MINNESOTA SUMMER SESSION

In addition to more than 750 subjects of study covering all fields of educational and scientific interest, especial emphasis is being placed on wartime as well as postwar educational needs. A teaching staff of 600 persons including educators of national and international reputation —plus the splendid facilities of great libraries and laboratories—offer outstanding opportunity for both graduate and undergraduate study. Special courses and workshops for teachers in primary, secondary and higher education. Counseling facilities for returning veterans.

*First term registration, Monday and Tuesday, June 18 and 19.
Second term registration, Monday, July 30. Write now for complete bulletin. Director of Summer Session, 750 Administration Building.*

Some Opening Remarks

Caps and Gowns

THE spring commencement season was opened on May 17 with the traditional Cap and Gown Day program. Preceding the convocation exercises the seniors marched across the older section of the campus and the lines of men and women, mostly women, in caps and gowns parted to form a V as the members of the class entered Northrop auditorium. The scene on the cover was taken as the members of the class of 1945 were entering the auditorium.

Commencement

The 1,400 members of the class will receive their degrees at the commencement exercises in Memorial Stadium on Saturday evening, June 16. The program will start at seven o'clock. Baccalaureate services will be held in Northrop auditorium on Sunday, June 10, at eleven o'clock, with the address being given by Howard Pierce Davis, foreign news correspondent and pastor of the Federated Church in Bolton, Mass.

Alumni Day

The traditional Alumni Day program will be held on the campus on Friday, June 15, with several of the five-year classes holding reunions. The attendance will be confined largely to members of the classes living in the Twin Cities and nearby areas. Details of the Alumni Day program appear elsewhere in this issue. All alumni are invited to attend the annual Alumni Day dinner in Coffman Union at six o'clock on June 15. The occasion will mark the final appearance of Dr. Walter C. Coffey before a general alumni group in his capacity as president of the University of Minnesota. On July 1 he will be succeeded in the presidency by Dr. J. L. Morrill. Dr. Coffey's interest in alumni and the affection of former students for him are such as to make certain that he will be an honored guest at many alumni affairs in the years to come.

Engineer Tradition

Conducted with a minimum of fanfare on May 18 was another traditional event of the spring season on the campus, Engineer's Day. There was no parade and the royalty of the day, Bob Turnacliff of St. Paul in the role of St. Pat, and Madolyn Youse of Baxter Springs, Kansas, as Engineers' Day Queen, made a brief tour of the campus in a midget automobile. The queen was selected from girls enrolled in the Institute of Technology. There was the traditional knighting ceremony and the kissing of the blarney stone. Co-chairmen of Engineers' Day were Ann Huston and Karl Georingsfeld.

Compulsory Training

THE question of compulsory military training in this country is now before Congress and the American people. Public opinion polls have indicated that a majority of citizens are in favor of the adoption of a permanent system of compulsory peacetime military training while there is a division of opinion on the subject among newspaper editorialists and educators.

Opponents of such a training program together with some who favor it in principle argue that congressional action on the matter should be postponed until the war is over. Proponents declare that definite action should be taken right now while the American people are keenly conscious of the desirability of military preparedness.

Opinions

This difference of opinion is illustrated in letters written to the President of the United States early this year by two groups of college and university presidents. In an open letter expressing opposition, to the immediate adoption of compulsory military training, twelve prominent university presidents said:

... We challenge the necessity of urging the American people to act under the tensions of war psychology in order to bring them to a decision which, it is said, they would not reach under more normal conditions. We suggest that experience with the Prohibition Amendment indicates the unwisdom of attempting to determine long-run revolutionary policies in wartime...

Ten days later another group of presidents of fourteen colleges and universities wrote an open letter in which they took issue with the first twelve presidents. They said:

We are better able at this moment to reach a wise decision on this important matter than we will be after the war is over, when again we shall be lulled by a sense of false security. Far from being swayed by "war hysteria" the judgment of the majority is now more sound on this issue than it will be after peace is declared.

In arguing the case for a year of military training for all young men at some period between the ages of 18 and 22 the proponents of the measure list such collateral advantages as educational training, better health and physical development, and training for good citizenship. It would seem that this suggestion of federal regimentation of the health, morals and education of youth might not be expected to appeal to the American people. The one valid argument for compulsory military training is actual military necessity. It must be shown that such a training program is essential to national defense and security. In that case the year should be devoted strictly to training for military duties and not to a miscellany of activities which might better be handled through civilian channels.

As the problem of compulsory military training receives the consideration and study of congressional committees it is possible that alternatives to the straight one-year plan may be developed. Variations of this plan may be more effective in achieving the desired goal of an army of reservists trained in the fundamentals of military combat.

One suggestion takes into account the fact that highly trained men are necessary in modern technical warfare and that such training cannot be given on a mass basis in a one-year period. This plan would make provision for a corps of college-trained specialists and potential officers through what would amount to an extension of the present ROTC programs. The compulsory training period for all youth would be limited to one summer and from the mass of trainees would be selected a certain number for further federally-subsidized education on the basis of ability, inclination and aptitude. In the summer months during their college years these men would be required to serve as instructors in the summer training camps.

Mayo Memorial Speaker

It has been announced that Dr. J. L. Morrill, president-elect of the University of Minnesota, will be one of the speakers at the dinner program in Coffman Union on June 5 sponsored by the Mayo Memorial Committee.

Board of Regents

At the annual business meeting of the Board of Regents of the University of Minnesota on May 11, Fred B. Snyder '31, was elected to serve another two year term as the vice-president and presiding officer of the board. The president of the board is the president of the University, in ex-officio capacity. Mr. Snyder has been a member of the Board of Regents since 1912 and he has served as the presiding officer of the body during the greater part of his period of service.

Elected second vice-president of the board was George W. Lawson of St. Paul. The secretary, ex-officio, is William T. Middlebrook, vice-president of the University in charge of business administration, and the assistant secretary of Laurence R. Lunden, comptroller of the University. Julius Schmahl, state treasurer, serves as treasurer of the board, ex-officio, and Mr. Lawson is the representative of the board on the state board of investment.

The other members of the Board of Regents are James F. Bell, Minneapolis; Daniel C. Gainey, Owatonna; Richard L. Griggs, Duluth; Albert J. Lobb, Rochester; Dr. E. E. Novak, New Prague; A. J. Olson, Renville; Albert Pfaender, New Ulm; Ray J. Quinlivan, St. Cloud; F. J. Rogstad, Detroit Lakes, and Sheldon V. Wood, Minneapolis.

At the meeting the Regents authorized Mr. Middlebrook to acquire block area north of Pioneer Hall known as the Minnesota college property. President Coffey has announced that the building on the property may be used as headquarters for the counseling and testing program for veterans until such time as work may be started on the construction of new dormitories for men which has been proposed.

The Regents also approved an agreement with the War Food Administration under which the University will make tests of the army jeep to determine its usefulness as a source of farm power and transportation. The tests will be conducted at the West Central School of Agriculture at Morris.

Accepted were two scholarships established by the Minnesota and Ontario Paper Company for students in the College of Agriculture, Forestry and Home Economics. Also received was a gift of $1,000 to the student loan fund from the Minnesota State Pharmaceutical Association. This gift will be used for the benefit of students in pharmacy.

Phi Beta Kappa

At the annual Cap and Gown Day convocation on May 17, President Coffey announced the names of students elected to honor societies and also the recipients of the various scholarships and fellowships and other honors offered at Minnesota. Elected to Phi Beta Kappa, honorary scholastic society, were the following members of the class of 1945:

Victor Elving Anderson, Alice Bateson, Angeline Bogucki, Edith A. Bohince, Mary M. Buck, Ferne L. Crispin, M. Jean Danaher, Frances E. Fetter, Joy M. Goldberg, Robert A. Good, Mary K. Harding, Helen H. Hart, Doris L. Heisig, Shirley M. Johnson, Scott D. Johnston, Billie Helen Kolb, Marian G. Kucera, Lorna Jean Mackay, Patricia McKeon, Mun Yum Moy, Shirley Power, Barbara Levine Reinhart, Marguerite L. Rush, John Matthew Saari, Walter E. Strimling, Lenore Strouse, John H. Stumpf, Virginia Taylor, Rosemary L. Thorndike, Janet Vivian, William B. Weil, Judith A. Weiss, Helen L. Wenberg, C. Virginia Worley.

☆ ☆ Faculty ☆ ☆

IT IS expected that many Minnesota faculty members who have been on leave for special war services in science and other fields will return to the campus by next fall. Since July 1, 1940, leaves have been granted to 735 University staff members, academic and civil service, for service in the armed forces or for war-related work for government agencies. In the meantime other members of the faculty are being called to perform special services in connection with war and postwar problems.

To Russia

Dr. Owen H. Wangenstein '22Md, professor of surgery in the Medical School and director of the department of surgery, has been named to a three-man medical mission to Russia. The appointment was made by the Office of Scientific Research and Development of the National Research Council. Other men on the commission are Dr. S. B. Shimkin of the United States Public Health Service and Dr. E. M. Landis of Harvard. The general purpose of the commission will be to exchange medical research findings and other information with the Russians. Dr. Wangenstein has been head of the department of surgery at Minnesota since 1930.

Conference Observer

Miss Katherine J. Densford, director of the School of Nursing at Minnesota, and president of the American Nurses Association, attended the United Nations Security Conference in San Francisco in the role of observer as the representative of the A.N.A.

Heads Mission

Dr. Maurice B. Visscher '24; '31Md, professor and head of the department of physiology in the Medical School is scientific co-director of a privately-financed mediconutritional unit which was scheduled to leave for Italy this month to study conditions in war-ravaged areas. Dr. Ashton C. Cuckler '41Ph.D., assistant professor of zoology in the University, and Marjorie Knowlton '23MdT, junior scientist, are members of the unit.

Two other members of the faculty left the campus this month to participate in a survey of the effect of bombing on civilian morale in Germany. They are Clifford Kirkpatrick, professor of sociology, and Howard P. Longstaff, associate professor of psychology. Both men will return to their University duties at the beginning of the fall quarter.

Honored

Dr. Herbert Heaton, professor of economic history at Minnesota, has been notified of his election as a member of the American Philosophical Society. This Society is the oldest learned society in America and was founded in Philadelphia by Benjamin Franklin before 1850 for the purpose of "promoting useful knowledge." Its members include American and foreign scholars in the physical and social sciences. Professor Heaton is secretary of the Committee on Research in Economic History of the Social Science Research Council. This month he delivered the Schouler Lectures at Johns Hopkins University on the subject "Anglo-American Economic Relations between the Revolution and the War of 1812."

Research Board

President Walter C. Coffey and Dean Clyde H. Bailey of the University Department of Agriculture, attended a meeting of the Agricultural Board of the National Research Council in Washington recently. President Coffey is chairman of the board and Dean Bailey is vice-chairman.

Radio

Dr. Tracy F. Tyler, associate professor of education, was principal speaker at a luncheon marking the twenty-fifth anniversary of radio broadcasting sponsored by the St. Paul Kiwanis club on May 17. Dr. Tyler has been in educational radio for 15 years and is editor of the Journal of the Association for Education by Radio. In his address he called attention to some of the more important events in radio's brief history and paid tribute to its significant achievements, particularly during the war years.

"'Neath Education's Sway"

1945 Cap and Gown Day Address

By DR. WALTER C. COFFEY

As I leave behind me my four years of the presidency, and my twenty years as Dean of the Department of Agriculture, it becomes increasingly apparent to me that no single institution or agency has played a more significant role in shaping the development of this state than the University of Minnesota.

There is scarcely a family in the state with whom it has not had instructional contact; the results of its research have made life better and more secure, in rural and metropolitan areas alike; its services, whether in providing medical care for the sick, in helping the farmer with his problems, or in aiding industry and the professions, ramify throughout the entire population; and culturally we are unquestionably a better people because of the University. A great university must be a dynamic educational influence. The University of Minnesota by this test is a great university.

IT IS customary on Cap and Gown Day for the president to devote himself to one theme pertaining directly to problems of the University, with special reference to scholarship and the achievement of distinction through scholarship. Today, in my last extended address before my retirement as chief executive, I find it almost impossible to focus my thoughts on a single topic. Rather my mind is full of impressions that seek utterance—impressions that cover a variety of subjects, any one of which would, if fully developed, require more time than is available this morning.

Furthermore, the rapidly changing war situation adds to the difficulty besetting anyone who is called upon to address a college audience at such a ceremony. Twice during my lifetime I have witnessed the end of a titanic war in Europe. One cannot experience two major wars, especially if he has been associated with young people of college and university age, without undergoing profound emotional disturbance. The suffering, the destruction of the hopes, the aspirations and the dreams of youth, the death and mutilation of young men of infinite promise, the horror and the calamity of crippled lives—all these, to one of my age, add up to an almost overwhelming sense of tragedy. There is consolation only in the fact that because of the bloodshed, because of the tragedy, because of all the sacrifice, our way of life—the democratic way of life—has for the time being been preserved.

To have succumbed to the doctrines of the Nazis and the Fascists, to have lived in a society in which the ideology of Mein Kampf governed our lives, and the lives of our children, would have been a tragedy and a horror far worse than war itself has brought upon us. Therein lies the hope: once more we have the opportunity to build a world in which people may live in neighborly peace with one another. It is for us to pray that we may not fail in the task now before us. Even our way of life could hardly survive a third world war.

But it is not of war that I plan to talk, but rather about this institution with which I have been so intimately associated for a quarter century.

AS I leave behind me my four years of the presidency, and my twenty years as Dean of the Department of Agriculture, it becomes increasingly apparent to me that no single institution or agency has played a more significant role in shaping the development of this state than the University of Minnesota. On many occasions I have commented that a university has four major functions: it teaches youth; it undertakes research; it offers innumerable services to the people who support it; it stimulates cultural development. Were the University to disappear as with the wave of a magician's wand, everyone would recognize how completely and fundamentally its activities have become interwoven with the fabric of life in Minnesota. There is scarcely a family in the state with whom it has not had instructional contact; the results of its research have made life better and more secure, in rural and metropolitan areas alike; its services, whether in providing medical care for the sick, in helping the farmer with his problems, or in aiding industry and the professions, ramify throughout the entire population; and culturally we are unquestionably a better people because of the University. A great university must be a dynamic educational influence. The University of Minnesota by this test is a great university. It is particularly incumbent upon undergraduates of today to recognize how significant the University's contribution has been, not only to themselves, but to the state as a whole. It may seem strange that I should so strongly emphasize this obligation, and yet out of my experience I have come to realize that often there are people who fail to understand what the University has done toward enriching the life of this state.

I have strong convictions also on a closely related matter; namely, the importance of both pure and applied research in the future welfare of the state. Minnesota does not possess unlimited natural resources of the type from which much wealth has hitherto been drawn. Mines are exhaustible, timber is expendable, even agricultural fertility may diminish. And yet, through the marvels of modern science, riches can be found in sources hitherto undreamed of, if only we would look for them. It is to the search for these sources of future wealth, and to the preservation of those resources which can be indefinitely maintained, that we must devote ourselves if the economic well-being of this state is to be maintained or bettered. All of this was portrayed with compelling clarity in the recent report of the Minnesota Resources Commission.

But where, you ask, is the research talent through which discoveries are made? Where are the facilities that can be tapped in the development of ideas from which significant research conclusions will emerge? Where else, I reply, except at a center of learning such as a university? I am deeply conscious, of course, of how great already the research contribution of the University has been. I know what it has meant that we have improved cereal crops, that we have played our part in the breeding of hybrid corn, that we have successfully produced new fruits and vegetables adapted to this region. (I cite examples from agriculture only because it is the field in which I have first-hand knowledge of accomplishment.) Yet, to my mind, these demonstrable achievements made thus far are but tokens of what might be done. In industry success goes to those concerns that have spent wisely in furthering research; it is no less true that success will likewise come to those states that in the future spend wisely in developing the resources upon which they are dependent for making a livelihood and a good life. It is encouraging that the legislature has within the years of my presidency, and with commendable wisdom, created at the University of Minnesota Institute of Research, and appropriated money, though modestly, for its support. Every effort should be made to strengthen and broaden the University's—the state's—research program.

AS I grow older—and I trust, wiser—I am more and more impressed with the truth that it takes all kinds of people to make a world. Where there are all kinds of people, there will be all kinds of ideas. It is failure to appreciate this truism that seems to cause so much of our trouble today. Intolerance, unwillingness to examine the other fellow's point of view, and stubbornness in holding to one's own, are characteristics that are incompatible with living in an interdependent world. No man of my generation has emphasized this truth with greater forcefulness than Wendell Willkie, and I regard his book, One World, as a noteworthy stimulus to social understanding. In this matter, a university is uniquely in a position to make contributions: first, it can inculcate in its students the realization that human progress evolves from a willingness to study and analyze the ideas that motivate men and women. Second, it can contribute directly to that process of analysis.

There is a vast difference between using a university to propagandize any particular set of ideas, and using a university to study all kinds of ideas. Unfortunately, the general public does not always make the essential distinction that is involved. I hope the time

The most difficult problem my successor will face is that of rebuilding our faculty. The first task is to draw back those eminent members now on leave, many of whom will have countless opportunities and temptations to transfer to other positions when the war is over. In addition it will be necessary to recruit new staff members to assume the load that increased enrollments will impose. . . . Unless our scholars return and unless we attract new and promising young scholars, this institution ten years hence will have dropped from its present place of prestige.

will never come when the University of Minnesota will in any way be hampered in its search for truth and in its critical evaluation of the currents of thought that are forever coursing through our social life. And certainly, the surest protection against the falsity of any doctrine is its exposure under the relentless examination of scholars whose training and background give them the perspective and the judgment to assess its worth.

CLASSROOMS, however, are not the only centers of education, even on a university campus. The late President Lotus D. Coffman used to remark that it would be possible for a person to obtain a considerable education here at the University without ever registering for a class. He was referring, of course, to the richness of our extracurricular offerings. I am always disturbed when I find students who are devoting themselves assiduously to their textbooks and their classes, and who will probably get excellent grades, but who appear to have no wider interests than are represented in the credits they are striving to earn. I am confident that it pays in every respect for students to avail themselves of the convocations, the art gallery, the musical opportunities such as the opera, the Artists Course, and the symphony, the student Forum, the theater, and all of the other programs that are presented for their enjoyment and edification. Frankly, nobody except a "know nothing" is more boring than a specialist who has no outlook beyond his specialty. I have come to realize, too, that in selecting men for positions it is usually important to pick those who can rub intellectual elbows with their fellow men. One can be interesting as well as scholarly, and interest follows from an appreciation of what goes on in the world in various spheres of activity. This is why I believe it is so necessary for the University to continue providing the cultural leadership that broadens the interest of the citizens of the state as well as of its own students.

Material assets help, but they do not constitute a university. The oft-repeated quotation that an ideal university would be a student on one end of a log and Mark Hopkins on another goes to the other extreme, but it serves to emphasize the importance of the teacher and the teaching process. As colleges and universities have grown big, it is my feeling that there has been somewhat of a tendency to give less weight to sound teaching. All too often, I fear, academic promotions have gone to those who wrote books, or engaged in research, to the neglect of those who have been devoting themselves to creative classroom activity. I do not minimize writing and research; I merely observe that there is another function no less important—good teaching. It would seem to me highly profitable for us here at this University to undertake a systematic study of the teaching job we are doing. I have no doubt it would reveal that we are doing a good job; I would hope it would show how we might do a better one, and encourage us to do it.

If educational institutions are to meet their obligations adequately, two conditions are necessary. I have stressed one: they must have eminent faculties. The other is that they must have as students the most promising young men and women available. . . . As citizens of this state, no situation should challenge us more than the apparent waste or diversion of our ablest talent through failure to develop it to the fullest educationally. I say to you that our problem is not that so many students are in college, but that so many potential students of unquestioned competence are not there.

MY REFERENCE to the importance of the teacher should now be broadened to cover the scholar in general. In the last analysis, it is the quality of the staff that gives a university eminence. The unquestioned position of the University of Minnesota results from the reputations that have been earned by its professors—and I use that term inclusively. One has only to scan the list of those from our staff who are on leave for war-related service, or who have served as consultants while still carrying their University duties, to realize how great has been the direct contribution of this University to the war effort. Perhaps the most difficult problem we have faced in the war years is that of trying to retain on the staff the men and women necessary to carry on the University's own work in the face of the pressures and the outright demands by governmental agencies that we release them. No theatre of the war, no important governmental agency, is without a member of staff drawn from our ranks because of his special knowledge or specialized ability.

I have said the most difficult problem we have faced in recent months is keeping the nucleus of a staff. The most difficult problem my successor will face is that of rebuilding our faculty. The first task is to draw back those eminent members now on leave, many of whom will have countless opportunities and temptations to transfer to other positions when the war is over. In addition, it will be necessary to recruit new staff members to assume the load that increased enrollments will impose. This is not only the most important problem President Morrill will face, it is the most crucial, for the future of this institution hangs upon the success with which it is met. Unless our scholars return, and unless we attract new and promising young scholars, this institution ten years hence will have dropped from its present place of prestige. All that I have said earlier about the value of the University to the state depends upon maintaining the quality of staff we now possess. Make no mistake—we shall have a great University only so long as we have a staff of great scholars to carry on its work.

I have mentioned teachers and research scholars and their contribution to the progress of the institution. I should mention, too, the administrative staff. Administration becomes a highly specialized function in a university as large as ours. On one point I am clear: that the purpose of administration is to provide the optimum conditions under which teachers and research workers can perform their functions. Administration is a device, a means for helping to achieve an objective; it must never become an end in itself. I do not believe that what we commonly call "the administration" (in quotation marks) can with propriety attempt to dictate concerning the specialized and intricate teaching or research process. That is a function of the faculty. Likewise, I do not believe that teachers and researchers can or should perform general administrative functions, which are likewise intricate and specialized. To say this is not to deny that there are problems of mutual concern, and that both must function with understanding of the other's intents and purposes. Another difficult problem faced by all large colleges and universities, then, is how to keep open those channels of communication between administration and the teaching and research staffs so that mutual respect and confidence will be maintained and enhanced. No less important is the necessity of devising adequate channels of communication between student bodies and administrators. At the University of Minnesota we have a magnificent staff, we have a student body of whose attitudes and conduct we may well be proud, we have administrative officers who are unselfishly devoted to creating the conditions under which scholarship may flourish. I who am about to retire can say this without prejudice; I can also hope that a sound relationship between these several parts of our academic community will be maintained and strengthened.

IN THE twenty-four years of my association with Minnesota, the University and higher education generally have undergone a great transformation. The University has grown phenomenally in size, and this reflects directly the desire of the people of the state that their sons and daughters should have educational opportunities that will fit them for places of responsibility. This same desire is manifested in the people's support of other public and private institutions of higher education. An intricate educational pattern has emerged. In my judgment, the time has now come when we of this state should examine objectively and critically the educational program we are supporting. I had high hopes that the 1945 legislature would authorize such a study, and I joined with representatives of other educational institutions in urging passage of a bill that would have provided the resources necessary to undertake a state-wide survey of higher education. Unfortunately, this bill was not passed. The need which it proposed to meet still remains. I predict it will become constantly more acute. What should we in Minnesota be doing educationally? How well are we doing it now? What changes in educational thought and practice are called for as a result of the war? How adequately can we provide a desirable education for returning veterans? Are new types of institutions called for? These are typical questions pressing for an answer. Summarized, they become: What should be the state-wide plan for higher education in Minnesota?

Even though the legislature failed to provide the practical encouragement, it would be my hope that the University, in cooperation with the other colleges of the state, might on its own initiative undertake at least the preliminary studies that will help to guide our thinking. It would be unfortunate to allow the interest in these questions that was expressed during the ninety days of the legislative session to atrophy. Here is an opportunity for constructive leadership that should not be overlooked.

Examination of the purposes of higher education generally must be paralleled by institutional self-examination. It is my hope that studies such as those made of the curricula by our Committee on Educational Research will be expanded. This University has acquired an enviable reputation because of its educational studies, the results of which are quoted wherever educators gather to discuss their common problems. Sometimes, however, I become a bit discouraged because we do not with eagerness take the further step to incorporate in our practice the conclusions that the studies suggest. Perhaps I am too impatient. I know we have made significant innovations here, but we shall retain our leadership only as we continue to apply to ourselves the lessons we learn from our studies. I am encouraged by the interest already shown in broadening instruction through the emergence of more general programs of education. Especially at the junior college level. Such programs, it seems to me, contribute to the awakening of that interest in life which I previously stressed. As antidotes to rigorous and early specialization, they are very important and merit far more exploration than we have given them to date, particularly in relation to professional courses. Curriculum reform as exemplified in new programs of general education is cited as but an example of the educational self-scrutiny in which we should continuously engage. As a final word in this connection, I hope we shall concern ourselves particularly with the educational lessons to be learned from the war. Education, if dynamic, must be sensitive to the social climate in which it flourishes. Surely, the impact of war has had its special meanings and its special significance for colleges and universities. It is incumbent upon us to ascertain what these are.

ONE further observation I have kept for the end. If educational institutions are to meet their obligations adequately, two conditions are necessary. I have stressed one: they must have eminent faculties. The other is that they must have as students the most promising young men and women available. We at Minnesota have an exceptional student body, but I am distressed whenever I recall that for every able student in our classrooms there are other potentially able high school graduates who never go on to college, here or elsewhere. You have heard those figures often: of students in this state who stand in the upper tenth of their high school graduating classes, only one in two goes on anywhere to higher education. Of those who graduate in the upper fifth of the high school classes, only one in three moves on to higher education. The ablest youth of this state in large numbers bring their training to an end at the high school level. I think this war in which we are engaged demonstrated beyond argument the importance to a nation of trained men and women. To me it appears as a mistake that as a country we have neglected to continue during the war years the training of an adequate supply of technical personnel. But whether this was a mistake or not, I am dogmatic in declaring that only as we develop in the postwar years the greatest resource we possess, can we as a nation maintain our undisputed power and eminence. That resource is our young manpower. As citizens of this state, no situation should challenge us more than the apparent waste or diversion of our ablest talent through failure to develop it to the fullest educationally. I say to you that our problem is not that so many students are in college, but that so many potential students of unquestioned competence are not there.

These are but a few of my impressions. As it is, the various points I have suggested are not, I fear, woven together into any very coherent form. Rather, I am reminded of my childhood, when I marveled at the elephants in the circus parade. The semblance of a line of march was maintained by the thin thread of elephant trunk holding onto elephant tail. The length of the procession was dependent entirely upon the number of elephants. This suggests a parallel. I suspect my talk to you this morning possesses some of these elephantine qualities, and I can only hope that the fragile connection of idea to idea has not been so tenuous that all sense of line and direction has been lost.

In closing, let me revert to the war. We have been fighting to maintain our ideals and our form of civilization. We believe that our way of life insures for the individual the freedom that we cherish and that has made us, as a people, great. In the growth of our national life, the school, at all levels, has contributed to well-rounded good citizenship as perhaps no other institution has done. What I have been saying, by indirection and through impressions drawn from my life as an educator, is that the future vitality of this country is bound up with the future vitality of our educational system. We must maintain our faith in education in general; in particular, we must maintain our faith in the University of Minnesota.

There is a discarded stanza to the song that we so often sing as an expression of our faith in our country, "My Country 'Tis of Thee." The discarded stanza pays tribute to education. I quote it as the summary and the conclusion of all that I have been saying:

*Our glorious land today,
'Neath Education's sway,
Soars upward still,
Its halls of learning fair,
Whose bounties all may share,
Behold them everywhere,
On vale and hill.*

May our glorious land, and our glorious state as well, continue to soar upward, "'Neath education's sway!"

The normal four-year college period of the class of 1945 has covered four years of the presidency of Dr. Walter C. Coffey. He will make the charge to the class at the Commencement exercises in Memorial Stadium on the evening of Saturday, June 16, and will present the diplomas to the 1,400 graduating seniors. The class of 1945 is also a truly war class. Those who are completing four years of college work entered the University just a few months before the United States entered the present war. On July 1, Dr. Coffey will turn the duties of the presidency over to Dr. J. L. Morrill.

V-E Day on the Campus

The following is a portion of the statement made by President Walter C. Coffey at the V-E Day convocation in Northrop auditorium on May 8 marking the end of the war in Europe. The auditorium was filled to capacity for the occasion. Except for the convocation hour, University classes were held as usual.

THE German armies have surrendered unconditionally. Three years ago the war situation was vastly different from what it is today. Nearly all of western Europe was then under the domination of the Axis powers. England was in great peril. Night after night the German air forces were scarcely checked in their bombing of London and other English cities. Even the stoutest hearts in England were wondering if a German invasion could be prevented. Day after day many English people were grateful that England had survived for one more day. The German armies were penetrating deeper and deeper into Russia. Only very rash people in this country dared to predict that Russia would ultimately repulse Germany. Most of us were quite convinced that she would collapse and fall into German hands. If we could, many of us would remove from the records some of the things we said three years ago about Russia's inability to stand up to her foe.

Today, then, two of the great Axis powers are conquered. I have no basis upon which to predict how long Japan will remain in the fight. She may capitulate soon, or she may hold out for months, even years, but there can be no doubt now as to an ultimate Allied victory. However, as much as we hope and pray for an early conclusion of the conflict with Japan, we must not underestimate what may be ahead in concluding the war with her.

We are thankful to the point of rejoicing over the fact that the armies of Germany have surrendered. But her surrender, we know, does not conclude the war. And therefore we are not here to celebrate a final victory. We are here to pay homage to all of our young men and women who have laid aside the pursuits of civilian life to fight and perhaps to die in order that human justice, freedom, and the dignity of the individual man shall not be destroyed. Day-by-day accounts of the progress of the war on sea, on land, and in the air have served as eloquent testimonials of what they have done to bring Germany to the point of surrender. With due credit to our Allies and with no intention of boasting, we know that without the contributions of the American forces Germany would not yet be overcome. May we vividly realize and may we never forget how valiantly our young Americans have fought, what hardships they have endured, and what sacrifices they have made that we may remain free.

Especially are we here in reverent remembrance of the students and alumni of this great institution, who, with thousands of others, have made the supreme sacrifice for the cause for which we fight. May all to whom they were personally dear be comforted by the thought that they could not have given their lives for a greater cause. May they feel that their lives, though cut short, completed a mission never to be forgotten by a grateful nation. And we are here, too, to express our gratitude to those who served faithfully and suffered severe injuries. Many of them, no doubt, were deeply disappointed because they were not in the combat at the time of Germany's surrender. We want them to know that we respect them and have faith in their ability to find important places for themselves in civilian life.

At this time we should all rededicate ourselves to the task of winning the war. This is no time to let down, no time to allow our high resolves to weaken. In every respect the men and women who are to continue in the war need and deserve our encouragement and support. Their assignments in facing a fanatical and desperate foe will be extremely difficult. There will be little of exciting adventure and glamour in what they will have to do. We shall fail our duty if we do not back them to the limit.

We suffer no illusions about the tasks we shall face when the war is over. Immediately there arise countless problems in the war-devastated countries of Europe. There is the military burden of policing central Europe. Many of our soldiers who are longing for home will have to be held for that duty. An immediate and most crucial problem is the feeding and the nursing of millions of sick and starving liberated Allies back to normal health. We must be willing to do our full share in helping to solve this problem of rehabilitation, even if it involves much self-denial on our part. And for a considerable period, at least a year, it will require self-denial, for it will take time for the people in the liberated countries to get back on a basis of normal food production and distribution.

The victory in Europe is but one step toward the great objective of this war, which is to bring about world conditions that will prevent wars in the future. Thinking on how to attain this objective is truly sobering, so much so that we repeatedly hear the statement, "Building a lasting peace is more difficult than winning the war." Although it will be most difficult, we are convinced of the absolute necessity of achieving this objective. How can the world go through another struggle such as the present global war without setting human progress back thousands of years? How can human kind withstand in another war worse bombings and other ingenious methods of destruction more terrible than have been employed in this war? How can human kind withstand another round of atrocities, enslavement, and horrible persecution such as has occurred in this war and hope to make advances in civilization?

Fortunately, we are not waiting until the close of the war before beginning to plan for peace. We owe a great debt to our lately departed President for the contributions he made to peace planning. The conferences at Bretton Woods, at Dumbarton Oaks, and at Chapultepec each had significance in connection with preparation for peace. This morning we turn our eyes to the San Francisco Conference with quite as much expectation, anxiety, and concern as we do to the places where the war is still in progress. The responsibilities of the delegates are no less than the responsibilities of the higher ranking officers of the Army and the Navy. They must exercise fair-mindedness, wisdom with respect to human relations, and manage to come to an understanding under which plans for permanent world peace can go forward. We shall win the war; we must win the peace.

Minnesota Athletics

Veterans

WEARERS of the gold discharge buttons from the armed forces have played important roles in Minnesota athletics during the present school year. On the Gopher baseball team are seven men who have received their discharges from the army, navy or marine corps. They are Hockey Mealey and Bob Graiziger, catchers; Wayne (Red) Williams, second base; Earl Bruhn, outfielder; Bob Schmuck, Jim Nelstead and Joe Tufigno, pitchers.

On the 1944 football team were Rudy Sikich, Vic Kulbitski, Mealey, Graiziger, Williams and Matthew (Mutsy) Nolan. On the basketball team this past winter were Walter Rucke, who was wounded in action while serving as a navy medical corpsman in the Pacific, and Henry Bishop. Vern Ruotsalainen, who placed third in low board diving in the national collegiate swimming championships this year, has a medical discharge from the navy. On the track team are Ray Tharp, star hurdler and broad jumper, and Armin Baumann, who hold medical discharges from the navy. Stew Cornell of the tennis team has his discharge from the marine corps.

Baseball

When two games were rained out at Ann Arbor on May 4 and 5, the Minnesota baseball team traveled to Iowa City for a game with the Iowa Pre-Flight team on Monday, May 7. That contest was also canceled because of rain and the Gophers had all the trip for nothing.

On May 11 and 12, the Gophers of the diamond defeated Iowa State, 17 to 7, in the first game of a two-game series, and 4 to 1, in the second. Each team had six errors, the visiting pitcher issued 15 bases on balls, and Minnesota players stole 13 bases. Minnesota got ten hits to six for Iowa State. The second contest was a good ball game, with Gene Kelly, Gopher pitcher, allowing only five hits and striking out ten opponents. The Iowa State pitcher gave eight hits and fanned six men. Butz

Lehrman got a double and a triple and Bob Graiziger got two doubles.

Wisconsin athletes took the measure of the Gophers in three sports on May 18 and 19. At Madison the chances for a baseball title for Minnesota received a severe setback when the Badgers won both games of a two-game series. The score in both games was 2 to 1.

Also at Madison the Wisconsin tennis team defeated the Gophers in that sport, 6 to 3. In a dual meet in Memorial stadium on May 19, the Minnesota track team won first place in eight of the 13 events but lost to the Badgers, 61 to 56. Wisconsin strength in the distance events brought the margin of victory. Minnesota first place winners were Ray Tharp, low hurdles and broad jump; Gil Gaarder, discus throw and shot put; George Kilen, high jump; Jack Anderson, 440-yard dash; Mark Brownstein, 100-yard dash, and Bob Cranston, 120-yard high hurdles.

Honors

Arnold (Butz) Lehrman was announced as the winner of the Conference Medal at the Cap and Gown Day exercises on May 17.

Two Minnesota swimming team members, Vern Ruotsalainen and Vern Ojampa, received places on the 1945 all-America collegiate swimming team selected by the College Swimming Coaches Association of America. In the national intercollegiate meet, Ruotsalainen won third place in low board diving and Ojampa placed fifth in the 200-yard breaststroke event.

Postwar Sports

Postwar developments in the department of athletics and physical education at Minnesota will find the program of physical training being conducted on a vastly broader scale than ever before, in the opinion of Dr. Lou Keller, acting director of the department.

He is particularly interested in the competitive phase of the program and declares that intercollegiate competition for the greatest possible number of students is desirable because of its incomparable values in physical development and training. He favors a large expansion of all forms of sports with this in mind.

"We are definitely planning in this direction," says Dr. Keller. "We know we will need more outdoor facilities, and new indoor facilities on a considerable scale. We are working right now toward a large winter sports arena which will enable us to carry on simultaneously intercollegiate, intramural, and individual student and faculty activities. We hope to see speed skating, figure skating and curling developed on an exhibition and intercollegiate competitive scale.

"The thinking all around the conference," continues Dr. Keller, "is in terms of more than one team in each sport. For instance, in football we might see varsity, middle-weight, and light-weight teams playing a full schedule in competition with other universities. The reason for this trend is the acknowledged superiority of competitive sports to organized mass drill in ultimate benefits to the individual.

"We recognize the impending need for expanded orthopedic gymnasium activities which we refer to in our curriculum as 'individual activities,' with emphasis on play, for the physically handicapped. There is a definite psychological value to this type of physical rehabilitation."

Dr. Keller foresees great expansion and development in the field of industrial recreation which has become "definitely of age" under the current war-time stress on manpower. Says he, "Hundreds of the largest industrialists in the nation have found an industrial recreation program within their organization highly worthwhile in improving efficiency and fostering favorable labor relations. We people in our work take cognizance of this trend.

"In expanding our teacher-training program after the war, as we must certainly do, we will aim to fill the needs for supervisors in industrial recreation, as well for a greatly increased number of physical education instructors for high schools and communities. Despite the shortage of qualified supervision, high schools throughout the nation are placing more emphasis on physical education than ever before," he concluded.

Alumni Day Program to Be Held on June 15

COMMON in the letters from alumni in service to the Alumni office are statements that the writers look forward to campus visits and especially at class reunion time when they will have the pleasure of visiting with classmates and faculty members. In London, in France and Germany, in Hawaii and in the islands of the far Pacific, Minnesota graduates and former students have held little meetings whenever two or three or more Minnesotans could get together. These chance meetings in strange lands have been miniatures of the class reunions on the campus and the dinner events sponsored by Minnesota alumni clubs which will be held after the war is over.

During the war years the annual Alumni Day program in June on the campus has been curtailed although not discontinued. The continuity of the reunions of the five-year classes has been maintained although attendance has been smaller than usual and made up largely of class members living in the Twin Cities and nearby areas. The class officers of the more recent class groups have continued their reunion committee organization whenever possible with an eye to the future when it will be convenient for all class members to attend meetings on the campus.

Alumni Day Dinner

The annual Alumni Day dinner is a traditional event to which all graduates and former students of the University are invited whether or not they are members of classes holding five-year reunions. Before the war it was held in the beautiful ballroom of Coffman Union with five hundred or more in attendance. In the war years it has been necessary to hold the event in the Union cafeteria because of the shortage of helpers. It was hoped by the committee that it might be returned to the ballroom this year with the service on a self-serve wartime basis.

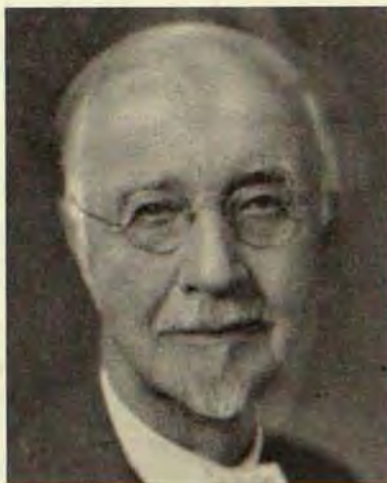

Each year Alumni Day on the campus is the day preceding the commencement exercises in June. The date this year will be Friday, June 15, with the commencement program on Saturday, June 16. By tradition, the reunion committee of the twenty-five year class is in charge of the general arrangements for the Alumni Day program.

Class Reunions

The committee of the class of 1920 has held several meetings to discuss plans for the general program of the day and also for the Silver Anniversary reunion of that class. The class chairman is Leif Gilstad and the secretary is Robert Gile. Co-chairmen of the committee for the 1920 class reunion in the Junior ballroom in Coffman Union on June 15 are Elizabeth Nissen and Mrs. Frank Tupa (Mabel Ashenden). Other committee chairmen are Herbert Lewis, Vincent Johnson and James Gray.

One of the highlights of the luncheon program on Alumni Day each year is the program for the members of the earlier classes sponsored and arranged by the Minnesota Alumnae club. This event will be held this year in Coffman Union.

Judge Andrew Holt '80, who received his degree from the University of Minnesota 65 years ago this June, will be one of the distinguished guests at the annual luncheon for members of the earlier classes given by the Minnesota Alumnae Club on Alumni Day, June 15. Judge Holt was 90 on May 20. A member of the Minnesota supreme court for more than 30 years, he retired on October 6, 1942, and was recalled in August, 1943, to serve as a court commissioner. Judge and Mrs. Holt live at 324 Prospect Avenue, Minneapolis.

L. A. (Bert) Page is chairman of the class of 1900 committee and Dr. W. F. Braasch of Rochester is secretary.

The chairman of the 1905 reunion committee is Bess Healy. This class will hold a reunion luncheon program in Coffman Union on Alumni Day with Harry Gerrish of Minneapolis as toastmaster.

The members of the class of 1910 will meet at a reunion luncheon in Coffman Union on June 15. Chairman of the 1910 reunion committee is Theodore Thomson and Mrs. Lucille Collins Dooley is secretary.

J. Burns Allen is general chairman of the class of 1915 reunion committee with Arthur Erdall as chairman for Minneapolis and Dr. M. E. Bonner as St. Paul chairman. Walter Collier is treasurer and Barbara Healy is publicity chairman. The reunion luncheon of the class will be held in Coffman Union on June 15 and the group will join with the members of the other reunion classes at the Alumni Day dinner at six o'clock.

The chairman of the twenty-year group, the class of 1925, is Sam Campbell. This class reunion committee has met to make plans for a luncheon to be held in Coffman Union on Alumni Day. The classes of 1930, 1935 and 1940 have not yet announced any plans for reunion luncheons but special tables will be reserved for the members of these classes at the Alumni Day dinner.

A member of the class of 1920 will be selected to serve as toastmaster at the Alumni Day dinner. The program will include brief responses from representatives of the five year reunion classes during the introduction of the various class groups. President Walter C. Coffey will speak briefly and bring the greetings of the University.

The class of 1896 will hold its annual Alumni Day meeting in Room 315 in Coffman Union on June 15 at four o'clock. Plans for the Fiftieth Anniversary reunion of the class in 1946 will be discussed. Following the meeting the members will attend the Alumni Day dinner. Dr. Henry A. Erikson is class president and Mary H. Church is secretary.

★ The Reviewing Stand ★

Air Transport Command

IN THE March issue of Minnesota History, quarterly magazine published by the Minnesota Historical Society is an article on the Air Transport Command by Major Arthur J. Larson '26; '38Ph.D., assistant historical officer of the Air Transport Command. Major Larsen is on leave of absence as superintendent of the Minnesota Historical Society and is stationed in Washington, D. C.

Duluth City Engineer

Arthur H. Tews '24E, has been appointed city engineer of Duluth. For the past 14 years he has been a project engineer with the Minnesota Highway Department and since 1933 has been in charge of paving projects in the Duluth area. He has supervised the construction of a number of state highway improvements within Duluth and surrounding areas. Mr. and Mrs. Tews (Opal Schlough '27) and their two children live at 3015 Branch Street, Duluth.

Heads Committee

Walter H. Wheeler '06 Mines, of Minneapolis, has been named chairman of the Committee on Education of the National Society of Professional Engineers. He succeeds Dean S. C. Lind of Minnesota's Institute of Technology and is the first man to hold the chairmanship who was not a professional educator.

The committee will make a study of the systems of education, the courses of study and requirements for engineering degrees at the various engineering colleges, both here and abroad, with a view to recommending changes that will raise the standards and broaden the scope of college training of professional engineers.

The Minnesota legislature, at the session just closed, amended the license law for professional engineers in Minnesota, establishing more exacting requirements for admission to practice. The work of Mr. Wheeler's committee deals with the source of training for candidates. It is part of a general movement to aid not only Minnesota, but the entire nation to cope more successfully with the difficult problems and the intense competition in industry which seem certain to follow the great war.

Mission to Italy

Dr. James E. Perkins '30Md, director of the Division of Communicable Diseases of the New York State Department of Health, will be a member of the Italian Medical Nutrition Mission which will go to Italy this summer under contract with UNRRA. The director of the Mission will be Dr. Maurice B. Vischer '31Md, professor of physiology in the Medical School of the University. Dr. Perkins lives at 12 Douglas Road, Delmar, N. Y.

Appointment

Judge John A. Weeks '24L, of the Minneapolis Municipal court, was elevated to the Hennepin County District bench by appointment of Governor Edward J. Thye on May 16. He was named to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge Vince A. Day. He is a former assistant attorney general of Minnesota and for several terms was a member of the house of the state legislature. Judge Weeks was appointed to the Municipal bench on July 28, 1942, by Governor Harold E. Stassen. He served in the navy during the first World War. He is a member of the reunion committee of the class of 1924 and was active in the program of the class on Alumni Day last June when the class held its twentieth reunion.

In the News

Ben W. Palmer '11; '13L, past president of the General Association, is a candidate for re-election to the Minneapolis Library Board. Mr. Palmer, prominent Minneapolis attorney, has been a member of the board for 13 years.

Congressman Everett Dirksen '18, of Illinois, who was one of the speakers at the class of 1918 reunion on the campus two years ago is now on a trip around the world to study conditions in various countries. He will return to Washington in June.

Walter Greaza '18, has a starring role on Broadway in "The Overtons." Also in the cast are Arlene Francis and Glenda Farrell. Mr. Greaza is secretary of Actors' Equity. On Sunday evenings his voice is heard on the radio program, "The Crime Doctor."

In Europe on a USO Camp Show tour is Actress Dodee Wick (Hilda Ekstrom '28), wife of James L. Wick '18, of New York City. She is a member of the cast of the production, "Night of January 16," which is now playing at camps in France. She has appeared in several Broadway productions.

Authors

Professor Paul Work '21Ph.D., of the department of Vegetable Crops at Cornell University, is the author of a new book "Vegetable Production and Marketing," recently published by John Wiley & Sons of New York.

Published during the past winter by Bruce Humphries, Inc., of Boston, was a book of poems entitled "Hail Tomorrow" by Lester N. Rechtenwald '30Ed, school administrator and lecturer. Throughout his philosophical poems, the author pays tribute to the valiant group of men and women whose unimpaired visions try to penetrate beyond the war-ridden, heavy-laden horizons to see a new Tomorrow. During the war years, Mr. Rechtenwald has been a counsellor in the military area in the South.

Chemistry Honor

A former member of the faculty of the University of Minnesota, Frank C. Whitmore, has been selected as the 1945 recipient of an outstanding award in the field of chemistry, the Willard Gibbs Medal. The award is made annually by the Chicago section of the American Chemical Society for outstanding contributions in pure or applied chemistry. Since 1929, Dr. Whitmore has been dean of the School of Chemistry and Physics of Pennsylvania State College. On the national jury of eminent chemists which makes the annual selection is Dr. Francis C. Frary '95Ch; '12Ph.D., of the Aluminum Company of America.

Alumni General Officers in U. S. Army

News of 14 Minnesotans with general officer rank in the U. S. Army in the present war has appeared in the Minnesota Alumnus and it is possible that other former students in the University have become general officers since last reports received.

The picture above was taken in April, 1943, when Major General John E. Dahlquist '18, was entertained by a group of his classmates in Minneapolis. He was one of the editors of the 1918 Gopher. Shown with the guest of honor, then a brigadier general, are, left to right, Seeman I. Kaplan, Jr., Frank Mayer, Charles M. Denny, Ward H. Olmsted and Ralph Beal.

MINNESOTANS throughout the world are playing a leading role in the execution of the war and many former students hold positions of high rank in various branches of the army. Recently one of our active alumni achieved international recognition for his part in the surrender of Germany. To date Major General John E. Dahlquist '18, commander of the Thirty-sixth (Texas) division, Seventh army, has accepted the surrender of three ranking Axis notables. Field Marshal Gen. von Rundstedt, Germany's top military strategist, the first to be taken, was captured near Munich. Adm. Nicholas Horthy, fallen regent of Hungary, was next and Reichsmarshal Herman Goering, once the second ranking Nazi, gave himself up with his family near Kitzbuhel. General Dahlquist entered the regular army in 1917 and served as mayor of Coblenz, Germany, in World War I. In this war he was assistant chief of staff for personnel, attached to headquarters U. S. forces in the British Isles with headquarters in London. In July, 1942, he became deputy chief of staff to General Eisenhower and subsequently he was made commanding general of the Thirty-sixth division. Mrs. Dahlquist is the former Ruth Dampier '18.

Other officers with specialized training in infantry tactics include: Brig. Gen. Edmund L. Butts '38Ex, Col. Walter D. Luplow '17E, Col. Louis H. McKinlay '03Ex (retired), Col. James B. Woolnough '02Ex, Col. Theron G. Methven '14A, Col. Harold S. Nelson '11L, Col. Nels Stadig '13Ex, Brig. Gen. Henning Linden '17E, now assistant divisional commander of the famed Rainbow Division with the Seventh army in France, and Brig. Gen. Erle D. Luce '07L, who retired from active duty in 1927 but has served more than one and one-half years in this war in various points in the United States.

Col. Alfred C. Ott '15A, who has been overseas three years, is in Belgium at present. Although he holds a commission in the field artillery, he has been working with the service of supply recently. Col. Arnold W. Shutter '16MA, who was in the Pacific with the field artillery, is now temporarily on duty at San Raphael, California. Col. John F. Robohm '28E; '29Ed, has returned to his duties at Boys Vocational high school in Minneapolis after three years' duty in the United States.

Brig. Gen. Stanley R. Mickelsen '19Ex, is U. S. army chief of staff of the displaced persons branch of supreme Allied headquarters. A veteran of World War I, he is on his second overseas assignment since the beginning of this war. Before being transferred to Europe last November, he served for one and one-half years in Iceland. Brig. Gen. Richard F. Cox '08ME, and Col. Willis Shippam '09ME, hold their commissions in coast artillery also.

Famous for his excellent work in the New Guinea sector in getting vitally needed airport facilities constructed against overwhelming difficulties is Maj. Gen. Leif J. Sverdrup '21CE, member of the engineer corps. Col. William B. Ladue (retired), '89A, and Edward H. Coe '19E; '26CE, also are members of the engineer corps.

Col. James J. Weeks '13D, is dental surgeon of the Chicago Schools of the AF Technical Training Command. Col. Sam F. Seeley '28Md, is overseas with the medical corps. Col. Carl S. Williamson '26MS in surgery, is post surgeon and commanding officer of the AAF regional hospital at San Antonio, Texas. Col. Abner Zehm '28Md, and Col. Edward J. Tracy '30Md, are overseas. Brig. Gen. Fred W. Rankin '16-20Gr, Col. Frank T. Cavanor '10Md, Col. William L. Hoffman '04Md, and Col. Carroll D. Buck '97Md, are members of the army medical corps.

Col. Peter E. Skanse '18Ex, served 15 months with the air corps in the Pacific. Brig. Gen. Newton Longfellow '13Ex, an expert on bombardment, has served with the air corps in the European area in both wars and has won several awards for gallantry and skill.

MAJ. GEN. SVERDRUP '21

Brig. Gen. Raymond E. McQuillan '11E, is commander of the newly-established Southwestern Sector of the Eastern Defense Command with headquarters at Fort Sam Houston, Texas. Brig. Gen. Robert W. Grow '16E, is in command of an armored division. Major General George Ralph Meyer '08Ex, army officer since 1911, is commanding general of the anti-aircraft command of the Panama Canal department. Brig. Gen. George John Bohn '12Ex, and Col. Edwin C. McNeil '04Ex, also serve in the regular army.

To this list we must add the names of two ranking Minnesotans who have died in this conflict. Brig. Gen. Carlyle Wash '11Ex, was killed in the crash of an army transport plane in 1943. Col. R. S. Kent Nelson '00Md, died in Minneapolis last November, a month before his scheduled retirement.

Alumnae Club

AT THE annual meeting of the Alumnae Club the following officers were elected: Mrs. May H. Findley, president; Miss Cecelia Nelson, first vice-president; Miss Maryann Fitzpatrick, second vice-president; Miss Carolyn Anderson, treasurer; Mrs. William K. Ergen, assistant treasurer; Miss Ione Jackson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Marie Nehls, assistant corresponding secretary; Mrs. William Klein, recording secretary; Mrs. Alice Buzzell, auditor; Miss Harriet Wood, first director; Mrs. R. M. Chapman, second director; Mrs. Rudolph Peterson, third director; Mrs. Knox Powell, fourth director; Miss Rose Kotask, fifth director.

On May 19 the annual Scholarship Benefit Bridge Tea was held in Coffman Memorial Union. The Junior Group was in charge, with Miss Agnes Aga as chairman of the event.

Esther Williams '35Ed, has been awarded the Anna Elizabeth Cook scholarship for graduate study next year at Teachers College, Columbia University. She will continue her studies in the field of the language arts.

Jeanette Dorsey '40Ed, is in Calcutta, India, as recreation program director for the Red Cross. She formerly was musical director at the Phyllis Wheatley house in Minneapolis. One of her pupils, Hilda Moses Simms '41Ex, has become a sensation on Broadway.

Margery Nash '31Ex, is attached to the United States embassy in London and lately had the unforgettable experience of being among those privileged to attend the memorial service for President Roosevelt in St. Paul's Cathedral.

Lt. Margaret Gadacz Wade '33Ed, is stationed at Camp Pickett, Virginia, as a physiotherapist. She served fifteen months in England and Ireland. Her husband, Lt. Col. Clearfield P. Wade, is also stationed at Camp Pickett.

Minnesota Women

Mrs. R. E. Saunders (Merle Lightner '43L) is living at 117 Lindberg Street, San Mateo, California.

Violet Smith '40Gr, is director of public relations for the Santa Barbara, California, city schools.

Carol Aichele '43Jour, is woman's page editor on the Rochester, Minnesota, Post-Bulletin.

Jean E. Gee '41Ex, is a member of the nursing and teaching staff at St. Timothy's Hospital at Robertsport, Cape Mount, Liberia, South Africa.

Eleanor Needham '35Ex, of St. Paul is an art teacher for the St. Paul Public Schools.

Jayne Wiethoff '41Ex, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Wiethoff '09D, will leave May 25 for Washington where she will take overseas training for the American Red Cross.

Ida M. Friedman '30A; '37BS, is librarian at the Hibbing Public Library, Hibbing, Minnesota. She lives at 2415 Third Ave. W.

Dorothy Long '42Ex, is a cadet nurse at Columbus Hospital, Seattle, Washington.

Dormitories

Plans are being drafted for an addition to Comstock Hall, residence for women students, but no construction can be started until building materials are made available. The rider attached to the appropriations bill in the legislature which rules that no state monies may be used in the construction of dormitories for University students is another obstacle.

Another change in the housing accommodations for women students will be the removal of the 12 University co-op cottages in the Beacon Street area to the site on University Avenue between Sanford Hall and the Pharmacy medicinal gardens. This will be done in June and the move is made necessary by the plans for the new Mechanical-Aeronautical building which will be erected in the area between the Armory and the Electrical Engineering building when materials become available. This will take space from the athletic field and the field will be extended into the area now occupied by the co-op cottages.

Alumni War Prisoners Released

From Europe and from the Philippines this month came the good news of the release of additional men and women from the prison camps of the Germans and the Japanese.

Robert E. Straub '40AeroE, recently arrived in San Francisco from the Philippines and was met by his father, J. W. Straub of Dubuque, Iowa. He went to Manila in August, 1941, as a meteorologist for Pan-American Airways and was interned in the Santo Tomas prison camp at the outbreak of the war. He was a member of the health and sanitation department of the camp. Following a vacation at his home in Dubuque he will resume his duties with the Pacific-Alaska division of Pan-American.

In Philippines

Other Minnesotans have been released in the Philippines area and their safety reported. In 1939 Mr. and Mrs. John H. Blair '21Pharm, went to Manila where he served as special representative of the Eli Lilly Co. They were captured at the fall of Manila and were interned at Santo Tomas. At one time Mr. Blair was maltreated by the Japanese for alleged "political activity" and removed to a military prison. However, he escaped from the prison and is safe with Mrs. Blair at Santo Tomas. He now is hospitalized there and as soon as practicable they will return to the States.

Mr. Lyle G. James '21Ed, and Mrs. James (Elizabeth Legaard '19A) and their two children, Patsy and Peter, recently were rescued from southern Luzon by an American flying boat. Mrs. James and their children now are in Minneapolis after evading the Japanese for more than three years in the jungles. Mr. James remained in the Philippines.

Freed in Germany

With the recent military defeat of Germany, numerous Minnesotans have been released from prison camps and some have already been returned to the States. T/Sgt. Jack R. Landy '45Ex, prisoner of war at Belgrade and later transferred to Lubeck, has been released by the British and is hospitalized in England. Sgt. Walter C. West '44Ex, was liberated April 25 from Stalag 8A. He was reported captured December 16.

Lt. Robert Thomson '41Ex, Flying Fortress pilot, who had been a prisoner of the Germans since his plane was shot down August 12, 1943, has been liberated by American troops and now is in Bern, Switzerland, on his way home. Lt. Thomson was freed from the Moosberg prison camp near Munich. Lt. Thomson was commissioned in the coast artillery when called to active service in July, 1941, and transferred to the army air forces in June, 1942. Sgt. Donald R. Bergquist '41Ex, First army infantry, who had been missing in action in Germany since December 21, was liberated by British troops on April 18. He was wounded December 18 and taken prisoner the same day. On April 22 he was evacuated by air to England. Lt. Warren H. Nord '39Ag, and Hy Schumeister '38Ex, recently liberated from German prison camps by advancing Russian armies, are home on leave. Lt. Nord was captured in December in Belgium and held in two camps before released. Lt. Schumeister was wounded when taken prisoner in

HAROLD VAN EVERY '40

Italy in 1944 and was in Nazi hospitals and camps for eight months. Lt. Carson Fleming '39Ex, was freed from a German prison camp on May 2. Pfc. Conrad J. Hansen '42Ex, captured January 8 in Belgium, has been released from a prison camp and is hospitalized in England. Lt. Donald B. (Jack) Barnett '42Ex, prisoner of the Germans since last December, has been liberated.

After two years and three months in a German prison camp, Lt. Frankie Wolinski '43Ex, is coming home. He was liberated by American forces in the last final drive. Capt. Harold Van Every '40Ed, former Gopher halfback, who was captured a year ago by Germans while on his fourth mission over Germany as a Flying Fortress pilot, has been released.

A visitor in the Alumni office this month was a distinguished member of the class of 1890, Victor S. Clark, of Washington, D. C., who stopped in Minneapolis for a visit with friends while on his way from San Francisco to Washington. Mr. Clark is the author of numerous works on labor conditions in various countries of the world and is a former editor of The Living Age and member of the editorial staff of the Atlantic Monthly. For several years following graduation from the University, Mr. Clark was a public school administrator in Minnesota and later served as superintendent of public instruction in Puerto Rico. He conducted studies of foreign and insular labor conditions and from 1910 to 1913 was commissioner of immigration, labor and statistics in the Territory of Hawaii.

Edward P. Burch '92E; '98Gr, who concluded a career in electrical engineering in 1930 to become a geologist, died of a heart attack May 4 in Boston while en route to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Imogene Woolcott, in New York. At the time of his death, Mr. Burch was conchologist for the University and recently had returned from Cuba where he spent the winter gathering specimens for the University. He was donor of a large collection of shells to the University and for the past three years had been engaged in classifying the University's collection.

From 1892 to 1899 he was electrical engineer for the Twin City Rapid Transit Company and also was engaged in railway engineering research. He taught railway engineering at the University for seven years while practicing as a consulting engineer in Minneapolis. In 1915 he became consulting engineer for the Detroit Electric Railway Company and later worked on electric railway rates in Cleveland. He installed the first underground high tension electrical system in the United States in Minneapolis and installed the original Stillwater, Minnesota electrical service as well as other power system equipment throughout the state. In 1930 he retired from electrical engineering and went back to school to learn geology and in 1938 he organized the Geological Society of Minnesota. He was a member of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, Phi Gamma Delta fraternity and the Minneapolis Engineers' Club of which he was president in 1905. Lewis E. (Scoop) Lohmann '21L,

409 Veterans Attending Classes

LEIGH H. HARDEN '32Ag; '38Gr, director of the University Bureau of Veterans' Affairs, reported this month that there are 409 veterans of the present war attending the University of Minnesota this quarter. This is an increase of 29 over the winter quarter figures. Fifty-six of these students are married. They are enrolled as follows: Arts College, 112; Institute of Technology, 91; Dentistry, 36; General College, 34; Agriculture, Forestry and Home Economics, 28; General Extension Division, 31; College of Education, 19; Graduate School, 17; Law School, 16; Business Administration, 10; Medicine, 5; Public Health Nursing, 3; University College 3, and Pharmacy, 5.

Plans are being made for a return engagement of the Metropolitan Opera Company in Northrop auditorium, probably during the first week in May, 1946. Sell-out audiences attended the four performances in the auditorium last month. . . . The final courses in the engineering, science and management war training program at the University were started early in May. The government has announced that the training courses for men and women in industry will be discontinued on June 30. During the war period the Federal government has paid the tuition of students enrolled in these courses.

Miss Cherry Cedarleaf of St. Paul, Medical freshman, was elected president of the all-University Council this month. Other officers named were Marion Holbrook '46A, vice-president; Enid Erickson '47Ed, secretary, and Jean Northrop '46A, treasurer. . . . Bob Haney, member of Delta Upsilon, was elected president of the Interfraternity Council. . . . The traditional Mortar Board May breakfast, not held since 1942, was revived this year. Freshmen girls were guests of the members of the senior honor society. In charge of plans were Joy Nissen, chairman, Virginia M. Paulson, and Ferene Crispin.

Twin City school children came to the campus to enjoy the play "Mary Poppins," given by the University Theater with Norma Jean Wanvig and Dick Spear in the leading roles. . . . To those who wonder why we need still bigger War Loans

IN THE 7th War Loan, you're being asked to lend 7 billion dollars—4 billion in E Bonds alone.

That's the biggest quota for individuals to date.

Maybe you've wondered why, when we've apparently got the Nazis pretty well cleaned up, Uncle Sam asks you to lend more money than ever before.

If you have, here are some of the answers:

This war isn't getting any cheaper

No matter what happens to Germany—or when—the cost of the war won't decrease this year.

We're building up a whole new air force—with new jet-propelled planes and bigger bombers. We're now building—even with announced reductions—enough new ships to make a fair-sized navy. We're moving a whole war half around the world. We're caring for wounded who are arriving home at the rate of one a minute.

Furthermore, there will be only 2 War Loans this year—instead of the 3 we had in 1944.

Each of us, therefore, must lend as much in two chunks this year as we did last year in three. That's another reason why your quota in the 7th is bigger than before.

The 7th War Loan is a challenge to every American. The goal for individuals is the highest for any war loan to date. The same goes for the E Bond goal. Find your personal quota—and make it!

ALL OUT FOR THE MIGHTY 7th WAR LOAN

"Wish I could read my future in the stars"

A sailor wrote this in a letter to us after coming off a night watch at sea in the tropics. He was asking about his privileges as a veteran under the G. I. Bill of Rights, and what his chances would be for a post-war job.

These questions are close to the heart of every fighting man, for we've had thousands of similar requests for information from all branches of the service, and from every combat theater, as well as from men already demobilized.

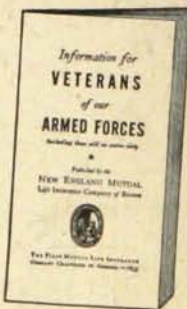

To give them complete answers, we have put together a 40-page booklet, "Information for Veterans," described at the right. It's free. We shall be glad to send it to you to forward to your son, husband, or friend in the service. It contains information he wants.

If you yourself are a veteran just going back into civilian life, you will find the booklet especially timely. Address us at 501 Boylston Street, Boston, Massachusetts.

Men in the Armed Forces . . . If this magazine happens to reach you and you'd like us to send you the booklet, write to us direct.

HERE'S A SAMPLE OF THE CONTENTS:

- Highlights of the "G. I. Bill of Rights"—
How to continue your education, guidance on loans, benefits, etc.
- Your National Service Life Insurance—
How to keep it in force, how to reinstate, and convert, with rates.
- The word on—
Mustering-out pay, pension privileges, hospitalization, vocational training, Federal income tax, etc.
- What kind of a post-war job?—
And where you fit in the picture.

Dr. Coffey Honored by Alumni

TAKING our cue from presiding officers who have the job of introducing distinguished after-dinner speakers, we might appropriately say that the two gentlemen pictured on the cover of this magazine need no introduction or identification. Dr. Walter C. Coffey, left, retires from the presidency this summer after serving the University of Minnesota for twenty-five years, first as dean and director of the Department of Agriculture, and then as president. Alumni Secretary E. B. Pierce '04, has been a member of the University staff since his graduation and he will continue in his duties as alumni secretary and field secretary of the University for many years. In the background of the cover picture are the pictures of three presidents of Minnesota, Lotus D. Coffman, Guy Stanton Ford and Mr. Coffey.

The picture was taken in the offices of the General Alumni Association preceding the annual Alumni Day dinner on June 15 at which President Coffey was honored by alumni. Presented by Dr. George Earl '06; '09Md, was a beautiful scroll upon which was inscribed the following citation:

For twenty-five years a devoted servant of the University of Minnesota, as Dean of the Department of Agriculture and as President; a faithful and untiring worker in carrying forward its program of education and service; a sound interpreter to the alumni of University activities; a true friend of rural people from one end of the state to the other; an agricultural specialist with an understanding of the common man's problems; and best of all, a most human person whose warmth of personality and geniality drew inevitably to him all those whose good fortune it has been to meet and know him.

Out of deep appreciation for all that he has done, and in profound admiration for all that he is, this expression of friendship and loyalty is presented to him by the General Alumni Association of the University of Minnesota.

Dr. Coffey became acting president of the University on July 1, 1941, and was elected president by the Board of Regents on November 22, 1941. By action of the Regents his term was extended to June 30, 1945, even though he had reached the normal retirement age of 68 in 1944. His services to the University were such that he was asked to continue for the additional period.

Dr. Coffey came to Minnesota from the University of Illinois in 1921 as dean and director of the Department of Agriculture. He has long been a national leader in the field of agriculture and has made valuable contributions to the agricultural welfare of Minnesota and the Northwest. He is chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis.

YOUNG ENGINEERS: What Does the Future Hold for You?

JOHNS-MANVILLE has an answer to that question for many of you. Because Johns-Manville's business is based primarily on engineering knowledge and skill, we can offer young engineers many opportunities for training and experience, and for an attractive future in congenial surroundings. Our engineering activities are as diversified as American Industry itself. The products we manufacture and sell fill many essential needs of every basic industry.

Right now we need engineers in four technical fields. As our broad peacetime expansion program unfolds, more such opportunities will develop.

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN RESEARCH?

J-M's modern, well-equipped Research Laboratory offers real opportunity for talent and initiative in actually creating a wide variety of industrial and construction products from asbestos, other organic and inorganic fibers, and from plastics and ceramics.

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN PRODUCTION ENGINEERING?

J-M owns and operates sixteen factories and mines, including the world's largest asbestos mine. Expansion of manufacturing activities offers many opportunities in the production engineering field.

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN INDUSTRIAL ENGINEERING?

J-M's expansion program involves further mechanization, wage incentive, job evaluation and cost reduction studies to improve efficiency of manufacture of more than 1200 products.

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN SALES ENGINEERING?

J-M manufactures hundreds of industrial products which require salesmen with engineering background to help solve customers' technical problems.

Throughout its 87 years, Johns-Manville's reputation for stability and quality products has been earned because of the reliance we place on Research and Engineering. This is the key to the opportunities J-M offers you, as a young engineer.

Johns-Manville will have no reconversion delays and has made financial provision to go ahead immediately after the war with its program of peacetime expansion. If you have no definite commitments, will you please write to:

Dr. Coffey was born in Hartsville, Indiana, and attended Hartsville and Franklin Colleges, the University of Indiana, and the University of Illinois. He was a member of the Illinois faculty from 1906 to 1921.

E. B. Pierce Honored

In a surprise ceremony at the dinner, Alumni Secretary E. B. Pierce was honored in recognition of his twenty-fifth anniversary as executive secretary of the General Alumni Association. On behalf of the alumni body, Chas. F. Keyes '96, who was president of the alumni association in 1920 when Mr. Pierce was appointed alumni secretary, presented him with a check for $815 and a scrapbook containing letters of congratulations from alumni in all parts of the United States. The committee which made the plans for the anniversary recognition and the gift included Mr. Keyes, chairman, Edgar F. Zelle '13, Thos. F. Wallace '93; '95L, Stanley S. Gillam '12, Arnulf Ueland '17, Dr. George Earl '06; '09Md, Ralph Beal '18, and C. F. E. Peterson '93L. A large number of alumni participated in the gift.

New President

Minnesota alumni and all the citizens of the state welcome Dr. James Lewis Morrill as he assumes his duties as the eighth president of the University of Minnesota. Dr. Morrill has had a varied and distinguished background of experience in journalism and educational administration. For ten years before going to the University of Wyoming as its president in 1942 he was vice-president of Ohio State University.

After receiving his bachelor of arts degree from Ohio State University in 1913, he joined the staff of the Cleveland Press and served successively as reporter, copyreader, city editor and acting managing editor. He also served for a period as political and legislative correspondent. From 1917 to 1919 he was executive secretary of the United States Food Administration in Ohio and of the Ohio branch of the council of national defense.

In 1919, Dr. Morrill returned to the campus of Ohio State University as alumni secretary and editor of the alumni magazine and from 1925 to 1928 he taught in the departments of education and journalism. He was appointed junior dean of the College of Education in 1928 and served in that capacity until 1932 when he was elected vice-president of the university.

He was born on September 24, 1891, in Marion, Ohio, and married Freda Rhodes on June 22, 1915. They have three children, John Rhodes, Mary Louise and Sylvia.

Dr. Morrill is chairman of the committee on institutional reorganization and policy of the Association of Land-Grant Colleges and Universities and is active in the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Wyoming regrets the loss of Dr. James L. Morrill but the governor of the state, Lester C. Hunt, has sent his congratulations to Minnesota in a letter to Governor Edward J. Thye.

Said Governor Hunt: "In the first place, Dr. Morrill has one of the most engaging personalities it has ever been my pleasure to meet. His public relations are superb, and back of this he has the natural ability to deliver the goods.

"Dr. Morrill came to us from Ohio State University where he was vice-president for many years. Unfortunately, he has been with us only three and a half years, but in that time he has accomplished a great deal for our university.

"I know you will like the man very much, and you are to be congratulated in securing his services. He will make Minnesota a fine president, and while I already am aware of the high standing of your university, I am sure it will be enhanced under his authority."

Group of Members of Class of 1920 at the 25th Reunion Luncheon on Alumni Day

Classes Join in Alumni Day Reunion Program

MINNESOTA classes hold reunions every five years although some class groups meet more frequently, including the class of 1894, which has held a reunion meeting every year since graduation.

Scheduled to hold reunions on the campus in June this year were the classes with year numerals ending in zero and five. The earliest of these reunion classes was 1880 and the latest was 1940. Many of these classes held reunion luncheons in Coffman Union on Alumni Day, June 15, in addition to attendance at the annual Alumni Day dinner in the evening. Most of the several hundred alumni who visited the campus on Alumni Day are residents of the Twin Cities. They are preserving the continuity of the reunion program of their classes and the reunion committee organization in anticipation of the time when conditions will again permit alumni at a distance from the campus to attend the class functions.

Since the quinquennial reunion classes of this year last held reunion meetings in 1940 the University scene has undergone but little physical change, but there have been many wartime changes in the program of the institution. During the school year which was closing in June, 1940, the University had reached a peak enrollment of 15,800. From that year until the beginning of the 1944-45 school year the number of civilian students decreased. This past year there was an enrollment increase of some 13 per cent, and in the spring quarter, for the first time since 1940 there was recorded an increase in the number of men in the civilian student body.

By tradition, the reunion committee of the twenty-five year group, the class of 1920, was in charge of general plans for the Alumni Day program. Among the committee members of this class were, left to right, Leif Gilstad, president; Mabel Ashenden Tupa; Edwin Cuthbert, vice-president; Josephine Lutz Rollins, and Robert B. Gile, secretary.

In the intervening years the University of Minnesota has provided special training for thousands of army and navy personnel. More than 700 members of its faculty and service staff have been granted leaves of absence to enter the armed forces or to engage in war-related work for government agencies. Other members of the staff have been assigned to vital war research in the laboratories on the campus. In special civilian training courses, thousands of men and women have prepared for duties in industrial war plants.

Now there has come an upturn in the number of regular college students and it has been estimated that the number will continue to increase in the immediate postwar years until the enrollment moves beyond the 20,000 mark. Contributing to this increase will be the return to the campus of thousands of men and women whose college careers were interrupted by the call to war service. Some 400 returned veterans of the present war were enrolled during the past year.

At the class reunions on the campus on Alumni Day in 1940, the members of the quinquennial classes were greeted by President Guy Stanton Ford. Dr. Ford was succeeded in 1941 by Dr. Walter C. Coffey who thus became the wartime president of the University. This summer, Dr. Coffey turns over the duties and responsibilities of the presidency to Dr. James Lewis Morrill.

Early Classes

Alumni representation at the Alumni Day dinner on June 15 covered nearly 70 years of the life of the University of Minnesota. In the roll call of classes, Judge Andrew Holt responded for the class of 1880. When he entered the University in the eighteen-seventies, and also when he graduated in 1880, Minnesota was being guided by its first president, William Watts Folwell. Present to respond for the class of 1881 was Fred B. Snyder who has given a lifetime of service to the University and the state as a member of the Board of Regents. Also represented was the class of 1888 in the person of Albert Graber.

Among the few alumni present at the Alumni Day dinner from other states were two members of the class of 1890, Mrs. Jessie Nicol Hoyt and A. C. Anderson, both from California.

Fiftieth Reunion

As is customary at the annual dinners, the fifty-year class, the class of 1895, occupied a place of honor in the roll call of the classes. The response from a member of the fifty-year group, with its reminiscences of college days, and a recital of the achievements of the members of the class, is always one of the highlights of the dinner program. It is enjoyed by the members of all classes present, from the earliest to the most recent. The statement for the class of 1895 was given by Robert M. Thompson of Minneapolis.

Each year the General Alumni Association presents diplomas to the members of the fifty-year class and confers upon them the title of Graduate Emeritus. The presentation at the Alumni Day dinner to the members of the class of 1895 was made by Dr. George Earl, president of the General Alumni Association.

The citation presented to each member of the fifty year class reads as follows:

In recognition of having reached the fiftieth anniversary of his graduation and having worthily represented the University through a half century of constructive citizenship, he is accorded the title—Graduate Emeritus—with all the rights, privileges, and obligations thereunto appertaining. Given at the Annual Alumni Meeting this fifteenth day of June in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and forty-five.

Alumni Loan Funds

In responding for the class of 1900, L. A. Page announced that his class was planning the development of a class of 1890 student loan fund which would be added to the other alumni loan funds made available to the University for the benefit of students.

This year the reunion committee of the twenty-five year group, the class of 1920, also started the building of a fund which will later be made available to the University. A pioneer among the classes in the development of class funds which are made available as alumni loan funds for the use of students is the class of 1902.

Responding for other classes were George L. Gillette, 1905; W. R. Salisbury, 1910; J. Burns Allen, 1915, and Amos Deinard, 1920. A statement for the class of 1920 had been prepared for the occasion of James Gray, St. Paul newspaperman and author, and member of the 1920 reunion committee, but he was unable to be present at the dinner. This review of the campus years of the class of 1920 appears elsewhere in this issue.

To Miss Sally Foster of the class of 1930 went the annual award to the guest at the dinner who has traveled the greatest distance to be present. She recently arrived in Minneapolis on leave from her duties with the American Red Cross in the Philippines. Before going to the Philippines she was stationed in Australia. The award for the class with the greatest numerical attendance went to the class of 1920 while the members of the class of 1890 had the greatest proportional attendance. The award to the member of the earliest class present at the dinner was presented to Judge Andrew Holt '80.

Mentioned on preceding pages were the presentations to President Walter C. Coffey and Alumni Secretary E. B. Pierce made on behalf of alumni by Dr. Earl and Charles F. Keyes.

The toastmaster at the dinner was Leif Gilstad, chairman of the class of 1920 reunion committee. He introduced President Coffey who brought alumni the official greeting of the University and commented on his years as dean of the Department of Agriculture and as president. There were musical numbers by a student trio and by Mrs. Paul Oberg with accompaniment by Mr. Oberg, chairman of the department of music. The accompaniment for the singing of Hail, Minnesota! was played by the composer, Truman Rickard '04.

The Alumni dinner was the culmination of a day of reunion activities for the classes which held reunion luncheons and other class meetings. One of the largest reunion meetings at noon in Coffman Union was held by the class of 1905 with Harry Gerrish presiding. Other classes holding luncheons were 1900, 1910, 1915, 1920 and 1925. Members of the earlier classes were the guests of the Minnesota Alumnae Club in the ballroom of the Union. The class of 1895 held a reunion dinner earlier in the week as a part of its fiftieth reunion program.

One of the fine gestures of the reunion period was the presentation to the University of a bound volume which contained a complete record of the class of 1894 and its members over a period of 50 years. The presentation was made by C. H. Chalmers and Frank Maloy Anderson and was accepted by President Coffey on behalf of the University. The text of the presentation statement and the reply made by President Coffey will appear in a later issue of the Alumnus.

Homecoming

October 20 has been set as the date of the annual Homecoming football game in Memorial stadium. The Gophers' Homecoming opponent will be Northwestern.

Inauguration

In June, President Coffey announced the personnel of the committee on arrangements for the inauguration of Dr. James Lewis Morrill as the eighth president of the University of Minnesota. The date of the inauguration has not yet been set. The chairman of the committee will be Dean Theodore C. Blegen '12, of the Graduate School. The committee will include representatives of the following groups:

The reunion luncheon of the class of 1915 in Coffman Union on Alumni Day was well attended. Among those present, front row, left to right, Dr. J. Horton Daniels '14, released a few months ago from a Japanese prison camp in Manila; Mrs. J. Horton Daniels (Helen Dunn), Earle H. Balch of New York City, and Harold Frederick Harrison. Second row, left to right, J. Burns Allen, Dr. Alexander Schuldt, Albert James Robertson, Quincy Harold Hale and Raymond W. Anderson.

Board of Regents, Fred B. Snyder of Minneapolis, Ray J. Quinlivan of St. Cloud, Daniel C. Gainey of Owatonna; academic staff, Professor Donald G. Paterson, Dean Henry Schmitz, Professor D. E. Minnich, Professor A. C. Krey, Vice-president M. M. Willey and Paul E. Miller, director of agricultural extension; civil service staff, Mrs. Ruth Lawrence, Wallace Blomquist, Mrs. Mary

J. Randolph and James S. Lombard; student body, Cherry Cedarleaf, president of the all-University Council, and Rod McQuary, editor of the Minnesota Daily.

Alumni will be represented on the committee by Dr. George Earl '06; '09Md, president of the General Alumni Association, Alumni Secretary E. B. Pierce '04, and Mrs. May H. Findley '33, president of the Minnesota Alumnae Club.

Representatives of educational organizations outside the University: Dean M. Schweickhard, commissioner of education; Dr. Bernhard Christensen of Augsburg College, president of the Association of Minnesota Colleges; Warren H. Stewart of St. Cloud, president of the State Teachers College Board; Martin Graebner of Concordia College in St. Paul, president of Junior College Deans of Minnesota, and Walter Englund, secretary of the Minnesota Education Association.

The class of 1910 held a highly successful reunion luncheon on June 15 and the class was well represented at the Alumni Day dinner. Among those present, front row, left to right, were Mattie Crogan, Hazel Witchie, Mrs. Lucile Collins Dooley, Theodore Thomson and Richard Molenaar. Second row, left to right, Mrs. D. R. Blaupied, L. R. Putnam of Fargo, Joseph J. Granbeck, W. R. Salisbury, Howard Y. Williams, E. W. Leach and Leland Duxbury.

The Charge to the Class of 1945

Given by President Walter C. Coffey at Commencement Exercises on June 16

WITH this graduating class of 1945, my feelings of association are unusually close. Four years ago a considerable portion of this evening's graduating seniors entered as freshmen. Four years ago I became president of the University. You are now seniors and about to leave the University. I, also, am graduating, for in exactly two weeks I shall turn the office of the president over to my successor. You and I thus started together; and we complete our university work together. It is thus quite understandable why I hold the feelings that I do toward you of this class.

The course of the world's history during these four years we have been together adds strength to the bond between us. We lived through the crises, culminating in Pearl Harbor, that plunged our country into the war. We have experienced the disruption that war has brought to the University of Minnesota. We have seen more than thirteen thousand of our classmates enter the armed forces. We have mourned because of the 512 gold stars now in our service flag. We have gone through days of darkness and gloom and discouragement. We have watched the tide of battle turn, resulting in the utter defeat of Germany. But as we leave the campus together this June, it is with hope in our hearts, for we are now confident that time and sacrifice alone stand between us and the ultimate victory over Japan.

As I look back over these war years, two things impress me with respect to the University of Minnesota. First is the extent of the contribution we as an institution were able to make directly to the war effort. We have trained thousands of young men for the Army and the Navy; electricians' mates, machinists' mates, cooks and bakers, deck officers, engineering officers, aeronautical engineers, medical technicians, field officers, meteorologists, air forces personnel, doctors, dentists, language students in Swedish, Norwegian, Danish, German and Japanese. No mere recital of the fields of activity can begin to indicate the complexity and the scope of our training programs. And we are still continuing to train Army and Navy personnel in considerable numbers, for the war is not over and the requirements of the services for technically trained men still exist. The University of Minnesota will continue this specialized training as long as there is need for it, thereby hoping to hasten the day of final victory.

We as a university have been able to accomplish as much as we have in furthering war programs because of the resources in staff and in physical facilities that have been at our disposal. The citizens of the state of Minnesota have every reason to be proud of the record of service of their University. Through the University they have played a part in developing the manpower and the technical knowledge that have brought about the the crushing defeat of Germany, and that are wearing away the effective resistance of the Japanese. We were able to do what we did because of the adaptability, the flexibility, and the vitality of the University as an organization. We could direct our efforts to the grim business of war, and adapt ourselves without loss of efficiency to its necessities. Here, it seems to me, is the first lesson that I would call to your attention: as long as institutions remain adaptable, they can continue to function effectively. And what is true of institutions is no less true of individuals. A college education has given you the mental discipline and the attitude of mind that should enable you, in the words of our baccalaureate speaker of last Sunday, to understand the significance of the world situation in which you now find yourselves. The hope of the world lies in your ability and willingness to abandon those rigidities which, although accepted blindly in the extreme nationalistic era of the past, cannot but prevent the type of world organization that is essential if we are to have an enduring peace. My first charge to you is that for the rest of your lives you consciously cultivate those attitudes that will make a peaceful world possible. It is this ability that you should have acquired in your university years. It now remains for you to strengthen and fortify that ability so that it may endure in the larger world of which you will be a part. In this connection a prayer by Dr. Reinhold Neibuhr is well worth repeating:

"Give me the serenity to accept what cannot be changed.

Give me the courage to change what can be changed,

The wisdom to know one from the other."

The second thing that impresses me as I look back over our four years together is the progress the University has made, even in time of war, with respect to its normal, peacetime programs. The study of our own educational problems has continued, and with notable success. On Cap and Gown Day I referred specifically to some of these matters, such as the development of programs in general education, and the liberalization of professional curricula. From this I would also draw a lesson: if a great university, under the stress of war, can maintain a central focus on the long-range problems that will confront it, individuals no less should look beyond the immediate present to the distant future, and plan for it. This is my second charge to you: that in your life which lies ahead, you live fully from day to day, but never fail to regard your own life and your own problems in relation to the larger long-range social good. Just as a chain is no stronger than its weakest link, so a society is no better than the average of the social intelligence that resides in the individual citizens. A college training, in other words, should be not the end of education, but the beginning. It is only as we accept literally that tonight is a commencement of your education, that we can ultimately achieve the kind of society in which we all want to live.

Intellectual adaptability and recognition of the social implications of all that you henceforth do—these are the two great needs that I charge you to meet.

Normally I should stop here, but since this is my last official appearance before the University community, I must add one more word. I think the record of the University during these war years has been a commendable one. I believe that we can look back with satisfaction on all that has been accomplished—though never forgetting that more difficult tasks remain to be done. Whatever success the University has achieved since 1941 is not attributable to any single person, least of all to your president. It comes because of the cooperation that has prevailed among all of those upon whose efforts the welfare of the University depends. Here and now I wish publicly to express my deep feeling of appreciation and gratitude to the Regents, to the administrative officers, to the faculties of the colleges, to the students, and to the civil service staff members. A great university is the result of staff and student competence, joined with all-inclusive teamwork. To my mind, the greatness of the University of Minnesota is directly attributable to the fortunate and happy union of these two indispensable—competence and teamwork. As long as we are able to maintain this union, so long will this continue to be a great university. That I have had an opportunity to play a humble part in the growth of the University is the deepest satisfaction I enjoy; and though I am now to step aside, I do so with the complete confidence that under President Morrill the same competence and the same teamwork will manifest themselves.

With this expression of faith and confidence and appreciation, I wish you all Godspeed!

Reunion at Minnesota

By JAMES GRAY

TO BE called upon to give an account of the stewardship of an entire university class, twenty-five years after its graduation, is, clearly, a somewhat trying assignment. It is a little undertaking to be chatty and communicative about the post-official lives of the vice-presidents of the United States or like telling with breathlessly intense excitement what became of the original members of the Flora Dora sextet. The class of 1920 belongs to history but, I suspect, that it is the kind of history which no one gives a very sizeable damn about hearing.

However, my task is made more difficult still by the fact that I stand before you as a representative of the Lost Generation. It was Gertrude Stein, you will remember, who gave us that name. She referred to the fact that a great many bright young men like Scott Fitzgerald and Ernest Hemingway interrupted their schooling to rush off to the first World War. Later, they went back to Paris and became lost in the deep-tangled wild something-or-other of Montmartre.

All this is so well known as to require no recounting on my part. And that is just as well because I don't understand it in the least. Belonging to the same fine, frenzied generation as Scott Fitzgerald and Ernest Hemingway I have tried dutifully to feel lost. I used to wonder vaguely if there existed some cosmic Lost and Found department, having a special section devoted to generations that had somehow strayed out of their place in history.

James Gray '20, is the author of five novels, a book about the Illinois River, and "Pine, Stream and Prairie: Wisconsin and Minnesota in Profile," published this spring by Alfred A. Knopf, New York publisher. Soon after graduation he joined the editorial staff of the St. Paul Pioneer Press-Dispatch and has served as dramatic critic, literary editor and columnist. He has conducted a course in creative writing at the University of Minnesota. This sketch was written by Mr. Gray to be read at the twenty-fifth reunion of the class of 1920 on Alumni Day, June 15.

Having a prosaic sort of mind I have never been able to feel properly or becomingly lost. So I cannot now tell you whether or not my generation ever was found. The most that I can do by way of giving an account of stewardship is to offer a few scattered impressions of how the solidity, the stimulating character and—dare I be sentimental enough to add?—the charm of the University of Minnesota have lent reality through the years to the existence of one member of the Lost Generation.

The members of the class of 1920 were in their most susceptible phase, as freshmen, when the first World War elbowed its way in their lives. It had been a fine life we lived. If there had been no other influence to make us freshmen say with wondering gratitude, "Oh, brave new world that hath such people in it!" George Edgar Vincent would have supplied enough intellectual excitement to last a lifetime. To see him spring to his feet and to hear him storming the ramparts of undergraduate sluggishness, skepticism and reserve with barages of 300 words to the minute was to discover what the dynamism of the human mind at its very best can be. To hear President Vincent begin an address, "Men of Minnesota," was to have conferred upon one, all in an instant, the privileges of manhood, a prideful awareness of one's place and a sense of responsibility toward both. The story is told that when Secretary of State Stettinius appeared in all his fine snowy solidity before a Senatorial committee, one of the conscript fathers nudged another and murmured, "There, you see what God can do when He really tries." We felt that way as freshmen about Mr. Vincent though any of us would have said that in the moment of his creation God was not merely trying; He was inspired by an awareness of what fun it was, for once, to crowd all the gifts and all the graces into the person of one man.

Oh, yes, it was a good world because Bert Baston was winning victories for us on the football field, and the chocolate goo (with shot) at the Oak Tree made bliss purchasable at a modest outlay of twenty cents and it was the last moment for a long time to come of innocent belief in the serenity and security of America.

And then in April came the great interruption. Perhaps it is the pathos of distance that makes it seem to be so, but I think I never saw so fine a spring. (The spring of 1945 may now skulk out-of-doors and not beg for even a moment's consideration as a candidate for memorability of anything but horror.) The buds on the trees opened stickily that April, in the best Edna-St. Vincent-Millay manner. The grass on the knoll was never so inviting. Spring climbed stealthily over the ledges of classroom windows, tapping us on the shoulders with its usual distracting winsomeness.

But all at once there was no spring; there was no youth; there was no sheltered world. There was only the war. Wallace Notestein stood up before his class in English Constitutional History wearing a look of glazed withdrawnness, unable to talk about ordeal by fire, or the Magna Charta, or anything but unrestricted submarine warfare. He looked haunted and he was haunted—by all the ghosts of the predictions he had been making for years that America could not escape the responsibility of participation in Europe's crisis. Our parents had reproached him gently for his wild alarmist talk and we had known of course that our parents were right. But now we looked full into the face of war and we knew also that, sitting at Wallace Notestein's feet, we had looked up into the face of that strange and not quite believable being, a prophet. So it was still a world of wonder.

Well, everyone retired behind the same glazed look. People who had been professors and fellow students the day before became creatures apart, untouchable, remote. Then the remoteness became complete and real, for a great majority of the male population of the campus immediately disappeared into the nearest training camps.

The sophomore year began for those who were left in a curious atmosphere. I should say that if limbo could be thoroughly modernized, with oil heat, a scientifically planned kitchen and a three-car garage—that was a little the way it felt to be a noncombatant in a university world. It was perfectly comfortable, almost too much so, but still it was limbo, the place of forgotten men, shuffled aside out of reality.

Industrious people tried to give it a design and orderly people still maintained order. Mary K. Hartung creating in the student body a kind of matriarchal society began editing everything in sight and Ina Firkins prowled up and down the main aisle of the old library pouncing upon and evicting anyone who so far forgot the laws of Miss Firkins' domain as to betray the fact that he possessed a human voice. Marion Leroy Burton, who was president then in Mr. Vincent's place, kept asking us, "Are you planning or are you drifting?" And the answer was that we were drifting, because what else was there to do in limbo?

And still it was a world of wonder that had such people in it as could command the meanest imagination to awake and sing. Karl Lashley, then making something rather like a one-man show (as far as Minnesota was concerned) of transforming psychology into a laboratory science, drifted through our lives as noticeable, as disturbing and almost as immaterial as a puff of smoke. His figure was wispy; his fine head in its cloud of disordered hair was better than any familiar reality; his provocative, ironic smile hinted at subtle, unexplainable jokes. He was a restless, eager cicerone, opening doors on music, on science, and—oddly enough, since he was supposed to be a specialist concentrating on the behavior of white rats—on very nearly every seminar of thought and exploration. The testimony of fellow scientists who require him to be ubiquitous in the footnotes of their thick volumes was not needed to make those of us who were once Karl Lashley's students realize that we had had the opportunity to mature in the warmth of a most distinguished mind.

Both admiration and affection would prompt tributes to many another figure among the men of illumination who endured with patience our sophomoric certitudes, our sophomoric rejections and our sophomoric enthusiasms. I spare those who still live among us, knowing that reverence is one of the hardest trials of a man of spirit and of wit can be called upon to bear. For that reason only, I choose as victims men who are now removed from us by physical distance or by death.

The Junior year of the class of 1920 was still lived rather as though we were all images in a distorting mirror. That was the time when the remaining fragment of the male population of the campus moved en masse into the old Exposition building at the foot of University Avenue as members of the Students Army Training Corps. We rose in the blackness of the Minnesota fall mornings; tramped the highways for an hour or two in ragged approximations of military formations; marched off to classes; fought the battle of the eastern Minneapolis front for another hour; and then, after dinner, trooped back to the dining room presumably to pore over our books. What we chiefly pored, I'm afraid, were the murmured maledictions of extremely young people, finding it difficult in those circumstances, to prod the mind into rapturous appreciation of the delicate complexities of either calculus or the Spenserian stanza.

We were mock soldiers and mock students, a great nuisance no doubt to all those in authority who were baffled about precisely what ought to be done with us. We felt our futility most, I think, in those moments when the shadow of war's melodrama drifted over us to touch us briefly and uselessly. In most of those dark dawns between September and December of 1918, the shadowy lines drawn up at reveille would be shaken with a momentary trembling of excitement as a shadow here and a shadow there would pitch forward on his face to be carted away to Fort Snelling with flu.

What saved us then, I'm sure, from a too intolerable and humiliating sense of uselessness was the silent testimony of the University itself to the existence of enduring things. I remember taking conscious reassurance of the fact that intellectual values are not lost when I watched Oscar Firkins making his way myopically across the campus from the Library to Folwell Hall with twenty volumes clutched under his thin arms. He had read so many books, in so many languages; but the appetite of his mind was insatiable. There were always twenty more books that had to be read immediately, and then twenty more, and twenty more. He was the victim of many caprices of nature. Uncertain of nerves and almost blind, to deal with a student's impudence was, to him, a tense moral crisis and to cross a street an exacting physical adventure. Yet he lived as he wanted to live and by no other power than that of the mind. This, I remember thinking with grateful awe, is the epitome of the intellectual man, one who endures the hazards and humiliations of human life with the stoical dignity of absolute silence and who arms his defenselessness with a weapon of his own making. Surely the flashing Excalibur of Oscar Firkins' wit was the product of the magic of the mind, not quite explicable but fine and reassuring to see.

And then the war was over at last and some of the boys came home and Harding's "normalcy" wobbled back to the campus, a little ahead of its official appearance in Washington. That was a lively year with all of us scurrying tirelessly about like so many Adams returned to Eden and determined to put our teeth shamelessly into every apple on every branch of every tree. I can give you only my campus for which each of you must supply his own. The tide of refreshed energy, I think, tore through them all. I remember the cool, controlled exuberance of the cadences of Robert Frost's poems, read to us by the visiting poet himself. I remember meeting with the editors of Foolsap to consider what impudences about academic freedom we could next think up, always hoping vainly to assail the frosty-tipped mountain of Dean Nick's administration of student affairs. I remember begging original stories for Foolsap from the then emergent Mary Ellen Chase as we sat about an infinitesimal restaurant presided over by a man whom we called "Mr. Salteena" after a figure in the book of the moment, Daisy Ashford's "The Young Visitors." I remember going to the Little Theater, a slightly less than ordinarily commodious telephone booth crowded into a corner of the Old Men's Union, to see Edith Sondergaard act. She was not then Gale Sondergaard of the movies, winner of an Academy Oscar, but she played light comedies with the flaming intensity of Bernhardt doing Camille and Mrs. Fiske doing Hedda Gabbler simultaneously. No wonder the Little Theater couldn't hold her and that Hollywood opened up its not always hospitable gates. And I remember Carl Sandberg, looking at once warm and granitic, casual and dedicated, telling students to make their own life really their own. "Write a poem about the Minneapolis gas plant," he urged. Perhaps that opened the final door, the door that discloses the wonder of reality itself, the excitement of the immediate task in a social world, the rewarding adventure of accepting life and participating in it to the fullest reach of one's powers.

That was what the University was to me when I was an undergraduate, a glimpse of Olympus. A slightly casual Olympus, let us admit, crowded between the business districts of two growing cities, cut up like an apple pie by railroad tracks and streetcar lines in the irreverent and irrepressible hunger of commercial life. But Olympus all the same. Fortunately for me I have been able many, many times during the past twenty-five years to scale its heights again and rediscover that there exists in our community an atmosphere in which values do not tarnish, faiths do not grow arthritic and ideas are eternal.

It was said of the late Alexander Woolcott who greatly loved the college where he had been an undergraduate, that when he died he would go to Hamilton. For myself I could dream of no happier fulfillment than to be allowed when I die to go to the University of Minnesota and get a Ph.D.

News of the Faculty

Dr. Harold S. Quigley, professor of political science and authority on Far Eastern affairs, has returned to the campus following attendance at United Nations conference in San Francisco.

Dr. I. M. Kolthoff, head of Minnesota's division of analytical chemistry, was invited to be the guest of the Russian government this month at programs in Moscow and Leningrad held in connection with the 220th anniversary of the Russian Academy of Sciences. Dr. Kolthoff is a foreign member of the Czech and Belgian Academies of Sciences.

Since January, 1943, Dr. Kolthoff has directed an important research program on the properties and improvement of synthetic rubber. This research was first sponsored by the government wartime rubber office and is being continued under the auspices of the Rubber Reserve organization, Washington, D. C.

Malcolm M. Willey, vice-president of the University of Minnesota in charge of academic administration, received the honorary degree of doctor of humane letters from Clark University, Worcester, Mass., on June 2. The honor was conferred on the twenty-fifth anniversary of his graduation from Clark University. Mr. Willey later received his Ph.D. degree from Columbia University and taught sociology at Dartmouth College for five years before coming to Minnesota as a member of the sociology department.

Professor Lee I. Smith, chief of the division of organic chemistry, was installed as president of the Minnesota chapter of Sigma Xi, national scientific fraternity, at the meeting of the society on June 8. He succeeds Dr. Owen H. Wangensteen, head of the department of surgery in the Medical School.

Other officers installed were Dr.

H. Orin Halvorson, professor of bacteriology, vice-president, and Dr. Martin H. Roepke, professor of veterinary medicine, secretary-treasurer. Two faculty members and 38 graduate students were initiated into the honorary fraternity at the meeting.

Honored guests were four members who were taken into the fraternity 50 years ago: C. H. Chalmers, George B. Frankfurter, Anthony Zeleny and William H. Kirschner.

Leigh H. Harden '32Ag; '38Gr, director of the University's Bureau of Veterans' Affairs since January of this year, left Minnesota on June 1 to become professor of personnel administration at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y. His work will be in student counselling and guidance and he will be in charge of admissions in the state college of agriculture. Before becoming the veterans' bureau director, Mr. Harden was assistant to the dean of the College of Agriculture, Forestry and Home Economics.

Harold K. Wilson, professor of agronomy at University Farm, has resigned to become head of the department of agronomy at Pennsylvania State College on July 1. He came to the University in 1927 from the University of Illinois. Dr. Wilson has taken an active part in the weed control program in Minnesota and is a leader in weed control research.

E. C. LeFort, associate professor of Spanish, is directing a Latin American workshop at the University of Montana this summer. During the summer session his classes at Minnesota are being taken by Professor Renato Rosaldo of the University of Wisconsin.

Eric R. Bentley, lecturer in English, will go to New York this month to attend the opening performances of his English version of the play, The Private Life of the Master Race, originally written in German by Bertolt Brecht. Mr. Bentley is the author of A Century of Hero-Worship, a book dealing with European writers who may have had some influence upon the rise of fascism.

Alan E. Treloar, associate professor of biostatistics, returned to the Minnesota staff this month following a leave of absence during which he did special work for the army at Portland, Maine.

For the first time since his election to the presidency of the University of Minnesota, Dr. James L. Morrill visited the campus on June 5 to speak at a dinner given by the state-wide committee conducting the campaign for funds for the Mayo Memorial building. The other dinner speaker was Vice-Admiral Ross T. McIntire, surgeon-general of the United States Navy.

In an interview, Dr. Morrill said: "To me, Minnesota is the greatest of the state universities. Its long-time policy of trying to serve its state by learning its needs and meeting them is one reason I say this. Another is that wherever I have gone since my appointment, I have had people call attention to the greatness of this University. And a reason of equal importance is that the University of Minnesota has an outstanding faculty, and the faculty is the very substance of an educational institution."

MacMillan Named Basketball Coach

DAVE MACMILLAN was reappointed Minnesota basketball coach this month by Dr. Lou Keller, acting director of athletics. He returns to the duties he held for 15 years from 1927 to 1942. In 1942 he was succeeded in the basketball coaching position by Dr. Carl Nordly who handled the Gopher cage teams until the middle of the past season when he was called to France by the Army to help complete the set-up for the athletic and recreational program for the American soldiers in the European area. Weston Mitchell, Minneapolis Central high school coach, was named Gopher head coach in the cage sport and he turned over the active direction of the team to MacMillan during the final game of the season.

Following his retirement as head basketball coach in 1942, Dave continued as a member of the athletic staff to serve as head baseball coach. It is expected that he will continue to coach baseball, at least until the return of Lt. Col. Frank McCormick who previously handled the diamond coaching in addition to his duties as director of athletics.

MacMillan came to Minnesota in 1927 from the University of Idaho. His Gophers of 1937 tied with Illinois for the Big Ten title and his teams finished second in the conference in 1931, 1932, 1933 and 1939. His Minnesota teams held a victory edge over every Big Ten team except Purdue.

Carl Nordly, associate professor of physical education, has returned to the campus to resume his teaching duties.

First Division

The Minnesota baseball team moved into the first division in the Big Ten standings by defeating Indiana twice in the final series of the season on June 8 and 9. In the first game the Gophers turned on the power to down the Hoosiers, 13 to 0, as the Minnesota pitcher, Jack Verby, allowed only six scattered hits. The leaders in the Gopher attack were Dick Rediske, Butz Lehrman, Bob Graiziger and Dick Hayden, each getting three hits.

In the second game, Gene Kelly also held the Indians to six hits while the Gophers got nine hits to win, 9 to 3. Lehrman got three hits and Graiziger and Hayden each got two. Rediske got one and Holmberg one. The games were played on Northrop Field.

In the Minnesota lineups for the final two games of the season were Mealey, lf; Bruhn, cf; Rediske, 3b; Lehrman, ss; Graiziger, c; Hayden, 1b; Williams, 2b; Thompson, 3b; Holmberg, rf; Biesman, rf; Verby and Kelly, pitchers.

Returns

Capt. Harold Van Every '40, returned to his home in Minneapolis early in June and made plans to spend some time in northern Minnesota to regain the 50 pounds he lost while a prisoner in Germany. At Fort Snelling he was checked for a back injury he suffered when he bailed out over Germany. He spent 14 months in a German prison camp after his bomber was shot down over Frankfurt on a daylight bombing raid.

Oscar Munson Wedding

Oscar Munson, veteran member of the athletic department, and Jennie Hawkins, former chief attendant in the Women's gymnasium on the campus, were married recently. Munson, custodian of athletic equipment, was one of the original members of the athletic department staff under the late Dr. L. J. Cooke, and when he carried a Michigan water jug to the Minnesota training quarters following the 1903 Michigan-Minnesota game on Northrop Field he gave the famous Little Brown Jug tradition its start.

Visits Campus

Lt. Col. Frank McCormick, Minnesota's director of athletics on leave, paid Minneapolis a brief visit in mid-June. He is in charge of the athletic program for the American forces in Europe with headquarters in Paris, and he was called to Washington this month for a conference.

Minnesota's Roll of Honor

The deaths of 520 Minnesota graduates and former students in the armed forces and auxiliary agencies have been reported to the Minnesota Alumnus since December 7, 1941. The following deaths have been reported during the past month.

Albert Arneson '40Arch, died May 5 of wounds received on Tarakan, Borneo. He was an operations analyst and an adviser on bombing technique with the Thirteenth air force. He had been in the Far Eastern theater for 20 months and had seen action on Espiritu Santo, Guadalcanal, the Admiralties, New Guinea, the Netherlands East Indies and the Philippines. When wounded by enemy artillery fire, he was going ashore with the first wave of men to determine the effects of pre-assault bombing before later fighting obliterated them. Mr. Arneson did graduate work at Harvard and received his master's degree there in 1941.

Memorial services for Lt. Robert G. Bergquist '41GC; '43Ed, will be July 1 in Minneapolis. Lt. Bergquist was radar fight director on an aircraft carrier and was killed in action in the Pacific area. Brief Notes About Minnesota Alumni

This department is read each month by more than 16,000 men and women who have attended the University of Minnesota. Our readers now include alumni in uniform who are stationed in all parts of the world. Contributions of news items or clippings from newspapers regarding the activities of Minnesota alumni are greatly appreciated. It is important that changes of address be sent to us promptly in order to prevent delay in the delivery of your copies and to free the postal service from unnecessary work.

Alumni Association Affairs

Minutes of the meeting of the Board of Directors of the General Alumni Association, Coffman Memorial Union, May 14, 1945.

Persons present: Dr. Earl, presiding; Mrs. Fink, Miss Shepardson; Messrs. Aurand, Backstrom, Bassett, Beal, Brown, Carroll, Fruen, Gerrish, Gibson, Lunden, Netz, Palmer, Peck, Peterson, Pierce, Shellman, Ueland and Wallace.

The following items were presented for discussion and action was taken as indicated:

1. Minutes of the meeting of November 1, 1944. The minutes of the meeting of November first were approved as printed in the Alumnus of December, 1944.

2. Treasurer's report. Mr. Ueland made a general statement concerning finances of the Association and mentioned the difficulties of finding profitable investments for the alumni fund. He also stated that the constitution of the General Alumni Association was somewhat antiquated and revisions were desirable in order to have it conform to the changes that had been made since the Association was founded. On motion, it was voted that the president appoint a committee on the revision of the constitution. Dr. Earl appointed Messrs. Palmer, Keyes and Ueland.

3. Comment of the editor. Mr. Gibson commented briefly on the general makeup of the magazine and the status of advertising, which was approximately the same as last year. He expressed a feeling that income from advertising would be increased a bit during the coming year.

Honor President

4. Appreciation of President Coffey. The secretary reported that the committee had prepared the following resolution in the form of a scroll and recommended that this be presented to President Coffey at the general alumni dinner June fifteenth.

For twenty-five years a devoted servant of the University of Minnesota, as Dean of the Department of Agriculture and as President; a faithful and untiring worker in carrying forward its program of education and service; a sound interpreter to the alumni of the University activities; a true friend of rural people from one end of the state to the other; an agricultural specialist with an understanding of the common man's problems; and best of all, a most human person whose warmth of personality and geniality drew inevitably to him all those whose good fortune it has been to meet and know him.

Out of deep appreciation for all that he has done, and in profound admiration for all that he is, this expression of friendship and loyalty is presented to him by the General Alumni Association of the University of Minnesota.

5. Report on Western Trip. Ralph Beal, vice-president of the Alumni Association, reported that on his trip to San Francisco and Los Angeles he had met with alumni officers at these respective places and enjoyed his contacts with them very much. He attended a meeting of the Los Angeles group while in that city.

6. Secretary's report. The secretary's report covered the following items: (a) Alumni meetings held in various places throughout the country since the last directors' meeting, (b) Alumni procedure in dealing with the Legislature, (c) Adoption of "Hail! Minnesota" as a state song, (d) Plans for the alumni dinner, June fifteenth, (e) Commencement activities including Cap and Gown Day, Baccalaureate, tree planting ceremony, graduation, etc.

Speaker

7. Legislative appropriation. Laurence Lunden, comptroller of the University, spoke at length on the results of the legislative session so far as the University is concerned. He pointed out that the regents had received for the last biennium $3,890,000 per year and had requested that this be increased to $5,419,000 for the next biennium. What the University actually received was $3,825,000 for the year 1945-46 and $4,825,000 for the year 1946-47. The University has on hand an accumulated fund of approximately $1,000,000 which will be available for use during the first year of the biennium. He pointed out that while the civil service employes, or what is called the non-academic staff of the University, received generous consideration, with increases in salary retroactive back to January, 1945, the total appropriation received made very little provision for very sadly needed increases for the academic staff.

Reference was made to the housing situation and Mr. Lunden reported that the Legislators apparently were insisting that a rider be attached to the appropriation to the effect that no money be used for building dormitories at the University during the next biennium. Questions have been raised as to the legality of such a rider.

Following Mr. Lunden's clear and comprehensive statement of the legislative situation there was a long discussion with regard to legislative procedures on the part of the alumni group, and it was voted that the present legislative committee consisting of Mrs. Mabeth Hurd Paige, Harry Gerrish, and Mr. Palmer be enlarged to include Judge Paul Carroll.

Meeting adjourned.

E. B. Pierce, Secretary

To those who wonder why we need still bigger War Loans

IN THE 7th War Loan, you're being asked to lend 7 billion dollars—4 billion in E Bonds alone.

That's the biggest quota for individuals to date.

Maybe you've wondered why, when we've apparently got the Nazis pretty well cleaned up, Uncle Sam asks you to lend more money than ever before.

If you have, here are some of the answers:

This war isn't getting any cheaper

No matter what happens to Germany—or when—the cost of the war won't decrease this year.

We're building up a whole new air force—with new jet-propelled planes and bigger bombers. We're now building—even with announced reductions—enough new ships to make a fair-sized navy. We're moving a whole war half around the world. We're caring for wounded who are arriving home at the rate of one a minute.

Furthermore, there will be only 2 War Loans this year—instead of the 3 we had in 1944.

Each of us, therefore, must lend as much in two chunks this year as we did last year in three. That's another reason why your quota in the 7th is bigger than before.

The 7th War Loan is a challenge to every American. The goal for individuals is the highest for any war loan to date. The same goes for the E Bond goal. Find your personal quota—and make it!

ALL OUT FOR THE MIGHTY 7th WAR LOAN

University of Minnesota, Minneapolis

Devoted to the Instruction of Youth and the Welfare of the State

Seventy-five years ago this June the first students in the University of Minnesota completed their freshman year of college work. They heard the first president, William Watts Folwell, speak of his plans and hopes for the institution and for the development of educational services and opportunities for the youth of the state.

With the passing of the years these hopes and plans became realities and the University program of services to the people of the entire state steadily expanded during the administrations of such able leaders as Cyrus Northrop, George Edgar Vincent, Marion Leroy Burton, Lotus D. Coffman, Guy Stanton Ford and Walter C. Coffey.

Now we welcome to the state, the eighth president of the University of Minnesota, James L. Morrison, and at the same time, express to Dr. Coffey our sincere appreciation for his devoted and valued services to education in Minnesota during the past quarter century.
