Apartheid violence triggers outrage, action in U.S.

Freedman restates policy on divestiture

By Kirk Brown Chief Reporter

UI President James O. Freedman expressed "personal outrage at the manifest injustice and evil" of South Africa's apartheid government Tuesday, but refused to acquiesce to demands from local protesters who have vowed to fast until the UI divests its financial holdings in all corporations conducting business in that country.

A press release issued by Freedman stated that he respects "the deeply divestiture." However, "important principles preclude the university from divesting as requested.'

Freedman's release stated that the stockholdings the UI owns in firms involved in South Africa were "entrusted to the university specifically to help it achieve academic objectives and can be used for no other purpose."

Freedman's statement essentially restates the policy UI officials adopted concerning these stockholdings in 1977, following a number of student protests at that time.

Representatives from the Iowa Coalition Against Apartheid, whose members include a number of UI students and employees who have joined the fast that began Monday, were extremely critical of Freedman's reply. They said their efforts to force the UI held convictions of those who urge to divest will intensify today during a rally scheduled to begin at 12:20 p.m. on the Pentacrest.

> UI SENIOR Bob Hearst interpreted Freedman's reply to the protesters as saying, "I agree with you, but we're not going to do shit," Hearst said.

"I think President Freedman is missing the issue," Hearst said. "It doesn't matter to us what he thinks about it (divestment) - we want the university to divest.

Andrew Sinning, one of the protesters who has now been fasting for more than three days, said, "What is really pertinent here is that we are profiting from the system in South

The apartheid policies of South Africa's white supremist government have sparked increasing civil unrest in that country and the United States during the past two years.

During the past 13 months more than 270 people have died in racial violence in South Africa, including 41 blacks in the past two weeks. On March 31, police riding in armored trucks fired into a crowd of about 35,000 blacks, killing one and injuring 10 others.

In addition, 16 blacks have been indicted for treason — a crime punishable by death — by the South African government in the past week for "promoting revolution, unrest and

Tuesday in Johannesburg, South Africa, a police spokesman said that three mines, allegedly made in the Soviet Union, exploded at the Johannesburg headquarters of two giant gold mining companies that recently fired some 17,500 black mine workers for staging a strike.

Although the headquarters and earby businesses were rocked, no one was injured in the attack.

AS THE RACIAL tension in South Africa - which some observers say is bordering on civil war - has increased, so has the concern among thousands of American protesters about the role U.S. corporate investments in South Africa have played in supporting its apartheid government.

Many protesters have claimed these financial holdings, estimated at $2.6 billion, represent "an investment in

Not unlike the hundreds of protests against the Vietnam War in the late 60s, university and college campuses across the United States have been the site of the most impassioned calls for divestment of these funds.

City eyes Elks site for added offices

By Dawn Ummel Chief Reporter

City offices will someday inhabit the old Elks Building if the city can reach an agreement with Southgate Development Corp. to lease and possibly purchase the soon-to-be-renovated structure at 325 E. Washington St.

Leasing space from the former Elks Building, which was tentatively apday night, will provide more room for city offices such as the Finance Department, the Planning Department and the engineering division of the Public Works Department.

"We all realize we have a very critical space problem," Mayor John McDonald said at the council's informal meeting. "It's time (space problems) be addressed and I think this council has to address them."

Southgate plans to renovate the old Elks Building to provide about 22,000 quare feet for city offices. City officials said in a memo to the council last week that departmental offices need about 20,000 square feet outside the Iowa City Civic Center.

BY MOVING several offices out of the Civic Center, the Police and Fire departments - where 115 people are working in a space designed for 47 could expand into areas of the Civic Center. Renovation would also take place at the Civic Center to provide storage for fire trucks and an elevator.

The old Elks Building "allows more flexibility and does provide needed space that we're going to have to provide some way, some how in the future," McDonald said.

"Barring some phenomenal growth in the city, we think (the old Elks Building) would meet our needs for 20 years," Assistant City Manager Dale Helling said.

The city will pay $58,000 during fiscal year 1986 to rent space outside the Civic Center for city offices. That amount could jump to $80,000 annually to provide space for the city's growing facilities.

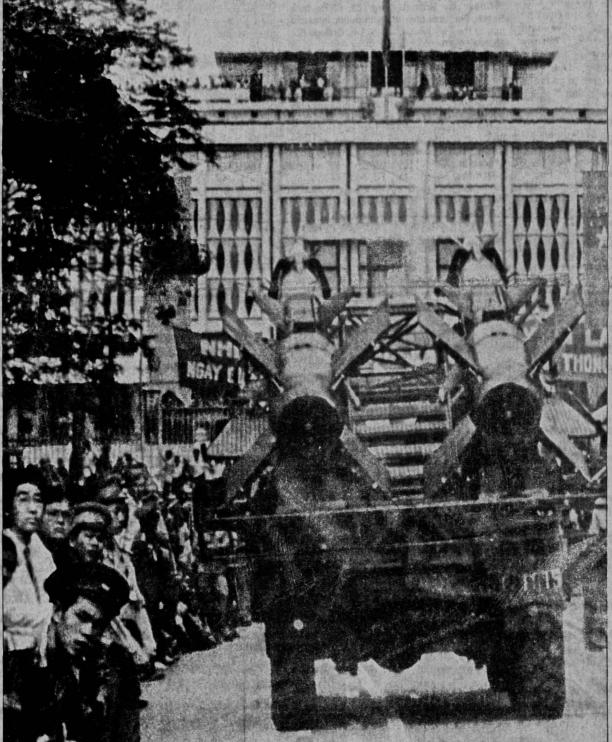

LEASING, with the possibility of purchasing the Elks Building, could cost the city an additional $144,425 anhually for capital and operating costs. The total cost to purchase the Elks Building is estimated at $1.4 million.

"I don't want to see this council ecome a real topnotch spending council," Councilor George Strait said. "I don't know that we can afford the Elks Building" or any kind of addition to house city offices "without putting the city in a financial bind."

Councilor Kate Dickson said, however, that not providing adequate space interferes with the "efficiency of Councilors agreed the city's parking problem would not be compounded with the move to the Elks Building.

"I see where we'd have less of a parking problem this way than if it's rented out to commercial development," Councilor Ernest Zuber said.

Regents hike won't help UI general fund

The Iowa Legislature Tuesday night passed a bill allocating about $336.1 million to the state Board of Regents next year, increasing the overall regents budget by about $500,000 over last year and restoring about $1.7 million in appropriations that had earlier been cut.

In a 39-2 vote, the Senate accepted an amended House bill that includes a 1 percent across-the-board cut in the regents general budget and restores about $1.1 million in indigent patient care funds to UI Hospitals as well as $625,000 for the regents to purchase equipment. The funds for indigent patient care and equipment had been deleted in an earlier version of the bill, which underwent several revisions during the last week.

According to figures from the legislature's fiscal bureau, if Gov. Terry Branstad signs the bill into law, the UI's general operating budget will be reduced by about $1.2 million while Iowa State University will lose about $1.1 million and the University of Northern Iowa's budget will increase by about $5,000.

THE APPROPRIATION is about $312,000 less than Branstad's recently revised recommendation for the regents budget. While the governor originally urged the legislature to increase the regents budget to $338.9 million, lagging state revenues and Iowa's poor economic condition forced him to revise his state spending plan and call for the 1 percent across-theboard cut

Although UI and regents officials said they understand the state's economic dilemma, the fiscal 1986 budget will bring dire consequences for the regents universities.

Because the UI appropriation "is still below last year's," UI Vice President for Finance Dorsey Ellis predicted, "It's going to be an extremely difficult year for us financially.

"I think academic quality at The University of Iowa is very solid and has been improving, but the difficulty is that academic quality at competing universities is increasing more rapidly See Regents, page 6A

Reagan vows Nicaraguan trade embargo

United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Ronald Reagan, rebuffed in his effort to provide aid to Nicaraguan rebels, notified Congress Tuesday he intends to impose a trade embargo and other sanctions against the government in

In Nicaragua, the official radio of the Nicaraguan government reacted

The possible halt of $58 million in U.S. imports of food would be "a new step in the war of aggression against Nicaragua by the president of the world's most powerful imperialist power," Radio Voice of Nicaragua

Nicaragua

REAGAN AUTHORIZED his top aides to brief key members of Congress on the impending action just hours before he took off on a 10-day trip to Europe. An announcement is expected today after his arrival in Bonn, West Germany.

"It appears to many we were conducting business as usual with Nicaragua," said Richard Lugar, R-Ind., Senate Foreign Relations Committee chairman. "The relationship has changed. It is not business as usual." Lugar said the ban on trade and commercial airline service would be contained in an executive order that may be effective May 7. He said the move indicates Nicaragua "is not a country we wish to have a trading relationship with until it fulfills its promises" of democracy.

"The efficiency of this as a policy tool is arguable," Lugar said, but he added the action - similar to a move taken by Reagan earlier against Libya reflects real American displeasure with Managua.

Unnamed critics and supporters of Reagan's Nicaragua policy called on him last week to emphasize economic sanctions against Nicaragua instead of aiding an estimated 15,000 rebels intent on toppling the Sandinista government.

AFTER CONGRESS refused to give Reagan $14 million in aid for the Contras, the administration reviewed the option of a trade embargo against

A spokesman for Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said Secretary of State George Shultz had recommended the economic steps as a means of maintaining pressure on the Sandinistas. "It just doesn't make any sense for us to buy their goods and finance with our dollars the export of their revolution," Bentsen said.

The only formal trade sanction now in effect against Nicaragua is an October 1983 reduction in the sugar import quota. However, two-way trade has declined sharply since the 1979 revolution that ousted right-wing dictator Anastasio Somoza.

THE VALUE of U.S. imports from Nicaragua has plunged from $211 million in 1980 to $57 million last year. U.S. exports to Nicaragua dropped from $249 million to $112 million during year. In 1984, the leading imports from Nicaragua were bananas, $23.5 million; beef, $9.8 million; and shellfish, $9.7 million. The United States exported $5 million worth of insecticides to Nicaragua and $4.7 million worth of boxes and packing material.

The Senate Monday condemned Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega's trip to Moscow, where he received assurances of increased Soviet aid for his country's embattled economy. The Senate resolution condemned the trip as evidence of Nicarguan militarization and repression in Central America. Reagan has warned a failure to force a change by the Sandinista government could lead to establishment of a Soviet 'beachhead for aggression" on the American mainland. Shultz said Tuesday that economic sanctions against Nicaragua would be part of "our effort to bring them to see the importance of getting on with the job of national reconciliation and the emergence of democracy in that country, as they have promised.'

Warsaw was festooned with thousands of red and white Polish national flags in preparation for May Day parades Wednesday. Underground leaders of the Solidarity union have called for nationwide demonstrations to demand compensation for food price hikes and the release of political prisoners.

Senate approves budget bill

WASHINGTON - The Senate, closely following party lines, Tuesday approved President Ronald Reagan's compromise budget plan by one vote, but senators immediately began trying to amend the bill to restore popular programs.

Sen. Chuck Grasslev, R-Iowa, voted for the budget - which includes significant reductions in student financial aid - and Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, voted against.

The GOP request for a special election was defeated 229-200, with 19 Democrats voting for the new election. Democratic leaders said a vote to seat McCloskey will be taken Wednesday.

Chapter 11 allowed for UPI

WASHINGTON - A federal bankruptcy judge Tuesday approved an interim financing agreement for United Press International under Chapter 11 and granted UPI authority to cover last week's $1.38 million payroll.

In taking the action, U.S. Bankruptcy Judge George Bason rejected a move by the company's principal owners to sell UPI for $10.8 million to an investment group led by a Miami savings and loan institution.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. - Floating rat food particles, monkey pellets and feces escaped into a shuttle laboratory module Tuesday, but all 26 animals in the onboard space zoo were reported healthy and happy.

The particles were released when William Thornton tried to replace rat food and check on a feeder for one of two monkey cages in the big Spacelab module in the ship's cargo bay. The debris settled out, apparently with the aid of fans forcing the air and its contents through lowa teachers recognized by UI distinguished honor

Six Iowa teachers have received the 1985 Iowa Distinguished Teachers Award from the UI.

The six instructors will receive bronze

May 18 in recognition of their contributions to education in Iowa.

The recipients include Thomas Beck of the government and politics faculty at Des Moines Area Community College and Sara Ann Otto, a music teahcer at Clieve Elementary School in Des Moines. The following high school teachers also received recognition: Nancy Petersen, language arts, Iowa City West High School; Donald Schaefer, science, Bettendorf High School; Virginia Spiegel, physiology, Dubuque Wahlert High School; and Margaret Swanson, English, Red Oak High

The awards, established in 1984, affirm the III's commitment to excellence in education and recognize the interdependence of teachers' efforts throughout the Iowa educational system, UI President James O. Freedman said.

In recognizing the importance of the teaching profession, Freedman said, the UI honors teachers who have made significant contributions to the lives of their students, particularly in developing the skills of critical reasoning and clarity of expression that are essential to good citizenship.

Superintendents, principals and community college presidents were invited to submit the name of one teacher per school for the award, with the requirement that each had taught for at least five years.

IF ECUMENICAL HOUSING receives the grant, which must be applied for by May 15, the corporation has tentative permission from the Iowa City Council to purchase city-owned land where the complex will be built. The proposed location lies along Gilbert Street between Washington and College streets the site of the former U-Smash-Em body shop, a 17space parking lot and Chauncey Swan Park.

Concerns expressed by residents at the meeting Tuesday included the danger of crossing Gilbert Street to get back and forth between the proposed housing and the Iowa City/Johnson County Senior Center, and the possibility of combining congregate housing with HUD housing

Morris said other possible sites free of heavy traffic were more expensive than the Gilbert Street location. He also noted that elderly residents living in another HUD development, Capitol House Apartments at 320 S. Dubuque, have had no trouble crossing Burlington Street.

DUE TO HUD standards, frail residents who will depend on congregate housing cannot be brought into the proposed apartments.

"Like Ecumenical Towers and Capitol House, these must be for relatively independent living,' Morris said. "HUD has no objection to us providing services as they grow older.

Iowa City is currently studying its congregate housing needs. A public accounting firm from Atlanta distributed surveys last week to local elderly residents to assess the market for congregate housing. A report is due to the council at the end of June. Even with the construction of a housing project similar to Ecumenical Towers, Councilor Kate Dickson said Iowa City would still need congregate housing.

"Congregate housing is services provided to people who need it," Dickson said Monday. "Those needs will always be there," even with more apartments for the elderly, she said. Dickson noted it would be helpful, but not necessing to house users of a congregate housing program one area.

MORRIS SAID the proposed housing project on Gilbert Street will require the razing of the U-Smash-Em building in order for a parking lot to be developed for the residents. The complex needs 38 parking spaces - one for every two apartments and the 17-space existing lot will be kept intact, Morris said.

About 25 percent of the units will be efficiencies, while 10 percent of the apartments need to be equipped for the handicapped.

Ecumenical Towers, which opened in 1981, has 81 units. Morris said it cost $3.5 million to construct Ecumenical Towers, but the proposed building could be developed for less money because fewer extras such as a whirlpool and spacious lounge found in Ecumenical Towers - would be built into the new apartment complex.

Morris said additional public meetings will be scheduled to gather input from local residents. He also urged people at the meeting to write letters to the Ecumenical Housing Corp. so the letters could be sent with the grant application.

HUD will announce by Sept. 30 which community has received the grant, Morris said.

Student groups face budget cuts in latest CAC funding allotments

The Collegiate Associations Council voted Monday to give the UI Student Video Producers $2,241.50 in spite of the group's plea for a $4,000 increase in its budget

SVP General Manager Dan Langdon said the group needed the money for a second camera and would be willing to use the money allocated for office supplies and insurance and equipment to pay for the camera. However, the money SVP received for these expenditures would not be enough to buy the camera.

But CAC Budgeting Committee member Dale Herbeck said SVP's two-page budget requests were "to us nothing more than a Christmas wish list." The group's requests

Herbeck pointed out that SVP was allocated $20,000 by both student governments last year - "more than any other group we funded."

CAC TREASURER Jeff Devitt said it is not good to allocate a lot of money to a group that is not ready for it.

UI Student Broadcasters Inc. Vice President Bob Cable argued that the CAC and UI Student Senate are asking the group to increase involvement and accessibility, which could be achieved if SVP acquired a SVP member Maureen Dorman said the number of productions and people working on them have been limited because there is only one camera. She said the group has a membership roster of about 100 members, but claimed only about 35 are active because of SVP's limited resources.

Although Bob Campbell, SVP director of research and development, called the situation a "Catch-22," Langdon said "we'll survive" with the money that was allocated.

CAC member Paul Thompson said the recommended allocation was "seed money" and the group could come back for supplemental funding, when it has a better idea of the cost and people involved.

THE PROBLEM, Herbeck said, is "a vast majority of student groups want to strive for excellence, but (CAC) doesn't have the budget to guarantee excellence for

"No doubt they would do better with the $7,000 they want, but the problem is every group would do better. Where do we draw the line?" Herbeck asked the CAC.

The Liberal Arts Student Association, a CAC association, requested $7,000 to bring former U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to the UI. The group was allocated $5,000, but LASA President and CAC member Mike Reck said he doesn't believe LASA will support this speaker.

Reck asked for Kissinger's name to be withdrawn from the request, but said LASA still needed the money because the group is guaranteed matching funds from an undisclosed source if it receives CAC funds.

CAC Budgeting Committee member Dave Lickteig said the CAC was willing to pay for Kissinger," but not to allocate $5,000 for "anything you want."

Another Budgeting Committee member, Nicholas Humy, said the committee does not want to allocate funding for any speaker without "preliminary footwork."

FOLLOWING RECK'S suggestion, the CAC replaced Kissinger's name on the budget request with that of former United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young. Reck said LASA has done some background on this speaker, and LASA members have expressed support for bringing him to

After seven months of evaluating potential recipients and haggling over state funding, the date of the UI's first heart transplant is now just a matter of settling the future recipient and locating a donor, UI Hospitals officials say.

"Otherwise everything else is in place to proceed," said Dr. Ronald Meng, a member of the UI heart transplant team.

Shiite Moslem fighters consolidate control over southern port of Tyre

TYN-, Lebanon (UPI) - Fighting erupted on three fronts in Lebanon Tuesday as Shiite Moslem militiamen consolidated their control over the southern port of Tyre following the withdrawal of Israeli troops from the city

Rival militias battled each other in Beirut, Druze Moslem rebels fought the Lebanese army in the Shouf mountains and militiamen clashed near a southern village where thousands of homeless Christians have sought refuge from weeks of sectarian

In Beirut, 46 miles north of Tyre, rival groups traded mortar and artillery fire along the Green Line dividing the capital into Christian and Moslem sectors.

The army later closed all main roads across the line and the Army General Command warned that following "blatant attacks" on its men "orders have been given to Lebanese army forces to retaliate strongly to any sources of fire and destroy "Stay in your basements, do not go outside," blared loud speakers atop vans that were touring mostly Moslem west Beirut. At least two ships were hit in the city's port, forcing most vessels out to sea. Beirut residents hid in basement shelters and many schools were reported closed. Military sources also reported clashes between Druze gunmen and Christian-led army units in the Shouf, a mountain range overlooking Beirut.

IN THE HILLS east of Tyre, witnesses said an army barracks fell to Moslem forces. The barracks is near Kfar Falous, a village just west of the beleaguered Christian town of Jezzine.

Thousands of Christians, driven from their homes by a Moslem onslaught in southern Lebanon, have taken refuge in Jezzine. Druze leader Walid Jumblatt, in an apparent humanitarian gesture, said Jezzine is a "red line and no one will enter Israeli border, Shiite Moslem gunmen of the Amal movement regained control of roads around the city a day after Israeli occupation forces retreated. The withdrawal marked the start of the final phase of Israel's three-stage plan to end its occupation of Lebanon.

"We feel we have won our battle with Israel," said local Shiite leader Daoud

The Amal militiamen vowed vengeance against Lebanese who collaborated with the Israelis.

'The collaborators who have killed those with blood on their hands - will be punished," Daoud said. "But all those who didn't kill we will forgive and say now is the time of compassion, not the time of power.'

Just south of Tyre, Amal militiamen checked cars entering the Rashidiyeh Palestinian refugee camp.

Boiler upgrading hinges on regents bonding power

By Mary Boone

UI officials say a $26.5 million effort to upgrade the UI boiler plant could save the state up to $60 million during the next decade if the Iowa Senate denies passage of a bill limiting university bonding authority

UI Physical Plant Assistant Director John Houck said the boiler plant improvements are necessary to replace outdated equipment and modify the system so it can burn Iowa coal - a change he called "all-around economically beneficial" and "a bonus for a number of different groups within Houck added the UI is "operating on the assumption" that the UI will be able to issue bonds to fund the project, despite legislation passed by the Iowa House that would remove state Board of Regents bonding power. Because the bill is expected to die in the Senate, "We're acting as if we have a green

Currently the UI power plant produces 90 percent to 95 percent of the energy used on campus and operates on a mixture of coal, oil and natural gas. Houck said the UI has made a concentrated effort in recent years to move away from natural gas and oil and become a coal-based facility.

Coal, which costs approximately onethird as much as oil or natural gas, now makes up two-thirds of the fuel used by the UI power plant. However, Houck said the ratio of coal used at the UI plant has decreased in recent years.

"Our coal usage is coming back down," he said. "If we don't do something now, we'll going to pull back from a two-thirds coal and one-third 'other' ratio to a 50 percent coal and 50 percent 'other' mixture."

HOUCK SAID if the UI plant continues the current trend of "shying away from" coal, the cummulative fuel expenses during the next 10 years will reach $160 million to $170 million. He said the UI can save an estimated $60 million gross during the next decade if the Physical Plant implements a plan to increase the ratio of coal used as fuel from 50 percent to 95

Ellis estimated the power plant renovation will offer the UI a $16 million net savings during its first 10 vears of use.

The UI Physical Plant currently burns western coal, and although pollution controls must be installed before the facility can begin using Iowa coal, Houck said the change would benefit the state in a number of ways.

'We could continue to use a western coal even after the renovation and we'd save some money by not having to install pollution screens," Houck said. 'By doing that, though, we would be locking out the potential use of an Iowa product and at this point in time, I think that would be unwise."

In order to neutralize coal waste products, Houck has proposed the installation of fluidized beds. The mixture of limestone and coal in the beds will capture sulfur emitted from the coal producing calcium sulfate - an inert material that is easier to dispose of Houck said benefits of the new boiler plant equipment are threefold. "We'll get a new boiler that works without breakdowns. We'll increase effectiveness of the system, and we'll be able to burn Iowa coal rather than sending all our fuel dollars out of the state.

Sen. Art Small, D-Iowa City, said he does not anticipate Senate approval of the bonding bill that would halt the project - in fact, he does not even expect the Senate to discuss the legislation.

If the Senate version of bill is not approved this week, the regents will retain bonding authority and both Iowa State University and the UI will be able to fund the proposed power plant pro-

"It will be a very, very tight budget," Regents Executive Secretary R. Wayne Richey said. "It will require us to do a real assessment of where our priorities lie - what we'll be emphasizing and de-emphasizing. It's not a good situation at all ... We have very serious and critical needs that perhaps can't be addressed.'

BUT SEN. ART SMALL, D-Iowa City, said there was "no way we could exempt" the regents from the cuts, adding: "Everybody's got pressing needs. We're all crying together."

UI Director of State Relations Frank Stork said "given the fact that the economy has been so dismal and the state treasury is in such difficult shape, I really think we (the regents) did pretty well ... At the outset, we knew it was going to be a tough ses-

Rep. Rich Varn, D-Solon, agreed the regents fared relatively well in comparison to some other state agencies 'that really took a hit ... We hacked the hell out of some of these other budgets."

But Richey said he doesn't believe the regents "fared any better than anybody else did. My feeling is that we were not treated any better than anybody else and not as well as some."

"I would say the state university system obviously doesn't have any priority in terms of the amount of money given to us," Richey added. "Our task right now is to start looking in terms of the future and hope in the next session of the legislature to get that conveyed effectively."

During the last week alone, more than 10,000 students participated in rallies, strikes and pickets on a host of campuses calling attention to the situation in South Africa and the immorality of colleges and universities owning stock in firms conducting business

"Nobody has seen it like this in 20 years," said Billie Nessen, a University of California-Berkeley student. He added recent divestment rallies on that campus "have been the largest since the free speech movement" of the Not all of these divestment protests have been peaceful. At Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., there have been about 1,000 arrests in the past two weeks. A rally at the University of California's Santa Barbara campus a week ago resulted in 69 arrests.

SEVERAL UI RALLIES have called for the administration to divest the $2.4 million the UI has invested in firms conducting business in South Africa of state funds from companies conand another has been scheduled for today on the Pentacrest.

In addition, a group of local protesters - mostly UI students began a fast Monday that they vow will continue until the UI agrees to divest.

While many of these rallies and protests have gained national attention, few universities - including the UI - have yielded to calls for divest-

Similarly, the increasing racial tension in South Africa has not deterred its government's apartheid policies,

These policies allow white South Africans, who make up only 16 percent of the national population, to earn 59 percent of the wages paid in the country, Conversely, black South Africans, who constitute more than 70 percent of the population, garner only 29 percent of the national wages.

The South African government has also designated 87 percent of the nation's land for whites. The remaining land in the country, where the majority of the blacks are forced to live, is largely barren and poverty-stricken.

Although civil riots in South Africa and student protests in the United States have not had an immediate impact on the South African government, they have apparently influenced state legislators in several states.

AT LEAST SIX states have passed divestment legislation, with most of these laws mandating the divestment ducting business in South Africa that do not comply with a set of human rights guidelines known as the Sullivan

The Sullivan Princples call for firms to strive for:

 Non-segregation of the races in all eating, comfort and work facilities. · Equal and fair employment practices for all employees.

 Equal pay for all employees doing equal or comparable work for the same period of time.

 Initiation of and development of training programs that will prepare, in substantial numbers, blacks and other non-whites for supervisory, administrative, clerical and technical · Increasing the number of blacks and other non-whites in management and supervisory positions.

· Improving the quality of employees' lives outside the work environment in such areas as housing, schooling, recreation and health facilities.

As of Oct. 25, 1984, 126 of approximately 350 U.S. firms doing business in South Africa had agreed to comply with the Sullivan Principles.

LAST YEAR the Iowa Legislature passed a divestment bill that would have required state agencies to divest all holdings in firms involved in South Africa, but Gov. Terry Branstad vetoed the bill because he believed divestment of all of the state's $350 million in South African investments would have been like shooting ourselves in the foot.'

However, the governor has indicated that he will approve a version of the bill passed by the legislature earlier this week mandating divestment from those firms not abiding by the Sullivan Principles. This bill is expected to result in the divestiture of about $100 million in state funds from these companies, including approximately $500,000 of the UI's holdings, during the next five years.

students and employees, remain determined to continue fasting until Freedman agrees to divest.

Coalition member Gordon Fisher said Freedman's reply "was just what we expected - more mealy-mouthed conciliation."

"We will go ahead with our plans and force them to divest by any means necessary," Fisher added.

Several of the coalition members have hinted that they will attempt to occupy Freedman's office following the rally, despite the fact that the UI president will not be on campus because of a state Board of Regents meeting in Ames this afternoon.

OTHER COALITION members have also said they plan to begin a vigil outside Jessup Hall today that will continue until the UI divests.

Although coalition member Joe Iosbaker said "there are several different views concerning what we should do," he predicted "there will be some type of confrontation with the university" following today's rally.

Craig Perrin, a member of the coalition and chairman of the UI Committee for a Free South Africa, said he is confident these efforts will force the UI to divest.

'When the students show this administration that they don't want their education subsidized by corporations who practice no social responsibility at all, then the university will divest,"

Mope springs eternal

When the Iowa City Council voted last week to lift the construction moratorium it had two years earlier imposed on the city's east side, it fulfilled its original pledge to end the ban by May 1 this year — today. And in so doing, it kept the good faith of local developers, who "went the extra mile" in waiting for the city to act on the matter and in not pursuing alternatives to the moratorium in court, according to Mayor John McDonald.

But the council has not resolved the critical problem that prompted the construction ban: the inability of Iowa City's sewage treatment system to adequately handle its current load, let alone the added burden new development would impose.

The council is well aware of the state of the city's sewage treatment problems, and acted as it did because it feels a solution is at hand. It has narrowed to three the options it will consider concerning how to upgrade present treatment facilities, and its chief consultant on the matter, Metcalf and Eddy Inc., will in the next few weeks present detailed evaluations of those three plans to

The least expensive plan will cost more than $36 million, the most expensive almost $50 million. City officials are operating from the assumption that no federal funding will be available for the project. It doesn't require genius to recognize that even if an option is settled upon very soon, financing the project will pose a major and probably time-consuming challenge for the city.

No building boom is expected to result from lifting the moratorium because the local housing market is saturated. But city administration and the council have once again ignored the principle of first-things-first. Hoping development will not further outpace the city infrastructure's ability to handle it is an inappropriate policy.

During colonial days in America, individuals with mental problems were sometimes auctioned off to be cared for or exploited as the highest bidder saw fit. Even in the 19th century, U.S. mental patients were often jailed in the same facilities as hardened criminals.

Despite obvious improvements, today the United States nevertheless lags behind many industrialized nations in mental health care because of a lack of any centralized, comprehensive mental health policy. In the words of the Encyclopaedia Brit-

"... In the U.S. rarely is there a central organizing authority with power to coordinate the maze of local or regional programs or to cut through a complex network of eligibility requirements. County services compete with city services, and private agencies vie with state facilities ... "

This deficiency, coupled with the trend toward maintaining only the most severely disturbed patients in institutions, has resulted in large numbers of the "marginally" ill being left to fend for themselves in the real world without adequate support services.

The tendency of Iowa health agencies to refer female releasees from mental institutions to housing facilities maintained by the Des Moines YWCA has now forced the YWCA board to suspend acceptance of any more referrals from the Department of Human Services for the next three months; YMCA officials, feeling the Des Moines "Y" was becoming a "dumping ground" for former male mental patients, recently required the screening of all mental health referrals by state agencies.

These organizations cannot be faulted. YWCA board president Christine Hensley noted the lack of "facilities, staff or methods" to provide the help such boarders need.

That help should come from substantial improvement in the funding, services and coordination of federal, state and local mental health agencies. No humans without the resources to deal independently with their problems should be dumped by the state into the nearest "Y" or into a flop house or onto the street. Government is a compact of people for mutual benefit and protection; no category of people should be excluded from that protection.

Kudos for Knudson

Agricultural workers suffer more fatal and disabling accidents than any other profession. National Safety Council figures for 1983 show 52 out of every 100,000 farm workers died due to on-the-job accidents and 5,294 out of 100,000 were seriously injured.

It would be easy to write an adequate news story about the hazards of farming. But to write a Pulitzer Prize-winning story about tractor accidents and farmer's lung is truly amazing.

Tom Knudson is truly amazing. Working out of The Des Moines Register's Iowa City bureau, Knudson pieced together the six-part series, "A Harvest of Harm: The farm-health crisis" and swept the Pulitzer from Associated Press stories on CIA manuals for Nicaraguan rebels and Wall Street Journal coverage of the 1984 proportial campaign.

Accough Iowa City isn't exactly the hinterland of journalism, UI journalism students should definitely find something to aspire to in Knudson's work. Too often in the rushed pace of daily newspapers, reporters and editors rely on official statistics and official comment. Knudson plucked his story from the painful memories of real Iowans.

He didn't settle for National Safety Council statistics; he dug through death certificates in county courthouses to find out how so many farmers had been killed in the Iowa countryside. He took the time to listen to the stories of those involved: farmers missing fingers, or those who passed out in silos, or the widows and children of farm-accident victims.

Time is a commodity to be skillfully managed in newspapering. Fast-breaking stories about far-away wars and local fires fill the pages; too rare are the intricate paintings of small-scale human tragedy. Knudson deserves sustained applause for finding the time to listen.

Why it is what it is

To the editor:

As the Take Back the Night action for May 4 approaches, it is important distorted by ourselves and in the press College Green Park. That rally was walk at night or the freedom for women to act separately from men. But because these issues continue to draw attention, it becomes necessary to address them once again.

We live in a sexist society. Sexism is the systematic oppression of women on an economic, cultural, political and personal level. One of the ways sexism manifests itself is through violent attacks on women. When the threat of attack limits her independence, her mobility and her right to safety in her own home and community, that is just cause for anger and action.

Take Back the Night is an event organized by women to empower themselves, educate the community and protest violence and fear in their lives. The press has given the impression that we considered this action "more beneficial" than previous Take Back the Nights because we are encouraging women and men to attend. Including men adds another perspective to the event that will only be different than in past years, but not necessarily better or worse.

One reason that other Take Back the Nights have not included men was to give women the opportunity to develop strength and power among themselves. This is because it is women who must deal with their own personal feelings of fear and anger, not men.

Past Take Back the Nights offered a constructive outlet for such emotion through a "speak-out" in which women shared experiences with each other. Because some women would not have felt comfortable speaking out with men present, a separate program for men was held instead.

When the Women's Caucus decided to include men in our march and rally this year, it wasn't because "it only makes sense to include men." The burden of responsibility for fighting sexism and violence has always fallen on women and we believe that men should be actively involved in the

By attending this year's action, men will witness and share the strength and anger of women taking back the night. We hope that men will start talking to each other and become more aware of their attitudes and actions.

We invite all people who recognize the problem of violence against women to come to the Pentacrest this Saturday evening at 8:30 to join us in this struggle against sexism.

Bethany McIvor and Kit Bonson for the Women's Caucus

The real issue

To the editor:

Katie Halbach's recent letter (DI, April 26) renews an unfortunate to remember that the issue is violence argument begun in 1982 with the against women. It has often been original Take Back the Night rally at were specifically excluded to symbolize the "taking back" of a public park by women terrorized by rape and the threat of rape

> Unfortunately, the public discussion of this event was not about the horrible reality of rape and the fear felt by women simply walking home at night. Instead, many people focused on the exclusion of men from the rally. The Daily Iowan sent a male reporter (supposedly no women were available) who was forcibly ejected from the park by several women. After that, there was no longer any mention of the real issue

> The rally and its aftermath created two very vocal and polarized groups: one velling "dykes" and "menhaters," the other asserting that all were misogynists.

> Therefore, I was encouraged by the announcement that the upcoming Take Back the Night rally will include men, if only to prevent the same kind of disaster as last time.

> Halbach's letter, unbelievably insulting in its rhetoric, serves only to distract attention from the real issue at hand and to dilute the important message of the rally. I would hope that the empowerment of women could occur in a cohesive society of men and women unified in their fight against

John Hutchins 421 S. Capitol St.

A better way

While it is heartening to see men taking interest in the problem of sexual violence, they might find a more constructive and helpful form of support than attending the Take Back the Night rally.

Sexual violence presents men and women with entirely different sets of problems. Women are largely its victims; and men are largely not. While some joint discussion is useful, to hold a joint rally seems to defeat the purpose of such an event.

What is the point of this rally? In past years the point has been to help women: To give them a sense of power over themselves, to teach them to be safe on the street, and to provide a forum in which they could comfortably discuss their fears and feelings about sexual violence.

"Supportive" men have been excluded because supportive men have been beside the point and because their presence may have inhibited discussion. Rallies in the past have been criticized as anti-male for excluding men, but these rallies were not about men and women coming together. They were about women taking power, taking it for and by themselves.

differently. They might more alienation between men and women. constructively hold a separate rally or Dan Bastemeyer workshop in which they would learn. for example, how to behave in a nonthreatening manner on the street how to signal to solitary women that they intend no harm — or how to help their women friends deal with rape and harassment. Or they might learn how to deal with their own complex feelings if a woman they love is raped. Then perhaps the two groups - men and women - could meet and compare notes, or march together.

An inevitable problem that arises when only supportive men are invited to such a rally is that "supportive" is not a physical characteristic. How do the rally organizers intend to exlude non-supportive men? Just as any political rally will attract dissenters. so will this one, especially given its location right across from a number of downtown bars.

Conflict would be particularly inappropriate at this event, yet inviting men seems almost to invite conflict and sexual harassment, and that will not make women feel safe or powerful, which should be a major objective of this rally.

Another objective of the rally might be to make women aware they must be careful and discerning. Support is hard to gauge. Most women probably feel that the men they date and with whom they socialize are safe and supportive, yet the majority of rapes in this city occur on dates or following social situations or are committed by men known to the victims.

Polarization is inevitable, but it doesn't have to be destructive or even negative. This rally need not divide women from their supportive male friends. But those men might, for one night, better show support by not attending the rally and instead taking the time and care to educate themselves privately, among themselves. Beth Nugent

Inspiring alienation?

To the editor:

Katie Halbach sounds vehemently bitter in her letter protesting the presence of men at the Take Back the Night rally (DI, April 26). As a man who tries to be sympathetic to the problems of both women and men, her letter only makes me feel insulted and angry. Does she really feel that her generalizations, sarcasm and cheap insults will have a positive effect for

Is it any wonder so many people have images of feminists as man-haters? Reading her letter made me feel that I am less than a human being because I happen to be male. This is exactly how women claim - and rightly so - society makes them feel.

Equality can only be achieved through compassion and understanding from both sexes. Sentiments like Sexual violence does, of course, Halbach's will only inspire more affect supportive men, but quite anger, misunderstanding and

Responding in kind

To the editor:

I find K. Halbach's use of the word 'sexism" hypocritical, given the blatantly sexist tone of her letter (DI, April 26).

There can be no doubt that violence against women is a horrible social problem that demands activities such as the Take Back the Night rally scheduled for May 4. Additionally, I agree with Halbach that the rally is for women, and attendance should be encouraged to be limited to women. Even so, I find her lack of sensitivity appalling and feel compelled to borrow and partially modify the next-to-last sentence from her letter. It is clear she should attempt to retrieve her head from her ass and pretend to be a human being

I am writing in response to John Gillis's recent letter about men, women, feminism and beauty, or the lack of beauty. Whatever. In this letter Mr. Gillis writes, " ... The mind is an erogenous zone, something perspicacious men have known al along" (DI, April 23).

I'm a man, I thought, what the hell, pull out the dictionary and find out what you've known all along. So I did. It's really not very interesting. The mind is a sexually sensitive area of the body, and keen minded men have known this all along. That's what he Fanciful? Sure. Truthful? Maybe Maybe women have known this all along, too. Maybe they've known it longer than men have. Maybe that's why Natalie Pearson makes more sense than does John Gillis. Who knows? One thing's for sure, though:

Gillis is not perspicacious. He cites Pearson's statement that feminism is fast becoming a dirty word to many thoughtful people as an example of reality asserting itself. Well, that's an easy, simple-minded mistake any dullard could make. Public opinion, Gillis's assertion aside, is not reality. A few centuries ago an observer of the skies by the name of Galileo Galilei was made to recant his observation that the Earth revolved around the sun. Public opinion said it was the other way

Jazz center Eaton undergoes surgery

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) - Utah Jazz center Mark Eaton underwent successful surgery Tuesday to repair ligament damage to the right knee he injured Sunday during a playoff game at Houston, team officials said.

The 20-minute operation - repairing the posterior oblique ligament was performed at Long Beach (Calif.) Memorial Hospital by Drs. Douglas Jackson and Lyle Mason, Jazz spokesman Bill Kreifeldt said. Kreifeldt said the surgeons reported the surgery went "very well" and the 7-foot-4 center should be "100 percent" for next season.

He said Eaton will have to wear a special knee brace for about six weeks and then undergo six-to-nine weeks of rehabilition this summer. Kreifeldt also said Eaton will be required to wear a knee brace during games and practices for the three months of next season.

The third-year center averaged 9.7 points and 11.3 rebounds during the season. Eaton also set an NBA record with 456 blocked shots and was the top vote getter on the league's all-defensive team.

With Eaton out for Utah's second-round playoff series against the Denver Nuggets, Jazz coach Frank Layden said he would start veteran Rich Kelley at center. Kelley and Thurl Bailey shared the starting power forward spot this year.

Royals extend White's contract two years

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) - The Kansas City Royals Tuesday extended the contract of six-time Gold Glove-winning second baseman Frank White two years, binding him to the American League club through White, 34, is in his 13th season with the Royals and has a lifetime 259 average. He is a four-time All-Star and won a record six consecutive Gold Gloves from 1976-82. He was the most valuable player of the American League Championship Series in 1980 and the club MVP in 1983.

The Royals had previously signed third baseman George Brett, center fielder Willie Wilson and relief ace Dan Quisenberry to lifetime contracts.

"This contract is in keeping with the organization's philosophy of maintaining the nucleus of our club," Kansas City General Manager John Schuerholz said of White's signing. "Frank has been a major contributor in our success in past years and we expect him to continue to be a vital member of our club the next four years.'

Upshaw named AL Player of the Week

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) - In the world of professional sports, sometimes it's the little things that differentiate a superstar from just another roster player.

Take the case of Toronto first baseman Willie Upshaw.

Two weeks ago, the Blue Jays slugger was struggling at the plate having hit just one homer this season and driven in four runs. It was hardly the production that was expected from a player who in 1984 became the first person in franchise history to eclipse the 100 RBI mark.

Upshaw knew he had to do something. He went into the film room and, after hours of watching himself at the plate, discovered he had unconsciously altered his grip.

"I saw that my hands were a lot higher than they were last season," the 28-year-old said. "That was all that I needed. I lowered my grip and started to drive the ball again.

His grip corrected, Upshaw went on a tear as the Blue Jays rolled to four straight victories. He ripped three homers and six RBIs over that period and for his performance was named American League Player of

Wildcat duo quiets Hawkeye bats

By Brad Zimanek

The Northwestern pitchers once again shut down the Iowa softball team by sweeping a doubleheader, allowing the Hawkeyes six hits and no runs Tuesday afternoon in Evanston, Ill.

"Our pitchers threw the ball very well. We had good offense and hit the ball with power and had some good defense," Northwestern Coach Sharon Drysdale said. "Iowa didn't make too many mistakes. In fact there was only one error in both games and I thought they were hitting the ball well too.

Lisa Ishikawa, who now has a record of 17-5, allowed Iowa only four hits in the first game of the twinbill, while her Wildcat teammates scored seven runs

NORTHWESTERN STARTED the first game off right in the second inning as they came up with five runs. The inning really got underway when Kek Eisen singled with one on. That was followed by a two-run triple by Lisa Lempke then added her second home run of the game in the fifth inning off Iowa pitcher Ann Coughenour.

"She's been hitting the ball very well lately," Drysdale said. "But she can hit for power.'

COUGHENOUR, now 9-8, was not as effective against Northwestern as she was in the 1-0 loss handed to her by Wildcats, April 23 in Iowa City. "Seven hits is quite a few. Especially when two of them were home runs and one of them was a triple," Drysdale 'We happened to get them together today. The last time we faced her we got seven hits also, but we scattered them and we couldn't get them together," the veteran Wildcat coach

The second game of the doubleheader was a real pitching dual as Northwestern's Kathy Tawse and Diane Reynolds allowed only two hits

The Wildcats got one of their hits at the right time as Sue Koopman doubled with two outs in the seventh inning over Iowa center fielder Beth Kirchner's head to score Northwestern shortstop Lisa Koser from first to give the Wildcats the 1-0 victory.

'I think Iowa is a tough team, but I thought that we would get more hits off them than we did in the second game because we did so well in the first game," Tawse said. "It was an exciting game. Tawse was out with a rotator cuff in-

'Last year the Homecoming committee had a lot of problems with their organization and communication and from them we are left with a stigma." Rietz said. "Our biggest obstacle is to overcome that image and I think with all our ideas and careful planning we will get over those bumps.

The group is financed by area businesses, the UI Student Senate and membership fees. The membership fee is $10. All members are required to sign a legally binding contract. The contract has clauses where if a person frequently doesn't show up for the games and sits in the specified section then they would lose their tickets.

THE REASON THIS drastic measure has to be taken is due to last year's problem of people not showing

The membership fee will be returned in the form of a big party at the end of the season according to Brown.

"Last year (the Homecoming committee) had problems with the members only joining on the grounds that they were guaranteed a football ticket and then would scalp their tickets or sit in other sections with their friends," Rietz said. "This contract is a way we can be sure of a successful season."

The club has organized the group into four committees, which is headed up by a Board of Governors. The committees are program, social, publicity and stunts. The stunts committee will conduct what will be communicated over

"The big strong players go fast, and if you want one, you better pick early, Chargers chief scout Ron Nay said.

'It's traditionally the big people who always go early in the draft, and this year the draft is loaded with offensive and defensive lineman," said Falcons general manager Tom Braatz, who traded for the chance to draft Fralic. 'Sometimes a team wants a player it fears won't be available when its time comes to pick so they attempt to trade up. I can't speak for the others, but in our case we sat on a hot tack."

SMITH HAD BEEN signed two months before the draft. He received a four-year, $2.6 million contract from Buffalo - just under the $2.65 million over four years that New England gave wide receiver Irving Fryar as the No. 1 pick a year ago.

Smith promises to be worth the money for Buffalo.

"I think some pressure was taken off by signing early," said the 6-foot-3 Smith, who admitted to being 10 pounds overweight at 288. "But it also put more pressure on me with the expectations. I'll try to fulfill the expectations

Excitement is building for Derby

Spend A Buck, Eternal Prince early favorites

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) - By now, everybody knows that speedy Spend A Buck and Eternal Prince are expected to set the pace in Saturday's Kentucky Derby, while favorite Chief's Crown cruises just behind and Proud Truth trails the field.

But what about those "other horses," legitimate hopefuls Rhoman Rule and Stephan's Odyssey and the half dozen or so longshots also expected to make the 111th Run for the Roses at Churchill Downs?

Where do their "ideal" trips fit into the scheme likely to be dictated by the expected lead horses?

Primarily, their owners and trainers said during an informal survey Tuesday, in one big traffic jam around - or just behind - the Roger Laurin-trained Chief's Crown.

BUT, FLORIDA DERBY winner Proud Truth won't be lonely trailing the field across the backstretch: If everyone runs true to form, the Graustark colt trained by John Veitch will have the company of Lexington Stakes winner Stephan's Odyssey, Derby Trial champion Creme Fraiche and longshots Irish Fighter and Avey's Brother.

Those who should be running just off the pace with Chief's Crown are Everglades winner Rhoman Rule, Derby Trial runnerup Fast Account, Blue Grass runnerup Floating Reserve and Hits Parade Derby winner En-

Delahoussaye looking to win for third time

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) - When Eddie Delahoussaye learned Laffit Pincay Jr. was not going to be riding Skywalker in the Kentucky Derby, the two-time Derby winning jockey didn't wait for a phone call inquiring if he was interested.

'When I heard Laffit went with the other horse (Stephan's Odyssey), I had my agent call them and put my bid in,' Delahoussaye said Tuesday. "I like this horse and I wanted to get back

Back here is Churchill Downs, where Delahoussaye won the Run for the Roses in 1982 with Gato Del Sol and with Sunny's Halo the next year. His other three Derby mounts were Woodchopper, second best in 1981; Gate Dancer, fifth last year, and alsoran Honey Mark in 1975.

THIS YEAR, Delahoussaye and the rest of the riders will be out on the track Saturday at 4:38 p.m., Iowa time for post time. The veteran jockey is well aware that more than talent goes into winning the first leg of racing's Triple Crown.

"Luck, that's what I think wins in the Derby," Delahoussaye said when queried about his success. "You have to get on the right horses and know the track.

Before deciding in 1979 to ride fulltime at Hollywood Park in California, Delahoussaye raced for four years at Churchill Downs and was the Delahoussaye was aboard when the Relaunch colt broke his maiden in his first start, Pat Day was the rider in four other races and Pincay rode Skywalker in his Santa Anita triumph.

'He was very green when I first rode him," said Delahoussaye of Skywalker's one-mile debut last November at Hollywood Park in a maiden special weight run. "He broke bad and must have been 18 lengths

"Since then, he's changed a lot and is more versatile," he said. "He breaks sharper now and is more aware.'

Bidding to become only the sixth jockey ever to win the Derby three times, Delahoussaye has won more than $45 million in purse money and ridden about 3,200 winners. In 1984, he was the nation's fourth-leading rider.

Prince worshipers rise to new levels of pop devotion

AST NIGHT, as I was minding my ow business (working my straight job omething's gotta pay the rent), I was visited by a young guy who unconsciously gave me the biggest shock I've had in all these cynical years of being directly or (as now) indirectly involved with the Pop Life.

This fella, whom I'll call Andre — "not his real name," just like they say in the real news stories — is young (16), healthy, goes to high school, really wants a car and plays a mean game of basketball. But there's a couple of things that are, well, different about him.

First, he says he never thinks about girls - plenty normal for a lot of people, but fairly strange for a 16-

DE.

And second, he's convinced that Prince is Jesus reborn and walking - and preaching - among us. Now the fixation upon pop culture icons as messianic figures is as old as the Roman Empire, whose emperors were worshiped as divine (and what were they but ancient Liberaces and Morgan

And, in their day (and even nowadays), Elvis, John ennon, Jimi Hendrix and Jim Morrison all came to be called prophets, demigods or dark messiahs. Consider: They all died young; they were all outspoken; and they all — consciously or unconsciously — explored the strange side of the audience adulation

SO THE IDEA of Prince as Jesus isn't that crazy. Now, not being terribly religious, this notion doesn't strike me as blasphemous, sacrilegious or even terribly out of line, either. After all, good PR is good

What surprised me so much about Andre's admission of devotion is that Prince, it seems to me, courts it much more consciously than any of the above (even the Lizard King himself). He's also, by all accounts, extremely religious himself: He and the Revolution prayed backstage before each show on the recently completed Purple Rain tour, and he and the band give "all thanks 2 God" for their just-released LP, Around the World in a Day.

As has been pointed out elsewhere (notably Newsweek), a couple of tunes on the new record are the most overtly evangelistic songs this side of Servant and other Christian-rock performers: "Everybody's looking for the ladder," sings Prince in "The Ladder," "everybody wants salvation of the soul/The steps u take are no easy road/But the reward is great/4 those who want 2 go." And later in the song: "The love of God's creation will undress you/And time spent alone, my friend, will cease."

This from the man who sang, not four years ago, on Dirty Mind, "I wanna give you head/Till you're dead"? That wasn't the Godhead he was talking about, either ... I don't think.

SUCH TURNABOUTS are not unheard of (see also Little Richard), but for someone so young (he's allegedly 26) and whose audience - if Andre is any indication — is so hip, it's more than a little unusual.

What's a little scarier about Prince is that his fans Andre included, from what he told me - take his images and his lyrics so deadly seriously. My young friend said he and his friends (of both sexes and of a number of colors) light candles and remain silent while Prince sings of dying for devotion, of the purple rain that falls after the button's punched, of ladders and temptations.

Remind you of something ...?

Andre said he and the bunch of people that went to Chicago to hear Prince felt their souls leave their bodies during the concert. Newsweek's Jim Miller reported that audiences at Prince stops sang the lyrics to "I Would Die 4 U" with arms outstretched and eyes closed - while Prince stood on stage, mute, eyes moist.

Remind you of something ...?

It's tempting to look at Prince as a quintessential 1980s phenomenon: by turns devout, obscene, glitzy, mysterious, scared and so rich he makes more than most countries. He's the darker, more hysterical side to Bruce Springsteen's healthy American grin, and while both inspire fanaticism, Prince's legions like Andre - are at one remove from day-to-day living, closer to the monastery than the courthouse.

NOW I'VE EXPERIENCED my share of rock transcendence: Led Zep at a dope-clouded 15, the Bossman in a club in L.A. the size of the Crow's Nest, and so on. It's powerful, whirling stuff, and it's almost impossible not to lose your head.

And Morrison, Hendrix and the King all were among the most charismatic people in the history of the planet, melting cynicism like wax and spawning legends no matter what they did: In those days (though not so much in these) rock stardom was prophecy of a sort.

But if you could've looked into Andre's deep brown eyes while he spoke of the hope of Prince's message and his connection with the Almighty, then I think you'd have taken a step backwards yourself — it's a little disconcerting to come into contact with such a thoroughly true believer.

Fears of TV tycoon Turner's takeover overstated

By Merwyn Grote

AVID LETTERMAN recently posed a provocative question: If Ted Turner, the mini-mogul of Atlanta, takes over the CBS network, will he air nothing but endless reruns of "Leave It to Beaver?"

Although probably a rhetorical question, it does reflect industry doubts about the man who has been dubbed the 20th-century Rhett Butler. After all, his main contribution to televison thus far has been his ability to make millions of dollars by showing 10-, 20and even 30-year-old network cast-offs. Turner is a big fish in the relatively small cable pond, but his experience in handling the complexities of a company like CBS are limited. Considering his past record and that of his flagship station WTBS in Atlanta, his claim that he would "improve the quality, objectivity and diversity" of CBS's programming is certainly enough to raise a few evebrows, if not inspire a few chuckles.

INDEED, IF the recent attempt to take over CBS had been initiated by anyone else, it might have been shrugged off by the broadcast community as some sort of joke. Instead of buying the CBS stock with money, Turner wants to swap a package of TBS securities that he values at about $176 for each share of CBS stock with a current value of about $110. Even though Wall Street analysts rate Turner's stock package as actually being worth between $120 to $155, it would still represent a pretty profit to any network shareholder with faith enough in Turner to make the deal.

The trade is not, however, as alluring as it seems. Turner's offer is somewhat akin to asking a Monopoly player to trade a hotel on Park Place for assorted houses on Marvin Gardens. His package consists of high-risk. low-quality stocks, commonly called

Television

They may be worth more on the surface, but they are not nearly as secure and far less prestigious than CBS 'junk bonds' in the financial world. stocks. Plus, many of the TBS stocks are zero coupon notes, which will pay no interest until they reach maturity in the early part of the next decade. In the meantime, Turner would be allowed to use their revenue. It would be like Turner getting an interest-free loan from his own stockholders. Although the traded TBS stock would represent shareholdings in any CBS-TBS merger that would occur, they would carry only one-tenth the voting value of current CBS stock. Thus, investors would trade away a good deal of corporate power.

IN THE UNLIKELY event that Turner should pull off the takeover, he would gain control of a company some 17 times larger than his own, so obviously he has everything to gain by such a try. But he is hardly taking a big gamble; other than legal fees and his reputation, he is risking virtually nothing. Any trade made would only be valid if he can get majority control of the network with 67 percent of the outstanding stock. In other words, he will only trade if he gets everything he wants, the way he wants it.

Depending on one's point of view, Turner is either a David going after a Goliath, a Horatio Alger hero living a rags-to-riches success story, a J. R. Ewing scheming his way to power or a con artist-cum-clown like Mr. Haney on "Green Acres." He certainly has a capitalistic zeal that has made his rise to power impressive, if not brazen. His business acumen has helped him turn a failing advertising billboard business he inherited at age 24 into a media conglomerate, whose cable viewership is second only to that of HBO.

THE CAGIEST move of Turner's career came in 1976, when he arranged for WTBS to be broadcast nationwide via a satillite-cable hookup. This immediately quadrupled his potential viewing audience (and similarly boosted his advertising rates) while incurring very little additional overhead. WTBS has since been a veritable money machine, charging national rates for what is still essentially a local operation. According to Electronic Media magazine, in 1984 the station earned a profit of $66 million on revenues of $173 million. (This, however, is offset by major losses incurred by other Turner enterprises, such as his sports teams, the Cable News Network and the now-defunct Cable Music Channel, so the overall profits for the year were only $7 million — a healthy picture, but not strong enough to inspire confidence in a potential takeover.)

WTBS DOES MAKE attempts to provide original or high quality programming such as its "Portrait of America" series; various Jacques Cousteau adventures; documentaries; and an exclusive showing of "Threads," the British TV-movie about the effects of nuclear war. But overall, the station's programming fare is unexceptional, bordering on the banal. Heavy emphasis is placed on reruns of shows like "I Love Lucy,"
"Bewitched," "I Dream of Jeannie,
"Andy Griffith," "Gomer Pyle," "Carol Burnett" and "All in the Family." This is rounded out with an array of old movies, cartoons, Three Stooges and Little Rascal shorts, rock videos and broadcasts of sporting events featuring such Turner-owned teams as the Alanta Braves. TBSproduced series like the sitcom "Down to Earth" and the soap "The Catlins" are merely pale imitations of network programming.

TURNER'S PRIDE and joy, however, is his Cable News Network, and its spin-off, CNN Headline News. These 24-hour news services do a competent job of reporting and have the polish of any local, big city news show. Still, they have yet to live up to their potential either financially or journalistically. TBS's news division has consistently been in the red, posting a $13 million loss in 1984 alone. It seems that the allure of 24-hour live news coverage to the mass cable audience has long been overestimated.

The biggest fear the possible Turner takeover of CBS has provoked is that he would use his power to instill a conservative bias in programming and es pecially in the network news. Cer. tainly, Turner's recent association with Jesse Helms and the right-wing Fairness in Media organization has added fuel to these beliefs.

BUT IN ALL probability, such fears are overstated. Turner has long been on record for favoring "traditional family values" and patriotism, and certainly much of WTBS programming reflects this (e.g., "Leave It to Beaver," "The Andy Griffith Show"). But by the same token, the station prominently airs such "liberal" Nor. man Lear comedies as "All in the Family" and "Sanford and Son," and the showing of the anti-nuclear "Threads" and ecology-minded documentaries of Jacques Cousteau are not necessarily in line with conser-

One might find a conservative bias in CNN reporting, but it is no more pronounced than CBS's liberal bias. Turner is not so much a political zealot as he is a capitalistic megalomaniac. He is more concerned with the financial power of media control than the propaganda potential. He is not likely to promote ideology at the cost of corporate profits. As long as Dan Rather and Mike Wallace are ratings winners, I doubt they would have to fear for their jobs under a Turner reign.

THE ISSUE is probably hypothetical, because most financial experts doubt Turner can pull the gambit off. Still, he has a record of pulling off the unlikely and should not be underestimated. After all, this is a man who once staged a "beg-a-thon" to save a UHF station he owned from bankruptcy and who currently has sponsors for his own WTBS promos commercials during his own commercials, in effect. Robert Edward Turner III is shrewd and aggressive and driven. He won't give up and he probably won't go away.

LUES GUITARIST Duke Robillard will appear with his band, the Pleasure Kings, at the Copper Dollar tonight.

The long-time leader of Roomful of Blues, Robillard formed his current trio after short stints with Robert Gordon and the Legendary Blues Band. The group released its eponymously titled debut album on Rounder Records in the fall of 1983, and the release of its second Rounder LP, Too Hot to Handle, is imminent.

Robillard, a 34-year-old native of Burrillville, R.I., was introduced to the blues through Paul Butterfield and John Hammond records. He formed Roomful of Blues in 1967, modeling the group after classic Chicago blues ensembles. The original group soon drifted apart, but Robillard reformed Roomful of Blues in 1969, turning it into a big band playing in jazzy swing and jump blues styles. The group was one of New England's most popular bands by the mid-1970s, as the members performed in the attire of old jazz musicians and became somewhat of a

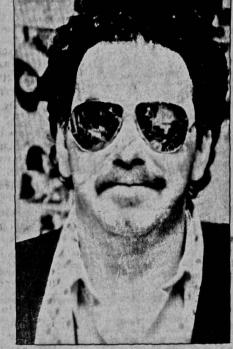

ROBILLARD RELEASED two albums on Island Records with that ensemble, but Night life

then left the group in 1980 to work with rockabilly ace Robert Gordon. While Gordon was not touring, he performed and recorded two albums with the group of ex-Muddy Waters sidemen known as the Legendary Blues Band.

The Pleasure Kings were first formed in 1980 to play club dates, and later opened for Gordon on one of his tours. The current line-up, which includes bassist Thomas Enright and drummer Tom DeQuattro, was formed after Robillard quit his other endeavors to concentrate on his own band.

The group's first album, containing all original material, was quite a critical success. "Charged by a raw, lean attack, the album offers a sampling of Duke's considerable talents and affords plenty of space for his dynamic rhythms and biting solos," Guitar Player magazine wrote. And Record magazine chimed in, "It is high time America started taking stock of its own musical heritage, and Duke Robillard is a living resource too good to ignore."

Joffrey offers summer workshop

In conjunction with the Joffrey Dancers' below by May 11. summer residence, the UI will again hold an intensive ballet workshop, June 17 to 27, for students 14 years of age and above. Participants will have a chance to view the Joffrey II in rehearsal and in informal evening sessions during the 10-day

Pre-registration is required by May 11, including a non-refundable $100 deposit. Registration deposits for applicants not accepted into the workshop will be refunded.

Enrollment is limited, and applicants will be accepted on a first-come, firstserved basis; notification of acceptance into the workshop will be given no later than May 18.

All applicants must audition using one of the three following formats:

1) Send a dance photograph and two letters of recommendation to the address

2) Send a videotape of yourself performing to the address below by May 11.

3) Attend on site auditions at UI's Halsey Gymnasium - May 4 at 1 p.m. for Iowa residents and May 11, 1 p.m. for out-of-

AUDITIONS for level placement will be held on the first day of class.

Members of the workshop faculty are: Lance Westergard, Joffrey II ballet master; Peter Pawlyshyn, member of the Royal Winnipeg Ballet; Michael Maule, faculty member at the Julliard School and the Alvin Alley American Dance Center; and Francesca Corkle, former member of the Joffrey Ballet and the Pittsburgh Ballet

Classes will cover ballet technique and repertory; character (Russian), pointe; a men's class; and stretch and turnout, with an emphasis on classical ballet technique.

In addition, a ballet accompanists seminar will be held June 17 to 22. Daily lectures will cover such topics as class format, movements, combinations, musical organization and development of reper-

Ramona Pansegrau and Suzanne Knosp, accompanists for the UI Dance Program, will be the instructors. Enrollment is limited to 10 participants, and tuition is

Soirée à la Manon An operatic feast in three acts by Jules Massenet Prepared for your epicurean pleasures by the UI Opera Theater

Apéritifs

Backstage tour A delightful sampling of tasty morsels brewing on stage and in the "kitchens" of Opera Theater (costume, scene shops) as prepared and described by the master chefs themselves.

Wednesday at 3:00 p.m., May 1 Use Stage Door entrance on west side of Hancher Auditorium.

Preperformance Discussion "Vive la France!" All the flavor and zest of French culture and cuisine and, of course, the very special "wine, women, and song" of Manon's time and our own will be the theme for the evening Arrive early enough to enjoy French treats in the Hancher Cafe 1st on 5th pastries; croissants and d'Orsay chocolates from Things, Things and Things

> May 2 and 4 at 7:00 p.m. (free tickets required) Hancher Greenroom

Entree

Jules Massenet's MANON A sumptuous ensemble of fuscious French music layered with 200 talented singers, instrumentalists, and dancers sung in English and set on a most spectacular Hancher stage. Truly a pièce de résistance!

May 2 and 4 at 8:00 p.m. (tickets $10 and $7, available at Hancher Box Office) Hancher Auditorium

"Vive la France, Vive la Danse!" Offering the evening's final bon bon, the Preucil School of Music Chamber Orchestra will play a sampling of your favorite Continental music, from minuets to waltzes in the Hancher Lobby (Choreographer Helen Chadima will teach the minuet). Join the MANON cast in making this a truly memorable, bon vivant occasion.

> "Vive la Danse!" after opening night only. The Hancher Cafe will remain open after both shows. Bon appetit!

Treat yourself to a taste of France before the opera (May 2 and 4) A fruit croissant free with your meal when you show your MANON ticket at the Greenbrian
