

ALPHABETICAL LIST OF ALUMNI OF THE UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA

N. B. This list includes, 1) the names of all graduates of the University, their degrees being indicated as follows:

When no designating letter is given, the college of Science, Literature and the Arts is meant

- A—College of Agriculture
- C—School of Chemistry
- D—College of Dentistry
- Ed—College of Education
- E—College of Engineering and the Mechanic Arts
- G—Second or Advanced Degrees
- H—College of Homeopathic Medicine and Surgery
- L—College of Law
- M—School of Mines
- O—Officers and others not identified with any class
- P—College of Pharmacy
- R—College of Medicine and Surgery

2) The list also includes the names of all former students and officers who have identified themselves with the work of the alumni for the University by taking out life memberships in the General Alumni Association.

3) Also the names of all alumnae who have married the maiden name and the class following the married name in the proper alphabet.

to be content. But nobody supposed that a building thus divided among so many departments and uses, would be the library of the future; and it has been well understood for some years that a new building devoted exclusively to the library, adequate in all respects for the future growth and uses of the library, must be built very soon and must be made not only one of the most serviceable but also one of the most artistic buildings on the campus; and I have no doubt that in the near future such a building will be erected.

The legislatures of recent years have been generous in their appropriations for the University. Indeed I may say that their liberality has been beyond praise. Not that I think they have appropriated more than was absolutely needed or more than the state could well afford. But their appropriations have been so far beyond all that earlier legislatures would have dreamed of, that there is every reason to believe that coming legislatures will be equally generous, especially when they consider the growth of the University and realize to how many families in Minnesota its directly ministers. The appropriations made for the greater campus perhaps reach the high-water mark in legislative generosity to the University up to the present time, and they give assurance that the development of the University, the beauty of its campus, the convenient location of its different colleges, and the providing of sufficient room for the work of the University, are held by the legislature to be matters of vital importance, and that duty to the highest interests of the state requires that they be properly cared for.

Not until the greater campus was acquired has it ever been possible to plan for the grouping of buildings and for the new buildings that will be required in the years to come—in a word to plan for the future, and now it is possible. The plans for the new campus as they have been prepared by Mr. Cass Gilbert and adopted by the Regents, give assurance that in the future an intelligent and wise method will be followed in locating and erecting buildings, and in laying out the grounds, and that the campus, when completed, will be a thing of beauty, a delight to the eyes of all and in no small measure an elevating influence to the students whose intellectual home it will be.

I congratulate the Regents of the University that they are called to service when so many great things are to be done for the University, and I congratulate them also on the high ideals which they cherish for the University. With more than a million dollars in hand for new buildings to be erected on the new campus, the opportunity afforded them to establish now in some measure the ideal of the future University is unprecedented. I hope they will remember that the buildings to be erected are intended to furnish room for the work of the University and not primarily for the purpose of exciting admiration. Large sums can be spent in the decoration of buildings and in consequence the buildings be too small, or plainer and larger buildings can be erected which need not be ugly. We have built most of our buildings altogether too small. We have not won much applause for our architecture and we have not had sufficient room. In future let us have adequate appropriations, and then build as large buildings as the appropriations will permit, even though they are plain.

While neither campus nor buildings constitute the University, they are essential to the orderly life and successful work of the University. But they are by no means so essential as is a learned, enthusiastic, and inspiring faculty. And I congratulate the Regents most of all that the time has come when the resources at their command will enable them to call to positions in the faculty men who are eminent in their special subjects of investigation, who can be leaders in research, and who, by their own example, can awaken in their students a genuine enthusiasm for knowledge. I hope that the funds of the University may be freely spent for this purpose. It will be a different institution from what it is now if this policy shall be wisely followed. It will make a great difference if, when additional teachers are required, instead of calling in recent graduates with no experience and no special reputation and at starvation wages, men of established reputation as inspiring teachers and as leaders of thought in their special subjects, are invited to come at salaries that will enable them to live without constant worrying over the family expenses.

It should not be forgotten that teaching is not the only work that a real university may reasonably be expected to do, though that is a most important work. The university should be something more than an advanced high school. It should do original research work and find out things not already known. But not a great deal of such work can be done if all the professors are required to do full duty as teachers in the class room. The Independent a while ago criticized the trustees of American universities for "looking upon a professor as a kind of hired man." It complained of the "almost absolute ignorance in this country of the precise kind of service that a high grade professor in Germany or in England is expected to render to his nation and the world." "What," it asked, "would any American board of university trustees think of the proposition that their professors of highest rank and most highly paid should be left entirely free to offer instruction or not; or to instruct hundreds or scores, or only two or three especially qualified students without dictation from university authorities. With a few exceptions American trustees would pronounce such an arrangement preposterous. Yet in Europe professors enjoy such freedom as a matter of course; and the arrangement has justified itself by fruits of productive scholarship and scientific discovery which Americans can only envy." However great may be the difficulty in providing professors exclusively for research work, no university can take first rank until it has provided such professors, and has done something by its discoveries to enlighten the world.

If I look back a quarter of a century and compare the education given by the colleges of the country at that time with the education which they are giving now, I am impressed by some very notable changes which have taken place. The earliest colleges of the country were avowedly established to provide men for the service of the church and the state. And that purpose has so far dominated colleges as to keep the curriculum essentially what it was in the beginning down to a late period in the nineteenth century. The most vital new idea which has affected the scope of education in recent years is that men in a great variety of occupations outside of the so-called learned professions, need the higher education in such form as to be helpful in their life work; and that institutions of learning ought so to broaden their curricula as to embrace subjects, a knowledge of which is necessary in a great variety of employments for which colleges in the olden time had no care. If high intellectual training will make men better clergymen, lawyers, doctors, or teachers, it has been found out that it will also make men better business men, farmers, accountants, railroad men, miners, and better officials of corporations; and the university is now properly called upon to lay at least a good foundation of knowledge for all of these, upon which foundation experience can build. But this involves a tremendous expansion of the curriculum. And this in turn leads inevitably to diminished attention to some of the old studies. When we look for specific changes we easily find them. First of all, Greek has lost its supremacy and is no longer an essential for a college diploma. It has disappeared from most of the high schools of the country. It will doubtless have a revival in the next quarter of a century—at least a partial revival—but for the present, at least, it has lost its old standing. Latin has held its old position fairly well, and, though it is not necessary to secure a college degree, its importance is not seriously diminished in the estimation of the best educators of the country. Mathematics, partly on its own account as a disciplinary study and partly on account of its value to other subjects and to certain occupations, such as engineering, still has a firm grasp on the educational world and even the educational reformers have not been able to displace it for something weaker. The sciences have come to the front and no longer apologize for demanding a large place in the curriculum and no longer need fear that their demands will not be granted. The same may be said of history and of economics and its kindred subjects. Sociology and anthropology have made for themselves a good foothold, and the scientific study of human beings and their methods of living is to-day as respectable as the study of other animals. Modern languages are receiving greatly increased attention. English and English literature have been given very large room not only in the colleges but in the schools, and a desperate attempt has been made all along the line to teach the rising generation how to use its native tongue. It is not many years since professorships of English literature were first established in Oxford and Cambridge even, and for a century and a half at least the study of English, except rhetorical work, was practically unknown in American colleges. The value of English literature seems to have been entirely overlooked; or it was supposed that the student, being practically familiar with English, would of his own volition search out and profit by the riches of thought contained in English literature. A great many noble writers appeared in England and in America while English literature was not taught in the colleges. Whether the crop of noble writers is to be increased or destroyed by the teaching of English literature remains to be seen. But certainly if the college graduate of to-day does not have a fair knowledge of the best English authors and of the development of the language and literature it is not because he has not had full opportunity to master these in the college.

But of all subjects, agricultural science has made the greatest progress and won the most marked increase of attention. Agricultural education practically had no existence a quarter of a century ago. Now agriculture, with its related subjects that affect the welfare of the farmer, has assumed a definite scientific form. Its principles are established and can be taught as readily as any other science, and its value is almost beyond calculation because, in addition to its educational value, it is eminently practical and enables the student who masters it to reap a large additional reward in enlarged crops, better cattle, improved quality of products, and increased comfort in home, and lessened exhaustion in labor. The brain is beginning to do for agriculture what it has long been doing for manufacture.

I look for great changes in educational methods in the years that are coming and that are not very far away. The population of the world is increasing and the world itself is not growing perceptibly larger. Irrigation and drainage may add millions of acres to the arable land of the country; but year by year the increasing millions of people to be fed will more than equal in their consumption of food the total products of these new lands that modern methods have stimulated into active fertility. As the process goes on the necessity for everyone to earn a living will grow more imperative; and that will force out of our grade schools and out of our high schools some of the subjects which now delay the scholar's reaching the study of the things that are going to help him make a living and he will come to these things sooner; and, if he reaches the high school, he will find not the high school of to-day leading directly to the college or to life without special training; but he will find a high school or high schools that will fit him for successful work as a mechanic, or as a farmer, or, if he will, for the university. But in the university the same necessity of preparing for life's work will meet him, the same necessity to make it possible for him to get his hands sooner on the work he is to do will have been felt by university faculties, and the range of subjects taught will be greatly enlarged to meet the exigency, and some of these subjects will be much more simple and practical than any that are found in the curriculum to-day. If we are to compete with other nations in manufacture we must have trained workmen. The apprenticeship system has broken down completely for reasons I need not stop to explain. Our present system of training workmen is inadequate and fundamentally wrong. Perhaps I might better say we have at present no system. I am glad that the working men, the labor organizations, have already realized this and are fully aware that something should be done to remedy the present condition of things. If I am rightly informed they look to state education, to the public schools and universities to supply what is wanted; and they would welcome the establishment of schools for the training of workmen in their various vocations, just as the farmers welcome the agricultural schools. Their wishes in this matter should be met, and provisions made for instruction in manual work, and in the fundamental principles that underlie construction; and to the fullest extent possible the university should supplement the work of these schools and train the future inventors and skilled workmen for their duties.

I am glad to know that a liberal and wealthy gentleman of Minneapolis entertains at the present time a fixed purpose to endow in the course of the next four or five years a noble institution in connection with the Agricultural Department for the thorough training of students in the fundamental principles and practice of the mechanic arts, something more far-reaching and more contributory to the elevation of labor in general than an engineering college can well be.

As a final result there will have come a very wholesome sifting of the studies pursued from kindergarten to college. Useless things will be eliminated; first and second and third grade books on one subject will be eliminated; no subject will be taught till a pupil is able to understand it and then thorough work will be done in it; at least two grades will disappear from the schools in the interest of economy of time and nothing essential will have been lost; the high schools will provide mechanic arts training and agricultural training and cultural training as may be desired, ministering to more students because sooner reached than now, and helping more than now; and the same general course of eliminating the unnecessary and the comparatively worthless and adding the useful will mark the course of the universities. If you do not think so, tell me whether the state universities in the last ten years have gone towards the eastern colleges or whether the eastern colleges, Harvard and Yale, have gone towards the state universities. Your answer will show which way the trend is; and it can not fail to show that, while no institution is prepared to belittle culture or will be in the years to come, all the institutions are preparing to respond to the call to meet the requirements of that marvelous complex thing, life, in industrial America. And that they may do it, as many as can will have somewhere—no matter what the name—graduate department, applied science department, or whatever you please—department whose special work shall be to make new discoveries, new applications of old principles, to find out new methods of doing things, and new things with which to do, so that institutions in their training and workmen in productive life shall know the best there is to know and students shall be helped to a successful life, because patient searchers for the secrets of nature have discovered and revealed the way.

It does not seem to me necessary that all universities should teach the same things; that as soon as one university makes a new departure in any direction, every other university should do the same. It is not necessary or desirable that all the forty-five state universities or agricultural colleges more or less should make the same experiments. One successful experiment will do for all. In cases of great public importance, like finding a remedy for epidemic diseases among animals, it may be well for several experiment stations to work on the problem at the same time. But experiments on the raising of ordinary products may well be apportioned out among the stations and thereby a much wider range of experiments will be made possible for the stations collectively. So, too, if one university starts a school to train consuls and diplomatic agents of the government, there is no reason why all the other universities should immediately start such a school. Schools of journalism are desirable; but it is not necessary to establish several hundred of them in as many colleges. Egyptology is an interesting and valuable study; but it need not form a part of the curriculum of every university. If one university chooses to send an expedition to Assyria to dig for ancient records and decipher them, there is no need for all the other universities to send out such expeditions. If one university sees fit to establish a branch in China, the others need not do it. Let the work that is not fundamentally important to the students as a whole but only to limited numbers be distributed; and, if a man wants these rare specialties, let him go where he can get them. No university ought to undertake to teach what it can not teach well. No university ought to let its ambition to be as good as any other lead it into undertaking to do everything that any other university is doing. Do well what you do at all. If new things are to be introduced, let them be those things that are most intimately related to the welfare of the people of the state to which the university belongs. This will not meet the approval of certain people who think an ideal educator is a man who is constantly adding to the number of things to be taught. I believe thoroughly in the promotion of knowledge; but I do not believe in educational institutions that are inverted pyramids. There must be some regard paid to the size of the base in determining the amount of expansion as the structure goes up.

The state universities generally were established as co-educational institutions. Of late sporadic cases have occurred of a seeming movement to segregate the women from the men, and to annex them to the universities rather than admit them as of right to the same classes as the men enter. I do not think this movement a wise one and I hope it may never show itself in Minnesota. If people do not like to have their daughters educated in the same classes with men, there are a goodly number of colleges for women only to which they can send their daughters; and more such colleges are coming. But the hunger of women for the higher education seems to grow with the opportunity to get such education, and year by year a larger number are seeking admission to colleges, and apparently the time is coming when a majority of the students in our colleges will be women. Nobody, I suppose, would propose, when that occurs, to put the men into an annex and let the women be the university. Let us have fair play all around and let us be as just to our daughters as we are to our sons. I am confident that women are to fill a much larger place in the world's work in the future than they have filled in the past; that literature, the fine arts, designing, architecture, farming, medicine and its related professions, and not a few kinds of business and of manufacturing, will in a few years number among those successfully prosecuting these pursuits not an inconsiderable number of educated, earnest, thinking women who will have learned their power to do many things which they once supposed only men could do; and who, in a new sense of independence for themselves, will gladly lead the way to an emancipation of woman which shall save her from the suffering and degradation which helpless poverty has so often brought to her in the past.

I have no great admiration for correspondence schools, though doubtless if a boy has no other chance to learn, he can learn something by correspondence. To what extent the university should try to cover the whole state with its lectures and teachers, I do not undertake to say. It is for the people of the state through their representatives to determine how far this outside work shall go. If the university is furnished with the means to do this work, there is no better agency to which the work could be committed, and the university would doubtless undertake the work with cheerfulness. Inasmuch as knowledge is valuable to everybody, I suppose we can make no great mistake in carrying knowledge to people who are not able to leave home in order to get knowledge. But the whole work needs to be most carefully systematized and the adaptation of the means employed to the object sought needs to be studied very thoroughly. Otherwise there will be inevitable waste with very little permanent benefit. When a club of farmers is organized, all of whom are eager to learn how to do better farming, we can not be too prompt in carrying to them the gospel of scientific agriculture. They know what they want and they want it. Where, on the other hand, the call for teachers and lecturers arises mainly from the social instinct and a general impression that culture can in some way be secured through the teaching of visiting university professors, it may well be doubted whether the university is properly selected to do this work. In any event the university must first do its appointed work of training its registered students and making research into new fields of knowledge. If after that is done as well as possible, or proper provision is made for doing it as well as possible, it is further able to carry knowledge to all parts of the state and wisely distribute it, nobody can object to its doing so, if the state wishes it. Possibly great good may be done in that way. Great good certainly has been done in agriculture by the Institutes which are held all over the state. The popular hunger demands, next to agriculture, probably English literature, and a great many interesting and instructive things can be said in extension courses about literature. But a knowledge of literature can be gained only by studying literature. It is never gained by merely hearing about literature or authors; and the benefit to be derived from extension courses in literature, unless earnest classes willing to work are formed, may well be questioned. Mixed audiences of old people, young people, middle aged, and children, drawn together by curiosity rather than by any taste or hunger for literature, are not likely to be permanently benefited to any great extent. There must be a desire on the part of the people to be reached for something more definite than general improvement. If a man is working on an invention, he may come to a point where a knowledge of physics would be invaluable, and he will desire that knowledge very much and be willing to take it from anyone who is able and willing to give it. And so of others. If they have discovered their need of knowledge, and know what kind of knowledge they need most, they will be glad to get it, and the extension worker can do them good. But where people have no conception that they need any particular kind of knowledge, and no special use for knowledge, there is little use in soliciting their attention to extension work. At its best that work labors under great difficulties in making itself thorough, and at its worst it is in imminent danger of becoming superficial and perfunctory. But I am heartily in favor of doing everything we can to promote the interests of the people of the state. I hail with satisfaction the efforts that have been made and successfully made, as I suppose, to bring the School of Mines into closer relations with the mining interests of the state in such a way as to help greatly the school in its training and ultimately to make the school contribute largely to the success of mining. I am heartily in favor of everything that the College of Education can do to give outside teachers a broader view of their work and higher ideals for themselves to reach. I am heartily in favor of extension work at the Agricultural High Schools authorized by the last legislature, or by Institutes in every county at which the farmers of the county can be gathered, or by systematic instruction through other agencies which the University may be able to employ in carrying out the will of the legislature that most generously provided the funds necessary for this work. But after we have sent out all our educational missionary expeditions, I wish it to be still kept in mind that in accordance with the constitution of the state the University is still "located in Minneapolis near the Falls of St. Anthony."

What is the standing of the University of Minnesota to-day as compared with other Universities? It is impossible to say. It is doubtless better than many and not so good as some. There are universities with larger equipment, more distinguished faculties, and greater fame. Minnesota has nearly as many students as any, but numbers do not make a university truly great. That is conceded by everybody. Ordinarily manufacturers are judged by their products. Universities may fairly be judged in the same way. This University has never graduated a man or woman who was intellectually the equal of Daniel Webster.

The only reason is that nobody has ever entered this University who had an intellect equal to Webster's. If anyone with such an intellect had entered this University, we should doubtless have graduated him. But great men are only in a small degree the actual products of colleges. Natural ability is the prime factor in real greatness. Webster and Jonathan Edwards, and Horace Bushnell and Henry Ward Beecher would have been great men wherever they graduated or for that matter whether they graduated anywhere. If men and women with such minds as those men had, never entered an institution, that institution is not to be condemned because it does not graduate such great men. Basswood is not mahogany, and it can not be made to serve the same purpose as mahogany. But what kind of men and women are the graduates of this University? My heart warms as I ask this question. Some of them have attained distinction, but I can not for obvious reasons call their names here. What especially pleases me is the fact, which has been brought to my notice many times by people in no way connected with this institution, that the graduates of this University, scattered all over Minnesota and to a surprising degree through the country westward to the Pacific, are men and women doing good work, faithful and earnest, respected by their fellow-citizens and in many cases the leaders in everything which makes for culture and right living, and this is the testimony which I get respecting our graduates of all the colleges in the University. Now such men and women are the pillars of society in its true sense. They are leaders within the sphere in which they move. They form public opinion. I believe that our graduates are as useful, as devoted to the right, as earnest to promote the best interest of the state and nation as the graduates of any university in the land.

But we are not left entirely to the character of our graduates in determining the standing of our University. The Association of American Universities confessedly contains the best institutions in the country, including the traditionally noted eastern institutions, Harvard, Yale, Columbia, and Princeton. Two years ago, after careful examination of this institution and its work, Minnesota was by a unanimous vote admitted as a member of that association. This University is one of the three or four state universities that have been accepted by the Carnegie Foundation as meeting the requirements for institutions whose retiring professors may receive a pension. We have steadily but surely raised our standard of requirements for admission to the professional schools. Two years of college work are now required of a student before he can be admitted to our College of Medicine. One year of college work is required before one can enter the Law College as a candidate for a degree and two years are required after the next year. The course in engineering has been extended to five years, which practically provides for two years of college work before the technical work of engineering is taken up. The University has established a five-year course in the School of Mines, in addition to the four-year course. All of these changes are strongly in the interest of higher and better work and they ought to be satisfactory evidence that the standard of scholarship in the University has been decidedly raised.

But in one particular the University is very much behind many others, and that is in its graduate department. This is not due to any fault of the dean of that department nor of any of the professors who teach graduate students. It is simply because the Regents have done nothing to build up the department or to help others build it up. I regret that this weak spot in the University should exist and be so apparent. The very essence of a university ought to be its ability to furnish advanced work to its own graduates and the graduates of other colleges where no graduate work can be had. So long as the Regents are indifferent to the building up of the Graduate School, the University will suffer in comparison with institutions whose graduate work is strong and attractive.

I do not believe that this weakness of our University will long be permitted to remain, for the present Board of Regents is not insensible of the value of graduate work, and can not fail to see that it must be encouraged in this University if Minnesota is to maintain even her present standing among the universities of the country.

It is well understood that the University belongs to the state, and that the legislature may be expected to provide the necessary funds for carrying on the work successfully. This is the chief reason why so few private gifts come to state universities. But there are some things most necessary for the welfare of the students of the University which the state with all the other demands upon it can not immediately provide and will be a long time in reaching. An example of what I mean is Alice Shevlin Hall. I can not speak too enthusiastically of the good that building has done to the women of the University. It has brought them together in harmony and concord. It has given them retirement and rest when needed. It has multiplied friendships, it has comforted the lonely, it has trained the awkward, it has refined the noisy, it has civilized and in the best sense Christianized all. We need a similar building for the men. It would do a world of good to the men, especially to those who do not live at home. It would improve their manners. It would tell for better morals. It would promote brotherhood. It would multiply and make permanent friendships. It would bring faculty and students together in closer touch and in helpful association. I can hardly think of anything helpful to the boys which it would not do. There are many rich men in Minnesota. How easily they could build this building if they would; and what would it be if they did build it? It would be one of the most effective contributions which it is possible for them to make, for it would tell mightily on the habits, and manners, and character of the men of the University and its influence would be as prolonged as Eternity. If some of these men who have amassed great fortunes could only realize the greatness of the opportunity and build a proper building for the men, their hearts would sing for joy when in the coming years they saw the fruits of their liberality in the thousands of young men who would have been trained into the highest manliness and nobility of character through their beneficence.

The purpose of most individuals who emigrate to a new country is to improve their condition. They expect to gain wealth as they could not in the place of their birth. They expect to improve in some way their environment with greater freedom, greater possibilities, and new and perhaps nobler ideals. Some get all they hoped for when they have a house to shelter them and land to yield a living. Some go a little farther and add to this, social standing and increased influence among their fellow citizens. Some go further and make their influence felt in the formation of institutions and the passage of laws. And some go even further and attain their ideals only when the life of the people is, so to speak, placed in their hands to be made in all respects what it ought to be, intellectually, morally, politically, and spiritually. Minnesota has from the first received into her borders representatives of all these classes, and she has them in large numbers to-day. The largest class is the individual class content with the comfort of the home and the family. Ambition for social influence, for political power, for religious impress, is not wanting and characterizes large numbers of people. But all are thrown together in a democracy, in what we call the State, and all pursue their chosen path, influencing one another in more ways than can be imagined, and in some ways that can not be seen. And the outcome is to be what no man can foresee, but what we all hope will be a state truly imperial in its resources, in the character of its people, and in the happiness and purpose of their life. The final thing is to make life what it ought to be, happy if possible, useful in any event, and everywhere among all classes as loyal to the truth as the needle is to the pole.

It is not possible to trace the influence of every individual through the maze out of which appear at last the power and the grandeur of the state. The largest number of people live so quietly and peacefully that the influence of their lives can hardly be seen or felt. Yet it is a real influence. He that is not against us is for us. What the leaders of thought propose, the quiet thousands are ready to support and they do support by just standing firm behind their leaders and the leaders themselves sometimes appear suddenly from the midst of these quiet people among whom they have lived and of whom they have been a part. A New England storekeeper comes here from New Hampshire and opens a hardware store. He is a man of sterling character and clear vision and great common sense; and he looks out for the good of the community into which he has moved. With the New England instinct for education, he sees the possibilities of the future, and he so guides the frail bark of the recently launched University through the rapids of legislation and over the falls of financial disaster, as to bring it at last into safe and peaceful waters and to win for himself justly the title of the Father of the University. Men easily forget. It is well that the monument of John S. Pillsbury stands yonder, that men may not forget what he was and what he did not only for the University but for the honor of Minnesota.

A young soldier called to the presidency of a University that could hardly then be said even to be a university on paper, comes here; formulates plans for a university with its various colleges; formulates a system of public education that shall at once feed the university and train the youth for a life worth living even if they do not go to the university; lays foundations for the best education possible for all classes of people in the state; makes his mark indelibly on the character of the state, and I know not on how much beyond that; and the noble building on the campus, erected to supply the loss of the old main building, not unworthily commemorates his achievements as it bears the name of Folwell Hall.

The great and difficult problem of agricultural education in this state, over which legislatures and farmers' conventions had wrangled and grown angry, was practically solved, by a teacher, a Presbyterian clergyman, whose official position brought him into the Board of Regents as a member, and who suggested the plan for a School of Agriculture within reach of the farmers' boy; and the honor that attaches to the success of that school may justly in large measure be given to David L. Kiehle; and I hope the Regents will at some time establish a memorial that will not suffer his name to be forgotten.

A quiet citizen who had known good fortune and bad fortune and who had borne himself with equal modesty and composure under both, was nominated for senator by a vote so close that only a court of justice could decide whether he was nominated or not. He was elected and went to the Capitol. He made no great speeches. But he took up the idea originally suggested by Chelsea J. Rockwood, a graduate of the University, that the University of Minnesota needed a larger campus. He pervaded the senate and the House, the whole legislature, like perpetual sunshine and he won; and when the greater campus shall be completed and shall become a thing of beauty to be admired by all the people of Minnesota and to be enjoyed by generation after generation of students, let the name of James T. Elwell be always remembered with honor and gratitude.

I can not close this address without making special allusion to the great sorrow which came to the University and to the state of Minnesota when Governor John A. Johnson died. He was ex-officio a member of the Board of Regents, and all the other members of the Board, with the exception of the president of the University, were subject to his appointment. His influence in the Board was very great as would be natural in any case, but was especially great because he took a deep interest in the University and attended the meetings of the Board whenever it was possible for him to do so. He was a man marvelously winning and attractive in his manners and personality. He was firm in adhering to his convictions. He was clean in his life. He was gentle and kind to those who were not the favorites of fortune. He was a foremost man among men—and as I saw him in the Convention of Governors of the various states called together at the White House by President Roosevelt, he was a foremost Governor among the Governors. And the specially interesting fact connected with his prominence, the fact which gave special significance to his whole career, was that he was most emphatically a self-made man. He was not largely indebted to the schools, and not at all to the college for his training, but by the simple process of reading and thinking he grew to the high stature of a most commanding public official, and multitudes believe, what no one can with authority deny, that if his life had not been cut short in the untimely way it was, he would at some time have become president of the United States. We can not tell what would have been. But we can not but admire the patient process of self-improvement by which he advanced from obscurity to greatness, and can not but feel that if he had lived to reach the highest office in the gift of the people, he would, in character, in purpose, in ideals, in address, and in courtesy have done honor to the office. His untimely death saddened the people of Minnesota and I hope sobered them as they were made to realize the uncertainty of life and of human destiny in this world.

I am about to retire from the office of president of the University of Minnesota which I have held for twenty-six years. I have had no intention to make this an occasion for a farewell address. Why should I? I am not going away from you. I expect to live the remnant of my life in Minnesota. I expect to be interested in the welfare of the University as I have been. I expect to watch its progress and improvement with the utmost pleasure. I shall not suggest any policy or lay down any line of action for my successor. I think the Regents will be most fortunate in securing the scholarly and able gentleman who is to be the next president and I predict for him a brilliant and most satisfactory administration. To the Regents of the University who have always been kind to me, to the faculty who have been loyal and faithful, to the students who have given me far more love and devotion than I deserved, to the alumni who have not forgotten their Alma Mater and who year by year are giving evidence of their readiness to help in many ways, and to the people of Minnesota to whom the University belongs, and who mean that it shall be made a truly great university, I return my most grateful thanks for the treatment I have received at their hands during more than a quarter of a century of peace and happiness as president of the University, and I pledge you all my continued best wishes for the prosperity of the University and for the happiness of all who are in any way connected with it.

CERTIFICATES GRANTED.

Wednesday evening, June 1st, the students who had completed the short course for teachers in the college of agriculture were awarded their certificates by President Northrop. A reception was held at the department of agriculture and during the course of the evening the certificates were granted by President Northrop. Among those who were in the receiving line were President Northrop, Dean and Mrs. Woods, and Regent and Mrs. Sommers. The class which has completed the two years' work required for teacher's certificate in home economics was composed of the following members: Tressa Tickett, Chatfield, Minn.; Emma Adams, Owatonna; Elizabeth Brooks, Grand Rapids; Elvira Josephson, Minneota; Pauline Lewis, Long Lake; Lulu McClure, Bernice Hart, Clara Gleason, Minneapolis.

REGENTS MEETING.

The regents held a two day session during commencement week, Tuesday and Wednesday. A great deal of important business was considered and some matters of importance disposed of. The committee on salaries had before them a communication from the deans calling for an increase of $73,000 to the University pay roll. The question had previously been referred back to the deans and they had cut down their estimate to $48,000. The regents felt themselves obliged to reduce this to $31,000. About $11,000 will be used for new help and the balance goes to increase salaries in a few cases where absolute necessity for an increase existed.

The following was adopted:

Resolved that Dean Shenehon be requested to make the necessary investigations to determine what it needed to heat a cubic foot of space in a University building under present conditions and make an estimate of what increase will be needed to provide for the new buildings for which appropriations have already been made.

L. B. Baldwin, Med. '97, superintendent of the North Dakota hospital for the insane located at Jamestown, was made superintendent of the Elliott hospital to assume his duties August 1st.

A proposition from Dean Downey to finish three or four rooms in the attic of Follwell Hall for the use of classes was referred to the committee on buildings and grounds to have the work done if it should be found to be at all financially possible.

Professor C. W. Thompson of the University of South Dakota was appointed to succeed Professor J. S. Young in the University extension work in the department of economics, Dr. Young being transferred to the regular University work.

It was voted to allow Dean Frankforter one hundred and fifty dollars for necessary expenses to attend the meeting of the American Association for the advancement of science to be held in California in July.

Earl Pettijohn, Ben Hur Kepner, Farington Daniels and F. Poppe were appointed assistants in chemistry to receive a salary of five hundred dollars each.

The librarian was authorized to fill the place of Count Posse who had resigned.

It was voted to go ahead and spend the six thousand dollars appropriated by the legislature for an alcohol plant and to do the best possible with the appropriation.

Dean Woods was authorized to appoint Professor K. L. Hatch of the University of Wisconsin to the superintendency of the Crookston Experiment station.

Dean Woods reported that E. C. Higbie had been appointed by him superintendent of the Morris station in accordance with authority previously conferred upon him to make such selection.

Irma Hathorn was appointed instructor in English and Susan Wilder instructor in home economics in the Morris school. Both of these young ladies are graduates of the University.

The medical department made a request for a librarian for their department which was referred to the library committee of the board.

The following resolution was adopted:

Resolved that the Board of Regents recognize the need of increased salaries and of adopting a definite schedule of salaries as a guide and standard, and that the committee on salaries be requested to continue its study of the question of a salary schedule for the University, and be requested to submit to the Board, as soon as possible, a schedule which will, in its judgment be just and fair; in order that the Board may consider the salary question more fully and be in possession of the necessary information to be able to intelligently make up its budget to be placed before the next legislature.

A paper prepared by Professor F. F. Grout of the department of mineralogy upon the Keewenawan area of eastern Minnesota was ordered published at an expense of approximately five hundred dollars.

A geological dictionary by Professor Hall was authorized to be published at an expense of about five hundred and fifty dollars.

Dean Shenehon was authorized to go ahead and construct the tunnels needed for the distribution of heat from the new heating plant by day labor or parts of it by contract as he might decide.

Governor Lind was authorized to see the board of control and make arrangements if possible for an architect representing the University to consult with Mr. Johnston, the state architect in regard to new buildings to be erected on the campus. The board of control was also requested to have its architect Mr. Johnston look over Pillsbury Hall and the Chemistry building and make plans and estimates for reconstruction of these two buildings with the idea of making them fireproof.

The superintendent of buildings was instructed to place a directory of each building on the campus in front of the building.

The following changes in titles in the college of medicine and surgery were made:

Dr. H. L. Ulrich from instructor in clinical microscopy to instructor in clinical pathology; Dr. John G. Cross from clinical instructor to clinical professor of medicine; Dr. James Gilfillan, from clinical instructor to clinical professor of medicine; Dr. Soren P. Rees from instructor in physical diagnosis and clinical medicine to clinical professor of medicine; Dr. Walter D. Shelden, from clinical instructor in medicine to clinical professor of medicine; Dr. John E. Hynes, from clinical assistant to clinical instructor in medicine; Dr. Frank S. Bissell, from clinical assistant to clinical instructor in medicine.

DEATH OF CLARENCE C. DINEHART.

In the death of Clarence C. Dinehart of the class of 1899, the University has lost one of the most loyal and brilliant alumni. Mr. Dinehart was the youngest man that had ever held a state office in this state and was exceedingly popular with all classes of people. His campaign for nomination as state treasurer was one of the most remarkable in the history of the state. Mr. Dinehart started out to make a tour of the state in the interests of his candidacy and wherever he went he made friends and friends not for the day but who have stood by him from that day to this. His nomination, although there were a number of strong candidates in the field, was conceded by the time the delegates had gathered in Duluth and it was given him on the first ballot by a large majority. His election as state treasurer was by the largest majority given any republican on the state ticket and he might have continued as treasurer indefinitely had he lived, but he had made up his mind some months since to become a candidate for Congress and was practically assured of the nomination. For some time Mr. Dinehart had suffered from attacks of appendicitis and when finally the operation was decided upon it was too late to save his life. The operation was performed Saturday, June 4th and it was thought that he was in a fair way to recovery when a sinking spell came on and he died as peacefully as a child falling to sleep a few minutes after his father and mother arrived. The body laid in state in the capitol for an hour on the morning of June 9th and was then taken to his old home at Slayton for burial.

The following sketch gives the main facts of his life.

Clarence Christopher Dinehart (Republican) was born in Chicago, April 3rd, 1877. In 1884 he came to Minnesota with his parents, who located at Slayton, Murray county, where they have since resided. He attended the schools at Slayton, the Central high school, Minneapolis, and graduated from the University of Minnesota in 1899. The same year he was elected assistant cashier of the State Bank of Slayton. In 1902 he was elected president of the village council of Slayton, which office and that of assistant cashier he resigned in the fall of 1902 to enter the law school of Harvard University, from which he graduated in June 1905. Returning to Slayton he re-entered the banking business. In 1906 he was elected state treasurer on the Republican ticket, and re-elected in 1908. He was a member of the Delta Upsilon fraternity, the Roosevelt club, Commercial club, and Town and Country club of St. Paul. In response to a general demand from the second district Mr. Dinehart consented to become a candidate for Congress.

DR. DICKINSON BETTER.

The friends of Dr. Dickinson will remember that he was obliged to give up the practice of his profession of dentistry on account of failing eye-sight, having a cataract on both eyes. This was three years ago and since that time Dr. Dickinson and his wife have been in Alabama where their younger daughter, Gertrude, now Mrs. Robert S. Parker, lives. Mr. Parker is a graduate of the school of agriculture. After spending two years there Dr. and Mrs. Dickinson returned to Minneapolis last Deember, hoping to have his second eye operated on. It was found to be inadvisable and Dr. Dickinson is now with his daughter, Mrs. E. F. Hertz in Portland, Ore., and is living at 64 East 67th street, (Mt. Tabor). Mrs. Dickinson who was taken ill when they were in Minneapolis is very much better and Dr. Dickinson is perfectly well except for the cataract which is to be operated on later.

HAYNES MAKES ADDRESS.

Professor Rowland Haynes of the psychology department, delivered the address at the closing session of the Philosophical Club of Hamline University on June 1st. His topic was "Philosophical Problems from the Psychology of Religion."

CASTNER HEADS THE I. O. O. F.

F. H. Castner, Law '93, was elected grand master of the Grand Lodge of the Odd Fellows last week.

LUCE MADE MAJOR.

Erle D. Luce, Law '07, of Company B, Minnesota National Guard, was elected major of the First Regiment at a meeting of the regimental officers held at the Armory last week. Major Luce was chosen out of a field of five candidates and succeeds Major C. T. Spear of St. Paul.

POTTER WINS PRIZE.

Zenas B. Potter, '09, who has been doing graduate work at Columbia University during the past year has just been awarded the prize in constitutional law by Columbia University. This is a highly prized honor. Mr. Potter will work in New York in the employ of the organization which has for its purpose the overhauling and improvement of the child labor laws of the state. He spent commencement week at the University.

MISS SANFORD AN ORATOR.

Professor Sanford gave the Memorial Day address in Minneapolis on May 30th. As was to be expected the address was a masterly effort and was thoroughly appreciated by the old soldiers and their friends. After paying a deserved tribute to the unselfish bravery of the old soldiers Miss Sanford launched into her real subject which was a plea for universal peace. She not only made a general plea for peace but she also put the matter specifically to the old soldiers urging them to take it up in their organized bodies and to be the ones to start the movement for universal peace, suggesting that the co-operation of the Confederate soldiers' organizations might be secured.

ROBINSON REVIEWS.

Professor Edward Van Dyke Robinson has an article in the May number of The Quarterly Journal of Economics in which he reviews five recent import works upon Protective Tariffs.

ARTICLES ON ECONOMICS.

Victor S. Clark, '90, who is connected with the department of commerce and labor as special investigator, was sent some years ago to Australia to investigate labor conditions there. Upon his return he published a now much quoted book upon the subject. He has since published a number of articles upon recent phases of the question, the most recent being in the May number of "Quarterly Journal of Economics." He also contributed an article to the January number of the Bulletin of the Bureau of Labor as throwing light upon the study of the operation of the Canadian Industrial disputes investigation act of 1907.

In the May number of the Quarterly Journal of Economics is an article by Professor E. V. Robinson upon "Some recent books on protective tariffs."

An item in a recent number of the Political Science Review calls attention to the three most valuable articles on the Chicago Harbor Commission, all three having been prepared by Minnesota men, J. Paul Goode, '89, George Tunell, '92, and George R. Sikes, '92.

ALUMNAE INVITED.

The Los Angeles branch of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae extends a welcome to the Alumnae of the University of Minnesota that may at any time visit Los Angeles. The meetings are held the second Saturday in October, November, January, March, and May.

NEW ENGLAND SCHOLARSHIP AWARDED.

Ethel Chase of the incoming senior class has been awarded the New England Women's Club scholarship. Two other scholarships to be known as the Maria Sanford Scholarships, are to be awarded soon.

NURSES SCHOOL APPLICATION.

The authorities who are specially interested in the school for nurses urge all who desire to make application for admission to that school to do so early as only a limited number of students can be accepted. Application blanks may be obtained at the office of Dean Westbrook or at the office of Dr. Beard in the physiological laboratory.

NEW SOCIETY FORMED.

An organization to be known as the Christian Science Society of the University of Minnesota was formed last Friday night. This society is similar in form and purpose to the Christian Science Societies at Harvard, Michigan and other universities throughout the country.

MINNESOTA MEDICAL DEPARTMENT APPROVED.

The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching has just issued a report upon medical education in the United States. This report is prepared by Abraham Flexner who visited every medical college in the country and who gathered his statistics at first hand and made a personal investigation into conditions surrounding the various medical colleges of the United States. In this report Minnesota is classed with the five or six leading medical colleges of the country. One hundred and fifty-five medical colleges were discussed and very few escaped without some serious criticism, Minnesota being among the few to so escape.

In his introduction to the report Mr. Pritchett, chairman of the foundation, says, that in making the study of the medical schools they have included all kinds of schools on the supposition that the public are equally concerned in proper preparation for the practice of medicine under whatever name the practitioner calls himself. Mr. Flexner discusses the problem of sectarianism in medicine and says, "modern medicine has as little sympathy for allopathy as homeopathy. It simply denies outright the relevancy of value of either doctrine. It wants not dogma but facts." Medical sectarians are criticized for accepting the medical curriculum as it has been worked out on a scientific basis for two years' work and then effecting "a compromise between science and revelation."

The report itself is made under two main heads, the first is devoted to the history of medical education in this country and the setting forth of its present status. The second part summarizes the conditions in each of the medical colleges of the United States and Canada. In tracing the history of medical education in the United States and the effort to procure stricter scrutiny of those seeking to enter the profession, Mr. Flexner refers often to Minnesota as a standard upon which to base his observations. The medical colleges of the country are divided into three main classes, those requiring two or more years of college work, those who demand a high school education, and those demanding little more than a common school education. Of the first class there are only eight complete and fully organized colleges in the United States and Canada, Minnesota being one of the eight. In discussing the cost of medical education to the one seeking the same, Mr. Flexner says that in Baltimore, Philadelphia or Chicago a boy must spend $1,420 for tuition and board for a medical education. The same student at Ann Arbor can get two years of work in the premedical branches and four in the medical college for $1,466, "or, if a large city be preferred, he can get his two years in the admirable premedical laboratories at the University of Minnesota, at Minneapolis, followed by his four-year medical course for a little more." Continuing he says, "the state universities of the west will doubtless lead this movement; for once established on the two-year college basis they will induce the states to protect their own sons and the public health against the low-grade doctors made elsewhere. The University of Minnesota, having by statesman-like action got rid of all other medical schools in the state, is thus backed up by the legislature and the state board."

In speaking of the two leading medical institutions of Canada, McGill and Toronto, the report says: "In point of laboratory equipment they equal Minnesota and Michigan."

Mr. Flexner devotes much space to the discussion of hospital and clinical facilities of the various medical colleges. He argues very strongly for every medical college having its own hospital and congratulates Minnesota on its plan for the Elliott memorial hospital. Mr. Flexner says that no hospital can be considered up-to-date and adequately equipped which is not prepared for teaching and claims that there should be an organic connection between the hospitals and the medical colleges in the localities in which the hospitals are situated, that an ideal situation would include a hospital operated in connection with the medical college and facilities for students to have the privileges of municipal and other hospital institutions.

Mr. Flexner has very few minor criticisms to make on Minnesota's plan. He says that hospitals in direct connection with medical schools of less than 400 or 500 beds will not supply the requisite number of patients for teaching. In this hospital, he says, medical cases should predominate. Mr. Flexner says, "To the clinical laboratories connected with the municipal hospitals of St. Louis, Chicago, Minneapolis, the students have no access, though in these hospitals, rich in material, the students of St. Louis university, Rush and the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Chicago, and the University of Minnesota respectively ought to be getting the best part of their clinical training."

Mr. Flexner submits a summary showing the cost of the maintenance of medical colleges and their incomes from fees. He says that "it is universally conceded that modern medical education cannot be conducted on proper lines on basis of fees received." Mr. Flexner would place the minimum cost of maintenance in four-year schools accommodating 250 students at from $100,000 to $125,000, exclusive of the expense of maintaining hospitals and dispensaries. The report shows that Harvard, Cornell and Columbia with which colleges Minnesota is ranked, have yearly budgets, exclusive of hospital and dispensary expense, of more than $225,000. Minnesota's budget is $71,336 and this amount includes the cost of dispensary and hospital maintenance.

As a whole this report places Minnesota with the few leaders in medical education in the country and is highly commendatory of conditions found here by the investigator.

The following is the text of the special report on Minnesota.

Minnesota.

Population, 2,162,726; number of physicians, 2,204; ratio, 1,981.

Number of medical schools, 1.

Minneapolis-St. Paul, population 552,211.

First—University of Minnesota College of Medicine and Surgery. Organized in 1883, it has, step by step, absorbed all other medical schools in the state, including (1909) the homeopathic department of the University. Elective courses in homeopathic materia medica and therapeutics are offered on condition that students following them shall receive the degree of doctor of medicine in homeopathy.

Entrance requirements: Two years of college work, specifically including the fundamental sciences and a modern language.

Attendance, 174; 83 per cent. from Minnesota.

Teaching staff: Forty-nine professors and 71 of other grades; total, 120.

Resources available for maintenance: State appropriations. The budget calls for $71,336. The income from fees is $16,546.

Laboratory facilities: Excellent, exceedingly attractive and well organized. Laboratories are provided for all the scientific branches. The state laboratory of public health is practically part of the school plant. The instruction is in charge of full-time teachers, generously supplied with books, apparatus and material.

Clinical facilities. The school has hitherto relied on the municipal hospitals and unpaid clinical teachers, with the result, teaching opportunities were both limited in extent and precarious in character. These institutions are, in fact, not organized, equipped or conducted with educational requirements in mind. An appropriation has now been made to build a teaching hospital, and a small temporary hospital has been started. Simultaneously, the clinical teaching has been organized by placing the chiefs in medicine and surgery respectively on salaries that command the interest and efforts of active teachers. The same policy must be applied generally throughout the clinical department.

The dispensary, well attended and long loosely conducted, has recently been reconstructed along the same line.

Date of visit, May, 1909.

General Considerations.

Minnesota is the first state in the union that may fairly be considered to have solved the most perplexing problem connected with the medical education and practice except as to osteopathy. It has, indeed, still to realize its plans for an adequate clinical establishment of modern character; but there is little doubt that this is only a question of time—and of short time, at that. Meanwhile, medical education has, with the active co-operation of the state board, been concentrated in the hands of the university, fortunately situated in the heart of the largest community of the state; the state has got rid of rival schools, regular and sectarian, the latter by perfectly fair provision for separate instruction in sectarian dogmas for any student who is willing to accept a diploma qualified so as to mark that fact.

Since all else, anatomy, physiology, surgery, are common to and the same for all "schools" of medicine, there is one standard of admission to the department, one quality of instruction, one examination for the degree, for all alike.

Finally, the educational preliminary qualification of the state medical school has become the practice preliminary of the state. In future any person desirous to practice medicine in Minnesota must get as good an education—preliminary and professional—as the state furnishes and requires of its own sons; or from the broader standpoint of public interest, to which all else is properly subordinate. Henceforth, the success of the school will depend largely on the generosity of the state in developing the clinical teaching, and on the character of the hospital dispensary which it organized with that in view.

McVEY SPEAKS.

President Franklin McVey, of the University of North Dakota gave the commencement address at Hamline University last week. Dr. McVey's address was in the nature of a defense of college training as a means of acquiring a practical and complete education.

STOUT GETS NEW CHURCH.

Reverend T. W. Stout, '91, pastor of Western Avenue M. E. Church has plans for a new church for that congregation to be erected at Penn and Tenth avenues north. The structure will cost twenty-five thousand dollars and work will be begun almost immediately.

DEATHS.

Mrs. Mahala F. Pillsbury, widow of John S. Pillsbury, "Father of the University", died at her home in this city, Thursday, June 23d. President Northrop gave the memorial address at the funeral. Mrs. Pillsbury was a woman well fitted in every way to be the partner of such a man as Governor Pillsbury and her whole life was marked by quiet deeds of charity and active support of every good work. Much of the success which came to Governor Pillsbury he owed to the devoted support of his wife. For many years, practically ever since the death of Governor Pillsbury, Mrs. Pillsbury has been in poor health and her death at the time was not unexpected.

John Waldo Perkins, '77, died at his home in this city Monday, June 27th, at the age of 59 years. Mr. Perkins' death was not unexpected as he suffered a stroke of paralysis some weeks ago and it was not expected that he would ever fully recover. Mr. Perkins is the second member of '77 to die within a few weeks, Mr. A. P. Hendrickson died May 13th. Of the fifteen members of the class of '77, six have died. Mr. Perkins was born at Morris, Ill. After graduating from the University he studied law. He is survived by his wife to whom he was married in 1903.

Roger Lee Grout, infant son of Professor and Mrs. F. Grout, died June 25th, in this city.
