Beauty's where you find it: Ball culture goes mainstream in 'Pose'

By Kyla Brewer TV Media

lot of television series offer viewers typical slice-of-life stories, but TV also has the power to uplift, inspire and educate. One new drama is doing all three by exploring the history of the LGBTQ house ball subculture.

In 1986 New York, LGBTQ performers face off in house ball competitions where they're judged on their outfits, attitude and dance skills in various categories in the new musical drama "Pose," airing Sunday, June 24, on FX. Set against a backdrop of the luxury Trump era, the show also explores the personal lives of the performers as they celebrate finding a space where they are accepted for who they really are, while also coping with rejection, discrimination, rivalries and more.

"Pose" hails from modern-day TV dream team Ryan Murphy ("Glee") and Brad Falchuk ("Scream Queens"), along with upand-coming writer Steven Canals ("Afeura," 2016). Murphy's commitment to supporting the community featured in the show is more than just lip service. In May, he announced via Twitter that he would be donating all profits from the series to trans and LGBTQ charitable organizations, and went on to explain his actions to Variety.

"We've entered this era of television as advocacy, and I've seen the difference you can make in people's lives by showing up for them, caring for them, and helping them in any way that you can," Murphy said.

He also revealed he plans to hit up his bosses at 20th Century Fox and FX for donations, hopes to hold fundraisers and is even considering setting up scholarships for LGBTQ youth.

"Pose" isn't only groundbreaking for raising awareness about the LG-BTQ community, but also because the show boasts the largest cast of transgender actors in series regular roles. The show also features the largest recurring cast of LGBTQ actors ever for a scripted series. All in all, the production has employed more than 100 trans performers and crew members. Rather than relying on big-name actors with no personal connection to the subject matter to draw viewers, "Pose" allows transgender performers to share a part of their community's history.

The core cast includes several transgender women of color. Mj Rodriguez of "Nurse Jackie" and "Luke Cage" fame stars as Blanca Rodriguez, who leaves the House of Abundance to form her own house, House of Evangelista. Dominique Jackson ("Visible:The LGBTQ Caribbean Diaspora," 2018) plays Blanca's former house mother, Elektra Abundance. In 2016, thousands of TV viewers watched Jackson in Oxygen's six-episode reality TV series "Strut," which chronicled the lives of transgender models.

Always at Elektra's side is Lulu Abundance (Hailie Sahar, "Transparent"), second-in-command at House Abundance. A dancer and singer, Sahar has also been crowned Miss L.A. Pride, and Queen U.S.A. Fashion fans may recognize trans cast member Indya Moore ("Saturday Church," 2017), a model who's worked for Gucci and Dior. Moore portrays Angel, a streetwalker who begins to develop feelings for a client. Actress, businesswoman and transgender rights advocate Angelica Ross ("Her Story") stars as Candy, a member of House Abundance, who can be sensitive about her appearance.

Blanca's House of Evangelista serves as a surrogate family for LG-BTQ youth who've been rejected by their birth families. One of those family members is dancer Damon Richards, played by newcomer Ryan Jamaal Swain. Obie Award-winning actress and playwright Charlayne Woodard ("Law & Order: Special Victims Unit") takes on the role of prominent dance instructor Helena St. Rogers, who takes a keen interest in Damon and becomes his trusted confidante.

A chance encounter with Damon leads streetwise Ricky (Dyllon Burnside, "High Maintenance") to consider joining the house as well. Burnside rose to prominence thanks to his Broadway role in "Holler if Ya Hear Me," a musical inspired by the music and lyrics of Tupac Shakur. Speaking of Broadway, Tony Award winner Billy Porter ("The Broken Hearts Club: A Romantic Comedy," 2000) stars as Pray Tell, a grandfather figure who watches over all of the "children" who compete in the house balls. A veteran of the stage, Porter won his Tony for his portrayal of Lola in the musical "Kinky Boots," a role he originated in 2013.

The cast also includes Even Peters ("American Horror Story") and Kate Mara ("House of Cards") as affluent New Jersey couple Stan and Patty Bowes. As they are drawn into the glamour and intrigue of 1980s New York, Stan begins seeing Angel on the side. James Van Der Beek ("Dawson's Creek") portrays Stan's kingpin boss, Matt Bromley. "Pose" marks the television series debut of Angel Bismark Curiel ("America Adrift," 2016), who plays risk-taker Lil Papi.

Together, the cast, crew and writers tell a story longing to be told as LGBTQ youth still struggle to find acceptance in many parts of the world. It isn't too late to jump on board as the series premieres its fourth episode, entitled "The Fever." This week, Candy is criticized during a ball, which intensifies her feelings of insecurity about her appearance. Meanwhile, Blanca is concerned that a medical scare could tear Damon and Ricky apart. But it isn't all gritty drama — the show celebrates LGBTQ culture with music, glamour and plenty of glitter. Don't miss this week's "Pose," airing Sunday, June 24, on FX.

Taraji P. Henson in "Acrimony"

Acrimony

After meeting Robert (Bent), the guy of her dreams, Melinda (Henson) marries him, despite the warnings from her sisters that he's only interested in the money that she inherited after her mother's death, and despite the fact that he cheated on her early on in their relationship. Robert is an engineer who is unable to find work, resulting in Melinda supporting them both, and an invention that he's spent years working on has drained their finances. After losing their house due to his failures, and learning that he's cheated on her again, Melinda files for a divorce, but after Robert's invention finally makes him rich, she snaps and tries to do whatever it takes to win her former husband back. Director: Tyler Perry. Stars: Taraji P. Henson, Lyriq Bent, Crystle Stewart, Jazmyn Simon, Ptosha Storey, Danielle Nicolet. 2018. 120 min. Thriller.

Voyeuristic viewing: There's good news for all the TV watchers with a voyeuristic bent out there: "Big Brother" is back for another season, with another group of contestants lined up and ready to enter the Big Brother house.

The 20th season of the summer reality TV staple premieres Wednesday, June 27, on CBS, with Julie Chen ("The Talk") back as host in a role that she's defined since the very first season back in 2000. As in seasons past, three episodes will air every week, on Wednesdays, Thursdays and Sundays.

In each season of "Big Brother," a number of contestants — called "houseguests" — are put in a home together where they live under constant surveillance. While inside, all communication with the outside world is totally cut off, and every week the houseguests must evict one of their fellows from the house — and from the competition for the prize money.

Of course, there are also weekly competitions that can make or break a houseguest's chances. The winner of the Head of Household contest gets to nominate the two houseguests who are up for elimination that week, while food and luxury competitions can make a contestant's time in the house a little more comfortable — or a lot more miserable.

For "Big Brother's" most hardcore fans, the fun doesn't stop just because an episode isn't currently on TV. The "Big Brother" house is decked out with dozens of cameras, and subscribers can tune in to their feeds any time at the show's official website, where they can watch the housequests eating, sleeping and doing all of the notso-exciting things that everyone does daily. (Don't worry. The cameras don't cover EVERY inch of the house!)

Although the current focus is obviously on the new season, there is more good news about the series. This past winter saw the first ever celebrity edition of the series, and the off-season offering proved to be a big enough hit that a second celebrity-focused season has been ordered. There's no word on when that will see the light of day, but even after 18 years, "Big Brother" is still going strong. The new season premieres Wednesday, June 27, on CBS.

Broadway in 1968 following an off-Broadway debut the previous year, and it almost immediately attracted controversy for a scene that includes nudity, as well as its allusions to homosexuality and drug use. Despite that, the musical about a hippie struggling with a life-changing decision survived the controversy and has gone on to stand the test of time.

lected its next musical — again. a life-changing decision survived The peacock network has found a the controversy and has gone on surprising hit in its produc-The "Hair" antions and live airings of legendary musicals, nouncement comes including the rejust a few months cent "Jesus after production on a live interpretation of "Bye Bye Birdie" was delayed for a second time. That musical was originally intended to be 2017's holiday event, but due to producer and star

Jennifer Lopez's ("World of Dance") busy schedule, it was postponed until 2018, but now even that later date has been pushed back until 2019 at the earliest.

It's still too early for any names to be attached to "Hair," but the pedigree of NBC's live productions has consistently attracted top talent. In addition to Lopez and Legend, Carrie Underwood ("The Sound of Music Live!"), Jennifer Hudson ("Hairspray Live!") and Christopher Walken ("Peter Pan Live!") have also starred in NBC's musicals.

Stay tuned for more news about casting and dates for NBC's live production of "Hair" as the planned spring 2019 premiere date approaches.

Basket case: FX isn't clowning around when it comes to one of its most celebrated comedies. "Baskets," the series created by and starring Zach Galifianakis ("The Hangover," 2009) in dual roles, has been renewed for a fourth season.

Also starring Martha Kelly ("Spider-Man: Homecoming," 2017) and Louie Anderson ("Life with Louie"), the latter of whom won an Emmy for his performance in the series, "Baskets" is the story of professional clown Chip Baskets (Galifianakis), who flunked out of a prestigious French clowning school and is forced to work as a rodeo clown in his hometown in California. Galifianakis also plays Chip's twin brother, Dale, while Anderson plays their mother, Christine.

Make no mistake — "Baskets" is rarely a laugh-out-loud kind of comedy, but it's one that makes its audiences chuckle, cringe and groan in equal measure. There really isn't much else like it on TV, giving it a unique position in the comedy landscape.

The third season of "Baskets" finished in March, with no premiere date yet announced for the fourth. With all three previous seasons having premiered in January, it's a safe bet that that's when the clowning around will continue on FX.

Q&A Hollywood

By Adam Thomlison TV Media

Q: I'm sorry, "Married... With Children" had a spinoff?

A: Yes, the notorious but also hugely successful sitcom had at least one spinoff. I say "at least" because it may have had two or even four, depending on your definition of spinoff.

"Top of the Heap" was a real series that launched in 1991, as an episode of "Married... With Children" (what's known as a back-door pilot). It featured future "Friends" star Matt LeBlanc as a poor guy living with his dad, trying to get rich by working at a country club. It aired for just seven episodes in total before being canceled.

Well, sort of canceled. It was revived a year later, appearing under the title "Vinnie & Bobby," having dropped the father character and changed a few other plot points. This version, too, lasted just a handful of episodes before getting the ax.

There were also two attempted spinoffs that were never picked up to series.

Q: I am wondering why Hallmark Channel's original shows such as "When Calls the Heart" aren't repeated as often as their original movies?

A: Hallmark takes an innovative approach to its back-catalog of programming, which makes some sense since its catalog is unlike anyone else's.

Programming-wise, Hallmark is very much a movie producer. It's been making two-hour heartwarmers since way back in the days of the four-channel TV universe.

Now that those days are gone, though, Hallmark is making bold moves in today's infinite-channel cable universe. That includes producing TV shows as well as movies.

However — and this is where it differs from most TV producers — Hallmark's catalog is still made up of mostly movies, and so, to finally answer your question, it's treating the shows as being more valuable, because they're more rare.

Bill Abbott, CEO of Hallmark Channel's parent company, has said that repeating the shows less often has driven up their value. And he plans to capitalize on that value online.

"Now we're sitting in a position where we have quite a bit of content that can't be seen anywhere else that we can take and go over the top with," he said in an interview with Broadcasting and Cable magazine. ("Over the top" is an inside-industry term for non-TV broadcasts, most notably web streaming.)

He pointed out that, in fact, reruns of many of its shows don't pull in very strong TV ratings, despite having large fan bases — he offered the series "Signed, Sealed, Delivered" as an example. The theory is that they'll do better online.

If this seems like yet another predictable move away from traditional TV, Abbott would like to remind you that Hallmark just launched yet another TV channel — Hallmark Drama — last year. That, he said, is proof of a commitment to the traditional model.

Q: Over the years, including this year, Scott Caan is seen "injured" in many different episodes of "Hawaii Five-0." I've seen him on crutches, in a knee brace and this year in a severe elbow brace. Is Scott really clumsy and has injured himself that many times off-screen and they just have to write it into the script?

A: He might take issue with "clumsy," but essentially you're right.

Actor Scott Caan is in fact a multi-sport athlete and suffers the frequent bumps and bruises — and torn anterior cruciate ligaments — that come with that.

It was a ligament injury that put him on crutches and a knee brace in the first season way back in 2010. At first it was reported that he hurt it performing a stunt on set, but he later admitted that his opponent tore it for him in a Brazilian jiu-jitsu match.

In the most recent season, his character was wearing an arm brace at one point. A CBS publicist explained to Pittsburgh Post-Gazette writer Rob Owen that "Mr. Caan hurt his arm in real life while not working on the series."

The Endless

Years after they escaped the UFO death cult that raised them, brothers Justin (Benson) and Aaron (Moorhead) return to meet with its members after receiving a cryptic message. They seek closure for their past, but instead, the brothers find themselves reconsidering their own beliefs and those of the cult when they encounter bizarre phenomena around the cult's remote camp. As it begins to appear that the cult's beliefs may have been rooted in reality all along, the brothers try to unravel the truth. Directors: Justin Benson, tin Benson, Aaron Moor-Ellington, Lew Temple, James Jordan. 2017. 111 min. Fantasy.

Real talk

By K.A. Taylor TV Media

Out-tricked: For centuries, illusionists and magicians have mesmerized audiences with sometimes humorous, sometimes phenomenal stage magic. Despite knowing these tricks are mere illusions, we remain captivated by the performances, ever longing to discover their secrets. While "Penn & Teller: Fool Us" still manages to keep the magicians' secrets safe, the series, now entering its fifth season, proves that audiences remain spellbound. The latest season premieres Monday, June 25, on CW.

The series features the legendary Penn Jillette ("Scorpion") and Teller ("The Drew Carey Show"), who take center stage to review a selection of up-and-coming magicians looking to prove themselves. Each contestant must present a trick that he or she hopes will dupe the judges. Once the trick is performed. Penn and Teller take their time examining the act, careful to inspect any props used, in an attempt to uncover the magician's secrets. Meanwhile, show host Alyson Hannigan ("How I Met Your Mother") chats with the magician, providing background information for the viewers while Penn and Teller quietly confer about how the trick was achieved.

Sudoku

Fill in the grid so that every row, every column, and every 3x3 box contains the digits 1 through 9. Solution on page 3.

Ever after: Weddings are typically thought to be one of the happiest moments of our lives. Everyone longs for sunny, clear skies, an elegant ceremony and a one-of-akind honeymoon. What's envisioned is often difficult to make a reality, be it due to finances or elaborate expectations, but an iconic brand is proving that fantastical dreams of wedded bliss really can come true. Marital magic awaits with an all-new episode of "Disney's Fairy Tale Weddings," airing Monday, June 25, on Freeform.

Hosted by Allison Holker and Stephen "tWitch" Boss, this upbeat docu-series gives Disney lovers an endless supply of locales and décor to adore. Each episode features different couples and Disney locations. From amusement parks to cruise ships, no venue is too big or small to accommodate the wishes of these energized newlyweds-to-be, with locations ranging from the Aulani Disney Resort and Spa in Hawaii to Disney's Hollywood Studios in Los Angeles.
