Boulder, Broomfield counties boast 2,000 companies in latest directory

Technology permeates the Boulder Valley economy. From Boulder to Broomfield, Lafayette to Louisville, Longmont to points beyond, tech companies here represent an economic force found in only a few regions of the United States.

Colorado consistently ranks at or near the top of the country in terms of concentration of high-tech workers, with the Boulder-Longmont area boasting the nation's highest concentrations of software workers, according to the Software & Information Industry Association.

This concentration has built an economy characterized by innovation, wealth and a highly educated work force. The University of Colorado, as well as many federal laboratories, feeds this economy with new inventions that create spinoff companies through technology transfer.

This latest edition of the Tech & Manufacturers Directory demonstrates the scope of these important sectors. With about 2,000 companies featured, the directory includes many industry categories for ease of use, and it is full of small technology startups that contribute to the region's manufacturing base.

Economic Outlook, produced by the University of Colorado's Leeds School of Business. The report also forecasts that manufacturing will account for annual wages of $140.7 million in Colorado. That's down from its peak a decade ago, but the sector continues to be a major element of the state's economy.

ASSOCIATIONS: Colorado-based establishments that promote the professional interests of companies with services primarily related to manufacturing and technology. These organizations may conduct research; develop statistics; sponsor quality and certification standards; lobby public officials; or publish newsletters, books or periodicals.

AEROSPACE: Companies that conduct research and development, engineering and/or manufacturing related to aircraft, missiles, space vehicles or auxiliary equipment or parts. Includes military and non-military prime contractors and other contractors devoting a significant portion of their business to aerospace.

AGRIBUSINESS: Companies that make products or are involved in technologies related to farming, ranching or agriculture.

APPAREL: Companies that manufacture clothing or accessories — such as neckties, belts or purses — for men, women and children as well as for specific manufacturing uses such as clean room garments. Includes contract cutting and sewing companies and embroidery businesses. Manufacturers of apparel specifically made for sports are listed in the Sports section.

AUTOMOTIVE & TRANSPORTATION: Companies that manufacture products or are involved in technologies related to vehicles and transportation including passenger cars, trucks, locomotives, buses, motorcycles, commercial ships, pleasure boats or recreational vehicles. Includes aftermarket items such as motor vehicle parts, accessories, tools, equipment, materials and supplies.

BIOSCIENCE: Companies with products or services that have their origins in any field related to the life sciences such as environmental, biology, botany, chemistry, food, fisheries, forests, health, medicine, oceanography, pharmacy, veterinary and other allied industries.

COMMERCIAL PRINTERS: Companies that provide printing services including black-and-white and color printing using photocopying and/or sheet-fed or web press offset lithography. They also may provide prepress services including outputting computer files directly to film or plates and creating color separations, and post-press services such as folding, die cutting and binding.

COMPUTERS & PERIPHERALS: Companies that manufacture or service computer-related products including PCs, laptops, PDAs, mainframes, modems, monitors, printers and the like. Includes computer product R&D and companies making computer accessories — like joysticks or speakers. Includes computer training in repair, programming, software packages, business systems, computer operations and network management. Related services include disaster recovery services, software installation services, security management, etc.

DATA SERVICES: Companies that provide value-added data including market and competitive intelligence, marketing lists and sales leads.

DATA STORAGE: Companies that are involved in R&D, engineering, manufacturing, software, repair and/or services related to magnetic, optical and holographic recording devices — disk drives and arrays, tape drives and arrays, automated libraries, etc. Includes companies that do the same with storage media — magnetic tape and/or cassettes, optical and holographic disks, hard drive media, etc.

FOOD & BEVERAGE PRODUCERS: Food or products manufacturers including beverages (soft drinks, juices, mineral water, beer, mead and wine), baked goods, candy, cheese, meat, condiments and other items.

HOME & BUILDING PRODUCTS: Companies that manufacture products related to home furnishings, small appliances, home consumer goods and home-building products such as cabinets, windows or paneling.

INTERNET: Companies with services specifically related to the Internet. Includes e-commerce companies selling products online; Internet service providers and Web hosting companies; companies offering e-mail list management and/or tracking systems; and companies that develop and sell hardware or software primarily related to Internet functions. Internet publishing is listed under Publishing; Web development is listed under Web Development INSTRUMENTS: Companies that manufacture specific-purpose instrumentation or controls. Includes instruments for measuring and testing electricity and electrical signals; instruments for measuring, displaying, indicating, recording, transmitting and controlling industrial processes; and instruments for search, detection, navigation, guidance, aeronautical and nautical systems.

MACHINE SHOPS: Companies engaged in machining metal parts on a job or order basis using machine tools, such as lathes, automatic screw machines, and machines for boring, grinding and milling.

MATERIAL PRODUCERS: Companies that manufacture chemicals or any other materials used in advanced technological production processes or products. Companies included may be primary source producers or suppliers, fabricators, designers or assemblers.

MEDICAL PRODUCTS: Companies involved in the manufacture or R&D of medical-related products. Includes laboratory apparatus and furniture, surgical and medical instruments, surgical appliances and supplies, dental equipment and supplies. Also includes electromedical and electrotherapeutic apparatus such as magnetic resonance imaging equipment, ultrasound equipment, pacemakers, hearing aids, electrocardiographs, etc.

MICROELECTRONICS: Companies involved in the production, fabrication, design or assembly of electronic components, subassemblies or finished products. Includes circuit board manufacturers and designers.

MISCELLANEOUS: Manufacturers and technology providers that could not be categorized into any of the directory's other categories.

NANOTECHNOLOGY: Companies with a primary focus on R&D and manufacture of devices, materials, electronics, machines, medicines, etc. on the scale of atoms and molecules.

PERSONAL-CARE PRODUCTS: Companies that manufacture personal-care products including cosmetics, fragrances, feminine hygiene, hair care, oral hygiene and skin care. Also includes makers of vitamins and nutritional supplements.

PET PRODUCTS MANUFACTURERS: Companies that manufacture pet food, treats, toys, clothes, shelters, grooming and health products and accessories.

PHOTONICS: Companies with a primary focus on the R&D and manufacture of products and services dealing with the generation, manipulation and detection of light. Includes traditional optics — cameras, glasses, light bulbs and telescopes — and optoelectronics used for medical devices, computers, telecommunications, biotechnology, military, remote sensing, transportation, space exploration, etc.

PLASTICS: Companies involved in the manufacture or R&D of plastic parts or products including injection molding, laminating, resins, coatings, foams, etc.

PUBLISHERS: Print, electronic and or audio publishing companies. Includes newspapers, magazines, books, catalogs, greeting cards and advertising coupons. Also includes companies involved with TV and radio programming, Internet and e-mail publications and music/audiotape/videotape/CD/DVD producers. Software publishers are included in Software.

REMOTE SENSING: Companies engaged in or producing products for gathering, interpreting and mapping geophysical data. Includes companies that locate and measure subsurface resources, such as oil, gas and minerals. Surveying techniques may include magnetic surveys, gravity surveys, seismic surveys, or electrical and electromagnetic surveys.

RESEARCH & DEVELOPMENT: Companies and laboratories engaged primarily in either basic or applied research in the physical or social sciences. Physical sciences include electronics, computers, chemistry, geology, mathematics, oceanography, physics and other allied subjects. Social sciences include cognitive development, sociology, psychology, language, behavior, economics and others.

ROBOTICS: Companies engaged in the R&D or manufacture of automated mechanical systems.

SIGN COMPANIES: Companies that design, create and install signs. Products include, but are not limited to, banners, building signs, menu boards, directional signs, vehicle graphics, trade show exhibits and displays, architectural signs, point-of-purchase signs, etc.

SOFTWARE & INTEGRATED SYSTEMS: Companies that produce, design or perform services concerning any aspect of software (writing, modifying, testing or supporting) for PCs, mainframes, PDAs or embedded systems. Includes custom computer programming services, software publishers and companies that mass reproduce computer software on disks, tapes, cartridges or CD-ROMs.

SPORTS: Companies that manufacture sporting goods and apparel, including parts specifically designed for the sporting goods industry.

TELECOMMUNICATIONS: Companies that perform telecommunications R&D or that manufacture telecommunications transmission equipment, test equipment, components or software. Includes wired and wireless carriers of voice, data, text, sound and video transmissions, including telephone, paging, radio, broadcast, cable and satellite TV, but not Internet service providers (included under Internet). Includes telecommunications equipment and wiring installers, telecommunications management consultants and telecommunications services resellers.

TESTING LABORATORIES: Companies and laboratories engaged in performing physical, chemical and other analytical testing services, such as acoustics or vibration testing, assaying, biological testing, calibration testing, electrical and electronic testing, geotechnical testing, mechanical testing, nondestructive testing or thermal testing.

WEB DEVELOPMENT: Web design and development including graphics, software, content, databases, e-commerce, Web applications and Web marketing. Does not include ISPs or hosting companies, which are listed under Internet.

WHOLESALE: Companies manufacturing and/or selling goods at the wholesale level. Includes both wholesale merchants who sell goods on their own account and brokers who arrange sales for others for a commission or fee.

Companies surveyed for the Tech & Manufacturers Directory are asked to choose a category for their company. If your company should be listed in another category, please e-mail your request to Research Director Beth Edwards at research@bcbr.com.

Santo Blanco works on an entertainment center at Woodley's Fine Furniture's manufacturing plant in Longmont. Dick Brack, the company's production manager, said the company takes great pride in making everything locally, comparing a Woodley's product to a top-of-the-line sports car.

BY REBECCA COLE

Business Report Correspondent

While more and more companies are manufacturing their products offshore, there are companies in the Boulder Valley that take pride in making their products in the U.S.

Companies such as Celestial Seasonings, Rudi's Organic Bakery and Woodley's Fine Furniture have manufactured here for so long — more than three decades — that “made in Boulder” is part of their brand DNA.

With so many customers demanding U.S.-made goods, area manufacturers are capitalizing on a market willing to pay more for local products and peace of mind. By leveraging the community of entrepreneurs and innovators for labor, venture capital investment and market research, these companies are thriving.

WOODLEY'S FINE FURNITURE

After three decades of making hardwood furnishings in Longmont, Woodley's Fine Furniture now has seven locations across the Denver metro area. Dick Brack, the company's production manager, has witnessed most of the evolution.

Employed 25 years ago while in high school to sweep floors, Brack worked his way up to running machines, and then building and finishing furniture. He has seen many changes along the way.

“If I was told I'd use a computer to do woodwork I'd have laughed,” Brack said.

Woodley's employs about 60 people in its shop, and it turns out between 160 and 180 orders a week. Six years ago the company made the switch to just-in-time manufacturing, which helped to cut down on overhead and increase efficiency — critical now with higher fuel and transportation costs.

Brack said Woodley's doesn't compete with area furniture warehouses. Woodley's customers have a different mentality.

“You just don't find much like this made in the U.S. anymore. The company takes great pride in making everything locally,” Brack said, comparing a Woodley’s product to a top-of-the-line sports car.

In addition to focusing on quality and customer service, Brack said Woodley’s is committed to getting the most out of everything it consumes. Sawdust is sold to local landscapers and dairy farmers; all cardboard is recycled, and lumber suppliers plant more trees than they cut down.

“The last thing you want to do is put yourself out of business or drive costs up due to decreased supply,” Brack said.

MEDIVANCE

A medical device company, Medivance manufactures ArcticSun. Using pads placed on the patient’s skin, and monitored by a control panel, ArcticSun offers a noninvasive way to induce therapeutic hypothermia.

Used for some cases of cardiac arrest and stroke, therapeutic hypothermia helps slow metabolism and reduces the body’s demand for oxygen.

Founded in 1998 by venture capital firm Partisan Management, Medivance assembles and tests the pads and control panels in its Louisville headquarters. Ron Grossheim, vice president of operations, said sales have doubled every year for the last three years.

“Our product has had a lot of changes, and it’s really only been on the marketplace for the past four or five years,” Grossheim said.

Grossheim said with all of the growth it has been important to keep engineering, and research and development closely connected. However, Grossman said the company is continually evaluating the cost effectiveness of manufacturing here — especially the labor element.

“To be honest, labor is a little tight right now,” Grossheim said. “It’s hard for us to find good manufacturing people.”

With the capacity to expand here in Boulder, Grossheim said as the company gets larger the shortage of labor may become more of an issue in the next several years.

CRESCENT MOON

Co-founded and operated by Jake Thamm and his wife, Tamara Laug, Crescent Moon has made snowshoes in Boulder for the past 11 years. Thamm said the area’s incredible resources and outdoor industry is a “home-grown market research (community). We can quickly test new ideas and designs across a broad spectrum of customers.”

Using all local or U.S.-made parts — such as aircraft-grade aluminum tubing, steel crampons — Crescent Moon’s employees assemble, cut and drill, while a company in Rollinsville injection-molds the bindings.

“We’ve seen a dramatic increase in customers choosing U.S.-made products,” Thamm said. “It’s important to people.”

In terms of green manufacturing, Thamm said Crescent Moon sells snowshoes made without any PVC. The company is 100 percent wind-powered and recycles nearly everything it uses.

Thamm said revenues are already 42 percent higher than in 2007, partly due to a great winter season, but also because the company is recognized in the industry for its designs and quality.

“It may not be the cheapest way to make snowshoes, but we’re not trying to compete

RUDI’S ORGANIC BAKERY

For more than 30 years, Rudi’s Organic Bakery has made natural, wholesome bread products using traditional craft-baking methods. The bakery was part of Boulder’s original natural foods wave of the 1970s.

It became one of the first bakeries to be certified organic in 1998.

“We strive to make the healthiest, best-tasting bread we can find,” said Doug Radi, vice president of marketing.

In 2005 the company was purchased by the Charterhouse Group, a New York-based private equity firm, but operations still remain in Boulder.

certified-organic brand you have to build quality into the product,” Radi said.

About 120 employees work in Rudi’s 61,000-square-foot facility, six days a week, in two to three shifts. Although the company doesn’t use conventional throughput methods — relying instead on a small-batch, slower fermentation process — Rudi’s can churn out 50,000 loaves a day.

Radi said that being located in the center of the natural and organic market allows the company to cull the area’s passionate experts. In addition, Rudi’s close proximity to Denver — the company’s primary market — to the wheat fields of the upper Midwest and to the West Coast organic market helps keep costs low.

Rudi’s “zero waste” practice fits with the company’s healthy and natural image. Stale bread and bakery scraps are picked up from stores and given to local farmers for pig feed.

“I think it’s exciting to tell that story from the manufacturing side — that we’re the real deal,” Radi said. “Being from Boulder makes it even more real.”

CELESTIAL SEASONINGS

As boxes of Bengal Spice and Tension Tamer zip by on several lines snaking through Celestial Seasonings’ 150,000-square-foot facility, guest relations ambassador — and employee of 31 years — Steve Spencer said he has the best job in the world.

Since its origins in 1969, Celestial Seasonings has evolved into one of the area’s iconic brands. Today the company, which merged with the Hain Group in 2000, purchases whole tea and herbs from around the world — China, India, Argentina, Thailand — to produce 1.4 billion bags of tea every year from its Boulder location.

“Boulder was very different place then. People were driving VW buses with rainbows painted on them,” Spencer said. “Now they’re driving BMW’s.”

Spencer said Celestial Seasonings’ core values and ideals remain the same and derive from that era. “We’ve maintained our integrity and our high standards,” he said.

Those high standards extend beyond the product itself. Celestial Seasonings’ green stance — recycled packaging, no strings or paper tabs — and promotion of fair-trade practices with suppliers has been a company mantra for decades.

“We’ve been buying from the same growers for a long time. We know them. We know their families,” Spencer said. “We were fair trade before it was invented.”

One of the few factories that visitors can tour for free, Celestial Seasonings’ production process and its famous “mint room” has delighted more than a million people since 1992.

Spencer said because customers have such emotional ties to their products, allowing them to actually experience the sounds and aromas of making tea in Boulder — on Sleepytime Drive, no less — forges a close bond.

“Boulder is so important to our brand,” Spencer said. “It’s a whole unique blend, a chemistry of people that is just interesting.”

Business and Our Environment

EcoGreenOffice sells sustainable supplies

Offices can go green by buying recycled paper, printer cartridges

BY BARBARA HEY

Business Report Correspondent

BOULDER — Every office consumes reams of paper, countless printing cartridges, Post-it notes, pens and markers by the thousands.

Business owners may feel chagrined at the environmental toll of manufacturing, shipping and disposing of these office essentials, but few realize there is a better, more Earth-friendly way to keep copiers flowing and employees supplied.

Bryan Beckett and Dave Olsen founded EcoGreenOffice to offer a convenient, cost-effective way for businesses to shift to high-quality, environmentally sensitive products and services. The partners — brothers-in-law with a common entrepreneurial streak — were motivated to start the business when frustrated in their own quest for eco-friendly supplies.

“Dave and I wanted to use green office products, but they were hard to find and overpriced,” Beckett said.

The expenditure — both time and money — means many companies can't justify going green. However, going green is a sound marketing strategy since many consumers prefer green businesses.

Eleven months ago Beckett and Olsen self-funded the launch of EcoGreenOffice — a one-stop shop for all things green. They searched for suppliers and negotiated competitive pricing.

“We explained our mission, and they saw us spearheading potential businesses growth,” Olsen said.

The goal is to be both the largest supplier of green office products and a consumer search engine connecting people with green companies nationwide, Olsen said. Of the thousands of products in the store’s inventory the top sellers are the lifeblood of any office — paper and printer cartridges.

The store offers the choice of papers with 30, 50 or 100 percent post-consumer content, and they all come with Forest Stewardship Council, or FSC, certification — an assurance of quality not always found on recycled products in big-box retailers.

Beckett and Olsen are determined to correct the misperception that remanufactured products are inferior to brand new. While some green-billed products are sourced from across the globe and are of less-than-optimum quality, the partners stock only the best products and strive for local when possible.

The printer cartridges are reconditioned in Colorado and to the highest specifications — cleaned, refilled with ink and given a new chip.

As for expense, recycled paper is pricier than virgin, but customers more than make up the difference with recycled printer cartridges. “Most other recycled products are priced identically,” Beckett said. “We’ve found that most of the time our customers come out ahead.”

Customers get immediate feedback quantifying how many trees were saved, landfill space preserved and pollution lessened with that purchase. To encourage efficient ordering shipping is free on $50 or up. To minimize shipping miles supply sites are in every state serviced.

In addition to pens, papers, binders made from recycled plastic and a staple-free stapler, the company also sells nontoxic cleaning supplies to replace harsh chemicals that taint the indoor environment of the workplace.

One paramount benefit to customers — or “partners” — is that they get big play on the store’s Web site. A link on the site highlights the companies using EcoGreenOffice products, along with contact information. This enables consumers to connect and support green-minded businesses.

“We give recognition to our partners and spread awareness of their commitment to the environment,” Beckett said. Partners can also use the store’s logo.

EcoGreenOffice provides print and design services and focuses on letterhead, envelopes and business cards.

“If a company wants to be green a lot of things have to be changed,” Olsen said. If the paper used in the printer paper is post-consumer, the next step is for business stationary to be printed on the same, tree-friendly stock.

The key to growth is the Web site, which became fully functional in July.

This has expanded the company’s reach, and now customers in nine states buy E.G.O. products. “We’ve exceeded our sales goals exponentially,” Olsen said.

Among the store’s clients are Centerplate event planners at Invesco Field and 5280 Magazine. Paul Ozburn, the revenue manager at Boulder Outlook Hotel and Suites, explained why his facility is now a regular customer. “They have good products at lower prices. We do it all electronically so there’s no paperwork. It was a slam dunk.”

The product line is expanding. New additions include large-format plotter paper used by architecture and engineering firms, fully degradable bags for retailers and school supplies.

The company is considering business-to-business consulting to facilitate companies interested in becoming green.

“We get real excited about what we have to offer,” Beckett said.

TECHNOLOGY

The Boulder Innovation Center hopes to work closely with the University of Colorado Technology Transfer Office in the field of bioscience. The innovation center's Executive Director Tim Bour said, "We don't get 10 percent of our cases from CU, but certainly we've been focused on forging a strong relationship there." Here scientists work in a lab at CU's Denver Health Sciences Center's Anschutz Medical Campus Lab.

foods, and software and systems, but the recent expansion has added program areas in nanotechnology, optical, engineering, bioscience, energy and clean tech.

That's just fine with the CU Technology Transfer Office, said Kate Tallman, CU's assistant vice president for technology transfer.

"We've been involved with BIC since its inception (in 2005)," Tallman said. "(Bour) has really defined the process and expanded the range of scientific or technical ideas and patents are examined that are not ultimately selected for business creation.

"There's some triaging for best potential at TTO, but no one is exactly sure what the commercial potential is of any invention," Bour said. "Sciences at the university is funded with the aim of furthering scientific knowledge and not for business creation. There's quite a gap between there and actually creating a business."

That's where having hundreds of potential advisers can be useful.

Improving manufacturing performance and productivity

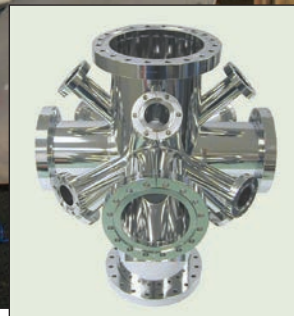

MKS Instruments, Inc. is a global provider of instruments, vacuum subsystems, and process control solutions that measure, control, power, monitor and analyze critical parameters of advanced manufacturing processes to improve process performance and productivity. Our products are derived from our core competencies in pressure measurement and control, materials delivery, gas composition analysis, electrostatic charge management, control and information technology, power and reactive gas generation, and vacuum containment and transport. Our primary served markets are manufacturers of capital equipment for semiconductor devices, and for other thin film applications including flat panel displays, solar cells, data storage media, and other advanced coatings. We also leverage our technology in markets with advanced manufacturing applications including medical equipment, biopharmaceutical manufacturing, energy generation and environmental monitoring.

The HPS® Products division in Boulder, Colorado was founded in 1976 by Bill Stewart and Norman Peacock. The company began with one product line of stainless steel vacuum valves and 6 employees. In 1986 the company was acquired by MKS Instruments (Nasdaq: MKSI), based in Andover, Mass. Today the HPS division in Boulder employs 178 people and manufactures a complete line of stainless steel fittings, vacuum valves, heaters, vacuum gauges, and manifolds used in the manufacturing of semiconductors and solar cells in the United States, Asia and Europe. These products are also utilized by high energy research facilities around the world.

In 2003 HPS launched a line of ASME BPE stainless steel fittings, components, filter housings, and heaters designed and manufactured for the biotechnology and pharmaceutical processing industries. These components can be used in any liquid flow process or high purity utility application where cleanability, sterility, dimensional integrity, and materials of construction are critical. HPS is now the preferred supplier of ASME vessels, clean-in-place manifolds, stainless steel fittings, and filter housing assemblies for many of the local biotechnology and pharmaceutical manufacturers.

SMALL BUSINESS
Video game retailer knows all, 15A | Cut the 'red tape,' 15A

A business plan makes life easy

Having a plan in place helps startups, owners figure out market niche

BY KEELY BROWN
Business Report Commentator

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second article of a four-part series describing how to start and run a small business profitably. The Business Report will talk to small business experts and owners in order to figure out the do's and don'ts of becoming your own boss.

You're ready to finally start your own business. You've got a great idea, you've got the money to finance it, and you think you've got your market figured out. You've even got a list of potential customers for your service or product. What else could you possibly need?

Campers buying style, comfort

Outdoor sales steady with more day hikers, fewer backpackers

BY DAVID CLUCAS
Staff Writer

More Americans are hiking, less are backpacking and about the same amount are camping, says 2008 according to the Outdoor Industry Foundation.

These numbers are watched closely by outdoor apparel and gear companies, some of which are headquartered here in the Boulder Valley.

The Boulder County Business Report also took a look at the numbers and talked to local companies to get a feel for the state of the outdoor industry and where it's going in 2008.

Outdoor fashion shows

Overall, Americans are spending more money on outdoor products, according to the Outdoor Industry Foundation. Total outdoor sales (excluding hiking and public sports) rose 9 percent in 2006, from $6.9 billion. Broken down, chain store sales rose 9 percent to $4.15 billion, specialty store sales rose 9 percent to $2.0 billion and Internet sales rose 12 percent to $677 million.

Most of the gains came from increased sales in apparel and footwear. Apparel accounted for nearly half of all outdoor sales in 2006 at $3.2 billion, up from 19 percent from 2005. Footwear sales came in at $1.26 billion, up 19 percent from the previous year.

Outdoor equipment sales, $305 million, and equipment accessory sales, $1.5 billion, remained about the same during the period.

Scott Gaudier, public relations manager for Boulder-based Montbell America Inc., said the company has seen an increase in its apparel sales.

"People are now demanding a lot more fashion apparel in the outdoors," he said. And while the technology of outdoor apparel is getting better, fashions are also coming back to the fore.

Some of Montbell's biggest sellers are its down jackets and its medium wool updated with new styles.

"Down has proven to be the best material to keep you warm, and wool retains odor less than the synthetic fibers," he said.

Boulder-based Golite LLC is working with Longmont-based Traffic LLC to introduce a new line of its Downside outdoor clothing, which blends polyester fibers with natural cotton, according to Golite Sales Manager Kevin Vele.

"The result is known as Cicca fabric, which allows the apparel to fight odor, manage moisture and absorb ultraviolet light better than regular materials. It's also an environmental benefit since no chemical applications are used," Vele said.

Around the campfire

From 2006 to 2007, there was virtually no change in the percentage of Americans going camping, according to the Outdoor Industry Foundation's most recent annual data on participation.

About 68.1 million, or 28.4 percent of Americans, are estimated to have gone camping in 2007. That's compared to 64.5 million, or 30.2 percent, in 2006.

The percentage of car campers versus tent campers (at least a quarter of a mile away from the car) each remained steady. About 17.7 million, or 25 percent of Americans, cars, are estimated to have trail camped in 2007, compared to 17.7 million, or 27.1 percent that camped at their car.

Local outdoor companies and stores say numbers tell a slightly different story. Sales of backpacking tents have declined, and sales of recreation tents have increased.

An Boulder-based Kelly Inc. — more Kelly or Golite — Marketing Manager Christian Johnson said the company is experiencing, rather than a backcountry experience.

"When people are camping, they are setting up a base camp at the car and doing multiple activities," Johnson said. "One day they may go for a hike, then, the next day, they'll ride, and after that they'll use the frisbee around."

He said more tent campers also are demanding more features from home furnishings such as electronics, which are responding with larger tents with more amenities and storage shelves.

"One of our car campers will fit eight people comfortably," Vele said.

As far as sleeping bags, from the new season from a line of Down Huger sleeping bags, Gaudier said. The bags use a down filling to keep them

Montbell's line of Down Huger sleeping bags are popular for their patented stretch technology, which allow people to move freely inside the bag.

Been There. Won That.™

From coast to coast, Lathrop & Gage is now one of the nation's pre-eminent litigation firms.

CALIFORNIA Successfully defended our client, a global pet nutrition company, against claims of unfair labor practices arising out of the closure of a union-represented warehouse and outsourcing of work.

MINNESOTA Represented the present Yellow Roadway Corp. in an action brought by various tax protesters in the federal court. Successfully obtained judgment against the plaintiffs and an award of attorneys' fees.

ILLINOIS PARMELEE INDUSTRIES, INC. V. FENDALL, INC. Represented one of the country's largest manufacturers of protective safety prescription eyewear in a lengthy arbitration. Our litigators recovered more than $1.5 million in damages from a seller who misrepresented the value of its business.

MASSACHUSETTS Defended a 165-year-old financial services company in an insurance sales practice class action that alleged fraud, RICO, negligent misrepresentation, churning and similar claims. A motion to dismiss was granted for our client and was affirmed by the First Circuit Court of Appeals.

COLORADO Defended Yahoo!, the No. 1 global Internet brand and the most visited Internet destination worldwide, in a fraud and misrepresentation action by a former employee. Obtained a defense verdict in federal court.

COLORADO In Avon, Colorado, recovered more than $10 million on behalf of insurer in a fire loss that represented the largest personal lines loss in the history of a company.

COLORADO In Denver, Colorado, recovered nearly $4 million from a products manufacturer in a business fire loss.

TEXAS Represented Texas Tech University against a general contractor and architect in regards to defects in the United Spirit Arena. The client ultimately obtained a multimillion dollar settlement from the architect after discovery depositions.

MISSOURI ARKY AND DEBBIE ROGERS V. PRODUCERS CREDIT CORP. Successfully represented our clients in the largest cattle fraud case in history, costing banks and investors $183 million. A federal jury awarded our clients, victims of the scheme, $4.2 million for breach of fiduciary duty.

KANSAS WYANDOTTE NATION V. GENERAL MOTORS CORPORATION ET AL Defended an action brought against 3,000 property owners by the Wyandotte Nation Indian Tribe, which claimed original title to 1,920 acres of land in Kansas City, including the Fairfax Industrial District -- the site of industrial facilities for many Fortune 500 companies, including our client, the world's largest auto manufacturer. We obtained dismissal with prejudice in favor of our client and other defendants.

GEORGIA Defended a major manufacturer against nine plaintiffs who alleged multiple constitutional and tort violations based on their terminations, which followed an undercover drug investigation at the workplace. Summary judgment on all counts was entered and affirmed by the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals.

VIRGINIA Represented SCX Acquisition and Franchising Group, LLC, a company that leased several hundred locations for automobile repair centers, against claims that it had breached its master lease.

RHODE ISLAND UNITED TECHNOLOGIES V. BFI Obtained defense judgment on partial findings after a nine-week trial regarding Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act (CERCLA) contribution. The decision was affirmed on appeal.

NEW YORK Obtained a $3 million jury verdict for our client by successfully defending its patent for a new and useful de-icing and anti-icing formula. The jury found that the opposing party committed theft of trade secrets, unfair competition and breach of confidentiality.
