Fethke named dean of UI Business College

Gary Fethke was named dean of the UI College of Business Administration Monday, effective July 1, 1994.

Fethke has served as interim dean of the college since April 1993, when he replaced George Daly, who resigned to become dean of the business school at New York University.

His annual salary will be $143,000.

Fethke served as senior associate dean in the college from 1988 until his appointment as interim dean. During his tenure as senior associate dean, he was responsible for the day-to-day oversight of the planning and construction of the John Pappajohn Business Administration Building.

YELLOW SPRINGS, Ohio (AP) Antioch College officials have agreed to some demands made by about 20 students who took over the institution's administration building for about 11 hours this

The students, who called their group the Revolutionary Action Committee, were protesting the college's handling of a student's report that she was raped by an Antioch employee during a trip to

The administration agreed to provide students with more information on how to get help when they are overseas, a spokeswoman said Sunday.

The students took over the building at 4 p.m. Saturday and left at about 3 a.m. Sunday. The private college's president and dean of students had met with students with hopes of ending the takeover, Antioch spokeswoman Holly Knight said.

The students were demanding better security measures on col-lege-spc ed trips abroad, bet-ter screening of employees and an extension of campus sexual assault policies to include overseas trips.

President Mandela: 'Free at last!'

John Daniszewski Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa - Nelson Mandela proclaimed victory Monday in his lifetime crusade: a nonracial democracy for South Africa. As his supporters let loose in ecstatic celebration, the nation's first black president declared, "Free at last!"

"This is indeed a joyous night for the human spirit. This is your victory, too," said the beaming 75-year-old leader, his eyes glistening.

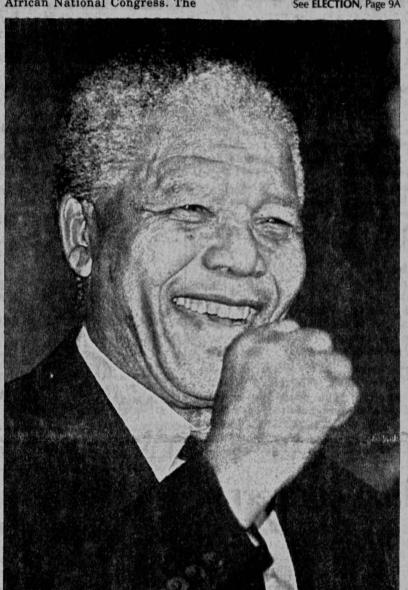

Supporters shrieked with joy in a hotel ballroom draped in the green, gold and black colors of Mandela's African National Congress. The celebrations spilled over into the black districts of Soweto and Alexandra, where thousands of people poured into the streets dancing ecstatically, laughing and waving ANC flags.

Local supporters for the African National Congress are optimistic about the outcome of the first democratic election in South Africa but say the struggle to achieve equality will continue

At a panel discussion Monday night, UI graduate student and South African native Nonhlanhla Makwakwa, political science Prosor Adrien Wing addressed what the results of the election will mean to South Africa's new constitution.

GANG ACTIVITY FEARED

Swell of violence leaves residents uneasy

Rima Vesely

It's not the projects of Chicago or South Central Los Angeles, but some residents living in Iowa City public housing are fearful of what they see as an increase in the amount of violence in their neighborhoods. "I've had a lot of problems lately with my neighbors," Ashley Cherry said. "There was a guy over here pointing at someone's window with a gun. There are always parties and people hanging around yelling, screaming, fighting. I've called the cops maybe 10 times in the past

Cherry said often she doesn't feel safe living in the 16-unit Broadway public housing complex, part of the 82 public housing units in Iowa

When I see a guy pointing a gun into someone's window and the police come over here to arrest someone, I know it has to do with gangs," she said. "I usually keep a really close eye on my kids around here. You never know."

Resident Liz Hudson also feels increasingly uneasy living at Broadway.

"When the cops come around, it's because of violence and fighting," Hudson said. "There's a lot of disturbing our peace. Because I live here, I'm not really afraid. But you just don't know anymore with all the stuff that goes on."

Cherry and Hudson said several violent activities occurred last summer. Around the Fourth of July, an employee of the Broadway Neighborhood Center called to warn neighborhood residents about a rumor of gang violence. Cherry was told to keep her kids inside

The weekend went by without incident, but Cherry and Hudson fear this summer is going to be much worse.

Hudson and another resident approached the Iowa City City Council in March in hopes of making the complex safer. The two asked that more police officers be hired to patrol their "People are lining up at the door to get in," he said. "I wouldn't even recommend people coming over here. I don't think they'll find a computer until finals are over."

The wait at Weeg Computing Center is just as bad, UI senior Paige Pierrot said.

"This place is a joke. I pay full tuition, I pay a computer fee and I can never use it," she said. "You'll be waiting for hours to use it.'

Weeg help desk consultant Mark Jacobson said the busiest hours during the last few weeks of the semester are late afternoon and evening until after midnight.

"It's probably a little busier for us, but we're usually really busy all the time," he said.

Jacobson estimated that about 200 to 300 students come in and out of Weeg in one afternoon this time of year.

UI senior Anniee Hood waited half an hour Sunday to get a Weeg computer before giving up

"It would be nice if there were more computers at the end of the year, or if the computer centers in the dorms could stay open later + even a few hours makes a difference," she said.

Waiting in line is a common occurrence at Weeg Computing Center as students cram their papers onto computer files. UI student Chris Russo waited Monday evening for a computer to open up so he could type his Rhetoric paper in time for today's 3:30 p.m. deadline.

Marquette eliminates race-based mascot

Sharon Theimer Associated Press

MILWAUKEE - The Marquette Warriors became the Marquette Golden Eagles on Monday to both cheers and jeers from students who voted on the

The move came after the school's old nickname was deemed offensive to American Indians. The only other choice was the Marquette Lightning, chosen from among 1,500 nominations.

"I'm a senior, so I'm graduating a Warrior and I couldn't be happier about it," said Sean Murphy, a senior from South Bend, Ind. "I'm going to go down to the Golden Eagle shop and try to get one of the last few Warrior T-shirts."

The new nickname was announced at a news conference outside the Alumni Memorial Union by the Rev. Albert DiUlio, president of the Roman Catholic university.

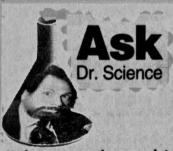

The name change was required by administrators who wanted to avoid offending American Indians. A committee studied the potential name change for 18 months.

"Out of the two names, I liked Golden Eagles better," said John Kuras, a junior from Detroit. "I was upset that it all arose. I think the real discrepancy was in the logo."

Dear Dr. Science: Why is there never a working ball point pen attached to those chains you see hanging around banks? Marie Walsh, Allston, Ind.

Once imprisoned, the ball point pen soon loses the will to write. Even if released, it develops a deep-seated pattern of skipping and blotching that will soon send it back to the chain gang. Repeat offender ball point pens are sent to the post office, where they become federal pens. If not watched carefully, these pens will hang themselves off the writing desks. To prevent this, postal workers are trained to be particularly attentive, which is why they so often seem to be standing around staring at pens. To avoid contributing to this destructive and unwholesome situation, I use a high-resolution dot-matrix printer when I write, and I recommend you do the same.

Dear Dr. Science: What exactly is the "greenhouse effect? Betty Hawkins, La Luz, Science defines the greenhouse effect as the tendency of office buildings to have more and more windows. Castles and log cabins had few or no windows, including the elevators and closets. By the year 2000, office buildings will have window floors, making fiber-optic communications possible from penthouse to basement. I hope you have not asked the question because you are one of those people who foul the workplace with plants, stuffed animals and posters of children with spaghetti on their heads. The workplace should be sterile. It is no place for organisms or even pictures of organisms. My laboratory is a "life-free" bunker, and the only poster on my wall is a chart of the periodic table of elements. 'Nuff said?

Dear Dr. Science: Why do babies always come out crying?

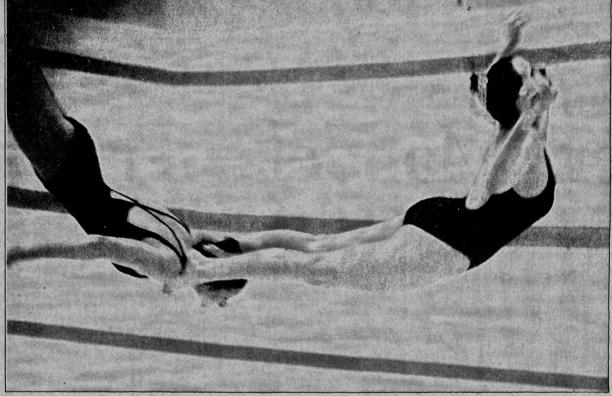

Izzie and Mikey, Detroit,

Despite their scrunched-up faces, those are tears of joy. No matter how lousy this world of ours gets, it beats the womb for fun, diversity and that "what's going to happen next" feeling we're all so addicted to. Have you ever tried to order takeout Chinese in the womb? Catch that "MacGuyver" rerun? Even the simple joy of walking around the block is denied the prenatal. Let them weep, for soon they will laugh and then weep again. Then they'll proba-bly settle down and get jobs and stop emoting altogether.

Dear Dr. Science: Do fish and other marine nimals ever get tired of eating sea food? James Graham, Canton, Words cannot express the revulsion sea creatures feel for eating their own, but what choice do they have outside of starvation? Sure, they'd jump at the chance to chow down on a Whopper or a McNugget, but the fact is that most marine life can't even afford fries and a soft drink. Only the shark, with its omnivorous tastes and the jaws to carry it off, seems content with his diet. I've heard there are species of vegetarian shrimp somewhere in the Pacific, but they're flaccid and tasteless when eaten.

When Christine Conlow came to the UI in 1990, she thought they already had a synchronized swim team. She later found out the team disbanded in the early 1980s. So she did what any ambitious young swimmer would — she started a new one.

"I was under the impression there was a team here and was one of the reasons I chose to come here," she said. "So I played water polo for a while but didn't love it. That is when I decided to turn synchronized swimming into a club sport here and got things organized again."

Conlow's efforts have aroused the interests of seven other UI students; some had never even swam in a group before.

"I joined because I knew someone else who was on the team," said UI freshman Allison Warner. "It was a new thing to me. I've only been swimming for two months."

"Once I got in the water and they found out it was a lot more difficult than I had thought," she said.

Right now, one of the biggest problems facing the 3-month-old team is the lack of a coach.

"Not having a coach is frustrating for people who know how to do everything because they're not learning much themselves," Warner said. "Having a coach would give everyone a chance to become better, and the team would be more organized."

Conlow said the prospect of finding a coach is pretty slim.

"The UNI coach lives here in Iowa City and is here if we need help," she said. "Right now I swim, but I do more coaching and it's kind of hard."

"I don't really know what it would be like," said UI sophomore Krista Larson. "Probably more structured and more disciplined. Right now, everyone is just doing what they want and having fun

At some points during a routine, the swimmers must hold their breath for up to 30 seconds. But they say it's not as difficult as everyone thinks.

"It's mostly mind over matter," Conlow said. "If you don't worry and don't panic, you don't think about it."

As for the future, Conlow said the group should become a recognized club by next fall.

"I would like to see more interest in the sport," she said. "I would like it if some people would get serious enough to compete and show people that the UI has a

Juice demand raises recycling concerns Holly Reinhardt

The Daily Iowan

The juice business is booming and Hawkeyes are drinking it up. However, the lack of a state refund on juice containers has created concern over the handling of the increased supply of aluminum and

From 1992-93, there was a 29 percent increase in the number of units of juice sold at the UI, Jim Kindhart, manager of Vending Operations, said. He expects the numbers for this year to reflect another 24 percent increase. It all adds up to the yearly infiltration of more than 100,000 cans and bottles of juice onto the UI campus. Kindhart said the leftover glass and aluminum containers don't go down nearly as easily as the juice that came inside of them.

"There is a byproduct that doesn't recycle very well," he said. Scott Darlington, co-chairman of the UI Environmental Coalition, said there are not enough recycling bins for drink containers on the UI campus

"Part of the problem with aluminum cans and bottles - especially in the lecture halls when students come out - is that there are few places to put them. The Business Building is the only place that has recycling bins outside of its lecture halls," he said.

Darlington said more UI buildings should be monitored to determine the need for additional bins.

CAF renews free-speech war; UI demands to vacate ignored

Eric Marty

The Daily Iowan

UI students tired of the university ruling with an "iron fist" continued their protest Monday on the Pentacrest, and once again UI officials ordered their removal.

Members of the Campaign for Academic Freedom, Iowa International Socialist Organization, Campaign to Organize Graduate Students, Action For Abortion Rights and Anti-racist Mobilization said they can no longer tolerate the restrictions and regulations imposed by the UI, so they turned out to protest alleged UI attacks on free speech.

"We're here and will continue to be here to assert that we have a right to free speech," said CAF member Jean Fallow. "It's not up to the dean to tell us what we can and cannot say," she said.

Dean of Students Phillip Jones

rebutted these claims and said the problem isn't an issue of free speech, but one of student groups not following UI rules

"It's frightening and completely unacceptable to not have free speech in the classroom, and now that trend has moved onto the Pentacrest," Wolfe said.

Wolfe said UI students are getting behind CAF's effort, and she added that a meeting Monday night would determine whether or not the protests continue.

"It's good that the turnout hasn't been isolated to CAF or just student groups, but students in genersity," said CAF member Suzy al are supporting our rights," she

Grandy suggests methods to revamp Iowa's prisons

Mike Glover

Associated Press DES MOINES - Republican gubernatorial candidate Fred Grandy on Monday proposed ending the state's parole system to force dramatically longer prison terms and reinstituting the death sentence for "heinous murders."

Grandy would also require prison inmates to work, make it easier to try violent youngsters as adults and prohibit felons from getting guns.

Grandy said such measures are needed because "crime has become commonplace.

"We have to get tough on crime by getting real," Grandy said at a news conference. Ending parole would drive up the number of people in prison, Grandy said.

which could make the state eligible for federal money to build more space, Grandy said.

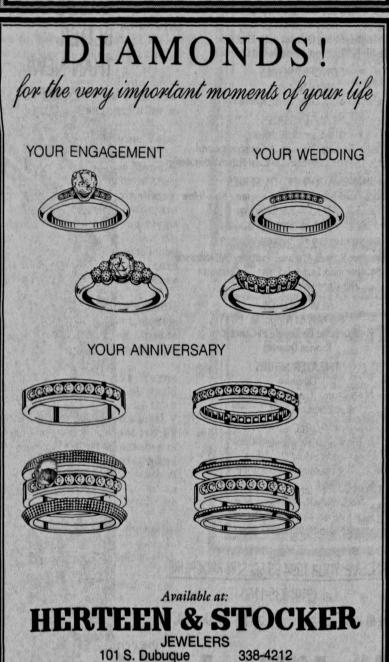

Violent criminals in Iowa on average serve only 25 percent of their sentences, compared to a national average of 40 percent, Grandy said.

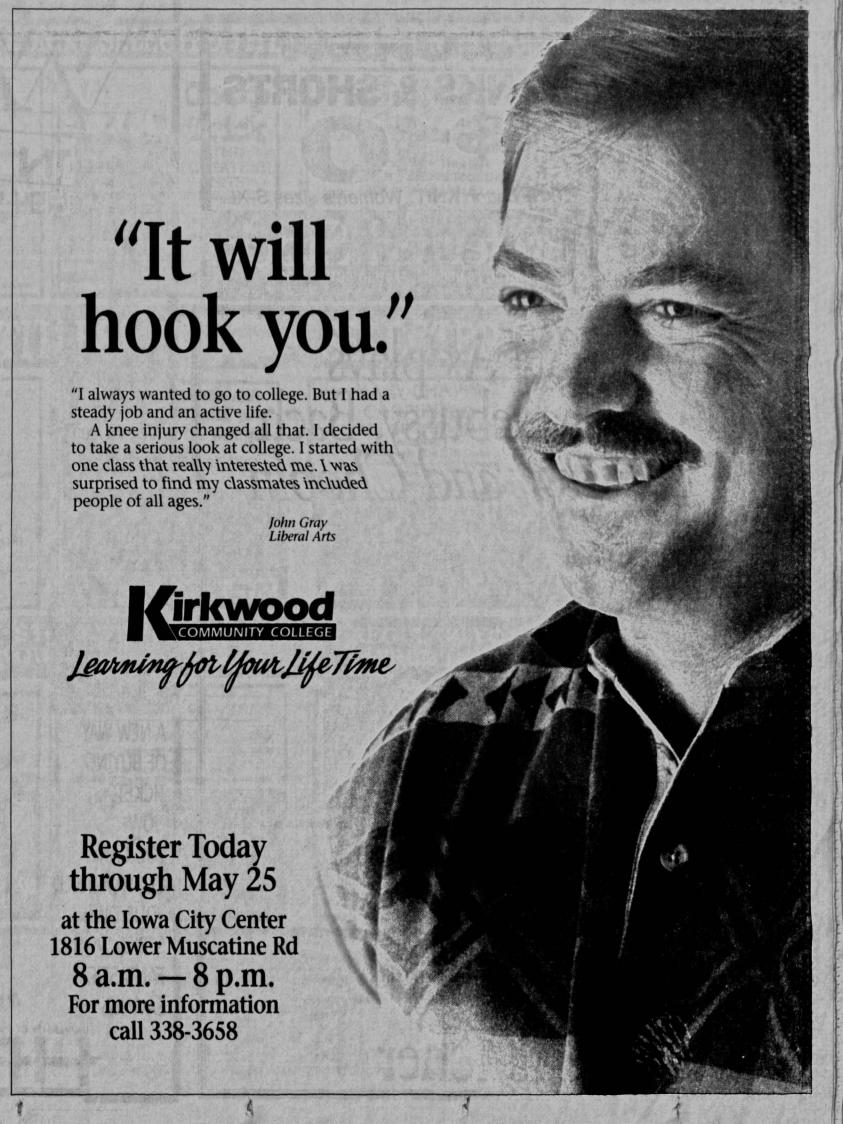

The problem is not that we are failing to catch these criminals," Grandy said. "Rather, we are catching them, but then we are letting them back out again."

Under his proposal, violent inmates would see their sentences reduced only through incentives to behave while behind bars and would serve 85 percent of the time to which they are sentenced.

PANEL WON'T SEEK NEW LEGISLATION

Branstad names new committee to sort out health-care law flaws

Mike Glover Associated Press

DES MOINES - Gov. Terry

Branstad on Monday named a new 15-member group to review healthcare reform efforts and keep the issue in front of the public. "This is an ongoing effort to continue to keep health-care reform at the forefront," Branstad said.

Insurance Commissioner David Lyons will head the task force.

Branstad said the group would work to implement some of the relatively minor health-care issues approved during this year's Legislature and lobby Congress as that body considers health-care reform.

More than a year ago, the governor named a task force to propose reforms in the health-care system, but many of that group's proposals became snarled in controversy in the Legislature.

Legislators did approve measures designed to give incentives for doctors to locate in rural Iowa and allow hospitals to use the state's fiber-optic network.

The group named by Branstad on Monday won't come up with new legislative proposals. "We will look for glitches" in measures approved this year, Lyons said.

Branstad said the health issues approved this year were important.

"Although we didn't get the comprehensive reforms, we did get a number of significant, important pieces to keep moving the healthcare reform initiative forward," Branstad said. Members of the panel, in addition to Lyons, are:

Health Center in Dubuque; Susan Nelson of Belmond; Janice Laue of the Iowa Federation of Labor; Lee Liu of IES Industries in Cedar Rapids; Russ Sporer of Independent Health Alliance of Iowa; William Eversmann Jr., a doctor from Cedar Rapids; Mike Hammes of John Deere Health Care Inc.; Thom Iles of the Iowa Association of Business and Industry; Christopher Atchison of the Iowa Department of Public Health; John W. #### ALLEGED KILLER COMMITS SUICIDE

Iowa murder suspect found dead

OMAHA, Neb. — A body found Monday in South Dakota is believed to be that of a man wanted in the weekend shooting death of an Iowa man.

An arrest warrant was issued in Omaha for James Gardner, 50, of Oakland, Iowa, in the death of James "Jamie" Thomas, 33, of Carter Lake, Iowa.

Police suspect the body is that of Gardner, although no identification was found. Oakland is 27 miles east of Omaha.

Thomas was gunned down Saturday near a south Omaha apartment complex for the elderly. Some residents heard gunshots and scurried to windows. They saw an attacker flee in a red pickup truck, then return to shoot Thomas again.

The court, ruling 7-2, rejected Chicago officials' argument that federal law exempts plants burn-ing municipal trash from the costly requirements for handling hazardous materials.

The federal government has said it costs about 10 times as much to treat ashes as hazardous waste as to deposit them in a

ENCOURAGES DOCTORS TO SPEAK OUT

Kevorkian 'not guilty' of assisting suicide

Julia Prodis

Associated Press

DETROIT -Dr. Jack Kevorkian was acquitted Monday of breaking Michigan's assistedsuicide law after a jury concluded he was only trying to help a gravely ill man end his suffering, not cause his death.

After the verdict, the 65-year-old retired pathologist challenged doctors who have secretly supported his crusade to go public.

"I know there are doctors who want to come forward," the selfstyled death doctor said. "I want this intimidation by medical politicians to stop."

Kevorkian also said he is still receiving letters from sick people who want his help but refused to say whether he would resume his assisted-suicide practice any time

"I think this opens the floodgates for Jack Kevorkian," said one of Kevorkian's most vocal opponents, Lynn Mills of the antiabortion group Operation Rescue.

Kevorkian was charged in the Aug. 4 death of Thomas Hyde, 30, who suffered from the degenerative nerve disorder Lou Gehrig's

They concluded that Kevorkian's main intent was to relieve Hyde's suffering, not cause his death - a loophole in the law. Prosecutors had argued that part of the law was meant to apply to physicians prescribing experimental drugs for terminal patients.

We believe the intent was not to help Hyde commit suicide," juror Gwen Bryson said. "We believe it was to relieve pain and suffering."

Some jurors also didn't believe the prosecution proved where the suicide took place - a technicality cited by the defense. Kevorkian had initially told authorities the suicide took place in a Detroit park but testified at trial that it happened in the parking lot behind his apartment building in a different county.

Jurors said their sympathy for Hyde's suffering also played a factor in their verdict.

"I don't think it's our obligation should endure," said juror Gail Donaldson, a nurse whose sister and father died of lengthy, grave

The verdict raises more questions about the future of Michigan's assisted-suicide ban, which expires Nov. 25.

The Michigan Court of Appeals is considering three circuit judges' rulings that the law is unconstitutional, and a commission set up to last week to reach a consensus.

Kevorkian's five-day trial was the first time charges under the law had gone before a jury. His lawyer, Geoffrey Fieger, said the verdict "drives a stake" into the ban's heart.

"This is the first chance for the people to decide," Fieger said. "It wasn't Dr. Kevorkian on trial here. It was everyone's rights on trial

NRA LOBBIES

Clinton tries again for ban on weapons

Tom Raum Associated Press

WASHINGTON - President Clinton used a table overflowing with assault weapons on Monday to dramatize a final lobbying push

"This is a lay-down no-brainer and Congress must not walk away from it," Clinton asserted.

His address to law enforcement officials came as supporters said they were about 15 votes short for House passage of legislation to stop production and sale of 19 types of semiautomatic weapons.

The House vote is expected this week, perhaps Thursday. The Senate has already adopted such a ban as part of an omnibus crime bill.

Clinton, a table filled with menacing-looking weapons to his right and a rack of more weapons to his left, insisted the proposed ban "is not about gun control, it's about crime control."

"To hide behind the rights of sports people to justify the kind of unconscionable behavior that takes place every single day on the streets of this country is an unforgivable abuse of our common right to be hunters," he said.

"It's amazing to me that we even have to have this debate. I mean, how long are we going to let this go on?" Clinton asked.

Even so, the powerful gun lobby, led by the National Rifle Association, continued to control a lot of votes on the issue.

Meanwhile, Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., who sponsored the ban in the Senate, met Monday with representatives of more than 25 law enforcement, consumer, labor and other groups who are lobbying wavering House mem-

"The NRA is a very potent lobby back here," she told reporters afterward. "The only thing we have to meet it is people."

The bill would ban 19 specific assault guns and copycat models and limit detachable magazines to 10 rounds. The bill exempts 650 rifles and shotguns. On Sunday, the NRA's Wayne LaPierre said the guns that would be banned are no different than the ones that would remain legal.

Clinton was accompanied by police Chief David Steingraber of Menomone Falls, Wis., who talked about last bek's shooting death of Waukesha police Capt. James Lutz. The captain was killed by an assault rifle.

Weapons designed for the exclusive purpose of killing people should be banned," Steingraber

The event was designed to put some heat on Rep. F. James Sensenbrenner, R-Wis., a Menomonee Falls resident who opposes the ban on assault weapons. The bank robbery that receded Lutz's shooting occurred in Sensenbrenner's district.

NGARA, Tanzania - Terrified Hutus traveling in small groups slipped past rebel patrols Monday, forded the rain-swollen river that divides Rwanda and Tanzani d joined 250,000 other refugees at a

"The border is closed, but they are coming every day in groups of about 100. We have 79 so far today," said Jacques Frankuin, head of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees office in Ngara, on Monday.

"They are crossing the river in small canoes, or boats or whatever they can find," he said.

Several hundred refugees carrying mattresses, baskets, cooking utensils and some driving goats walked toward the camp along the road from the bor-

Frankuin said soldiers of the rebel and mostly Tutsi Rwandan Patriotic Front are trying to prevent people from crossing the border. He said the refugees were terrified of the rebels and said it was difficult to avoid rebel patrols along the Akagera River.

Bodies floated down the river at a rate of about one every five minutes. About 20 of the bodies floated in a pool near the border bridge at Rusumo near Ngara. It was not clear who killed them.

Soldiers from the Hutu-run government army abandoned the border Thursday after the rebels seized control of the province along the border. Within a day, about 250,000 mostly Hutu refugees terrified by the rebel advance swept into Tanzania.

About 75 relief workers at the camp toiled Monday to distribute food to the refugees. Each got a threeday ration of just over 2 pounds of red beans.

Workers also pumped water from a nearby lake. "This lake will save a lot of lives," said Frankuin.

Thousands upon thousands of refugees, including some Tutsis, huddled in open fields or under tents made of plastic sheeting. They cooked their meager rations over open fires that shrouded the camp with Refugees and some relief workers worked with shovels and hoes to hastily dig latrines for the camp. 200,000.

Ancient animosities between Hutus and Tutsis have rekindled the civil war and fueled the violence that has ripped Rwanda apart, but so far officials say the groups are coexisting peacefully in exile.

Fighting in Rwanda began April 6 after President Juvenal Habyarimana and the leader of Burundi both Hutus — were killed in a suspicious plane crash in Kigali, the Rwandan capital.

U.N. efforts to arrange a cease-fire have been unsuccessful. The rebels said in a radio broadcast that they would not attend peace talks today in Arusha, Tanzania

However, U.N. spokesman Abdul Kabia said by telephone from Kigali that Tanzanian authorities told the United Nations the rebels had agreed to send a delegation to Arusha, but that they would not negotiate with the government.

Meanwhile, the war and the killings continue.

Mortar rounds exploded Sunday at a church crowded with Tutsi refugees in the center of Kigali. Kabia said 12 people were killed and 113 wounded.

It was not immediately clear who fired the mortar rounds or if the Sainte Famille church was the intended target. Kabia said both warring parties blamed the other for the attack on the church, which was sheltering about 2,000 refugees.

"We heard reports a few days ago that the displaced people in this church and at the Notre Dame school were earmarked for massacres," said Kabia. "We immediately established a presence at those areas to try to protect the people.

"We had no problems there until yesterday when these shells fell on these poor, innocent people who had been running away from the danger only to be attacked at the church that could easily be identified as a place where people were seeking refuge."

At least 100,000 people have been killed in nearly a month of ethnic savagery in Rwanda, and more than 1.3 million have fled their homes. U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali told the Security Council last week the death toll could be 200,000. The rebels said on their radio that the death toll was

Reinvent the American dream

Kurt Cobain's recent suicide has stirred a debate centering around the definition of our generation's value system. One of the more prominent ideas raised is that Cobain was the spokesman of Generation X in his screaming declarations of frustration and depression.

It is unsettling to think that alienation is the defining characteristic of our generation. It is not strange, however, when considering the way we are socialized. We are taught to believe in the ultimate paradox: the American dream. As the only available vision of our future, it is being preached to us by family, friends, school and media through messages about the value of nice clothing, multiple color TVs, three cars with velvet seats, a partner who has beautiful teeth and success in the job market. Despite surging rates of unemployment, poverty and downward mobility, polls indicate that more than half of the American population still believes in this nightmarish vision of eternal dissatisfaction invented by Benjamin Franklin on a bad day.

Despite surging rates of unemployment, poverty and downward mobility, polls indicate that more than half of the American population still believes in this nightmarish vision of eternal dissatisfaction invented by Benjamin Franklin on a bad day.

At the same time, we are told that we can never achieve the happiness that the dream offers. Media images persuade us that we are physically insufficient because we weigh too much and our noses are too big, while academic pressures make us feel intellectually inferior - we can never be the best, but we have to give it a try. We read in the papers that unemployment is our future. We can't afford that new stereo or aerodynamic jogging shoe. At the same time, we see how wealthy and successful people, who are supposed to be happy, are weighed down by the misery of their own meaningless existence. We are slowly beginning to realize that the American dream is not likely to secure us happiness.

It is explained to us in gruesome detail that the American dream with which we have been indoctrinated throughout our lives is invalid - at least for us.

Our realization has numbed us. We have accepted our designation as unwanted and silent shadows, giving up on rebellion as a pointless activity. Growing up after Vietnam and Watergate and countless other instances of betrayal of our ideals, an increasing cynicism has come to characterize us. We have been named Generation X because our inertia keeps us from protesting. Now we might reflect on Nixon's death, seeing him as an icon of our own dysfunction, our inability to find the impossible satisfaction of the American dream.

The only way for us to overcome the inertia of Generation X is to reinvent the American dream, seeking a vision of success that is actually accessible. The new American dream needs to encompass the understanding that material goods cannot make us happy, that we can never attain all the goods we would like to have anyway and that success sometimes sucks.

We can find the new American dream by burning our success recipe. We can find it by seeing that we live in a world where we can be active and reflective, enriched with the idea that we can accomplish something but only experience happiness in tiny powerful bursts that will end as soon as we become aware

Hair and creativity To the Editor:

In his column appearing in the April 26 edition of the DI, Tom Hunter is correct to assume that every short-haired male he sees is "a conservative, neat, respectful little drone who shows his lack of imagination in the neatness of his hair." It certainly couldn't be the case that many short-haired males express their creativity through writing, painting, composing music, etc. and thus feel no need to convince themselves of their creativity through loud hair styles. It sounds too easy. Nor is it the case that many long-haired males (along with those with brightly dyed hair, spikes, Mohawks, etc.) have never done anything creative in their entire lives and are desperately trying to convince themselves and others that they really are creative and unique. It sounds too easy. All longhaired men are highly imaginative, regardless of whether they've ever written, painted or composed anything. After all, men who express their creativity through such meaningful forms as hair style have no need to engage in such inane activities as writing, painting or composing music in order to be creative.

Tom Hunter's long hair clearly demonstrates that he is indeed a creative being, especially if he has followed through with his plans to dye it purple. I, on the other hand, have short hair. I am thus totally unimaginative and clearly unentitled to my own opinions. Thank God I have the opinions provided in Tom Hunter's columns to tell me what I should think.

magic age of 27. I'm going to live. I already have one - between my eyebrows. For the last two summers, I've had a slight line there from lying in the sun, squinting. I think about wrinkles now, but I don't worry.

I can still wear short dresses and a pullover with purple leggings, when I've exhausted the creative possibilities of a small wardrobe. Time is short, though, for half-shirts, bikinis and high

The running and the volleyball and the steady diet of vegetables and beans will not erase the stretch marks from my belly after I've had the baby my husband so desperately wants. And I have, dear God, a bunion. It is red and knobby; its small veins are fat with engorged blood, like the nose of a drunk. I am still 30 years too young for Rockports, yet I can no longer spend a day tottering in 4-inch pumps, my toes bunched, maneuvering in rocky, muddy driveways and skittering across

About midriffs and swimsuits, I am encouraged by my mother showing her stomach sometimes in the summer, though she has begun to wear the shorts-style swimsuit bottoms instead of the French cut. Since I've never seen her without the stretch marks, I simply do not notice them now, though I used to think they looked a lot like the wrinkled wise guy from

But while I was away this year, Mom went and did something old: She emptied her closet of every pair of shoes with a height of more than 1 inch, giving away her fuchsia lizard skins, her white-on-black buttoned tuxedo

I've outlasted that pumps, even her navy blue heels of soft, rubbed suede. From her, such a strong admission - a concession, really - to growing old makes it less difficult for me

I rarely wear heels, although I still wedge them on for special occasions. Occasions for sitting, mostly - like weddings or the symphony, when my husband is dutiful, picking me up at the door instead of making me walk to the car.

A husband. I have a husband. And though he is not yet 27, he has lines laughing at the edges of his eyes and dandelion patches of gray hair I have stopped trying to root out. The gray is from his Syrian mother, not age, but it is no less a reminder that we, no, that I am getting

I have a husband, and now the family doctor calls me Mrs. Bostian. We, as a married couple, finally receive coveted invitations to small, quiet dinner parties I would be excluded from if I were still just a girlfriend. At these to-dos we drink wine, then coffee and brandy, and talk about teen-agers nowadays. We talk about having babies, then raising them. Then we all get so exhausted just thinking about it that we can't wait to go home and go to bed. I have a husband and we talk about babies, and we look forward to getting some sleep.

Sometimes, I wonder if I sold out somewhere along the line. Sell out. A term of derision in the suicide note written by Nirvana's now exlead singer, Kurt Cobain. A term frequently used to describe what Joplin, Hendrix and Morrison most emphatically were not.

I wonder if I'm supposed to have happy moments, solemn or silly or joyous happy moments. I wonder if I was supposed to stay mad. Would my 20-year-old self look at me now and pray she could make it that long? Or would she trim her Mohawk and go out to the bars, drinking sticky sweet scotch sours until 3 in the morning? She would probably sneer, blow smoke in my face and go to her room to write angst-driven, artless poetry about individual freedom and nonconformity.

Who ever thought I'd make it past 21? How on earth did I get to be 25? It's not that I really believed in fate. It's not that I had visions like Owen Meany or arrogance like Jim Morrison when he said, after the deaths of Hendrix and Joplin, "You're looking at No. 3." May st didn't know what was going to happen; an whatever was going to happen, I would never be ready

I don't remember becoming an adult. I can't think of any determined decision I made to be responsible, to get out of bed every morning and take care of business. I don't know when I became patient.

It's not the wrinkle. It's not the evolution from bikini to one-piece Speedo coveralls. It's more quiet, less obvious. It's taking five minutes every night before bed to disinfect my contact lenses, five more to take all my allergy medicines, another two or three to kitten-proof the kitchen and shake some cat chow into his bowl. It's not getting the bills paid this month, but every month. It's getting a notice that the loan I defaulted on five years ago, the same loan I've written a check for every month of the last three years, is just a few more checks away from being paid in full.

My mom told me a long time ago, a day would come when I could say, "Whew. Thank God that's over." I must have lived through that day without marking it. It must have been one of those days when my husband and I talked about having babies and looked forward to getting some sleep.

Secrecy of IACUC meetings unjustified

If information is power, then UI Vice President for Research David Skorton's decision to continue secret meetings of the Institutional Animal Care and Use Committee makes it abundantly clear that he intends to control the information and the power. He has advanced four arguments for maintaining secrecy - each one is

1. The IACUC meetings are not the place for general discussions about the use of animals in university research. No one maintains that they are (despite the fact that recently released committee minutes seem to show current members discussing such matters with some frequency). The entire purpose of the Animal Welfare Act is to minimize the use of animals and the discomfort or painful procedures that they may be subjected to. Skorton's position seems to be an attempt to obscure exactly why the committees are mandated under the act. To be precise, it is their mandate to make sure that the institution is in compliance with the act - by reviews of current policies, by regular inspection of all facilities where animals are kept or used and, most importantly, by reviewing and approving, or modifying or rejecting research protocols before researchers apply for funding.

The IACUC role in reviewing protocols becomes a crucial link in evaluating whether an institution is meeting its charge under the act. These reviews should not be conducted in secrecy. Entirely too many institutions have borne the brunt of public anger and scorn, when research programs, approved by secret IACUC committees, have been exposed as cruel, inhu- County attorney or the attorney general of tion.

2. Intellectual property and proprietary information must be protected. No one who is concerned about the ethical treatment of animals in medical research is interested in acquiring any of this information. Those portions of research protocols dealing with these matters need not be made public. IACUCs have the option of being in closed session when such matters are discussed. All the solutions to this nonproblem are in place. It is a smoke screen.

3. There is no legal requirement for open meetings. This is Skorton's opinion. He knows well enough that the issue is being adjudicated all over the country and that courts are deciding on both sides of the issue. While the university's legal counsel may share his opinion, I've heard no such assurances from the Johnson law or regulation prohibiting open meetings.

But even if it were legal for them to close the meetings, it would be wrong to do so. Iowans have strong beliefs in democracy and open government. Hiding behind a poor law or regulation, or a legal ambiguity, is not something to be proud of. Our institutions should take a leadership role rather than meekly following the

4. Fear of terrorism precludes open meetings. If this were true, every public body and institution could lock its doors tomorrow. This is Skorton's clearest statement that he believes he can write his own rules. What stops any other government agency from using this logic to close its

At a Feb. 1 meeting, Skorton stated clearly and without equivocation that he had no intention of suggesting that this applied to any local critics of either his policies or medical research at the UI. Skorton promised to produce mentation on "hundreds" of terrorist acts in the United States and England, which supposedly justify the continuance of closed meetings. What is hidden from real or imagined terrorists behind the closed doors? Not much. What is hidden from the public are the specifics on how the UI uses its animals.

Daily Iowan readers who have concerns about open government, the ethical treatment of ani; mals or protecting the integrity of the UI could do signal service for these causes by contacting the university administration and the Board of Regents to tell them it's time for open IACUC housing complex.

During the summer, Iowa City Police Department officers will be able to work overtime and patrol the neighborhoods on foot because of a $10,000 grant to the Broadway Neighborhood Center, a state and locally funded youth program.

Public housing resident Sarah Williams said she feels safe living in Iowa City's Broadway complex and said she hasn't heard of any gang members in the area. Before moving to Iowa City, she lived in Chicago public housing projects.

"It seems nice because of CHA (Chicago Housing Authority) housing," she said. "It's quiet, no arguing. It's clean, the rooms are nice. My kids can walk outside free. In Chicago you can't do that. You still can't do that."

One teen who lives in Broadway public housing agreed that although he wouldn't consider the area safe, it isn't dangerous.

"I lived in South Central L.A.," he said. "I would say they have a lot of problems around here, but I where you shouldn't go out at night or wear certain colors.

He said he's heard about gangs Posse, and reported drug sales in themselves as gang members."

"There have been fights around occurred outside of public housing here and stuff," he said. "I think there are some gang members coming from Chicago and stuff. Me and my friends were talking about it." Police and some residents say gang activity is occurring in Iowa City and isn't limited to public housing areas, however.

"Everyone's image of Iowa City is that it's wholesome, it's clean, it's very naive," said Sid Jackson, a gang prevention officer with the Iowa City Police Department. "We've got kids who walk, talk and dress like gang members. It's who they associate themselves with, the way they behave, the way they present themselves.

Jackson said the FBI and the Iowa Department of Corrections informed the police department ast year that gang members who were about to get out of prison were coming to the Johnson County area. There have been incidents that have made the problem more of a reality to Iowa City citizens.

"We've had shootings," he said. "There was one drive-by last spring that was gang-motivated but r gang-related. There was another shooting in the downtown area in November, and we've had contact in school, such as the Eight Ball with people who have identified the Nursing Building ITC said about 17 of the 26 computers were open on Monday afternoon.

"There are no problems getting in," she said.

"Willie Wampum" cartoon caricature of an American Indian warrior before that mascot was dropped as offensive. The school logo in recent years has been a silhouette drawing of an American Indian warrior. American Indian nicknames have been objects of controversy among high schools, colleges and professional teams.

Wisconsin Superintendent of Public Instruction John Benson last month asked more than 60 districts to drop American Indian nicknames and mascots. The Minnesota and Illinois Boards of Education have also asked that high schools replace American Indianrelated names and logos.

The UI's athletic board last week voted to ban mascots depicting American Indians from the school's athletic events. Juniata College is dropping the American Indian as its school mascot and St. John's is in the process of replacing its Red-

Stanford University dropped the nickname Indians in 1972 and the University of Wisconsin-La Crosse, Dartmouth, Eastern Michigan and Simpson College also have changed their nicknames.

The University of Massachusetts adopted the Minuteman nickname in 1972 after students voted to abandon the Redmen as insensitive to American Indians.

NEW YORK (AP) - Miami teammates Keith Askins and Grant Long, Atlanta's Douglas Edwards and San Antonio's Dennis Rodman all were suspended and fined by the NBA on Monday following fights and rough play in playoff games over the weekend.

All suspensions take place immediately.

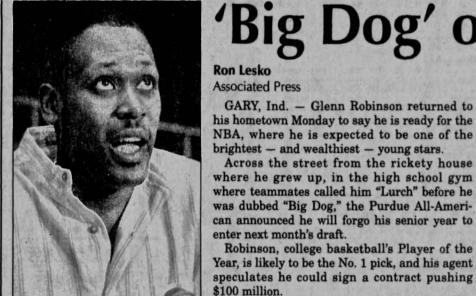

Askins was suspended for three games and fined $15,000 for his role in the third-quarter fight between the Hawks and the Heat last Saturday. Edwards was suspended for two games and Long for one. Each was fined $10,000.

Long was suspended for initiating the incident by striking Atlanta's Duane Ferrell in the Rodman got a one-game suspension and a $10,000 fine for his actions during the Spurs' 96-84 loss to Utah on Saturday.

Rod Thorn, the NBA's vice president for operations, assessed all the fines and suspensions and added a flagrant foul to Rodman.

It is simply the right time to take his game to a higher level, and Gary Roosevelt High School was the right place for his long-awaited announcement.

He is among a talented group of underclassmen who have declared their eligibility, including Jalen Rose and Juwan Howard of Michigan, Donyell Marshall of Connecticut and Jason he led the nation in scoring with a 30.3 average, Kidd and Lamond Murray of California.

But Robinson widely is considered the best player in that group, and Indiana Pacers general manager Donnie Walsh said Robinson never even got a chance to show his full range of skills

"He obviously can score, but I really believe he has better all-around abilities than have been shown at this point," Walsh said.

Iowa shortstop Gabe Wyckoff threw away the final out in the seventh inning of game two, allowing Illinois to come back for an 11-9 victory and a doubleheader sweep Monday at Iowa Field. Coupled with a 7-4 loss in the opener, the Hawkeyes' remain mired at .500 in the Big Ten standings, leaving their conference playoff invitation in considerable doubt. Hawkeye stopper Kurt Belger (2-2) Illinois slugger Forry Wells drilled Duane Banks took the loss hard.

"When you score nine runs, you should win," Banks said. "I think the last seven games, we've made 24 errors, and it's absolutely a joke the way we play defense."

Illinois left fielder Jason Schumaker began the seventh with a single off Brent Glendinning.

"It's really a shame, because our kids really played hard," Banks said. "They really busted their butts in that last game, and it comes down to the two middle infielders not being able to catch the ball and throw the ball."

After Hawkeye Jeremy Lewis drove home two runs with a two-

Schulte opened the inning by loading the bases on two walks and a hit before Schullian hammered a 2-2 pitch in front of the left-field foul pole and just missed a grand slam. On Schulte's next offering,

Reggie Miller scored eight of his

Indiana will play the winner of the Atlanta-Miami series, which is tied at one game apiece.

The Magic, in the playoffs for the first time, led 78-70 when Shaquille O'Neal picked up his fifth foul and went to the bench with 9:22 to go. After Anthony Avent scored for Orlando with eight minutes to go, Rik Smits started the Pacers' streak.

Miller hit a free throw on a technical foul against Tree Rollins, then Smits had a three-point play. Miller, averaging 29 points in the playoffs, hit two baskets after O'Neal returned, Vern Fleming scored and Miller added a 3-point goal for an 88-80 Indiana lead.

A basket with 4:18 left by O'Neal, who led Orlando with 23

Sharks keep rolling with 3-2 win

TORONTO - The unlikely San Jose Sharks continued their surorising run in the NHL playoffs with a 3-2 victory over the Toronto Maple Lea Wh Monday night on Johan Garpeniov's goal with 2:16 emaining.

The Sharks, who have the worst record among the 16 teams that made the playoffs, followed up their first-round victory over Western Conference top seed Detroit to take a 1-0 lead in the second-round series against the Maple Leafs.

Igor Larionov and Pat Falloon lso scored for the Sharks. Wendel Clark and Mark Osborne scored for Toronto outshot San Jose 31-29.

All five San Jose skaters on the ice touched the puck on Garpenlov's winning goal. Larionov's pass sent the Swede for a nuick relay into an open side of the net behind goalie Felix Potvin, who had three shutouts in the firstround series against Chicago.

CHICAGO - John Smiley pitched a two-hitter and the Cincinnati Reds beat Chicago 9-0 Monday night, sending the embarrassed Cubs to their club-record 11th straight loss at Wrigley Field.

The Cubs remained winless at home this season. Not even a change in uniform could change the Cubs' luck or their woeful

On Sunday, they had tied the 1974 club record of 10 straight losses at Wrigley from July 27-Aug. 13. Chicago had earlier established a team record for its worst home start, surpassing the 0-8 out-ofthe-gate at Wrigley in 1957.

The Cubs came out in blue jerseys instead of their traditional white - the only time they've ever worn anything but white at Wrigley - but it didn't matter. They fell to 6-17 overall.

Bret Boone drove in four runs and the Reds scored five times after two were out in the third inning to make an easy night for Smiley (3-2).

Thomas Howard's solo homer in the second gave Cincinnati a 1-0 lead. Willie Banks (2-3) retired the first two hitters in the third but then gave up a single to Reggie sportswriters don't make a difference on what they write, the question to ask is: Why spend the money? Make no mistake, quite a chunk of coin goes toward media meals and perks.

A two-out error by shortstop Jose Vizcaino made all nine runs in the third unearned. Matt Williams hit his major league-leading 12th homer after the error.

For example, Hayden Fry has approximately 15 press conferences luncheons each season. The deli manager at the Hollywood Boulevard Hy-Vee estimates that the media meals provided to sports information cost around $4 a plate, with 50 plates available.

Thus, press conference lunches alone, one of the cheapest goodies given out, costs sports information $3,000 per year. The fancier grub in the press box and the food and liquor tabs of the press parties undoubtedly cost more than that.

So what do free media meals really cost the average fan? Consider that question when you read about the next annual increase in Iowa football ticket prices. Look to read about it in the small print, though, because the money spent and I think I've been involved in everything, but the second game today was just a game that got down to whichever pitcher could go out there and put a zero or two on the board," Illinois coach Richard "Itch" Jones said.

In the opener, Illinois banged out seven hits in three innings off Iowa starter Glendinning (1-4), and John Oestreich pitched three strong innings to save the 7-4 victory for Illinois starter Donnie Payne (4-6).

Here I lie buried under this flat stone, a woman much talked about, who took my clothes off for a single man alone. Anonymous, "Anthology" 7.324

Today, it is axiomatic in the field of classics to observe that women in antiquity were as a class treated quite differently from men, both in law and in practice, in Greek as well as Roman culture.

One can always point in the ancient world to fictional and actual exceptions to the general rule. The Greeks had their fictive powerhouses in the female goddesses of the Homeric poems and the commanding presences of a Clytemnestra or Medea; among the Romans, such real personalities as the destructive Cleopatra or a scheming Agrippina (mother of Nero) became in turn legends in their

My attributes for the latter two, whose ontological status is beyond question, are, however, deliberate and telling: Viewed through the antithetical eyepiece of male magnification, so to speak, Agrippina's "scheming" would after all merely become a skillful securing of her own and her son's political interests, and Cleopatra - a highly intelligent woman, well educated and fluent in numerous languages simply played a fast game of power politics with an ambitious ruthlessness more compelling than that of most men in her circles.

The characterized "monstrousness" of these women, then, resides not really in any manipulations more chilling than what the great men of the age engineered, but in the frightening syzygy of female nature and male accomplishment.

But these types were, as I said, exceptional. And their stories are those memorialized for more than a thousand years of classical antiquity in the canonical works of the high literature of Greece and Rome and in the West for another 2,000 years.

A couple of weeks ago, I called attention to the light that nonliterary papyri, discovered by chance, can throw on the quotidian realities of life in antiquity among the lowly and humble - who, as in all ages, were certainly more numerous than the high and the famous. Tombstones, similarly, speak with a constricted eloquence to aspects of the nameless lives of men and women alike, whether slave or free.

Although the anonymous epitaph at the head of today's column may well have been a fictional one (such literary exercises were common among both the Greeks and Romans), the tone is real enough and reflects the kinds of sentiments found in genuine inscriptions. It rings true.

Think about this for a moment:

Many such inscriptions from antiquity will elaborate a bit more she spun the wool faithfully, she raised her children, she was kind to her household, etc. - but on the our own era and our own preoccusame restricted scale. Frankly, some ancient pets got more heartfelt (from our modern point of view) send-offs.

today's New York Times or Chicago politically correct view about women (or men), or rage about the grave marker) an encomium of a evils of antiquity (or modernity), or promote an amorphous cultural relativism (or rigidity). It is, rather, to note something about the historical baggage we all carry as we make our daily sorties into the front lines of the gender wars. We should not, I believe, try to forget our many appalling cultural heritages, but nor, I believe, should we allow ourselves to become trapped in the sticky dishonesties of omission from our fabricated histories.

> I make this point without wishing to embroil myself in an invidious, ahistorical imprecation of another era's cultural norms that a later society sees as blindness and outright mockery regarding its own convictions about human gender, human beings and our human interactions with each other.

Can any one of us safely say that future generations will look back to pations and not be puzzled, perhaps even outraged by at least some of the primitive and unenlightened "truths" that we - or our My concern here is certainly not government - take as axiomatic?

Like Jane Campion's "The Piano" and Sally Potter's "Orlando," "Sirens" is a very original film, revealing an enormous amount of reflection and creative effort on the part of its visionary creator, Australian writer / director John Duigan. This film is a rarity and a blessing - during a year when Hollywood studios seem to be coughing up more reels of formulaic movie sludge than ever.

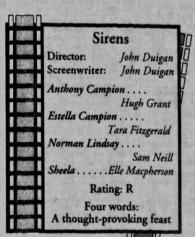

Duigan's film, which opened Friday in Iowa City, sparkles with a kind of effervescent charm that is at times very funny and always thought-provoking. Pure quality gleams in the performances, the lush sets, the photography and most importantly - in the script. "Sirens" shines; it's quite simply a beautiful film to watch.

This is also an honest, open film, confronting some rather huge themes (sensuality, repression and the Catholic Church's attitude toward female sexuality) in a tasteful and meditative way. And while certain aspects of the film bear striking similarities to "Henry and June," Phillip Kaufman's overlong study of the love affair between writers Anais Nin and Henry Miller, Duigan refuses to let the strong sexual content of his film blot out its subtler textures, its softer surfaces.

Set in Australia circa 1930, "Sirens" tells the tale of Anthony Campion (Hugh Grant of "Four Weddings and a Funeral"), a young Oxford-educated Anglican minister fresh off the boat with demure wife Estella (Tara Fitzgerald) in tow, ready to take up a parish somewhere deep in the out-

Before Campion departs, the bishop of Sydney imparts the idealistic young priest with a mission: He is to stop at the isolated homestead of controversial artist Norman Lindsay (Sam Neill of "Jurassic Park" and "The Piano") and try to convince him to withdraw a painting that the Church deems blasphemous ("The Crucified Venus") from an upcoming exhibition. The debonair, somewhat priggish Campion, believing himself to be up-to-date on the avant-garde, gladly accepts.

When Anthony and Estella arrive at Lindsay's home, they find a sort of utopian throwback from the religiously uptight world they are used to. Along with his wife and children, Lindsay shares his home with three svelte models (including Sports Illustrated waif Elle MacPherson) posing for his newest work depicting the Sirens mythic femme fatales whose divine singing lures sailors to their

As Anthony engages Lindsay in some very lively debate about the Church's feelings on "The Crucified Venus" and female nudity in art in general, Estella finds herself first repulsed, then irresistibly drawn to the three models, who frolic about the outback in the buff and lust after Devlin, (As) If-blind muscle-bound bushman.

Duigan allows his film to focus mostly on Estella's spiritual and sexual awakening, rather than the spirited conversations between Anthony and Lindsay - and that's OK. because Fitzgerald is an alluring actress to watch, bringing a spectacular range of emotions to her performance. Grant and Neill are as good as ever, but "Sirens" really revolves around its female

The three models, played by MacPherson, Kate Fischer and Portia de Rossi (all newcomers to the silver screen), are of course lavishly beautiful; but more importantly, they represent everything? Estella and Anthony have been taught embodies "sin" - they taunt and flirt openly with men, are unabashed about posing or swimming naked and they embrace sensuality rather than cringe from it. The three actresses are all wonderful, especially MacPherson, who emotes a sort of enigmatic smuttiness that's immediately endearing.

"Sirens" is a feast for the eyes." and the mind, but it will probably disappear from Iowa City soon (as: films of its quality often do), so be sure and catch it soon. And look for more of Duigan's work in the future - independent filmmakers. of his caliber rarely stay unknown.
