Tour Summary

Due to its diverse habitat array, ranging from the high Andes to excellent lowland rainforest, north-western South America has the highest avian diversity in the world. Ecuador is fortuitously situated within the heart of this fantastic ecological region, boasting a bird list of nearly 1,700 species! Furthermore, its small size, good infrastructure, unsurpassable scenery and friendly people make Ecuador one of the planet's most delightful birding destinations. In November of 2022, we birded the north of the country, doing two back-to-back tours starting in the endemic-rich Chocó cloud forests in the west, followed by the high-elevation Páramo in the east, and slowly descending through the cloud forests of the vast east-slope. The number of amazing birds and other wildlife that we saw was simply overwhelming. The highlights of our epic Rockjumper trip are further narrated in this report.

Chocó Cloud Forest

Our Chocó Cloud-forest tour commenced in the capital Quito, with us visiting classic birding hotspots in the Pichincha province in search of Chocó endemics and other specialties. We went to the Yanacocha reserve on our first morning, driving up the north-western flanks of the Pichincha volcano to c. 3,600 m elevation. A tactical stop on the way got us nice views of a Red-crested Cotinga — a great bird to start the trip with! At the reserve, we first checked the feeders where we were greeted by two obliging Andean Guans. Other stunners that showed up were Yellow-breasted Brushfinch and the fancy Scarlet-bellied Mountain Tanager. The hummingbird feeders attracted various gems including Buff-winged Starfrontlet and Shining Sunbeam, but also numerous Masked and Glossy Flowerpiercers. Unfortunately, the much-desired Sword-billed Hummingbird was not around. We then continued along the “Inca trail” where we run into various mixed-species flocks with goodies like Hooded Mountain Tanager, Pearled Treerunner, Rufous Wren, Superciliaried Hemispingus, Blue-backed Conebill and Spectacled Whitestart. A female Barred Fruiteater was scoped and gave us prolonged views — a beauty with all that intricate barring!

A stop at the Alambi reserve was highly productive with an overdose of different hummingbirds visiting the feeders including White-necked Jacobin, Purple-throated Woodstar, Andean Emerald, White-whiskered Hermit and the fantastic White-booted Racket-tail. The bananas also attracted various species including the vivid Blue-necked Tanager! At the river we enjoyed the fantastic White-capped Dipper foraging out in the open. Our sighting of a Masked Tityra was a little unusual given the high elevation of the Tandayapa valley. Dinner at Bellavista was celebrated with Colada Morada and a superb Olinguito!

Morning porch birding at Bellavista was exciting with lots of quality sightings, including stunners like Masked Trogon, Striped Treehunter, Russet-crowned Warbler, Blue-winged Mountain Tanager, Cinnamon Flycatcher, and many more. A giant earthworm on a forest trail was a nice surprise and a true rarity was our brief sighting of an Ecuadorian White-fronted Capuchin! Another lucky find was a Tanager Finch that showed itself exceptionally well — what a cracker! After lunch, we successfully twitched the amazing Plate-billed Mountain Toucan at its nest cavity. A fantastic pair of Crested Quetzals that we found up the road was a huge bonus!

The following day, we visited Refugio Paz de las Aves, also known as “Paz de las Antpittas”. At dawn, we met Angel Paz, a famed birder, and our local guide, “the antpitta whisperer”. An early start got us in time for the Andean Cock-of-the-rock spectacle. We enjoyed multiple displaying males — what an amazing bright red jungle creature! The rest of the morning was dedicated to finding antpittas. We got very lucky getting all five of these elusive forest-dwellers, namely Yellow-breasted, Moustached, Ochre-breasted, Chestnut-crowned, and Giant Antpitta! A Common Potoo at its day-roost was a welcome bonus. In the afternoon, we travelled to the Chontal area where we enjoyed a dozen of incredible Oilbirds at a small colony in a narrow canyon.

Rio Silanche was visited the following day, a reserve located in the humid lowlands of the Pichincha province. Over the years, the habitat in the area had been severely deforested and, sadly, the Rio Silanche Bird Sanctuary now comprises a small island of tall humid Chocó lowland forest, a final refuge for many forest species in the area. Birding along the entry road was productive with stars like Violet-bellied Hummingbird, Rufous-tailed Jacamar and Yellow-tailed Oriole. Five species of Hirundinidae perched on a wire was a nice observation, including White-thighed and Barn Swallow. The canopy tower was nice with eye-level views of White-tailed Trogon, Hook-billed Kite and Orange-fronted Barbet, among others. A Berlepsch’s Tinamou was calling nearby but we never got it in view. Choco Trogon was another rarity that we did get to see nicely. During our field lunch, we enjoyed Purple-chested Hummingbird, White-necked Jacobin, and White-whiskered Hermit at the feeders. Barred Puffbird was a great find on our way out, and our sighting was soon celebrated with fresh cocoa fruit and ice-cream!

Today some of us had a little sleep in, while others enjoyed some pre-breakfast birding on the grounds of Septimo Paraiso. Highlights of the early morning were Zeledon’s Antbird, Scale-crested Pygmy Tyrant, Streak-capped Treehunter, Lineated Foliage-gleaner, Three-striped Warbler, and a stunning male Golden-winged Manakin! After breakfast, we explored the Mindo valley picking up goodies like the recently described Coopmans’s Elaenia, Short-tailed and Barred Hawk, and White-browed Gnatcatcher, among others. Exciting was our little expedition to a new site where we watched the amazing Club-winged Manakin — what an incredible sound it makes with the wings! In the afternoon, we searched for the Sunbittern along the Río Mindo but this elusive species was nowhere to be found. Torrent Tyrannulet and White-capped Dipper were welcome consolations.

The next morning, we visited the Mashpi area, a magical hotspot supporting some of the wettest Chocó cloud forests of Ecuador. We kicked off with the rare Black Solitaire. It was hopping on the road in search of small invertebrates — the extended views that we got of this elusive species were exceptional! Shortly after, we picked up other Chocó endemics like Orange-breasted Fruiteater, Moss-backed Tanager and Indigo Flowerpiercer — we were on a roll!

The action continued at the feeders of the Amagusa reserve, where the bird activity was really pumping: a large variety of species came in, including Chocó endemics such as Black-chinned Mountain, Rufous-throated and the ultra-vivid Glistening-green Tanager. Other beauties included Flame-faced, Golden-naped, Golden and Lemon-rumped Tanagers, and even a pair of Golden-collared Honeycreeper. Rose-faced Parrots showed themselves fantastically and a pair of Scaled Fruiteaters foraging at almost touching distance surely stole the show after lunch! The amazing hummingbirds included the tiny Green Thorntail and many stunning Chocó gems, such as Velvet-purple Coronet, Violet-tailed Sylph, Empress Brilliant, Brown Inca, and Purple-bibbed Whitetip. The road down to Pachijal produced great views of the rare Yellow-green Tanager. In the late afternoon we reached Kapari where we twitched a Crested Owl at its day roost — a fantastic day packed with rare bird sightings!

Today, we made an early start to the umbrellabird site. The hike was a bit steep but our efforts to reach the top were paid off big time. The weather was on our side and soon a fantastic male Long-wattled Umbrellabird flew in. It performed its display right in front of us — a truly mind-blowing wildlife sighting! Some bonus birds that we enjoyed in the area included Choco and Yellow-throated Toucans, and an obliging Laughing Falcon. Our continued search for Sunbittern was negative but we did find a fine Fasciated Tiger Heron at the Río Blanco. After a nice lunch at Kapari we travelled back to Quito to start the Eastern Andes tour!

Eastern Andes: Páramo & Cloud Forest

Giant Hummingbird by Herb Wilson

Our Eastern Andes tour started with a visit to one of the most famous and picturesque snow-capped stratovolcanoes of Ecuador: Antisana. The breath-taking Andean landscape was filled with exciting birds and the majestic Andean Condor was among the first species that we saw! A Black-chested Buzzard-Eagle also flew overhead and the impressive Giant Hummingbird was surely another crowd-pleaser. At the viewing platform it was Pat that discovered a large black blob in the canyon. It turned out to be an adult male Spectacled Bear! Amazingly, after watching it in the scope, we discovered there was a second bear hidden in the bushes. We then observed some interaction between the bears and it looked like they were pair-bonding. The female was clearly smaller and we watched them fight and hear them make lots of growling noises — a unique wildlife observation! We then continued up to the altiplano where we lucked into a flock of Andean Ibises, a rare and declining species, and also enjoyed other birds like the striking Carunculated Caracaras and Andean Gulls. Paramo Pipit played hide and seek, but soon we got good scope views of this high-elevation passerine. Laguna Mica produced the hoped-for Silvery Grebes and Andean Ducks, and also a neat Many-striped Canastero. At the guard station we watched Andean Tit-Spintail nesting in an electricity box and Ecuadorian Hillstar was nesting under the roof top — funny that these birds pick human constructions for nesting!

The following morning, we started at the hide at Guango, with Turquoise and Inca Jays, Grey-browed and Chestnut-capped Brushfinches, and a Montane Woodcreeper, all feeding on moths at close range. We then drove up to Papallacta Pass at c. 4,300m elevation where we searched for the peculiar Rufous-bellied Seedsnipe. The high-altitude conditions were demanding but after quite some effort we connected sweetly with this special bird and bird family — what a cracker! Tawny Antpitta and a male Ecuadorian Hillstar were other highlights that we got up there before we descended for lunch.

Back at Guango we enjoyed the hummingbird feeders that attracted various stunners, including the extra-ordinary Sword-billed Hummingbird. We then did a targeted search along the fast-flowing Papallacta river where we successfully encountered a pair of Torrent Ducks — it was difficult to pick our favourite duck, the male or the female?

Powerful Woodpecker by Dušan Brinkhuizen

Pre-breakfast birding at Guango yielded goodies like Blue-and-black and Hooded Mountain Tanager. We then visited the treeline and paramo habitats of the Cayambe-Coca National Park. Viridian Metaltails were easy to find here but the hoped for mixed-species flocks were eluding us. We eventually connected with a flock that yielded stunners like Black-backed Bush, Golden-crowned and Black-chested Mountain Tanager. On our way back down, we discovered a black blob in a pasture. It turned out to be a sleeping Mountain Tapir — another incredible wildlife sighting! At Cabañas San Isidro we had to interrupt dinner for a special bird — the San Isidro Mystery Owl!

Breakfast was a highlight. Not because of the delicious food but because of all the birdlife showing up at the lodge deck — a true feeding frenzy! Inca Jays even landed on the handrail and other species that we enjoyed at touching-distance included Masked Trogon, Black-billed Peppershrike, Cinnamon Flycatcher, Subtropical Cacique, Russet-backed Oropendola, Montane and Olive-backed Woodcreeper, Canada and Blackburnian Warbler, Smoke-colored Pewee and Pale-edged Flycatcher, to name a few. A pair of Powerful Woodpeckers suddenly popped up and they certainly stole the show — what a massive beast! Our date with White-bellied Antpitta went smoothly, and one showed up almost instantly at the worm feeder. Birding along the Las Caucheras Road was productive with our top sighting being the amazing White-capped Tanager nesting in a palm tree!

The following day, we made an early start to the famed Guacamayos, a ridge with pristine cloud forest, among the most diverse and wettest forests in eastern Ecuador, and the first cordillera that the clouds from the Amazon basin run into. A fruiting tree attracted gems like Grass-green and Lacrimose Mountain Tanager that we really got to see well. The tiny Rufous-headed Pygmy Tyrant was obliging too but Slaty-crowned Antpitta and Streak-headed Antbird were much harder to connect with visually. We then continued to the feeders and flowers of La Brisa reserve, where we enjoyed numerous gems, including Peruvian Racket-tail, Gorgeted Woodstar, Green-backed Hillstar and Violet-fronted Brilliant. We then got hit by a wet weather system, but in the late afternoon the rain suddenly stopped, and we continued birding. Watching the rare, Black-billed Mountain Toucan in the scope was a blast! At dinner, we enjoyed the Black-banded Owl again, and also a Mountain Tapir showed up at the lodge deck — how amazing!

On our last morning we ventured down the east-slope to lower elevations in the hope to maximize our bird list. The goliath Strong-billed Woodcreeper at breakfast was a nice start of the day! In the foothills we picked up several goodies including Violaceous Jay, Red-breasted Blackbird, Scarlet, Silver-beaked and Magpie Tanager, and Black-and-white Seedeater. The star bird without a doubt was spotted by Bets: a stunning Black-capped Donacobius posing on a tree trunk — a lifer family for all and a great bird to end the trip with!
