Joe Andreozzi receives suspended sentence for obstruction, cyberstalking

Former Barrington Police Sergeant Joe Andreozzi avoided jail time and instead received a suspended sentence and must attend domestic violence counseling after pleading guilty to domestic cyberstalking and obstruction of justice.

In court on Wednesday, Aug. 13, Mr. Andreozzi received a one year suspended sentence with probation on each count, with the sentences to run consecutively.

In addition, the defendant was ordered to undergo domestic violence counseling and have no contact with the victim. Mr. Andreozzi also resigned from the Barrington Police Department.

Barrington Police Chief John LaCross issued a statement following the sentencing.

"Mr. Andreozzi's agreement to plead guilty today with convictions on two criminal charges and separately to resign from employment with the town as a police officer was of the utmost importance to both the State and the Town of Barrington," said the chief. "The Rhode Island State Police investigators and Assistant Attorney General Stephen A. Regine and Special Assistant Kate C. Brody devoted countless hours to the case and I would like to thank them for their professionalism and dedicated work. The department will continue to move forward as always providing the best quality services possible to the Town of Barrington."

District prepares for start of new full-day kindergarten program

BY JOAN D. WARREN
Special to The Times

In just a few short days, summer vacation will come to end for Barrington public school students.

The first day of school is Monday, Aug. 25 and as families prepare for the big day, there are a few changes school administrators feel they should know in order to make a smooth transition into the school year.

The most dramatic change is the addition of full-day kindergarten. Barrington Superintendent of Schools Michael Messore said there will be a bit of a transitional period for the elementary schools with the start of full-day kindergarten.

"We expect the biggest adjustments with full-day kindergarten to be the bus pick-ups and drop-offs. As always, the first week of school there are some adjustments that need to be worked out with busing. We want to stress the importance of pick-up and drop-off," Mr. Messore said.

He said that no kindergartner will be left at a bus stop before or after school without a parent or guardian present.

"The bus drivers will not allow a child off the bus unless there is a parent or guardian there to

Bike crash lands two in the hospital

Barrington police and fire officials responded to a bicycle accident in the area of the East Bay Bike Path intersection with Washington Road on Friday morning, Aug. 15, at 10:35. According to police, a 55 year-old Barrington woman was pedaling north on the path when a 67 year-old Pawtucket man riding south veered into her lane, struck her and sent both individuals onto the asphalt. Police tried to speak with the Pawtucket man, but he reportedly appeared confused and would not comment on the accident. A witness later offered a detailed account of what happened. Rescue personnel transported both people to Rhode Island Hospital.

Food and fun draw crowd to church festival

Holy Angels Church celebrates 99th annual festival

BY MANUEL C. "MANNY" CORREIRA
Special to The Times

Unlike most people who attended the 99th annual Holy Angels Church Festival over this past weekend, Marvin and Linda Homonoff were new to everything this event had to offer.

"We've lived in Barrington for 37 years," said Mr. Homonoff, who also serves as Barrington probate judge, "but had never attended this festival. This was great tonight. The food was exemplary and the music was outstanding. It was nice to see this large number of people here, several of whom I knew personally."

Linda Homonoff, who raved about the food, was equally impressed.

"The baked macaroni and meatballs were out of this world," she noted. "But, what was even more impressive, was the way everyone came and worked together in a great community event."

Festival committee chairwoman Barbara St. Angelo said she was pleased with this year's turnout.

"We had great crowds," she said. "I also noticed that we had a lot of new people attend this year. It's a lot of hard work, but very gratifying that we're able to pull together in support of our beloved parish."

Judy Pine, a 17-year festival committee member, said all the hard work is worth it in the end.

"I do whatever is needed," she explained. "This is our church and that's important."

The three-day festival began last Thursday with a steak dinner, and continued Friday and Saturday evenings with a variety of traditional Italian and other great food. There was Roman Garden dining, doughboys, a bake sale table, games, a White Elephant sale corner, raffles, and the "Big Raffle."

Entertainment was provided by "Gemini" on Friday night, and Joseph Sturm and his sister, Sue Dussault-Eddins, on Saturday evening.

All in all, this "Feast of the Assumption," as it used to be called for decades, was another smash success, for young and old alike.

Stolen political signs surface in Barrington

Local man wakes up Monday morning to lawn covered with signs

BY TED HAYES

thayes@eastbaynewspapers.com

At least 16 political signs stolen from across Warren turned up in Barrington Monday morning.

Barrington resident Matt Amaral woke up to find the signs planted carefully on his front lawn. They advertise the candidacies of Brandt Heckert and Steve Thompson, Democrats who are running for Warren Town Council and will face a primary election early next month. Also stolen were more than a dozen other signs for Rhode Island gubernatorial candidates Clay Pell and Gina Raimondo, as well as two non-political signs advertising a fund-raiser at Burrs Hill Park this past weekend.

Mr. Heckert, who filed a police report Monday after noticing the signs missing, said around 1:30 p.m. that he planned to go to Barrington that afternoon to retrieve them. He and Mr. Thompson noticed them missing Monday morning from private properties on Wheaton, Water and State streets. Others planted over the weekend at the corner of Metacom and Franklin Street were reportedly run over, Mr. Thompson said.

"We had volunteers helping, so it's really frustrating," he said.

Mr. Amaral said that initially he thought "bored" friends of his son were responsible. But he spoke to his son and his friends, and is satisfied that they probably weren't involved. He filed a police report Monday afternoon.

"This is vandalism and trespassing," he said. "And I don't like the thought of people on our property when we're asleep."

Mr. Heckert and Mr. Thompson are running for Warren Town Council, and will square off against other Democrats at the primary election early next month. Other Democratic candidates for the five-seat council include Mark Aubin, John Bento, David Frerichs, Richard Silva and Catherine Tattrie.

Each kindergarten class has about 17 or 18 students, Mr. Mesore reported. The number of new students has gone up only slightly, he said.

The other change that affects all the schools are some new educators. At the end of the 2013-2014 school year, eight Barrington school employees retired. Thirteen new professionals were hired over the summer in permanent positions.

Vandals' acts silence Booster Board

For decades the Barrington Booster Board has welcomed people into town as they travel south on Route 114 or west over the White Church Bridge. It has posted reminders about upcoming school events and cheered on local sports teams as they prepare for the big game and shared condolences for those stricken by unfortunate events.

But now it is blank ... and all because of a few bothersome vandals.

For some unknown reason, this group of delinquents — we picture multiple individuals laughing and snickering as they dismantle and then rearrange letters and spell out dirty words — has drawn some amount of pleasure in spoiling simple reminders for concerts at the beach and “welcome homes” for local soldiers returning from combat.

The folks who manage the board have been patient. When the vandals first struck, the Booster Club members ignored the acts and kept on creating new messages. Then the vandals struck again and stole some of the letters. Even the threat of increased surveillance and police action has done little to thwart the miscreants.

Finally, the board was left blank.

Booster Club members are now contemplating different ways to repair the situation. There has been some discussion about a locking door that would swing shut over the messages and secure them, and some Boosters would like to see an electronic message board installed. However, both remedies would require money ... money that would otherwise be spent supporting Barrington public school students.

We can understand how some may feel a small measure of excitement while jumbling plastic letters to reveal statements of silliness. But enough is enough.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Outdoor fire ordinance needs amending

To the editor:

Re: “Barrington police, fire respond to backyard burn” (police & fire, July 30):

This article, detailing how Barrington police and fire officials were dispatched to a Nayatt Road residence to investigate an “open burning in a backyard fire pit” complaint, only to discover that the resident was innocently cooking a hot dog for her daughter, was amusing until I came to the last line: “It was not the first time a neighbor had called to complain about the backyard fires.”

It seems to me that the valuable and finite time and resources of Barrington's police and fire departments are being unnecessarily diverted from more important matters.

On the one hand, the neighbor is just (conscientiously and repeatedly) working to enforce Barrington's Town Code of Ordinances § 71-8, which prohibits most outdoor burning without a permit, and no doubt also making good on their childhood pledge to a certain anthropomorphic bear famous for saying, “Only YOU can prevent forest fires.” And who can fault them for being a good citizen?

On the other hand, the innocent resident was just cooking her daughter a hot dog. And what kid doesn't love hot dogs?

What can possibly be done to break such an impasse pitting the American values of good citizenship against good parenting and love of grilled processed meats?

It seems to me that the only reasonable win-win solution is for Barrington to simply amend § 71-8 to allow consenting adults to operate outdoor fire pits (with reasonable precautions taken). That way, the conscientious neighbor can continue to help enforce our laws (and stay true to Smokey Bear) without feeling compelled to repeatedly call upon our police and fire departments over someone else's dinner, parents can feel free to cook hot dogs for their kids without fear of intrusion by emergency response teams, and the Barrington police and fire departments can be free to focus their time and attention on keeping our community safe and secure.

Dr. Johnson's legacy lives on

Dr. David A. Johnson, a Barrington resident who was the owner and sole physician at Portsmouth Medical Center on Chase Road, died Aug. 6 after battling cancer. He was 59. This is a message from his family.

To the editor:

Our family feels compelled to deliver a message to all Dr. Johnson's patients. As many of you know, Dr. Johnson's dedication to each of his patients was unique. Dr. J took the responsibility for the physical and emotional health of his patients very seriously, never abandoning any of you. In his memory, his family will carry forward this commitment.

Until my husband/our father's final days, he talked of his practice and the need for a careful transition of his patient population into the hands of providers with the same caring philosophy as he had. Though Dr. J had difficulty letting go of the idea that he would practice again, the realization that this would not be possible led us to recent discussions of transitioning his patients' care to a worthy group of providers.

Our family hopes to finalize and announce details of this transition shortly. We believe the group we are speaking with will provide a wide array of services and patient support to include a female practitioner, something Dr. Johnson believed was essential for a comprehensive well rounded practice.

Dr. Johnson was touched and continuously strengthened throughout this difficult battle by letters and cards that poured in from his patients. The number of patients who attended his wake and funeral would have equally moved him. Our family listened intently to the many stories of how Dr. J helped so many people. His legacy lives on through, not only his children, but also through all of those he cared for in his 30 years of primary care practice. We deeply thank you for those “stories.”

We also thank you all for your patience as we honor Dave's wishes in making sure you are all taken care of in having access to quality primary care services. We promise to keep you updated. A final message to you from Dave with the help of Yogi Berra “Love is the most important thing in the world, but baseball is pretty good, too.” Go Yankees!

The family of

Back to school and back to the store

A fair amount of parents are, right now, finding themselves quite excited by the prospect of sending their children back to school on Monday.

Josh BICKFORD

The momentous day will mean, for some, a quieter house and fewer messes and the opportunity to complete a task without the ever-present threat of interruption. It will mean errands in an empty car and, possibly, more time for reading the local newspaper. Possibly.

But the return to school comes with a price tag attached.

In addition to new school shoes and pants and shirts and socks, dresses and skirts and blouses and accessories (whatever they might be), parents will also need to spend more than a few dollars on classroom supplies.

Television advertisements previously lured parents with promises of pencils on sale and Trapper Keepers in dozens of styles. Now they try to fool unsuspecting moms and dads into believing that their sons and daughters will need a new laptop computer and cell phone before they can be expected to complete actual assignments. (Don't believe the hype.)

Meanwhile, public schools have fallen into the habit of sending home, or posting online, school supply lists. In a neighboring district, an online supply list for second-graders — these are students who still may be struggling with tying their shoe laces and reading the hands on a clock — includes a dozen pencils, two packages of end cap erasers, a box of 24 crayons, a box of 12 colored pencils, two glue sticks, 3 two-pocket folders, 2 composition notebooks (wide ruled, 100 pages each), scissors, a highlighter, a pencil sharpener, a pencil box to house the arsenal of writing implements, dry erase markers, a ruler and two boxes of tissues. I think the tissues may be for the parents while they stand in the checkout line.

In the office, reporters and editors discussed this situation. We also learned dirty (and possibly true) rumors of a school districts' plans to educate students on the benefits of a communistic society where all students' school supplies are pooled and then redistributed. That perfect three-ring binder with Hello Kitty on the cover that looked so good on the shelf at CVS may end up going home in your neighbor's kid's backpack.

There were a few out-of-touch newsroom inhabitants who questioned the need for so many notebooks and pens and highlighters and crayons when more and more teachers are pushing much of their learning onto computers. In Barrington there are now computer labs inside the elementary schools — with whole rows of handsome black desktops, do we really need so many pencils?

It has gotten to the point where a cynic may think that the teachers and the office supply stores have a deal worked out. "If you post this supply list, we'll give you one of those cushy roll-around chairs from aisle nine."

All this said, I will not be the one to slow the progress of a public school education. I have already discussed with my wife the upcoming trip to the store to collect school supplies for our son as he heads off to class.

Just one question: If he doesn't use all his pencils can I bring some to work?

To the editor:

It is gratifying to know that just eight years after BCA's high school was re-established, it is being recognized as a top-50 school offering an excellent academic program and exceptional programs in the fine arts.

Inside the walls of BCA we've known this, and we're pleased that now this is being shared broadly through TheBestSchools.org.

We can attribute this excellence to a number of factors. First and foremost, it is due to the outstanding faculty—they are a top-notch, dedicated, well-qualified group of professionals who love kids and love to teach! Teachers are the key to educational excellence.

Second, it is due to a Board of Trustees with commitment to our vision who did not require that we start cutting programs when the recession affected both our enrollment and our capital campaign. We all agreed to push forward to build the program we envisioned, trusting that increased enrollment and donor support would eventually help us bridge the gap. The effort has paid off!

Third, our excellence is thanks to our generous parents, grandparents, business partners and other donors who believe in our mission and vision and have helped fund it.

Finally, we have a terrific student body, and we are proud of their efforts as students and community members. They are the ones who have created the student culture, and they have done a great job! Our students have created an atmosphere of striving for excellence, and they demonstrate a commitment to our school's core values, including service to their communities and the world. They often refer to BCA as their family, because the bonds of friendship they have formed with each other and the teachers are such an important factor in what makes BCA successful.

As we approach our 35th anniversary this fall, we have even more to celebrate!

The gun that never goes off

Anton Chekhov (1860-1904), the great Russian writer of short stories and plays, comments in his 1889 letter to A. S. Gruzinsky, "One must never place a loaded rifle on the stage if it isn't going to go off. It's wrong to make promises you don't mean to keep." This statement, along with similar ones made by the Russian author, has been generalized into a principle of drama known as "Chekhov's gun:" there should be no unnecessary elements in a narrative; any object, any description, any character, any dialogue that does not in some way move the story along should be eliminated.

James ROSENBERG

Although Herman Melville's Moby Dick (1851) is arguably America's greatest work of fiction, the book clearly and repeatedly violates Chekhov's prescription for good story-telling. Melville (1819-1891) has a radically different notion of what makes a compelling narrative.

Melville's Bulkington is a loaded gun that never goes off; the tall, muscular, and taciturn Virginian appears twice in the early chapters of Moby Dick and never appears again. We meet him for the first time on a stormy December night at the Spouter Inn in New Bedford. The narrator Melville/Ishmael writes: "He stood full six feet in height, with noble shoulders, and a chest like a coffer dam. I have seldom seen such brawn in a man...His voice announced at once that he was a Southerner, and from his fine stature, I thought he must be one of those tall mountaineers from the Allegheny Ridge in Virginia."

A moment later, "this man slipped away, and I saw no more of him until he became my comrade on the sea."

In a brief chapter called "The Lee Shore," we find Bulkington at the helm of the whaler Pequod. Melville/Ishmael asks: "Know ye, now, Bulkington? Glimpses do you seem to see of that mortally intolerable truth; that all deep earnest thinking is but the intrepid effort of the soul to keep the open independence of the sea; while the wildest winds of heaven and earth conspire to cast him on the threatening slavish shore?"

A final paragraph ending with the prophetic and enigmatic sentence: "Up from the spray of thy ocean-perishing - straight up, leaps thy apotheosis." By choosing the word "apotheosis" Melville suggests that Bulkington is more a god than a man and that as a god he will survive - along with the mortal Ishmael - the destruction of the Pequod.

In an audacious move, Melville removes the veil between himself and his fiction and tells the reader exactly what he is doing in "The Lee Shore:" "This six-inch (on the page) chapter is the stoneless grave of Bulkington." That is to say, Melville steps out of the story to declare that here and now he is burying Bulkington; the brawny Virginian never makes another appearance in the ensuing 113 chapters! Chekhov's loaded gun is never fired.

Many careful readers of Moby Dick have wondered why Bulkington has remained what Melville/Ishmael calls "my shipmate, (though but a sleeping-partner one)" throughout the majority of the epic journey across the world's oceans. Why the palpable absence? Why does the man who is described as more than a man - a semi-divine Hercules who is destined to rise godlike to heaven - disappear from the text?

Some would argue that, for all its greatness, Moby Dick is a messy, shapeless, unruly work - a novel that is not really a novel, a piece of writing that is sui generis, one of a kind. According to this line of thinking, Melville simply lost his bearings in the chaotic sea of his own words and "forgot" about Bulkington.

By way of contrast, I would argue that it is not an accident, it is not Melville's sloppiness that leaves Bulkington a silent partner of the Pequod's crew, who are bound for destruction because of crazy captain Ahab's unquenchable feud with Moby Dick, the white whale, the dumb brute who bit off his leg.

Rather, as Melville writes when he shows us Bulkington for the last time, "in landlessness alone resides the highest truth, shoreless, indefinite as God." Bulkington, who after four years at sea, spends only a day or two on dry land and then sets sail on the Pequod, represents that "highest truth, shoreless, indefinite as God;" Bulkington is that landless truth that breathes through the open waters of Moby Dick. Bulkington is always there, on the journey; though we do not see him, we feel him, the loaded gun that never goes off.

As Charles Olson puts it in his prose poem, Call Me Ishmael, "The rest of the Pequod's voyage Bulkington remains a 'sleeping partner' to the action. He is the secret member of the crew, below deck always...He is the crew's heart, the sign of their paternity, the human thing. And by that thing alone can they reach their apotheosis."

Republican party elects new chairman

Former chairman Steve Primiano focusing on his campaign for town council

"I feel strongly that the town council needs a new direction that will focus on local issues and put the needs of Barrington residents first."

■ STEVE PRIMIANO

The Barrington Republican Town Committee recently elected a new chairman, Geoff Grove.

At the Aug. 6 committee meeting, Mr. Grove was elected to replace Steve Primiano who has served as chairman since 2009. Mr. Primiano reportedly resigned the post in order to focus on his campaign for town council.

Prior to his election, Mr. Grove was a vice chairman of the committee. He also serves as chairman of the Barrington Committee on Appropriations. Mr. Grove is president and CEO of Pilgrim Screw Corporation and serves as chairman of the Health-Source RI Advisory Board.

"I look forward to helping to elect Republicans to office in November and am especially excited about our local slate," Mr. Grove said.

The Barrington Republican Town Committee also endorsed a number of candidates for political offices: Don Nessing and Steve Primiano for town council, John Alessandro for school committee, and Gio Cicione for R.I. Senate, the District 32 seat.

Mr. Primiano said he has thoroughly enjoyed his time as chairman and looks forward to remaining an active member of the committee.

"I feel strongly that the town council needs a new direction that will focus on local issues and put the needs of Barrington residents first. Unfortunately, I cannot remain as chair and devote the time and energy necessary to get elected in November," Mr. Primiano said.

The other officers of the Committee remain unchanged. They are Vice chairman John Alessandro, secretary Martha Wallick, and treasurer Raymond Simone.

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH
by Dr. Nicole Smith-Steckler & Dr. Michelle Smith-Goncalves

MISSING SOMETHING?

If you are missing one or more teeth and think that you can get along fine without them, keep in mind the old adage "nature abhors a vacuum." If missing teeth are not replaced with a bridge or implant, the teeth adjacent to the open space(s) will shift out of their normal positions and fill in the empty spaces on their own. Moreover, the corresponding teeth in the opposing jaw will begin to protrude, because there are no biting forces holding them down. As a result of all these unchecked movements, missing teeth can lead to chewing problems and looseness of remaining teeth. Instead, work with the dentist to develop a plan to replace missing teeth before further problems arise. The management of missing teeth varies on a case-by-case basis. At SMITH FAMILY

DENTAL ASSOCIATES, we can help you and your family experience dental excellence by trusted, caring professionals. Our approach to dentistry is comprehensive; we concentrate on the whole individual, not just teeth. Our ultimate goal is to ensure continued good health for you and your family. Let us help you make the decision that is right for those special dental needs. We're located at 2780 Pawtucket Ave, E. Providence. Please call 401.434.7471 to schedule an appointment.

P.S. While a bridge may cost less than a dental implant, implants provide greater value, have a more natural look and feel, and require no preparation of surrounding teeth.

Physical Therapy News
by Marann McCann, P.T., M.E.d.

THERAPY THAT IS DIFFICULT TO RESIST

"Aquatic physical therapy" takes advantage of water's buoyancy to help patients conduct treatments in pools without bringing their weight to bear on injured joints, ligaments, tendons, and muscles. Under the supervision of a physical therapist, therapy conducted in an aquatic environment also helps patients regain strength and range of motion by using water's semi-dimensional resistance to force the body to work harder than it would otherwise outside the water. The fact is the resistance (or drag coefficient) of water is twelve times what it is in air and works on the body in all directions. Moreover, working out in water is fun, so much so that able bodied individuals are increasingly signing up for fitness classes in local pools.

P.S. Pool temperature for water workouts should be around 83 to 85 degrees Fahrenheit, with the air temperature about two degrees higher.

Police: Speeders stopped, drugs and cash on board

One suspect reportedly has license to sell and use marijuana

Barrington police charged two men — a 24 year-old Taunton, Mass. resident and a 17 year-old boy from Fall River, Mass. — with a variety of drug offenses on Tuesday, Aug. 12.

A Barrington police officer was on speed enforcement detail on Route 114 at about 4 p.m. when he reportedly clocked a 2014 black Volkswagen traveling 60 mph in the 40 mph zone.

The officer began following the car and eventually ordered it over to the side of the road on Massasoit Avenue near the intersection with King Phillip Avenue.

The officer questioned the driver, Ryan Scott Vliet, 24, of Taunton, who reportedly gave a false name. He then wrote a different name while signing the speeding ticket, said police. That led to further questions; Mr. Vliet allegedly admitted to giving a false name.

The officer also noticed the smell of burned marijuana coming from the car. A subsequent search of the vehicle revealed marijuana and $34,000 in cash.

Mr. Vliet said he was a licensed marijuana caregiver and user; police said he was in possession of an amount that exceeded the legal limit, however.

The passenger, the 17 year-old Fall River boy, was also found to be in possession of marijuana and allegedly told police he had been selling drugs in Massachusetts.

The suspects told police they were in town because they were staying with a Barrington resident that night.

As for the cash, police are still investigating whether it was obtained legally by the men.

Police charged Mr. Vliet with obstructing an officer in execution of duty, driving in possession of a controlled substance, controlled substance conspiracy, and on a bench warrant issued from Second Division District Court. He was also issued a summons for possession of marijuana.

Police charged the teenager with manufacturing/possession/delivering controlled substances, controlled substance conspiracy and was issued a summons for possession of marijuana.

POLICE REPORT

Money found at County Road restaurant

Monday, Aug. 11

A Barrington resident called police at 2:21 a.m. after her 17 year-old daughter would not return home. The teenager was reportedly out past her curfew and without permission. At 5:30 a.m. the resident called back to tell police that the girl was back home and safe.

A woman found some money at the Blue Kangaroo restaurant and turned it into police. Anyone wishing to claim the money should call police at 437-3930.

A motorist called police after noticing what appeared to be a domestic dispute in progress along Route 114 near the bird sanctuary. Police stopped by and spoke to the people involved, who reassured officers that the dispute was only verbal. No one was charged.

Tuesday, Aug. 12

An Allen Avenue resident called police after a bag containing some medication went missing from her home. The woman said she was napping between 6 and 8 p.m. when the bag disappeared. She said her door was not locked while she was sleeping.

A New Meadow Road resident told police he had spotted a stranger drop off some paperwork at his home. He said he believed the paperwork was part of a scam.

Wednesday, Aug. 13

Police responded to a Bay Road residence for a domestic situation in progress.

A Wedgewood Lane resident called 911 after he grew concerned with his daughter's ex-boyfriend. The resident told police the young man had earlier come up to the house and thrown a punch, missing the homeowner. The resident wanted to issue a no trespass warning to the young man. He was also concerned that the young man might try to break into his home when he was not there.

A Markwood Drive resident called police to report vandalism to his car, but later realized a fallen tree branch had damaged the vehicle.

Police responded to a Wallis Avenue residence at 9 p.m. for a domestic dispute. One of the individuals involved agreed to leave the home for the night; no one was charged.

Thursday, Aug. 14

Police responded to a Woodbine Avenue home for a past domestic dispute. No one was charged.

A Lake Avenue resident called 911 for a medical emergency. According to police the 41 year-old woman at the home had been involved in a verbal argument with a man at the house and had suffered a cut lip and scratches. The woman said she injured herself not in the argument, but when she tripped on a bedsheet and fell into a closet door.

Friday, Aug. 15

A New Meadow Road resident reported a larceny. The man works as a contractor and told police someone broke into his trailer and stole a number of tools. He said a latch on the trailer was cut and about $4,000 worth of tools were stolen.

A Markwood Drive resident told police she had received crank phone calls.

A Wallis Avenue resident stopped into the station to request an order to vacate be served to someone who had lived in the home.

A Walnut Road resident reported a scam call from someone claiming to work for the IRS.

Saturday, Aug. 16

A Lincoln Avenue resident reported a possible case of identity fraud; he said he encountered trouble while trying to file a second tax return.

Police were called to a Zompa Road residence for a possible domestic dispute, but left after realizing that there

POLICE BRIEF

Officials solve kayak mystery

An overturned kayak in the Barrington River sent local officials scrambling on Saturday afternoon, Aug. 16, at about 2:20 p.m. A passerby spotted the kayak adrift and called police, stating that there did not appear to be a life vest or paddle in the area. The harbor patrol responded and picked up the kayak, but could find no evidence of someone in the water. With some assistance from the DEM, police were able to figure out that the boat belonged to a County Road resident and had fallen off a dock.

was no problem at the home.

Two Barrington women were involved in a dispute over a gift certificate to a Maple Avenue salon. According to police, one woman was upset that she could not use her gift certificate for services that are no longer provided.

Police responded to a Sweetbriar Road residence for a domestic dispute in progress. The woman at the home told officers that her husband had shoved her and kicked her; the suspect reportedly left the home before police arrived.

Sunday, Aug. 17

Police received a call from the Sweetbriar Road resident who said her husband was at the house. Officers responded and charged James Alarick Powell, 37, of 18 Sweetbriar Road, with domestic-simple assault/battery.

A Vials Drive resident told police someone stole a bike from his garage.

Joe Andreozzi was found guilty in July 2013 by a Providence County Superior Court jury of obstruction of justice and domestic cyberstalking.

POLICE: Former officer sentenced, avoids jail time

In Aug. 2012, Chief LaCross requested an investigation by Rhode Island State Police into Mr. Andreozzi after a domestic violence complaint was filed against the police officer.

The state police later charged Mr. Andreozzi with domestic disorderly conduct and Chief LaCross placed Mr. Andreozzi on administrative leave.

In mid-November, the State Police also charged Mr. Andreozzi with obstruction of the judicial system. Mr. Andreozzi reportedly used a computer program to remotely delete text messages from his cellphone while the phone was impounded in a state police evidence box.

Mr. Andreozzi was found guilty in July 2013 by a Providence County Superior Court jury of obstruction of justice and domestic cyberstalking. The trial was presided over by Superior Court Justice Susan E. McGuirl.

Rhode Island Attorney General Peter Kilmartin issued a statement following the sentencing.

"After much consultation with the Courts and the Barrington Police Department, today's plea by Joseph Andreozzi effectively resolves the criminal case and removes any uncertainty with respect to employment status as a police officer. As a police officer, sworn to uphold the law at all times, the defendant had a moral, ethical and legal obligation to conduct himself with the highest standard of integrity, which he failed to do," said Attorney General Kilmartin.

"I commend the efforts of the Barrington Police Department, who received the initial complaint about one of their own, as well as the Rhode Island State Police, who conducted the investigation."

An important message for Barrington Times subscribers

Thank you for reading this newspaper, and thank you for pausing to read this letter. As General Manager of the company that publishes this paper, I am proud of what we do. With a fairly small news team, we gather a lot of news from your hometown.

In one month (July), this newspaper published 118 news articles, 13 letters from readers, 39 columns, 12 obituary notices, and two pages of stories and photos submitted by school students. We also published 21 pages of Things to Do; recognized thousands of honor roll students; told you about hundreds of college graduates; celebrated births, weddings and engagements; and printed more community group announcements than you can shake a stick at.

That's one month. One newspaper.

Collectively, we publish seven newspapers, and we employ 12 full-time journalists with more than two centuries of accumulated reporting experience. Besides reading this paper, you can see most of their work on our website, eastbayri.com, where you essentially get seven newspapers for free.

In one month on the site, we posted 395 total pieces of "content," 222 news stories, 67 reports on police or criminal activity, 20 sports stories, and 46 obituary notices. In most cases, we posted the news immediately, as soon as we had it, sometimes moments after it happened.

I'll tell you what this is all about.

Beginning next month, our website will be open to subscribers only. If you subscribe to one of the newspapers, you can read the website for $1 more per month. If you don't subscribe to a paper, it will be $3 per month.

We will still allow a limited number of "free" articles per month — most likely 4. After that, we're going to ask you to subscribe.

Why are we doing this? Because we have to.

The economics of newspapers have changed, but not as much as you might think. We've been hearing that "print is dead" for a decade now, but print is definitely not dead. Our papers reach nearly 30,000 homes each week, and hundreds of businesses use the hometown paper to reach customers every week.

Though we are honored to serve a role in this town as community watchdog, steward or resource, we are very much a business. We always have been. Like the business you work in, we need to make money to survive. And we can no longer afford to sell on one hand (newspapers), what we give away for free on the other (website).

We hope you understand the changes, and we hope you continue reading us in every way you have been — renewing your annual subscription and visiting our website often. We will be providing more details on the "how" part of our digital subscriptions soon. In the meantime, if you have any feedback, please call or email me.

And again, thanks for reading!

Sincerely,
 Scott Pickering

Summer show at Gallery at Temple Habonim

The July/August show in the Gallery at Temple Habonim features 28 works by The Top Drawer at the Brass, a nonprofit visual art center providing art programs for adults with developmental disabilities.

Through their work, the artists show their creative expression, individuality and self-empowerment. Top Drawer is one of the many vocational day programs operated by LIFE (Living in Fulfilling Environments).

The exhibit includes a broad variety of medium and style, and emphasizes the voice of each artist. Each work is a creation of personal expression.

The exhibit continues through Aug. 28. The Gallery at Temple Habonim is at 165 New Meadow Road. Hours are Wednesdays and Thursdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Fridays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and by appointment. For information, call 245-6536 or e-mail gallery@templehabonim.org.

Tap-In getting ready for back to school

Summer has quickly flown by, and parents are getting their children ready for school.

Tap-In is a go-to agency for East Bay area clients whose budgets are already stretched thin by food, gas and other expenses. Gently worn or new clothes in sizes up to 16 are very welcome. New socks and underwear are greatly appreciated.

Donors are asked to keep clothes seasonally appropriate due to space limitations, and to hold on to winter items for another couple of months.

Children are always excited to get their backpacks and supplies ready, and Tap-In has had generous donors in the past who have given many of them, but it would be nice to fill all the requests. Another way to assist the back-to-school program would be with donations of juice boxes and lunch box treats.

In the linen closet, there are nearly no towels available for clients, and sheets are low — especially in full/queen and king sizes.

Donations can be dropped off during regular office hours from 9 a.m. to noon Monday to Friday. Tap-In is in the lower level of the library building at 281 County Road. Call 247-1444 for more information or visit tapinri.com.

Blood drive is next week at senior center

The R.I. Blood Center is conducting a blood drive on Wednesday, Aug. 27, from 4 to 7 p.m. in the senior center hall at 281 County Road.

All are invited. All types are needed. Donors must be at least 17 years old and weigh at least 110 pounds. For more information, call 800/283-8385 or visit www.ribc.org.

Hospice volunteer training offered by VNS

A six-week hospice volunteer training program will be offered by Visiting Nurse Services (VNS) of Newport & Bristol Counties beginning on Thursday, Sept. 25, and running for six consecutive Thursdays until Oct. 30.

Classes are from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Portsmouth office at 1184 East Main Road.

VNS offers hospice services to people with terminal illnesses who live in Newport and Bristol counties.

Hospice volunteers provide companionship and comfort for patients, respite for caregivers and assistance with errands and meal preparation. Hospice volunteers also help with special events, fund-raising and clerical tasks.

Registration and interviews are required to participate in the program. No health care experience is necessary.

For more information or to schedule an interview, call Joy Benson, hospice volunteer coordinator, at 682-2100, ext. 1616. The deadline for registration is Thursday, Sept. 18.

Newcomers and Neighbors open to all

Barrington Neighbors and Newcomers offers recreational and community-building activities for East Bay families. You don't have to be a newcomer to join them.

The group has organized daytime tennis, a book club, Bike Pathers running club, evening social events, wine club, toddlers playgroup, and more. Visit them at www.barringtonneighborsri.com to join, and for more information. Or, call Mary Jo Finkenstaedt, membership chairwoman, at 508/954-4548.

Forum on crisis in Israel and Gaza is on Monday

A forum on understanding the Israel-Gaza crisis is on Monday, Aug. 25, at 7 p.m. at Barrington Public Library, 281 County Road. The various views are very confusing. Can common ground be found?

Martha Yager and Rabbi Jim Rosenberg will discuss these views. The forum will be moderated by the Rev. Don Anderson, executive minister for the R.I. Council of Churches.

A time for questions and answers will follow the forum, which is sponsored by the East Bay Citizens for Peace and the American Friends Service Committee.

Ms. Yager is program coordinator for the South East New England office of the American Friends Service Committee (AFSC).

In May she traveled on an AFSC delegation to Israel, the West Bank and Gaza to meet with AFSC staff in those places and learn more about their work.

AFSC has had a presence in Gaza since 1949 when it was asked to set up the first refugee camps. Current programs in all three areas have been focused on youth empowerment and nonviolence.

Rabbi Rosenberg retired as spiritual leader of Temple Habonim in Barrington in 2007, having served the community for 33 years.

He has visited Israel four times. He has written well over 100 monthly columns for the Barrington Times, his op-ed pieces have appeared in the Providence Journal, and he has written a biweekly column for The Jewish Voice (Providence) since 2008. He also writes poetry.

The forum is free and open to the public, but donations are appreciated.

For more information, contact info@eastbaycitizens4peace.org or 247-3004.

AT THE LIBRARY

Tech help available Wednesday afternoons

Having problems downloading ebooks, audio or video to your electronic device? Need help with a PowerPoint presentation, or filling out an online job application?

On Wednesdays from 2 to 4 p.m., drop-in tech help is available on a first-come, first-served basis at the library's reference desk.

No book donations during August, please

Due to a severe shortage of storage space, the library will not be able to accept book donations through the month of August. Hopefully, they will be able to accept book donations again in September.

Meanwhile, check out the ongoing used book sale at the library, which includes fiction, non-fiction, children's books and some rare and collectable books.

August programs offered for teens

The Summer Reading Program concludes on Monday, Aug. 18.

On Thursday, Aug. 21, the End of Summer Reading Party and Raffle is from 6 to 8 p.m.

Wrap up the summer with games, music by DJ Muikey B and ice cream. Prizes for summer reading will be drawn. All reading logs had to be submitted by Aug. 18 to be eligible.

'A Night to Memoir' is on Tuesday evening

Meet the memoirists of the library's Memoir Meetup as they take to the microphone for a memoir reading on Tuesday, Aug. 26, at 7 p.m.

"A Night to Memoir" is in the library's Gallery Room on the second floor.

The memoirists include Bob and Lois Kemp, Marie Russian, Penelope Jackim, Suzanne Volmer, Marcia Zisman, Sandra Wyatt, Louise MacGillivray and Kate Lohman.

The reading is free and open to all.

The Memoir Meetup is a bi-monthly writers' group led by Kate Lohman. It is on hiatus until February.

Food collection at the library in August

The library is partnering with Tap-In to collect food donations, especially since donations to food banks often drop during the summer months.

A collection box is on the first floor of the library.

Canned and packaged foods are accepted, especially peanut butter, tuna, canned soups, cereal and beans.

For more information, call the library at 247-1920, ext. 305.

Register now for 'Artist's Way' course

Join Marsha Leonard for a 12-week course on the book "The Artist's Way: A Spiritual Path to Higher Creativity" by Julie Cameron on Fridays from 10 a.m. to noon from Sept. 5 to Nov. 21 at the library.

Every person has the ability to create. Whether you paint, dance, write, cook, decorate, or would like to be artistic, "The Artist's Way" can help you find and develop the unique imagination and creativity within you.

Marsha Leonard has traveled "The Artist's Way" many times and has taught the course privately and at Barnes and Noble.

The course is limited to 15 adults. Register online at <http://goo.gl/B9KJMq> or call 247-1920, ext. 2.

Visit the library's reference desk to pick up the class syllabus. Bring your own book to class or check one out at the reference desk.

The course is free and open to all. It is sponsored by the Friends of Barrington Public Library.

Barrington Public Library is at 281 County Road. Library hours are from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday to Thursday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday. Sunday hours resume on Sept. 14. For more information, call 247-1920 or visit www.barringtonlibrary.org. The library will provide accommodations to ensure equal participation in all meetings and programs. Requests for accommodations may be made in writing to the library director, by voice at 247-1920, ext. 305, or at 711 "relay" if using TDY or TDD.

Community school offering course on Longfellow, trip to visit his house

And a trip is next week to see 'Fiddler on the Roof' at Goodspeed in Conn.

September will bring a host of new courses and trips at Barrington Community School, including the early starter, "Henry Wadsworth Longfellow." This giant of the 19th century was that most unusual of artists, a poet whose work made him both wealthy and famous in his own time.

Now a bit out of academic favor, his poems viewed by some as derivative and sentimental, Longfellow always spoke unabashedly to the common reader of his own time, challenging and exhorting him to better himself and his nation. Without him, the image of the village blacksmith may have faded into nothing, along with the vivid, yet mythic, ride of Paul Revere.

An intense student of languages, Longfellow produced the first American translation of Dante into English. A professor at Harvard, his first passion was for teaching through poetry, not for teaching itself. A friend to such famous abolitionists as William Lloyd Garrison and Senator Charles Sumner, Longfellow could never bring himself to overtly politicize his art, despite his devotion to the Union cause.

The Longfellow class will be led by Arnie McConnell at Temple Habonim on New Meadow Road from 10 a.m. to noon on Thursday mornings, Sept. 4, 11 and 25 (the third class will meet at the BCS office).

The course also includes a Sept. 18 field trip to the Longfellow Home and Mount Auburn Cemetery, both National Historic sites in Cambridge, and Longfellow's burial place.

The course fee of $98 for BCS members/$115 for non-members includes tuition, reading materials and the field trip, including guided tours of the Longfellow Home and Mount Auburn Cemetery, motorcoach transportation and driver tip. Also available is the course only for $48 members/$58 non-members.

On the schedule next week is one of BCS' most popular summer trips, a musical theater performance at Goodspeed Musicals preceded by a narrated luncheon cruise on the Connecticut River. "Fiddler on the Roof," one of the greatest musicals ever written, lights up the Goodspeed stage on Wednesday, Aug. 27.

The rousing musical takes place in pre-Revolutionary Russia and centers on the life of Tevye, a milkman who is trying to keep his family's traditions in place while marrying off his three older daughters. The show includes many memorable songs, including "If I Were a Rich Man," "Tradition," "Sunrise, Sunset" and "Matchmaker."

Just a few tickets remain for this trip. Barrington departure is at 9 a.m. followed by a Warwick pickup at 9:20; return will be by 6:30. The trip fee of $138 BCS members/$148 non-members includes the matinee performance with orchestra seating, buffet luncheon and river cruise, BCS escort, motorcoach transportation and driver tip.

Brochure corrections

Since the printing of the fall brochure, one of the courses has been postponed. "Football 101" is now on Wednesday and Friday, Oct. 15 and 17.

In addition, an error in the trip description of the Dec. 10 trip to the Wadsworth Athenaeum states that lunch is included; it is not included, but suggestions of restaurants convenient to the museum will be provided in advance.

The BCS fall brochure, which lists courses and trips throughout the fall and early winter, has been mailed to all Barrington residents and to non-residents who participated in BCS trips within the past three years.

Additional copies are available at area libraries and businesses. The entire brochure may also be downloaded from the website at www.barrcommschool.com. For more information, call the office weekday mornings at 245-0432.

AT THE YMCA

The Bayside YMCA offers a variety of programs for all ages at the Y at 70 West St., Barrington. Stop by or call 245-2444 for more information or to register. Online registration is available for YMCA members at www.gpymca.org.

Programs may be canceled due to lack of enrollment, so register as soon as possible. Financial assistance is available for many programs.

After-school child care

An open house to learn more about the Out of School Time program at the YMCA is on Wednesday, Aug. 20, from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. Tour the facilities and meet the staff.

The Bayside YMCA will continue to have after-school care for children in kindergarten through middle school at its West Street location. Pickup is available from all Barrington schools. Before-school care is available for Hampden Meadows and Nayatt schools.

The program will include daily homework support, physical activities, arts and crafts, and other enrichment offerings.

Come and enjoy an evening of fun for the entire family. Family Night is free and open to the community on Wednesday, Aug. 20, from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m.

Enjoy a swim in the outdoor pool. Visit the animals from Stoney Creek Farm. Learn archery under the supervision of trained instructors. Have a hot dog or hamburger off the grill. At 6:30 p.m., the Barrington Land Conservation Trust will conduct a tour through Veterans Park.

Fall program registration

It's time to register for fall programs at the Bayside YMCA. Don't miss out on swim lessons or new sports programs. To learn more, visit the website or stop by.

Fitness for teen athletes

A specially designed fitness program for teen athletes ages 14 to 17 is held in collaboration with McVay Physical Therapy. The eight-week small group training has been designed and will be led by a physical therapist who is a certified strength and conditioning specialist.

The perfect companion to fall sport or off-season training, it includes free weights and lifts specifically tailored to improve athletic performance including speed, agility and jump training.

The program meets Wednesdays and Fridays from 3 to 4 p.m. Registration is required. The fee for eight weeks is $199; $120 for members.

Barrington High School student-athletes returned to the practice fields this week as preseason practices rolled into full-swing.

The football team started its practice on Thursday, Aug. 14, while Barrington's other fall sports teams started meeting on Monday, Aug. 18.

The football team will open its season with an Rhode Island Injury Fund game against Middletown on Thursday, Sept. 4 at 6:45 p.m. Mt. Hope High School is hosting the Injury Fund games, which will also feature teams from Portsmouth, Newport and Tiverton.

The field hockey team, which won a division title last fall, will open on the road at Moses Brown School on Wednesday, Sept. 3. The team's first home game is Friday, Sept. 5 at 4 p.m. against Lincoln School.

The girls soccer team opens with a scrimmage at Middletown on Monday, Aug. 25 at 5 p.m. and plays at Dighton-Rehoboth Regional on Aug. 27. The boys soccer team plays a non-league game at St. George's in Newport on Friday, Sept. 12, at 7 p.m.

Still teeing it up

When Jimmy Colardo arrived at Saint Elizabeth Manor for rehab following surgery last year, there was nothing more important to the 94 year old than getting back to his life and the things he most enjoyed. Jimmy and the Manor's rehab team worked together to achieve that goal, and today Jimmy is where he wants to be. "I golf a couple of times a week," Jimmy says with a smile, "and with guys 25-35 years younger than me!" Born on Maple Avenue, Jimmy is a lifelong resident of Barrington and has been married to his wife Nancy for 65 years.

Finish for a Guinness 5K is Aug. 31

The sixth annual Finish for a Guinness 5K road race will be held on Sunday, Aug. 31.

The popular 5K event, which starts and finishes at the Old Warren Marina in Warren, has averaged about 500 participants each year. Besides offering a scenic course, one of its top draws is what awaits runners and walkers at the finish line. All participants are invited to a post-race celebration that features music, Blounts famous clam chowder, pizza, other goodies and free beer, which includes, of course, the featured Irish stout.

The only changes to this year's race are minor. One of them has to do with the post-race beverage. Family and friends (of legal age) are welcome to also join in the celebration for a small donation. With their donation they will get a complimentary cup donated by one of the race's sponsors, Blue Water Grille.

The Finish for a Guinness 5K road race starts at 10 a.m. The entry fee is $27 prior to Aug. 27 and $30 on race day. For children under the age of 12, the fee is $15.

Registration is done online at www.lightboxreg.com/finish-for-a-guinness. For additional information, check out the event's website at www.finish-for-a-guinness.org.

Barrington thrower sets national record

Bobby Colantonio impresses at Sons of Italy Throwing Championships

Barrington High School student-athlete Bobby Colantonio continued an impressive summer season by setting a new national record in the boys' 16-pound hammer throw while competing at the Sons of Italy Throwing Championships at Conley Stadium in Providence on Sunday, Aug. 17.

Colantonio threw the 16-pound hammer 192 feet, 9 inches, setting a new national sophomore class record and shattering the mark of 186 feet 3 inches set by Wes Wright, of Villa Rica, Ga. in 2006. In fact, Colantonio had four throws that surpassed the prior record.

In addition, Colantonio won the 12-pound hammer throw event at the recent meet, reaching a mark of 233 feet, 3 inches. His mark was about 12 feet longer than second place finisher and fellow Barrington thrower Adam Kelly, who tossed the 12-pound hammer 221 feet, 10 inches.

Kelly, however, was tops in the 5K hammer throw event and set a new meet record with a throw of 227 feet, 4 inches. That throw snapped former Barrington High School standout Charlie Ionata's mark of 209 feet, 11 inches which was set in 2012. (Ionata now throws for Wake Forest University.)

Ionata, meanwhile, captured the top spot in the men's college 16-pound hammer throw event with a throw of 199 feet, 9 inches.

Adam Kelly's younger sister, Annika, competed in the development 3K hammer throw event and won with a toss of 124 feet, 8 inches. The 13 year-old's throw would have placed her seventh in the high school division of the same hammer weight.

Also competing at the meet was Barrington's Jamie Heinel, who finished fourth in the 5K event with a distance of 156 feet, 9 inches, and 10th in the 12-pound event. Barrington's Mike Alvernaz finished fifth in the 12-pound event with a throw of 178 feet, 7 inches, and third in the 16-pound hammer event with a throw of 151 feet, 10 inches.

Barrington native Robyn McFeters brought home the top spot in the women's college 4K hammer throw with a distance of 172 feet, 4 inches.

OBITUARIES

David A. Johnson

Devoted physician, loved traveling with his family

David A. Johnson, 59, of Barrington, a dedicated family physician, avid golfer and diehard Yankee fan, passed away on Wednesday, Aug. 6, 2014 after his brave battle with cancer.

David found great joy in skiing and traveling with his family and was appreciated for his unique sense of humor. He was blessed with a loving wife of 31 years, Linda (Holleran) Johnson and four devoted children, Nicole (Johnson) Barrick and her husband Thomas of Canton, Mass., Meagan Johnson of Barrington, Gregory Johnson of East Boston, Mass. and Peter Johnson of Barrington.

Born in Dover, N.J., he was the son of the late Arnold and Olga Johnson and the stepson of Frances Johnson of Marcella, NJ. His passion for the Yankees and the New Jersey shore was shared with his two brothers, Peter Johnson and his wife Gertrude of Allentown, Pa., Christopher Johnson and his wife Jeri of Richmond, Va. He is also survived by two stepbrothers, Reggie MacQuesten and Michael MacQuesten.

David was a graduate of the University of Vermont and the University of Medicine & Dentistry in New Jersey. For the past 28 years, he was professionally devoted to caring for his patients as the owner and sole physician of the Portsmouth Medical Center on Chase Road in Portsmouth.

Besides his immediate family, he is fondly remembered by his mother-in-law, Catherine Holleran of Peabody, Mass., a step mother-in-law, Susie Holleran of Venice, Fla., sister and brother in-laws; Kathleen and Stephen Gaspar of Dartmouth, Mass., Joanne and Frank Legro of Barrington, MaryEllen Holleran of New Caanan, Conn., Thomas and Susan Holleran of Peabody, Mass. and Andrea Holleran of Norwell, Mass. He shared a loving relationship with 19 nieces and nephews and 5 grand-nieces and nephews. David was preceded in death by his father-in-law James C. Holleran, brother-in-law, James C. Holleran, Jr. and his step-brother William MacQuesten.

He opened his home and heart to Lucas Diniz of Brazil, Nathalia Londono Cuervo and the children of Hogares Luz Y Vida Orphanage in Bogota, Columbia. Besides the unconditional love and support from his family, David was fortunate to have many good friends who comforted him throughout his illness.

His funeral was on Friday, Aug. 8, from the W. Raymond Watson Funeral Home, Riverside with a Mass of Christian Burial in St. Luke Church, Washington Road, Barrington, followed by a private burial.

In lieu of flowers please send donations to Hands Offering Hope Foundation, 3 Parklands Drive, Suite 205 Darien, CT 06820 or visit www.handsofferinghope.org Donations can also be made to America Brain Tumor Association (ABTA) at www.abta.org

Cardboard boat regatta sets sail in Bullock Cove

Bay Spring Community Center hosting regatta on Saturday

The Bay Spring Community Center will host the first-ever Ship of Fools Cardboard Boat Regatta on Saturday, Aug. 23.

The regatta will be held in Bullock Cove — there will be a 100-yard course located in the cove near the end of Edwin Street. Prizes will be given to the top finishers in four different categories: Youth/under 13, adult, corporate, or professional boatbuilder.

Awards will also be given for the most popular boat, best theme or costume, best design, and most spectacular sinking.

The Ship of Fools Regatta combines family fun, boating safety, community involvement, STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics) education, and environmental awareness. Participants and spectators will enjoy a taste of the Volvo Ocean Race and America's Cup without the multi-million dollar budgets and with a lot more humor.

The regatta will conclude with a sponsored cookout at the Bay Spring Community Center.

The event will serve as a fund-raiser for the center, and proceeds will support improvements to the center and continue to make possible arts, cultural, and educational programs for East Bay residents.

There are many ways for individuals, teams, and business to participate in the first-ever Ship of Fools Cardboard Boat Regatta:

- Register to race, assemble your crew, and start building your vessel.
 - Become a business sponsor (multiple levels available).
 - Provide free or discounted materials (cardboard, paint, tape, glue, etc.) to race participants, and let FBSCC thank you by promoting your business.
 - Volunteer for the event.
- Teams and sponsors can register at www.bsccri.org/regatta.

Family Homestead gets a beautiful new look from Bristol Aluminum Windows & Siding

TFor Liz Dupont, owner of the house her grandparents built in 1908, only the best would do. As she had in the 90's when she had all the windows in the house replaced, she recently turned to Bristol Aluminum Windows and Siding to do the major work needed around the old homestead, located on Wood Street in Bristol. Bristol Aluminum replaced all the windows on the sun porch, vinyl-sided the entire house and replaced the front door. "It looks beautiful!" says Liz.

For more than 100 years, one proud family has lavished attention on the home that it has owned since it was built.

Everybody in the family, including those who grew up there many decades ago, are thrilled with the results, according to Liz and her husband, Louis. "The Bristol Aluminum crew does excellent work and they pay real attention to the details of the job," Liz says. "They really want to do a good job and never cut corners," she adds.

For more than 40 years, Bristol Aluminum Windows and Siding have been busy helping area homeowners turn ordinary houses into energy-efficient dream homes. This family-owned and operated company, with its own professional crew, has replaced siding, doors and windows in homes in nearly every neighborhood throughout the region. Satisfied customers, like Liz and her husband, have helped them become one of the largest home improvement companies in the East Bay area with over 10,000 customers and replacing well over 100,000 windows during their years in business.

Need new windows or want to say goodbye to painting forever with new vinyl siding, call these highly-praised local pros for a free estimate. Like many of the area's homeowners, you will be happy you did.

Rangers repeat as league champs!

The Rangers not only captured the Spring SuperLiga Boys U14 crown this season but also won it last fall. In tournament play, the local boys won their division title at the Barrington Invitational, Glastonbury and the Rhode Island Cup. They also were the runner up in the Rhode Island State Cup tournament. Members of the U14 boys Rangers team Louis Bachetti, Nick Bonneau, Harrison Browne, Deven Connors, Michael Coogan, Antonio Couto, Aidan Gasbarro, Peyton Gibson, Jack Hoder, Andrew Ide, Sam Jurgeleit, Elias MacGillivray, Andrew Marra, Corey Miesner, Reid Nolan, Alden Sadovnikoff, Cooper Sciotto, Max Thurston and Coach Alex Green.

See you next summer

There's still plenty of good summer weather to be had, but with the kids going back to school next week, summer programs are wrapping up. Here, East Bay Sailing Foundation sailors return to port following the last day of classes for the season. Back on dry land, and in East Bay Life, it's back-to-school time: read about organization strategies for "sensory" kids; a new program that is teaching financial literacy to Rhode Island high school students; and back-to-school tech tips on the following pages.

Maize maze opens Friday for 15th season

The Escobar family, in partnership with maze designer Brett Herbst, the world's leading designer of corn mazes, are ready to unveil the 2014 version of their "MAiZE", celebrating the 75th anniversary of "The Wizard Of Oz".

Sited on 8 acres of corn at the Escobar's Portsmouth farm, it's the largest corn maze in Rhode Island and an annual family tradition that has gained popularity every year, welcoming thousands of visitors in 2013.

Though the correct pathways can be walked in under 30 minutes, most directionally-challenged visitors — adults and children alike — will require about one hour to travel through more than two miles of twists and turns, 2 bridges and 85 decision points.

The MAiZE will give visitors the chance to "get lost" August 22 through November 2; Monday through Saturday 10 a.m. to dusk and Sundays 11 a.m. to dusk.

RICHARD W. DIONNE JR.

Louis Escobar of Portsmouth, the man behind the Escobar Farm MAiZE.

After Labor Day, hours are Fridays 3:30 p.m. to dusk, Saturdays 10 a.m. to dusk and Sundays 11 a.m. to dusk. The MAiZE is located at 255 Middle Road, Portsmouth. Cost is $8 for ages 12 and up, $6 for ages 5-11, and free for kids under 5; and half price this weekend for military families with ID. For more information or to make reservations, call 401/864-1064 or visit cornfieldmaze.com.

Local country legends to be inducted

Two South Coast residents will be inducted into the Old Time Country Music Hall of Fame next week, in Le Mars, Iowa. While the New Bedford area is not typically thought of as a hotbed of country music talent, the Old Time Country Music Hall of Fame recognizes those who have made a name for themselves creating and curating traditional American music — of all kinds. Previous inductees include Patti Page, Joanne Cash, Mickey Gilly, Marty Robbins and Gene Autry.

The Old Time Country Music Hall of Fame was established in 1976 by Iowan Bob Everhart, who has devoted much of the last 40 years to preserving traditional music that is no longer on the popular music radar. He is passionate about the cause, and that traditional, early rural music not be confused with today's slick, mass-media, overproduced "country."

One of the honorees is Dr. Stuart M. Frank, Curator emeritus of the New Bedford Whaling Museum, who will be recognized for his expertise in sea chanties.

Suddenly the New Bedford connection makes perfect sense.

Jack Radcliffe, President of New Bedford-based Wepecket Island Records is being recognized for his body of work recording traditional American music. Radcliffe got his start in music in 1961 when he made a "really bad garage band" recording with a young John Kerry. Radcliffe sold enough copies in 2004 during Kerry's presidential campaign to provide the seed money to launch Wepecket Island Records. To date they have created 30 recordings for traditional musicians. Radcliffe will be traveling to Iowa with Wepecket's Rolling Roots Revue, performing en route, he says, "to pay for gas."

The weeklong festival attracts thousands of music aficionados from around the world, and will feature more than 600 performances. Frank and Radcliffe will be honored at a ceremony at the 39th annual festival on August 26.

Back-to-school the sensory way

(Hint: There's still time for the beach!)

BY CAROLYN DALGLIESH

This month can be a tad overwhelming as we get stuck between long beach days and back-to-school pressures. For me, back-to-school has a slightly different timeline. It's not a full-court press for the month of August, running from store to store and having everything labeled, stocked and ready to go. Why? Because that's not how most sensory kids (or overwhelmed adults) successfully manage a transition. We need to apply the same strategies here as we do to other supports for rigid, anxious, or distracted behaviors: break it down, eliminate distractions, and create a visual guide or system.

From my experience of living with and working with sensory kids, back-to-school is more like a two-month, not a two-week, process. Our sensory kids are often tangible, concrete learners, so preparing ahead of time for something that is not here yet often feels too abstract for them and leaves them feeling frustrated or overwhelmed. Do you know any child that really wants to make a homework station before school starts and before they actually have homework? Part of sensory organizing is understanding that we sometimes have to see what's not working before we can set up the best system to support it. So let's simplify this back-to-school process for our sensory kids (and us).

In preparation, we will want to focus on the immediate needs for the first week or two of school. This comes down to getting ready for new people and places, learning new routines, and simplifying supplies.

Getting ready for new people and new places

For younger kids, getting ready for a new school or a new classroom with new people can be pretty overwhelming. Planning a few trips to the school and the school playground before school starts can help. Take some pictures and make a "new school slideshow" to help your child reach a good comfort level with the new space. You could also get a class list and help your child make connections with kids they might know, or use as a tool to learn a few names of kids in their class.

Learning new routines

There is a pretty easy way to support transitions, help build time management, planning, and executive function skills, and help your kids prepare for new routines at home and at school—a central message area. Pick an area in your home (a wall or outside of a door in your kitchen, mudroom, or family room) to create a planning station. You could include a monthly calendar for parent planning, a weekly whiteboard calendar for family/kid planning, and a magnetic or cork board that holds weekly school schedules and after-school activity schedules. Pick a planning time over the weekend with your kids to fill out the weekly whiteboard calendar and plan the week ahead. Our kids will have a much better understanding of how to plan their weeks in high school when they have participated in active weekly planning sessions in their younger years.

Simplify supplies

For kids that have a hard time remembering things, we can simplify supplies they need for class and need to be bringing home each night. When buying school supplies, think about ways your child can combine 2-3 subjects into one binder. This works best with classes that are always grouped together in the daily schedule. This simplifies the moving from class-to-class during the day and the packing up the backpack at the end of the day. Another way to simplify supplies is to try to keep an extra set of textbooks at home, or see if there are online versions of your child's textbooks. By taking a few things off of the remembering plate, we can help them memorize what they need faster and with a lot less frustration.

Once school has started and your child has gotten into the routine, you can move onto phase 2 of the back-to-school process which includes a homework bin, homework plans, and getting things home and back-to-school again.

Back-to-school tech safety tips

From tweens to teens, our kids are increasingly tech-savvy, and that means parents also need to be smart about the latest technology. This is particularly true as we approach the new school year when students may start to test new boundaries as they explore the internet, text with friends, and use social media.

As we prepare to send our children back to school, here are some tips for parents on keeping children safe while they use the latest technology:

- Get tech savvy. Talk to your kids about what websites they're visiting and what kinds of social media they are using. You should even experiment with the social media sites yourself. This will give you a better feel for evaluating risks and potential abuses. Friend your child or follow them on Twitter.

- Check privacy settings on social media, but emphasize to your child that there is no privacy when it comes to sharing information online. Stress the importance of using good judgment in sending messages and pictures.

- Set rules for texting. Only allow texting at specific times: setting rules for no texting at school while in class, no texting until homework's done, or no texting after a certain time at night.

- Research tools that your phone carrier offers that could bar unwanted calls or texts and keep usage costs down. For example, AT&T has Smart Limits that allows parents to block unwanted calls and texts from up to 30 numbers, set monthly limits on texts and mobile purchases, and restrict texting, data usage and out-bound calling during specified times of the day.

- Set boundaries. Parents can set clear boundaries on appropriate and inappropriate uses of technology. Make sure these rules and the consequences of breaking them are clear, and monitor use to make sure rules are being followed.

Technology can help students learn and stay connected with friends and family, but it needs to be used wisely. With these simple tips, parents can help support their children's use of technology safely and responsibly.

Reading, writing, and... financial literacy?

Key "life skill" now incorporated into curriculum at 53 Rhode Island high schools

Raimondo. "Personal finance education is essential to the preparedness and success of our state's students. Providing EverFi in these schools will ensure that students will have the knowledge and skills needed to achieve their future financial goals."

Introduced to Rhode Island schools in spring 2011, the EverFi program has been used by 5,000 Rhode Island students around the state. More than 3,000 students have received their Certificate of Financial Literacy thanks to the program, run with the support of local financial institutions including Pawtucket Credit Union, Westerly Community Credit Union, People's Credit Union, Navigant Credit Union, and Admirals Bank, as well as Discover's Pathway to Financial Success program.

The EverFi financial literacy course consists of six hours of game-based, interactive programming aimed at educating students about important financial topics including credit scores, insurance, credit cards, student loans, mortgages, taxes, stocks, savings, retirement savings and other critical concepts. The program uniquely tracks the progress and score of every student and provides those who successfully complete the course with Certification in Financial Literacy and, more importantly, skills critical to their future success.

A new course is on the schedule for students in most Rhode Island high schools, and for many, it may be the most practical and applicable class they ever take.

The EverFi web-based financial literacy curriculum, part of Treasurer Gina Raimondo's Empower RI initiative, is now available to 53 Rhode Island schools at no cost.

"The EverFi financial literacy program addresses a real need in Rhode Island schools," said Treasurer

SENSORY: A good plan eases the transition

homework will start coming home. Here's when you can start planning a homework bin. Get a basket, a bin, or anything that is contained but portable, and fill it with everything your child might need for homework. It is hard enough to get kids to sit down once to start their homework — let alone 3 or 4 times after they've been up looking for supplies. The homework bin eliminates those added transitions. Since it's portable, it allows kids to move to difference spaces to do work — either closer to adults when they need support or to a more quiet space for dedicated study time.

Homework plan

A planner and a homework plan are two very different things. Being able to fill out a planner does not necessarily mean your child knows how to come up with a plan to get their homework done. Work with your child to create a simple external homework plan or checklist that they can fill out at home. They can put homework tasks in numerical order and start to be aware of what homework is hard for them, what should be done first, and what work needs support vs. no support. To eliminate extra writing for your child, create a visual homework plan using magnets (labeled with subjects) and a small whiteboard with "To Do" and "Done" columns. Taking the extra step with a visual homework plan helps easily distracted kids stay on task, and easily overwhelmed kids know what to expect.

Getting stuff home and back-to-school again

It happens to many of us: we have a great, organized mudroom space, but for some kids, the mudroom system is too much and stuff always ends up on the floor. This is one of those areas where less structure can be better. Get a medium-sized bin for your child, label it, and put it in the mudroom. This drop bin will become home to all of the regular and random things that need to go with them between home and school: coats, library books, homework papers, etc. When it's time to pack their backpack, they have visual prompts (a checklist of sorts) in their drop bin to help them remember what needs to come to school with them.

Here's to a little more summer and a slow — but steady — approach to a successful new school year. When we focus on immediate needs, introduce a few things a week, and involve our child in the process, back-to-school becomes a gentle transition. No matter what, the school year will be filled with messy, unorganized, frustrating moments. But with a more mindful approach and some external supports, we'll have time for more fun and more peace at home.

STRAIGHT UP THE MIDDLE

Please stop insulting our intelligence

With less than three weeks to go before Primary Day, I've started to feel like following this year's election cycle has been as exhausting as watching a season of bad baseball games. This year Fenway has been too-often transformed into a park full of eye-rolling "c'mon!" screaming fans who are hoping to see some good baseball but go home disappointed more often than not.

Cara CROMWELL

While I've moved on from the 2014 baseball season, some candidates have me rolling my eyes several times a day. With record breaking spending in several races, candidates seem to be investing significant resources to insult our intelligence. While my annoyance has been bipartisan and there have been numerous groan-worthy statements and ads along the way, I've only got enough space here to talk about my top two eye-rollers.

While I think that Clay Pell's team deserves an award for making a candidate out of Clay, Pell's attempts to position himself as an outsider and someone with real world experience are almost humorous. While reassuring us that he is "not a politician" and talking down to those who have actually held elective office, at every opportunity he reminds us that he is a grandson of Senator Claiborne Pell, one of Rhode Island's longest serving politicians. And while trying to convince people that he's familiar with the challenges facing Rhode Islanders, he notes that he "summered" in Newport. Sorry, but generously tipping the cabana boy at Bailey's doesn't give you knowledge of the Rhode Island skills gap.

Pell earned a full eye roll with his smug declarations that he doesn't take money from PACs or lobbyists. At the same time, Pell enthusiastically accepted the endorsement of the state's most powerful teachers's union, NEARI, and will be the beneficiary of thousands and thousands of hours of volunteer staff between now and election day. This is the same special interest that elected Governor Chafee (who also relied on personal wealth for campaign funds) underscoring that he doesn't need financial support from anyone but his own trust fund and perhaps his famous and fabulous wife. The truth is that Clay Pell is likely to benefit more from special interests than any other candidate in the race and to pretending to take a stand by refusing $100 contributions from the few lobbyists who might waste their money on his run makes him look more like a professional politician than anyone I've seen in recent years.

Frank Caprio is coming in a very close second in this contest with his revisionist views of his time at Treasury. You need to be living under a rock to not know that he was asleep at the wheel during his time in office as State Treasurer. During the pension reform debate, it was highlighted over and over again that the retirement fund lost a tremendous amount of money in the economic downturn because it was invested wrongly. His other duties as Treasurer — like administering the crime victims compensation fund — were also neglected. I think it's great that he's running again since losing candidates so often just disappear but purporting to have done the job well is a bit of a stretch.

One thing is for sure: there are many more "oh brother" moments left in this election cycle and this baseball season. I just hope that at the end of both and we have a good team to move forward with in 2015 — both in Rhode Island and at Fenway.

Great Outdoor Pursuit big success

Team prizes for the 2014 Great Outdoors Pursuit were recently awarded to winners at Burlingame State Campground in Charlestown. The program aims to reunite families with the outdoors, encourage more physical activity and help build the next generation of environmental stewards. This year 407 teams registered for the event including 1,690 participants who visited different facilities and took part in outdoor adventures leaning about the environment and health issues. The third annual Galilee Fishing Tournament and Seafood Festival will be held Friday through Sunday, September 5 to 7 in Galilee. The seafood festival features over fifty craft and art exhibits, shops, restaurants, commercial and recreational fishing displays including a kids learn how to fish area dockside.

Capt. Dave MONTI

The fishing tournament (which starts Friday night at 5 p.m. and ends Sunday at 2 p.m.) will feature both boat and shore divisions for adults and children. Entry fee for adults is $15 and $5 for juniors.

The weigh in station opens Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., with an award ceremony Sunday at 4 p.m. For more information visit galileetourney.com.

Where's the bite

Summer flounder (fluke). "Fluke fishing is fair in the lower bay; better out in front off Jamestown and Newport," said John Littlefield of Archie's Bait & Tackle, Riverside. "Fluke are being caught at the 50 to 60 foot depths off southern coastal shores along with black sea bass." said Phil Matteson of Breachway Bait & Tackle, Charlestown. Tom Giddings of The Tackle Box, Warwick, said, "We fish behind Hog Island to get out of the wind last week and did very well with fluke between the Mt. Hope Bridge and the island." Roger Simpson of the Frances Fleet said, "Just a tremendous amount of very big fluke this past week...the biggest fish so far this 2014 season (on the Frances Fleet) weighed in at 12 lbs. after being bled and sitting in a cooler most of the day (easily close to 13 lbs right out of the water). The behemoth slab of nearly 32 inches caught on the first drift of the morning inhaled a white buck tail jig tipped with fluke belly and two spearing."

Josh Davis and Matt Parker, both of Barrington, hold up two of the monster strippers they caught on a recent evening fishing trip off Block Island.

Bonito. No consistent reports of Bonito in the area. Phil Matteson of Breachway bait said, "We had a customer catch an 8 pound bonito when he was jigging off the bottom for fluke. Other than that we have had not reports of bonito or false albacore but it is that time of year so they should be on their way."

Shore fishing is fair. "Sabin Point, East Providence, is still holding a lot of scup and tommy cod with an occasional striped bass and bluefish. Scup fishing at Colt State Park is very good." said John Littlefield. Phil Matteson of Breachway Bait & Tackle said, "Fishing off the Charlestown Breachway and from the beaches has been better this week. A few tautog have been caught in the rocks and large bass to 25 pounds have been coming in the Breachway with the tide with a lot of bait...."

Tautog fishing reports have been spotty as anglers have not focused on targeting tautog. John Littlefield said, "We had a few customers give tautog fishing a try but they gave it up as they caught nothing but shorts (minimum size for tautog is 16"). Striped bass fishing has slowed right down in the Bay with the water warming up quite a bit. A few school bass here and there have been taken in the bay but very few fish. A few large bass are being taken off Bonnet Shores, Beavertail and Newport. Angler Kevin Bettencourt of Riverside said, "Shane, my oldest son, at 13 years old made the overnight trip (to Block Island last week) and landed a 48" bass at 3:30 a.m. We were using live eels. Although long, the fish had no girth to it and only weighed in at 35 lbs. For its length it should have been 40+... My fished taped out at 45" and weighed 35 lbs as well."

Black sea bass and scup. "Anglers are catching black sea bass and scup at just about every rock pile in the bay. It is the only consistent action on the bay," said Ken Landry. Mt Hope Bay on both sides of the bridge is yielding plenty of black sea bass and scup.

Captain Dave Monti has been fishing and shellfishing for over 40 years. He holds a captain's master license and a charter fishing license. Visit Captain Dave's No Fluke website at noflakefishing.com or e-mail him with your fishing news and photos at dmontifish@verizon.net.

POLI-TICKS

When good people do bad things

With such outrageous events occurring across the globe lately, we are left pondering what it is about human nature that could explain the evil we all witness.

Arlene VIOLET

From our youth, we probably were left debating whether people were basically good or bad. Perhaps people are worse than we think when we witness the somewhat minor evil acts that so-called good hearted people do to advance their own jobs or finances.

John Leidecker

This top NEA (National Education Association) union official was cleared of a charge that he stalked a former state lawmaker over the internet during the 2012 elections, his defense based on his First Amendment right to speak. This assistant executive director of this teacher's union mimicked the legislator by using an email simulating the representative's name with a mere change of a vowel, and by falsifying the actual positions of that legislator, drawing ire from prospective voters. The legislator's "crime" was that he had opposed some of the union's policies, so this was rank retaliation. Mr. Leidecker continues to see nothing wrong with his impersonation. The silence of the NEA teachers is a remarkable acquiescence to gutter tactics.

NEA teacher in Clay Pell's ad

One of Mr. Pell's television ads features an NEA high school teacher who complains about the fact that some political leaders are oppositional to teachers. She bemoans the fact that she feels she has to teach to a test rather than the good old days when she really enjoyed teaching. The ad, of course, is a slam against Gina Raimondo, who is actually saving the pension system, and leaders like Deborah Gist, Commissioner of Education, who is implementing standards. Just to what "happy days" the teacher is alluding remains a mystery. The program for International Students released a study (as reported in Popular Science, September 2014) on the state of math, science and reading skills in 65 countries including in the United States. This country's score was basically the same as 2003 — which shows, as Arne Duncan, the U.S. Secretary of Education, puts it, an "educational stagnation". So, before Commissioner Gist ever stepped foot into R.I. and demanded an objective measurement for accountability, education had been hitting a brick wall for over a decade. The teacher's complaint is way off base.

Representative Peter Palumbo

Apparently, the Democratic legislator from Cranston has a problem with ethics. He has been ignoring a rule, going back to 2002, that bars lawmakers from seeking state contracts. He has been running the food concessions at several state beaches and, apparently, Mr. Clean he is not, with over 70 recent violations issued by the department of health. He developed a new repertoire with former legislator David Caprio who "bid" on the contract recently. Mr. Caprio got it and promptly hired Mr. Palumbo. Mr. Caprio didn't serve his family name very well in this bait and switch.

Department of Environmental Management

Since the 70's this agency and its predecessors have had gutsy people working for them. Now, apparently, they have sycophants who rubber-stamp beach concession deals. What a fall from grace for an agency that used to be above politics.

PET CONFIDENTIAL

Keeping kids and pets healthy, together

Dear Dr. Evans,
I have three kids under five, and I am thinking of adopting a puppy or a kitten in the near future. I'm a little concerned because I've heard that pets can carry diseases that people can get. I love the idea of having my children grow up with pets, but I want to protect them, too. What do you suggest? —Mary D.

Dear Mary,
If you have three kids under five, well, first, God bless you, and second, you already know that you can't protect them from everything. That said, there's no need to deny your children the joy of canine or feline companionship out of fear of contagion. Yes, there's a list of zoonotic diseases (diseases transmissible from animals to people) so long that you wonder why anyone would risk getting so much as a gerbil. But common sense, good hygiene, and proper veterinary care can stop disease in its tracks.

Let's start with the mother of all terrifying zoonotic diseases: rabies. If a person or mammal contracts rabies, it's invariably fatal, and horrifyingly so. The disease is so feared it occupies a place in the popular imagination — think "Old Yeller" and "To Kill a Mockingbird." But public awareness, rabies laws, and vaccination have reduced the threat in developed countries significantly. Modern rabies vaccines, administered in accordance with veterinary, municipal, and manufacturer's guidelines, are extremely effective. If a dog or cat is exposed via contact with a potentially infected animal, booster vaccines and observation minimize the risk. And even if a household pet were to be infected and expose a human, prophylactic treatment is life-saving.

There are far too many zoonotic diseases for one column to discuss, but in general, if you take good care of your pet, your kids should be safe. Parasite control is one of the most important measures you can take. Some intestinal parasites are zoonotic, and children are at higher risk than adults because they don't always remember wash their hands after playing with their dog or cat, and eggs on a pet's coat can accidentally be transferred to the hands and ingested inadvertently. Common-sense measures are protective. Always be a good citizen and pick up your pet's stool; dispose of it in such a way that kids aren't exposed to it. Encourage hand-washing after petting the pup or kitty. If your kids have a sandbox, keep it covered when not in use, so wandering cats don't use it as a litterbox. Follow your vet's pro-

DOWN TO EARTH

Recharge with a 'forest bath'

All my life I have spent my summer vacation in places as close to nature as my family is inclined to rough it. When I was a kid we spent two or three weeks at a rented turn-of-the-century camp with no indoor plumbing or electricity on a wooded island aptly named "Jolly" in Lake Winnepesaukee. In the last 20 or so years, weeks have shortened to one; we've rented other camps on other bodies of water and welcomed certain modern amenities. (Indoor plumbing and Wi-Fi are pretty great, but we always throw a quilt over the TV.) I've gone blissfully back off the grid to a rocky island in Georgian Bay, Ontario and this year we relaxed in a log cabin tucked in pine woods on the Damariscotta River in Maine.

No matter where I go, I rely on this annual time away to recharge my batteries and I look forward to next summer's vacation almost as soon as I'm home again. I thought what I required was stretched-out days of do-nothing time spent reading, napping in hammocks, floating in the water, and eating blueberries. But I realized recently that what I really need to soothe my soul is nature. Full immersion, or close to. Even though I grow and work in a garden full of plants and wildlife, being in a relatively undisturbed place listening to the kind of quiet that's filled with bird calls and the buzzing of cicadas helps me let go. I need to feel the rain, hours after the storm passed, still dripping off the trees. To walk barefoot on rocks and fragrant pine needle paths. To collect chips of mica and count toadstools.

My a-ha moment came when I learned about the Japanese practice of shinrin-yoku or "forest bathing," which began in the early 1980s as a Japanese Forest Agency marketing campaign to promote health, and is now considered bonafide preventative medicine. Studies show what the Japanese — and the rest of us in our bones — knew all along: a mindful walk in nature, basking in all of the physical sensations, sights, sounds, and smells that catch our attention, does a body good. For starters, it reduces stress by lowering cortisol levels, alleviates the symptoms of depression, and improves immune function. Scientists attribute some of the health benefits we see after a walk in the woods to the phytoncides plants emit to defend themselves against bacteria, fungi, and insects. Whatever works.

The good news is, I know now that I won't have to wait until next summer to charge my batteries again. I can take a forest bath any day of the week and so can you. There are walking trails all over Rhode Island and South Coast Massachusetts. From where I live I'm only a ten minute walk from Mt. Hope Farm, at 250 Metacom Avenue in Bristol, which has a lovely road that winds past meadows and through the woods to Cove Cabin and back again (2.5 miles total). On the other side of the peninsula off Hope Street, The Claire D. McIntosh Wildlife Refuge (a.k.a. The Audubon Society) has paths through woods and wetlands to the shore boardwalk.

Even though I have to drive there, Weetamoo Woods in Tiverton is one of my favorite places to bask. Miles of well-marked paths, shared with dogs, horses, and mountain bikers, circulate through 650 acres of mature forest habitat. Destruction Brook Woods over in Dartmouth, Mass., is another pretty drive from anywhere and has about eight gorgeously woody miles of marked trails.

For a list of nature walks in Rhode Island, visit exploreri.org/gtraillist.php. Use The New England Mountain Bike Association's map at nemba.org/trails/massachusetts to find multi-use trails in Massachusetts.

I don't know about Japan, but in this part of the world, before we engage mind and body in shinrin-yoku, we really should practice safety first. Be sure to douse yourself in insect repellent, wear orange during hunting season, carry plenty of water, and check yourself for ticks afterwards.

May the forest be with you.

protocol for fecal analysis and deworm regularly — many monthly heartworm preventatives offer protection from roundworms and hookworms. Likewise, protect your pets from external parasites that can transmit disease. It's never been easier; when I first started practicing, I had to cross my fingers for luck when instructing owners about flea control. But nowadays, a dizzying variety of topical and/or oral medications make flea control a breeze. Fleas carry tapeworm and transmit the bacteria that causes Cat Scratch Fever. And while you can't get Lyme disease directly from your dog, you both can contract it from infected ticks. Protect your dog, protect your family.

Finally, be aware and proactive. If your dog is suddenly so itchy she can't sleep for scratching, don't take a wait-and-see approach. Get her to the vet; he might have scabies, a very contagious condition. If a cat's fur is looking moth-eaten, get him seen; ringworm, a fungal infection, is zoonotic.

You can't anticipate and prevent every potential disease a pet might develop, but good routine care will go a long way towards keeping your kids safe. A cat or a dog is infinitely likelier to carry happiness than disease.

Are things getting too hot in the kitchen?

BY LYNDA REGO

lrego@eastbaynewspapers.com

I don't like chili peppers or cayenne. Or broccoli rabe and other bitter greens. Or espresso (unless it's in tiramisu). Or sriracha. Or ponzu. Or any of the other hot sauces some chefs seem to think are necessary in the most unexpected dishes.

I used to think my taste buds were just wusses. Then, years ago, I came across an article on supertasters and there was a description of my taste buds. The term was coined in 1991 after a study by Linda Bartoshuk at the Yale Medical School.

Supertasters according to Wikipedia experience "the sense of taste with far greater intensity than average. Some 35 percent of women and 15 percent of men are supertasters."

That doesn't mean we are "better" tasters. My husband has a better sense of taste than I do. He can tell what type of container his milk came from. Or, sample a new dish and know that it has a particular spice I use in another dish. He's much better at identifying ingredients in a dish than I am, but loves espresso, beer and hot, spicy foods (within reason).

But, supertasters don't appreciate bitter foods, such as kale, tonic water, grapefruit juice, olives, broccoli rabe, hoppy beers and espresso. Sometimes, they don't like extremely sweet items, too. No one's sure why, but scientists think it's partly genetic, and there's no doubt a radar for too bitter would have been handy for early man when searching for edibles and avoiding toxic plants.

However, not all supertasters are the same. I like tonic water, kale and grapefruit juice. It's the really bitter, spicy and overly sweet things I avoid. And, I've never liked beer.

I had resigned myself to asking how "hot" a particular item is on a menu before ordering it. And quartering the amount of Thai chili paste I add to a stirfry.

Before I started researching supertasters, I couldn't understand why really spicy dishes appeal to some. I want to taste the shrimp or chicken in a dish, not simply the sauce on top. But, if 25 percent of the population are non-tasters and 50 percent are medium tasters, then I guess those diners just don't taste the heat the way the 25 percent of supertasters do.

Then, in the May issue of Food and Wine magazine, there was a commentary by Kate Krader, a "restaurant fanatic" with an Instagram feed. She talks about becoming addicted to spicier and hotter foods to the point where she doesn't enjoy previously favorite dishes, such as a potato gratin or roast chicken. Even worse, she's "no longer so interested" in them.

The important question she asks is "Is this an evolution or devolution?" A colleague tells her that she just craves bigger flavors. I disagree. I don't think spice and heat translate to flavors.

At a Mexican restaurant, if my mouth is so on fire that I can't taste the food, where's the flavor?

There's a place for fish sauce, chili pastes, vinegars and other potent flavor enhancers in our food. Plenty of chefs layer a variety of flavors, spices and sauces to create dishes that speak in your mouth, not scream. More of those, please.

Sprouted breads and a summer treat

Maybe you've seen sprouted breads in the grocery store recently. But what does "sprouted" mean exactly? Sprouted bread is made by soaking grains in water until they sprout. Then, the sprouts are combined and ground to make breads. Many grains and legumes are used to make sprouted bread. Usually they include wheat, millet, barley, lentils, oats, and soy. Sprouted bread is not a new thing — it has been around since as early as 2,000 B.C.

Emily DELCONTE

Sprouts are living plants, and they have enzymes that help break down proteins and carbohydrates. This makes sprouted bread easier to digest than regular bread. These breads tend to contain more protein than regular breads as well. The gluten content is lower than traditional breads, so this makes sprouted bread a good choice for those who are gluten sensitive. They are not, however, safe for people with Celiac disease.

Keep your sprouted bread in the freezer until you're ready to use it. Let it thaw by leaving it at room temperature, or put it directly into the toaster for a new texture.

If you're ready to try sprouted bread, look for these brands in your grocery store:

- Food for Life - Ezekial Bread
- Alvarado Street Bakery
- Shiloh Farms
- Essential Eating Sprouted Foods

Martin's Garden Notes

Fall Vegetable Gardening

The veggie season is far from over if you want to keep harvesting vegetables well into the fall. As you clear out an area that has produced all it can, turn it over and plant Lettuce, Broccoli, Cauliflower, Collards, Kale, and Cabbage. These will produce very well until we have a very hard freeze. You can also sow spinach for harvest this fall and plant enough to leave over the winter for harvest in early April. You can also be successful sowing mesclun mix for a great addition to your salads.

With any luck you can sow carrots and beets and have them to harvest well after frost. Cover them with straw to protect from frost.

In areas of the garden that you don't intend to replant, plant a cover crop of oats by mid September. If you clear out an area later, it is best to sow rye. Just be aware that rye will live through the winter and must be turned under early in the spring as it will quickly grow to four feet tall. Both covers will store nutrients that you will turn back into the soil in the spring and will prevent erosion.

Vegetable seedlings are available now.

MEET NOEMI CARDOSO: REALTOR, BANKER, GARDENER & WANNA-BE GRANDMOTHER

BY JOAN D. WARREN
Noemi Cardoso was born in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, and moved to the United States in 1999 with a position with Bank of Boston. She had worked in retail banking for 20 years as a senior vice present secretary, then branch assistant manager and investment representative, until November 2005, when she decided to leave banking and become a realtor. In the past nine years, she has sold more than 150 homes in Rhode Island and Massachusetts. She has two adult children who are successful and independent adults, and she is looking forward to becoming a grandparent in the next few years. Noemi loves the ocean, gardening, culture, music, traveling, hiking, photography and remodeling projects. She is fluent in Portuguese and English. WHY REAL ESTATE AS A CAREER? "I always worked in jobs that assisted people to achieve their goals. I also always loved TV home shows, painting and remodeling, so real estate was a natural transition, which seems to combine both passions."

WHAT DID YOU DO BEFORE REAL ESTATE? "I was in banking for over 20 years. Started with Bank of Boston in Brazil and then in the United States."
WHAT DO YOU LIKE MOST ABOUT IT? "The fact that I don't have to be locked in an office, and I get to see the look of a family when they walk into their 'dream home.'"
WHAT ARE SOME OF YOUR HOBBIES? There are many, but writing, photography and travel jump out."
IPAD, DESKTOP OR LAPTOP: "Every single one of them, plus lots of texts."
FAVORITE MOVIE ACTOR: "Denzel Washington."
WHAT ARE YOU READING?

"Sarah Ban Breathnach, 'Simple Abundance — A day book of comfort and joy.'"
VOLUNTEER WORK: "House visit for the Westport Senior Center."
WHERE DO YOU GO TO RELAX? "To my deck or the beach for a walk."
ADVICE TO SELLERS: "Spend the time to make your house look nice before marketing. The first impression is still the one that sells your house. Declutter, stage, clean, work on the curb appeal, freshen it up with some nice paint. There is nothing worse than to enter a home and have your buyer look at you with 'how soon can we leave?' begging eyes."
MARKET PREDICTIONS: "Up and bright. Every professional I have been talking to is extremely busy. It is taking time to find properties, and the good ones, if priced right, are moving in a blink of an eye."

House of the Week

Soak in Sakonnet views from every angle

Nestled in the gorgeous Sandy Point Farm neighborhood on the East side of Portsmouth is a custom-style home with panoramic views of the Sakonnet River. Built less than 10 years ago, the home has four bedrooms, four-and-a-half bathrooms, and more than 5,500 square feet of living space.

Because the property slopes down toward the water, every floor, including the newly finished lower level, offers balconies, decks or patios to maximize the view. The first floor features a grand entryway (with spiral staircase leading upstairs), as well as a formal dining room and a wide-open kitchen/living area, with island stools and multiple areas for eating, relaxing or entertaining.

The home also includes a built-in gas fireplace, central air conditioning, a whirlpool tub in the master bedroom, and a three-car garage. It's located just a short distance from the popular Sandy Point Beach.

Loan rates based on $100,000 with 20% down payment & no PMI. Variable mortgages listed are for 30 years, adjusted annually. Points are a one-time charge equal to one percent of the mortgage. APR stands for annual percentage rate and reflects closing costs spread over the life of the loan. CAP is the most a variable mortgage can increase in one year. Savings and loans and Rhode Island loan and investment banks are included in the bank section of this chart. These rates, provided by the institutions on Monday of this week, are subject to change or special conditions. For more information, consumers are advised to call the institution. First-time homebuyers may qualify for lower-rate mortgages from the Rhode Island Housing and Mortgage Finance Corporation. Many credit unions only grant loans to members and limit membership to a defined group. When shopping for mortgage rates ask for explanation of closing costs. Financial institutions that write residential mortgages that wish to be included on this list can get in touch with Classified Real Estate Advertising Specialist at 401-253-1000
