NJ man saved from drowning in Hunter

HAINES FALLS — A New Jersey man continues to recover after he nearly drowned over Memorial Day weekend in Greene County, according to the state Department of Environmental Conservation.

The man, who has not been identified by authorities, is 25 years old and from New Jersey, Department of Environmental Conservation spokesman Jeff Wernick said on Wednesday.

The Department of Environmental Conservation released details of the incident Wednesday.

On May 30 at about 10:40 a.m., Forest Rangers Robert Dawson, Katherine Fox and Tyler Mitchell responded to Fawn's Leap in the Kaaterskill Wild Forest, after they were notified by Greene County 911 that there was a swimming accident.

After going into the water, the man went under. When his friends pulled him from the water he was unresponsive. His friends then performed CPR

Greene County paramedics arrived on the scene and stabilized the man. Rangers then helped secure him in a litter stretcher to carry the man up a roadway embankment using a rope relay, Wernick said.

The man was placed on a Life Net helicopter and flown to Albany Medical Center for further treatment.

The accident on May 30 was the first recorded at Fawn's Leap in 2022.

The popular area for swimming and cliff diving has been the site of several accidents over the past few years.

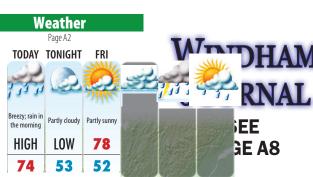

On Aug. 30, 2020 Forest Ranger Robert Dawson was patrolling Fawn's Leap swimming area in Kaaterskill Clove when swimmers approached him, asking for medical help. The group reported that their friend jumped off the 30-foot cliff and injured his shoulder when he landed in the water.

hundreds of people visited the library each year, Demarest said. Many public patrons conduct their own research using microfilm of the Hudson and Catskill newspapers.

Columbia-Greene also has out-of-state researchers who work with the library electronically and others who travel to visit, Demarest said.

The library has more than 70,000 books, DVDs and audiobooks in the physical collections, which are available for check out.

"Like many libraries across the country and throughout the SUNY system, our library faced significant challenges with distancing, cleaning and other precautions," Demarest said. "Thankfully, we were able to grow our virtual services, help the community patrons by offering curbside pickup and work with researchers electronically."

Throughout the pandemic, the library had the ability to work with college officials, college nurse, academic librarians and the SUNY Guidelines to reach a time where it could safely allow the external population back onto the campus, Demarest said.

College officials are pleased that the long shutdown is over at last, Demarest said.

We're thrilled to welcome the public back to the Columbia-Greene library," she said.

During the COVID-19 shutdown, the SUNY Libraries Consortium Board of Directors endorsed the recommendation of the Association of College & Research Libraries and the American Library Association in their support for the safety and well-being of library workers and the communities they serve by calling for the closure of library buildings until the risk from COVID-19 was significantly reduced.

Ken Fujiuchi, chairman of the SUNY Libraries Consortium Board, said that during the pandemic, he came to understand the special role libraries play on college campuses and their connection to the public, but due to the uncertainties pertaining to the global health crisis at the time, the board called on all SUNY campuses to close their library buildings.

Catskill, Mid-Hudson close to new contract

By Ted Remsnyder Columbia-Greene Media

CATSKILL — The Town of Catskill could be on the verge of approving a new 15-year agreement with Mid-Hudson Cablevision that would keep the town's franchise fee from the company flat.

As part of the proposed contract, the town will continue to receive a franchise fee of 3% of gross revenue that Mid-Hudson Cablevision receives from recurring cable television subscriptions.

The board held an initial public hearing on the agreement on May 3, but left the hearing open and invited representatives from the cable company to appear at a second public hearing Tuesday night.

During the hearing, Catskill Town Supervisor Dale Finch presented his own bill from Mid-Hudson Cablevision and noted that his household paid a monthly franchise fee in the amount of $3.43 last month that will be funneled to the town.

During the June 7 hearing, former Catskill Town Supervisor Joseph Izzo asked the board how much the town received last year from cable franchise fees.

Finch said the town received $60,300 last year between its contracts with Mid-Hudson Cable and Spectrum.

Izzo asked the board what would happen if the town declined to enter into a new 15-year agreement with Mid-Hudson Cablevision and Town Councilman Jared Giordiano said the town would continue to collect a 3% franchise fee as the town does not have a contract with Spectrum and continues to receive the same rate.

"It's a non-exclusive agreement, so it's not like Mid-Hudson or any other cable company has exclusive rights to the Town of Catskill," Finch said.

Rachel Puckett of Mid-Hudson Cablevision said the company has 860 cable TV subscribers in the town, with 2,237 customers receiving internet services from the cable company.

"It only applies toward the cost of the actual cable," Puckett said of the franchise fees. "Not internet or the equipment or all of those things."

Izzo asked the board if the town would consider increasing the 3% franchise

"I believe right now there's price pressure on everybody, and it's not only cable TV," Finch said. "But as an example, my particular (cable) bill is $229.71. Having said that, when you look at all of the taxes and fees that go on this particular bill, like the FCC fees."

Finch read aloud the monthly fees on his cable bill, including sports and broadcast charges, that totaled $46.86 in total fees over the last month on his household bill.

Finch said that with cable TV subscriptions on the downswing, the town is receiving less each successive year as part of the franchise agreement.

"I think, as we all know, most people are using modems and they're streaming their television shows," Finch said. "We have two and half times as many cable subscribers as we have television. I think the truth of the matter is that it's only going to continue to decline. That's only going to put pressure on our budget. Every year it goes down $1,000 or $2,000 and we'd like to keep it steady."

Puckett said the New York State Public Service Commission recommends a 15-year term for cable agreements with municipalities.

Catskill resident William Hawthorne asked the board if it was possible to negotiate a shorter deal with the cable company.

"One of the concerns that I had was the 15-year term," Hawthorne said. "It's so volatile these days and I think that a 15-year term is a little bit extreme. I was wondering if you would consider asking the Public Service Commission if it's possible to do it in five-year increments?"

Hawthorne also raised the possibility of increasing the 3% franchise rate the town receives from the company.

"I think the town should get a better cut on their costs," he told the board. "I think we should increase the revenue for the town."

Hawthorne said that if the Hawthorne said that if the 3% rate were to be increased, the money could be used to provide benefits to the entire community.

"That 3% gets passed right to the customer," Giordiano said.

"If we went from 3% to 6%, your bill would go up $3.43," Finch said. "It's not like Mid-Hudson would get less profit. It's just a pass through."

Puckett said the Affordable Connectivity Program through the Federal Communications Commission program provides up to a $30 per month discount on internet service for qualified residents.

The board closed the public hearing and could take action on the proposed cable agreement at the board's workshop meeting June 15 or the board's next regular meeting July 5.

"I think definitely in the next meeting we'll take action on the franchise agreement," Finch said.

WMHT presents a new eight-part cooking competition

TROY — WMHT Public Media (PBS-Public Broadcasting Service) will premiere a new eight-part cooking competition celebrating the multiculturalism that makes American food unique. The show, entitled The Great American Recipe, starts on WMHT-TV at 9 p.m. Fridays Lune 24 through Aug. 12

June 24 through Aug. 12.

Hosted by Alejandra Ramos, the series gives talented home cooks from different regions of the country the opportunity to showcase their beloved signature dishes and compete to win the national search for "The Great American Recipe." Judges Leah Cohen, Tiffany Derry and Graham Elliot bring their professional insights and deep culinary knowledge to encourage and support the contestants along the way.

Among the 10 contestants from around the country is Irma Cádiz who grew up in Rochester eating Dominican and Puerto Rican foods. She loves to prepare her mother's recipes as a tribute to her family's Caribbean heritage. Raised in a multicultural environment, she experienced a wide range of cuisines but wasn't always a fan of cooking. Her mother encouraged her to join her in the kitchen, but it wasn't until Irma had her own children that she learned to love it. For the past decade, she has lived in New York City's Harlem with its diverse culinary scene. Irma recently completed her college degree and has started her own business, where she specializes in Latin-inspired cocktails. Irma is an actor and current member of the Chelsea Repertoire Theatre, where she continues to hone her craft. Her signature dish is mofongo con mashed plantains and shrimp.

Head of the class

If you were in the audience Tuesday in the Hudson Senior High School Auditorium for an unscheduled assembly, you might have been feeling a lot of anticipation mixed with a little suspense and anxiety. You would have heard a stunning announcement worth cheering about.

Screams of elation rocked the auditorium when juniors at Hudson Senior High School — otherwise known as the Class of 2023 heard District Superintendent Lisamarie Spindler announce that the entire class will receive instant admission to Columbia-Greene Community College.

Typically, the students would have to apply for admission to Columbia-Greene Community College, but the partnership between the Hudson City School District and the college is an effort to smooth the often stressful college application process for students who have been taking classes in school, at home or a combination of both thanks to an unprecedented pandemic.

According to the Hudson City School District, about 70% of students are considered economically disadvantaged. Columbia-Greene Community College Assistant Dean of Enrollment Management Matthew Green said Tuesday the news of admittance without going through the often dispiriting application process will give students more time and far less pressure to apply for scholarships to cover the college's in-state tuition of $2,284

If students were to accept the offer, they could spend as much or as little time at the college, a place many students use to begin their higher-education journey, Green said. The college has an enrollment of about 1,400 students, some of whom stay for a year before transferring. Others obtain their associate degree or bachelor's degree.

Many high school students apply for college well before they become seniors. Many others choose not to apply out of fear of failure or simple lack of financial resources. At a time when students are defaulting on millions of dollars in student loans, going to college can be an overwhelming and daunt-

Now, with the partnership of the school district and the college, students can focus on taking the next step beyond high school. Students in Hudson's Class of 2023 find themselves with the opportunity to continue their education. The Hudson City School District and Columbia-Greene Community College graduate with high honors.

Ignore the GOP spin - the nation still hasn't reckoned with Jan. 6

(c) 2022, The Washington Post

The House committee probing the Jan. 6, 2021, Capitol attack will begin public hearings Thursday, revealing the evidence it has gathered over 11 months of investigating, including firsthand testimony and information about President Donald Trump's efforts to overturn the 2020 election results.

Expect leading Republicans to argue that the committee is a partisan panel dedicated to harming Trump, and that Americans should disregard the illiberal threat that manifested in the Jan. 6 riot his supporters perpetrated. That would be a tragedy all its own. The committee's work is the best hope the nation has to get a definitive account of one of its most perilous moments. Any political harm that the record does to Trump will be of his own making, given his role in inflaming

Jan. 6 happened because Trump and his allies tried to hack the electoral college, generating cockamamie legal arguments to justify what would have amounted to a coup. As committee vice chair Rep. Liz Cheney, R-Wyo., has pointed out, Trump has shown no remorse for his role in the Jan. 6 disaster - in fact, he has doubled down on his incendiary claims.

What Americans should be asking now is how to strengthen democracy against future subversion, which Congress still has not done a year and a half since a dangerous mob stormed the nation's seat of government. Axios reports that the committee's members are divided on what reforms to recommend; measures that would make U.S. democracy more orderly and less prone to subversion, from extensive new voting rights laws to bans on partisan gerrymandering, would be plausible responses.

At a minimum, the electoral college should be made less prone to partisan abuse. It should be explicitly illegal for the vice president to discard electoral votes at will. It should be harder for members of Congress to object to and toss out presidential electors. New protections for election workers are needed, as are guardrails preventing governors and local lawmakers from ignoring the results of the popular votes in their states. But a bipartisan group of senators, convened by Sen. Susan Collins, R-Maine, and Sen. Joe Manchin III, D-W.Va., is still working on these least-common-denominator policies. Their window is closing; if Republicans retake the House in this year's midterms, nothing that could be construed as critical of Trump is likely to get through the chamber.

Republicans reportedly are betting that the public has Jan. 6 "fatigue" and would rather hear about inflation than about a plot to overthrow the democratic order. They might take comfort in polls suggesting Americans are less outraged about the attack and less inclined to blame Trump for it than they were in its immediate aftermath.

Americans must be reminded how Jan. 6 called into question many things they could previously take for granted: that their leaders would accede to free-and-fair election results; that the president would defend the U.S. system of government; that violent resistance to the nation's democratic institutions would find no succor in the White House or in the halls of Congress. There can be no higher priority than restoring those fundamental norms.

When the pronoun police come for eighth-graders

WASHINGTON — If the pronoun police of Wisconsin's Kiel Area School District were just another woke excrescence on American education, they would be merely local embarrassments. These enforcers are, however, a national disgrace because they are a direct consequence of federal lawlessness with a progressive pedigree.

In April, the district lodged a complaint against three eighthgrade boys for the offense of 'mispronouning," referring to a classmate using the biologically correct pronoun "her" instead of the classmate's preferred "them." This, district officials — supposed educators - said, constitutes "sexual harassment," a Title IX violation.

Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 was enacted long before Congress could have imagined today's progressive dogma that grammar should reflect, through pronouns, the most advanced thinking about gender fluidity. Title IX's operative language says no person "shall, on the basis of sex, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination" in education.

This language has been reasonably taken to encompass sexual violence, unwanted touching and such "unwelcome conduct" as persistent spoken sexual innuendo, stalking, etc. Now, however, the Wisconsin district, which is perhaps proud of its progressive improvising, has made this category of conduct elastic enough to encompass mispronouning. The district's behavior is trickle-down lawlessness that stems from the arrogance and cynicism of the U.S. Education Department.

Making a mockery of Title IX illustrates what some progressive theorists call "dynamic statutory interpretation," meaning law enforcement entirely untethered from congressional intent — actually, from law. In 2014, Catherine Lhamon, an Education Department assistant secretary for civil rights, sent an explanation of a 2011 "Dear Colleague" letter her the power to issue detailed, to people who are in no sense "colleagues" of federal bureaucrats: college administrators. She directed them to comply with 66 pages of "guidance" on sexual harassment policies. Many of the policies produced campus kangaroo courts in which persons — almost always young men - accused of sexual misbehavior are routinely denied due process.

WASHINGTON POST

WILL

Nationwide, accusers are identified, in the language of prejudgment, as "survivors." The accused are denied the right to question their accusers and can be convicted on a mere "preponderance of the evidence," not evidence beyond a reasonable doubt. By one recent count, there are more than 700 due-process lawsuits from victims of make-believe courts on campuses, seeking justice in real courts.

R. Shep Melnick, a Boston College professor and co-chair of the Harvard Program on Constitutional Government notes this: Lhamon breezily says she resorted to explicating the "Dear Colleague" letter, thereby evading the Administrative Procedure Act's rulemaking requirements, because the 66 pages were, in her words, merely "an explanation of what Title IX means." Sixty-six pages of "explanations" that, if not adhered to, can result in federal compliance investigations and termination of the institutions' federal funding.

In 2014, Lamar Alexander, the Tennessee Republican who was a former university president and the senator most conversant with higher education, asked Lhamon who gave effectively mandatory "explanations." With smug hauteur, she said: "You did when I was confirmed."

President Biden has brought her back. Although a Senate committee refused to recommend her confirmation as head of the Education Department's Office of Civil Rights, the Senate confirmed her in a 51-50 partyline vote. Her progressive spirit — "social justice" righteousness unrestrained by law — is on display in Wisconsin's Kiel School District.

There, the regnant Lhamonism that has seeped into educational crevices from coast to coast, and from kindergarten through graduate school, has resulted in yet another progressive attempt to supplant free speech with compulsory speech. Fortunately, the three middle-school miscreants accused of "mispronouning" seem to understand that the best defense is a good offense.

Represented by the Wisconsin Institute for Law & Liberty, the boys are arguing that their use of biologically correct, if politically incorrect, pronouns is speech protected by the First Amendment. The Constitution also forbids the district from compelling them to speak as district bureaucrats suddenly how long ago did they embrace this orthodoxy? — prefer. Furthermore, the institute savs it has spoken with another Kiel Area family "whose daughter was recently given an in-school suspension for 'sexual harassment' based on a single statement using an allegedly 'wrong' pronoun — and the statement was said to a third party, not even to the allegedly 'misgen-dered' student.' Perhaps Kiel Area schools can waste time trying to bully children into conformity to this or that fad because the schools have so splendidly accomplished their actual task: education. It might, however, be best if schools that are eager to engage in pronoun policing not even attempt education.

We are all targets

To the editor:

Until recently I've always felt safe here; walking down Main Street, shopping at Price Chopper, going to parades. Now I'm not so sure. Now it feels possible that at any time an angry guy with an AR 15 could come in and start shooting — as I write this on June 4 there have been at least 20 mass shootings in America. It can happen here.

We are all targets. It doesn't matter if you not, love your guns or not, if name.

you've lived here all your life, where you get your news. Doesn't matter where you work or what flag you fly. An angry guy with a gun only sees a TARGET. Someone to hurt so he feels better. In that moment we are ALL targets!

In Chatham, in Claverack, in Kinderhook, in Ghent. in Hudson — across America in every town: We are ALL tar-

What does matter is who you vote for, regardless of belong to the same party or what letter is next to their

Will you vote for someone who's OK if your child dies, as long as gun manufacturers sell lots of AK 15s? And there are no background checks? No waiting period for the guy in a rage? If they guy has enough ammo to take out an entire school?

I hope not. I hope you'll vote for someone who will do their damndest to stop this carnage!! It's up to us.

Until we fix this, we are ALL TARGETS. Every. Day.

Is the right to bear arms an antiquated idea?

To the editor:

When children and individuals are being killed while doing normal activities of the day, the time to ban the weapons so easily attainable, is long overdue.

These horrific crimes are using innocents, without remorse, to exercise their right to bear arms. Is this antiquated privilege worth the numerous lives taken?

According to Ruth Marcus' column on June 3, "Trump's appointed politician Ryan Nelson stated America would not exist without colonial era youths heroism and the right to keep and bear arms." Is that the best example to prove a point, Mr. Nelson? Aren't there any persent day heroes? In colonial times, people young, and old, were not equipped with automatic rifles, their guns were one shot at a time. Young individuals pitched in wherever needed. Is Nelson comparing Colonial fighters with the monsters perpetrating all this violence today?

The NRA is mostly to blame for this debacle. Their power is far beyond any organization's right to influence. They are dangerous, immoral and their avid followers should step back and bury their sheep's clothing.

Cairo-Durham High School teacher receives award

CAIRO — Cairo-Durham High School Social Studies teacher, Laura Giarrusso, was honored with the Bob Niederberger Award by the Capital District Council for Social Studies. Giarrusso received the award in recognition of her exceptional achievements in Social Studies education. Giarrusso was presented with the Niederberger Award at a ceremony in May, which many of her students attended.

Giarrusso has contributed so much to the Cairo-Durham Central School District and its students. Through diverse teaching methods including simulations, hands-on projects, engaging lectures, writing workshops and more, Giarrusso consistently helps many of her students achieve high scores on Advanced Placement (AP) exams and/or mastery on the Global History regents exams.

She is also highly supportive of her colleagues and constantly encourages professional development opportunities to strengthen Social Studies education at Cairo-Durham and beyond. She has advocated for funding to allow Social Studies teachers to attend conferences across the country and even coordinated a regional conference connecting educators from across the area. At the regional conference held at the former Durham Elementary School, Giarrusso brought in nationally known AP educators, representatives from the New York State Education Department, field trip sites, and more to help teachers build curriculum, learn new strategies, and obtain many more resources.

Giarrusso relentlessly advocates for AP/honors, atrisk, and special education programs equally to ensure the needs of all Cairo-Durham students are met. As the Social Studies department facilitator, her leadership skills have led to more crossbuilding collaboration to help broaden Social Studies course offerings and ensure all students are equipped with the skills and knowledge they need to be successful in high school and college.

Without a doubt, Giarrusso's instruction and her leadership positively impact Cairo-Durham CSD, the students, and Social Studies education in general. She always works in the best interest of all Cairo-Durham students and is highly deserving of the Niederberger Award.

Steffanie Dallas, "Dolly"

Steffanie Dallas, "Dolly" as she was lovingly referred to, passed away on June 4th 2022 peacefully surrounded by her family at Albany Medical Center. She was 76 years old and a retired NY State Teacher's Retirement data processor. After retiring, she became a teacher's aide at Chatham High School for many years. A lifelong New York native, Dolly was well-loved in her small town.

She is survived by her husband William, her daughter Tammy, daughter Rhonda Johnson, her granddaughter Brittany, her grandson Ryan, her sisters Katie and Anna, her brother John, and predeceased by her sister Alice and brother Harold. She also leaves behind several nieces, nephews, great-nieces, great-nephews, and cousins whose hearts she touched very dearly.

As an avid reader, she had amassed a large collection of books while on her flea market trips with her sisters. If she wasn't reading, baking special treats for all of her favorite people, or getting the latest gossip on the phone, she would spend her time crocheting. Making baby dresses and blankets were amongst her favorite things to create, as she found the greatest joy in giving to others. She frequently would make sweaters, hats, gloves, and shawls for the homeless as well as small blankets for the kittens where she rescued her beloved Callie.

She would often say that the birth of her daughter and grandchildren were the best moments of her life. She spent her years attending every single event that her family was ever a part of. From soccer, softball, baseball, and football games, to dance recitals and graduations, she was always there standing proud of her loved ones with the biggest smile on her face.

She cared deeply for her family and neighbors and was always the first to offer a helping hand. She did this not out of obligation, but because of who she was. She played a special part in the treasured moments we all hold within our hearts. There will never be another wife, mother, grandmother, sister, aunt, or friend that was as loving, understanding, or as selfless as her. She was one of a kind and she leaves this earth a little less bright, taking a piece of all our hearts with her.

'She was more than happy to be the central figure in the lives of her family. Anyone who knew them knew that she was a star in their eyes, and that's all that ever mattered to her." A ceremony will be held Friday, June 10th at Bates and Anderson at 110 Green Street from 4pm to 7pm

David S. Hart

November 6, 1935 - May 8, 2022

David S. Hart, a well-loved and friend to many, passed away on May 8, 2022. Dave made everyone he met feel comfortable and accepted. He was born on November 6, 1935 in Hartford, Connecticut to Lester S. Hart and Jean Croswell. After graduating High School, he served in the U.S. army from February 7, 1960 to November 4, 1960. He then traveled the country following his heart. He settled down in New Jersey, commuting into Manhattan to work for the Bank of

New York. His successful career and that of his life partner Anthony Radosti, aka "Tony" provided them the flexibility to have a beloved country getaway in Cairo, New York. This getaway turned into their permanent residence upon retirement, which they shared with their lifelong friend Hank Baker. The three of them enjoyed their life in Cairo because of the accepting nature of the community and the long-term friendships they made.

Dave thrived as the proprietor of Croswell Emporium, located on Main Street, which sold a variety of gift items. His dedication and service to others earned him the distinction of being recognized as the Green County Volunteer of the Year and traveled to Albany to be recognized for his good works by the Governor.

After the passing of his lifelong partner Tony, Dave found new friends along the way - Bryan, Hud, Chuck, Chip (just to name a few) that shared his interests, which included dinners, social gatherings and his favorite activity – attending various plays, orchestras and theatre. Uvalde student, other witnesses testify as Congress weighs changes to gun laws

Joseph Morton

The Dallas Morning News WASHINGTON — Miah

Cerrillo gave lawmakers a horrifying first-hand account of the school massacre at Robb Elementary School in Uvalde, Texas, as she described covering herself in her friend's blood to play dead while the shooter gunned down her classmates.

recorded video in which she answered questions about her experience that day. She recounted how her teacher made eve contact with the gunman through a small window in the door before he shot out the window and entered the adjoining classrooms.

"There's a door between our classrooms and he went through there and shot my teacher and told my teacher 'good night' and shot her in the head," Miah said. "And then he shot some of my classmates . . . he shot my friend that was next to me and I thought he was going to come back to the room so I grabbed the blood and put it all over me."

In the video she wore a shirt with sunflowers and the words "Live by the sun."

Her father Miguel Cerrillo then spoke briefly in person in the hearing room. He fought back tears as he said his daughter isn't the same little girl that he used to play with.

"She's everything, not only for me but her siblings and her mother," Cerrillo said. "I thank y'all for letting me be here and speak out but I wish something will change not only for our kids but every single kid in the world because schools are not safe anymore. Something needs to really change."

Kimberly Rubio recounted how they went to the school for the award ceremony and promised Lexi they would celebrate that night with ice cream.

"I can still see her walking with us toward the exit. In the reel that keeps scrolling across my memories she turns her head and smiles back at us to acknowledge my promise," Rubio said. "And then we left. I left my daughter at that school and that decision will haunt me for the rest of my life."

She said they don't want people to think of Lexi as just a number describing her as intelligent, compassionate and athletic.

"She was quiet, shy unless she had a point to make. She knew she was right. She so often was. She stood her ground," Rubio said. "She was firm, direct, voice unwavering. So today we stand for Lexi and as her voice we demand best response to the ongoing epidemic of gun violence. House Democrats are poised to pass a series of gun control measures, while a bipartisan group of senators is discussing more modest gun measures on the other side of the Capitol.

The committee announced on Wednesday the decision to have Miah testify by video.

"The committee has been in close contact with Miah, her family, and her pediatrician and has been prioritizing her safety and comfort first and foremost," Committee Chairwoman Carolyn B. Maloney said in a statement. "Her decision to record her story and share it with the American people is courageous - and I hope all Members open their hearts and minds to what she has to say."

The hearing is the second of two this week as families of the victims and survivors of the mass shootings in Buffalo and Uvalde appear at public hearings and events on Capitol Hill to show the human toll of America's gun violence and urge Congress to act.

Pressing for a deal, President Joe Biden met Tuesday with Sen. Chris Murphy, a key Democratic negotiator, who has worked most of his career trying to curb the nation's mass-shooting scourge after the heartbreaking slaughter of 20 children at Sandy Hook Elementary in his home state of Connecticut a decade ago.

Murphy, from Connecticut, said his goal is to try to get an agreement this week, but he added that Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer has been clear that "we need some extra time to dot the i's and cross the t's that will get

Also Tuesday, actor Matthew McConaughey, who is from Uvalde, made the rounds of Senate offices before heading to the White House to open the daily briefing. McConaughey, who earlier this year considered a run for governor of Texas, gave a speech on the importance of taking legislative action "to make the loss of these lives matter."

Propelled by coincidence and imagination, and guided by love's gentle current, acclaimed director Ryusuke Hamaguchi (Happy Hour, Asako I & II) returns with an enchanting triptych that spins mundane encounters into a world of infinite possibilities. In Episode 1: Magic (or Something Less Assuring), a young woman is startled when she realizes that her best friend's new flame might just be her ex; in Episode 2: Door Wide Open, a disgruntled student plots to trick his college professor, using his friend-with-benefits as bait; and in Episode 3: Once Again, a girl's college reunion leads to an unanticipated run-in with an old friend, and awakens feelings long since forgotten. Playfully inspired by life's tiny miracles, and bound together by memory, regret, deception, and fate, Hamaguchi leaves no stone unturned in his quest to chart the ever-deepening mysteries of the all-too-human heart. Hudson Valley Premier of hit musical Amélie, The Anonymous Do-Gooder

RHINEBECK — Rhinebeck Theatre Society mounts regional premiere of the musical

June 17-July 3 at The CENTER for Performing Arts at Rhine-

In 2001, a cult classic was born in the film Amélie, written by Jean-Pierre Jeunet and Guillaume Laurant. The story follows a vibrant young Parisian woman who approaches the world around her at a distance, strangely hesitant about forging close human connections.

But on the night that Princess Diana of Wales is killed, Amélie discovers a box hidden in her apartment filled with a child's memories from long ago. She becomes determined to return the box to its original owner. This begins a long line of anonymous good deeds done for a host of eccentric characters, and these acts of kindness inadvertently lead Amélie to a possible love interest.

photo strips left behind in photo booths. He is both the pursued and the pursuer when Amélie accidentally finds the album where he collects the strips, and the two must decide the lengths they will go to meet each other, or keep their distance.

This romantic comedy becomes a zany musical adventure in the hands of composer Daniel Messé, lyricist Nathan Tysen and writer Craig Lucas.

The show opened on Broadway in 2017 to mixed reviews, but was re-worked for a 2019 West End production which The Guardian lauded as "a triumph of adaptation." The show was subsequently nominated for Best New Musical, Best Original Score, and Best Actress in a Musical at the 2020 Laurence Olivier Awards.

In Rhinebeck Theatre Society's production, the story finds new life on the intimate stage at The CENTER for Performing Arts at Rhinebeck. Kacie Boice, who stars in the title role, will make audiences of all ages feel young and full of abandon with her inspired, confident take on the character. Playing opposite her as Nino is Frank McGinnis, a CENTER favorite who adds his own musical talent on guitar. With a total cast size of 16, each performer adds uniquely layered characters into the story, including a blind beggar, a struggling painter, a nononsense cafe owner who used to be a trapeze artist, an infatuated fruit seller, and a wayward garden gnome. Oh, and don't forget the Elton John cameo!

Amélie opens Friday, June 17 and runs three weekends. Friday and Saturday performances are at 8pm. Sunday matinee performances are at 3pm. All tickets are $25. More information is available at https://www. centerforperformingarts.org or call 845-876-3080.

Surgery is the new sex in pretentious 'Crimes'

By Raymond Pignone Columbia-Greene Media

David Cronenberg is the master of the new flesh. Over nearly five decades of filmmaking, this is what he's done to the human body: directed Samantha Eggar to eat her own afterbirth ("The Brood"); penetrated it with slimy horny parasites ("They Come from Within"); exploded a head into tomato stew ("Scanners"); turned James Woods into a living VCR ("Videodrome"); probed women with nasty medieval gynecology tools ("Dead Ringers"); and, for good measure, transformed Jeff Goldblum from man to insect ("The Fly").

Now there is "Crimes of the Future," where the body can be molded into any horrific shape one can imagine. Why anyone would imagine it is anybody's guess. The movie isn't a remake of the 1983 film ("Stereo" is its alternate title), which was a tacky 63-minute flick about cruel and unusual uses of human skin. Now, however, we have the real deal, which finds Cronenberg at his most extreme yet at his lowest ebb in years. Even "Cosmopolis," set almost entirely in a limousine, had more energy. "Crimes" is a sci-fi mystery thriller that's more ponderous than puzzling.

Saul Tenser Mortensen) is a performance artist who specializes in "desktop surgery"—developing new, unprecedented organs and then staging shows where they are surgically removed by his assistant Caprice (Lea Seydoux). No anesthetic required as we're made to understand that human beings can no longer feel pain, hence the only erotic arousal comes from watching people get cut up. "Surgery is the new sex," declares a nerdy clerk at the ominously titled National Organ Registry played by none other than Kristen Stewart, who shows more skittish life than the other actors. The plot is a creaky mechanism. On the one hand, there is the murder of a child at the film's start. On the other, there is a third-act political concept in which a subversive cabal plots to evolve the human digestive system to a point where people can eat plastic, thereby saving the planet from extinction by industrial waste. Sandwiched in between is Saul, the great revered performance artist, who, for reasons left unclear, is working undercover for the New Vice Agency (another ominous appellation) by keeping a detective informed of the cabal's illegal activities.

Can a movie cancel itself out until there's nothing left, nibbling away at its own reasons for existence until it's stripped of meaning? "Crimes of the Future" certainly skirts that risk, as when a turned-on Caprice gets on her knees and licks the zipper sliced into Saul's abdomen or when a male dancer with dozens of pairs of ears cut into his skin wows an audience. Yeah, we get it — this artist is all ears. What energy the movie has comes from the actors, not the script (written by Cronenberg), which also features without explanation a pair of female assassins who get off by drilling holes in their victims' heads.

With "Crimes of the Future," David Cronenberg takes his dull, uninvolving political subtext seriously. Whether it deserves to be shared is another matter.

A stranger gifts 100 acres of land in Elka Park

By Dede Terns-Thorpe

A 1910 story about a parttime Elka Park resident and his gift of a 100-acre piece of land to the College of Forestry at Syracuse University. (The university started in 1870, adding forestry in July 1911.)

John R. Strong, a retired attorney of New York City, donated his vast piece of property in Elka Park to the College. He wanted it to be an experimental station in the education of agriculture. The place had been Strong's summer home for many years, but he found it difficult spending time there after his wife's death. Strong had experience as a lumberman. He also had a lifetime of interest in forestry. These factors led to his decision to donate the 100-plus acres of land on Mink Hollow Road to the College. His property was very close to the Elka Park Cottagers' private club.

Strong's interest and love of forests had forbidden him to cut a tree; therefore, his land had an impressive growth of hardwoods with many hemlock and spruce. Little was known about the growth rate of trees in the Catskills. Also unknown was which trees were best adapted to the climate. The College of Forestry had been recently established, and those questions were to be addressed, "a forester will be housed there and maintain an efficient research station. It is expected that the track will be used yearly for educational purposes and that the College's sophomore class will camp there eight weeks each summer for practical work.

"The land is all original forest," said Mr. Strong, "and has never been touched for lumbering purposes, although it is surrounded by denuded land which was slashed in the most unscientific and wasteful way.'

BREWERY

Strong knew that conserving the country's forest wealth could not be solved by the individual landowner; the state needed to help.

Dean Baker of Syracuse University walked the land with Strong, considering it from all points of view. Afterward, Baker agreed it would make an ideal location for a student's educational station. Strong also donated his large summer home for the students and teachers.

Strong's interest in forestry had been active for years. He was a member of the American Forestry Association, the Massachusetts Forestry Association and the Society for the Protection of the New Hampshire Forests.

Strong was the grandson of the late Samuel B. Ruggles, who donated Gramercy Park to New York City. Ruggles was also prominent in the campaign for the enlargement of the Erie Canal.

In 1914, the first automobile was acquired and used to transport the students to and from Strong's Catskill Summer Camp, four miles south of Tannersville. The students were housed in two-person tents, with an additional two tents serving as the kitchen and mess hall. The program, lasting eight weeks, included surveying, mapmaking, timber estimating and some work in tree identification.

The private Elka Park Club had opened 25 years before this, but historic stories tell us the Syracuse students and the Elka Cottagers had a close liaison.

(Recently, I sent a letter of inquiry to Syracuse University concerning the Catskill Summer Camp and its history. I will inform you if I hear anything about it.)

Ancestry gets a little tricky

By Lula Anderson

I generally start the column by commenting on the past week, the weather, or the beautiful flowers that are finally starting to appear, but this week is a little different.

Recently we had a bus trip to Villa Roma with WAJPL and of course, the bus was predominately filled with women (widows). The conversation turned to what the ladies were working on when they were home. How they were coping. One of the most common activities was gardening, and the tool that was being touted was the mini, battery powered chainsaw to trim lilac bushes, and cut wood into lengths for the wood stove.

At the meeting on Monday, a similar conversation with different women, and, again, the chainsaw was introduced as a wonderful thing as it is very light weight, and easy to use. Judy was talking about her lawnmower, ECO, battery powered which makes it a snap to use, but how she was, also, going to get a chainsaw. They each lost their spouses around the same time, but while he was still trying to deal with her death, Judy was keeping up with the lawns, gardens, hanging wash taking care of Mom and doing what had to be done. He was totally impressed, and admitted that every widow he knew just jumped in and just added her husband's jobs with a minimum of fuss. We have been told we are the "weaker sex," but in all reality, we are so much stronger. Wouldn't it be nice, though, if the same courtesies were shown to the woman, such as an invitation to eat, or a meal delivered occasionally? Just saying.

No matter who you talk to, the conversation inevitably turns to the DNA test they took to determine their ancestry. It can come up as a simple comment such as, I was so surprised, I thought I was German, and wound up predominately Ukrainian; or, I have kins ancestry line.

Korean Congregation, as of been trying to find my Great grandfather, and.....Anyway, Does anyone remember the song, "I'm My Own Grandpa"? Well, this isn't exactly the same, but pretty close. Sometime in the 1920s, my Uncle Harold Tompkins returned from the war (WWI), where he had been in France. He was single. His father's wife (Harold's mother), had died years before, so he was also single. For some reason, probably to find work, they both decided to go to a small town in New Hampshire, named Sullivan where they met the Gwillo sisters, Irene and Ethelyn, who they married. Each had children with their new wives.

Now, here's where it gets tricky. Harold's children were his father's grandchildren, but also his nieces and nephews. His father's children from his second wife were his half brothers and sisters, but also his nephews?? Or is it cousins?

Harold's father was my grandfather and he and his wife came back to the area and owned The Blue Paradise Tea Room which was later Max's Swiss Inn and now Chicken Run. At the time, there were cabins and a gas pump, all gone in the name of progress.

Lightning cruise past Rangers, even East finals at 2-2

The Tampa Bay Lightning took a while to get back up to speed, but they are playing like the two-time defending Stanley Cup champions now.

The Lightning beat the visiting New York Rangers 4-1 in Game 4 of the Eastern Conference finals on Tuesday, leveling the series at two games apiece.

Game 5 in the best-of-seven set is scheduled for Thursday night in New York.

"We're executing, we're putting pucks on tape, getting our looks and making them pay," Tampa Bay defenseman Victor Hedman said.

also scored for the Lightning, who lost the first two games of the series in New York before winning the past two at home.

"I just think we play with a little more pace here and we're playing a simple game," said Maroon, who is trying to become the only active NHL player with four Stanley Cup titles. "We're taking the risk out of our game and we're putting pucks behind them, and we're getting some shot volume right now.

"We're getting some traffic in front of the net. We need that, and we've got to continue that, we've got to continue to break out fast."

Yankees start with a bang, open up late in victory over Twins

Phil Miller

MINNEAPOLIS — As big-dog moves go, as a way to remove any doubt about who's in charge, it's hard to beat the effect that 876 feet of home runs in the first 10 minutes can have.

So it was on Tuesday, when the Yankees, as they have so many times before, made themselves at home at Target Field. Aaron Judge drove Cole Sands' seventh pitch, a helpless fastball in the middle of the plate, halfway up the juniper bushes in center field, 431 feet away. Giancarlo Stanton soon outdid his teammate, launching a blast 445 feet, onto the second deck above the bullpens.

The fireworks concluded, the Yankees proceeded to grind out a fairly standard-issue drubbing of the Twins, 10-4 in their home-away-from-home. New York has lost in Minneapolis only a dozen times in Target Field's 13-year history.

Oh, Minnesota kept the game close for awhile, handing righthander Jameson Taillon, who last week carried a perfect game into the eighth inning, his worst start of the season. They peppered the righthander with nine hits, three of them by Jorge Polanco including an RBI double and a solo home run. They even brought the tying run to the plate as late as the fifth inning.

But another 410-foot rocket, Anthony Rizzo's contribution to Tyler Duffey's burgeoning ERA, bounced off the scoreboard above the rightfield stands in the seventh inning, scored three more runs, and ended all doubt. The rest of the night was spent watching the crowd of 27,643 gradually head for the exits, manager Rocco Baldelli among them.

Baldelli was ejected in the seventh inning after home plate umpire Alex Tosi failed to recognize that a Max Kepler foul ball didn't actually touch his bat, but was deflected instead by catcher Jose Trevino's glove. When the rest of the crew didn't overrule the call, Baldelli registered his dissent loudly enough to earn his seventh career ejection, perhaps a reflection of the Twins' eternal Yankee frustration as much as a single miscalled strike.

Sands, thrown into the furnace of facing baseball's best slugging team in his second career start, actually recovered from the explosive start, holding New York scoreless in the second and third innings and holding Judge in the park in the fourth, a run-scoring single the consolation.

Another rookie, Yennier Cano, also stepped up against Judge an inning later. With the bases loaded and Juan Minaya having already walked in a run, Cano was summoned for a rare matchup of No. 99 vs. No. 99. The rookie was the victor, bravely sneaking a 2-2 changeup that Judge swung through to end the inning.

Small consolation, though, for a Twins team that watched two of its former players -- Josh Donaldson and Aaron Hicks, batting fifth and sixth in New York's lineup -- take part in the Yankees' annual domination. The pair went 3-for-8 with three walks, with Donaldson prompting some booing from the impatient crowd.

We the People made morning-line favorite to win Belmont Stakes

LOS ANGELES — The post position draw in the Belmont Stakes is not even close to being as critical as in the Kentucky Derby. The 1 1/2-mile distance combined with the wide sweeping turns at Belmont Park and a much smaller field gives racehorses plenty of time to recover from breaking a step slow.

It's with those forgiving factors in mind that We the People, one of two colts in the eight-horse field that does not have a Triple Crown start, was made the 2-1 morning-line favorite after Tuesday's post position draw for Saturday's race.

And he drew the one hole, at that.

Once again, there remains mild skepticism in Rich Strike (Post 4), the Kentucky Derby winner, who was made the third favorite at 7-2. Mo Donegal (Post 6), who finished fifth in the Derby after winning the Wood Memorial, is the 5-2 second choice. Both horses skipped the Preakness Stakes.

We the People last ran May 14, winning the Peter Pan Stakes at Belmont Park by 10 1/4 lengths. It was his third win in four starts.

"We decided to stay here at Belmont Park after the Peter Pan," trainer Rodolphe Brisset said. "It looks like he's enjoyed being around here and I quickly to avoid being trapped against the rail. But the starting gate at Belmont gives the horse some room to maneuver. Justify was in the one when he completed the Triple Crown sweep in 2018.

"He doesn't have to go to the front, you've got to play the break and go from there. Jockey Flavien Prat knows what to do," Brisset said.

Prat, who like Brisset is from France, spent the bulk of his U.S. jockey career in Southern California but in late March moved east and has been riding in Kentucky and New York, where there is an opportunity to ride more races and win more money.

The Belmont distance of 1 1/2 miles is likely the farthest that any of these horses will ever run on the dirt. And it's the first time for all of them. So, there is the normal anxiety, usually tempered, to see if the horse can go that far.

"It's always a question mark, but based on what we saw last time and what Flavien said to me after the race, we are hoping he's going to be OK at a mile and a half," Brisset said.

In addition to Mo Donegal, trainer Todd Pletcher has another horse in the race, a filly named Nest (Post 3, 8-1).

Her last race was a second in the Kentucky Oaks after winning four of her previous five starts.

"She's a filly that's really well bred for this race," Pletcher said. "I think she's got the right kind of disposition for it. She's given us every indication she's doing really well. ... With this filly everything has gone perfectly since the Oaks."

The race field dropped to eight Monday when Ethereal Road, owned by Aaron Sones of Los Angeles, and Howling Time withdrew.

The Mets lost Pete Alonso and Starling Marte to injuries in the game's first two innings.

Alonso, who is tied for the National League home run lead (16) and leads the majors with 54 RBIs, left the game in the second inning after being hit on the right hand by a Darvish pitch. Initial X-rays were negative for a fracture, although more tests were being done Tuesday night.

Marte departed the game after the top of the second because of left quad tightness. He also was undergoing more tests late Tuesday night.

Alec Bohm and Matt Vierling homered in the ninth inning for the first runs all season off Milwaukee closer Josh Hader as the visiting Philadelphia Phillies rallied for a 3-2 victory over the Brewers on Tuesday night.

Bohm tied it with a leadoff homer off Hader (0-1), who Sunday tied the major league record of 40 consecutive scoreless appearances, dating back to last July 28.

After Bryson Stott flied out, pinch hitter Vierling ripped a 1-2 pitch 416 feet to leftcenter for his first homer of the season. It was the first blown save for Hader, who had converted his first 18 opportunities this season and 32 straight overall.

Corey Knebel walked the bases loaded in the bottom of the ninth, but he struck out Pablo Reves for his 10th save in 13 chances. Phillies starter Ranger Suarez allowed two runs on six hits in seven innings, striking out five and walking none. Connor Brogdon (1-0) tossed a scoreless

Red Sox 6, Angels 5 (10)

Christian Vazquez's one-out single in the 10th inning drove home Trevor Story from second base to lift Boston to a victory over Los Angeles in Anaheim, Calif.

The Red Sox registered their sixth consecutive win, while the Angels took their 13th loss in a row, setting a single-season club record. The game was the first for Angels interim manager Phil Nevin, who took over for manager Joe Maddon, fired earlier in the day. To make matters worse for Los Angeles, center fielder Mike Trout had to leave the game in the third inning due to a left groin tightness.

The Red Sox rallied from a 5-3 deficit with single runs in the sixth and seventh innings, sending the game to extra innings. Story began the 10th inning on second base as the designated runner, and one out later, Vazquez's single to right field off Jaime Barria drove home the game-winner. Astros 4, Mariners 1

Justin Verlander struck out a seasonhigh 12 batters over seven strong innings as Houston topped visiting Seattle.

Verlander (7-2) allowed one run on six hits and two walks while throwing a season-high 108 pitches. Kyle Tucker and Jeremy Pena hit RBI singles for the Astros, and Yordan Alvarez added a tworun homer. Ryan Pressly pitched a perfect ninth inning, fanning two, for his 11th

Cleveland recorded six stolen bases, as Myles Straw and Amed Rosario each had two. Straw also made a sliding catch in the sixth inning that saved one or possibly two runs with a drive off the bat of Texas'

Rangers rookie Steele Walker's first major league hit was a 349-foot homer into the bleachers in right to lead off the seventh. The Rangers have now hit home runs in 10 consecutive games.

Rangers 6, Guardians 3 (Game 2)

Visiting Texas blasted four home runs, including two by red-hot Marcus Semien, to defeat Cleveland in the second game of the doubleheader. Semien was 4-for-4 with two homers in the second game. The infielder was 7-for-8 in the two games with three home runs. He is the first player since 1973 to have seven hits and three home runs on a single day and he also tied the franchise record for hits in a doubleheader.

Left-hander Taylor Hearn (4-4) was in total command through five innings before Cleveland touched him up for three runs in the sixth. He pitched 5 2/3 innings and allowed four hits, three runs and two walks while fanning six. The Guardians finally broke through with an RBI base hit from Amed Rosario.

The Braves also got a pair of long solo home runs from Ronald Acuna Jr. He hit a 435-footer in the bottom of the first and a 464-footer in the third inning, giving him a homer in three consecutive at-bats dating to Sunday's game.

The winning pitcher was Kyle Wright (6-3), who won his second straight start. Wright pitched a career-high eight innings and allowed two runs on five hits and seven strikeouts. Lou Trivino (1-4) suffered the loss after one inning of relief.

Rockies 5, Giants 3

Charlie Blackmon swatted a pinch-hit, three-run homer into McCovey Cove in the sixth inning to lead Colorado to a victory at San Francisco.

Connor Joe reached base three times and had a leadoff homer among his two hits for the Rockies, who halted a fourgame slide. German Marquez (2-5) allowed three runs and four hits over six innings, and Daniel Bard struck out two in a perfect ninth for his 12th save.

Orioles 9, Cubs 3

Jorge Mateo's three-run home run was one of five long balls as Baltimore romped past visiting Chicago. The first batter for both teams homered, but the Orioles had a steadier power display as Cedric Mullins, Trey Mancini, Austin Hays and Ramon Urias all went deep.

Cubs starter Keegan Thompson (6-1), who entered the game with a 1.99 ERA, allowed seven runs in three innings. He gave up five hits, walked one, hit two batters with pitches and struck out one.

Bryan Baker (2-3) was the winning pitcher in relief of starter Kyle Bradish, who lasted 4 2/3 innings. Bradish gave up two runs on four hits and five walks with five strikeouts. Baker yielded on run in 1 1/3 innings

Blue Jays 7, Royals 0

Alek Manoah spun six shutout innings as visiting Toronto blanked Kansas City for the second straight night.

The Blue Jays, who earned an 8-0 win on Monday in the opener of a threegame series, won back-to-back shutouts and Toronto won for the 11th time in 13 games. Alejandro Kirk went 4-for-5 with a run to lead the Toronto offense. Manoah (7-1) kept the Royals off balance while scattering six hits and three walks.

Royals starter Brad Keller (1-7) allowed three runs on seven hits with two walks and four strikeouts in six-plus innings. He got the Blue Jays to ground into three inning-ending double plays.

Tigers 5, Pirates 3

Tarik Skubal pitched seven strong innings as visiting Detroit broke a threegame skid with a win over Pittsburgh.

Harold Castro had a two-run single and Jonathan Schoop, Spencer Torkelson and Tucker Barnhart hit RBI doubles for the Tigers. Skubal (5-2) was a last-minute starter. That didn't seem to cause problems for the 25-year-old left-hander, who allowed three runs and six hits with nine strikeouts and no walks.

Cal Mitchell hit a two-run homer and Yu Chang had an RBI double for the Pirates, who were 5-1 in their previous six games. Pittsburgh starter Jose Quintana (1-3) pitched 3 1/3 innings, allowing four runs and seven hits with five strikeouts and one walk.

Reds 14, D-backs 8

Joey Votto got the offense rolling with a three-run homer in the first inning and rookie Graham Ashcraft tossed six shutout innings as Cincinnati routed visiting Ashcraft (3-0) retired the first 10 batters he faced, extending Cincinnati's perfect streak to 30 batters, including the last 20 retired by Hunter Greene on Monday night. Ashcraft didn't allow a batter to reach until Pavin Smith singled down the left field line with one out in the fourth.

The Diamondbacks finally ended their scoreless drought at 26 innings when Geraldo Perdomo hit his first career grand slam and first homer of the season off reliever Jared Solomon in the eighth as part of a five-run frame to make it 9-5.

Rays 4, Cardinals 2 (10)

Taylor Walls stroked a three-run, walkoff homer with two outs in the 10th inning as Tampa Bay beat St. Louis in St. Petersburg, Fla.

Manuel Margot doubled and scored a run, and Ji-Man Choi doubled as the Rays broke a two-game skid with just three hits – all for extra bases. In his seventh start since being moved from the bullpen, Jeffrey Springs posted six scoreless innings, allowing six hits and two walks. The lefthander struck out five over a career-high 92 pitches.

Albert Pujols recorded his 3,320th career hit with a fourth-inning single, moving him past Paul Molitor and into ninth place in all-time base hits.

securing Wacha's complete game shutout and the Red Sox' 1-0 win over the Angels.

Wacha is now 4-1 with a 1.99 ERA in nine starts since signing a one-year deal worth just $7 million.

Nothing to see here folks, just another Red Sox starter getting into a white-hot streak that ranks him among the best in baseball. Nick Pivetta has been a top-10 starter in the last month. Nathan Eovaldi has dominated in three straight starts since the Astros teed off on him. Garrett Whitlock is one of the game's brightest young pitchers. And now Wacha is healthy again and looking the best we've seen from him since his rookie year in 2013.

The Sox are now the only team in baseball with three complete games (Pivetta, Eovaldi, Wacha); no other team has more than one.

'That's what I told them in the high-five line right there, 'hey, just trying to be like you guys man, just keep feeding off each other," Wacha told NESN at Angel Stadium.

Bringing up the rear of the rotation, Rich Hill is probably just keeping the seat warm until Chris Sale is ready to return in a month or so, but you can do much worse than a savvy veteran like Hill in the fifth spot.

And while the Yankees' starting staff led by Gerrit Cole and Nestor Cortes has gotten all the love this season, the Sox' rotation isn't far behind, with a 3.48 ERA that ranks seventh in MLB.

The last three turns through the rotation, the Sox have 2.81 ERA, third-best in that span. Only the Yankees and Dodgers have been better.

The Red Sox rotation has allowed just one earned run in the last six games spanning 39-1/3 innings. It's the franchise's lowest mark over any six-game span in club history.

It looks historic, it feels historic, it historic and it has teamed up with a vintage offense that has helped get the Red Sox back into contention.

Overall this season, the Sox in baseball with 4.8 runs per game, a rotation that ranks seventh with a 3.48 ERA and a bullpen that ranks 15th with a 3.89 ERA.

have an offense that ranks fifth

It's not quite Yankees-like (they're top-five in every category), but the Red Sox aren't far away. And for all the reasonable questions to be asked about the Sox' bullpen, that's really not the worst part of the roster to be a team's biggest weakness this time of year.

So what, the bullpen is only average? With an elite rotation and an elite offense, that should be good enough, at least for the time being.

Angels

From B1

Trout was healthy. The pitching staff was better. The Angels had committed the most money in franchise history to this roster, and it appeared to be worth it.

But then injuries struck. Steady infielder David Fletcher required hip surgery. Upstart Taylor Ward (hamstring) and former all-star Anthony Rendon (wrist) also hit the injured list.

And Trout, the future Hall of Famer and franchise centerpiece, slid into the longest hitless streak of his career, which ended at 0 for 26 when he singled Monday. Other teams experience injuries, too, but few see things crumble the way the Angels have in the past two weeks. Entering Tuesday's games, they were 8 1/2 games back of the Houston Astros in the American League West - but still just 1 1/2 back of the AL's third wild-card spot.

The Angels hired Maddon ahead of the 2020 season amid frustration about their always-talented roster's inability to make a playoff push. Maddon had proved himself capable of winning in a variety of situations, having led the wily Tampa Bay Rays to an AL pennant in 2008 and the beleaguered Chicago Cubs to their curse-breaking World Series title in 2016.

But his magic didn't translate in Anaheim, where he finished 152-172 and posted sub-.500 records in both of his full seasons. His teams were undone by a lack of reliable pitching and were frustrated by their lack of competitive late-summer baseball.

Maddon, 68, also faced questions about his hiring decisions. It was Maddon, in conjunction with then-general manager Billy Eppler, who brought pitching coach Mickey Callaway to the Angels after the 2019 season. MLB banned Callaway after it investigated multiple complaints of lewd behavior and sexual harassment and found them to be credible.

Maddon said he was surprised to hear of the accusations against Callaway and called it a "difficult subject to speak about." Eppler was fired as GM after the 2020 season and is now general manager of the New York Mets.

Maddon's dismissal is an awkward chapter in the young tenure of General Manager Perry Minasian, whom the Angels hired in November 2020. Minasian is as affable and patient of a GM as you can find - careful, not reactionary. That he decided to fire Maddon now - well before the all-star break and as injuries have undermined a roster that looked competitive when healthy - displays a new kind of urgency around a team that has declared it, but not shown it, over and over in recent years.

Minasian hands the reins to Nevin, who was hired in the offseason after spending 2017 to 2021 as the New York Yankees' third base coach. Nevin's name was in the mix for several managerial jobs in recent years, including the Washington Nationals' opening when Matt Williams was fired after the 2015 season. On an interim basis, he'll get his first chance with the Angels.

Lightning

From B1

Igor Shesterkin made 27 saves for the Rangers, who scratched center Ryan Strome shortly before the game because of a lower-body injury and lost center Filip Chytil to an upperbody injury late in the second period.

"Strome is day-to-day and hopefully ready to go Thursday night," Rangers coach Gerard Gallant said after the game. "(Chytil) should be fine, but we'll have to wait and see."

Strome was a 21-goal scorer during the regular season, and he has five more in the playoffs. Chytil had three points in the first two games of the current series.

"Stromer is a key guy for us," New York defenseman Adam Fox said. "He's an important piece, a centerman that can play both ends of the ice. You lose a skilled guy like that it obviously hurts, but it just means other guys have to step up."

The Lightning took a 1-0 lead at 2:38 of the first period.

Tampa Bay fourth-line right winger Zach Bogosian received a cross-ice pass in the neutral zone from Pierre-Edouard Bellemare and skated through the right circle before cutting between New York teammates Ryan Reaves and Justin Braun.

Bogosian tried a backhand from in close. That shot was saved, but Maroon skated in and swiped the bouncing puck past Shesterkin.

"Good faceoff by Bellemare, great breakout, good poise by Bellemare again, not chipping it in there and cross-icing to Bogo," Maroon said. "Bogo made a helluva play there to create some space for himself and take it to the net, and I was just driving the paint there and found a way to get the rebound."

Tampa Bay moved ahead 2-0 at 13:07 of the second period

The Rangers lost possession

trying to come through the neutral zone, and Palat passed to Kucherov for a breakaway goal.

It was the 50th point at home for Kucherov in the past three postseasons, as he joined Mario Lemieux and Wayne Gretzky as the only players to accomplish that feat over the past 35 years.

Stamkos put Tampa Bay ahead 3-0 at 4:56 of the third, scoring from in close off another feed from Palat.

Vasilevskiy was denied his second shutout of this postseason when the Lightning went on a power play and pulled Shesterkin for a twoman advantage, leading to Panarin's goal with 3:33 left.

Palat scored into an empty net with nine seconds remaining to make it 4-1.

It is the first time the home team has won the first four games of a conference final series since 1991, when the Boston Bruins and the Pittsburgh Penguins did so in the Eastern Conference finals.

Daughter tires of mother's commentary on relationship

DEAR ABBY

JEANNE

PHILLIPS

Dear Abby,

I am a 29-year-old woman in a healthy, loving relationship with my boyfriend of 2 1/2 years. We talk about marriage and kids and are committed to each other. We know we are each other's special one. He recently bought a home, and we live together. My issue is with my mother. I feel she won't be happy with me until I'm married and have children.

She and Dad met and were married within six months, so to her, any relationship that lasts longer than that without marriage or an engagement must not be the real deal. It has been extremely frustrating over the past couple of years. She slips in judgmental comments all the time and clearly doesn't respect my relationship with the man I have chosen.

If I try to defend my life and our relationship, she says I'm too defensive and must be unhappy. If I say nothing, which has been my approach for the past six months or so, her snide comments continue. I want a good relationship with her, but I am not sure where to go from here. Marriage and kids are in our future but not for some time. We are enjoying our own timeline. Help!

It's my Life in Colorado

At 29, you are well into adulthood, so perhaps it's time to draw the line. Tell your mother you know she loves you and is concerned for your welfare, but you do not plan to marry anyone on her timeline. Then say, calmly, that her comments are hurtful, and you need her to quit the needling, or she will be seeing a lot less of you. Be prepared to follow through.

Dear Abby,

I have two children. One is 6, and the other is an infant. My 6-year-old is kind but mischievous at times. I am a firm believer that children need loving parents, but also parents who discipline when it's needed.

My mother recently came to live with me and my husband. She helps out a lot, but she is causing some confusion in our home. She doesn't discipline my 6-year-old when needed. In fact, she often acts like a child herself when she should be acting like an adult. This issue causes my 6-year-old to sometimes be disrespectful.

When my husband and I hear the smart-mouth talk, we address it, but there's only so much we can do when my mother won't take an adult role. I have had several conversations with her about it, but nothing changes. I don't want her to leave, but I'm afraid her attitude toward parenting and discipline will cause some real problems in my home. Please help.

Disciplined In Virginia

Continue the conversation with your mother. Explain that although she may think you are too strict with your older child, you are that child's mother, and this is the way you want the child raised. Then tell her that if enforcing the rules is too much for her, she may have to find other living arrangements. Talk to your child, as well. Make sure he/she understands that the rules come from his/her parents and no one else.

I am troubled by your statement that your mother sometimes acts like a child. I wish you had mentioned why she's living with you. If you suspect there's a possibility she might be experiencing the onset of dementia, INSIST that she be evaluated by a physician and a neurologist to ensure that she's well.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Contact Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

Born today, you are many things to many people, or so it may seem — though you believe at all times you are simply being yourself at any given moment, and that if two people see you differently, it says much more about them than it does about you! There is something to that, of course, and this attitude certainly helps you build confidence. However, the truth is that you are not always the same, and that depending on the situation, you may seem to be this, that or the other thing almost at random.

You are one of the most complex individuals born under a sign known for complexity, and your personality has a great many facets that are on display, either one at a time or all at once.

Also born on this date are: Johnny Depp, actor; Natalie Portman, actress; Michael J. Fox, actor; Les Paul, guitarist; Cole Porter, songwriter; Jackie Mason, comedian; Jackie Wilson, singer; Robert Cummings, actor; Robert McNamara, statesman; Gloria Reuben, actress.

To see what is in store for you tomorrow, find your birthday and read the corresponding paragraph. Let your birthday star be your daily guide.

FRIDAY, JUNE 10

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — If it's not first on your list, you will want to pass it up until its turn comes. You must prioritize and do things in the right order today.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — A slow start doesn't mean you'll have a slow or unproductive day; on the contrary, if you use the time, you can speed up things considerably.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Focus on that which has eluded you in the past; today it may be there for the taking — but only if you're aware of it and all that it may mean to you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — You'll enjoy going back in time today and revisiting a high point — though you must take care that you don't get lost in such memories.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — You may feel that you're in some kind of time warp, as your awareness of the day speeds up and slows down willynilly as the hours pass.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — Take a chance today and you can very likely do something you didn't even know you wanted to do. Recognition can come your way very soon.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Why not shuffle your responsibilities today and tackle them in a different order than usual? This can provide many unexpected benefits.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — You're getting used to feeling like something has passed you by, but the truth is that it may very well present itself one more time — today!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Telling others what to do isn't your way, so why try that tactic today? Use genuine encouragement and good humor, as usual.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — It's a good time for you to settle into something as if you are planning to stay awhile — even if this is merely a temporary experiment.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — A pattern of good behavior mustn't be broken today — and certainly not in favor of something bad for you that brings only fleeting enjoyment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — A mystery is solved today when you finally discover what it is that someone has wanted to talk with you about. You can make a new plan.

Opening lead: Four of ♦ Australian expert Phil Gue was South, in today's deal. Gue once had a partnership with another Aussie expert named Terry Brown. That was an unfortunate name for a partnership and they no longer play together, as far as we know.

Gue won the opening diamond lead with dummy's ace and led a spade to his king, winning the trick. He led a club and West played low. Gue rose with dummy's king to win the trick. This seemed like an unusual play after West's preempt. Gue reasoned that West had pre-empted at unfavorable vulnerability on a modest suit, so he should have a good hand. The early play made it look like West did not hold the ace of spades or the queen-jack of diamonds, so Gue played him for the ace of clubs. Good guess!

West won the next club and continued with a diamond to dummy's king. Gue ruffed a club low in his hand and West's discard spoke volumes. He successfully ran the queen of hearts and led a heart to the ace. Another club ruff was followed by a diamond ruff in dummy. In this three-card ending, East was down to the ace-jack-nine of spades. Gue led a club from dummy and East had to ruff and lead a spade, making dummy's queen of spades the tenth trick. Beautifully played!
