat of Egypt and President Hafez al-Asad of Syria.

The meeting, which was believed here to have been largely prompted by King Faisal of Saudi Arabia, was followed by the resumption of diplomatic relations between Egypt and Jordan. The resumption of relations with Syria is expected by the Jordanians to be announced in Damascus shortly.

Reasons For Splits

Syria broke with Jordan in July, 1971, after the liquidation of the Palestinian guerrillas by the Jordanian Army. Egypt cut ties in April, 1972, after King Hussein announced his plan for giving the Palestinians on the West Bank of the Jordan a special status within his kingdom.

The Jordanians hope that the reconciliation with their neighbors will prompt Kuwait to renew an annual subsidy of about $32-million. Kuwait, like Libya, discontinued her payments to Jordan after the liquidation of the guerrillas. Saudi Arabia continued to pay. The Kuwaitis have made no public comment on this issue so far.

The Jordanians insist that King Hussein has given no ground on two key issues. Informed sources say that he has not relented in his refusal to let the Palestinian guerrillas return to Jordan. The King is also reported to be maintaining his publicly stated view that any talk of Arab military action against Israel at this point is unrealistic.

Restoring 'Eastern Front'

Both these issues are part of the problem of restoring the so called Eastern Arab Front, which ceased to exist in 1970 after the civil war between the guerrillas and the Army. Military coordination between the Jordanians and Syria and Egypt also ended at that time. Consultations continue on Jordan's return to cooperation with other Arab nations.

But the Jordanian interpretation of the Cairo parley as primarily an agreement to coordinate foreign policies is at odds with the billing that the conference received in the Egyptian capital, where it was called a "confrontation meeting."

Although Jordanian officials do not put it this way, foreign-policy coordination among the three countries appears to mean that King Hussein has agreed to put aside his plan for a separate status for the West Bank.

The plan was regarded by the Egyptians as a bid for a separate Jordanian settlement with Israel.

Jordanians Fearful, Too

Similarly, before that, when Egypt responded to the American initiative begun by William P. Rogers, then Secretary of State, the Jordanians were afraid that an Egyptian success could lead to a separate peace that would jeopardize the chances of a settlement on the status of Jerusalem and the West Bank.

Now it is hoped here that the time of individual initiatives is over.

The Jordanians also hope that their reconciliation with Egypt and Syria will prevent a repetition of such assertions as the one by President Habib Bourguiba of Tunisia, who said a few months ago that Jordan had no basis in history and should be forgotten by peace-makers in favor of a Palestinian nation.

Further Occupation Feared

In Amman now the big fear is that a new outbreak of fighting with Israel would bring an extension of Israeli occupation from the West Bank to the entire Jordan Valley.

This fear crops up in many conversations. The Jordan Valley and the southern part of Lebanon are the most logical targets for further Israeli expansion, it is felt.

But the valley is Jordan's most promising region for agricultural development, and a big project to attract funds from the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development — as well as the United States, Europe and Japan — was begun a year ago.

This is one reason, analysts here say, why King Hussein remains opposed to military action.

Cuban Break May Be Prelude To Other Latin American Action

TEL AVIV — An Israeli journalist regarded as an authority on Cuba expressed fear that Premier Fidel Castro's diplomatic break with Israel may be the prelude to similar action by other Latin American states. Simcha Flapan, editor of "New Outlook," a political magazine, revealed that Castro's high standing with many Latin American states may have been the reason why he was made the target of Arab pressure to break with Israel at the recent non-aligned summit meeting in Algiers.

Flapan, who had close personal contacts with Cuban leaders during the 1960's, noted that Cuba was the only Community country that recognized the legitimacy of the Zionist movement after the Six-Day War, permitted the existence of Zionist organizations on its soil and in fact facilitated aliya activities and the work of shlichim (Zionist emissaries) from Israel.

Flapan recalled that the kibbutz movement had developed relations of its own with Cuba in 1962. He himself signed an agreement on behalf of the kibbutz movement with the Cuban Ministry of Agriculture for the exchange of kibbutz members and Cuban agriculture students. The exchange was maintained for several years.

Flapan said that after the Six-Day War, Cuba's position was complicated by its interest in maintaining good relations with the Arab world, especially in the area of trade. It also had to reconcile its support of national liberation movements in Africa, Asian and Latin American countries, including the Palestinians, with its continuing relations with Israel. Nevertheless, Cuba maintained cordial relations with Israel.

According to Flapan, Israel was the scapegoat that Castro had to sacrifice in order to retain his standing among the non-aligned nations. Libyan President Muammar Qaddafi attacked Castro for his pro-Soviet attitude and challenged him to prove that Cuba was indeed unaligned. As proof, he decided to rupture relations with Israel, Flapan said.

NRP PLATFORM

TEL AVIV — The National Religious Party platform committee has decided by a majority vote to incorporate in the party's platform a commitment that it "will leave any government that would abandon Judea and Samaria."

Israeli Wine Takes Origin From Rothschilds Of France

NEW YORK — A quality bottle of burgundy, or red port, from Israel at about $2 a bottle. Impossible? Not at all! For Israel wine is indeed a quality product and can stand up proudly through its Carmel label to any number of French, Italian, Spanish, German and domestic wines.

What is generally not known about Israel wine is that nearly every l'chayim that is toasted in wine from the Holy Land by Jew and non-Jew alike owes its origin to a Baron de Rothschild of France — Edmond, known as "The Giver," as he was known among the early settlers of Israel in the 1880's.

The inspiration of Israeli wine is to be found on a vineyard-covered hill near Haifa on which there is a floral park containing a majestic tomb. The park and tomb represent the Rothschild heritage and in the magnificent burial place reposes a Baron de Rothschild of France, with his beloved spouse.

The original wines of Israel are not from the properties of James de Rothschild of Chateau Mouton immortality in France, but from those of his brother Edmond, likewise a French vintner, and touched with a dream. The dream that Edmond had was to plant vines in Israel because he reasoned that surely among Jewry all over the world there would be an excellent market for sacramental wines from the Holy Land.

He therefore sent over his own expert vintners, with varieties of cuttings from his private estates, to a Rumanian settlement to the north of what is now Israel, which came to be called Zichron Yaacob, which means "In Memory of Jacob," the name of his father.

Although the Arabs advised the newcomers it was madness to try to grow vines — yet the vines flourished, and today, Israeli wines are served in top American restaurants, and sales of Carmel wines have quadrupled in three years.

It is a fact that in the Jewish world, the Rothschild name has long been synonymous with charity, pride, courage and rescue. Where did the poor Jew turn in time of dire need? History has it that even if only in his dreams, he cried out, "Rothschild! Save me!"

The Rothschild name has also been associated over the years with historical foresight. During World War II for instance, Baron Philippe de Rothschild, whose internationally-famed Mouton has just been reclassified a first-growth wine after nearly 118 years, outwitted the Nazis and kept the French Bordeaux wine cellars from falling into German hands.

Shortly after the fall of France, a notary public was asked by Baron Philippe to decree — under law — that having left the territory, he had forfeited his goods.

The decree was proclaimed, turning over the vineyard to the Vichy Government.

Soon after, the Germans overran France's wine country and they wanted to requisition "the goods of the Jew, Rothschild." But the Vichy government refused, saying that by decree the Rothschild Chateau belonged to the French Government. Mouton Rothschild was thus saved for generations of appreciative wine lovers.

Uniquely, whether the wine is from the Baron Philippe's cellars in Pauillac, France, or the product of the wineland of the Bible, the toast that has become universal thanks to the Rothschild family, is L'Chayim, which means, "To Life!"

Conservative Move Scored In France

PARIS — French Orthodox Judaism came out strongly against the decision of American Conservative Judaism to allow women to be counted in the minyan — the quorum of ten or more adult Jews required for communal worship.

Speaking for French Orthodox Jews, Paris Chief Rabbi Ernest Gugenheim said he did not know "whether to laugh or cry." He said the decision "reflects a profound misunderstanding of the fundamentals of the Jewish religion."

Rabbi Gugenheim, who is an authority on the halacha and professor at the Jewish Seminary of France, said woman's role is "different and complementary" with respect to that of man's. Women he explained, could never join men in prayer because "during that moment when men seek to come close to God, they cannot be distracted to earthly thoughts."

STORY OF HOLOCAUST

WASHINGTON — The story of the Holocaust, depicted in multi-media, will be presented during the coming college semester in 10 cities housing major American universities. The "town and gown" project, to keep vivid the memory of Jewish martyrdom, particularly among young persons, is being arranged by B'nai B'rith through its Hillel Foundations and adult Jewish education program. A $10,000 grant from the World Federation of Bergen-Belson Association, survivors of the nazi death camp, is helping to finance the project.

FUTURE TRANSPORTATION
JERUSALEM — Jerusalem's future public transportation system may include a system which combines the advantages of railways and trams with those of buses.

Facts On Intermarriage Released In CJF Report

NEW YORK — The first comprehensive body of facts on intermarriage among Jews was released by the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds. The findings are part of the Council's recently concluded three-year National Jewish Population Study.

Prominent among the findings of the report are: Some 9.2 per cent of all persons of Jewish origin now married are intermarried; during the 1966-72 period, the proportion of Jewish persons intermarrying, in continuation of a recent spiral, was much greater than in earlier periods — 31.7 per cent of Jews who married during that recent span chose a non-Jewish mate. Intermarriage rates in the report cover the periods from 1900 to 1972.

A large majority of intermarried couples are bringing up their children and educating them as Jewish. This is particularly true of Jewish women who have non-Jewish husbands.

Major intermarriage patterns revealed by the CJF report are as follows: About twice as many Jewish men marry non-Jewish women compared with Jewish women who marry non-Jewish husbands. About one-fourth of the initially non-Jewish women reported conversion to Judaism. Few non-Jewish husbands of Jewish women converted. But without formal conversion, nearly half of marriage partners who were non-Jewish prior to marriage subsequently identify as Jewish, the study found. Conversions out of Judaism, on the other hand, are minor, with the net effect "suggesting a positive balance in favor of 'conversion into' rather than 'conversion out of' Judaism".

Overall, the findings show that 96 per cent of the children, whether in households that are intermarried or non-intermarried, are raised as Jewish. The report states that in a great majority of cases when the wife of an intermarriage is initially Jewish, the children are raised as Jews. When the wife is the non-Jewish partner, only "about one-third of the children are raised outside the Jewish religion".

The report on intermarriage spans nine time periods from 1900 to 1972 and covers all marriages since the turn of the century which are still continuing. The first significant upswing in intermarriages took place in the World War II period when the rate almost doubled the pre-war average of some three per cent, remaining at the new level until the early 1960's. During the 1961-1965 span, the basic intermarriage rate rose dramatically to 17.4 per cent.

Patterns and influences prior to intermarriage, such as dating, family attitudes and religious training and observance are reported in the population study. Noting that among those who did not intermarry, four in ten indicated that they had never dated a non-Jew, the study findings indicate an impressive link between parental stance and opposition to interdating with marriage within the Jewish group. Conversely, lack of parental opposition is associated with intermarriage. "Whatever the nuances of interpretation..." the report adds, "...it would appear

NO SLOW DOWN

TEL AVIV — Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir told a Labor party leadership meeting that there are no plans for a slowdown in the economy after the elections. He said the aim is for full employment and the steady expansion of the economy. Sapir noted that full employment is the most important factor in raising the standard of living of backward classes and this would contribute to narrowing the social gap.

that parental attitudes, as reported by the intermarried, are significantly associated with the presence or absence of intermarriage".

Childhood background, similarly, for both categories of non-intermarried couples and for intermarried Jewish women raising their children as Jewish, show a majority describing their childhood upbringing as "strongly Jewish". This is in contrast to marriages involving a Jewish husband and a non-Jewish wife in which the upbringing is rarely described as "strongly Jewish".

In its data relating Jewish identity in childhood with marriage within the Jewish group, the report further notes that the chances for intermarriage are greatest for those who cannot clearly describe their upbringing. The findings "suggest that any kind of Jewish identity clearly defined, even if toward the moderate or negative side of the spectrum, is somewhat less likely to be related to intermarriage than a state of doubtful reflection on Jewish upbringing".

Synagogue, Community Participation

The correlations on religious attitudes and synagogue and temple participation show that while a belief in the Jewish religion is more prevalent among Jews who marry within the religion, this belief is widely professed, both in intermarried and non-intermarried households, and that both groups share a continuing widespread belief in one God.

The study found that regardless of marriage patterns, active participation in temples and synagogues is the exception, not the rule. A somewhat more intensive participation is reported for those who marry Jews, and for intermarried in which the wife is Jewish. "Relatively higher levels of involvement in Jewish organizations appear for those who are not intermarried, but in absolute terms these levels, too, are generally low." In percentage terms, only 39.8 per cent indicate any activity in a temple or synagogue with the combined proportion of "quite active" and "very active" less than 13 per cent. This same level of activity applies to Jewish organizational life.

The CJF report, written by Dr. Fred Massarik of the University of California at Los Angeles, Director of the National Jewish Population Study and of the Research Bureau of the Jewish Federation — Council of Los Angeles, is the first in a series to be issued from the overall population study. The next two in the series are, The Jewish Aging and Demographic Highlights.

The data used in the report was based on a sample scientifically chosen so as to be representative of the total U.S. Jewish population. Since 1970, when field work for the study began, every section of the country, represented by 39 areas in the sample, has been covered. Included in the sample are communities of all sizes, with random samplings to include Jews not on any organizational lists as well as those who were. Emphasis was placed as well on obtaining data from both identified and unidentified Jews.

Purpose of the population study and of the reports emanating from it is to assist Jewish Federations and other organizations across the country in local and national planning. In its preface, the report on intermarriage points out that the projections "made possible by the national study should enable Federations to anticipate in their planning the demands brought about by changing population patterns".

Shapiro Urges US 'Nationalize Oil'

NEW YORK — The head of the Labor Zionist Alliance called for the "nationalization" by the United States government of American oil companies as a "response to the so-called energy crisis contrived by the oil companies."

The real response to the oil companies "and their potential for mischief, and hardship for the general population, is to advocate nationalization of the companies," declared Dr. Judah J. Shapiro who addressed the national executive committee of the LZA here.

Speaking to Labor Zionist leaders from throughout the U.S. and Canada, Dr. Shapiro said, "it has been charged that the energy crisis is no more than a contrivance of the oil companies to obtain greater profits and to distract the public from the investigation of its price-fixing techniques."

Advocating federal nationalization of American oil companies, Dr. Shapiro said that "others are nationalizing the oil and we should be seeking to bring sellers and the distributors of oil under the strictest United States government controls."

Continuing, he asserted: "Punishment of Standard Oil of California and Mobil Oil by the destruction of a few thousand credit cards and at best a limited boycott, is nothing compared to the introduction of legislation in the U.S. Congress which would define oil as a national concern and its supply supervised by strict federal controls. Israel is not an issue in this non-existent energy crisis, but ethical considerations and Socialist principals are."

New Program Aimed At 10,000

TEL AVIV — Under the slogan "From South America to South Israel," the Association of Latin Americans in Israel has started a campaign in conjunction with the Jewish Agency and the Absorption Ministry. The program is aimed at bringing 10,000 immigrants from Latin America in the next three years, in addition to the normal aliyah from that continent.

At a press conference here Mrs. Geula Havkin, chairman of the Association, said that certain conditions have developed which must be considered in planning the aliyah. "We have witnessed a situation whereby only 2000 out of 5000 Jews who emigrated from Chile came to Israel. This caused us to reach certain conclusions aimed at achieving a better absorption pattern for immigrants from these countries."

The new plan is based on special projects for Latin American immigrants in the southern parts of Israel. One project calls for the settlement of 100 families in industrial centers in the Raffa approaches. There are also plans to absorb immigrants in Latin American kibbutzim in the south and in urban centers like Beersheba, Arad, Ashkelon, Kiryat Gat and others.

CHAPLAIN OF EX POW'S

NEW YORK — Rabbi Leonard Winograd will serve as National Chaplain of the American X-POWs, Inc. during the next year according to National Commander, Walter Pawlesh of McKees Rocks, who made the appointment. Dr. Winograd, who also serves as Jewish Chaplain of the Veterans Administration Hospitals at Oakland and Aspinwall, was a Celestial Navigator in the 15th Air Force in Italy during World War II and was captured in Yugoslavia on his 43rd mission, taken into Germany where he was ultimately liberated. Mr. Pawlesh was elected national commander at the recent convention in Orlando.

Housing Question In New York May Not Be Unconstitutional

NEW YORK — Reversing a lower court decision, the United States Court of Appeals ruled that the city had not necessarily violated the constitutional rights of blacks and Puerto Ricans by giving preference to Jews for a public housing project on the Lower East Side.

But the court stopped short of clearing the way for the prospective Jewish tenants to move into the project in the Seward Park Extension Urban Renewal Area. Instead, it ordered new hearings to resolve points of factual dispute.

The complicated ruling was a limited victory for the City Housing Authority, which operates public housing here, and a group of residents, most of them Jewish, whom the city assigned to the project over the protests of blacks and Puerto Ricans claiming priority for themselves.

At issue in the court dispute was the city's goal for the completed Seward Park project — containing 360 apartments — of filling it half with black and Puerto Rican tenants and half with whites.

To this end, the city moved last year to assign 171 apartments to a group of families, most of them white, from parts of the Lower East Side — including 48 Jewish families moved from another housing project so they could be closer to their synagogue.

Last year, a Federal judge ruled that this move by the city violated two principles. First, he said that the city had violated its own regulation that gives first priority to residents within the urban renewal area who had been displaced by the new construction. Second, he said, the city had, in effect, established religious criteria by assigning the Jewish families to an area closer to their house of worship.

The decision by Judge Marvin E. Frankel was upheld in February by District Judge Morris E. Lasker. In the recent decision it was reversed and remanded to a lower court for further proceedings by Circuit Judges Walter R. Mansfield, who wrote the opinion, Paul R. Hays and William Hughes Mulligan.

The ruling agreed with the city's contention that its regulation giving priority to displaced residents was superseded in this case, by an obligation to maintain a racial balance in the project.

General Federation Elections Hurt Mrs. Meir's Labor Party

TEL AVIV — Premier Golda Meir's governing Labor party lost about 4 percentage points in recent elections for the General Federation of Labor, but its leadership remained unchallenged.

Itzhak Ben-Aharon, the controversial Secretary General of the Histadrut, as the federation is known, was reported to have taken the setback as a personal defeat and to have spoken of resignation. However party leaders, including Mrs. Meir, conferred with him and dissuaded him from taking hasty action.

With 93 per cent of the votes by Histadrut members counted, the alignment of the Labor and Mapam parties received 398,508 votes representing 58.28 per cent of the total — it received 62.11 per cent in the 1969 election.

By agreement, 18.79 per cent of the alignment seats in the Histadrut's governing bodies will go to Mapam, leaving Labor with less than the clear majority it has had in the governing and executive bodies. However, Labor remains firmly in control because rival parties to the right or left do not have equal strength.

The Religious Workers, who won 4.5 per cent of the vote, are affiliated with Labor and this association will enable Labor to hold a majority without dependence on Mapam.

The Treasure Chest

Of Outstanding Offers and Opportunities

By Alan Shawn Feinstein

Hello, my friends, here's what I have for you this week!

Free money for anyone starting college — from the U.S. Government!

Grants of $250 to $600 are being offered to first year college students entering an American university, junior college, nursing, vocational or technical school.

This money does not have to be repaid! Moreover, students who have a special financial need are eligible for additional grants of up to $1,500 a year!

Write the U.S. Office of Education, 400 Maryland Avenue, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20202.

Interested in growing your own fresh fruit — the organic way? Write to Stark Brothers Nurseries, Louisiana, Missouri 63353 and they'll send you a free guide about it. They'll also send you a free catalogue of fruit and vegetable trees they have for sale that will set your mouth watering.

Interested in traveling to the Orient? If you're thinking of going to Japan, you'll find these two guides very valuable — the Businessmen's Guide to Japan and Lying in Japan. They're yours free from Japan Air Lines, Box 1160, Radio City Station, New York, New York 20015.

Interested in gifts of distinction? You'll find them in the new catalogue of Camalier & Buckley.

Write them and they'll send it to you free. Their address is 7222 47th Street, Washington, D.C. 20015.

Lastly, contests anyone? Write the Shepherd School, Box 602, Willinboro, New Jersey 08046 and they'll send you a free copy of their contest bulletin. Believe it or not, a few people consistently win money this way, plus a wide assortment of other things.

And that's the bottom of the bag for now, my friends. My best wishes to you and yours for this, our new year.

EXPRESSES PEACE HOPES

SANTIAGO, Chile — Jacques Torczyner, U.S. Zionist leader, at a dinner given in his honor, expressed hopes for peace between Israel and the Arabs. He said Russia wants no war in the Middle East and stated that President Nixon's administration helped Israel more than all other administrations together. Abdel Monem Rifai, who represented King Hussein there, arrived in Cairo aboard President Sadat's plane. General Assad also attended the Algiers conference.

Sadat Seen As Gaining In Nation And Arab World

CAIRO — Arab diplomats here believe that President Anwar el-Sadat has gained substantial political strength at home and in the Arab world as a result of recent events.

The eyes of the world are fixed on King Faisal of Saudi Arabia and what he is going to do to carry out his threats of using oil and financial resources in the Arab cause. But it is Mr. Sadat who is the chief beneficiary, initiator and architect of the realignment of Arab leaders. It was his idea that they bury their differences and it was he, at least in Egyptian eyes, who persuaded Faisal to try on the mantle of leadership, according to New York Times article by Henry Tanner.

It was not lost on the Egyptian public that King Hussein came to Cairo rather than waiting in Amman for President Sadat and President Hafez al-Assad of Syria, as would have been logical since it was they who initiated the breach that had to be healed.

Egyptian newspapers gave Mr. Sadat credit for persuading the Jordanian King to release hundreds of political prisoners, including key figures of the Palestinian resistance.

The Egyptian leader emerges then as everyone's friend. He was able to gain the support of King Faisal, the archconservative, while managing to avoid a break with Col. Muammar el-Qaddafi of Libya, the arch-revolutionary. Significantly, the Cairo newspapers that announced the resumption of relations with Jordan also published a congratulatory message from King Hassan II of Morocco, who shares with Faisal and Hussein the special enmity of Colonel Qaddafi.

A Letter From Brezhnev

There are reports, moreover, that some of the political leaders of Al Fatah, the main Palestinian guerrilla organization, would like to move to Cairo from Lebanon. And the Soviet Communist party leader, Leonid I. Brezhnev, sent a letter some days ago saying, according to informed sources, that he would like a resumption of the Soviet-Egyptian dialogue.

All this is heady stuff. President Sadat emerges as the healer of Arab wounds, the skillful diplomat and manipulator. While Cairo commentators concede that the future largely lies in Faisal's hands, they are obviously delighted that everything has gone so well so far.

Comparisons with the late President Gamal Abdel Nasser come to people's mind whenever the Government makes a major move. In this case his successor's methods could not have been different from him.

As a leading analyst put it recently there are two ways for an Egyptian President to make Cairo the focal point of Arab affairs. Mr. Nasser did it by taking the lead of Arab nationalism, announcing an Arab ideology, appealing to the Arab masses everywhere, imposing his concept on other Arab leaders and making events in every Arab country his business.

Mr. Sadat, the analyst said, has done it by being modest, almost meek. An Egyptian rather than an Arab nationalist, he has no pretensions to run anyone else's affairs. Unlike Mr. Nasser, he solicits advice from other Arab leaders and follows it, even when it turns out to be wrong — as was the case with King Faisal's prediction that the United States would change its policy in the Middle East if Egypt ended the Soviet military presence.

Having listened to the advice of his peers, President Sadat, according to this view, is foreclosing on the moral and political debts that other Arab leaders, including Faisal, owe him.

Lure for the Conservatives

Informed sources say that King Faisal decided to make oil a part of the power equation between the Arabs and Israel mainly because he felt betrayed by Washington and guilty about the prediction he made to Mr. Sadat.

Mr. Sadat launched his bid for Saudi support last December, according to the sources, having waited for the American election to see whether Faisal's prediction would come true. When Washington failed to react he concluded that the only possible support could come from the wealthy Arab leaders, who could put pressure on the Nixon Administration.

Since then he has cracked down on unruly students and purged nearly a hundred journalists, silencing the only articulate voices that could have been raised against his reconciliation with the conservative Arab leaders and his decision to choose a long-term approach to the problem of Israel.

In the spring the President became his own Premier "for a specific task and a limited period," as he put it, and launched a campaign of psychological mobilization for "total confrontation" with the Israelis.

Whether he followed a preconceived plan or whether it just happened, many observers now believe that his actions were political and psychological requisites for his approaches to Faisal and Hussein.

Popular feeling in Egypt is such that a long-term policy toward Israel is possible only when it is supported and surrounded by the concept of confrontation.

ALERT TO ANTI-SEMITISM

NEW YORK — The American Jewish Committee has called upon the government of Chile to "be alert to any signs or acts of anti-Semitism" in the wake of the overthrow of the Allende government. In a statement by AJCommittee president Elmer L. Winter, the organization pointed to the signs of growing anti-Semitism that appeared in the press and elsewhere prior to the military coup. Meanwhile in Buenos Aires, Mark Turkow, secretary of the Latin American Jewish Congress reported that in talks with Chile he has been assured that Jewish institutions were not harmed during the coup. However there was no information about the Jews who held high posts on the Allende government. In addition, a number of Jewish youths, less than 100, are among the 13,000 political refugees from Brazil, Argentina and Uruguay who sought asylum in Chile but are now considered "extremists" by the Chilean military junta.
