Алфавитный список названий хищных мух-зеленушек родовой и видовой группы эписемейства Dolichopodidae (Diptera). 2-е изд. Гричанов И.Я. Санкт-Петербург: ВИЗР, 2017, 563 с. (Приложения к журналу «Вестник защиты растений», №23).

Alphabetic list of generic and specific names of predatory flies of the epifamily Dolichopodidae (Diptera). 2nd ed. Igor Ya. Grichanov. St.Petersburg: VIZR, 2017, 563 p. («Plant Protection News, Supplements», N23).

В настоящее время сформировались представления о соблюдении сбалансированности всех компонентов биоты в агробиоценозах, в том числе энтомофагов (паразитов и хищников) и недопустимости ее нарушения при внесении пестицидов. Современная стратегия оптимизации защиты растений предусматривает сохранение целостности агробиоценоза в условиях проведения экологически безопасных химических обработок. Настоящая электронная книга предназначена для использования специалистами, работающим как в научно-исследовательских, так и учебных учреждениях, – энтомологами и экологами, интересующимися энтомофагами, студентами и аспирантами учебных и научных учреждений.

Список названий хищных мух-зеленушек в представленном виде начал формироваться как «Интерактивная база данных ДолиБанк» во Всероссийском институте защиты растений (ВИЗР) с конца 90-х годов XX века на основе системного подхода с учетом глобальных библиографических ресурсов. Ныне ДолиБанк представляет собой ежемесячно обновляемый электронный ресурс (<http://grichanov.aiq.ru/Genera3.htm>), организованный с 2003 г. как алфавитный список родов с гиперссылками к спискам видовых названий с библиографическими описаниями (регистрация в ЦИТИС № 50201151234 от 27.09.2011). В 2014 г. он был опубликован в № 14 Приложений к журналу Вестник защиты растений. Второе издание справочника содержит 257 существующих в настоящее время и 30 ископаемых родов Dolichopodidae (включая 7 существующих и 2 ископаемых родов Parathalassiinae), 2 существующих и 6 ископаемых родов Microphoridae, 8063 валидных вида (включая около 120 вымерших) и приблизительно 7000 отсылок к другим названиям видового ранга (на 1 января 2017 г.). С 2014 г. число валидных названий Dolichopodoidea увеличилось почти на 300 видов. Включены оригинальные родовые комбинации, синонимы, невалидные названия родов и видов. С 2005 г. новые записи в ДолиБанке сопровождаются числом типовых экземпляров, перечнем их депозитариев и типовых местообитаний. С начала 2007 г. все виды сопровождаются данными по их глобальному распространению. Чтобы избежать проблем с многочисленными изменениями родовых комбинаций, географическое распространение по странам привязано к оригинальным комбинациям видов (например, к Musca ungulata, а не к Dolichopus ungulatus). Второе издание справочника дополнено разделами «Классификация Dolichopodoidea» и «Биология и экономическое значение».

В результате поиска и выбора, встроенного в программное обеспечение своего компьютера, пользователь имеет возможность получить правильное таксономическое название, точное систематическое положение и библиографическую историю номенклатурных изменений латинских названий конкретных видов хищных мух-зеленушек эписемейства Dolichopodoidea (Diptera) мировой фауны по состоянию на 1 января 2017 г. Гипертекстовые ссылки от списка родовых названий к спискам включенных в таксон видов позволяют ему самостоятельно скомпоновать каталоги тех или иных таксонов мух-зеленушек.

Abstract

The generic and specific names of predatory flies of the epifamily Dolichopodoidae (Diptera) are listed, with 257 extant and 30 fossil genera of Dolichopodidae (including 7 extant and 2 fossil genera of Parathalassiinae), 2 extant and 6 fossil genera of Microphoridae, 8063 valid species names (including about 120 fossil species) and about 7000 lines with other names of species rank belonging to the families Microphoridae and Dolichopodidae including the subfamily Parathalassiinae. The total number of Dolichopodoidae increased by nearly 300 species since 2014. For each entry, nomenclatural details are given, including authorship, date, place of publication (in short) and page. For the genus-group names, these details also include the genus or subgenus status of the name, association of a genus with a subfamily or of association a subgenus with a genus, type species and method for designation. For the species-group names, these details also include type locality and species distribution. These details are provided for each species in its original combination only. The second edition of the reference book is supplemented with the sections “Classification of Dolichopodoidae” and “Biology and economic significance”.

KEY WORDS: Diptera, Dolichopodidae, Microphoridae, zoogeography, checklist, entomophage, predator.

INTRODUCTION

Created in 1999 and hitherto functioning as amateur resource, the Internet-site Dolichopodidae Homepage contains: General Information, Catalogues, Keys, Bibliography, Net Publications, and (since 2004) Phototheque, etc. (<http://grichanov.aiq.ru/Genera3.htm>). The parts Catalogues and Net Publications contain both original country lists of species, and links to accessible Internet-resources including catalogues and databases, as a rule created for taxa of a higher rank than family. At the beginning (1999), an Alphabetic list of scientific names of the family Dolichopodidae (Diptera) of the World compiled by Henk Meuffels (the Netherlands) was the most valuable part of the Site. It was used for the compilation of the first Check list of species of the family Dolichopodidae of the World. In 2003 this list (DoliBank) was published in the Internet and has been regularly updated since, being organized as an alphabetic list of genera with hyperlinks to lists of species with short bibliographic descriptions (Grichanov, 2005).

Since 2005 new entries into the DoliBank are accompanied with the number of types, type depositories and type localities for new and redescribed species. Simultaneously, every registered researcher has begun to receive e-mail Notifications about new entries. In early 2007 all species have been accompanied with data on their general distribution borrowed from the main published catalogs (Grichanov, 2007). To escape problems with numerous shifts of specific names from genus to genus, the distribution lists of countries are connected with original species combinations (e.g., with Musca unguilata rather than with Dolichopus unguilatus). Experience shows that the remote support of the site and regular updating the world taxonomic check list do not demand considerable expenses of time and money from the taxonomist, who is engaged to work mainly in a different field of activity. Publication of species lists and other materials as hypertext and tabular hypertext documents allows data retrieval by use of common search engines to find the Site in the Internet by a user query "genus – species". In most cases the necessary page of the Site appears in one of the first places after outputting search results. Thus, the submitted information resource favourably differs from relational databases (such as Fauna Europaea) by a minimum number of steps to receive the resulting data. As soon as the DoliBank will accumulate full data on the number of types, on type depositories and type localities for all species, then it will become a true Internet-based World catalog of Dolichopodidae (Grichanov, 2009).

The DoliBank includes now 257 extant and 30 fossil genera of Dolichopodidae (including 7 extant and 2 fossil genera of Parathalassiinae), 2 extant and 6 fossil genera of Microphoridae, 8063 valid species names (including about 120 fossil species) and about 7000 lines with other names of species rank belonging to the epifamily Dolichopodoidae (the families Microphoridae and Dolichopodidae including the subfamily Parathalassiinae), which is equivalent to the Dolichopodidae sensu stricto, Microphorinae and Parathalassiinae of Sinclair & Cumming (2006). It was registered in the Russian Centre of Information Technologies and Systems for Executive Power Authorities (Grichanov, 2011); nevertheless, the resource was formally considered to be unpublished despite its open access through the Internet. In 2014 we fixed the current state of the DoliBank (as of October 1, 2014) in order to facilitate its further citing (Grichanov, 2014). It is worth noting that a lot of misspellings and errors of previous catalogs (Robinson, 1970; Dyte, 1975; Dyte & Smith, 1980; Bickel & DYTE, 1989; Negrobov, 1991; Evenhuis, 1994; Pollet et al., 2004; Yang et al., 2006) are here corrected, while some others are probably still waiting corrections.

The number of valid species names in the superfamily Dolichopodoidae counted for zoogeographical regions is as follows:

	Afrotropical	Palaearctic	Nearctic	Oriental	Neotropical	Australasian	In all
Dolichopodidae (excluding Parathalassiinae)	771	1644	1303	1621	1216	1226	7945
Parathalassiinae	5	14	11	4	3	4	45
Microphoridae	3	31	18	1	0	1	73
In all	779	1689	1332	1626	1219	1231	8063
Including doubtful species names	~20	~50	~20	~20	~50	~20	~200

The total number of Dolichopodoidae has increased by nearly 300 species since 2014. The total number of species (8063) includes 102 fossil species of Dolichopodidae and 19 fossil species of Microphoridae.

CLASSIFICATION OF DOLICHOPODOIDAE

I follow here Yang et al. (2006) mainly, referring all known genera to the described subfamilies despite critical notes by Sinclair et al. (2008). For example, Sinclair et al. wrote that the genera of the subfamilies Antyxinae and Kowmunginae would have been better placed as incertae sedis in the Dolichopodidae “until a more rigorous phylogenetic study determines their placement as well as the status of the other subfamilies”. Many genera were recently described or declared as incertae sedis in the Dolichopodidae. I am afraid that their uncertain position bears a risk to leave them outside future revisions of subfamilies on a global scale. Therefore, I associate all those genera with one of 18 subfamilies of Dolichopodidae (including Parathalassiinae) based on Yang et al. (2006) with some changes based on the most recent literature and on my experience of treating dolichopodid genera. In addition, I divide here large subfamilies into tribes (if they were once proposed). None new taxon is here described. The sign † ahead of a name means extinct taxon.

BIOLOGY AND ECONOMIC SIGNIFICANCE

Almost all longlegged flies are polyphagous predators feeding on various fine invertebrates. In Hans Ulrich's recent review (Ulrich, 2005), 168 dolichopodid species from 47 genera are listed, for whom the predatory behaviour was observed. Among victims of the flies, larvae and imagoes of the lower Diptera (mosquitoes, gallmidges, black-flies) and eggs and larvae of tabanid and other dipteran flies have been recorded more often; higher attention to these insects, probably, results from their big medical and veterinary significance. For example, high rate of damaged eggs in batches and important role of dolichopodid predators in regulation of Tabanidae population density in nature have been marked (Negrobov & Oganesyan, 2003). Among other insect groups whose representatives are eaten by long-legged flies, imagoes and larvae of springtails, thrips, psocids, homopterans, occasionally eggs or larvae of dragonflies, beetles and moths are recorded. Other documented prey items include annelids, cladocerans, amphipods, small myriapods, arachnids, odonate eggs, termites, psocopterans, beetle larvae (i.e., Curculionidae and Scolytidae), early instar caterpillars, dead and wounded arthropods and amphibian embryos (references in Ulrich, 2005). Selecting prey, dolichopodids obviously prefer invertebrates having soft covers.

Larvae occur in mud, damp soil, leaf litter, moss, algal mats, decaying marine algae, sap wounds, under bark, in tree hole debris, within plant tissues, and on inter-tidal rocks (Dyte, 1959; Pouling, 1998, 2011). Most larvae are thought to be predators, or scavengers, except for Thrypticus which are phytophagous stem-miners in grasses, sedges and rushes (Dyte, 1959; Pouling, 1998).

Most of the numerous species of the cosmopolitan genus Medetera are associated with tree trunks. Imagoes of some Medetera species may be encountered in montane regions on large stones and rocks covered by mosses and lichens and in semi-desert regions in and around rodent burrows and other ground cavities. Many scientific works describe value of long-legged flies in forestry, first of all, value of flies of the genus Medetera as highly effective predators of cryptic stem and bark pests. In Russia in 1960-s, the first attempts to their breeding and use for control of bark beetles and other harmful coleopterans were made. Application of long-legged flies and other entomophages in forestry practice as bioagents has not found way to practice, probably, by economic reasons. Regulatory role of Medetera species has been studied in Estonia, Georgia, Latvia, Lithuania, Russia, Ukraine, USA and many other countries. Meanwhile, dolichopodids have a great importance for agriculture. They have been recorded in considerable amounts in orchards (apple, pear, peach), vineyards, winter and spring wheat, evidently being a stable component of these agroecosystems (Grichanov, 1990, 1991, 1997; Negrobov & Kamolov, 1992; Grichanov & Shamshev, 1993). Medetera flies can also feed on aphids, thrips and mites populating plants of cotton, grain, vegetable, fruit and other cultures, together with other entomophages regulating development and reproduction of dangerous pests, especially at irrigation farming (Rathman et al., 1988; Meuffels et al., 1989; Brunel et al., 1989; Grichanov & Shamshev, 1993).

Artificial breeding of predatory long-legged flies and their application in the closed ground for control of hothouse pests seem to be rather promising. First such experiments with the Medetera flies have been undertaken by the Italian researchers (Moreschi, 2001, 2002a,b; etc.). They have underlined, that Medetera feed in hothouses and greenhouses on such harmful invertebrates, as sciarid midge Bradysia paupera, aphids Macrosiphum rosae, Aphis fabae, Myzus persicae, Illinoia liriodendri, whiteflies Trialeurodes vaporariorum, Bemisia tabaci, thrips Frankliniella occidentalis, springtail Folsomia candida and mites (Tyrophagus spp.). Three methods of Medetera cultivation, from rather complex and laborious to the most simple, have been tested. Having carried out the detailed analysis of biological characteristics of bred and released in hothouses Medetera flies, the Italian experts have noted both prospects and economic efficiency of the proposed method of biological control. We recommend all other experts in the field of biomethod application in the closed ground to pay attention to this very interesting group of insect entomophages.

Several genera have been reported as predators on the immatures and emerging adults of mosquitoes, including the Anopheles gambiae Giles complex, the most important vectors of malaria in sub-Saharan Africa (Service, 1971, 1973; Ulrich, 2005). Several Neotropical species of the phytophagous genus Thrypticus have been reared from the petioles and stems of water hyacinth. These species have potential as biocontrol agents of this New World aquatic plant which is an invasive weed in the waterways of Asia, Australasia and Africa (Bickel & Hernández, 2004). A number of studies (e.g., Gelbič & Olejníček, 2011 and references cited therein) demonstrate that dolichopodids have very specific habitat requirements and react quickly to environmental changes, making them potentially useful as bioindicators for site quality assessment and conservation purposes.

In addition to feeding on live prey, many adult dolichopodids have also been observed taking up honeydew (Ulrich, 2005) and some are known to be anthophilous and feed on nectar (Pollet et al., 2010 and references cited therein).

Most adult dolichopodids occur on sand, damp ground, grass, leaves, tree trunks, river rocks, and on other surfaces near open water. Adults are abundant in warm moist environments, including stream and lake margins, forests, salt marshes, seashores and freshwater seepages. A great many species of Dolichopodidae may be collected by use of Malaise and light traps, or by sweeping through vegetation with a net.

Many rare species are known only from their type localities. When such species are only known from small blocks of remnant or disturbed vegetation, their long-term survival is more problematical, especially in highly altered agricultural and urban districts. They may be threatened, if their remnant habitats are degraded by burning, grazing, clearing or invasion by exotic weeds, replaced by settlements, roads and other anthropogenic landscapes. Active application of chemical plant protection means, land reclamation, changes in land use technologies towards more rationalized approaches can have adverse effects on the biodiversity of natural ecosystems.

FORMAT OF THE LIST

The list of generic names provided before the main check list shows the number of valid species for valid genera including fossil species and the number of fossil species separately (if present). It is arranged alphabetically for the valid genera; each genus is followed by the list of valid subgenera, available and unavailable synonyms and homonyms (if present) arranged chronologically and preceded with the equality sign. All generic names in that list are provided with hyperlinks to corresponding species lists in the main check list preceded with a generic name having additional information. For each entry, nomenclatural details are given, including authorship, date, place of publication (in short) and page. For the genus-group names, these details also include the genus or subgenus status of the name (between the name and author in square brackets), association of a genus with a subfamily or association of a subgenus with a genus (in parenthesis), then (after asterisk) type species and method for designation. Invalid (after double slash) or valid (after asterisk) synonymization is mentioned for a name (if present) accompanied with a reference. Plus in parenthesis (+) is placed between the name and author for extinct taxa. For the species-group names, these details also include (between double asterisk and single asterisk) type status and number (HT for holotype, PT for paratypes, LT for lectotype, PLT for paralectotypes, NT for neotype and ST for syntype), sex of the holotype (M for male and F for female) and depository (if known), type locality and species distribution. These details are provided for each species in its original combination only. Depository abbreviations follow Neal L. Evenhuis (2014). The distribution list provided for each valid species in its original combination is based on data from the most recent catalogs and revisions, being sometimes incomplete. Secondary species combinations contain only authorship, year (in parenthesis), original genus of species description (in square brackets) and first reference for a new combination (in parenthesis). Each entry for valid species combinations is ended with the asterisk (*). Each invalid species combination is ended with a present generic position of a species (after asterisk). Some incorrect Latin spellings (from catalogs mainly) and errors are also included in the main check list (in square brackets). Entries with incorrect spellings are not ended with the asterisk. It is worth noting that all non-Latin words (authors, journal titles etc.) are here Latinized in order to escape problems with character coding. So, superscripts and subscripts are here omitted, and non-Latin letters from French, Slav, Turkish and other languages are changed into the closest Latin letters.
