Bridgewater aims to keep alumni, faculty, students and their families, staff and friends of Bridgewater State College informed about the college community and its impact on the region. The tri-annual college magazine is written, designed and edited with the needs of its varied audiences at heart and in mind.

On the cover: Janice Smith, '73; Chris Martes, '75, G'79; and Walter Tompkins, G'68, are among the BSC graduates featured in this issue who have found successful careers in education. See story pages 3 - 7.

Dear Alumni and Friends,

A decade has passed since the college's first campus-wide strategic planning effort was launched, and we can all take pride in the fact that out of that process came a set of goals and objectives which have proven very helpful in guiding Bridgewater's subsequent growth and development. Many people – including a number of alumni and friends of the college – made a significant investment of time, energy and ideas in the strategic planning process. Ultimately, this process influenced every decision we made with regard to strengthening and expanding academic programs, investing in technology resources, improving our physical plant, and cultivating new sources of revenue from alumni and friends of the college. Among the highlights of the past 10 years:

- Academic Programs: Three new schools were opened in this decade – the School of Arts and Sciences, the School of Education and Allied Studies and the School of Management and Aviation Science. Also, the college began offering new undergraduate majors in economics and music plus two new graduate programs, a Master of Public Administration and a Master of Science in Management;
- Technology: The John Joseph Moakley Center for Technological Applications opened in 1995 and is the hub of a growing campus network that includes high-speed Internet access for all academic, administrative and residential buildings. Construction of what will ultimately be 40 state-of-the-art electronic classrooms began in the spring of 2000;
- Physical Facilities: A $56 million construction and renovation program includes three new buildings over the next two years – a $16 million field house, a 300-bed residence hall and a 700-seat dining facility. Harrington Hall will also undergo a major renovation to become the new home of the School of Management and Aviation Science;
- Endowment: In March, the college's first public endowment campaign was officially announced with a goal of raising $10 million by June 2002. To date, more than $6.5 million has been raised.

As we begin a new century, it is appropriate for the college to take stock, to assess its current strengths and weaknesses and to set a course for future development.

Over the past year, with input from the senior officers of the college and members of the Board of Trustees, I have been developing a vision paper that outlines goals for the college to pursue during the coming decade. The document encompasses both long-term institutional goals and, in certain instances, more specific ideas about how to accomplish these goals. It is primarily the president's vision of a direction for the college, drawn from my experience working with you in the president's role for the past 11 years. It is my view of how Bridgewater State College might develop over the next decade to realize its full potential.

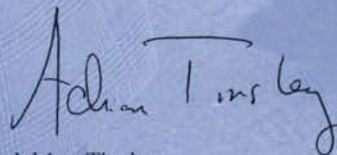

Of course, only a shared vision can move Bridgewater State College forward. In this paper, I hope to begin the process of developing a vision for this college that faculty, staff, students, alumni and friends of Bridgewater can commit to and share.

The paper has been posted on the college's web site (www.bridgew.edu) and I invite you to review it there (or, if you prefer, please call the President's Office at 508-531-1201 to request that a copy be mailed to you). I am very interested in any comments you may have about the paper, and I encourage you to let me know your thoughts by contacting me at my e-mail address, tinsley@bridgew.edu, or via regular mail addressed to the Office of the President, Bridgewater State College, Bridgewater, MA 02325.

Discussion of this document is expected to occur throughout fall semester 2000 and probably into January 2001. By February 2001, I expect to be in the process of modifying the document to incorporate suggested changes. My goal is to have a final version of this vision paper ready for formal discussion by the college's governance system that spring. Bridgewater's Board of Trustees hopes to act on the final version of this paper by the end of June.

The closing years of the 20th century were extraordinarily productive for Bridgewater; based on our institutional strengths – in particular, the quality of the people we have, the academic programs we offer, and the resources available to us – I have every confidence in our ability to move the college forward with equal, if not greater, success in the 21st century.

Sincerely,

Adrian Tinsley
President

Making All the Difference

BSC Graduates Find Satisfaction in Education Careers

Once upon a time in a world of verse, Robert Frost stood in a yellow wood and pondered which of two roads to follow. With so much life left to live, the choice meant everything.

The situation is similar for college students who stand at the threshold of their lives and consider the road to their future. The options are mind boggling; the career list endless. Some paths lead to riches, some to fame, some to satisfaction.

But those who decide to devote their lives to education have chosen a path that will affect not only themselves, but countless numbers of students whom they will teach. It may be a cliché – the oft-used sentiment of how teachers touch young lives – but just because the image is often evoked doesn't mean it is any less true.

Heidi Magoon Connor remembers a young man with dyslexia whom she had tutored for a year proudly handing his high school diploma to his parents. Janice Smith spends her nights and weekends responding to English teachers and students on an award-winning web site of her own design.

One minute Joseph Oliveri is George Washington, the next Alexander Hamilton, in a verbal performance designed to make his media savvy students consider the fascination of days gone by. During his decades teaching, Walter Tompkins could often be found rowing around Cape Ann with his students, trekking up Mt. Greylock, or crossing the dunes of Cape Cod.

As executive director of the Association of Massachusetts School Superintendents, Chris Martes takes a wide-ranging view of education, wrestling with problems and issues that affect educational leaders across the state.

Teaching, inspiring, enlightening. It's what draws people into education and keeps them there.

"There is no question in my mind that this is what I was meant to do," Mr. Oliveri said. "When the end of the year rolls around and the kids are going to high school...the older I get the more tears come to my eyes. Something has been accomplished."

Chris Martes entered Bridgewater in search of a career in the public sector. "I had always been interested in what kind of difference you can make in the lives of people. It's the mantra of public service," he said.

Dr. Martes received two degrees from BSC, a bachelor's in elementary education in 1975 and a master's of education in school administration in 1979. During his career he has been a teacher, a principal and a superintendent – a natural progression for someone looking to touch as many lives as possible, he said.

"You can make a difference in the lives of 25 kids in a classroom, or move to the other step and affect 400 students and families in an elementary school," he said. "Superintendents can make a difference for a whole community."

His first superintendent job was in Medfield leading a school community of five schools and 2,800 students. It was a job that required him to look at the big picture, to learn how to share decision making with a school committee and to build a leadership team of strong principals and administrators.

Dr. Martes first became involved with the Association of Massachusetts School Superintendents by working on its technology task force subcommittee. When the executive director left last year for a job in the private sector, Dr. Martes stepped into his place.

The association represents more than 700 superintendents and assistant superintendents in the Commonwealth's 350 communities. It focuses on legislative issues, helping to shape education legislation on issues such as special education and retirement enhancement; legal work, representing both individual superintendents and keeping them abreast of case law; and professional development.

The association also ponders the larger questions of education, such as the controversial MCAS tests and their impact on students, teachers and schools. "We've taken the stand that the MCAS are one measure but not the only measure of school success," he said. "The discussion needs to be expanded so districts are not just rated on the test but the quality of other things that leads to student success – community service, athletics, arts, parental involvement."

Student population growth and the need for more school space is always a hot topic. How schools are financed is another. Finding qualified candidates for administration positions and qualified teachers of math, science and foreign language is becoming more and more difficult. Graduates today often head to the private sector, he said, lured by the high salaries of high tech and other growth industries.

Dr. Martes said recruitment efforts need to focus on people in the high tech or business world who have become disenchanted with that life and long, like he always has, to do something more meaningful.

"When you are able to make a difference in a family or a student, get them going in the right direction, give them life skills – you can't put a dollar figure on that," he said.

It wasn't a large paycheck that lured Walter Tompkins into teaching. He first felt the thrill of teaching when, working as an electrician in the U.S. Navy, it was his job to train new recruits.

After leaving the service he pursued a career in education, splitting his days between teaching at Oxford High School and attending Bridgewater State College. He graduated in 1968 and landed a job at Hamilton-Wenham Regional High School where he taught earth science to 9th, 11th and 12th graders until his retirement this past spring.

His love of science and the outdoors led Mr. Tompkins to think creatively about education. He was one of the first teachers involved with the pilot program of "Project Adventure," a marriage of academics and outdoors that is now run in schools around the globe.

In his own program, "World of Water," students would build rowing dories like the ones used for hundreds of years by Gloucester fishermen and row around Cape Ann studying the environment firsthand. The program was different, he said, because of its interdisciplinary focus on science, English and social studies.

When South Boston was being torn up over integration, he brought his love of the outdoors to the Thompson Island Education Center and created an outdoor program for inner city high school students. He was adviser to the "A Better Chance" program, which brought inner city students to his suburban high school for extra studies.

In his spare time, he coached tennis and served as student government adviser and yearbook adviser. In the summers he ran sailing programs and developed outdoor activity programs for camps. For the last seven years, Mr. Tompkins was the science department chair at Hamilton-Wenham.

He still feels young and active enough to continue teaching, but has reached the maximum retirement allowed under the current system and, economically, feels compelled to leave. But that doesn't mean his work with education is done.

Mr. Tompkins hopes to develop a curriculum with another colleague that combines math and science skills to allow students to more easily apply the math principles they've learned to practical problems. He also believes teacher mentoring is an important, and often missing, aspect of education.

"I would like to do more with teacher training," he said. "I think the next big crunch will have to do with developing training for younger teachers. A lot of younger people come in and are unprepared to deal with 20, 30 kids sitting in front of them."

Joseph Oliveri, BSC alumni, knows what to do with 30 kids – make them an audience. "I do actual simulations – not fancy dress-up with period costume, but I carry on a dialogue with myself and another person in history," he said. "It's like telling them a story. They eat it right up. Everybody loves a storyteller."

He himself became involved with history not because of facts and dates, but because of history happening before his eyes. During the Cuban missile crisis, Mr. Oliveri's social studies teacher at Everett High School was called up by the military. When he returned, he told of his experiences in such a way that history became real for Mr. Oliveri.

Today, while teaching at LaLiberte Junior High School in Raynham, Mr. Oliveri runs a mock trial club where he writes testimony based on actual legal cases for students to perform. He has also created "Webquest," a program that teaches students the best way to do historical research over the Internet.

In 1985, he and a colleague organized students to run an event showcasing food and cultural aspects of different countries, raising $1,000 for the Statue of Liberty foundation. He also founded an annual student performance of music and dance from the '50s and '60s that has run for 15 years.

All these programs are his way of interesting his students in a long-gone past. "They come to class saying, 'Why do we have to know this - why do I care about a person who lived 100 years ago?' The most difficult thing to teach them is that history is alive and that history is a powerful tool," he said.

His efforts and achievements impressed the Daughters of the American Revolution who chose him as the state's outstanding teacher of American history on February, 22, 2000, Washington's birthday. Perhaps someday after Mr. Oliveri retires, his name will be featured in the LaLiberte Hall of Fame - after all, he established it.

Janice Smith, '73 BSC graduate and English teacher, knows a bit about winning prestigious awards. She was one of four Massachusetts recipients of the 1999 Milken Family Foundation National Educators Award for her use of technology. The award came with a $25,000 prize and the enthusiastic congratulations of colleagues and former students. "It's been an incredible year," she said.

Ms. Smith's interest in technology began simply. When the web was new, she decided it was something she should learn more about. She began taking courses, traded in her primitive Mac for a new computer, and designed her own web site, which has received several awards from Internet organizations.

"I saw the potential for the Internet and technology as a way to teach students," she said. "Not only does it reach my own students and parents, but I hear from 8th graders around the country and the world. It's just grown and grown and grown."

Her site is a resource for her Weymouth Junior High School students, a place where they can get extra credit assignments, publish their latest poem or pick up tips on grammar. She is constantly fielding questions from English teachers across the country eager to pick her brain on the best ways to teach a particular novel or get kids interested in poetry. One boy in Jordan wrote to ask what students his age in America read. She found that educators in England refer students to her site.

"For me, it's most satisfying to hear from the teachers," she said. "It takes a lot of work, but it's a great outlet for me."

In the classroom, Ms. Smith does everything she can to grip students' interests. Her room is filled with paperbacks. She asks students to discuss the merits of a book vs. its movie version. She mixes the classics with contemporary novels. Ms. Smith is well aware that, as a teacher who wants her students to discover the joy of reading, she is in competition with soccer, club meetings and hundreds of other activities and interests.

Despite the challenge, Ms. Smith derives endless pleasure from her job. She comes from a family with a long history of educators. Perhaps education was inevitable.

"I'm comfortable, I'm happy in the classroom," she said. "Teaching eighth grade keeps you young; teaching in general does. You can't help it - the energy coming in every day with the students. It's a joy to discover the talent that students have."

Discovering the hidden talent in her students is a specialty of Heidi (Magoon) Connor. Her educational career has been centered around special needs students with emotional difficulties or physical disabilities.

"I wanted to give them the empowerment to control things in their life, to put them in a position where they knew they could do it," she said. "Nothing gives you joy like the joy you get from seeing a child succeed despite all the roadblocks."

Mrs. Connor has overcome a severe roadblock herself. After a fall on a slippery pool surface in 1987, Mrs. Connor was struck with reflex sympathetic dystrophy syndrome and fibromyalgia. The nerve damage caused a permanent disability, one that forced her into a wheelchair during her final year at Bridgewater State College.

She is now treated with medication and able to walk, although with difficulty. The pain will never go away, but her spirit is bright. Mrs. Connor's conversations are sprinkled with determined statements, such as "I can't just stop and sit there" and "It's not going to get me down."

Education came naturally to Mrs. Connor who would tutor her younger brother during long rides to Boston where he was treated for a severe asthma condition. While seeking her master's degree from BSC, she began working as a graduate research assistant in the college's grants office. Here she learned how to create a specialized educational program, to collect the documentation and evidence needed to prove the program's value, to get the wording of the grant application just right.

She was in the office the happy day when the call came in awarding BSC the Department of Energy grant that would make the Moakley Center a reality. "We knew the impact of getting that money. It would support educational programs throughout the school," she said. "It was like winning the lottery."

Mrs. Connor's varied career has taken her across the country. She worked to keep Native Americans in school at the University of New Mexico, was instrumental in the founding of a school district in the new community of Rio Rancho, New Mexico, and was a teacher and grant director in the Santa Fe public schools. In Kentucky, she worked on a team that developed state assessment tests for social studies teachers.

After her husband, Michael, joined the Army, she worked as a special education teacher through the Department of Defense at Fort Hood and Fort Knox. She also worked on educational programs for military families and in military communities, such as at Fort Hood where she created an after-school program and evening adult education programs for a community of 586 homes.

"My approach to life is: get involved. If I come to a place where there isn't an educational program, by heck or high water, there's gonna be one," she said.

She and her husband are now stationed at Fort Carson, Colorado. Mrs. Connor is under consideration for a new job as associate professor of education at the University of Colorado. The job would involve teaching courses such as behavior management, applied behavior analysis and educational psychology, along with undergraduate advising.

"Here I am, ready to be a professor myself," she said. "This is just another avenue and another way to continue to be involved in education. I will miss being with younger students; they are my heart. Yet knowing I am working with future teachers, that will be just as much a success for me."

Five educators all chose a different path, a different method of education. Their common bond is their Bridgewater State College experience, which, they all agree, gave them the foundation they needed.

"I don't remember any particular teacher at BSC, but I recall something more powerful than just a single individual," Mr. Oliveri said. "It was the feeling I got. The teachers convinced me not to be afraid to try new things in the classrooms. After going through Bridgewater, I realized there was much more to teaching than just regurgitating information to kids."

Before attending BSC, Mr. Oliveri would stand in front of students and lecture. His lessons at Bridgewater convinced him that education can happen in many, many ways, and it gave him confidence to try new things.

Teachers have had to change, he said, because the students have changed. Many kids, bombarded with multimedia every day of their lives, are bored with education. Some bring to class unbelievable emotional baggage that the public expects teachers to not only cope with but correct.

Teachers are becoming more hands-on, getting "down in the dirt with kids," Mr. Oliveri said. "A good classroom today is not necessarily one where the teacher dominates," he said. "Teachers lead and direct, but must participate at the same time."

Mr. Tompkins, who led his students to the top of Mt. Greylock in search of education, has always known this. "The person standing in front of a lecture is not going to make it," he said. "You have to get kids to tune in and become a part of the process."

He sees the science curriculum becoming deeper, teaching kids about ozone and erosion and global warming, things they see on the news and can wrap their hands around – science as it effects them and their future.

When he was studying for his undergraduate degree in physics, he developed an interest in geology and geography. He turned to Bridgewater for his master's degree because it was the only college where he could study earth science on a part-time basis. He was the first BSC graduate to receive an education degree with a concentration in earth science.

"It filled my bill nicely. They were ahead of their time in offering earth science, which has become a big part of public education," he said. "All the BSC professors were good: Dr. Ira Furlong, Dr. George Weygand, Dr. Robert Boutilier, Dr. Emanuel Maier. I went down there recently, and I was amazed at how it's grown, what a modern school it has become."

Ms. Smith remembers receiving an exemplary, "second to none" education at BSC. The teacher preparation courses were especially strong and her English professors brilliant – Dr. Harold Ridlon, Dr. Joseph DeRocco, Dr. Joseph Yolkson, Dr. Clifford Wood. By the time she had gone through her student teaching, she felt ready to step into the classroom.

All her memories, though, are not of academics. "When I think back to Bridgewater, I think of that long walk from the commuter parking lot to Boyden Hall," she said. "It was just a wind tunnel. I remember thinking there was no colder place on Earth."

After all the colleges and universities Mrs. Connor has seen on her travels, she's convinced "you'd be hard pressed to find programs that cater to the needs of teachers who want to be passionate like Bridgewater."

She fondly remembers Terry Ann Vigil in the grants office; Tracy Baldrate, chairman of the special education department; Maureen Moir with Kappa Delta Phi; Dr. John Bardo, former provost and vice president for academic affairs; Aida Bruns, associate professor emerita from the Department of Social Work; and President Adrian Tinsley, who recommended Mrs. Connor for Disabled Employee of the Month.

In her youth, she had attended PCC, Bridgewater's summer camp program for high school students, and after that "always knew I would be going to BSC. I really do think highly of BSC," she said. "Because of my work in the grants office and other programs, I have so much more that I can do in the education world along with my teaching."

Dr. Martes became convinced teaching was his future after BSC hooked him up with a basketball coaching job in Foxboro. He had been lured to the school by its "terrific reputation" as a teaching college, and once there found the educational program to offer "a nice connection between theory and practice."

Massachusetts has a long history of being a leader in education, and Bridgewater – not to mention the entire state college system – has always met the needs of students, he said.

"I had a terrific experience at Bridgewater," he said. "I can't tell you how proud I felt to be part of the Bridgewater community."

Just as these educators were molded and shaped by their experiences at Bridgewater State College, they are continuing to mold and shape their students.

Teachers have been battered by bad press, rocked by the Education Reform Act. What keeps teachers teaching is the delight Ms. Smith feels when she watches her students' writing improve, or the satisfaction Mr. Oliveri has when the light bulb finally goes on and a student makes a difficult connection.

Through all the changes in society and education, teachers need to remain flexible, be patient and develop their sense of humor. "They have to love this job," Ms. Smith said. "Teaching is demanding. It can be frustrating trying to reach students.

"I have friends in the business world; they are stressed, their jobs are difficult. They don't like their jobs. I go to school happy – happy to see 100 new faces coming through the door." ■

Ray Messier, '71, Turns Part-time Job Into Career

Ray Messier's schedule, as a student at Bridgewater State College 30 years ago, was more hectic than most of his fellow students: in addition to a full load of classes, he was also an editor of the student newspaper, The Comment, and he regularly worked long hours on late night and early morning shifts in the kitchen at the area Mister Donut stores. In 1974, Mr. Messier became the owner of the Mister Donut store at Campus Plaza.

Occasionally, Mr. Messier still works in that same building – which is now a Dunkin' Donuts store – but he isn't in the kitchen baking donuts anymore.

Instead, Mr. Messier is the franchise owner of that location – and eight others in Bridgewater and Halifax – and he is the head of the four different corporations that manage all aspects of the business and which oversee the 175 employees who comprise his staff.

"Making a career in the food service industry wasn't part of my original plan," said Mr. Messier, looking back to his college years. "Originally I had started in high school working part-time as a baker at a Mister Donut store, so when I came to Bridgewater, I just saw this as an opportunity to continue working to help pay for my education."

In fact, when he graduated from college, Mr. Messier left behind his cooking utensils and went to work installing and maintaining sound systems for concerts and other public events. Other than being a customer himself, he thought he wouldn't have any further involvement with the donut business.

"But then, the owner of the Mister Donut franchise for whom I had worked offered me an opportunity. He asked if I might be interested in going into partnership with him in the business," recalled Mr. Messier.

This fall, Ray and Karen decided to celebrate their ties to the college and the Bridgewater community by creating the Dunkin' Donuts/Raymond G. Messier, '71, Scholarship. Their gift supports The Campaign for Bridgewater and will assist future generations of students in our theater and performing arts programs. Thank you Ray and Karen!

Shortly thereafter, Mr. Messier bought the Mister Donut store in Bridgewater. He was now in the business for himself. The Mister Donut Co. was purchased by Dunkin' Donuts and Mr. Messier joined in and converted his then four stores to Dunkin' Donuts.

In the years that followed, Mr. Messier expanded from the original location in Campus Plaza but by choice has concentrated his business in the town of Bridgewater – eight of his nine stores are in Bridgewater – and nearby communities (he has, at various times, had stores in East Bridgewater and West Bridgewater).

He also has two locations on campus, including a "Snack Shack" adjacent to the Moakley Center (a smaller-size version of a regular store) and a location inside the Campus Center.

"I really enjoy the area and the close ties I've been able to make in Bridgewater both with the town and the college," he explained.

"The rapid population growth of the region has of course helped us grow too, but because we've been here so long I'm now serving the grandchildren of the people who were our original customers. I have relationships with people across several generations that are very valuable to me."

Mr. Messier also contributes to a number of local organizations through sponsorships and other activities. "We're connected to the community in many ways. To me, community service is a responsibility of local businesses, a way of saying 'thank you' for your patronage, and I take that responsibility very seriously."

Having been in business for more than three decades, Mr. Messier has seen a number of changes in the food service industry.

"There has been a revolution of sorts in this field," he said. For example, when Mr. Messier first began operating his stores, the menu was much simpler, there were no "drive-thrus," customers were served coffee in china and donuts on plates, and the interior of most donut shops was thick with the smell of cigarettes.

"We've ventured into a lot more products than we used to have, including muffins, sandwiches, and, within last two years, bagels. More recently, Dunkin' Donuts introduced the 'Omwich' – a sandwich on a bagel that comes in three different varieties – and we now offer many more kinds of coffee and other drinks than we used to," Mr. Messier said.

Since the inventory is made fresh constantly, it takes careful management to plan what's needed and in what quantity.

"We have two locations on Route 24 in Bridgewater, and there every day we offer 16 varieties of donuts and nine varieties of bagels. In our stores in town, typically we have 28 to 30 varieties of donuts and 12 varieties of bagels, so it's essential we track closely the selling patterns," he explained.

As the variety of food and beverages are different, so too are the clientele who purchase the items.

"Our Route 24 stores generally cater to people traveling longer distances and truck drivers from all over the country. They know the Dunkin' name and so they stop. At our locations in town near the major highways, it's commuters heading to work. And in the town itself, our customers tend to be local people who we get to know better. It's really a nice mix," he said.

The invention of the drive-through was a boost to business, he believes, because "for a lot of people, time really is crucial – they need to get service as quickly as possible and get back on the road. And it's also been good for mothers with small children because they don't have to take the kids out of the car to walk in to the store. It's just more convenient."

The elimination of china cups and plates has also made service quicker, he stated. "Years ago, it was necessary not only to have the cups and plates on hand but dishwashing equipment to wash them and people to operate the equipment. Also, there were more steps for the server as well – waiting on each customer required twice as long when the china was involved," he said.

As for the prohibition against smoking in stores, Mr. Messier explained that, originally, a number of owners thought business would be hurt. "For a lot of people, drinking coffee and reading the morning paper also meant smoking a cigarette, and there were owners who worried that sales would suffer. There probably was a drop-off initially but it soon recovered, and I'm glad about the rule because it makes for a safer, healthier environment for everyone – staff and customers."

Although Mr. Messier didn't start out to operate a family business, about five years ago he brought his son, Jeff, in as operations manager. "The biggest challenge we have is finding quality employees, and as the business grew, I knew I couldn't do it all alone. Having family members who share your commitment is a real benefit for me."

One last question we had for Mr. Messier: After 30-plus years in the donut business, does he still enjoy the product himself? "I'm one of my better customers," he admitted. "I still love a Boston Cream or a Jelly donut and a cup of coffee. I'm looking forward to serving the town of Bridgewater and the college for years to come," said Mr. Messier. ■

"We're connected to the community in many ways. To me, community service is a responsibility of local businesses, a way of saying 'thank you' for your patronage, and I take that responsibility very seriously."

BSC Alum Receives Leadership Award

By Linda Balzotti

Ms. Noelle Foye, '99, received the second Annual ATHENA Award presented by the Metro South Chamber of Commerce and sponsored by John Hancock Financial Services, Wal-Mart and the Enterprise.

The award was established to recognize outstanding leaders who strive toward the highest level of professional excellence and community service and actively and generously assist women to reach their full leadership potential.

BSC President Adrian Tinsley was among the 13 outstanding and accomplished women nominated for this year's award.

A nine-member selection committee chose Ms. Foye, a Brockton School nurse, based on her significant contributions to the community and, in particular, her dedication to the Girl Scout organization. It is through her involvement with this organization that she has had an opportunity to have a lasting influence on a great number of young women.

The ATHENA leadership model draws on the talent of men and women to affirm a philosophy of leadership that celebrates relationships and service to the community. It creates a new view of balanced leadership and serves as a vehicle for assessing and changing the ways women and men will lead in the new century.

Ms. Foye, in addition to her work with Girl Scouts, has been active with a number of civic organizations including Brockton Youth Soccer, the Kennedy and Arnone Elementary Schools' Parent Advisory Councils, the Goddard and Davis Kindergarten PACs and the Boy Scouts.

She was the student speaker for Bridgewater's spring commencement in 1999. ■

San Jose State Names Softball Coach

By Camella Voci, '01

Dee Dee Enabenter, '83, the third most successful coach in the NCAA Division III softball history, was named the San Jose State head softball coach in July.

Ms. Enabenter was the head softball coach at Bridgewater State College for 16 years where she compiled a 428-154-2 record and was the school's all-time winningest coach in any sport. Her Lady Bears teams advanced to the NCAA Tournament 13 times in 16 years and compiled 21-25 record in the NCAA Tournament. Her 1994 team was the national runner-up after losing to the College of New Jersey, 4-0, in the NCAA Tournament Championship game. The Lady Bears have won the Massachusetts State College Athletic Conference title 12 of the past 13 seasons.

For her efforts, Ms. Enabenter was named the 1994 National Softball Coaches Association Division III Coach of the Year. She was also named the 1996 NSCA Division III Coach of the Year for her team, which finished with a 35-5 record and had a 26-game winning streak. Ms. Enabenter was a five-time National Fastpitch Coaches Association Regional Coach of the Year including the 2000 season.

Besides her duties at Bridgewater State College, Ms. Enabenter spent the summers of 1995 and 1996 traveling in Africa to coach the Nigerian National Softball team in their preparation for the annual Africa Games that are played in the fall.

Ms. Enabenter graduated from Bridgewater State College in 1983 with a degree in physical education and a minor in recreation and health. She was a softball and basketball star while attending school. Ms. Enabenter was inducted into the Bridgewater State College Hall of Fame in 1995. ■

World War II Veteran to Earn College Degree After Lifetime of Work and Family

By Julie Santos Reardon, '91

When James Ingargiola was a boy, his interest in school only went as far as the playground. That's where his mind was, he said, even when his body was seated at a desk. A seventh-grade teacher, the first male teacher he'd ever had, managed to catch the young boy's attention and develop in him a lifelong interest in learning.

But December 7, 1941 came not long after the seventh grade, bringing with it the beginning of the American involvement in World War II and a long road that led that young boy to work, to war and to college at the age of 70.

Mr. Ingargiola, a native of Brockton known affectionately as "Mr. I" to many of his young friends, began pursuing a bachelor's degree in English at BSC in 1995. One of his own daughters was attending BSC at the time, and brought home a form she asked him to sign. He asked what it was, and she said it was a registration form for him. He told her he had no intention of starting college at his age. His daughter, however, reminded him that he loved to write, but that he needed to learn more about becoming a good writer. The things he could learn in college, she said, might help him to improve upon an unpublished book he'd written about childhood in the past and today.

And so Mr. Ingargiola, a World War II veteran, retired pipe fitter, father of 11 and grandfather of 23, became a college freshman alongside students more than 50 years his junior.

"It was strange," Mr. Ingargiola recalled. "I felt very out of place at first."

But it wasn't long before he felt more comfortable, he said, noting that he's a "kid at heart, anyway." He established strong relationships with his professors, especially his adviser, English professor Dr. Lois

Poule, and Dr. Leslie Angell, another of his favorite English professors. He also became active in OASIS, a group for nontraditional students advised by Dorie AuCoin, assistant director of PROGRESS/OUTREACH, and as a student advocate with Pam Spillane, learning disabilities specialist in the Academic Achievement Center. He made use of the math and writing labs in the Maxwell Library. His hard work will pay off this spring, but Mr. Ingargiola wasn't always so sure he'd make it to graduation day.

"It hasn't all been easy," he said. "I've had my struggles here."

One of those struggles was passing the required algebra class. At first, he was convinced he couldn't do it. But with help from tutors at the lab and a lot of hard work, he passed his final in magnificent fashion – he got 29 problems out of 30 correct.

"I love a challenge," he said.

Mr. Ingargiola has had plenty of those in his lifetime. He remembers his childhood as a happy one, although he says now he didn't realize how good he had it at the time. He also didn't realize how short his childhood would be. When the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor in 1941, both of his brothers were drafted, leaving only James to support his mother. He quit school and went to work in a shipyard. He wanted to help his mother and his country.

"I was very patriotic," he said. "I still am."

He thought the war would end before he was old enough to go, but three years later he was in the U.S. Marine Corps. He saw action in the Pacific, Guam and Iwo Jima, and saw his fellow Marines raise the American flag over Mount Suribachi. He was discharged in 1946. He married soon after he came home, and the demands of work and raising children never left much time for pursuing higher education, although he did earn his GED.

Once, at 35, he recalled a minister who suggested to him that he pursue a college education. He wouldn't consider it at the time, because he thought 35 was much too old to begin college.

So, like many men of his generation, Mr. Ingargiola never experienced many carefree years as a young man. Last fall, the City of Brockton thanked Mr. Ingargiola and 33 other men for their sacrifices as part of Operation Recognition, a program that presents diplomas to the men and women who left high school to serve their country in WWII. In May of 2001, Mr. Ingargiola will celebrate another graduation – this time, from Bridgewater State College. He still has a few courses to go, but feels confident he'll finish on time. Of course, he has every reason to expect he'll do well in his World War II history class this fall.

He's joined at Bridgewater this fall by grandson Jeff, an outstanding student and baseball player who is beginning his freshman year. The daughter who once prodded him to enroll at BSC will be returning to school here in January.

After graduation, Mr. Ingargiola plans to rewrite his book and hopes to see it published one day. He'll also have more time for the other pursuits he enjoys – playing golf and singing with a barbershop group called Together Again in Harmony. One thing he won't have time for is lamenting that he never earned his college degree.

"You can't sit around thinking, 'Oh, I never did this, I never did that,'" he said. "You have to think, 'I didn't before, but I will now.'" ■

Hard Work of Committee Instrumental in Campus Beautification

By David Wilson, '71

First-time visitors to the college routinely remark on how beautiful the campus looks. Returning alums have a different reaction: to them, the campus looks so much better than they remember it.

But the faculty, staff and students who cross the grounds each day have the best perspective of all, because they notice immediately when new flowers or shrubs are planted, or new signage appears or new lighting is installed. And they had the chance to watch as – step-by-step over the past two years – the Campus Center Courtyard project created a spacious new public garden in the very heart of the main campus.

“Everyone seems to be pleased with the many improvements that have been made in the appearance of the campus overall, and the Campus Center Courtyard is certainly a ‘crowning achievement’ of that effort,” says Dr. Wayne Phillips, who for the past seven years has served as chairman of the Campus Beautification Committee.

Dr. Phillips, who has been a faculty member in the Department of Elementary and Early Childhood Education for more than 30 years, and is a graduate of the college himself (class of '62), traces the committee's origin to a casual conversation he had with President Tinsley in the fall of 1993.

“My wife, Linda, who holds a master's degree ('73) from the college, and I were at an event with Dr. Tinsley in Boston, and on the ride home, Linda and I mentioned our interest in campus beautification. We had taken several evening walks around the campus and, frankly, were unhappy with the way things looked,” recalls Dr. Phillips. “It was evident right away that Dr. Tinsley shared our concern, and she agreed that the grounds and general appearance needed work. She asked if I'd be willing to form a committee to study the situation and make recommendations.”

Out of that conversation there indeed came a committee, and then a number of studies and recommendations, and – soon enough – a plan of action that has literally transformed the college's entire physical plant.

“Bridgewater has always had a magnificent campus, so the underpinnings were already in place,” says Dr. Phillips. “Our job as a committee was to suggest how to enhance and improve the grounds and building exteriors, and with the president's enthusiastic backing and support – and with enormous help from the facilities and grounds staff – the changes started taking place.”

Joining Dr. Phillips on the committee were Dr. Dana Mohler-Faria, vice president for administration and finance; Dr. Lynette Willett, vice president for student affairs; Dr. William Smith, Department of English; Dr. William Kendall, Department of Art; and, eventually, Mr. Keith Macdonald, assistant director of facilities and the grounds manager who was hired in 1994 on the committee's recommendation because of his extensive experience in horticulture and resource management.

“My gratitude to these people is profound because they have devoted countless hours over the years to the committee's work,” states Dr. Phillips. “I think it's a good thing we really didn't know how much work was ahead of us when we began because it might have been overwhelming. But we took it project by project and that made the effort manageable.”

The list of accomplishments is indeed impressive. As a direct result of the committee's recommendations, more than 7,500 flowers have been planted, new walkways have been constructed and landscaped, outdoor lighting has been improved all over the campus, handsome park benches – inscribed with the college's name – line the college's many tree-shaded paths, and the

Dr. Wayne Phillips, Campus Beautification Committee Chairman

Stearns-McNamara Memorial Garden between Pope Hall and the Science Building has sitting areas and a new gate, paid for in part by a donation from the class of 1945.

There are college signs in many new locations, and Dr. Phillips tells an interesting story of how signage became a priority.

“One day, not long after the committee began its work, several of us were behind Boyden Hall talking about various projects and a delivery truck pulled up. The driver leaned out the window and asked, ‘Can you tell me if this is Bridgewater State College?’ We knew right away that getting signs up had to be an urgent task.”

Work on campus beautification has proceeded full speed over the last several years, but in terms of scale, the Campus Center Courtyard project, which commenced in the summer of 1999, has been the largest and most visible change resulting from the efforts of Dr. Phillips' committee.

“This too has an interesting origin,” Dr. Phillips says.

“At our very first meeting now nearly seven years ago, which took place in a second floor conference room in Boyden Hall, we looked out the window across the quadrangle toward the area behind the Campus Center, where a fountain in disrepair and tennis courts that looked bedraggled were located. It was not an attractive picture. We said, almost in unison, 'this has to go.' ”

To older graduates – those before 1960, the area under discussion is remembered as the location of a campus pond. By the time that Dr. Phillips graduated, the pond had disappeared and the area was a parking lot.

The construction in 1970 of what is today the Adrian Rondileau Campus Center (formerly, the Student Union) made it possible to landscape the area behind the building and install a fountain, but space was limited because the tennis courts (constructed originally in the 1890s and renovated a half dozen times since) were there and despite many attempts, the fountain never seemed to operate for more than short periods of time.

“The location is crucial because looking out from Boyden Hall, or driving anywhere on this side of the move ahead and a number of different parties had to be consulted.

Years passed, many plans were considered and then dropped.

“But our committee wasn’t going to give up because every time there was an outdoor activity on this side of the campus, such as a reception for new students in the fall or one for graduates in the spring, that was the only location large enough to accommodate a crowd. Always there were those tennis courts and a fountain that worked only sporadically. It was almost claustrophobic,” says Dr. Phillips.

Eventually, the committee’s determination paid off. Approval was finally given in 1997 to hire a landscape architect to design the project, and after a careful review of potential designers, Nancy Denig of Denig Design Associates was selected for the project. “She did a

The committee, he says, “worked incessantly for months” to move the project forward.

When classes ended in the spring of 1999, heavy equipment rolled and work in earnest began in the summer of 1999 on Phase I of the project, which involved the removal of the fountain and the demolition of the tennis courts (replaced by a smaller recreational area).

Phase II construction began soon after which created a wide-open, handicapped accessible, well-lighted public gathering area behind the Campus Center that is nearly the size of the college’s quadrangle.

Phase III, which will take place in the summer of 2001, will lead to a complete makeover for the courtyard between the Campus Center and the Maxwell Library.

“Now that the first two phases are done, we can see the effect and it is just as dramatic as we hoped it would be,” says Dr. Phillips. “Thanks to the efforts of many people, the Campus Center Courtyard is a large, livable and open space that welcomes the community to relax and enjoy the surroundings.”

However, he hastens to add that the work of the Campus Beautification Committee is not over. “Far from it,” says Dr. Phillips. “With 235 acres and 30-plus buildings, and several more new buildings about to be constructed, there will be plenty to do for a very long time.” ■ campus, all one could see in that area was those very unattractive tennis courts and a non-functioning fountain,” explains Dr. Phillips.

Making that change was, however, “a very long haul,” admits Dr. Phillips, because an alternate space for the tennis courts had to be found before the project could terrific job of creating a plan that would achieve all of our goals,” says Dr. Phillips.

Plans were developed, studied, debated and ultimately approved. There was, explains Dr. Phillips, a lot to consider: “This is a project so big that it’s being done in three phases over a three-year period of time.”

Scholarship Recipients Recognized for Their Outstanding Achievements

By Linda Balzotti

Senator Paul Tsongas Scholarship recipients from the nine state colleges were recognized at a luncheon held at the State House in April. This is the third year the scholarships have been awarded.

Bridgewater State College students Dawn Brooder, Kelly Famolare, Molly Gilmour, Jennifer Grunin, Emily Harrison and Jamie Tanguay were the recipients of the scholarship created to honor the life and work of the late U.S. Senator Paul Tsongas.

Tsongas Scholars receive a full, four-year scholarship to a state college. Students selected are among the most academically talented students in the state.

The program is designed to further Senator Tsongas' belief in the need for an educated citizenry and the role public higher education plays in meeting that need. Senator Tsongas served as chairman of the state Board of Regents, a predecessor body for the Board of Higher Education.

Those speaking at the luncheon focused on the achievements of the man for whom the scholarship is named as well as those of this year's recipients.

"I would like to congratulate all of this year's recipients. It is a tribute to both you and your families that you have achieved this level of academic achievement," said Stephen P. Tocco, chairman of the Board of Higher Education. "You are the cornerstone to the future of our economy and the Commonwealth."

The scholarship was created as a tribute to Senator Tsongas' passion for public service leadership and academic achievement.

"Senator Tsongas had a vision and a purpose. He believed there was a clear correlation between educational success and economic success," said Dr. Judith Gill, chancellor of the Board of Higher Education. "Choose to use what you have learned to improve the economy and to make a difference. You have a responsibility to honor Senator Tsongas' name and you were chosen for this honor because we believe you will do just that."

The Honorable Thomas Finneran, Speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, provided some sound advice for the students to consider for the remainder of their academic career.

"Focus and apply yourself. Make the best of the skills that God gave you and with those skills you can soar," said Speaker Finneran. "Your place is waiting for you. You are the eagles and we will be carried by your wings."

Blue Cross and Blue Shield, for the third time, was the host and sponsor for the luncheon to recognize the 53 young men and women who are preparing to meet the challenges of the future.

"After today, you will always be recognized as a Tsongas Scholar. Thank you for the potential you have demonstrated and for what you will accomplish in the future," said Mr. Peter Meade, executive vice president of Blue Cross and Blue Shield. "You represent an investment in our future."

The BSC Tsongas Scholars who attended the luncheon were Kelly Famolare, Jennifer Grunin and Emily Harrison. They were accompanied by their parents and President Adrian Tinsley; Vice President of Student Affairs Lynn Willett; Pamela Parsons, assistant to President Tinsley; and Eva Gaffney, director of public affairs. ■

BSC Makes List Of "America's Most Wired Colleges 2000"

Yahoo! Internet Life has named Bridgewater State College to its list of "America's Most Wired Colleges 2000". BSC finished at number 97 in the "Top 100 Universities" category. Yahoo, for survey purposes, uses school population to determine whether an institution falls into the college or university category.

Survey organizers invited all 3,631 open-enrollment accredited undergraduate two-year and four-year institutions in the United States to participate.

Nearly 1,300 schools from all 50 states responded to the third annual survey, which collects data on-line from respondents about their network systems, student web services and their plans for incorporating technology into all aspects of campus life.

Results were tabulated and reviewed by the editors of Yahoo! Internet Life, who determined the final rankings for the institutions. ■

New Academic Leadership in Place for the Start of School

By Linda Balzotti

Bridgewater State College's academic leadership team reached a new and pivotal moment this spring with the departure of Provost Ann Lydecker to become Chancellor of the University of Wisconsin-River Falls.

On July 1, Dr. Laurence Richards was named acting vice president for academic affairs and dean of the School of Management and Aviation Science. Dr. Richards will work to carry on initiatives outlined in the college's mission implementation plan approved by the Board of Higher Education.

He will be joined in his efforts by Dr. Ronald Cromwell, dean of the School of Education and Allied Studies and Dr. Howard London, dean of the School of Arts and Sciences. He will also be working with two new members of the academic leadership team: Dr. Patricia O'Brien in the newly-created position of assistant vice president for academic affairs, and Dr. Dorothy Oppenheim, acting associate dean for the School of Management and Aviation Science. Both were appointed July 1.

Together, this academic leadership team will work on the revision of the general education requirements, reaccreditation for the School of Education and Allied Studies from the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education, accreditation for the School of Management and Aviation Science from the International Assembly for Collegiate Business Education and evaluation of other programs for possible accreditation.

"My new role presents several new challenges. As dean, I was responsible for approximately 24 full-time faculty members, now I oversee 270," Dr. Richards said. "The faculty is the heart of the institution. My first priority, in this new position, was to develop an action plan for the division that ensures an environment where the faculty can continue to do their job well."

Working with Dr. Richards in the office of academic affairs will be Dr. Patricia O'Brien, the former director of institutional research and assessment. In her new position as assistant vice president for academic affairs, Dr. O'Brien will coordinate the four academic administrative units of the division - the academic achievement center, institutional research and assessment, grants and sponsored projects and student records and registration. The assistant vice president will work closely with the director of each of these offices to insure their goals and objectives are met.

"It is important, as we look to BSC's future, to recognize and capitalize on the areas that work well, to identify areas that may need improvement and together find ways to make an already strong organization even stronger," Dr. O'Brien said. "I look forward to working with my colleagues to meet these challenges."

Dr. Dorothy Oppenheim, who began teaching at BSC in 1996, will serve as acting associate dean of the School of Management and Aviation Science while Dr. Richards undertakes his additional duties.

She will be responsible for the day-to-day business operation of the school with a focus on preparation of an outcomes assessment plan, a self-study for the accreditation visit by the IACBE in the fall of 2002 and increasing enrollment and exposure for the new master of science degree in management (see page 46).

The School of Management and Aviation Science has undergone several changes in the last three years, including the hiring of Dean Richards, the creation of the new master's degree program and the addition of the economics department to the school this fall.

Dr. Oppenheim reflects on the changes her new role will bring to her career.

"I will miss the day-to-day interaction with students in the classroom, but I look forward to working with the faculty to help our students succeed, which is the reason why we are all here." ■

Honor Roll of Donors

July 1, 1999 to June 30, 2000

Endowment Exceeds Six and a Half Million

At the end of June, the combined endowment stood at $6.5 million. In addition, we have pledges to the Campaign for Bridgewater totaling $1.5 million. Endowment funds provide an important element of stability in our environment of fluctuating state support. An endowment of $10 million (our goal) will generate $500,000 each year to address the greatest needs of the college, providing a significant margin for excellence.

The Annual Fund...This Year and Every Year

Annual Giving is the cornerstone of giving to any college. The dollars raised through the Annual Fund at Bridgewater State College represent thousands of gifts from alumni and others who care deeply about our college. This year, we are especially grateful to the 30% of those who responded to the year-end appeal with an increase in their level of giving.

Over $1,300,000 Raised in Fiscal Year 2000

Because you cared, over $1,300,000 was donated this past year. Alumni donations counted for almost $600,000 of this total! Many thanks to our loyal alumni and other benefactors for their kindness.

FY2000 Gifts by Purpose

THANK YOU

On the following pages we recognize those individuals and organizations that made Bridgewater State College the beneficiary of their philanthropy during our past fiscal year. Please join us in thanking them for their gifts and support.

Bequests

We appreciate the foresight of the individuals listed below. Remembering the college in your will means a lot to future generations of Bridgewater students and faculty.

Frances Baldwin '27	$2,775	Class of 1927
Lois R. Pickering	$10,622	Minnie L. Hodgate, Class of 1899, Memorial Scholarship Fund
Jane Unsworth '53	$10,000	Moriarty Lecture Fund

1840 Society Bridgewater State College Foundation

The 1840 Society was established in 1997 to recognize individuals who have notified the college that they have designated a gift to Bridgewater State College Foundation either through a bequest, or a current life income or planned gift. These gifts are vital to the future of the college.

There are two ways to participate in the 1840 Society. First, an individual may establish a charitable gift annuity, or remainder trust with the college, or with their own bank or financial adviser. Secondly, alumni and friends of the college are encouraged to include Bridgewater State College Foundation in their will, or as a beneficiary of an IRA or pension fund.

There are 28 individuals that have notified the Foundation that they have included the college in their estate plans.

For further details or sample bequest language, please contact Jane Bradford, '72 G'76, assistant vice president for development at Davis Alumni Center, Bridgewater State College Foundation, Bridgewater, MA 02325, or phone her at (508) 531-2946.

Dr. Joseph Huber Earns Recognition

By Camella Voci, '01

Throughout his 27-year career at BSC, Dr. Joseph Huber has dedicated his time and energy to numerous community projects and clinics.

This year, the Disability International Foundation has awarded Dr. Huber its Community Service Award.

The award honors people who dedicate their time and effort to better the lives of individuals with disabilities.

Dr. Huber's community service includes consulting, advocacy activities and memberships on numerous boards of service groups, volunteer agencies, clinics and hospitals throughout New England. Dr. Huber is currently the assistant editor of "Palestria: The Forum of Sport Physical Education & Recreation for Those with Disabilities."

In conjunction with helping the disabled, Dr. Huber involves his students in service projects to prepare them for a future in helping individuals with disabilities. For eight years, Dr. Huber, along with students from the special education and physical education departments, were responsible for the organization and administration of the wheelchair division of the Boston Marathon. This experience gave students the opportunity to learn about the personal and athletic needs of the participants.

"It is beneficial to learn firsthand, because a student cannot obtain this from a textbook," Dr. Huber said.

Dr. Huber's most prized accomplishment to date is the founding of the Children's Physical Developmental Clinic, which began in 1974. The CPDC, established in Dr. Huber's first year at BSC, is still the only clinic of its kind in New England. Students work to help children develop the motor skills they need to live a normal life in the areas of employment as well as leisure and recreation.

The BSC clinic has not only grown in the number of students dedicated to helping, but also in the number of children who are served. The clinic, in 1974, consisted of 25 students and served 23 children from two communities. This year, 120 students from 12 different majors will work together to serve 75 children from 42 different communities.

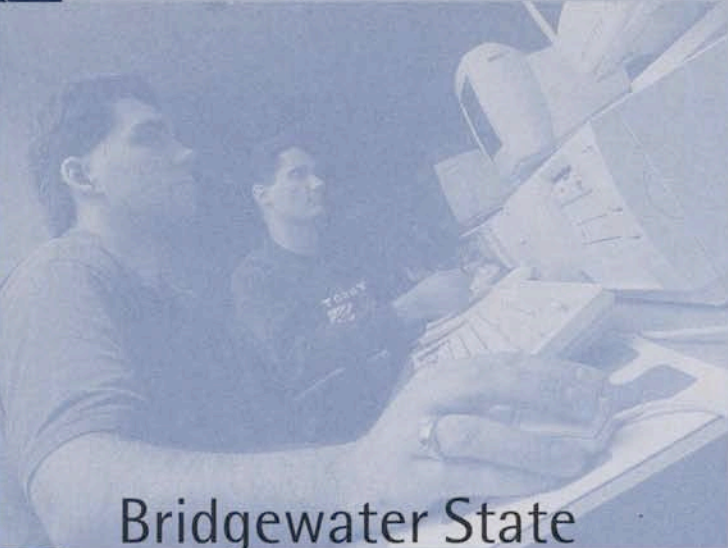

Dr. Huber said the award reflects the hard work and dedication involved in the clinic. "This award is a representation of all the fine work past and present students have done," Dr. Huber said. "They are being recognized as well as myself." ■

The bench around the tree in the background was placed there in honor of President Tinsley's 10 years of leadership at the college, which she celebrated in June of 1999. The quote on the stone reads, "There is a person you won't become if you don't take the next step." The stone and bench are located on the School Street side of Boyden Hall. ■

Bridgewater State College Offers New Master's Program

By Linda Balzotti

Bridgewater State College's School of Management and Aviation Science will be offering a new master's degree program beginning this fall.

The Master of Science in Management draws upon the college's extensive technological resources and offers five concentrations: accounting, global electronic commerce, technology management, marketing and organizational development.

"This particular program evolved after lengthy discussions with the college's business advisory council, members of the faculty and community business representatives," said Dr. Larry Richards, acting vice president for academic affairs and dean of the School of Management and Aviation Science. "It became clear that given the college's strengths and resources and the need for this particular type of program that this was the direction to take."

The unique component to this program is the five-year B.S./M.S.M. offering. Undergraduates who have completed at least 30 credit hours of coursework at BSC and can complete all requirements for their bachelor's degree in 30 additional credits may apply for the five-year program. Those admitted will take a mix of undergraduate and graduate courses during their fourth and fifth year. This will enable them to graduate with both degrees.

"The idea of five-year bachelor's/master's degree is not new. It exists at other institutions and is growing in popularity," said Dr. Richards. "It is the first time it will be tried here at BSC."

The 30-credit evening program is also designed to accommodate the schedules of working professionals and includes a core of six courses and a concentration area of four courses. Prerequisite courses include one undergraduate course each in accounting, finance, marketing, law and statistics. A three-course graduate sequence also satisfies the prerequisite requirements. ■

Message from Robert Carter, '51, Alumni Association President

An alumnus whose parents were of modest means said he was grateful to our college. Bridgewater provided him with a fine education at a low cost that qualified him for an occupation where a college degree was required. As a result, he and his family enjoy a comfortable lifestyle. "How can I help?" he asked out of gratitude.

At 32,000 thousand strong, our Alumni Association is both the college's largest constituency and its largest untapped potential. This year, your Alumni Board hopes to generate support from alums that recognize, as does the alum above, that it would be redeeming if we can make the college better for current and future students.

A step in that direction will be the establishment of Bridgewater Alumni Clubs, not only in Massachusetts, but also in various cities nationwide. This effort was "market tested" last year when gatherings were held in Boston, San Diego, Portsmouth (NH), Providence (RI), and two in Florida. All were well attended, generated enthusiasm and indicated organization of clubs would be successful. At each location, volunteers offered to lead. It appears the untapped Bridgewater potential just needs to be tapped. Please help!

A college segment that is very successful at rallying alums back to the college is the Athletic Department. Their annual events such as the Football Alumni Golf Day and Dinner, the Hockey Alums Club Game, the Athletic Hall of Fame Dinner and others are all popular. Without interfering, we would like to "piggy back" on to this momentum by having an event on Alumni Weekend that would appeal to our former athletes.

Additionally, we are attempting to design a program where interested alum athletes and non-athletes could function as scouts to uncover talent for our coaches. Their efforts would be rewarded, not only by personal satisfaction, but also by sitting on the bench during a game or meet as a "Guest Coach." Please help!

We are eager to provide opportunities for other interest groups as well – former SGA members, or history majors or Comment staffers. How can we help you get connected back to Bridgewater?

Your Alumni Board of Directors recognizes the need for growth and increased participation as well. In an effort to expand on our experience, we will invite other Alumni Association Boards from the other eight state colleges to Bridgewater for a forum discussing how we can all do it better.

Additionally, we have committed to increased participation in such significant college events: the Annual Fund drive, Chairmen's Dinner, Alumni Weekend, Homecoming, Alumni Major Awards Banquet, Afro-American Dinner Dance and more. These are stimulating happenings. Please join us.

The trustees and administration have done and continue to do a marvelous job in growing all areas of your college. Bridgewater is now the largest of the state colleges with over 9,000 students, including 5,500 full-time students.

Physical plant expansion plans are dynamic. With the funding in place, the college will build a field house, a new residence hall to house 300 students, plus a new dining hall seating 750. When this construction is completed, Bridgewater's total square footage under roof will be second only to the University of Massachusetts at Amherst among the state colleges and universities. Our momentum is terrific. Please help!

The leadership of the trustees and members of the Foundation is exciting, too. Their original goal was to create an endowment of $5 million by 2002. With your generosity, they exceeded that over a year ago and now have a concentrated drive to reach $10 million by 2002. An endowment of this size will generate $500,000 to address the greatest needs of the college over and above state support every year. With your annually increasing support, we will do it. We are on target. Please help!

You should be aware that dollars contributed to the Annual Fund are not used to support Alumni Association programs. We are funded through the college.

Your alumni Board of Directors will work diligently to help you make your Alumni Association outstanding. We now have the most capable professional staff ever working in the Davis Alumni Center. Everything is conducive to our productively elevating the current surge of momentum. Please help!

Robert Carter,
BAA president

BSC Hosts Sail Boston Celebration

More than 100 Bridgewater alumni, board members and guests attended the Sail Boston celebration on July 15. A special BSC tent was set up at Black Falcon Pier adjacent to the tall ships to welcome the group when they arrived. Guests roamed the docks viewing the ships and enjoyed the catered reception. Dusty Rhodes, organizer of the Sail Boston event, attended a Bridgewater State College sponsored Pawtucket Red Sox game last summer and enjoyed herself so much that she invited the college to have this special reserved spot on the pier for their reception.

After admiring the ships the BSC group proceeded over to the FleetBoston Pavilion where the Boston Pops Esplanade Orchestra featuring Irish tenor John McDermott entertained them. A fireworks extravaganza put on by two competing fireworks companies over Boston Harbor followed the rousing concert. ■

Communication Highlights Seventh Annual Chairmen's Dinner

Communication – with laughter, with tears, with pride and with joy – was on stage at the seventh annual Chairmen's Dinner, Bridgewater State College's single largest evening of fund-raising staged during the academic year.

WBZ-TV 4 reporter David Robichaud, who earned a degree in communications at BSC in 1983, was the featured speaker as the program highlighted the college's Department of Communication Studies. The event was held in Flynn Dining Commons on May 19, the evening before commencement.

Ice sculpture of The Campaign for Bridgewater logo was on display.

Alan Comedy, assistant to the president for affirmative action and minority affairs, speaks with WBZ-TV 4 reporter David Robichaud and Eileen Robichaud.

Mr. Robichaud brought along actual report cards stashed away by his mother and mounted clips of his work on The Comment as he recounted his days at BSC with humor, pride and joy. He said he always wears his BSC class ring on his right hand so the television camera can photograph the ring when he is on the air.

Approximately 225 individuals attended the event, which saw a record number of corporate and individual table sponsors. Cohosts Frederick Clark, '83, chairman of the Board of Trustees, and Louis Ricciardi, '81, chairman of the Foundation, welcomed the gathering.

In her greetings, President Adrian Tinsley reviewed many of the changes planned for the campus in the upcoming years, such as the new field house, residence hall and dining facility on the East Side of campus.

She also pointed to the need for the college to continue to grow its endowment, which has surpassed the $6.5 million mark, to enable the college to maintain levels of excellence well into the future. The college, at an early-March event, announced its $10 million endowment campaign – "The Campaign for Bridgewater" – with a goal date of June 30, 2002. ■

Bridgewater Alumni Association Presents Awards

On May 6, 2000 alumni and friends gathered on campus to honor four alumni and two faculty members for their outstanding service and dedication to Bridgewater State College. Excerpts from the presentations appear here. To make nominations for the 2001 awards, please see the card in the front of the magazine.

Nancy Seablom Sarno, '64, and Associate Dean Martha Jones, '64

Outstanding Service to the Alumni Association

Nancy J. Seablom Sarno, '64

Nancy Seablom Sarno graduated from Bridgewater State College in 1964 and has been teaching physical education at the Cardinal Spellman High School in Brockton for the past two years.

Ms. Sarno has been an active member of the Bridgewater State College Alumni Association for a number of years. She has served as an alumni board member and as chairperson of the BAA Awards, Scholarship and Recognition Committee, for many years. She was actively involved in establishing the Shea Scholar Program, the Dr. V. James DiNardo Award for Excellence in Teaching, the Dr. Adrian Rondileau Award for Professional Achievement and Community Services and the BAA Sesquicentennial Scholarship Award. She currently serves as secretary to the Hyannis-Bridgewater Physical Education Alumni Association Board.

Ms. Sarno, and her husband Tony, who was the president of the class of 1964, reside in Bridgewater and are the parents of Lauren and Jon.

The Award for Exceptional Dedication to Students

Professor Sylvia Keyes

Professor Sylvia Keyes has spent the last 18 years at Bridgewater State College working with students on hundreds of projects, for a large number of private and public organizations, in varied locations.

As founder and adviser to the BSC Chapter of the American Marketing Association, Professor Keyes has won the student-nominated Hugh G. Wales Faculty Advisor of the Year Award in both 1995 and 1997. She is currently one of the eight-member AMA collegiate chapters council that oversees more than 400 collegiate chapters of the AMA in North America.

In the fall of 1999, Professor

Dr. George Weygand, '53, and Professor Sylvia Keyes

Keyes accompanied 14 students on a one-day trip to present a proposal to executives of Time Magazine. Some other initiatives that developed into activities are:

- Investigating tourists preferences in and around Plymouth Rock and its surrounding attractions

- Riding on buses and standing in terminals to learn passenger preferences for regional transit authorities, while monitoring application of textbook concepts
- Designing the research and collecting data and pricing points for the Massachusetts license plate that commemorates the logo "Preserve the Trust"
- Projects have been so successful that she now is able to provide alumni with projects for their companies.

Dr. Robert Fitzgibbons and Margaret Joyce, '56 G'64

Dr. V. James DiNardo Award for Excellence in Teaching

Dr. Robert Fitzgibbons

Dr. Fitzgibbons began his career at Bridgewater State College in 1968 as a part-time instructor in philosophy. He earned an A.B. in German from Tufts University in 1963, and a Ph.D. in philosophy from Boston University in 1972.

During the past 32 years, Dr. Fitzgibbons has been a productive scholar, and an enthusiastic, influential teacher. In the course of a 32-year career that has put literally thousands of students under his guidance, Dr. Fitzgibbons has made contributions to their intellectual, emotional and moral development. He represents to his students not only a model of academic discipline and learning but also someone who is thoroughly immersed in the traditions and problems of philosophy.

Dr. Catherine E. Comeau Award for Professional Achievement in the Field of Movement Arts, Health Promotion and Leisure Studies

Diana L. Demetrius, '82

Ms. Demetrius received her Bachelor of Science degree in Physical Education from Bridgewater State College in 1982. She went on to earn an M.Ed in Curriculum Development and Computers in Education from Lesley College in 1990. She is currently a physical education and health teacher for grades K-5 at the Mapleshade Elementary School in East Longmeadow. Ms. Demetrius is also a cooperating teacher for Westfield State College, Springfield College and the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

She is actively involved in the Massachusetts Association for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance (MAHPERD) and the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance (AAHPERD). She has received numerous awards and honors from both organizations. In 1996, she received the Massachusetts Elementary Physical Education Teacher of the Year Award from MAHPERD, and in 1999, she received the AAHPERD Outstanding Service Award.

Dr. Catherine E. Comeau and Diana Demetrius, '82

Daniel Couet, '83, and Professor Jack Jones, '64

Dr. Adrian Rondileau Award for Professional Achievement and Community Service

Daniel Couet, '83

Daniel Couet received a Master of Education in Counseling from Bridgewater State College in 1982. Mr. Couet is currently vice president of programs at the Kennedy Donovan Center located in Foxboro. He has dedicated himself to improve the lives of those who face a variety of challenges. His investment in time and dedication has been returned to him with laughter, broad smiles of joy, first steps of a child whose parent was told she would never walk and words from a deaf child whose hearing was corrected by a cochlear implant.

Mr. Couet's professional affiliations include Massachusetts Early Intervention Consortium, Greater New Bedford Health and Human Services Coalition, Greater New Bedford Community Health Network Area and many more. He is also active in the Diocese of Fall River and the Freetown Youth Athletics Association. He and his family live in Freetown. His daughter, Becky, is a BSC student, class of 2002.

Nicholas P. Tillinghast Award for Achievement in the Field of Education

Dr. Paul R. Dauphinais, '77

Dr. Dauphinais received a Bachelor of Arts degree in English in 1977. After teaching in New Hampshire and Massachusetts, Dr. Dauphinais joined the U.S. Navy. His association with the Navy spanned 21 years as both an active duty and a reserve officer.

When Dr. Dauphinais left active duty, he enrolled at the University of Maine at Orono as a doctoral student in Canadian history. He was recently appointed president at York County Technical College in Wells, Maine.

Dr. Paul Dauphinais, '77, and Professor Joseph Yeskewicz

Prior to his appointment at York County Technical College, he served in a variety of positions in student and academic affairs. He developed expertise in enrollment management, new program development and institutional research. Each of his previous institutions has experienced enrollment growth during his tenures.

His desire to lead a growing progressive institution of technology led him to become president of York County Technical College. His accomplishments exemplify high achievement in the field of education. ■

Afro-Am Alumni Council Seeks to Improve Retention

The Afro-Am Alumni Council has been extremely active during this past year offering programs and excellent opportunities to assist and meet students. The council is always looking for willing alumni to participate in its programs and support the aims and mission of the council, assisting and helping students of color be successful at Bridgewater State College. Its theme for this academic year is retention, and all of its programs are focused on that theme. To access its web page and review our calendar of events, please go to www.bridgew.edu.AfroAmAlum.

On May 13th the Afro-Am Alumni, with the Office of Multicultural Affairs, held its annual Kente Cloth presentation and breakfast in the Campus Center. More than 35 students and alumni attended this event to recognize the graduating students of color. Ms. Karen Lea Johnson, director of the Office of Multicultural Affairs, and Mr. John 'Lenny' McLean, president of the Afro-Am Alumni Council, gave brief remarks congratulating the students and encouraging them to continue their success, as well as their education.

At the conclusion of the Kente Cloth presentation, the Afro-Am Alumni Council and the students went to Bridgewater Elementary School Complex and played a spirited game of basketball.

Approximately 35 students and alumni attended the game. The students won the game. It was a fun and memorable day.

On July 22, the Afro-Am Alumni Council held its 2nd annual cook-out at John 'Lenny' McLean's house. Approximately 40 students and alumni attended. The purpose of this event was to congratulate the graduating seniors and to enjoy a day of fun, good food and good conversation. It was also Afro-Am Alumni Council's way of welcoming the new graduating class.

Afro-Am Alumni Council leadership — John 'Lenny' McLean, president; Michael P. Henry, vice president; Jackie Ware-Tucker, secretary; Ann Ulett, co-treasurer; Darryl MacArthur, co-treasurer; Arthur Cox, '98, council liaison to students — are gearing up for the coming year. Aenis Harris, '94, is the new member of the Bridgewater Alumni Association Board of Directors and serves as a member at large. On Sunday, September 3rd, the leadership talked with incoming freshman about adjusting and adapting to the rigors of college life. The theme this year was "retention."

All of our programs have been developed to improve the retention and graduation rates of students of color. You are welcome to participate. We are discussing ways to create a positive environment for students of color at Bridgewater State College to succeed and thrive. One program that we believe would be beneficial would be an Afro-Am Alumni Council mentor program. We are asking alumni to serve as mentors to these students. As a mentor, you could be a supporter, a friend in time of need, a voice of reasoning when things get difficult and a motivator to push for success. If any of you are interested in mentoring a student of color at Bridgewater State College, please call or give us your e-mail address.

On September 9, Gloria Stanton hosted a brunch for incoming students at her home in Bridgewater. Gloria and her family were wonderful hosts and we appreciate her efforts to make Bridgewater State College more open and pleasant to students of color.

The council is planning a gospel extravaganza in April 2000. If you know of any interested groups, please contact us.

The Afro-Am Alumni Council would like to thank Ms. Candace Maguire, director of alumni relations, and Dr. Alan V. Comedy, assistant to the president for affirmative action and minority affairs, for allotting so much time and energy to the Afro-Am Alumni Council.

As you can see, Afro-Am Alumni Council is growing. More people are attending the monthly meetings and attending our events. I would encourage each of you to play a role in the development of this up-and-coming organization. ■

Alumni Area Meeting Held in San Diego

Ron Piscatelli, '76, contacted the alumni office last spring and inquired about getting together with Bridgewater State College alumni who live in the San Diego area. Ron and his wife, Ellen, '76, were very interested in developing a San Diego alumni club.

Candace Maguire, director of alumni relations, was already traveling to San Diego, so she contacted Ron and they put together a small gathering on July 19th at the Symphony Towers in downtown San Diego. Those in attendance were: Ron Piscatelli, '76; Ellen Piscatelli, '76; Jason DeMendonca, '93; Debbie DiFruscio, '94; Zachary Pelchat, '94; Michael Healey, '77; and Sharon Healey.

Everyone had a great time meeting one another and they are all excited about getting a local alumni group together. If you would like more information about how to become involved with this group, please contact the Office of Alumni Relations at 888-BSC-9555 or e-mail cmaguire@bridgew.edu. ■

Alumni Weekend 2000

Class of 1950

Alumni Weekend 2000 was held on June 2-4 with 275 people returning to campus to reunite with old friends. Classes from all decades were represented. The class of 1950 had the largest number of class members returning, but alumni from other decades, including the 80s and 90s were also represented this year.

The weekend began on Friday evening with a cocktail reception at President Tinsley's home for the 50th reunion class followed by a reunion dinner in the small ballroom of the campus center.

A chicken barbecue was also held on Friday evening for all other classes. Following the barbecue, a live band played music in the Rathskeller. Alumni who returned for this event enjoyed reliving their college days of listening to music and gathering at the Rat to relax and have a good time.

On Saturday, several events took place at the same time. There were bus tours, a luncheon, a softball game at Alumni Park, music under the alumni tent on the quad, complimentary caricature drawings of alumni and a sushi demonstration. The day ended with an elegant cocktail reception and dinner at the StoneForge Tavern in Raynham. More than 165 people attended the dinner.

The major highlight of the weekend was the presentation of the class of 1950 gift at the Annual Meeting held on Saturday morning. They presented President Tinsley with an endowed gift of $150,000 that will be used as a faculty research award. This gift represents the largest class gift ever presented to Bridgewater State College.

As alumni were leaving on Sunday morning, they commented it was the best alumni weekend that they had ever attended, and some were already talking about plans for returning for Alumni Weekend 2001.

If you are interested in putting together a reunion for June 2001, please contact Candace Maguire, director of alumni relations, at 888-BSC-9555 or by e-mail at cmaguire@bridgew.edu. ■

Gearing Up for the Job Market

On Thursday, March 23rd, the Office of Career Services sponsored its Second Annual Gearing Up for the Job Market event at Oliver Ames High School in North Easton. This event, geared toward senior education majors, provided a unique opportunity for students from Bridgewater State College, Stonehill College, Clark University, Lesley College, Boston College, Brown University, Springfield College, Curry College, the College of Holy Cross, Kalamazoo College, Eastern Nazarene College, Lyndon State College, Simmons College, Tufts University, UNH, Salem State College and U-Mass-Dartmouth to meet, obtain advice and network with 47 superintendents and hiring personnel from the Southeastern Massachusetts area. More than 270 students participated in this event this year.

The afternoon event included a panel discussion on such topics as: typical interview questions, tips for effective resumes and cover letters, technological skills sought in teacher candidates, expectations of regular classroom teachers with special needs students in inclusion classrooms and advice for education majors entering the job market in 2000. The panel featured two Bridgewater State College alumni and was moderated by Mary Ann McKinnon of the School of Education and Allied Studies. Panel participants were Dr. Judith Riordan, superintendent of schools in East Bridgewater; Dr. Robert West, superintendent of schools in Weymouth; and Dr. Martin Hanley, superintendent of schools in Carver.

Following the panel discussion, a hiring personnel information fair was held. The fair was an opportunity for hiring personnel to meet the best teacher education candidates in the Southeastern Massachusetts area and for senior education majors to network informally with hiring personnel from this region and make valuable connections for their upcoming job searches.

Participating school districts included: Abington, Bridgewater-Raynham, Brockton, Carver, Duxbury, East Bridgewater, Easton, Franklin, Harwich, King Philip Regional, Lexington, Middleboro, Nauset, North Attleboro, Plymouth, Randolph, Rockland, Stoughton, Walpole, Weymouth and Whitman-Hanson.

The Office of Career Services would like to publicly thank both teacher candidates and hiring personnel participants for their participation in this event. If you would like to participate in next year's event or to obtain more information about this program please contact Shannon Finning at (508) 531-1328. ■

Calling All Alumni! Calling All Alumni!

Do you work for a great organization? Would your employer benefit from hiring future BSC alumni? If so, please consider encouraging your employer to recruit soon-to-be BSC graduates for full-time, professional-level positions within your organization.

The Career Services Office now has a formalized Employer Services Program featuring an on-campus interviewing program, a resume referral program, on-line job listings and an annual job fair. If your organization would like to participate in any/all of these programs, please contact Shannon Finning, assistant director for employer services at (508) 531-1328 or via e-mail at sfinning@bridgew.edu

We look forward to working with you!

Attention 1995 Graduates: Credential File Reminder

Credential files are kept for a five-year period and then destroyed. If you began your file in the 1995 academic year, your file will soon be destroyed. If you would like to keep your file, we would be happy to send you any non-confidential material. Please put your request in writing with your name, date of graduation and a check for $3.00 (postage/handling). Your check should be made payable to BSC/Career Services. Mail requests to Career Services, Attn: Credential Return, Bridgewater State College, Bridgewater, MA 02325 ■

Class of

Class of 1999 Career Survey Results Posted

Each year the Career Services Office surveys the graduating class who are out six months to a year. What we know is that alumni are employed (91%) and live and work in Massachusetts (92%) and are generally pleased with their academic major and preparation. In addition, salaries are up in across most fields as one might expect in the current job market of the past few years. If you would like to see the class of 1999 career report, go to the Career Services web site at www.bridgew.edu/depts/carplan

Senior-Alumni Networking Planned

Every year, Career Services and Alumni Relations cosponsor a Senior-Alumni Networking Event. These events are put together in an effort to connect current BSC students with alumni in their career field and to receive their priceless advice and experience. The Annual Spring Networking Event will be held on Thursday, April 5, 2001 from 6:30 to 8:30 PM. If you would like more details about this and other upcoming Career Service events, please contact Career Services at (508) 531-1328.

40 Organizations Join Sixth Annual Job Fair

The Office of Career Services sponsored its Sixth Annual Job Fair last spring. This event gave students an excellent opportunity to meet with employers from more than 40 organizations, to "get their careers on track." The event was open to all Bridgewater State College students, faculty, alumni and members of the surrounding community. The employers present represented a broad spectrum of career fields including government, human services, communications, sales, operations management, marketing, education, banking, finance, retail, aviation, management and science.

The Job Fair was an opportunity for hiring personnel to meet the best candidates in the Southeastern Massachusetts area and for students to network informally with hiring personnel from this region and make valuable connections for their upcoming job searches. Students were encouraged to dress professionally and to bring plenty of resumes to the Job Fair to distribute to the various employers.

Participating organizations included: AIT Worldwide Logistics, American Airlines, American Express Financial Advisors, Amica Insurance, Alternatives Unlimited, BankBoston, Boston Higashi School, Cape Air, Cellular One, Chadwick's of Boston, Community Care Services, Department of Social Services, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Federated Services Company, Fitcorp, Foxboro Company, General Dynamics, Growthways Inc., HEALTHSOUTH Braintree Rehabilitation Hospital, Hertz Corporation, Investors Bank & Trust, J.Baker Inc., John Hancock Financial Services, Judge.com, Key Program, Lab Support, Lifeworks Inc., Massachusetts Division of

With so much unhappy news to report – our recent loss of Carol (Griffiths) Ogilvie, Frances Guerin and John Barrows – it is good to have a cheery note from one of our ‘survivors.’ Marguerite (Mahady) Boyle says that one of the most pleasant aspects of life at this age is being able to enjoy the maturing of her grandchildren. Of the six she is watching, the latest graduated cum laude from the College of the Holy Cross in May. She left in July for a two-year volunteer mission on the island of Chuuk in the Micronesia group where she will teach math at the Jesuit high school. Remember when we thought 65 was over the hill? Well, we are quickly approaching our 65th anniversary year from Bridgewater. If you can possibly attend the ceremonies next June, please do. You’ll hear more about this from us later.

Our 60th reunion was blessed with a perfectly beautiful day and many of us returned to enjoy the festivities on Alumni Weekend. There were enough of us to fill more than two tables at the beautiful buffet lunch in Tillinghast Hall. Most of us were from nearby, but Martin Killory and his wife, Helen, made the trek from Syracuse, New York, and Barbara Prince Meade came from California (she then continued her travels via a Scandinavian cruise). Pat Breen Dowd visited Fort Collins in Colorado for her granddaughter’s graduation from the university. She also enjoyed a personal reunion with Nan Partell Rubin who lives in Fort Collins. She reports that Nan looks wonderful! Ida George Meikle sent a newsletter and photos which we all enjoyed. Ida and her husband, Dave, are hospital volunteers (Ida for 25 years!) in Walnut Creek, California. They love to camp, canoe and travel in their van.

The class of 1950 had a great 50th class reunion during the weekend of June 2-4. There were 60 classmates from the class of 1950 in attendance! Each classmate received a copy of our 50th yearbook that gave a summary of each classmate’s experiences since graduating from Bridgewater State Teachers College. Our $150,000 class gift was presented to the college to establish a distinguished faculty research award that will provide a cash award from $5,000 to $7,500 to a faculty member who has completed an outstanding research project. Your 50th Reunion Committee has started to plan for our 55th class reunion in 2005. If you have any ideas that you would like to be considered, contact anyone on the 1950 Class Reunion Committee. Their names are listed on the inside back cover of our 50th class reunion book.

You will be receiving soon a letter from Chairman Joseph Pauley about our 50th reunion in June 2004. Please plan to return to Bridgewater for an exciting week-end of renewed friendships and enjoyable festivities...Robert Barrows has written a fascinating history about growing up in the 1930s and 1940s. As you read "The Way It Was," you will probably recall many memorable moments that may have been forgotten. One of the two people it is dedicated to is Myra Powers Lopes. In order to obtain a copy, send $13.15, which includes postage, to Bob at 135 West 600 North, Salt Lake City, Utah 84103. It is a wonderful book that reflects youth, education and traditions of the times...Hazel Luke Varella was one of the honorary marshals in the parade that honored the 275th celebration of the corporation of the town of Easton.

Peter Lane was named Senior of the Year this past May in Natick for the many contributions that he has made to the community. His work includes teaching at the Wilson School and former Center School, spending many years volunteering for the town's food pantry, service council and Visiting Nurse Association, a local branch of Habitat for Humanities and accompanying teens from the First Congregational Church of Natick to West Virginia to complete home repairs for financially strapped residents...Once again about 40 of our class members enjoyed a great mini-reunion luncheon in June at Isaac's of Plymouth. It was great to see so many friendly faces and a few were folks we hadn't seen in many years. Most of those present reported interesting trips to exotic and familiar places. John Shields, '57, will soon be off on an Atlantic crossing on the QEII. Laura (Batista) Crocco has plans for visiting Spain and Portugal this fall. Carlene (Dodd) Brown and Janet (Lee) Green, our travel professionals, have both been to many places far and near in the past year. Janet will be in Hawaii as a cruise ship guide this October and November. Perhaps our most adventurous traveler is Mary Walsh who serves as a volunteer crew-member on the tall ship Ernestina. Yes, she has been up in the crow's nest! We do have two hangers-on in the working world. Rowena Morey Mukhar is still working in California and Anne Duarte Joerres predicts that the coming year will be her grand finale as administrator for a private school in Fall River. Alice Murphy O'Neill has just finished her first year of retirement and reports that she is getting the hang of it. It's a fine concept; staying at home — they send money! New grandparents are Gail (Hutchinson) Jamison and her husband, Clark. They have a little redheaded grandson named Benjamin. Ellie Lydon Olson's seventh grandchild, Emma, arrived in August. Her mom and dad are both Bridgewater State College graduates. Annie (Robbins) Talbot's husband, Dick, is recovering from a recent heart attack. We wish him well. Again, we would love to hear from more of you!

Mary Moore Jarvis (1918-2000)
 Student (BSC '39)– Teacher (1940-1980) –
 Library Trustee (1963-2000) – Friend (Forever)

There really is something about Mary Moore Jarvis. Usage of present tense in sentence one is a clue. Others will follow in prose, one hopes, not purple, that would please, not perturb her. As she would say to her students: "Write less, say more."

Say more about Mary Louise Moore, daughter of Abington-born Ellen Sheehan whose grandmother came from Limerick, and Dublin-born Andrew who accompanied his older sister to Boston a century ago. He, a young lad who eventually worked as a gardener at Bridgewater Normal School; she, an "indentured servant" to the S.S. Pierce family of grocers.

Say more about Mary Louise Moore, baby sister of Catherine, Edward and Simon. Susan Moore, Simon's daughter, says it best. "Mary gave as much to being an aunt as she did to everything else. It was with her I saw my first summer stock productions, and she was the one who took me to NYC to see 'A Man for All Seasons.' She brought me back a book IN FRENCH from Paris when I was an impressionable early teen. Just when I needed one most, she gave me her car instead of trading it in!"

Susan and her brother, Jeffrey, are in the process of settling Mary's estate. "A Mary she never revealed to me," writes Susan, "was the one who, in the '40s and '50s, wrote. In a trunk in her cellar I found articles published in Clearing House (an educational journal) and two fat manuscripts of a novel returned by publishers to her under the pseudonym 'Chris Markham.'" Marriage to Bob Jarvis, teaching at BSC, and pursuing Ph.D. studies at BU, said Susan, perhaps caused her "to set aside her literary ambitions."

Say more about Mary Moore Jarvis. The following observation of Susan Moore echoes in countless conversations amongst Mary's many friends and colleagues. "An hour or an afternoon with her always encouraged me, edified me, and relaxed me, for as all the best teachers and executives do, she made me feel I was the most important person in the world when I was with her."

"That's absolutely true," comments Ben Spence, a BSC alum and professor emeritus (History). "We both lived on Pleasant Street and often when she was ill, I'd drop by to cheer her up and I'd be the one cheered up!" Another "surprise" about Mary, recalls Ben, is that "she told me if she were to live her life over, she'd choose Political Science, not English. It's important, I think, to stress that though Mary spent her life in Bridgewater, she was never provincial. She loved travel, theatre, museums, politics and people. There was a quiet joy about her in everything she did, a certain serenity."

Cliff Wood, another BSC alum and colleague (English), remembers Mary "as the human face in Dean Shea's office where she briefly worked before joining the English department. "She was firm but never unpleasant. Mary had high standards and was always gracious." Like Mary, Cliff has supervised student teachers. The qualities he saw in her he looks for in them. "The iron hand in the velvet glove" is how he puts it.

Professor Emeritus George Weygand joined the Bridgewater faculty the same year Mary did, and he and his wife Bea socialized with Mary and her beloved Bob (he died after a long illness in '85). "Bea and I accompanied Mary to the college's annual retirement party the last evening of her life," recalls George. "Many faculty and staff came up to our table just to talk to Mary, an indication surely of the warmth and love they held for her. Surely this world is better for her having passed this way."

Another Bridgewater friend, Mary Wall (her late husband, Bill, was in the Biology department), played bridge with Mary and the Hamiltons (Stan chairs the Foreign Language Department) every Saturday night for decades. "She was always so welcoming to all who entered her house," remembers Mary. "I can still see her sitting in her kitchen, reminiscing in her rocking chair. Her like won't be seen again.

And Ann Coakley, another neighbor and BSC colleague (physical education) agrees. "She loved and cared about people with a sincerity of heart that kept her alive long after retirement," adds Ann. "Mary helped me bear the trials of witnessing the slow death of a friend." Ironically, it was Ann (she drove Mary to daily Mass at St. Thomas Church) who found Mary on Saturday, May 13. The following Wednesday, four of their former pastors (and the present) were at St. Thomas Church to celebrate her Requiem Mass. "How many lives she touched," exclaimed Father John Doonan in his eulogy. "She influenced so many in and out of the classroom with her brilliance and beauty, humor and humanity."

Say more about Mary Moore Jarvis. In addition to her distinguished teaching career that was recognized many times with awards from her college, community and government, Mary had, as one might say, "another love." Her library. A member of the Bridgewater Public Library's Board of Trustees for 37 years and its chairperson for the last 22, she was, says Director Betty Gregg, "its driving force. Her foresight and vision were invaluable...She offered the BPL her enthusiasm, wisdom, courage, and the necessary support to face the challenges of the present and the future."

On the occasion of the new library's dedication in October of 1993, Mary Jarvis was honored by her community. In her tribute to Mary, Judith Hall Gabriel wrote, "Without her fine example of leadership, support, tolerance and humor, I would not be the person I am today." Today, she, as was her former teacher and trustee, is the chairperson of the BPL's trustees."

Organizer of the BPL's tribute that weekend as well as the 35th reunion of Bridgewater High School was Dr. Barbara Balboni; she was class president and Mary was senior adviser. "I was born the year Mary started teaching, and we both 'graduated' together in that I went on to Catholic University in Washington and she joined the BSC faculty." For the reunion, Barbara invited all BHS alums to contribute to "A Memory Book for Mary." In over 100 tributes, the following sentence reappeared: "Thank you for giving your best to all your students."

What about "something about Mary" alluded to in my opener? Could it be found in the following passage from Barbara Balboni's remembrance? "You were able to instruct in us what was truly of value. You seemed to be able to look into our hearts and see the good that we had not yet discovered in ourselves." Barbara, to the end a devoted friend of Mary's, is an adjunct professor in the BSC sociology department. And yours truly can also boast of knowing Mary for many years, and of being with her at the college's retirement party on May 12, the last evening of her life.

Maureen Connelly is professor emerita of English. She retired last semester after 34 years in the state college system.
