A Message From the President

The University of Alabama is a special place, and it holds a cherished place in the hearts of the UA family. It is a bright light that attracts excellence. That is also true of the National Alumni Association. The honor rolls in the following pages are evidence of that excellence.

I want to personally thank the more than 34,000 members and donors who made it possible for the NAA to award approximately $4.7 million in scholarship assistance to more than 2,400 current students. Along with an operating budget of more than $1 million, your Alumni Association manages more than 450 scholarship endowments with a corpus value of more than $35 million. Just this past year, 25 new scholarships were endowed. Additionally, 631 students who are children or grandchildren of active NAA members received Alumni Heritage Scholarships and/or Alumni Scholar Awards. Because of your support and generosity, students' lives are being changed. Every gift, regardless of its size, is important.

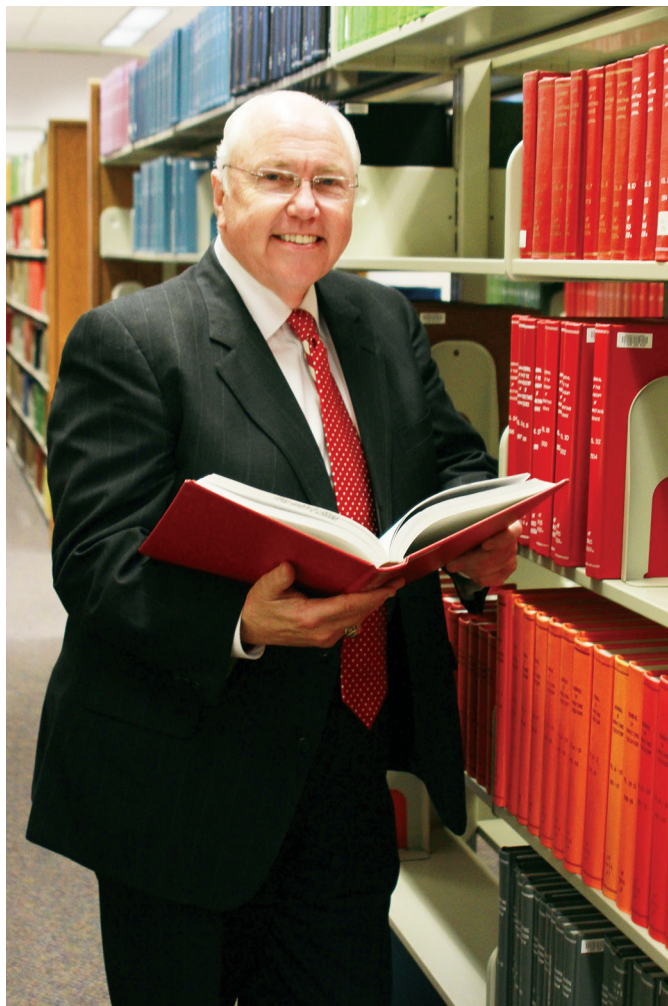

With nationally ranked academic programs, exciting campus-life opportunities, beautiful grounds and a world-class administration, faculty and staff, The University of Alabama continues to attract the best and brightest students. The NAA's 103 active chapters across the state and nation, along with alumni everywhere, are helping to recruit students and lend invaluable support to the University. It's important to continue our membership growth so we can offer even more scholarships to prospective students and more services to UA and its graduates.

It is a privilege for me to serve you and The University of Alabama as your association president this year. I encourage you to be active and involved in your local chapter and invite other alumni and friends to become members of our association. I look forward to seeing many of you at alumni events on campus and at chapter events around the country. Thanks for your love and support for The University of Alabama.

Roll Tide!

Jimmy Warren, BS '76
2014–2015 President, National Alumni Association

Jimmy Warren visited the Bruno Business Library on campus, remembering his time as a student, when he majored in human resources management and industrial relations.

Scholarship Recipients

The following is a list of first-time recipients of alumni scholarships awarded for the 2013–2014 academic year. These scholarships are funded by membership in the National Alumni Association, investment of endowment funds and other sources. Students continuing on renewal scholarships are not listed, and hometowns are in Alabama unless otherwise noted.

People moved slowly then. They ambled across the square, shuffled in and out of the stores around it, took their time about everything. A day was twenty-four hours long but seemed longer. There was no hurry, for there was nowhere to go, nothing to buy and no money to buy it with, nothing to see outside the boundaries of Maycomb County. But it was a time of vague optimism for some of the people: Maycomb County had recently been told that it had nothing to fear but fear itself.

We lived on the main residential street in town—Atticus, Jem and I, plus Calpurnia, our cook. Jem and I found our father satisfactory: he played with us, read to us, and treated us with courteous detachment.

Calpurnia was something else again. She was all angles and bones; she Maycomb was an old town, but it was a tired old town when I first knew it. In rainy weather the streets turned to red slop; grass grew on the sidewalks, the courthouse sagged in the square. Somehow, it was hotter then: a black dog suffered on a summer's day; bony mules hitched to Hoover carts flicked flies in the sweltering shade of the live oaks on the square. Men's stiff collars wilted by nine in the morning. Ladies bathed before noon, after their three-o'clock naps, and by nightfall were like soft teacakes with frostings of sweat and sweet talcum.

Due to the outstanding generosity of our donors, the lists of Alumni Heritage Scholarship and Alumni Scholar Award recipients are now too lengthy for inclusion in the printed booklet, and can be found online in a full scholarship listing at alumni.ua.edu/scholarships.

A Message From the Director

It has been another great year for your National Alumni Association. The publication you hold in your hands is indeed an honor roll, and in this section we honor our loyal and generous supporters. The names included in the following pages represent more than just financial contributions; they represent individuals and families who sincerely love The University of Alabama.

The love and support you have shown your National Alumni Association allows us to help further the mission of the University. Your contributions and hard work in alumni chapters across the country continue to help attract the best and brightest students to the Capstone. The student population is larger and more diverse than ever, yet the quality of students attending UA has never been better.

The staff at Alumni Hall works extremely hard to merit your continued support. Whether it's designing a customized Discovering BAMA tour for a prospective student and their family; coordinating an event for one of our many active alumni chapters; assisting and advising an alumnus or friend to endow a scholarship; working to enlarge the membership of our NAA family; or publishing our award-winning Alabama Alumni Magazine, everyone here strives to make your Alumni Association and alma mater among the very best in the nation. You are an integral part of our team, and our success is attributed to your involvement. Thank you! To learn more about all that is taking place in the National Alumni Association, visit our website at alumni.ua.edu.

Member contributions for 2013 totaled $2,300,079, and the following list recognizes individuals who gave unrestricted donations to the Alumni Fund in the amount of $100 or more during the calendar year.

Best Wishes and Roll Tide!

Calvin J. Brown, BS '81, MA '83
Director of Alumni Affairs

Calvin Brown's favorite book by an Alabama author is Harper Lee's To Kill a Mockingbird, and his favorite passage is from the famous courtroom scene: Reverend Syke's voice was as distant as Judge Taylor's: "Miss Jean Louise, stand up. Your father's passin'."

witness could have possibly been motivated by what are called specious charges. So, I have ruled.”

Krieger turned and walked slowly back to the witness stand, and Bill Bonanno could tell from Krieger’s expression that he was disappointed and dissatisfied. After five more minutes of cross-examination, Krieger told the judge that he had nothing further to ask Torrillo at this time, but reserved the right to cross-examine him later in the trial on questions that might arise if Krieger could obtain the written notes or tape recordings that had been made by the police during their interviews with Torrillo after his arrest. When Phillips said he was uncertain that such material existed, the judge agreed that Krieger was within his right to seek it if it did exist, and they were served on various individuals who had talked to Torrillo.

As the court recessed for lunch, Judge Mansfield directed that Torrillo return on the following day at 10:00 A.M. The remainder of the day’s session would be devoted to other government witnesses, several from Arizona to testify against Bill

The restaurant, a few blocks from the courthouse, was crowded, as were all the restaurants in the area at this hour, and Bill and Krieger had to wait standing for several moments. At various tables Bill recognized a few judges, defense attorneys, prosecutors, FBI agents, alleged mafiosi, convicts, court stenographers, bail bondsmen. They were all having lunch in the same big room—the accused and the accusers. They were coworkers in the crime industry, they kept the wheels turning in the big gray court buildings in Foley Square where decisions were hammered out five days a week, supplying jobs for jail keepers and magistrates, barristers and bondsmen, providing news for the press and customers for restaurants—they all fed off one another.

During the lunch break, Bill went to the corridor and called the witness stand. He had done well in explaining that the jury was in court in one

On the way out, he greeted Bill by saying, “Some of the realists of the bribery trial, L. Marcus, who was below Judge Mansfield, they wanted to talk to me and seemed convinced of my thought, but the day in Jackson Square an watchin the other fruitcakes do they thing.

I done bought a bicycle with two little sidecars for Sue an Dan to ride in, an ever Sunday we peddle down to the river an set on the bank an go catfishin. Jenny writes me once ever month or so, an sends me pictures of Little Forrest. Last one I got showed him dressed up in a tiny football suit. They is a girl here that work as a seamstress, one of the strip joints an ever once in a while she get together an ass aroun. Wanda is her name. A lot of times, me an ole Sue an Dan jus cruise aroun the French Quarter an see the sights, an believe me, they is some odd-lookin people there besides us—look like they might be lef over from the Russian Revolution or some-thin.

A guy from the want to do a st band” he ever h tions bout my lif But even before can’t print noth lieve it.

But let me tell at the stars, an se think I ain’t rem else, an ever so c been. An then, a you know?

Well, so what anyway, I tried dreams, ain’t the gerin this: I can always look back an say, at least I ain’t led no hum-drum life.

You know what I mean?

FORREST GUMP
by Winston Groom

But let me tell you this: sometimes at night, when I look up at the stars, an see the whole sky jus laid out there, don’t you think I ain’t rememberin it all. I still got dreams like anybody else, an ever so often, I am thinkin about how things might of been. An then, all of a sudden, I’m forty, fifty, sixty years ole, you know?

Well, so what? I may be a idiot, but most of the time, anyway, I tried to do the right thing—an dreams is jus dreams, ain’t they? So whatever else has happened, I am figgerin this: I can always look back an say, at least I ain’t led no hum-drum life.

You know what I mean?

The first memory I have is of a tall blond woman who drags a canvas cotton sack along an undulating row of rust-colored ground, through a field that seems to reach into the back forty of forever. I remember the sound it makes as it slides between the chest-high stalks that are so deeply, darkly green they look almost black, and the smell of kicked-up dust, and sweat. The tall woman is wearing a man's britches and a man's old straw hat, and now and then she looks back over her shoulder to smile at the three-year-old boy whose hair is almost as purely white as the bolls she picks, who rides the back of the six-foot-long sack like a magic carpet.

It is my first memory, and the best. It is sweeter than the recollection I have of the time she sat me down in the middle of a wild strawberry patch and let me eat my way out again, richer than all the times she took me swimming in the big rock in the water to run off the water, than the time she scraped together, even though her toes poked out of the Salvation Army boots, even though her clothes from the that ring, just some was not real gold, glass, but I was proud with a lump of red of my family to have one, and if the sun almost real.

But it is the memory that vast field that continues to ride, because it is a warm, safe and proud thing I hold, dangerous and spirit-numbing place, old, dangerous and carried us, with some, ms up the way she welfare check the d on the fifty-dollar could have lived the worth. The family Pride pushed her, adness of strangers. some way that old terror, old pain squeezed my daddy into a prison of empty whiskey bottles.

ALL OVER BUT THE SHOUTIN'
by Rick Bragg

The first memory I have is of a tall blond woman who drags a canvas cotton sack along an undulating row of rust-colored ground, through a field that seems to reach into the back forty of forever. I remember the sound it makes as it slides between the chest-high stalks that are so deeply, darkly green they look almost black, and the smell of kicked-up dust, and sweat. The tall woman is wearing a man's britches and a man's old straw hat, and now and then she looks back over her shoulder to smile at the three-year-old boy whose hair is almost as purely white as the bolls she picks, who rides the back of the six-foot-long sack like a magic carpet.

I asked her, many years later, if the strap of the sack cut deeper into her back and shoulders because I was there. "You wasn't heavy," she said.

care of another little girl?" Her forehead is all wrinkled up, just like when her mama fuss at her. Law, I feel like my heart's gone bleed to death.

I take her face in my hands, feeling the scary heat coming off her cheeks. "No, baby, that's not the reason. I don't want a leave you, but..." How do I put this? I can't tell her I'm fired. I don't want her to blame her mama and make it worse between them. "It's time for me to tell you my last little girl," I say, because this is the truth, it ain't by my own choosing.

I let her cry a minute on my shoulder and then I take her face into my hands again. I take a deep breath and I tell her to do the same.

"Baby Girl," I say. "I need to tell you everything I told you. Do you remember what I told you?"

She still crying steady, but the hiccups is gone. "To wipe my bottom good when I'm done?"

"No, baby, the other. About what you are."

I look deep into her rich brown eyes and she look into mine. Law, she got old-soul eyes, like she done lived a thousand years. And I swear I see, down inside, the woman she gone grow up to be. A flash from the future. She is tall and straight. She is proud. She got a better haircut. And she is remembering the words I put in her head. Remembering as a full-grown woman.

And then she say it, just like I need her to. "You is kind," she say, "you is smart. You is important."

"Oh Law." I hug her hot little body to me. I feel like she done just given me a gift. "Thank you, Baby Girl."

"You're welcome," she say, like I taught her to. But then she lay her head on my shoulder and we cry like that awhile, until Miss Leefolt come into the kitchen.

"Aibileen," Miss Leefolt say, "Miss Leefolt come into the kitchen."

Miss Hilly walk in behind her and get real guilty.

"I'm sorry, Aibileen. Hilly, if you want to... press charges, that's up to you."

Miss Hilly sniff at me and say, "It's not worth my time."

THE HELP

whenever I'd get to pestering him so bad, he'd say, 'Now, Ninny, it's time for your B-12 shot.' And he'd give me a B-12 shot right in the backside.

"I got out and walked every day alongside the railroad tracks, up and down, just like we're used to now, and pretty soon I had worked my way right through it and I was back to normal."

"But I thought I was too young to be going through it," Evelyn said. "I just turned forty-eight."

"Oh no, honey, lots of women go through it early. Why, there was this woman over in Georgia who was only thirty-six years old, and one day she got in her car and drove right up the stairs of the county courthouse, rolled down her window, and tossed her mother's head, that she had just chopped off in her kitchen, at a state policeman, and hollered, 'Here, this is what you wanted,' and drove right back down the courthouse stairs. No, for you if you're not

"But you seem so happy, like you never had a care in the world."

FRIED GREEN TOMATOES AT THE WHISTLE STOP CAFE

by Fannie Flagg

Evelyn asked Mrs. Threadgoode if she ever got depressed.

Mrs. Threadgoode answered truthfully. "No honey, I can't say I have been lately, I'm too busy being grateful for His blessings—why, I've had so many blessings I can't even count them. Now, don't get me wrong, everybody's got their sorrows, and some more than most."

"But you seem so happy, like you never had a care in the world."

Mrs. Threadgoode laughed at the thought. "Oh honey, I've buried my share, and each one hurt as bad as the last one. And there have been times when I've wondered why the good Lord handed me so many sorrowful burdens, to the point where I thought I just couldn't stand it one more day. But He only gives you what you can handle and no more . . . and I'll tell you this: You can't dwell on sadness, oh, it'll make you sick faster than anything in this world."

young mistresses to carry her books. The picture of several dozen boys and girls in a schoolroom engaged in study made a deep impression upon me, and I had the feeling that to get into a schoolhouse and study in this way would be about the same as getting into paradise.

So far as I can now recall, the first knowledge that I got of the fact that we were slaves, and that freedom of the slaves was being discussed, was early one morning before day when I was awakened by my mother kneeling over her children in fervent prayer that Lincoln and his armies might be successful in their efforts to free her children might be free. In this connection I do not understand how the slaves throughout the South were the masses so far as books or newspapers were concerned. They were able to keep themselves so accurately and completely informed about the great National questions that were agitating the country. From the time that Garrison, Lovejoy, and others began to agitate for freedom, the slaves throughout the South kept in close touch with the progress of the movement.

Though I was a member of the church, the Civil War and during the war it was not until the night whispered discussions that I learned of the news on the plantation indulge in. I had never understood the situation, and that I had never understood the events by what was termed the "grape harvest."

During the campaign for the Presidency, the slaves from any large city or distant place involved were. When war was begun, every slave on our plantation felt that the primal one was that our race on the plantation were discussed, that admitted of no ignorant members of one great result of the war, with a certainty that success of the Federal Government would be the conquering of the Confederacy. Every Confederate force was watched with the keenest interest. Often the slaves got knowledge of the results of great battles before the white people received it. This news was usually gotten from the coloured man who was sent to the post-office for the mail. In our case the post-office was about three miles from the plantation, and the mail came once or twice a week. The man who was sent to the office would linger about the place long enough to get the drift of the conversation from the group of white

by Booker T. Washington

I had no schooling whatever while I was a slave, though I remember on several occasions I went as far as the schoolhouse door with one of my young mistresses to carry her books. The picture of several dozen boys and girls in a schoolroom engaged in study made a deep impression upon me, and I had the feeling that to get into a schoolhouse and study in this way would be about the same as getting into paradise.

She still had eleven thousand dollars, after paying that bartender in New Orleans to drop the auto-theft charges against her. She would give that money to Meemaw to look after the children while she was in jail.

But eleven thousand would run out in no time, and then what would she do?

Should have thought about this when you were throwing it away on dresses and hats.

For her final court appearance she selected her most demure outfit, tailored fuzzy-pink suit and a plain silk white blouse. All day she sat on her cot, hearing the Duboces' complaints while she leafed through back issues of Life magazine.

At last the time came to spritz herself with Charles of the Desert and go face the lawyers, the judge, her fate.

Lucille thought the judge was a fair man, and she admired Larry Russell for doing what he could for her, but she considered Hubert Mackie a horrid little pig of a man. She wished his other hand would shrivel up. How she wished he would make him testify against his Aunt Peedie.

She had winceed at Peedie's words, but it wasn't his fault, it was his heart, she saw him with his own eyes. At the end it wasn't Peedie's fault, it was his heart.

Now they took her to the jail. She and her whole family were there and Larry Russell was there and Larry Russell's gussied-up ladies were there among them, and they were all held shopping bags on their laps.

"Now listen, Peedie, I want you to be prepared for anything that happens, don't let no individual. Whatever they say, don't say anything."

"What's the worst that can happen, don't let no individual. Whatever they say, don't say anything."

"I think you know what happens, don't let no individual. Whatever they say, don't say anything."

researchers, including those devoted to the search for elemental units, still think all the time about complexity. To make any progress they must meditate on the networks of cause and effect across adjacent levels of organization—from subatomic particles to atoms, say, or organisms to species—and they must think on the hidden design and forces of the networks of causation. Quantum physics thus blends into chemical physics, which explains atomic bonding and chemical reactions, which form the foundation of molecular biology, which demystifies cell biology.

Behind the mere smashing of smaller pieces lies a deeper agenda that also takes the form of reductionism: to fold the laws and principles of each level of organization into those at more general, hence more fundamental levels. Its strong form is total consilience, which holds that nature is organized by simple universal laws of physics to which all other laws and principles can eventually be reduced. This transcendental world view is the light and way for many scientific materialists (I admit to being among them), but it could be wrong. At the least, it is surely an oversimplification. At each level of organization, phenomena exist that require new laws those at more general beyond our grasp. For general levels is impossible pleasure: The challenge metaphysical excitement

CONSILIENCE: THE UNITY OF KNOWLEDGE
by E.O. Wilson

Science, its imperfections notwithstanding, is the sword in the stone that humanity finally pulled. The question it poses, of universal and orderly materialism, is the most important that can be asked in philosophy and religion. Its procedures are not easy to master, even to conceptualize; that is why it took so long to get started, and then mostly in one place, which happened to be western Europe. The work is also hard and for long intervals frustrating. You have to be a bit compulsive to be a productive scientist.

Its procedures are not easy to master, even to conceptualize; that is why it took so long to get started, and then mostly in one place, which happened to be western Europe. The work is also hard and for long intervals frustrating. You have to be a bit compulsive to be a productive scientist. Keep in mind that new ideas are often of hours or maybe days. Most experiments are tedious and consume large amounts of time, only to yield negative or (worse!) ambiguous results. Over the years I have been presumptuous enough to counsel new Ph.D.'s in biology as follows: If you choose an academic career you will need forty hours a week to perform teaching and administrative duties, another people who try to talk down to my understanding. They are like people who when walking with you try to shorten their steps to suit yours; the hypocrisy in both cases is equally exasperating.

The hands of those I meet are dumbly eloquent to me. The touch of some hands is an impertinence. I have met people so empty of joy, that when I clasped their frosty finger-tips, it seemed as if I were shaking hands with a northeast storm. Others there are whose hands have sunbeams in them, so that their grasp warms my heart. It may be only the clinging touch of a child's hand; but there is as much potential sunshine in it for me as there is in a loving glance for others. A hearty handshake or a friendly letter gives me genuine pleasure.

I have many far-off friends whom I have never seen. Indeed they are so many that I have often been unable to reply to their letters; but I wish to say here that I am always grateful for their kind words, however insufficiently I acknowledge them.

I count it one of the sweetest privileges of my life to have known and conversed with many who knew Bishop

But when Denise was sick again the following morning, she knew at once that she'd really known the first time, or even before that. Perhaps she'd always known that things would turn out something like this for both of them.

She put her arms around Denise and let her cry. Fall had arrived, not with burnt orange and winey air this year, but grey skies and mists of rain. In the drab early morning, with her daughter's head on her shoulder, Edythe stared dry-eyed before her, the way she'd once seen a country neighbor stand and watch her house burn down, its glowing rafters collapsing at last into the heart of the flames.

"Mama will stand by you," she said, and tightened her arms. "Do you know who's to blame?"

Denise shook her head and sobbed harder. Then she pulled away to face her mother with wet, contorted face.

"Me!" she sobbed. "I'm the one to blame. Oh, mama, mama, what will we do?"

"We'll do the best we can do."

It was two o'clock when he called at night, she said to Stanhope. He was so sad, so full of tenderness.

When he said, "Just for a little while?" she said, "Yes, just for a little while."

She washed her face, put on a full skirt and peasa. When she told Denise goodbye, it was not hers.

Stanhope had said, "I can't win my money, were you?"

Stanhope had seemed not so much like a man who couldn't win his money, were you?"

"We might as well let the folks over, and I've been asking you?"

Later, that was as far as Edythe let herself remember, most of the time. Not that the rest was less dear. She'd told him that it had to Ships at a distance have every man's wish on board. For some they come in with the tide. For others they sail forever on the horizon, never out of sight, never landing until the Watcher turns his eyes away in resignation, his dreams mocked to death by Time. That is the life of men.

Now, women forget all those things they don't want to remember, and remember everything they don't want to forget. The dream is the truth. Then they act and do things accordingly.

So the beginning of the end was a woman and she had come back from burying the dead. Now she was sick and ailing with friends at the pillow and the feet. She had come back from the sodden and the bloated; the sudden dead, their eyes flung wide open in judgment.

The people all saw her come because it was sundown. The sun was gone, but the sky. It was the time for sitting and listening. It was the time to hear things and to be tongueless, earless, eyeless convenient. Other brutes had occupied their senses. The bossman were gone, so the skin of sounds and lemons through their mouths. They saw

Seeing the way they had stored up the back parts of their minds they made burning statements with mass cruelty. A man walking altogether

THEIR EYES WERE WATCHING GOD

The visitor shook his head in disbelief and hurried for the stairs.

“But I seen it myself! I seen it myself!” he kept repeating as Judge Cochran escorted him down the hall and out the back door.

“Thank you for being concerned,” the judge said wearily. “Good night.”

“How many times has it happened now?” Judge Cochran asked himself as he climbed back into bed. “And when will she stop burning those damnable candles?”

The “she” he referred to was Sarah Drish, builder and longtime resident of what is now known as the Old Drish Place in Tuscaloosa. Mrs. Drish was a gentle, intelligent woman, but, according to tales told about her home, it is her fr hood by her neighbor- which she wanted to n.

“You can see the fire all over this end of town!”

“All right. Let’s go investigate,” Judge Cochran replied.

Together they climbed the two flights of stairs to the square tower room, and Judge Cochran threw open the door.

The room was dark—no flames, no sparks, no smoldering ashes, not even a wisp of smoke.

The visitor shook his head in disbelief and hurried for the stairs.

“But I seen it myself! I seen it myself!” he kept repeating as Judge Cochran escorted him down the hall and out the back door.

“Thank you for being concerned,” the judge said wearily. “Good night.”

“How many times has it happened now?” Judge Cochran asked himself as he climbed back into bed. “And when will she stop burning those damnable candles?”

Ways to Give

A gift to the Alumni Fund of The University of Alabama's National Alumni Association can take many forms. It can be:

- a gift of cash
- a gift of stocks, bonds, real estate or other property (art, books, etc.)
- a corporate matching gift
- a gift through your will or living trust
- a charitable trust or other life income plan
- a named beneficiary in your retirement or insurance policy or certificate of deposit

You can also use the above options to create an endowment gift to the National Alumni Association in support of its scholarship program. Perhaps the most rewarding aspect of establishing an endowed scholarship fund is that it allows you to directly accomplish your goals in giving while helping the University achieve its institutional initiatives through the NAA. The principal is invested in the UA System Pooled Endowment Fund for safe growth over time, and the annual endowment income from this investment enables the Alumni Association to award scholarships to qualified recipients each year, according to the terms agreed upon by you and the association. Scholarship endowments may be established by individuals, businesses or alumni chapters, and gifts may be given over a period of five years. You can also add to your endowment, beyond the minimum funding level, through lifetime gifts and through a beneficiary designation in your estate plan.

“Well. Reckon we’ll send to Columbus for somebody, then.”

I closed my eyes. “No, ma’am, Miss Mary Frances. Don’t do that. I’ll come.”

“Good girl! Come on now, bring your stuff, and come to the back door, okay?”

She hung up before I could say another word. I hugged the phone to me, my heart fluttering like the wings of a hummingbird. Oh, Lord, what had I got myself into? Why didn’t they tell us at the beauty college we’d have things like this when we got out in the real world, got our own shop. If I had someone working for me, I could send them. But no, it was only me, and I had no choice. I was going to keep Aunt Essie’s customers. Truth was I couldn’t afford to lose even one customer, let alone all the blue-haired ladies in Clarksville.

MAKING WAVES

by Cassandra King

I couldn’t help but smile, though. Miss Maudie, bless her sweet old heart, never had a curling iron or blow-dryer touch her head, not with her old-timey hairdo. I’d never fixed it myself, but many was the time I’d watched Aunt Essie do it. She’d part Miss Maudie’s thick white hair in the middle, then take her fingers and mold it into big, deep waves. Each wave had to be painstakingly clipped in place with curved metal clips, which they don’t make anymore, the kind with jagged teeth. Fortunately I inherited Aunt Essie’s collection.

Then Miss Maudie’d get under the dryer so the waves could set, and Aunt Essie’d polish her tiny little fingernails, always a natural rosy-pink. Shell Pink, I remembered, and added a bottle to the roller bag. I figured they hadn’t been doing Miss Maudie’s fingernails at that nursing home in Tuscaloosa. She ought to have them done for the laying out, she had such pretty little hands. Usually they’re crossed at the waist, with a Bible or something in them. It would be a shame for people to file by Miss Maudie’s coffin and notice she needed a manicure.

About the Alabama Authors

HARPER LEE

Lee was born and raised in the small town of Monroeville, Ala., on which To Kill a Mockingbird is loosely based. She attended UA in the 1940s and received an honorary doctorate in literature from the University in 1991. Her novel, which won the Pulitzer Prize in 1961, has been translated into more than 50 languages and made into an Oscar-winning film starring Gregory Peck. Today, Lee lives a quiet life in her hometown.

GAY TALESE

Originally from New Jersey, Talese chose to travel South to attend UA. After graduating in 1953 with a journalism degree, he became a reporter for the New York Times, Esquire, The New Yorker, Harper's Magazine and several other national publications. He has authored 11 books, and his groundbreaking article "Frank Sinatra Has a Cold" was named the "best story Esquire ever published." In 2013, he received the Harper Lee Award from the Alabama Writers' Forum. He resides in New York City.

WINSTON GROOM

Groom was raised in Baldwin County, Ala., and received an English degree from UA in 1965 and an honorary doctorate in 2000. He served in the Army in Vietnam and subsequently worked as a reporter in D.C. He returned to Mobile in 1985, where he wrote his most famous novel, Forrest Gump, which made him a best-selling author when it was adapted into a 1994 film of the same name. He was presented with the Harper Lee Award in 2011. Groom, who lives in Point Clear, Ala., has most recently written several books about American history.

RICK BRAGG

Bragg grew up in the small community of Possum Trot near Jacksonville, Ala. He won a Pulitzer Prize in 1996 while working at the New York Times. Known for telling the stories of his people and the land from which they came, Bragg has authored multiple books in addition to All Over but the Shoutin', including Ava's Man, The Prince of Frogtown and Somebody Told Me, a collection of his newspaper stories. He was the winner of the 2009 Harper Lee Award. Bragg lives in Tuscaloosa, Ala., where he is the Cason Professor of Writing in the UA journalism department.

KATHRYN STOCKETT

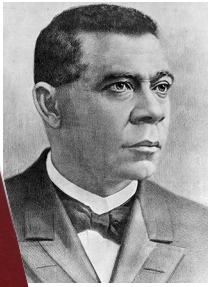

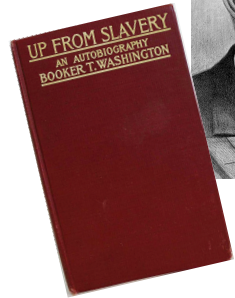

Stockett was born in Jackson, Miss., and graduated from UA with an English degree in 1991. Her debut novel, The Help, was rejected by 60 literary agents before it was published. The book spent more than 100 weeks on the New York Times Best Seller List and won numerous awards, including the Townsend Prize for Fiction and the SIBA Book Award in 2010. The film adaptation of the same name, released in 2011, was nominated for three Academy Awards. She lives in Atlanta.

FANNIE FLAGG

Flagg was born in Birmingham, Ala., and attended UA in the 1960s. She worked as an actress, talk show host and comedian until she devoted herself to full-time writing in 1980. Fried Green Tomatoes, her most successful novel, remained on the New York Times Best Seller List for 36 weeks. A 1991 film screenplay adapted from the book was nominated for an Academy Award. In 2001, Flagg won the Alabama State Council on the Arts Distinguished Artist Award, and in 2012, the Harper Lee Award. She now spends her time writing from her homes in California and Alabama.

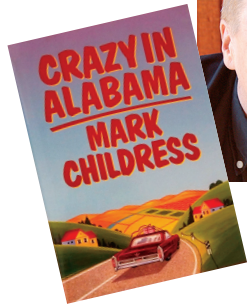

BOOKER T. WASHINGTON

Known as the founder of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial School Institute (now Tuskegee University), Washington was a leading voice for blacks in the struggle to gain civil rights in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. He was born a slave and would continue on to become an inspiring teacher and leader in the black community until his death at age 59 in 1915. He is buried on the campus of Tuskegee University in Macon County, Ala., and his home, The Oaks, is part of the Tuskegee Institute National Historic Site.

MARK CHILDRESS

Born in Monroeville, Ala., Childress earned a communication degree from UA in 1978 and worked as a reporter for several newspapers, including the Birmingham News, before devoting his full attention to writing fiction in 1987. His most famous work, Crazy in Alabama, was a featured selection of the 1993 Literary Guild and a New York Times "Notable Book of the Year." A film based on the novel was released in 1999. Childress, who lives in Key West, Fla., was the winner of the 2014 Harper Lee Award.

EDWARD O. WILSON

Wilson is a renowned naturalist, biologist and theorist. Born in Birmingham, Ala., he received two degrees in biology from UA, a bachelor's in 1949 and a master's in 1950. His book On Human Nature won a Pulitzer Prize in 1978, and in 1990, his book The Ants also won a Pulitzer. He has received the National Medal of Science and the Gold Medal of the Worldwide Fund for Nature. He retired from teaching at Harvard in 1996, and continues to write from his home in Lexington, Mass.

HELEN KELLER

Keller was born in Tuscumbia, Ala., and at a young age contracted an illness that left her deaf and blind. Despite those obstacles, she learned both to speak and write and became internationally known for her activism on behalf of workers' and women's rights, her literary work, and her tenure as an unofficial U.S. ambassador to the world. While in college, Keller undertook an essay assignment that evolved into a magazine serial and then into her 1903 autobiography, The Story of My Life. She passed away in 1968.

MARY WARD BROWN

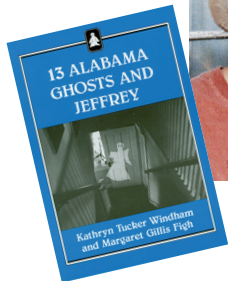

Brown grew up in Perry County, Ala., and attended UA in the 1950s. Although she was published in several magazines throughout her life, she did not achieve notoriety as a writer until her late 60s, when her first collection of short stories, Tongues of Flame, was published in 1986. Brown received the Harper Lee Award in 2002 with the release of her second collection of short stories, It Wasn't All Dancing. Her writing focused on the everyday lives and struggles of Southerners. She passed away in 2013.

ZORA NEALE HURSTON

Hurston's four novels and two books of folklore were the result of extensive anthropological research from the South, the Caribbean and Latin America, and have proven valuable resources on the oral culture of African-Americans. An influential member of the Harlem Renaissance, she also wrote more than 50 short stories. Born in Notasulga, Ala., she is best known for her novel Their Eyes Were Watching God. In 2005, TIME included the book in its list of the 100 best English-language novels published since 1923. Hurston died in 1960.

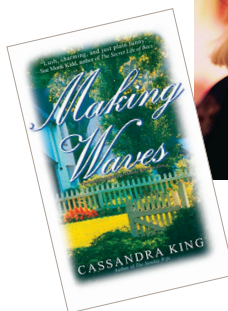

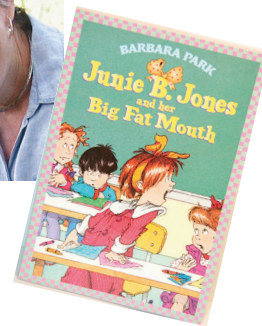

KATHRYN TUCKER WINDHAM

Windham, a storyteller, author, photographer and journalist, was born in Selma, Ala., and raised in nearby Thomasville, Ala. She is best known for her series of ghost story collections, beginning with 13 Alabama Ghosts and Jeffrey. Early in her career, she was a reporter for the Alabama Journal and the Birmingham News, and later for the Selma Times-Journal, with which she won several Associated Press awards for her writing and photography. She died in 2011 at the age of 93. Many of her works can be seen at the Kathryn Tucker Windham Museum at Alabama Southern Community College.

BARBARA PARK

A popular children's book author, Park is best known for her award-winning Junie B. Jones series, which included 29 books. The New Jersey native graduated from UA in 1969 with a degree in science education, and was a longtime resident of Scottsdale, Ariz. For more than two decades, school-age readers have enjoyed the fictional character of Jones, a kindergartener best known for her outspoken personality. Park won seven Children's Choice Awards and four Parents' Choice Awards for the series. She died in 2013.

CASSANDRA KING

King, who was born in lower Alabama, is the author of five novels, most recently the critically acclaimed Moonrise, in 2013. Her short fiction and essays have appeared in numerous anthologies and journals. Aside from writing, she has taught college courses and seminars on writing, worked as a human-interest reporter and published an article about her second-favorite pastime in Cooking Light magazine. She lives in South Carolina with her husband, novelist Pat Conroy.

My teacher's name is Mrs.

She has another name, too. But I just like Mrs. and that's all.

Last week Mrs. clapped her loud hands together. Then she made an announcement to us.

A 'nouncement is the school word for telling us something very important.

“Boys and girls, please pay your attention, please? We have a special day coming. We’re going to be talking about careers. We’re going to have when you hear the words you can hear. I never even heard of that word careers before. And that’s the heck we’re talking about.”

JUNIE B. JONES AND HER BIG FAT MOUTH

by Barbara Park

My name is Junie B. Jones. The B stands for Beatrice. Except I don't like Beatrice. I just like B and that's all.

I go to kindergarten. My room is named Room Nine. There are lots of rules in that place.

Like no shouting.

And no running in the hall.

And no butting the other children in the stomach with your head.

My teacher's name is Mrs.

She has another name, too. But I just like Mrs. and that's all.

Mrs. made squinty eyes at me. “A career
