WELCOME to our vacation kitchen! Pizza, pasta and more

The Olivenbauer invites you on a journey to the south. Enjoy the best recipes of the regional cuisine and the great magician who enchants everything:

our first class olive oil.

Vegetarian and vegan dishes are specially marked!

An old house, a donkey named Olivia and excellent olive oil...

...these are the ingredients and events that came together in 1998 when Rainer Jörg decided to buy a house in need of renovation with a restaurant in it in his home village Wertach. Shortly thereafter, the prototype of the mediterranean transport, donkey lady Olivia, found a new home with him. The current pizza maker was also looking for a new home, so it was time for the electrician and entrepreneur Jörg to deal with the italian cuisine and the best ingredients for it. What would the italian cuisine be without olives and olive oil? Even if Rainer Jörg can not grow the olives by himself in the Allgäu – the idea of good italian cuisine „Beim Olivenbauer“ was born. You can also find dishes from the bavarian kitchen as well as vegetarian and vegan dishes. The philosophy of all Olivenbauer restaurants is to use simple, good, natural ingredients and as regional and seasonal as possible.

Homesickness

For all those who are homesick for Allgäu-Swabian dishes. Wanderlust is the desire of new experiences, homesickness leads to a longing for the safety and familiar. Olivenbauers thoughts on his venetian tavern directly on the Hopfensee

In the Middle Ages, the Republic of Venice was one of the richest cities in the world at that time. A merchant fleet of 1200 large-bellied merchant ships crossed the mediterranean sea with goods from all over the world, which were handled in Venice. The German merchants, above all the Augsburg Welser and Fugger, had their own palace of the German merchants in the merchants' residential district at the Rialto bridge on the Grand Canal. There were Venetian traders who sold olive oil in large quantities to northern Europe, to Germany. Bridges (Ponte de l'Ogio), streets (Calle de l'Ogio) and squares (Fondamenta de l'Ogio) testify to the importance of the „gold of the mediterranean“ in the city. Even today, Venice with its magnificent palaces and trading houses, its huge arsenal in which the ships of the maritime power were built and maintained, seems like a city from 1001 nights. King Ludwig II. loved the oriental-byzantine architectural style so much that he had rebuilt it in the Neuschwanstein castle and on his Schachen hunting lodge...and has lost himself in this fairytale world. His friend and musical genius Richard Wagner was addicted to the beauty of this city too. He lived in Venice with his family in the Palazzo Vendramin until the end of his life. Reasons enough for the Olivenbauer to let his guests experience the culinary wealth of Venice as a gateway to the pleasures of the mediterranean. The facade is modeled on a typical Venetian street. The terrace kept as a jetty. Inside there is a byzantine hall with the Doge's council corner and the adjoining room corresponds to a captain's room in the Venice arsenal. From all seats you can enjoy a magnificent view of the Hopfensee and the Allgäu mountains. Let us, the Olivenbauer team, spoil you as your hosts!
