PREFACE

The Naval Hospital Cemetery in Brooklyn was established in 1831 and was closed in 1910. In 1926, the Navy disinterred burials from the cemetery and subsequently reinterred them at Cypress Hills National Cemetery, also in Brooklyn. This research effort was conducted by the Navy to address the issue of military burials that are not documented as having been removed from the Naval Hospital Cemetery during the 1926 disinterment action.

During the Navy's research on the cemetery, discrepancies regarding the number of burials and disinterments at the cemetery, as well as missing, incomplete, and contradictory information, were frequently encountered. These research obstacles have made it impossible for the Navy to provide definitive answers to the stated research goals. However, despite these challenges, a great deal of information was collected, including data on those Sailors, Marines, and members of their families who may not have been disinterred.

The discrepancy between the number of documented burials and the number of documented disinterments is one of the primary issues discussed in this report. These burials are referred to as burials not documented as removed. Although no documentation on the removal of these burials was found, it is not clear that they all remain in the Naval Hospital Cemetery. It is likely that some were removed without being documented and that others have deteriorated over the years and/or been disturbed by modern development. Some burials may still remain intact in the Naval Hospital Cemetery, but their identity would be very difficult, if not impossible, to determine. This report presents the Navy's collected data on the burials not documented as removed, as well as information on other research topics related to the cemetery's history.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

S.1 Introduction

As part of the base closure and disposal process for Naval Station (NAVSTA) Brooklyn, New York, the Department of the Navy (DoN) has conducted historical documentation on the Naval Hospital Cemetery. NAVSTA Brooklyn covers approximately 28.8 government-owned acres (11.7 hectares), and is largely the area occupied by the former Naval Hospital that was decommissioned in 1948. The Naval Hospital Cemetery, which occupies about 1.7 acres (0.7 hectares) of a cleared, grassy area in the eastern portion of the site, served as the official burial ground for the Naval Hospital from 1831 until the cemetery's closure in 1910. In 1926, the Navy disinterred burials from the Naval Hospital Cemetery and reinterred them in Cypress Hills National Cemetery, also in Brooklyn.

During the base closure and disposal process, the Navy was made aware of community and civic concerns regarding the possibility of burials remaining in the Naval Hospital Cemetery. In 1991, archaeological research had confirmed the presence of an African burial ground in Manhattan; this incident, along with concerns of the local African-American community and others that any remains at the Naval Hospital Cemetery might be of persons of African descent, prompted questions regarding the racial makeup of the buried population.

Prior to the present study, the Navy had conducted three cultural resource evaluations of the cemetery, as follows:

- The first study provided an initial historic background and concluded that the cemetery had been disturbed and had a low potential for archaeological sensitivity;
- The second determined that although there was no African burial ground present on the site, further studies should be performed to address issues such as discrepancies in burial records; and
- The third evaluation, a field survey using ground-penetrating radar (GPR), was conducted in July 1997 and resulted in the discovery of a possibly intact burial.

In order to more fully understand the nature and magnitude of the issues surrounding the cemetery, the Navy subsequently undertook this study, State of the Research, Naval Hospital Cemetery Historical Documentation, Naval Station Brooklyn, New York, in order to determine, to the greatest extent possible, accurate information such as the number, name, and rank/rate of any burials at the cemetery that were not documented as being removed.

S.2 The Naval Hospital Cemetery

The Naval Hospital Cemetery was established during the late 1820s or early 1830s, as it was customary in the 19th century for hospitals to have an associated cemetery. For almost 80 years, from 1831 to 1910, members of the military service and their dependents who died at the Brooklyn Naval Hospital and other locations, including many Naval vessels, were buried in the cemetery. Reports suggest that by 1881 as many as 2,000 burials had occurred at the Naval Hospital Cemetery. The present study documented 1,504 burials during the 80-year period, although records were missing for the last 16 years that the cemetery was active.

In 1910, with little room remaining for additional burials, the Naval Hospital Cemetery was closed. In 1926 the Navy disinterred remains from the Naval Hospital Cemetery and reinterred them at Cypress Hills National Cemetery. During the two-month-long disinterment and reburial process, 987 individual burials were documented as being relocated.

S.3 Prior and Current Research on the Naval Hospital Cemetery

Four cultural resource evaluations of NAVSTA Brooklyn and the Naval Hospital Cemetery, including the present study, have been carried out by the Navy. These surveys and their relevant conclusions are as follows:

- Cultural Resources Survey for Base Closure and Realignment, Redevelopment and Reuse of Excess Property at Naval Station New York (US Navy, 1994)

This 1994 survey of the NAVSTA Brooklyn site was conducted as a follow-up to the cultural resource appendix of the Navy's 1990 environmental assessment of the station. It provided a characterization of NAVSTA Brooklyn's archaeological sensitivity, and identified the Naval Hospital Cemetery as having a low archaeological sensitivity. This conclusion was based upon the determination that the landscape modifications in this area had, over time, significantly impacted any burials that may not have been removed. These impacts included the installation of gutters, catch basins, underground oil tanks, tile drains, a tennis court, and a paved road. This survey cited a report stating that 2,000 burials had taken place by the 1880s and raised the possibility that an earlier family burial ground was located on-site.

- Archaeological Evaluation (Stage 1A Documentary Study) Former Naval Station (NAVSTA) New York Navy Yard Annex Site (US Navy, 1997a)

This 1997 survey focused more specifically on the potential archaeological sensitivity of the Naval Hospital and cemetery. Based on consideration of newly located primary sources, research for the Archaeological Evaluation presented a revised archaeological sensitivity assessment of NAVSTA Brooklyn. This reevaluation determined that the Naval Hospital Cemetery was not an African burial ground, but was the resting place of servicemen (of whom some were of African descent), their family members, and civilians. The report concluded that there was no earlier family burial ground on-site. It also concluded that some burials may not have been disinterred in 1926 and that the cemetery was likely to contain both fragmentary human bone and possibly disturbed burials (US Navy, 1997a). The 1997 report suggested that the cemetery had a high archaeological sensitivity and recommended GPR to further assess the cemetery.

- Ground-Penetrating Radar Evaluation, Navy-Retained Section (former) Brooklyn Navy Yard (US Navy, 1997b)

In 1997 the Navy conducted a limited GPR survey at the Naval Hospital Cemetery. Analysis of the GPR readings identified five areas with subsurface anomalies. The subsequent ground-proofing exposed filled shaft features, small quantities of fragmentary human bone, and evidence of decayed coffins, and led to the discovery of a possibly intact human skeleton buried at a shallow depth.

The findings of the GPR survey indicated that the documentary record concerning interments at the cemetery needed to be better understood in order to manage this resource. The Navy then initiated the research presented here.

- State of the Research, Naval Hospital Cemetery Historical Documentation, Naval Station Brooklyn, New York

The present study builds upon the research conducted during the three prior studies. Research regarding burials encountered discrepancies in the number of burials and disinterments that took place at the cemetery, as well as missing, incomplete, and contradictory information. Despite these discrepancies, this study succeeded in identifying 517 burials not documented as removed from the Naval Hospital Cemetery during the 1926 disinterment. In addition, it further develops the history of the Naval Hospital Cemetery, examines military burial practices in general, and researches the Navy's legal obligations regarding the cemetery.

A chronicle of the major research findings, and cemetery-related conclusions, of these four studies is presented in Figure S-1 (Chronicle of US Navy Research on the Naval Hospital Cemetery).

S.4 Research Goals and Survey Methods

The research goals of the Navy's most recent effort, listed in order of their presentation in the State of the Research report, are as follows:

- (1) Examine military burial practices and regulations in the 19th and early 20th centuries to establish a procedural context for interments and disinterments at the Naval Hospital Cemetery;
- (2) Research modern federal, state, and local laws relating to cemeteries, cemetery maintenance, and disinterments;
- (3) Establish the historic context for interments and disinterments at the Naval Hospital Cemetery; and
- (4) Identify the number, name, rank/rate, and other information related to burials not documented as being removed and determine, to the greatest degree possible, why some burials were never documented as removed.

Accomplishing the first three research goals entailed conducting extensive documentary research and contacting individuals with expertise in relevant fields. This documentary research examined both primary and secondary sources. Many archives, museums, libraries, and other repositories were visited or contacted during this portion of the research effort.

In order to accomplish the fourth goal, 19th- and early 20th-century documentation regarding deaths at the Naval Hospital, burials and disinterments at the Naval Hospital Cemetery, and reinterments at Cypress Hills National Cemetery were examined. Determination of the number and identity of burials not documented as being removed involved comparing two groups of names:

- Those documented as being buried at the Naval Hospital Cemetery; and
- Those documented as being disinterred from the cemetery in 1926.

This comparison identified 517 burials at the Naval Hospital Cemetery that are not documented as being disinterred. Two main sources identified this information: (1) the Register of Deaths and of Burial Plots, 1831 to 1894; and (2) the revised 1927 Index of Remains Removed from the Naval Hospital Cemetery. A primary source of information regarding burials at the Naval Hospital Cemetery between 1894 and 1910 (when the cemetery was officially closed), such as a register of deaths and burials, was not located. Therefore, information on burials during those years is limited to the list of the disinterred.

Additional sources, including hospital ledgers, grave locators, archival files, correspondence, and death certificates of Navy personnel who died outside the hospital but were buried in the Naval Hospital Cemetery were reviewed to obtain additional information. Comparison of the various resources suggested those that were most reliable and, therefore, most valuable. Based on this comparison, an attempt was made to correct information found in the two sources noted above. This corrected information is presented in Appendices A and B of this report.

Determining why burials were not documented as having been removed involved synthesis of the collected information and theorizing based on the research. Historic documentation of the cemetery is incomplete, and the records that exist were often found to be inconsistent. As research progressed, it became clear that there may never be definitive answers to some outstanding questions. All avenues of inquiry and the subsequent results are documented in this report and, where possible, conclusions have been made.

S.5 History of Military Burial Practice

The events at the Naval Hospital Cemetery during the 19th and early 20th centuries did not occur in isolation, but were directly related to the conflicts facing the US military at large and the practices and procedures in effect regarding graves registration. The 1926 disinterments were influenced by the graves customs, practices, and legislation of the military in general.

The burial practices of the US military have gradually been established, and formalized through legislation, over the past 200 years. Legislation regarding burial practices was generally passed during periods of military conflict, times when the number of military casualties were increasing dramatically. The first concerted effort by the military towards establishing formalized procedures for the treatment of war casualties occurred in 1861, at the beginning of the Civil War. Despite new procedures, a very high percentage of military casualties during the Civil War years were never documented. Military graves registration attained much of its present-day character during the years leading up to and following World War I (1912 to 1924).

S.6 Modern Legal Summary

While the majority of the laws and regulations reviewed during this research are not directly relevant to the Naval Hospital Cemetery, they are related to cultural resource or cemetery maintenance issues. For example, the Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act concerns the protection of Native American graves, while the only possibly Native American interment was disinterred from the Naval Hospital Cemetery and transferred to Cypress Hills National Cemetery in 1926 (US Navy, 1997a). In addition, state and local cultural resource laws are not directly applicable since this is a federal action being directed by the Department of the Navy. The only New York State laws dealing specifically with cemetery maintenance are governed by the New York State Cemetery Board and only concern "cemetery corporations," not-for-profit corporations organized for the disposal or burial of the deceased.

The National Historic Preservation Act, Executive Order No. 11593 – Protection and Enhancement of Cultural Environment, and the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) do apply to the Naval Hospital Cemetery, and it is in accordance with these acts that the Navy has conducted the present study and the three prior studies discussed earlier. The Navy's Real Estate Procedure Manual, 38 USC Sections 2404 and 2405, and 10 USC Section 1488 apply to the removal of remains from discontinued cemeteries located on military reservations. This manual and these laws would only apply to the Naval Hospital Cemetery should action be taken involving the removal of any burials from the cemetery.

S.7 Burials Not Documented as Removed

The Navy's documentary research on the Naval Hospital Cemetery found statements by commanding officers of the Brooklyn Naval Hospital that describe recurring problems at the cemetery, including conflicting accounts of the number of burials; poorly preserved, missing, and vandalized wooden grave markers; grave markers with illegible inscriptions; and undocumented burials. The discrepancy between the number of documented burials and the number of documented disinterments is one of the primary issues discussed in this report. These burials are referred to as burials not documented as removed.

S.7.1 Burial Information

The primary source of information on burials in the cemetery is the Register of Deaths and of Burial Plots, 1831 to 1894 (RD, 1831-1894). This register documents the burial of 1,351 individuals at the Naval Hospital Cemetery during its first 64 years of use. Some were only temporarily buried or held in a vault, and removed prior to 1926. The burial register for the 16-year period from 1894 to 1910 could not be located. The Alphabetical Index of Remains Removed from the US Naval Hospital Cemetery (1927 Index) lists 987 individuals disinterred from the cemetery in 1926 with dates of death spanning from 1831 to 1910 (when the cemetery was closed).

Comparison of these two and other sources mentioned throughout this document revealed that during its approximately eight decades of operation, a minimum of 1,717 burials occurred in the Naval Hospital Cemetery. At least 213 of these burials were removed by friends or family soon after they were buried or their bodies held in a vault. As mentioned above, in 1926, 16 years after the cemetery was officially closed, 987 burials were disinterred. A comparison of the number removed and the 1,504 known burials indicates that at least 517 were not documented as removed.

Table S-1 presents a numerical breakdown of this burial information arranged by date of death. The two time periods in this table are:

- (1) October 20, 1831 (the earliest documented burial) to October 5, 1894 (the last recorded burial in the RD, 1831-1894). Information about burials in the first category was gathered primarily from the RD, 1831-1894; and
- (2) October 6, 1894 to 1910 (when the cemetery closed). Information about later burials was based on dates of death listed in the 1927 Index.

The 366 burials shown in Table S-1 that occurred after 1894 include 159 burials that have no listed date of death in the 1927 Index. Since these names do not appear in the comprehensive 1831 to 1894 burial register, it is assumed that they occurred during the later time period.

The names and dates of death of the 517 burials not documented as removed from the cemetery are listed alphabetically in Table S-2. Appendix A of this report provides an alphabetical listing with the name, rank/rate, and date of death for the known burial population of 1,504 individuals. Appendix B presents this same information chronologically by date of death. Burials that are not documented as removed are indicated in bold typeface. Information about individual burials that has been corrected through a comparison of the various sources is noted in the appendices under "remarks."

S.7.2 Why Are Burials Not Documented as Removed?

The identification of 517 burials not documented as removed from the Naval Hospital Cemetery, and the unknown number that may remain unidentified, prompts the question "why are so many burials not documented as removed?" Answering this question involves synthesis of the collected information and speculation where definitive data are not available.

Documents consulted during the research process contain numerous references to the poor condition of the cemetery and its grave markers and conflicting accounts of how many interments took place. Comparison of primary source materials, such as burial registers and disinterment lists, reveals misspellings, transcription errors, and missing or incomplete records. All these factors contribute to burials not being documented as removed. Equally or even more important are the poor condition

--- No name listed in burial register
 ? Questionable spelling or accuracy

and/or non-existence of grave markers, lack of accurate plot plans, and clerical errors, as further discussed below:

- Missing Grave Markers

The cemetery's grave markers, particularly before the end of the Civil War, were most often wooden headboards and less often iron markers. The researched documents frequently cite decomposition of grave markers as a problem at the Naval Hospital Cemetery, as well as at military cemeteries in general during the 19th century. The poor preservation of headboards clearly led to many burials at the Naval Hospital Cemetery becoming unmarked. The disinterment process appears to have occurred without consideration of these unmarked burials.

- Lack of Accurate Plot Plans

The index to the 1831-1894 register includes a plan number for most, but not all, recorded burials, but no plan map has been found that locates these graves. The 1926 exhumations appear to have been based on a "complete new plan of the ... graves" made in the 1920s in preparation for the disinterment. Such a plan would likely have been drawn from existing cemetery conditions which, as reported even in 1889, did not reflect the total burial population. Since the 1926 disinterment process accounted for only 987 burials, that plan appears not to have considered unmarked graves.

- Clerical Errors

Record-keeping and transcription errors, and the logistical complexity associated with the cemetery's massive exhumation (during which, for over a month, 30 to 40 burials per day were removed), may have resulted in inaccurate disinterment documentation. Even before the exhumations occurred, clerical errors had resulted in confusion over the number and identity of burials. Analysis of the new grave numbers assigned between 1923 and 1924 in preparation for the removal indicated that at least eight were duplicates. It is possible that such clerical errors resulted in some burials being removed without being properly documented.

S.7.3 Examination of Burials Not Documented as Removed Over Time

Examination of the number of burials per year and the number of burials not documented as removed per year between 1831 and 1894, when the most accurate data are available, led to the identification of two general patterns:

- (1) Burials that occurred from late 1831 to 1871, the first 40 years of the cemetery's 80-year operation, were much less likely to be documented as removed than those that occurred later (93 percent of the 517 burials not documented as removed occurred before 1871); and
- (2) There are two time periods when the greatest number of burials occurred that were not documented as removed – during and just after the Mexican War, from 1847 to 1849 (about 56, or 11 percent), and during and just after the Civil War, from 1863 to 1869 (about 178, or 34 percent); these were the two periods in the 19th century when the Naval Hospital and its cemetery were most active.

These patterns indicate that burials not documented as removed were a result of both the age of the burials and the number of burials that took place during a particular year. A notable exception to these trends occurred during 1863 and 1864, when a total of 214 individuals were buried at the Naval Hospital Cemetery. These two years were the most active ones of the 19th century with respect to burials, and yet only 24, or 11 percent, of these burials are not documented as being removed. This is in contrast to the post-Civil War years (from 1866 to 1871) when many fewer burials took place but the total burials not documented as removed were over 90 percent.

S.7.4 Demographics of Burials Not Documented as Removed

An attempt was made to determine the demographic makeup of burials not documented as removed, including information such as military rank/rate and affiliation, country of origin, and race. The research also attempted to identify any Medal of Honor recipients among the burials not documented as removed. These findings are summarized briefly below.

Of the 517 burials not documented as removed, 420 were identified as Sailors (two of them in the Spanish Navy) and 82 were Marines. Four were children or infants, three were civilians (including one blacksmith), and eight lacked affiliations. Not surprisingly, most of the ranked US Sailors were Seamen (146), Ordinary Seamen (80), or Landsmen (77). The 115 remaining American Sailors held numerous different ranks or rates ranging from cook to captain. Marines were mainly listed solely as "Marine" (45), but at least 19 were Privates. The remaining 18 held the rank of Corporal (7), Sergeant (7), Lieutenant (3), and Captain (1).

Country of origin, or place of birth, was found for some of the burials not documented as removed, mainly those listed in hospital patient registers (RP, 1812-1862; RP, 1862-1868; and RP, 1868-1874). Of the approximately 300 names with this information, 175 were from the US and the rest were from countries and regions around the globe.

Some of the documents identify burials with terms such as "Negro," "Colored," and "Mulatto," sometimes including physical descriptions such as "wool" or "wooly" hair and dark or black skin and eyes. Such information was interpreted as referring to burials of African descent. A total of 45 burials that may have been of African descent were identified among the 517 not documented as removed. The most commonly used identifier for these burials was "Negro," with 30 entries. One of the burials identified as "Negro" in the hospital burial register (RD, 1831-1894), is described in another list as having a light complexion, brown hair, and hazel eyes (RP, 1862-1868). Less frequent entries included "Colored" or "Coloured" (five entries), "Black" (three entries), and "Mulatto" (four entries). The terms "ne" (possibly an abbreviation for "Negro") and "Col'd" and "Col" (assumed to be abbreviations for "Colored"), were entered for one burial each. Given the incomplete records and the subjective nature of the information, these numbers may not represent the entire population of burials of African descent among the 517 not documented as removed.

No Medal of Honor recipients were identified among the burials not documented as removed, although two of those disinterred from the Naval Hospital Cemetery in 1926 did receive this medal, and one of them was a two-time honoree.

S.7.5 Are Burials Still Present at the Naval Hospital Cemetery?

The number of burials not documented as removed raises a related question: are burials still present at the Naval Hospital Cemetery? Research identified several factors that would impact the present state of burials not documented as removed:

- The natural deterioration of human bone over time;
- The damp, poorly drained condition of the cemetery during the 19th century;
- The undocumented removal of burials; and
- Ground disturbances over time.

Remaining burials would likely be disturbed and poorly preserved. Given the lack of an accurate plot plan and the poor preservation, it is unlikely that the identity of any remaining individual burials could be determined.

The limited excavations that took place during the ground-proofing conducted in association with the Navy's 1997 GPR evaluation both support and contradict this conclusion. Four of the five excavated trenches yielded fragments of highly deteriorated coffin wood (in one instance, only a staining in the soil) and fragmentary, poorly preserved human bone. These pieces of human bone and coffin wood attest to both poor preservation and subsequent ground disturbance. However, a single, possibly intact skeleton was also discovered during these limited excavations. This burial was encountered at a depth of 15 to 19 inches (38 to 48 centimeters) below the ground surface without any associated coffin wood. Since this burial was located in the western portion of the cemetery, it is possible that the burial's higher elevation contributed to its preservation.

1 INTRODUCTION

As directed by the Base Closure and Realignment Act (BRAC), the Navy has closed and is in the process of disposing the Naval Station (NAVSTA) Brooklyn, located in Kings County (borough of Brooklyn) in New York City (Figure 1-1, Site Location). During the disposal process, local government representatives and community members voiced concern that the site's Naval Hospital Cemetery might still contain the remains of Sailors and Marines. The Naval Hospital Cemetery was closed in 1910, and all remains reportedly reinterred in 1926 to Cypress Hills National Cemetery, also in Brooklyn (Blackwood, 1926a). The local African-American community and others also raised the concern that the cemetery may have been an African burial ground. In an effort to address these concerns, the Navy commissioned a series of studies to determine whether human remains might still be located in the cemetery and, if so, to research the identity of any possibly remaining burials and determine why they were not documented as being disinterred in 1926. This report presents the results of this research.

1.1 Project Site

NAVSTA Brooklyn covers approximately 28.8 government-owned acres (11.7 hectares) and is the location of the Naval Hospital that was decommissioned in 1948 (Figure 1-2, NAVSTA Brooklyn). Constructed along the crescent-shaped Wallabout Bay, the site, which originally consisted of tidal flats, salt marshes, shallows, farmland, and hills, has been extensively drained, filled, and paved. Most of the highly-urban NAVSTA Brooklyn site has been under Navy control since 1824, when the Naval Hospital site, including the area of the cemetery, was acquired. The present surrounding neighborhood is largely industrial with some residential areas and waterfront uses along nearby East River.

The Naval Hospital Cemetery, which was in use from 1831 to 1910, lies in a roughly 1.7-acre (0.7-hectare) cleared, grassy area in the eastern portion of the NAVSTA Brooklyn site. West of the cemetery are two NYC-landmarked structures, the Naval Hospital and the Surgeon's House, that have been determined individually eligible for inclusion on the National Register of Historic Places. The NAVSTA Brooklyn site also encompasses two National Register-eligible historic districts: the US Naval Hospital Historic District and the Brooklyn Navy Yard Historic District. The cemetery has been determined to be a contributing resource to the US Naval Hospital Historic District (Kuhn, 1998).

1.2 Project History

In accordance with the 1988 BRAC, NAVSTA Brooklyn was declared excess property. Disposal procedures were initiated, and the command was relocated to NAVSTA New York on Staten Island. In compliance with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), a Draft Environmental Impact Statement (DEIS) was prepared to examine the impacts of the disposal and reuse of the property.

During the disposal process, the Navy was made aware of community and civic concerns regarding the possibility of burials remaining in the Naval Hospital Cemetery. Also, in 1991 long-standing beliefs that an African burial ground existed in Manhattan were substantiated through archaeological research; this incident, along with concerns of the local African-American community and others that any remains at the Naval Hospital Cemetery might be of African descent, prompted questions regarding the racial makeup of the buried population.

The Navy has conducted three cultural resource evaluations prior to the present study that addressed aspects of the cemetery. The first of these provided an initial historic background and concluded that the cemetery was likely disturbed and had a low archaeological sensitivity. The second determined that although there was no African burial ground present on the site, further studies should be performed to address issues such as discrepancies in burial records. These studies ultimately led to a third evaluation, the testing of ground-penetrating radar (GPR) at the Naval Hospital Cemetery. This GPR test, conducted in July 1997, resulted in the discovery of one possibly intact burial.

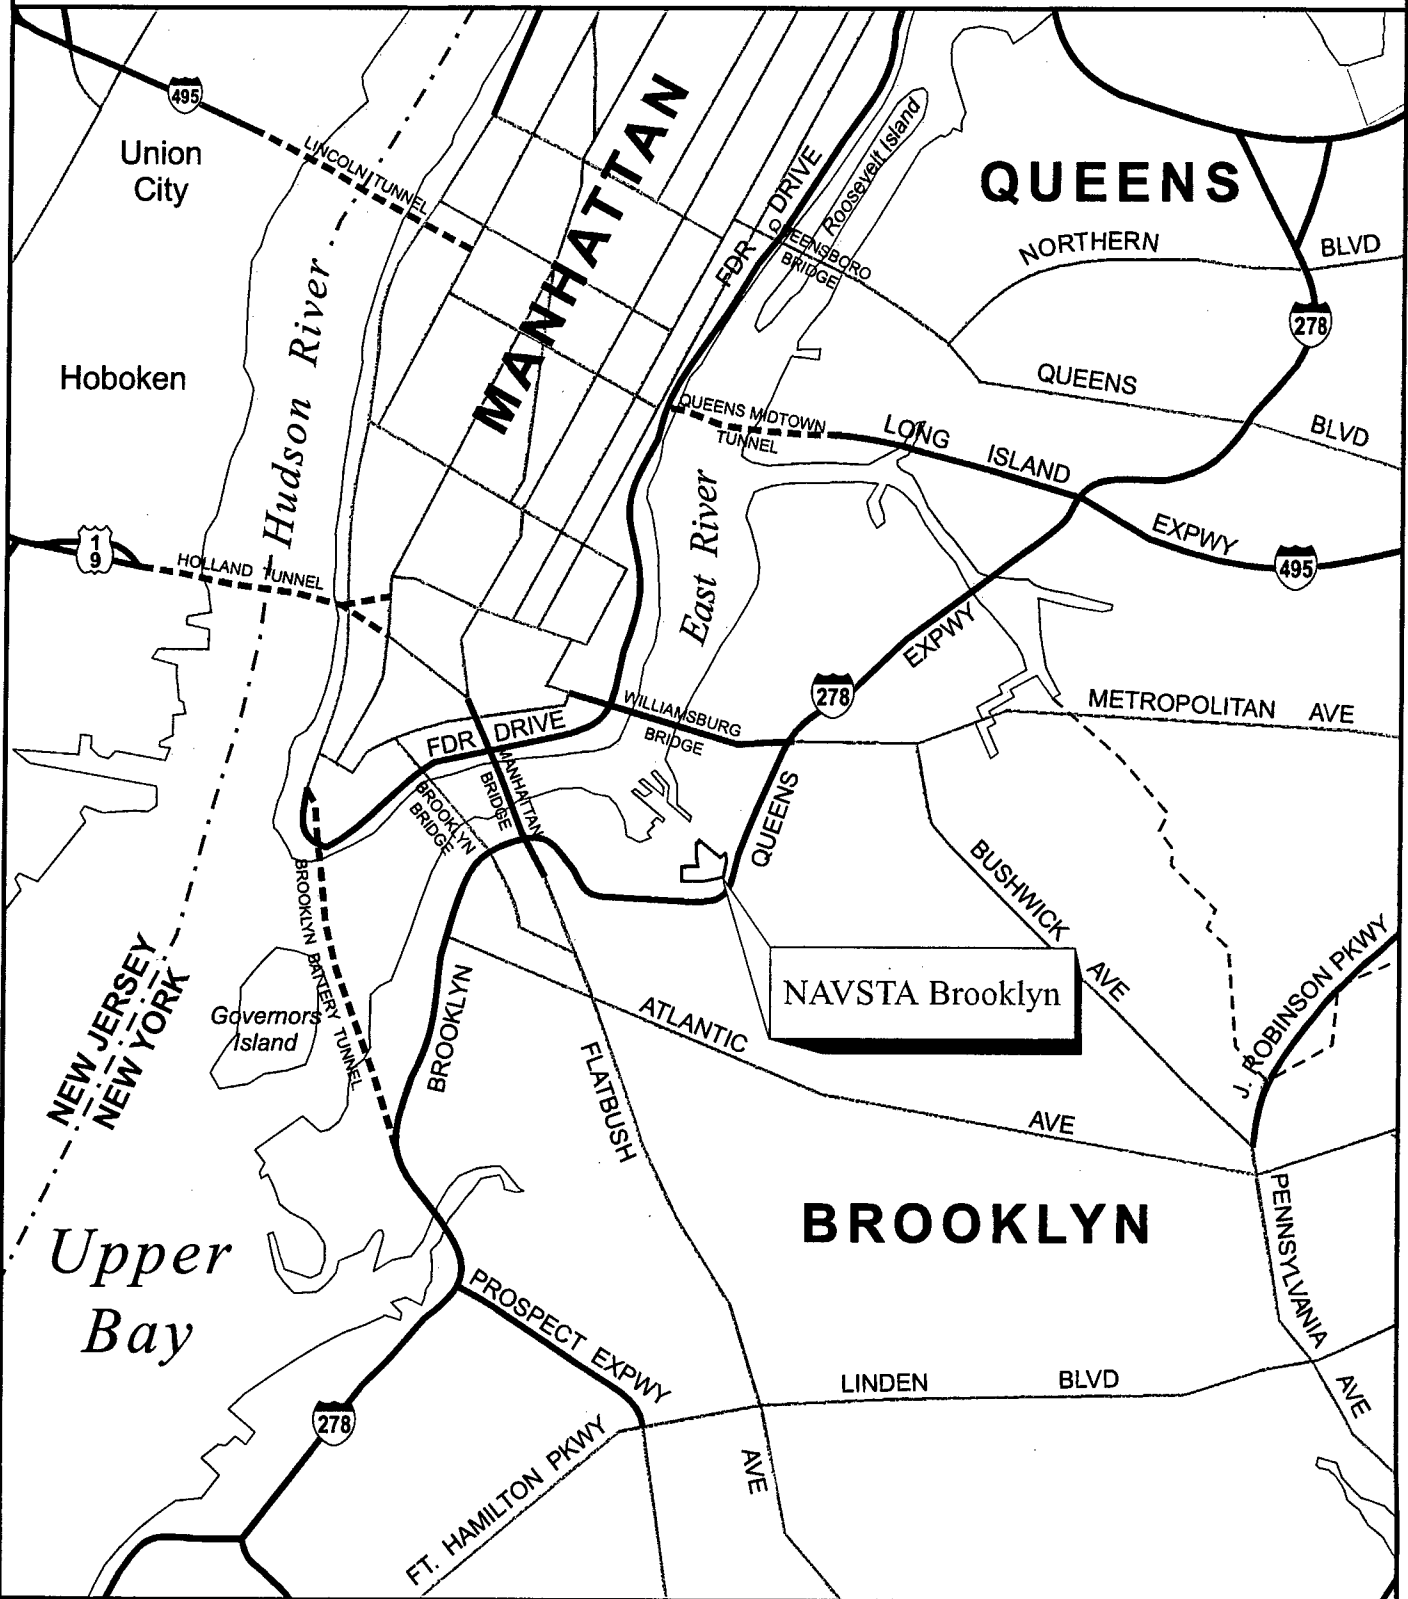

Subsequently, in order to more fully understand the nature and magnitude of the issues surrounding the cemetery, the Navy undertook this study, State of the Research, Naval Hospital Cemetery, NAVSTA Brooklyn Historical Documentation. The study's primary goal was to determine, if possible, the number, name, rank/rate, and other information about any burials at the cemetery that were not documented as being removed. This research goal, and others addressed in this document, are described below.

1.3 Research Goals and Methods

The research goals of this State of the Research report, listed in order of their presentation in the following chapters, are as follows:

- (1) Examine military burial practices and regulations in the 19th and early 20th centuries to establish a procedural context for interments and disinterments at the Naval Hospital Cemetery (Chapter 3);
- (2) Research modern federal, state, and local law relating to cemeteries, cemetery maintenance, and disinterments (Chapter 4);

- (3) Establish the historic context for interments and disinterments at the Naval Hospital Cemetery (Chapter 5); and
- (4) Determine the number, name, rank/rate, and other information related to burials not documented as being removed and, if possible, determine why some burials were never documented as removed (Chapter 6).

Accomplishing the first three research goals listed above entailed conducting extensive documentary research and contacting individuals with expertise in relevant fields. This research involved examination of both primary and secondary sources. Many museums, libraries, and other repositories were visited or contacted for this portion of the research effort.

In order to accomplish the fourth goal, existing 19th- and early 20th-century documentation regarding deaths at the Naval Hospital, burials and disinterments at the Naval Hospital Cemetery, and reinterments at Cypress Hills National Cemetery were examined. Determining the number and identity of burials not documented as being removed involved comparing two groups of names:

- Those who were buried at the Naval Hospital Cemetery and
- Those who were disinterred from the cemetery in 1926.

This comparison identified 517 burials at the Naval Hospital Cemetery not documented as being disinterred. Two main sources were used in this identification: (1) the Register of Deaths and of Burial Plots, 1831 to 1894; and (2) the revised 1927 Index of Remains Removed from the Naval Hospital Cemetery. A primary source of information about burials at the Naval Hospital Cemetery between 1894 and 1910 (when the cemetery was officially closed), such as a register of deaths and burials, was not located. Therefore, the only information about burials during those years comes from the list of the disinterred.

Additional sources, including hospital ledgers, grave locators, archival files, correspondence, and death certificates, were also researched for additional information and to verify the accuracy of the information in the two sources cited above. Comparison of the many resources suggested those that were most reliable and, therefore, most valuable. Based on this comparison of sources, an attempt was made to correct information originally presented in the two sources noted above.

Determining why burials were not documented as being removed involved synthesis of the collected information and theorizing based on the research. Full historic documentation on the cemetery is not available, and the available historic records were often found to be incomplete or inconsistent. As research for this study progressed, it became apparent that there may never be definitive answers to some outstanding questions. All avenues of inquiry and subsequent results are documented in this report, and, where possible, conclusions have been made. The previous research, the research methods used in this study, and the problems encountered, are detailed in Chapter 2; the state of the research is documented in Chapters 3 through 6.

2 RESEARCH ON THE NAVAL HOSPITAL CEMETERY

The present research effort evolved from three prior Naval Hospital Cemetery-related Navy studies. This chapter offers an overview of these earlier studies to provide a background for the current study. This chapter also describes the current research efforts, including documents reviewed, repositories consulted, and research problems encountered. A description of the appendices to this report is also provided in this chapter.

2.1 Prior Research at NAVSTA Brooklyn

Prior to this State of the Research report, the Navy commissioned three cultural resource evaluations at the NAVSTA Brooklyn site:

- Cultural Resources Survey for Base Closure and Realignment, Redevelopment and Reuse of Excess Property at Naval Station New York (US Navy, 1994), a cultural resource survey of the NAVSTA Brooklyn site;
- Archaeological Evaluation (Stage 1A Documentary Study) Former Naval Station (NAVSTA) New York Navy Yard Annex Site (US Navy, 1997a), a documentary survey that focused more specifically on the potential archaeological sensitivity of the Naval Hospital and cemetery; and
- Ground-Penetrating Radar Evaluation, Navy-Retained Section (former) Brooklyn Navy Yard (US Navy, 1997b), an evaluation of the usefulness of GPR at identifying intact human remains in the cemetery.

These research efforts are summarized below to provide a chronologically ordered background to the current understanding of the issues surrounding the cemetery.

2.1.1 Cultural Resources Survey (US Navy, 1994)

Conducted as a follow-up to the Cultural Resources Appendix of the Environmental Assessment for Base Closure and Realignment of Naval Station New York at Brooklyn (US Navy, 1990), the 1994 Cultural Resources Survey provided preliminary consideration of the base's cultural resources. The survey, Cultural Resources Survey for Base Closure and Realignment, Redevelopment and Reuse of Excess Property at Naval Station New York (US Navy, 1994), included background research, a walkover inspection, a site disturbance assessment, and an evaluation of the site's cultural resource sensitivity. The results of that survey are summarized below.

Background Research

Background research for the cultural resources survey was based on a review of files at the New York State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO), the New York State Museum Historical and Anthropological Surveys (NYSM), the New York City Landmarks Preservation Commission (Landmarks), and on the cultural resource surveys of nearby projects. In summary:

- Prehistoric archaeological sites: While the SHPO indicated that no prehistoric archaeological sites were documented within the project area, NYSM files indicated that four prehistoric sites, first identified by amateur archaeologists, have been identified in the vicinity of the project area. Based on (1) the terrain of the project area, which is similar to terrain in the general vicinity where recorded archaeological sites were found; and (2) the physiographic characteristics of the location, which suggest a high probability of prehistoric occupation or use, the NYSM ranked the former Brooklyn Navy Yard as exhibiting a high probability of producing prehistoric archaeological data.
- Historic archaeological sites: The SHPO file review indicated that six historic period sites have been identified in the vicinity of the project area. Four are in Brooklyn, three in the area of the Brooklyn and Manhattan Bridges (a 19th-century warehouse site, an 18th-century tavern foundation, and 17th-century dock remains) and one on Dean Street approximately 1.2 mi (2 km) southwest of NAVSTA Brooklyn (six excavated 19th-century house lots); one is in Queens (the remains of a historic house); and the sixth historic site is in Manhattan (an early 19th-century suburb).

Four locations in the western portion of the former Navy Yard and adjacent to Hudson Avenue were found to have a potential for prehistoric and historic resources (Geismar and Oberson, 1993), these related to Native American occupation; burial of Revolutionary War prisoners on the western shore of Wallabout Bay; interment of remains of Revolutionary War prisoners at the Monument Lot located west of the Navy Yard; and intact portions of an 1890s dry dock. In addition, a historic railroad car transfer bridge in the former Navy Yard was recommended as being eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places.

Areas of Archaeological Potential

Based on background research and a surface reconnaissance, areas of high, moderate, and low archaeological sensitivity were identified within the NAVSTA Brooklyn site in the 1994 Cultural Resources Survey. No subsurface testing occurred during the 1994 study.

The Naval Hospital Cemetery was ranked as having a low sensitivity because it was thought that major landscape modifications had occurred in this area over time. During the late 1930s and possibly into the early 1940s, the Navy, believing that all burials had been removed in 1926, constructed a recreational field in the northern portion of the cemetery. By 1944, significant additional construction had occurred, including the installation of gutters, catch basins, underground oil tanks, and tile drains. In addition, a tennis court was built in the southern portion of the cemetery and a paved road was constructed along the northern edge. The 1994 survey concluded that the cemetery had been significantly disturbed through several grading episodes from the 1930s through 1979, and the potential for archaeological resources, including burials, at the site was low (US Navy, 1994).

In 1994, the SHPO reviewed the Cultural Resources Survey report and did not concur with the findings regarding archaeological sensitivity. At that time, the SHPO reserved recommendations on the need for further archaeological investigation until future ground-disturbing activities were proposed.

2.1.2 Archaeological Evaluation (Stage 1A Documentary Study) (US Navy, 1997a)

In 1996, public meetings were held by the City of New York to determine the future use of NAVSTA Brooklyn. At that time, concerns were raised by local citizens about the potential presence of an African burial ground similar to the one located in Manhattan in 1991. In response to these concerns, the Navy commissioned additional documentary research in order to determine the archaeological potential of the Hospital Annex site. This included the potential for military graves to remain in the cemetery despite the removal of burials in 1926 and the potential for the site to contain an African burial ground. The results of the research were documented in the 1997 report: Archaeological Evaluation (Stage 1A Documentary Study) Former Naval Station (NAVSTA) New York Navy Yard Annex Site (US Navy, 1997a), and are summarized below.

Background Research

Primary and secondary sources were used in the preparation of the Archaeological Evaluation. Among the former were administrative records of the US Navy, with particular attention paid to NAVSTA Brooklyn, and historic maps and documents in various National Archives facilities. Secondary sources included local histories and periodicals. Individuals associated with the Naval Department Museum, the Naval Bureau of Medicine and Surgery (BUMED), and the Brooklyn Navy Yard Development Corporation (BNYDC) were also contacted.

Areas of Archaeological Potential

Based on information from newly-located primary sources, the Archaeological Evaluation presented a revised archaeological sensitivity assessment of NAVSTA Brooklyn. This reevaluation concluded that several areas previously determined to have low to moderate sensitivity were areas of low sensitivity, and that the hospital and cemetery site were highly sensitive (US Navy, 1997a).

Research undertaken for the 1997 evaluation determined that the Naval Hospital Cemetery was mainly the resting place of Sailors and Marines, and some members of their families, who died in the hospital between 1831 and 1910. It also revealed, through a more detailed investigation of a sample of burials, that Naval personnel who died between 1834 and 1862 were predominantly white, with roughly ten percent identified as being of African descent. No evidence was found to substantiate the claim that an early African burial ground existed on the Naval Hospital site, nor of any burial ground predating the one associated with the Naval Hospital.

Although military records and a 1926 contractor's report (Blackwood, 1926a) indicated that all burials were removed from the Naval Hospital Cemetery and reinterred in Cypress Hills National Cemetery, the documentary record suggested otherwise. In addition, despite ground disturbance of the cemetery over time, it appeared that at least fragmentary human remains might survive in the cemetery.

The 1997 research concluded by recommending GPR testing as an initial step in determining if any undisturbed burials remained at the cemetery. These tests would identify ground disturbances that archaeologically-monitored, machine-assisted scraping, and/or hand excavation could then investigate.

In early 1997, the New York SHPO and the City of New York Landmarks Preservation Commission approved the Archaeological Evaluation report and concurred with the recommendation that GPR testing be conducted at the cemetery.

2.1.3 Ground-Penetrating Radar Evaluation (US Navy, 1997b)

In July 1997, a field evaluation was conducted at the cemetery to determine if GPR technology was suitable to identify potentially intact human remains. GPR is a non-invasive method of gathering subsurface information, such as soil disturbances caused by excavation of burial shafts, by using radar technology. The results of this field testing effort were presented in: Ground-Penetrating

Radar Evaluation, Navy-Retained Section (former) Brooklyn Navy Yard (US Navy, 1997b), and are summarized below.

Field Testing

During the 1997 field testing, the GPR system was passed over four linear paths (two oriented north-south and two oriented east-west) that extended across the hypothesized extent of the cemetery. Examination of the GPR readings led to the identification of five areas with subsurface anomalies. To investigate these anomalous areas, five trenches were excavated in very compact soil with a small backhoe. Excavation of one of these trenches led to the discovery of a possibly intact human skeleton buried at a shallow depth. Filled shaft features, small quantities of fragmentary human bone, and evidence of decayed coffins were recovered in the four remaining trenches.

In July 1997, an end-of-fieldwork memorandum (US Navy, 1997b) concluded that although the ground proofing procedures proved that GPR is capable of locating possibly intact skeletons and filled shaft features, it cannot necessarily distinguish between the two. Ground proofing also established that burials are likely to be located relatively close to the ground surface.

Based on the GPR evaluation and the results of prior documentary research, the Navy determined that the Naval Hospital Cemetery is eligible for listing in the National Register as a contributing component to the former Brooklyn Navy Yard Historic District. In 1998, the New York SHPO concurred with the Navy's determination (Kuhn, January 7, 1998).

Future Actions

As a result of the GPR tests, it was clear that the documentary record concerning interments at the cemetery needed to be better understood in order to manage this resource. The Navy then initiated the present research that included development of a historic context on military burial practices of the late 19th and early 20th centuries, as well as information on relevant legislation. It also provided details on previously undocumented burials.

2.2 Current Research on the Naval Hospital Cemetery

This State of the Research Report involved the collection and analysis of a great number of primary sources collected from a variety of repositories. Given the importance of these materials in documenting burials and disinterments at the Naval Hospital Cemetery, they are listed and described below. In addition, the following subchapters present the repositories consulted during this effort, the appendices that accompany this document, and research problems encountered.

2.2.1 Research Documents

Documents reviewed for this study included several indexes and registers of deaths and burials, hospital ledgers of patients, grave locators, correspondence, death certificates, and other primary historic resources. Two documents provided relatively reliable information on the number and identity of burials at the Naval Hospital Cemetery.

- Register of Deaths and of Burial Plots, 1831 to 1894 (RD, 1831-1894):

This register is a hand-written copy¹ of a Naval Hospital ledger recording approximately 1,400 individuals who were buried at the Naval Hospital Cemetery between October 20, 1831 and October 5, 1894. A total of 213 of these individuals are described in this register as having been removed by family or friends prior to the 1910 cemetery closing.² Since this document is a copy, it may contain transcription errors. A comparable list for those buried in the cemetery from October 6, 1894 through 1910, when the cemetery was closed, was not located.

- Alphabetical Index of Remains Removed from the US Naval Hospital Cemetery 1926, Revised and Corrected to January 14, 1927 (1927 Index):

This index lists those removed from the burial ground between August 3 and September 3, 1926.³ While this index contains many errors and was initially found to be incomplete,⁴ the complete version provided valuable information. The index identifies 935 partially and fully named burials and 52 unknown burials for a total of 987 individuals removed from the cemetery in 1926. An attempt has been made through this research to revise any information identified as incorrect ; this corrected information is presented in Appendix A (see Subsection 2.2.3).

¹Although this register covers a period of 63 years, the handwriting indicates that it was written by at least two individuals who presumably copied earlier documents.

²Seven of these have graves in Cypress Hills National Cemetery.

³Since these dates are given in Captain Norman J. Blackwood's 1926 report on the removal of burials (see US Navy, 1997a:83), they are used here. However, other documents offer slightly different dates, and Blackwood himself, in a letter accompanying the revised index in 1927, noted that the removals ended on September 11 (Blackwood, January 14, 1927).

⁴Versions of this index presented in earlier reports (US Navy, 1994: Appendix A-3; US Navy, 1997a: Appendix A) were missing the two pages that list most surnames beginning with W and all those beginning with Y and Z. This explains the discrepancy between the 987 burials purportedly on the 1927 Index and the 907 (or 911) burials counted on the list (see US Navy, 1997a:25). The missing pages were subsequently located at the National Archives in Washington and this information is included in the appendices to this State of the Research report.

Combined, these two resources account for 1,503 individual burials at the Naval Hospital Cemetery, some of them unnamed or "unknown." One additional named burial was found in the 1926 report on the exhumations by the hospital commander, Captain Norman J. Blackwood (Blackwood, 1926a), this was George Brennan, a Marine Sergeant who died in 1908. Therefore, the total number of burials documented at the Naval Hospital Cemetery through this research effort is 1,504; this represents 517 more than were listed in the 1927 Index as having been removed in 1926.

In addition to the 1831 to 1894 register of deaths and burials (RD, 1831-1894) and the disinterment list (1927 Index), information regarding individual burials came from grave locators at various repositories, including the Long Island National Cemetery in Farmingdale, the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) in Washington, and Cypress Hills National Cemetery. An undated grave locator at the Long Island National Cemetery headquarters contained corrected names as well as section and grave numbers in Cypress Hills National Cemetery (Record of Interments in the National Cemetery at Cypress Hills, 1932?). Since the section and grave numbers in this locator reflect the current locations, and the list coincides with or post-dates a 1931-1932 relocation of burials at Cypress Hills, it has been assigned a 1932? date. Another list from the NARA, Washington, provided grave numbers and rows for the Naval Hospital Cemetery as prepared for the 1926 disinterment (Names etc. of Remains from Naval Hospital Cemetery, Brooklyn, NY, 1926).

Some of the most reliable information regarding names and personal data were found in hospital ledgers. One such ledger, Register of Hospital Patients Naval Hospital New York, 1862-1868, records the names of the deceased, their age, cause and date of death, and often, but not always, a physical description and place of birth. This ledger was kept from 1862 to 1868 but contains only scattered information after 1866. Similar information from an 1812-1862 hospital register was used in the 1997 Archaeological Evaluation to determine the makeup of the buried population between 1834 and 1862 (US Navy, 1997a: Appendix C). Unfortunately, the NARA misplaced this latter ledger for much of 1998, making it unavailable during this research effort.

Selected primary sources are listed in Table 2-1 and are arranged chronologically within categories. Also provided are document dates, abbreviations used in the text of this report, brief descriptions, and an evaluation of the source as a research tool. Additional sources not listed here are cited in the text and listed in Chapter 8.

2.2.2 Repositories Consulted

A number of federal, state, city, and private institutions were contacted, as were individuals with expertise in relevant fields. The Internet was another information resource through related websites and public assistance obtained from applicable newsgroups.

Internet websites helpful to this research included those maintained by the Department of Veterans Affairs, the Department of Mortuary Affairs, and the National Cemetery System. Requests for assistance from the academic and professional community were solicited through postings to three newsgroups, the American Cultural Resources Association (ACRA-L), the National Council of Public Historians (NCPH-L), and the Society of Architectural Historians (SAH-L). The lists of references provided in Chapter 8 present more detailed information regarding relevant Internet resources. Appendix C provides a list of specialists and agency contacts who were directly contacted during the course of this research.

2.2.3 Description of Appendices

Appendix A, Alphabetical List of Burials at Naval Hospital Cemetery, contains a list of the 1,504 burials known to have occurred at the Naval Hospital Cemetery. This total is comprised of: (1) the list of 987 disinterred burials from the 1927 Index; (2) 516 names from the RD, 1831-1894 that were not included in the 1927 Index; and (3) one additional burial identified in Captain Blackwood's 1926 report on the disinterments (Blackwood, 1926a). This appendix, therefore, represents the entire list of documented burials in the Naval Hospital Cemetery from 1831 to 1910, and does not include those known to have been removed by friends or family before 1926. The burials not documented as removed during the 1926 disinterment are shown in bold type. Any information that was corrected during this research effort is noted in Appendix A under "remarks."

The same information is presented chronologically by date of death in Appendix B, Chronological List of Burials at Naval Hospital Cemetery. Appendix B is helpful when the name of a burial might have been misspelled but the date of death is known.

Appendix C presents a list of specialists and agency representatives who were contacted during this research.

2.2.4 Research Problems

Comparison of the many resources researched for this report identified inconsistencies and omissions in several documents. As stated above, 516 burials were identified in the RD, 1831 - 1894 register that were not included in the 1927 Index. In addition to identifying the additional burials, RD, 1831-1894 identified those who were initially buried in the cemetery but were subsequently removed by friends or relatives before the 1910 cemetery closing. However, at least seven individuals listed among the 213 removed by friends or family from the Naval Hospital Cemetery are also listed on the 1927 Index with graves in Cypress Hills. This particular contradiction, which highlights the problems encountered throughout this research effort, came to light when Cypress Hills grave numbers, gleaned from several sources, were added to the 1927 Index, and field-checked at Cypress Hills.

Comparison of the various resources also revealed that a great number of the names and dates of death on the 1927 Index appear to be misspelled or incorrect. One of the more extreme examples of a conflicting date was that of Arthur Samuels, a "negro" [sic] who died on August 21, 1831 according to the index but who actually died on August 21, 1861 based on at least two other sources, among them RP, 1812-1862.⁵ Since the later date appears to be the correct date of death, the incorrect date in the 1927 Index may have been merely a typographical error. In general, burial information from RD, 1831-1894 was found to be more reliable than the 1927 Index.

Duplicate grave numbers also abound. One involves Joseph Barrahill, a Seaman who died on October 14, 1880. According to several reliable sources, Barrahill was actually Joseph Barnhill – a simple error. However, as late as 1932, Barrahill and Barnhill both had numbered graves in Cypress ⁵This contradiction was first documented during earlier research (US Navy, 1997a: 75) and verified during this study.

Hills National Cemetery. One is now marked with the stone of Theodore Carlsson, who shares the Barnhill grave number. It seems likely that, in this case, both the misspelling and the duplication were realized and corrected in the graveyard after the 1927 Index was produced. At least three other graves are duplications that remain uncorrected (i.e., John Cullen, William Lathrop, and William Clough) (Appendix A).

Despite intensive research, a number of issues remain unresolved, such as how the graves were arranged in the Naval Hospital Cemetery prior to the removal of burials and how many people were ultimately buried at the cemetery. As to why so many burials were not documented as being removed, possible reasons are identified in Chapter 6; several relate directly to the research problems described above.

Unfortunately, as noted previously, no burial register was found for interments between 1894 and 1910, the last 16 years the cemetery was active. Therefore, the only information on burials during those years comes from the 1927 Index of the disinterred. As presented in Chapter 6, analysis of the 1927 Index indicates that 366 listed burials had dates of death between 1894 and 1910. This research limitation suggests that the number of burials during those years may actually be higher, and, therefore, the number of those not documented as being removed may also be greater.

3 HISTORY OF MILITARY BURIAL PRACTICE

The burial of war casualties and the establishment and maintenance of cemeteries has been an important responsibility of the US military for over 200 years. Over time, regulations were gradually developed based on battle experiences, public sentiment, and advances in the theory and practice of graves registration. The earliest examples of graves registration occurred during the period of western expansion at frontier outposts during the late 18th century. The registration of graves during the Mexican, Civil, and Spanish-American Wars was a great challenge to the officers, soldiers, and Quartermasters who assumed this task. By World War I the Office of the Quartermaster General had assumed most of its present-day responsibilities regarding graves registration in the form of the Graves Registration Service (the Service) of the Cemeterial Division.

3.1 Frontier Posts – Late 18th to 19th Centuries

Early examples of US military burial practices occurred during the late 18th to 19th centuries when concentrations of soldiers were posted in reservations along the western frontier. Casualties at these posts were handled without any formal burial regulations, and without any specific appropriations to cover the costs of burials.

The responsibility for constructing cemetery plots, burying the dead, and keeping records of interments fell upon the Quartermaster officer of each post, whose primary responsibilities concerned the general care and maintenance of the post. The dead were buried within the confines of each post reservation and their graves marked with an appropriately-labeled headboard. A fairly uniform system of recording burials was in place, especially at larger posts, with their greater number of deaths. This system included the notation of assigned grave numbers in plots and name lists corresponding to those inscribed on headboards.

However, the mortuary process followed at these frontier posts did not prepare the military for the more complex problems encountered during the Mexican War.

3.2 The Mexican War – 1846 to 1847

During the war with Mexico, the US military was confronted for the first time with the complicated logistical problems of recovering, identifying, and burying the dead on foreign soil while engaged in battle. On several occasions, such as General Taylor's action in Buena Vista, record-keeping problems resulted in entire burial sites being lost. In this case the dead had been collected from the battlefield and buried in the immediate area, but the location of this cemetery was not noted on the map that accompanied the report of operations. A similar experience occurred during the campaign of General Winfield Scott. When his troops marched from Vera Cruz to Mexico City, relatively few of the hundreds who died and were buried along the way were ever relocated and none were identified.

One notable precedent in mortuary affairs was made during this war. In 1850 Congress established the Mexico City Cemetery to inter the American casualties of battles which took place in and around that city. This permanent American military cemetery was established over ten years before the National Cemetery System was signed into legislation.

3.3 The American Civil War – 1861 to 1865

Legislation that established the foundation of today's Graves Registration office was laid down at the beginning of the Civil War. On September 11, 1861, the War Department issued General Order No. 75, which required keeping an accurate account and permanent record of soldiers who died at military hospitals (Risch, 1962). This order directed the Quartermaster General to place blank books and forms for record keeping at all general and post hospitals. The commander of each post or company was to transmit a copy of these records to the Adjunct-General in Washington. The burial of the dead was the command responsibility of tactical officers, while the Quartermaster General took on a staff function in connection with the operation. Absent from this 1861 order was any provision for acquiring burial lands, which was not to happen until July 17, 1862, with the creation of national cemeteries.

In April 1862, a War Department order extended this burial and record-keeping program to the battlefield. Commanding generals were required to inter the dead in suitable spots near the site of action. This order further required that headboards would bear grave numbers and, "when practicable," the name of the buried person (Risch, 1962). A register of each burial ground was to be maintained, documenting the information contained on each headboard (US War Department, 1878).

Despite the concern expressed by these acts for proper care of the deceased, mortuary record-keeping problems were rampant during the Civil War. Over 40 percent of those who died were never identified, although this percentage may be even higher (Risch, 1962). According to a Quartermaster Corps Historian, three factors contributed to the high percentage of unidentified remains during this conflict (Risch, 1962):

- The dead were generally buried by details of prisoners-of-war, or similarly unwilling men who cared little about the task at hand;
- The high degree of illiteracy among these details led to poor record-keeping and high degrees of error; and

- As the armies moved onward, the temporary wooden markers used to mark each burial location were not maintained and soon began to deteriorate.

As a response to the possibility that they, too, could become an unidentified casualty of war, soldiers took informal measures to assist burial squads. Many soldiers began carrying wooden markers or medallions with their name and other information, or pinned pieces of paper containing this information to their uniform (Anders, 1988).

On only one occasion during the Civil War was a specially-trained and carefully-supervised group used to recover the fallen after a battle. After the Battle of Fort Stevens outside of Washington DC in the summer 1864, the newly-appointed head of the Quartermaster Cemeterial Division, Captain James M. Moore, directed his personnel to systematically recover the remains and personal effects of all the deceased. This highly-successful effort led to the identification of all the human remains of the battle (Anders, 1988); however, this incident was isolated, and over the five years following the end of the war the Cemeterial Division disinterred the remains of nearly 300,000 war dead and buried them in 73 newly created national cemeteries and elsewhere.

In 1867 Congress made a provision for a program of continuing care and maintenance of national cemeteries. As part of this act Congress directed the Secretary to provide each grave with a stone marker. A $1 million appropriation was made for care and maintenance and, over the next few years, the Secretary began replacing the rapidly decaying wooden headboards with durable stone markers (Risch, 1962). It is likely that this act was applied more to national battlefield cemeteries than to hospital cemeteries (Hubbard, June 15, 1998).

3.4 Spanish-American War – 1898

At the turn of the century, fighting with the Spanish in Cuba and the Philippines caused the application of new advances in the theory and practice of graves registration. It was determined that the most important factor governing the successful identification of remains was the time span between death, original burial, and the registration of the grave. Expediting this process as much as possible greatly improved the likelihood of the remains being identified. The hot and humid climate of Cuba, and the fact that many of the 1,700 deceased died of tropical diseases, placed additional pressure on the units delegated to this task. The turn of the century also marked a period of increased experimentation with embalming by military morticians. In a few notable cases, embalming led to the identification of disinterred remains months after original burial (Johnson, 1982; US Department of the Army, 1917).

Later, Chaplain Charles C. Pierce, who established the Quartermaster's Office of Identification in the Philippines, outlined some of the principles and techniques needed to give the care of war dead a more scientific basis. He recommended inclusion of an identity disc (a precursor to "dog tags") in the combat field kit, and the establishment of central collection points or agencies where all pertinent mortuary records could be gathered, filed, checked, traced, and corrected (Anders, 1988).

3.5 World War I – 1914 to 1918

In 1912 the Army's Quartermaster Department was reorganized and became the Quartermaster Corps, a fully militarized branch of the service. Specialized troops took over most of the functions previously performed by civilians or detachments from the line. At the beginning of the United States' entry into World War I, trained Quartermaster units had been organized for the care for the dead.

New regulations adopted in 1913 affirmed the Army's commitment toward positive identification and proper burial of the dead (although the Navy currently has its own morticians and handles its own graves registration duties, the Army has traditionally been the Executive Agent for all mortuary affairs during times of conflict [HMC Gorham, June 29, 1998]). New techniques regarding the identification of the dead and the creation of detailed maps and sketches showing exact locations of all temporary grave sites were to be filed at the time of initial burial. Collecting this information was designed to ease the process of disinterment at a later date. By 1917 the War Department moved a step further, amending Army Regulations so that all combat soldiers would be required to wear dog tags in the field.

At the conclusion of the war there were well over 2,000 military cemeteries scattered across Europe under the control of the Graves Registration Service. Over the next several years the Service returned over 46,000 bodies to the US with the remainder, approximately 30,000, being interred in permanent national cemeteries located in Europe. The percentage of unidentified remains was less than three bodies for every hundred recovered (Risch, 1962).

3.6 Establishment of the Graves Registration Service – 1924

Army Regulation No. 30-1805, dated February 1, 1924, stated that the Quartermaster General would organize a Graves Registration Service to oversee all Army mortuary matters during time of war. The policy remained in effect until it was revoked on September 11, 1943. In addition to the general supervision of its personnel, the Service's primary functions included:

- Acquiring land to be used as burial places for Army deceased;
- Maintaining, controlling, and preserving these burial places;

- Marking and recording graves until permanent burial could be conducted or designated relatives notified;
- Ensuring proper burials according to existing regulations, especially in regard to reducing the number of single or isolated graves;
- Receiving and arranging all personal effects belonging to the deceased;
- Registering all graves so that the relocation of either individual graves or entire cemeteries could be made possible; and
- Preparing sketches and adequate data to mark the location of both graves and cemeteries, "with particular reference to permanent landmarks which would not be obliterated by heavy shell fire" (Army Regulation No. 30-1805, February 1, 1924).

In the absence of graves registration personnel and chaplains, the supervising officer or noncommissioned officer was responsible for following all established burial regulations and forwarding all reports to the commanding general of the area where the burial was to be conducted. The commanding general would then prepare the necessary documentation and notify the organization commander of the deceased. Either a noncommissioned officer or a well-qualified private of the Medical Department was to accompany the burial parties, whenever possible, for soldiers killed in the line of duty, as well as prepare emergency medical tags if necessary. As warranted, additional troops would be assigned duties under the guidance of the commander of the Graves Registration Service.

The Quartermaster General was to provide all technical instructions. All reports required by the regulations were to be forwarded to the Quartermaster General. If a command needed to withdraw from an area prior to the completion of graves registration work, the unit's commanding general was required to assign adequate personnel to complete the burials and furnish the required records. Only in a "most serious emergency" would the commander be justified in vacating an area without supplying sufficient personnel to finish the burials.

3.7 The Disinterment of Remains after World War I

Army Regulation No. 30-1825, dated February 1, 1924, governed the disinterment process after the end of World War I when the bodies of over 46,000 deceased were returned to the US for reburial. This policy, which remained in effect until it was superseded by Army Regulation No. 638-30 on March 7, 1956, stated that the disinterment and preparation of the remains for shipment should "be conducted in a dignified and reverent manner" under the guidance of, where practicable, the graves registration units or the officer in charge of the Army morgue. All precautions were to be taken to avoid damaging the burial grounds, as well as to prevent the disturbance of adjacent graves. All instances of either disinterment or shipment were required to be reported in detail to the Quartermaster General. Furthermore, when disinterring shipments from smaller or emergency cemeteries for transport to larger cemeteries, the officer supervising the graves registration unit had to certify the accuracy of all records.

Specific guidelines from Army Regulation No. 30-1825, as quoted below, provided for the procedure of wrapping and tagging identifiable remains:

After a body has been exhumed, it will be wrapped in a blanket and placed in a coffin, the original identification tag being left upon the body. The duplicate tag, which was originally attached to the grave marker, will be securely fastened to the top of, and about 18 inches from, the head of the coffin.

However, for those bodies originally buried as "unknown," the officer in charge of the disinterment was to inscribe on the head of the coffin the cemetery name, date, grave and serial numbers, and the name and official title of the supervising officer. This information was also to be placed in a hermetically sealed bottle inside the coffin.

4 MODERN LEGAL SUMMARY

A variety of federal, state, and local laws, executive orders, and other regulations exist that apply to the care and maintenance of cemeteries, but not all of them are applicable to the Naval Hospital Cemetery. The majority of the regulations summarized below apply to cemeteries such as the Naval Hospital Cemetery that could be considered archaeological resources under the Secretary of the Interior's guidelines (implementing Section 110 of the National Historic Preservation Act). The remaining regulations more specifically deal with the care, maintenance, and disposal of cemeteries from a procedural perspective.

4.1 Federal Laws

4.1.1 National Historic Preservation Act – 1966

The National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 (16 USC 470 et seq.) was enacted to integrate the consideration of historic preservation issues into the early stages of project planning by a federal agency. Under Section 106 of NHPA, and its implementing regulations (36 CFR Part 800), the head of any federal agency having direct or indirect jurisdiction over a proposed federal or federally financed undertaking is required, prior to the expenditure of any federal funds on that undertaking, to take into account its effect on any district, site, building, structure, or object that is included in or eligible for inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places. Under Section 110 of NHPA, each federal agency is required to establish a program to locate, inventory, and nominate to the Secretary of the Interior, all properties under its ownership or control that appear to qualify for inclusion in the National Register.

4.1.2 Archaeological Resources Protection Act – 1979

The purpose of the Archaeological Resources Protection Act (ARPA) (16 USC 470 aa et seq) is to secure, for the present and future benefit of the American people, the protection of archaeological resources and sites which are on public and Indian lands, and to encourage increased cooperation and exchange of information between governmental authorities, the professional archaeological community, and private individuals having collections of archaeological resources and data which were obtained before the date of the enactment of this Act. The Act's primary goal is to require a permitting process for non-professional archaeologists to conduct archaeology on federal or Native American lands. The Department of Defense's (DoD's) ARPA regulations are 32 CFR Part 229.

4.1.3 Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act – 1990

Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act (NAGPRA) (25 USC 3001 et seq) and its implementing regulations (43 CFR part 10) were developed to establish a systematic process for determining the rights of lineal descendants, Indian tribes, and other organizations to certain Native American human remains and associative funerary objects. If Native American skeletal or associative remains are encountered on federal or tribal lands, this information must be passed on to the appropriate federal agency and to any identified lineal descendants or culturally affiliated Indian tribes so that determination may be made regarding the remains' disposition.

NAGPRA provides that Native American cultural items not claimed during this process shall be disposed of in accordance with regulations promulgated by the Secretary of the Interior, Native American groups, representatives of museums, and the scientific community. The Hastings Bill, which is currently being debated by Congress, could provide greater clarification of NAGPRA, especially in cases where lineal decent is unknown or cannot be established.

4.1.4 National Environmental Policy Act – 1969

The National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) is the national charter for protection of the environment. It establishes policy, sets goals, and provides a means for carrying out environmental policy. NEPA requires that federal agencies consider the possible environmental and cultural impacts of their mission during the planning, training and operational decision-making processes.

4.1.5 Administration of National Cemeteries and Memorials – 1973

Federal statute 38 USC Section 2404 regarding Veterans' benefits grants the Secretary of Veterans Affairs authority to administer national cemeteries and memorials. This statute provides specifications regarding the type and placement of headstones in National Cemeteries, the information to be contained on them, and requires the keeping of a burial register at each cemetery. It also grants authority to the Secretary to "contract with responsible firms or corporations for the care and maintenance of such cemeteries."

4.1.6 National Cemeteries and Memorials, Disposition of Inactive Cemeteries – 1973

Federal statute 38 USC Section 2405 regarding Veterans' benefits grants the Secretary of Veterans Affairs the authority to "transfer, with the consent of the agency concerned, any inactive cemetery, burial plot, memorial, or monument within the Secretary's control to the Department of the Interior for maintenance as a national monument or park, or to any other agency of the Government.” Also, according to this statute, the Secretary may “transfer and convey all right, title, or interest of the United States in or to any inactive cemetery or burial plot, or portion thereon, to any State, county, municipality, or proper agency thereof, in which or in the vicinity of which such cemetery or burial plot is located” Part (a) of this statute grants authority to the Secretary to remove any remains from a discontinued cemetery which is not within the National Cemetery System, or from any abandoned grave or cemetery, and transfer these remains to a National Cemetery System cemetery.

4.1.7 General Military Law, Removal of Remains – 1954

Federal Statute 10 USC Section 1488 regarding the actions of the Armed Forces applies to the removal of remains from discontinued cemeteries located on military reservations. This statute authorizes the removal of human remains from such a cemetery if that cemetery is to be “discontinued.” These remains could then be moved to “any other cemetery.” This statute also authorizes the removal of human remains from an abandoned grave or cemetery and reinterment in a national cemetery.

4.2 Executive Orders and Other Federal Regulations

4.2.1 Executive Order No. 11593, “Protection and Enhancement of Cultural Environment” - 1971

This executive order states that the federal government will provide leadership in preserving, restoring, and maintaining the historic and cultural environment of the nation. It requires that federal agencies:

- Administer the cultural properties under their control in a spirit of stewardship and trusteeship for future generations;
- Initiate measures necessary to direct their policies, plans, and programs in such a way that federally owned sites, structures, and objects of historical, architectural, or archaeological significance are preserved, restored, and maintained for the inspiration and benefit of the people; and
- Institute procedures, in consultation with the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation, to assure that federal plans and programs contribute to the preservation and enhancement of non-federally owned sites, structures, and objects of historical, architectural, or archaeological significance.

4.2.2 Environmental and Natural Resources Program Manual – 1994

In this Naval operations manual (OPNAVINST 5090.1B), the Department of the Navy sets forth its means for compliance with NEPA and NHPA. This document establishes policy, sets goals, and provides a means to ensure that Navy actions with the potential to have significant environmental impacts are accomplished per the letter and spirit of NEPA. This document also establishes policies and goals for Navy compliance with NHPA.

4.2.3 Real Estate Procedure Manual – n.d., Chg 1-17

The Navy has drafted specific procedures and policies to deal with the relocation of cemeteries and burial grounds necessitated by Navy projects. Chapter 9, Relocation of Cemeteries, of the Navy's Real Estate Procedure Manual outlines several tasks, including:

- Preparing a cemetery relocation plan;
- Selecting and acquiring the new burial site;
- Relocating the cemetery; and
- Preparing a final report.

This process involves compiling a register of the bodies to be reinterred, including name, race, date of birth, date of death, type of casket, type of monument, and next of kin. Information on next of kin should include name, address, relationship to the deceased, whether next of kin has signed a permit agreeing to the disinterment and reinterment of the body in the new cemetery site, and whether next of kin desires to be present at disinterment and/or reinterment. This policy requires that the cemetery relocation plan demonstrate that

“A thorough and diligent search and inquiry was made to determine the existence, location, identity, and vital statistics of all bodies in the existing cemetery and to ascertain the name and addresses of the next of kin.”

4.2.4 Navy Policy Memorandum No. 98-08 – 1998

This policy was written to clarify Navy policy, procedures, and responsibilities when undocumented human burials or cemeteries are unexpectedly discovered while carrying out the military mission. It defines a Navy policy of respecting all such sites, protecting them from the impacts of federal actions, and of complying with all applicable laws.

For historic cemeteries, this policy identifies three considerations concerning the protection or relocation of the burials: land use compatibility between burial ground and mission; public sentiment; and cost of relocation. If a decision is made to protect the burials in place, the following actions would occur:

- Literature search, survey, and spatial mapping;
- Identification of individual remains (if feasible);
- Formal designation of land as a dedicated burial site; and
- Provision for access to descendants.

This policy states the following actions if a decision is made to relocate burials:

- Literature search, survey, and spatial mapping;
 - Physical recordation of existing cemetery;
 - Consultation with next of kin or descendants of previous landowners;
 - Acquisition of space for reburial;
 - Exhumation by a qualified professional using protective health measures;
 - Reinterment by a qualified professional; and
 - Spatial mapping of new burial sites.

4.3 New York State Laws

Several New York State laws and regulations address the treatment of cemeteries, specifically, and historic and archaeological resources, generally. However, the laws directly addressing cemeteries do not apply to privately owned or federal cemeteries in New York.

4.3.1 Cemetery Law and Rules of Procedure of the New York State Cemetery Board – 1994

The collection of laws, rules, and procedures published by the New York State Cemetery Board concerns the care, maintenance, and governance of New York State “cemetery corporations,” not-for-profit corporations organized for the disposal or burial of deceased human beings. This body of laws evolved out of a desire to prevent cemeteries from falling into disrepair and dilapidation and becoming a burden upon the community through financial mismanagement. As noted above, these laws do not apply to privately owned or federal cemeteries in New York. No New York State laws were identified that govern private cemeteries or burial grounds.

4.3.2 New York State Historic Preservation Act – 1980

The New York State Historic Preservation Act (SHPA) establishes historic preservation as a policy of New York State government and outlines a series of programs and mechanisms through which the policy is to be carried out. This act requires that state agencies avoid or mitigate any significant adverse impacts to historic properties or archaeological resources to the fullest extent practicable, feasible, and prudent. The SHPA mandates consultation with the State Historic Preservation Officer (SHPO). The Office of Parks, Recreation, and Historic Preservation (OPRHP) is designated in this act as the coordinating agency, with additional preservation responsibilities lying with all state agencies, offices, and commissions.

4.3.3 New York State Environmental Quality Review Act – 1975

The New York State Environmental Quality Review Act (SEQRA) requires local agencies, when reviewing development projects, adopting plans, and establishing programs, to prepare an environmental impact statement for actions that may have a significant adverse impact on the environment. SEQRA requires such agencies to use all practicable means to minimize or avoid adverse environmental effects. The care and consideration of New York State's cultural resources are specifically protected within this law.

4.4 Local Laws

Research was conducted by the New York City Law Department regarding New York City Health Codes and the conveyance of a federal cemetery to the City. No such codes appear to exist (Eng, February 1999).

4.4.1 New York City Landmarks Preservation Law

The New York City Landmarks Preservation Law establishes criteria for designation of significant cultural resources, with the dual goals of protecting and enhancing the resource and safeguarding the city's historic, aesthetic, and cultural heritage. This law recognizes four types of cultural resources:

- Landmarks: generally buildings, structures, or places with significant historical or aesthetic value;
- Interior Landmarks: generally an interior with a significant historical or aesthetic value;

- Scenic Landmark: a landscape feature with significant historical or aesthetic value; and
- Historic District: generally an area with buildings, structures, and/or places with a significant historical or aesthetic value that represent one or more periods or styles of architecture of the city's history.

The Landmarks Preservation Commission manages and protects New York City's architectural, historic, and cultural resources.

4.4.2 New York City Environmental Quality Review – 1991

The New York City Environmental Quality Review (CEQR) describes a review process that must be followed for all projects that take place in New York City and are funded by, or are under the direction of, a New York City agency. CEQR requires a consideration of the impacts of the proposed action upon the city's environmental resources, including its architectural and cultural resources. This review is New York City's process for implementing SEQRA, while taking into account the city's special circumstances.

5 THE NAVAL HOSPITAL CEMETERY

The Naval Hospital Cemetery was active from at least 1831 until 1910, when it was closed. A number of reports and published and unpublished histories describe the cemetery from its earliest years in the 1830s until it became inactive; documents also describe the cemetery in 1926, when 987 burials were removed. Archived letters and memoranda provide information regarding the cemetery and the procedures followed to exhume the bodies in 1926. This information and some analysis of the burial population are presented below.

5.1 The Naval Hospital Cemetery – 1831 to 1910

The Naval Hospital Cemetery served as the official burying ground of the Naval Hospital from 1831 until 1910. Some late-19th century accounts suggest that the cemetery may have first been used during the years immediately following the 1824 Navy acquisition of the property, but this has not been substantiated. Recent research indicates that, in 1835, the cemetery site comprised a narrow, amoeba-shaped strip of land adjacent to a swamp (US Navy, 1997a) (Figure 5-1, Historic Limits of the Naval Hospital Cemetery). In 1842, a hill on the west side of the hospital was graded and the soil used to fill and extend the cemetery site (US Navy, 1997a). Late-19th-century filling of the site is also documented.

Research suggests that there was uncertainty among Naval officials during the 19th century regarding the number of individuals buried at the cemetery. An example is found in Medical Inspector Delavan Bloodgood's 1881 report to the Surgeon General that indicates that even then there were many undocumented burials:

The naval cemetery within these grounds has been in use for over 60 years¹. No record can be found of the interments prior to 1831 when an old roadway was closed in as an addition to the space, but since that date more than 1,100 [burials] have been registered and it is estimated that about 2,000 corpses have been buried in a little plot about 1½ acres [the Naval Hospital Cemetery]. Nearly every available spot has been occupied; indeed, it has several times occurred that in digging a new grave an old one has been encroached upon and parts of skeletons exhumed (US Navy, 1994).

Although Bloodgood states above that nearly “every available spot has been occupied,” it appears that over 400 additional burials took place from 1882 to 1910. It seems likely that digging graves for a number of these additional burials may have also “encroached upon” earlier, undocumented, burials. An 1889 account suggests that conditions at the cemetery had clearly not improved and there still existed uncertainty regarding the number of documented burials:

The names of 1,800 deceased are recorded as having died on the station [NAVSTA Brooklyn] or its vicinity and brought here for interment. Some of those who have died at the hospital have been removed by friends or relatives. Only about 700 graves can however be identified, and the inscriptions on many headboards are now illegible (BUMEDAR, 1890, for 1889:33).

The above report goes on to say that “depredators [sic] find access for stealing flowers and on election-night purloining wooden head-boards to feed their bonfires.” This issue of unmarked graves would have contributed to the problems of undocumented graves, and it is repeated in other documents. Among them is a complaint by Medical Director Thomas M. Potter in 1875 that “many of the headstones or rather boards have rotted off” (Potter 1875, cited in Patton, 1940:79).

A Bureau of Medicine and Surgery (BUMED) file from 1900 found in the NARA, Washington, lists 462 graves that are either unmarked or marked with cast-iron head plates, and 69 marked with broken or chipped stones (BUMED, 1900). The poor condition of the cemetery at this time prompted the following statement in the US Surgeon General’s 1900 annual report:

*This is a deplorable condition. [The Naval Hospital Cemetery] is in low damp ground on the west [sic] side of the property and is separated from the hospital grounds proper by a high brick wall, and from the neighboring property and street by a wrought iron fence much out of repair. The ground was never properly graded (US Navy, 1994).*

Several unpublished histories, among them an anonymous typescript located at the BUMED state that the cemetery reached its ultimate size in 1899 (Anon., 1945?). Although according to a late-19th-century annual report, Hygienic and Medical Reports, published by BUMED, this may have actually occurred by 1891 or 1892, as in 1889 the cemetery was expanding in response to complaints in earlier reports about crowding (e.g., Bureau of Medicine and Surgery Annual Reports [BUMEDAR], 1890, for 1889:33).

5.2 The Naval Hospital Cemetery – 1910 to 1926

In 1910, when the Naval Hospital Cemetery was almost full, both new and old burials became an issue. A series of letters and memoranda written between 1910 and 1925 document the decision to close the cemetery and bury the dead at Cypress Hills National Cemetery, five miles away. They also document the decision to empty the cemetery of its dead.²

The impending need to close the Naval Hospital Cemetery is stated in a letter from March 6, 1910 when Dr. Edward Green, then the hospital's medical director, noted there were 981 documented interments. This is a number now known to be inaccurate. Perhaps most importantly, Green also noted that "[m]any of the graves would be difficult to locate" (Green, March 6, 1910). He went on to say that there was "possibly" room for 50 to 60 additional graves, enough for burials to continue for about three more years, or until 1913, when the cemetery would be full. Citing the difficulty of identifying the dead and providing the health authorities with information required to exhume the bodies, Green recommended that burials continue to capacity. He continued, "then close it, replace the old wooden gate at the entrance with a suitable iron gate and have it always properly cared for."

The Surgeon General of the Navy agreed that burials should remain in the cemetery, but requested that it become inactive immediately and arrangements be made for a plot in a nearby national cemetery that would accommodate burials for the ensuing ten years (Surgeon General, March 8, 1910). Burial arrangements were then made at Cypress Hills National Cemetery, but the request for a separate plot was not granted. Instead, burials were to take place in turn in a row "irrespective of Army, Navy, or Veterans" (Green, April 21, 1910).

By 1912, additional space was being sought in Cypress Hills to allow for transfer of bodies from the inactive Naval Hospital Cemetery, but this request was denied due to lack of room (Surgeon General, January 13, 1912.). Instead it was suggested that the bodies be sent to the National Cemetery at Germantown in Philadelphia, but the cost was to be explored. This same memo cites the "established general practice of using for each [exhumation] a plain box about 18 inches long" rather than a coffin.

As cited in a memorandum, by 1926 $15,000 had been appropriated to carry out the authorization to exhume the bodies at the Naval Hospital Cemetery (Stitt, June 4, 1926). This same memo refers to the exhumation procedures apparently developed in 1923 that would be followed. Called for were "the exhumation and the reencasement" of the remains, the refilling of the graves, the "removal of headstones at the Naval Hospital Cemetery," and the "inhumation of remains and setting of headstones at the Cypress Hills National Cemetery." As noted earlier, this was carried out in August and September 1926. It is stated in the memo that "the Bureau [of Medicine and Surgery] desires to emphasize the importance of measures to maintain beyond question the identity of the remains as exhumed and reencased...there must be no basis for possible criticism." To avoid any problem, it was stressed that "each box must be stenciled or otherwise securely marked with the name and rank or rating of the deceased.” Upon completion of the process, a report was to be filed “with the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery that included a list of the dead with their grave numbers in the National Cemetery.”

Five months later, on October 17, 1926, the transfer of human remains and official ceremonies were completed. Commander Blackwood, the aforementioned director of the hospital in 1926, wrote in a letter the next day that

I feel very much gratified at the successful termination of the project and feel sure that no one in the future will ever be able to say that in this transfer the Nation's dead were not properly taken care of. Certainly, nothing was left undone in a military or forensic way... (Blackwood, October 18, 1926a).

A comparison of 1891 and 1934 maps, combined with the 1835 map in a composite representation in Figure 5-1, shows little if any difference in the cemetery's size or configuration since the late 19th century. This continuity is borne out by an aerial photo taken in 1924, fourteen years after the cemetery was closed and two years before it was emptied. An enlarged version of this photo is somewhat blurred, but it defines the cemetery site and documents its immediate surroundings. It also indicates several stands of trees (Photo 5-1). Late in the summer of 1926, the trees were removed and the site subsequently graded to create a playing field. Among the sports facilities that have come and gone are a tennis court, a handball court, and a ballfield.

A number of descriptions of the cemetery have been located. Although the 1924 aerial photo shows it dotted by clusters of trees before the burials were removed (Photo 5-1), a 1917 photo of the grave of James Maurice Casey (Subchapter 5.3) does not record any trees nearby (Photo 5-2). In 1869 Henry P. Stiles, a noted 19th-century Brooklyn historian, described the cemetery as “a small but tasteful graveyard [that] offers a quiet resting place to those who die in the hospital” (Stiles cited in US Navy, 1997a:35). However, other references and comments note overcrowding, damp ground, poor sanitary conditions, and poorly marked graves (US Navy, 1994:66).

Based on the flat, low elevation of the cemetery site, which is now situated just east of a brick wall and below a low but well-defined grassy slope, it appears that grading did indeed occur after the graves were removed. However, results of GPR and ground proofing carried out in July 1997 indicate that burial shafts, devoid of burials but filled with sand and some gravel, do remain (Subchapter 2.2.3; Figure 5-2, Trench 3 - East Wall Profile). The shafts also contain very fragmentary bone material and, in at least one instance, the outline of a coffin, coffin hardware, and a dark organic soil stain apparently left by a decomposing body (Figure 5-3, Trench 5 - Plan View). In addition, the one possibly intact human burial encountered during testing (Subchapter 2.2.3) was located just below the slope, near the surface of the cemetery's western limit. At this writing, this burial has not been further explored.

5.3 The James Maurice Casey File – 1917 to 1939

In 1938, Michael Casey conducted a search for the remains of his brother, James Maurice Casey, who was originally buried at the Naval Hospital Cemetery. The Navy records of this search demonstrate that conflicting information on the identify and location of burials at the Naval Hospital Cemetery existed even at that time. The Navy file also provides information on the challenges encountered during exhumation of the bodies and the procedures followed in their transfer to Cypress Hills. In addition, it confirms that the bodies were not only removed from the Naval Hospital Cemetery to Cypress Hills, but were also later moved within Cypress Hills.³ The following is a description of the information in the Navy's file on the search for James Maurice Casey.

James Maurice Casey, an 18-year-old Landsman, died in the Naval Hospital on July 24, 1901 and was buried in the cemetery the next day. A 1917 letter, found in the Navy file, informed Michael Casey, a former Master's Mate - First Class in the Navy, of his brother's death (Assistant Surgeon General, December 4, 1917). While it seems unlikely that this was when Michael Casey first learned of his brother's death, it is possible.

In 1917, Michael Casey found and photographed his brother's grave (Photo 5-2). James Casey's grave in the hospital cemetery was Plot 10 Grave 845. Letters in the file suggest that the grave was located in the northwestern part of the cemetery, where fuel tanks were later installed (Figure 5-1). Identification of the grave site was based on a building cupola and a sign visible beyond the cemetery in Michael Casey's photograph (Casey File, August 16, 1938). Michael Casey visited the grave again on September 24, 1925 (Rossiter, July 15, 1938).

In June 1938, almost 12 years after the removal of remains from the Naval Hospital Cemetery to Cypress Hills Cemetery, Michael Casey inquired into the whereabouts of the remains of his brother. The resulting inquiry revealed that there was no gravestone marked James Maurice Casey at Cypress Hills although there was one marked E. Casey. E. Casey is listed on the 1927 Index, but without any other information such as rank and date of death. Further inquiry revealed that E. Casey did not die at the Brooklyn Naval Hospital but was instead transferred, alive, to the Naval Hospital in Pensacola on May 19, 1885 (McIntire, December 7, 1938). This raised the possibility that the remains buried as E. Casey were actually those of James Maurice Casey.

An August 1938 letter in the Casey file notes that graves in the Naval Hospital Cemetery were renumbered in preparation for removal to Cypress Hills National Cemetery (Douglass, August 12, 1938). A subsequent letter is critical of a cemetery plan developed in preparation for the exhumations at the Naval Hospital Cemetery, noting it "is not to scale, and apparently merely indicates the general arrangement." While it was hoped that a plan might identify Casey's grave in the Naval Hospital ³This was first suggested by information concerning Chief Veindovi, the Fiji Islander, whose remains could not be located at Cypress Hills National Cemetery (US Navy, 1997a:35-39).

Cemetery, even then there was no "real" map of the cemetery available (Bunker, August 16, 1938; Subchapter 5.4).

Included in the information found in the Casey file was a notation made in 1938 that the hospital's burial records were "apparently complete" from October 20, 1831 through 1910, with the exception of the period between October 5, 1894 and January 12, 1897 (Bunker, August 8, 1938). As mentioned previously, the burial record from 1831 to 1894 has been found, but later burial records are missing. Noted in this letter from C. Bunker, the hospital's Medical Director in 1938, was that at his arrival at the hospital in 1932:

...there were possibly some twenty-odd headstones standing in our group [at Cypress Hills National Cemetery], the other graves being identified by numbered markers ...about 1933 the erection of regulation headstones was completed at all graves. The headstone erected to ... E. Casey was one of this last lot (Bunker, August 8, 1938).

In the effort to determine James Maurice Casey's whereabouts, E. Casey's grave was exhumed to recover any identifying information on the casket or body, but Dr. Bunker considered it doubtful that this would offer anything conclusive (Bunker, August 8, 1938), and he proved to be right. All that was found was "a rotted wooden box (about 24" X 8" X 8") containing a few decayed bones intermixed with soil" (Bunker, October 5, 1938). The letter goes on to say that when the graves were relocated within Cypress Hills National Cemetery in "about 1931, remains were all transferred from old to new boxes, which is the customary practice. The possibility of confusion resulting therefrom is obvious."

During Casey's quest for his brother's remains, several avenues were pursued: in an attempt to reconstruct the exhumation method employed more than a decade before, and to explain the Casey situation. During this process both the local contractor, Anthony Bauer, who removed the bodies, and the Chief Pharmacist's Mate, Maurice James Creevan, who directed the exhumations, were tracked down in 1938 and interviewed. Creevan outlined the following procedure:

A wooden box previously stenciled with the name found on the headstone was placed at the head of the grave. As the remains were exhumed, they were placed in the box, which was then closed. The headstone was then wired underneath the box, and in this manner the remains and headstones were transported together to Cypress Hills (Creevan quoted in Bunker, October 27, 1938).

Although he emphasized the care taken regarding identification, Creevan conceded that conditions were such that it was very difficult to make all identifications accurately. He noted that "the great majority of the remains found were bones, so that the location under the headstone was the only positive identification in such cases, as the coffins had crumbled away." Only "[i]n some few cases the coffins were in good shape, and the nameplates could be read." A list of names was prepared each day and sent to the First Lieutenant's office, but Creevan acknowledged that "it may be possible that a clerical error was made in transcribing one of these lists," which could account for a mix-up between E. Casey and James Maurice Casey.

According to Bauer's statement,

The work was started at the gate leading from the hospital grounds. The graves were opened in rotation by rows. Charts were furnished by the Commanding Officer with a Navy representative present. The remains were placed in a wooden box by our laborers and then taken with the headstone to the power house, which was used as the temporary morgue. I am quite sure that the names were stenciled on each box. We worked each grave individually removing about 30 or 40 remains each day... identification was made from Navy records and charts, and I kept no records of the individual bodies (Bauer quoted in Bunker, November 30, 1938).

The search for the remains of James Maurice Casey apparently prompted a check of the original interment list. In December 1938, the Chief of BUMED forwarded a revised list to the Commanding Officer of the Naval Hospital. This updated list is not identified, but could be one of the sources cited in this State of the Research report (e.g., RR c1932). If so, it would have a 1938 date rather than 1932 (c. 1932 is the date used in this report).

As a result of the Casey investigation, the Cypress Hills grave assigned to E. Casey was ultimately accepted as being that of James Maurice Casey. In addition, reburial procedures and problems were documented as was the fact that graves in the Naval Hospital Cemetery were renumbered prior to exhumation and that they were not only moved to Cypress Hills in 1926, but were moved within Cypress Hills between 1931 and 1932 (Subchapter 5.5).

5.4 Naval Hospital Cemetery Plot Plans

As presented in Appendix C of the Archaeological Evaluation (US Navy, 1997a), a report written in 1926 by the aforementioned Commanding Officer of the Naval Hospital New York, Captain Norman J. Blackwood, notes that a "complete new plan of the hospital and graves therein was made" prior to beginning the disinterments the previous August. Although the NARA locations in Washington, College Park, MD, and the Northeast Region, NY were researched and other archives contacted, no such plan was located.

A request made for six blueprints of an unnamed plan was found in a Naval Hospital Cemetery file in the Northeast Region facility, but no plan was attached (Blackwood, November 8, 1926b). Since the request was made within months of the removal of graves to Cypress Hills, it seems to refer to the sought-after plot plan. But even if it had been found, the plan's utility is questionable. As noted earlier, it was of little use in locating James Maurice Casey's grave in the Naval Hospital Cemetery because it was not to scale and only provided general locations. The many undocumented burials mentioned in the researched historic accounts would have been impossible to locate unless an accurate earlier map had existed, which does not appear to be the case.

A clue to the cemetery's organization, albeit one of limited value without an adequate plan, is found in a set of hand-written numbers added to the 1927 "revised and corrected" typed index of the disinterred. These numbers are found on the 1927 Index included in both the 1994 and 1997 archaeological assessments (see Appendices A-3 in the former and A in the latter), but were then unidentified. They are the same as those found in the previously mentioned list, originally compiled in 1923-1924, that records the burials to be exhumed (RNHC, 1926).

No correlation between the new grave and row numbers and the cemetery's original numbering system has been found, nor has a plot plan that corresponds to the earlier configuration been located. Although the 1831-1894 burial register provides plot numbers for 604 burials with graves in Cypress Hills, there are no grave numbers. Without a plot plan that predates preparation for exhumation, this information is not only incomplete, it is also meaningless and, for that reason, has not been provided here.⁴ Even the one clearly identified grave number in the Naval Hospital Cemetery, James Maurice Casey's Plot 10 Grave 845, does not conform to any known or implied organization. With the exception of a reference to Row 14 and another to Row 23, the row numbers assigned in 1926 range from one to 11. There are no known plot numbers associated with this system.

5.5 Racial Segregation at the Naval Hospital Cemetery

Both the burials of those of African descent and white burials are documented in the Naval Hospital Cemetery. No information has been located to definitively state whether or not the cemetery was racially segregated. However, research for this study indicates that all burials were probably integrated based upon an examination of available grave numbers and research regarding 19th-century Naval burial customs.

As stated in Subchapter 5.4, neither a plot plan for the cemetery's organization as it was prior to its closing in 1910, nor the one made in preparation of the 1926 disinterments, was located. These plans would be helpful in determining if the cemetery was segregated in any way. In the absence of these plans, grave numbers were examined to see if patterning suggested racial segregation. This examination did not reveal any such patterning.

Gina Akers, Archivist at the Operational Archives of the Naval Historical Center, Washington, DC, and an expert on minority issues in Naval history, has suggested that burial practices within the Navy reflect local conventions and laws (Akers, February 26, 1997). That is, the burial of a black sailor in a 19th-century Naval cemetery in the south would undoubtedly have been segregated, much as a civilian burial would have been. No laws regarding segregation were in effect in New York State after 1827 (Copeland, June 30, 1998) making it unlikely that the Naval Hospital Cemetery was segregated.

5.6 Interments at Cypress Hills National Cemetery - 1926

Cypress Hills National Cemetery, located about five miles southeast of the Naval Hospital site, opened in 1862. Its creation followed an order by President Abraham Lincoln to construct a series of military cemeteries to honor the soldiers, Sailors, Marines, and others in the military who lost their lives during the Civil War (Subchapter 3.3). Now military personnel from earlier and later wars are also buried there, most recently from the Vietnam War (Kermis, n.d).

Apparently, the disinterred remains from the Naval Hospital Cemetery were originally located in Sections F and G in Cypress Hills. Hand-written alphanumeric designations found on the 1927 Index are believed to represent former grave numbers in these sections.

A memorandum dated October 31, 1930 found in the Cypress Hills file of the Quartermaster General's records specifically states that in their original Cypress Hills location, there were eleven⁵ west-east rows of headstones, the first containing 90 stones, with every row increasing by one "so the last row has 100" (Doyle, October 31, 1930). This arrangement does not conform to the hand-written list with F and G designations found on the 1927 Index. Moreover, it is a configuration that could accommodate 1,045 graves, more than those needed for the Naval Hospital Cemetery burials.⁶ Yet again, an "attached" blueprint that might have shown the configuration and location of graves was not included in the archived file.

In October 1931, a plan to move the burials originally from the Naval Hospital Cemetery from their original Cypress Hills location to a new Navy section at Cypress Hills was underway. It considered the transfer of "982" [sic] remains, five less than what is considered the correct number. Located on a plateau above the receiving vault, this new section was created on boulder fill that had been placed in a gully in preparation for the burials (Anon., October 8, 1931). This fill could easily accommodate the 18-inch- (46-cm-) deep graves required for these new reinterments that were encased in small wooden boxes rather than full-sized coffins (Anon., October 8, 1931).

⁵It is not known if or how the eleven rows mentioned here correlate with the eleven-plus rows in the Naval Hospital Cemetery renumbering effort.

⁶With this relocation, 52 unidentified burials listed separately on the 1927 Index were reinterred in a single grave originally marked "FIFTY-TWO UNKNOWN SAILORS" (Anon., October 8, 1931), later rechecked to read "SIXTY-THREE UNKNOWN SAILORS" (see US Navy, 1997a:26, 29).

The plan called for new headstones that would give the cemetery a uniform appearance (Anon, October 8, 1931). By January 22, 1932, 990 graves were purportedly disinterred, boxed, and buried in Sections 6 and 7 of Cypress Hills National Cemetery; 931 were "Known," or named, and 59 were "Unknown" (Naugle, January 22, 1932). This is, again, a number that does not agree with the 1927 Index which lists 987 burials. New headstones, as noted earlier, were erected in 1933, providing the desired uniform appearance (Photo 5-3).

For this State of the Research report several visits to Cypress Hills National Cemetery were made in 1997 and 1998, when current grave numbers were confirmed, names on stones verified, Medal of Honor recipients noted, and gravestones photographed (Subchapter 6.3.4).

6 BURIALS NOT DOCUMENTED AS REMOVED

This chapter presents the burial information gathered to address one of the primary research goals of this study: to determine the number, name, rank/rate, and other information on the burials that are not documented as removed from the Naval Hospital Cemetery. Important research questions regarding the burial population in general are also addressed.

6.1 Burial Information

The Navy's research on the Naval Hospital Cemetery encountered discrepancies regarding the number of burials and disinterments that took place at the cemetery, as well as missing, incomplete, and contradictory information on individual burials. The discrepancy between the number of documented burials and the number of documented disinterments is one of the primary issues discussed in this report. These burials are referred to as burials not documented as removed.

As described in Subchapter 1.3, determining the number of burials not documented as removed from the Naval Hospital Cemetery required comparing the population of those known to have been buried in the cemetery to the list of those who were disinterred in 1926. This task was difficult since available information is incomplete and in many instances contains incorrect or conflicting data.

The primary source of information on burials in the cemetery is the Register of Deaths and of Burial Plots, 1831 to 1894 (RD, 1831-1894). This register documents the burial of 1,351 individuals at the Naval Hospital Cemetery during the cemetery's first 64 years of use, some of whom were only temporarily buried, or held in a vault, and later removed by family or friends, prior to 1926. A burial register for the 16-year period from 1894 to 1910 could not be located. The Alphabetical Index of Remains Removed from the US Naval Hospital Cemetery (1927 Index) lists 987 individuals disinterred from the cemetery in 1926 who had dates of death spanning from 1831 to 1910 (when the cemetery was closed).

Comparison of these two sources of information, and other sources mentioned throughout this document (see Subchapter 2.2.1 for a complete listing of research documents), revealed that during its eight decades of operation, at least 1,717 burials (Table 6-1) occurred in the Naval Hospital Cemetery. At least 213 of these burials were removed by friends or family soon after they were buried or their bodies held in a vault, as mentioned above, leaving at least 1,504 burials. In 1926, 16 years after the cemetery was officially closed, 987 burials were disinterred. Comparing the number removed from the number of known burials indicates that at least 517 were not documented as removed.

Table 6-1 presents a numerical breakdown of this burial information arranged by date of death. The two categories for date of death in this table are: (1) October 20, 1831 (the earliest documented burial) to October 5, 1894 (the last recorded burial in the RD, 1831-1894); and (2) October 6, 1894 to 1910 (when the cemetery closed). Information about burials in the first category was gathered primarily from RD, 1831-1894, while information about later burials was based on dates of death listed in the 1927 Index, since a burial register for this later time period could not be found. The 366 burials shown in Table 6-1 that occurred between October 6, 1894 and 1910 include 159 that have no listed date of death in the 1927 Index. However, it is assumed that they occurred during this time period since these 159 names do not appear in the comprehensive 1831 to 1894 burial register and there is a strong correlation between the age of a burial and whether it was listed in the 1927 Index (Subchapter 6.3).

The names and dates of death of the 517 not documented as removed from the cemetery are alphabetically listed in Table 6-2. Appendix A of this report provides alphabetically organized information on the name, rank/rate, and date of death for the entire known burial population of 1,504 individuals. Appendix B presents this same information chronologically. Burials that are not documented as removed are shown in bold in these appendices. Where information on individual burials has been corrected through a comparison of the various sources, the corrected information is noted in the appendices under "remarks."

6.2 Conflicting, Ambiguous, or Duplicate Information

A detailed comparison of the collected sources of information revealed conflicting, ambiguous, or duplicate information concerning the number of burials not documented as removed. Seven of the individuals listed in RD, 1831-1894 as removed by family or friends and buried elsewhere appear in the 1927 Index of disinterred burials and have graves at Cypress Hills. This indicates that either these seven were actually not removed as reported in RD, 1831-1894, that these seven burials are incorrectly listed in the 1927 Index, or some combination of these two possibilities. If these individuals were removed prior to 1910, then the identity of the seven burials at Cypress Hills is actually not known and may include the remains of those listed as not documented as removed.

Another problem was revealed through examination of Cypress Hills grave stones: three individuals were identified whose names appear on two different headstones but are listed only once in the 1927 Index (John Cullen, William Lathrop, and William Clough). Therefore, the identity of the remains in three of these six Cypress Hills burials is unknown and may include those listed as not documented as removed.

--- No name listed in burial register
 ? Questionable spelling or accuracy

In comparing the names listed on RD, 1831-1894 to those in the 1927 Index, there were numerous instances where the 1927 Index contained only partial or incorrect information. The following ten burials, which are among those listed in RD, 1831-1894, may have been disinterred, but due to partial or ambiguous information in the 1927 Index, this could not be confirmed:

- Frank Bartlett, a 24-year-old Landsman who died on February 12, 1891, may be F.R. Bartlett, a Landsman, who is in the 1927 Index but with a date of death listed as unknown;
- John Brown, a Seaman, who died July 17, 1835, may be John Brown, Seaman, in the 1927 Index whose date and place of death are unknown, but both name and rank are relatively common and it is possible they are two distinct burials;
- Michael Collins, Landsman, died July 17, 1872, may be M. Collins, Landsman, listed without a date of death in the 1927 Index;
- William C. Kelly, rank unknown, died June 5, 1843, may be W.C. Kelly, rank and date unknown in the 1927 Index;
- John King, Seaman, died April 21, 1863, may be John King, rank and date unknown in the 1927 Index;
- Daniel McCormick, Apprentice, died August 13, 1839, may be Dave McCormick, Apprentice, died August 15, 1859 in the 1927 Index, both of them off the USS North Carolina;
- John McGovern, Landsman, died August 21, 1875, may be J. McGovern, Landsman, date unknown in the 1927 Index;
- Andrew Parker, Seaman, died January 2, 1880, may be A. Parker, Seaman, date unknown in the 1927 Index;
- Henry Smith, Seaman, died September 20, 1865, may be Henry Smith, Seaman, date unknown in the 1927 Index; and
- Robert Edwards, Seaman, who died in the Naval Hospital on March 3, 1842, may be F. Edwards, no date, listed in the 1927 Index whose name was "corrected" to Edward Edwards in 1932 and given a March 3, 1842 date of death (RR, c. 1932).¹

¹In general, hand-entered revisions made to the burial list in about 1932 were accepted (RR, c. 1932), but some – such as the changes cited above for the Robert Edwards entry – warrant questioning.

In the absence of conclusive information, these ten individuals were all included in the list of those not documented as removed.

The disposition of the remains of Richard Hogan, a Seaman who died on January 24, 1891, is also ambiguous. Hogan appears in RD, 1831-1894, but is not listed in the 1927 Index, indicating that he is not documented as removed. However, there is a notation in RD, 1831-1894 that may indicate that he was removed from the Naval Hospital Cemetery by relatives. This notation, a single "ditto" mark, might refer to the comment for the previous record which states "Removed by Relatives," or it may refer to "Naval Cemetery," which is repeated as a single "ditto" mark for several earlier entries on this page of the register. Because of this ambiguity, Richard Hogan has been included in the list of those not documented as removed.

6.3 Why Are Burials Not Documented as Removed?

The identification of 517 burials not documented as removed from the Naval Hospital Cemetery, and the unknown number that may remain unidentified, prompts the question "why are so many burials not documented as removed?" Answering this question involves synthesis of the collected sources of information and speculation where definitive information is not available.

The researched documents contain numerous references to the poor condition of the cemetery and its grave markers and conflicting accounts of how many interments took place. Comparison of primary source materials, such as burial registers and disinterment lists, reveals misspellings, transcription errors, and missing or incomplete records. This suggests that a number of contributing factors resulted in burials not being documented as removed from the Naval Hospital Cemetery; most important are the poor condition and/or non-existence of grave markers, lack of accurate plot plans, and clerical errors.

6.3.1 Missing Grave Markers

The cemetery's grave markers, particularly before the end of the Civil War, were most often wooden headboards and less often iron markers. The researched documents frequently cite the decomposition of these grave markers as a problem at the Naval Hospital Cemetery, and at military cemeteries in general during the 19th century. Mention of decomposing headboards in Naval Hospital records are found as early as 1875, only 45 years after the cemetery became active. Compounding this problem, research identified a statement that local "depredators" occasionally stole wooden headboards from the cemetery to fuel their bonfires (BUMEDAR, 1890). As further described below, absent surface evidence of graves, the disinterment process appears to have occurred without consideration of these unmarked burials.

6.3.2 Lack of Accurate Plot Plans

The difficulty in keeping accurate burial records due to the absence or poor condition of headboards seems to have been made worse by the reportedly poor quality of the original cemetery plot plan kept while the cemetery was active. Without an accurate earlier plot plan, it would have been difficult to determine the location of a grave or the identity of an individual whose headboard was lost when the new plan was made in anticipation of the 1926 disinterments. An 1881 report even states that "it has several times occurred that in digging a new grave an old one has been encroached upon and parts of skeletons exhumed" (US Navy, 1994). This account suggests that headboards did not survive long and that even then an adequate plot plan was not readily available or consulted for late-19th century interments; it additionally raises the possibility that burials may have been inadvertently exhumed over time (Subchapter 6.4).

The 1926 exhumations appear to have been based on a "complete new plan of the ... graves" made in the 1920s in preparation for the disinterment (Subchapter 5.4). Such a plan would likely have been drawn from existing cemetery conditions that, as reported even in 1889, did not reflect the total burial population. An 1889 account indicates that only about 700 of the burials that had occurred at the Naval Hospital Cemetery could be identified (and many of those headstones were almost illegible), although it is reported that as many as 2,000 burials may have occurred by that time (Subchapter 5.1). With a minimum of 360 burials occurring after 1889 (Subchapter 6.1), it is possible that when the "complete new plan" was drawn in the 1920s, only about 1,000 graves were identifiable. Since the 1926 disinterment process accounted for 987 individual burials, it appears that the disinterment effort did not consider unmarked graves but instead focused on those with intact grave markers.

6.3.3 Clerical Errors

Record-keeping and transcription errors, and the logistical complexity associated with the cemetery's massive exhumation, appears to have resulted in inaccurate disinterment documentation. As noted in Subchapter 5.3 of this report, a search for one particular unaccounted-for grave in 1938, that of James Maurice Casey, revealed a great deal about the conditions under which the disinterment process took place. It was learned that during exhumation, 30 to 40 burials were removed daily for over a month; such a daily volume appears to have made it difficult to accurately record each grave. Maurice James Creevan, who directed the exhumations, stated that a "clerical error" may have led to the uncertainty surrounding Casey's remains.

Even before the exhumations occurred, however, clerical errors had resulted in confusion over the number and identity of burials at the cemetery. An analysis of new grave numbers assigned between 1923 and 1924 in preparation for the removal indicates that at least eight were duplicates (see Subchapter 6.2). Undoubtedly such clerical errors resulted in lack of documentation of burials that were actually disinterred.

6.3.4 Examination of Burials Not Documented as Removed Over Time

Comparison of the number of burials per year and the number of burials not documented as removed per year between 1831 and 1894, the period for which the most accurate data are available, led to the identification of two general patterns described below and reflected in Figure 6-1 (Burials at the Naval Hospital Cemetery):

- (1) Burials that occurred from late 1831 to 1871, the first half of the cemetery's approximately 80 years of operation, were much less likely to be documented as removed than those that occurred later (93 percent of the 517 burials not documented as removed occurred before 1871); and
- (2) There are two time periods when the greatest number of burials occurred that were not documented as removed - during and just after the Mexican War, 1847 to 1849 (about 56, or 11 percent), and during and just after the Civil War, 1863 to 1869 (about 178, or 34 percent); both were periods when the Naval Hospital and its cemetery were highly active.

These two clear patterns suggest that burials not documented as removed were a result of both the length of time the remains were buried and the number of burials that took place during a particular year. At times during the 19th century, the Brooklyn Naval Hospital was one of the busiest Naval hospitals in the country. Both the age of the burials and the high-level of activity at the hospital appear to have contributed to the absence of grave markers or other records indicating the presence or location of burials.

There is a notable exception to these trends. Between 1863 and 1864, a total of 214 individuals were buried at the Naval Hospital Cemetery, making them the most active years for burials during the 19th century; yet only 24, or 11 percent, of them are not documented as being removed. This is in contrast to the post-Civil War years, from 1866 to 1871, when many fewer burials took place but the proportion of burials not documented as removed was over 90 percent.

6.4 Demographics of Burials Not Documented as Removed

6.4.1 Rank and Affiliation

Among the 517 burials not documented as removed, 420 were identified as Sailors (two of them in the Spanish Navy) and 82 were Marines. Four were children or infants, three were civilians (including one blacksmith), and eight lacked affiliations² (Table 6-3). According to a notation in the remarks column of the RD, 1831-1894, one, and perhaps both, of the Spanish sailors were killed in an explosion on the Spanish frigate Zereuguela in 1860.

Not surprisingly, most of the ranked US Sailors were Seamen (146), Ordinary Seamen (80), or Landsmen (77). The 115 remaining American Sailors held numerous different ranks or rates ranging from cook to captain. Marines were mainly listed solely as "Marine" (45), but at least 19 were Privates. The remaining 18 held the rank of Corporal (7), Sergeant (7), Lieutenant (3), and Captain (1) (Table 6-4).

6.4.2 Country of Origin

Country of origin, or place of birth, was found for many of the burials not documented as removed, mainly those listed on hospital patient registers (RP, 1812-1862; RP, 1862-1868; and RP, 1868-1874). Of the 306 names with this information, 175 were from the US (57 percent) and the remaining 131 were foreign-born (43 percent). Of the foreign-born, the majority were from Ireland (45), followed by England (19), Scotland (11), the Caribbean region (10), and Germany (9). The remaining countries of origin encompass countries and regions around the globe. See Table 6-5 for a breakdown of this information.

6.4.3 Burials of African Descent

One of the research issues of the Navy's 1997 Archaeological Evaluation concerned the racial make-up of the Naval Hospital Cemetery burial population. In that study, the ethnicity and country of origin of a sample of 72 Sailors who died in the hospital between 1834 and 1862, and were documented in the 1927 Index, was examined using the Naval Hospital patient ledger kept from 1812 to 1862 (RP, 1812-1862). Individuals of African descent made up about ten percent of these researched burials, almost all of them either Ordinary Seaman, Seaman, or Landsman (US Navy, 1997a).

²One of those who lacked an affiliation or rank was Herman Bows (Baus?), who died May 8, 1869, and claimed to be a "Martyr" from the English Prison Ship of Revolutionary War."

A similar examination was conducted on the 517 burials not documented as removed to determine how many were of African descent. The three primary sources of information for this analysis were the two patient registers for the period from 1812 to 1868 (RP, 1812-1862 and RP, 1862-1868) and the 1831 to 1894 burial register (RD, 1831-1894). These documents classify burials with terms such as "Negro," "Colored," and "Mulatto," and sometimes include physical descriptions such as "wool" or "wooly" hair and dark or black skin and eyes.³

During the Civil War, records of Sailors of African descent included a rank or rate of "Contraband," which applied to slaves serving in the Navy. There are five burials with this rank/rate or of "Contra," documented in the Naval Hospital Cemetery; three are in the 1927 Index, and two are among the 517 identified as not documented as removed (both of whom were also classified as "Negro"). George Pierce, a Landsman in the 1927 Index, is ranked or rated as "Contraband" in the 1831-1894 register.

A total of 45 burials that may have been of African descent were identified among the 517 not documented as removed. The most commonly used identifier for these burials was "Negro," with 30 entries. One of the burials identified as "Negro" in the hospital burial register (RD, 1831-1894), is described in another list as having a light complexion, brown hair, and hazel eyes (RP, 1862-1868). Less frequent entries included "Colored" or "Coloured" (five entries), "Black" (three entries), and "Mulatto" (four entries). The terms "ne" (possibly an abbreviation for "Negro") and "Col'd" and "Col" (assumed to be abbreviations for "Colored"), were entered for one burial each. Given the incomplete records and the subjective nature of the information, these numbers may not represent the entire population of burials of African descent among the 517 not documented as removed.

Sailors of African Descent in the 19th-Century Navy

Research also considered an additional issue related to the racial make-up of the Naval Hospital Cemetery: comparing the percentage of Sailors not documented as removed who were of African descent to that of the Navy in general. (Marines were not included in this second research issue since those of African descent, and actually all people of color, were excluded from the Marines throughout the 19th century and into the 20th century until WWII [US Navy, 1997a].) This analysis only considered burials that occurred from October 20, 1831 to April 10, 1871, the period for which the most information was available. During this 40-year period, 381 Sailors were buried at the cemetery who were not documented as removed, 45 of whom appear to be of African descent.

In order to compare the population of burials of African descent at the Naval Hospital Cemetery to that of the Navy in general, simple statistics were extracted from available data. These numbers and percentages were arranged chronologically, since the number of burials of African-descent in the ³Early New York City coroner's reports often list skin color, as do available death certificates for those who died off-base between 1858 and 1906, but these sources do not include any burials that were not documented as removed.

Navy changed over time. A model for this research is found in Blacks in the Military, Essential Documents (Nalty and MacGregor, 1981).

Research revealed that for the years between 1812 and 1861, before the Civil War began, Sailors of African descent comprised five percent of all enlisted Naval personnel. During the Civil War, between 1861 and 1865, this percentage rose to between 12.5 and 25 percent, calculated on the number of Sailors reported on ships during this period, but this may be an underestimate. After the Civil War, the number of African-Americans in the Navy dropped to an unrecorded figure (Nalty and MacGregor, 1981). Since these statistics on Sailors of African descent in the 19th-century Navy are divided into three periods - pre-Civil War, Civil War, and post-Civil War - this analysis of the cemetery burial population used the same time periods. Table 6-6 provides a summary of this information.

This comparison indicates that the percentage of Sailors of African descent in the population of all Sailors not documented as removed is slightly higher than that found in the Navy in general before and during the Civil War. A similar comparison is not possible for the post-Civil War period because these data are unavailable for the Navy. Table 6-6 also indicates that the percentage of Sailors of African descent out of the total Sailors not documented as removed was highest (28.8 percent) during the Civil War era, as it was in the Navy in general.

6.4.4 Medal of Honor Recipients

Based on a review of published Medal of Honor recipients, none of the burials not documented as removed were Medal of Honor recipients (Committee on Veterans Affairs, 1979). However, during preparation of this State of the Research report, Cypress Hills National Cemetery was visited and it was observed, based on headstone information, that two of the burials disinterred from the Naval Hospital Cemetery were Medal of Honor recipients. One, James Dougherty, who died on November 25, 1897, was honored for his bravery during the Korean campaign of 1871 (Photo 6-1). The other, Louis Williams, received two medals, both for rescuing shipmates who had gone overboard (Photo 6-2). These rescues took place almost exactly one year apart, one on March 16, 1883, the other on March 13, 1884. The latter incident occurred about two and a half years before Williams died.

6.5 Are Burials Still Present at the Naval Hospital Cemetery?

Having presented a number of factors that help explain how and why so many burials are not documented as removed, a remaining question is - "are burials still present at the Naval Hospital Cemetery?" Research has indicated that the physical condition of the cemetery site, which was primarily damp, poorly graded lowland, was not conducive to preserving human remains or coffin wood. The gradual natural deterioration of human bone and coffins may have been accelerated by seasonal water saturation.

The poor condition of the burials is illustrated by the problems experienced during the disinterment process. Evidently a majority of the wooden coffins had already "crumbled away" by that time, and only in "some few cases" were the coffins in "good shape" (Creevan quoted in Bunker, October 27, 1938). Site conditions differed between the higher ground in the western portion of the cemetery, and the lower ground in the eastern portion.

As noted in Subchapter 6.3, it is possible that some of the burials not documented as removed in 1926 had already been removed or mis-identified prior to the 1926 disinterment or were removed during the disinterment but not documented. An 1881 account notes that occasionally when digging a burial for a new interment, the remains of an earlier burial were encountered and "parts of skeletons exhumed" (US Navy, 1994). The 1926 exhumation effort itself possibly resulted in the inadvertent removal of older, unmarked burials whose coffins had disintegrated lying adjacent to more recent, well-marked burials. Additionally, the clerical errors documented throughout the exhumation process appear to have resulted in the exhumation and reinterment of remains that were misidentified and, therefore, often undocumented.

Ground disturbance during the 1926 disinterment process and post-1926 site development also would have affected the preservation of any remaining burials at the site. These several factors - the natural deterioration of human bone over time, the damp, poorly drained condition of the cemetery during the 19th century, the undocumented removal of burials, and ground disturbances over time - influence whether burials still remain intact at the Naval Hospital Cemetery. Should burials remain, they would likely be disturbed and poorly preserved. Given the lack of accurate plot plans and poor preservation, it is unlikely that the identity of any remaining burials could be identified.

The limited excavations that took place during ground-proofing conducted in association with the Navy's 1997 GPR evaluation both support and contradict this conclusion. Four of the five excavated trenches yielded only pieces of highly deteriorated coffin wood and fragmentary human bone. These fragments attest to both poor preservation and subsequent ground disturbances. However, a single, possibly intact skeleton also was discovered 15 to 19 inches (38 to 48 centimeters) below the ground surface without any associated coffin wood. Since this burial was located in the western portion of the cemetery, it is possible that the burial's higher elevation contributed to its preservation.

7 CONCLUSIONS

For this State of the Research report, an extensive collection of information on interments and disinterments at the Naval Hospital Cemetery was reviewed. Primary topics included the history of military burial practices, federal, state, and local laws relating to cemeteries, the history of the Naval Hospital Cemetery, and information related to burials not documented as removed from the cemetery. The major conclusions of each of these topics are presented below.

7.1 History of Military Burial Practice

The events at the Naval Hospital Cemetery during the 19th and early 20th centuries did not occur in isolation, but were directly related to the conflicts facing the US military at large. During the American Civil War, as thousands of soldiers were dying both on the field of battle and in Naval Hospitals along the east coast, the number of annual interments at the Naval Hospital Cemetery in Brooklyn increased dramatically. During the period of relative calm before the Spanish-American War, the number of annual interments was very low. In addition, the practices and procedures in effect at the cemetery regarding graves registration and the 1926 disinterments were influenced by the graves customs, practices, and legislation of the military in general.

The burial practices of the US military have gradually been established, and formalized through legislation, over the past 200 years. Legislation addressing burial practices was often passed during periods of military conflict, times when the number of military casualties were increasing dramatically. The first concerted effort by the military towards establishing formalized procedures for the treatment of casualties of war occurred in 1861, at the beginning of the Civil War. Military graves registration attained much of its present-day character during the years leading up to and following World War I (1912 to 1924).

7.2 Modern Legal Summary

The majority of the laws and regulations reviewed during this research do not have a direct relevance to the Naval Hospital Cemetery although they are related to cultural resources or cemetery maintenance issues. For example, while NAGPRA concerns the protection of Native American graves, the only identified Native American interment, that of Felix Mason, who appears from his physical description to be of Native American and African descent, was disinterred from the Naval Hospital Cemetery and transferred to Cypress Hills National Cemetery in 1926 (US Navy, 1997a). In addition, state and local cultural resource laws are not directly applicable since the proposed undertaking is a federal action being directed by the Department of the Navy. The only New York

State laws dealing specifically with cemetery maintenance are governed by the New York State Cemetery Board and only concern "cemetery corporations," not-for-profit corporations organized for the disposal or burial of the deceased.

The NHPA, Executive Order No. 11593, and NEPA do apply to the Naval Hospital Cemetery, and it is in accordance with these acts that the Navy has conducted the present study and the three prior studies described earlier (Chapter 2). The Navy's Real Estate Procedure Manual (Subchapter 4.2.3), 38 USC Sections 2404 and 2405 (Subchapters 4.1.5 and 4.1.6), and 10 USC Section 1488 (Subchapter 4.1.7) apply to the removal of remains from discontinued cemeteries located on military reservations. This manual and these laws would only apply to the Naval Hospital Cemetery should action be taken involving the removal of any burials from the cemetery.

7.3 The Naval Hospital Cemetery

The Naval Hospital Cemetery was established in about 1831 as the final resting place of Sailors and Marines, and sometimes members of their families or other non-military personnel, who died at the Brooklyn Naval Hospital, locally, or on Navy ships. Over the 80 years during which burials are documented at the cemetery, from 1831 to 1910, military service members who died at a number of locations, including many Naval ships, were buried there. Reports suggest that by 1881 as many as 2,000 burials had occurred at the Naval Hospital Cemetery, although the present study only documented a total of 1,504 for the entire 80-year period. Because a register documenting burials from 1894 to 1910 was never located, and since the only information on burials during that period comes from the 1927 Index of the disinterred, this should be considered a minimum number of burials.

In 1926, 16 years after the cemetery was officially closed, the remains of 987 burials were removed from the cemetery and reinterred at the Cypress Hills National Cemetery. A comparison of those documented as buried to those documented as removed revealed 517 burials that are not documented as removed from the Naval Hospital Cemetery. This, too, should be considered a minimum number of undocumented burials.

7.4 Burials Not Documented as Removed

Where possible this research effort on the Naval Hospital Cemetery identified the name, rank/rate, and other information about the 517 burials that are not documented as removed. The names of newly identified burials are presented in Chapter 6 and further information is provided in the appendices to this report. Despite discrepancies encountered throughout the research, it was concluded that more than 500 burials are not documented as removed from the Naval Hospital Cemetery.

Analysis suggests that a number of contributing factors resulted in burials not being documented as removed from the Naval Hospital Cemetery, most importantly: the poor condition and/or absence of grave markers, lack of accurate plot plans, and clerical errors. It appears that the 1926 disinterment effort did not consider unmarked graves, but instead focused on those with intact grave markers. Several factors, including the natural deterioration of human bone over time, the damp, poorly drained condition of the cemetery during the 19th century, the undocumented removal of burials, and grave and ground disturbances over time, influenced whether burials still remain intact at the Naval Hospital Cemetery. Most remaining burials would likely be disturbed and poorly preserved although one possibly intact burial was encountered during limited excavations conducted in 1997.
