Cocky Doctor

Φ K T; Inter-Fraternity Council (3); Class Secretary (3); Class Football (1) (2); Prepared at Perkiomen School; Pre-Med. Course.

Do not misjudge this young man—looks deceive. Cocky is well versed in the ways of the world. With his innocent eyes and broad smile, the Doctor makes many friends, both on the Campus and in the downtown district. Cocky's peculiarity is his ready wit followed by a humorous chuckle. In fact, many of his friends believe that he has missed his "calling" in studying medicine, for they believe him better capable of playing the rôle of leading comedian in a musical comedy supported by a cast of pretty girls. But we are told that later in life Cocky expects to enter into partnership with one who knows considerable about the medical profession, so friends need not worry about his future.

Bill

A X A; Class Historian (2) (3); Sophomore Calendar Business Manager (2); Editor-in-Chief Oriflamme (3); Band (2) (3); Diagonthian Literary Society (1) (2), Mock Trial (2) (3); Press Club (2); Post-Prandial Club (3); Black Cat (2); Prepared at Lancaster High School; A.B. Course.

Bill's face is like a sundial—it records only pleasantness, which, needless to say, is the joy of all his associates. And yet he is very purposeful in spite of all his cordiality—why, he is so firm he makes the Rock of Gibraltar seem like jelly.

Last summer Bill took a trip to Paris. No, not a chance, because he claims he's off the embalming fluid until he's actually dead. Doubtless the trip was of some benefit, but he's still a peculiar prune when with the ladies, although with us this gill has enough nerve to bottle the Conestoga and sell it for orangeade. However, Bill has it on us in the classroom, where he looms as conspicuous as a giraffe at a convention of ants.

Bill didn't return to school this semester, but spent his time in the hospital. Worse luck for the Oriflamme!

FRED V. BAKER

August 14, 1898

Abbottstown, Pa.

Fred

S. A. T. C.; Entered Sophomore Year; Prepared at Millersville State Normal School and University of Pennsylvania; A.B. Course.

This knightly looking youth, after teaching successfully in a High School of Westmoreland County, decided that a little knowledge of mathematics wouldn't be amiss, whereupon he proceeded to F. and M., at which place, after having jousted mightily in many a tourney to smite that elusive subject, he is still striving and striving.

The one characteristic which marks Fred as a ripping, good fellow is his smile. It simply won't come off. (He could be a toothpaste ad. if he wished!)

Fred is a patient chap, but yet very severe. When he says "Birds, can the chirping, I gotta étudier," his playmates vanish, leaving his room as silent as Doc. Klein's on a warm afternoon. It is whispered that Albright is Fred's next stopping place in his quest for knowledge. Wonder why he picks on Albright.

CLIFFORD P. BALCH

March 5, 1899

Westfield, Pa.

Cliff

Diagnothian Literary Society (3); Square and Compass Club (3); Entered Junior Year; Prepared at Mansfield State Normal School and University of Pennsylvania; A.B. Course.

Cliff comes to us from the wilds of Tioga County, but more often from the Elmira Hospital, where the habit was formed so strongly that his first venture in Lancaster was to go to a similar institution. His fine physical appearance caused a sad case of . . . among the coaches, but to no avail. Besides his appearance he has personality, coming from his youthful years of bashfulness and five years in teaching profession, yet by no means is he ancient. He spends most of his time in his study, but whether he studies all the time or not is not for us to know. However, we think that perhaps a goodly part of his time is spent in dreaming. This is no disgrace to him, for in the dreamer lies the hope of the world.

HEBER W. BECKER

Mount Hope, Pa.

Hebe

Prepared at Manheim High School; B.S. Course.

Mt. Hope is a suburb of Manheim and it is sure to leave its stamp on all who dare to enter its sacred precincts. Hebe comes from the place, so you can imagine the result. But they say that he is well versed in matters of the Church, and it may be that in some future time he will wear the regalia of a Holy Father. But it remains to be seen whether or not he can discard the inevitable appellation of Manheim.

ALLEN G. BRACKBILL

January 22, 1904

Lancaster, Pa.

Al Brackie

Prepared at Lancaster High School; Pre-Med. Course.

This tamale is commonly known among his friends as Al. He is a quiet, good-natured lad whose chief hobby is radio and was one of the many college students who learned the art of making linoleum at the Armstrong Cork Company last summer, and then decided he would never choose factory work as his life occupation.

To Al the latest dance steps are very mysterious, but he knows all the holds just the same. And so he never came to any of our dances, preferring parlor dates, as they were less tiresome.

E. P. BRIDENBAUGH

May 28, 1902

Martinsburg, Pa.

Bridy Happy

Diagnothian Literary Society (1) (2) (3); Porter Scientific Society (3); Baseball Squad (1) (2); Assistant Cheerleader (3); Prepared at Morrison Cove Vocational School; B.S. Course.

Happy well deserves the name, for he is the life of the college men in the dormitory. Happy is quite a comedian, so much so that on "Colonial night" the manager offered him a large sum of money if only he would just remain on the stage, and it is even said that one of the vaudeville actors asked him to sign a contract, but Bridy refused, because the financial recompense was not large enough. Bridy is also a philosopher and says, "'Tis better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all."

Happy is the shortest man in the hall,
But nevertheless he's the joy of us all.

GEORGE BROWN

December 31, 1899

Mt. Joy, Pa.

Jug Bevo Nuber

X Φ; Varsity Football (1) (2) (3); Black Cat Society (2); Toastmaster Sophomore Banquet; S. A. T. C., Lafayette; Prepared at Mt. Joy High School; B.S. Course.

As Plato, Mephistopheles or some other bird once remarked—"Handsome is as Handsome does," therefore Bevo, Jug, Nuber Brown, commonly known as George, is the handsomest man in school. Bevo was one of the boys for a long time, but the Blind God borrowed Bevo's horn rims and shot straight. More power to you, Nuber. Bevo came to us from Lafayette, after leaving his mark there, and since then has made a creditable showing in athletics, and, of course, he always passes his work; but then, don't you know, George is one of those "Clevah Englishmen."

His results come from wind—not work!

PAUL E. BURKHOLDER

June 29, 1893

Elizabethtown, Pa.

Burkie

Military Service, September 27, 1917, to June 9, 1919; Entered Junior Year; Prepared at Franklin and Marshall Academy; A.B. Course.

Burkie wandered here from Elizabethtown. Prior to entering Franklin and Marshall he served as boys' secretary of the Erie Y. M. C. A. At present, in conjunction with his studies, he serves the boys of the local "Y."

"Do something constructive for the boy" is his favorite slogan, and he is untiring in his efforts to give the lads with whom he daily comes in contact a real vision of life.

His contagious personality has won for him a host of friends. Burkie's cheery manner and snappy smile are instant cures for the blues.

Hard to predict what might happen if our college were co-ed.

RENSSELAER L. CARTAN

When you gaze upon this bronzed youth from the sunny beach of New Jersey, you can readily see why he is labelled "a man of many activities." Ren's vernacular changes as often as his residence, for within the last few months he has learned to act, to speak Pennsylvania Dutch, and surprising as it may seem, to distinguish dumb belles.

A celebrity in many activities, i.e., sailor, fireman, journalist, musician, actor, religious worker and what not, he has one failing—that of not being able to secure a high average in his studies, which reminds us of the old adage, "Passing grades are a well-spring for those that get them." No wonder his humor is so dry.

RAPHAEL J. CONNELL

August 28, 1901

Lilly, Pa.

Ray

Entered Sophomore Year; Prepared at Altoona High School and Fordham University; B.S. Course.

You say you don't know much about Ray Connell; that's not so strange as it may seem. Quiet, reserved fellow that he is, we're surprised that our acquaintance with him has in so short a time ripened into such a close friendship. It isn't that he's bashful—he's had too much experience to be that. Perhaps his secluded boyhood in the up-state mountains has so wrought as to produce an understanding equal to that of any of us and at the same time noticeably less emotional. Or is it the memory of the young lady who adorns the uppermost position on his dresser that keeps Ray so subdued? Be that as it may, we have found in Ray Connell an earnest and trustworthy friend, and we dare say those who know him best will heartily substantiate this opinion.

CHARLES JOSEPH CRAGIN

Joe

Σ A E; Porter Scientific Society (3); Varsity Football (3); Varsity Basketball (3); Varsity Baseball (2) (3); Class Football (2); Class Track (2); Black Cat Society (2); Prepared at Camden High School and Pennsylvania State College; B.S. Course.

Joe is one of the highly "touted" expensive lads from Camden. He admits he is an athlete and sometimes he tries to make the rest of us believe it. Besides, Joe is a good student and an authority on all subjects but one. The great weakness is left unnamed, but is only fair to tell that he enjoys reading novels of the Spanish Main. He is an ardent duellist and always is among those present when there is a duel in a movie. After all his fondest thought is, "Far from the madding crowd, let me dream . . . dream . . . dream . . . !"

Our illustrious athlete on whom more than one of the "unfair sex" has wasted her time and experience without success. A product of Camden town, where they called him Frank Merriwell, Don has lived up to his name, and as the press says, "The brightest luminary of the game was Don Cragin playing the stellar rôle." A certain Professor of Statistics has calculated that the average student spends enough time cheering Cragin to graduate in three years if he were to spend that time on his books. Don does not grow poor buying midnight oil, but he manages to float along somehow and his only worry is his daily letter.

WILLIAM FRANKLIN DILLER

November 7, 1902

Lancaster, Pa.

Bill

Σ II; Diagnothian Literary Society (2) (3), Mock Trial (3); Oriflamme Staff (3); Prepared at Lancaster High School; A.B. Course.

It is hard to tell whether we should laugh or not, but Bill by his stern, solemn look will help us to refrain. His sense of humor is usually conspicuous by its absence, but he is sure to laugh some time even if it is an hour late. Perhaps it is the thrilling harmony of his melodious fiddle (he is second only to Kreisler) which fills his soul with charming delights and holds out the servile meanness of this harsh world. But Bill has fallen lately and now he is jazzing his way through the world.

FREDERICK DANIEL EYSTER

Here is a young man who travels his own path without bothering the rest of the world. He is an ardent believer in the saying, "Silence is Golden," and he follows this principle. Probably that is one of the reasons why he is well liked among the fellows. Men of his caliber know what they are striving for and put forth every effort to attain that goal. Freddie's goal is the ministry and we are sure he will reach it. Fred is seldom known to cut classes to go downtown to the movies or to waste his time otherwise. Success is generally attained by diligent work and we are sure that this young man will work. We expect to hear from this chap in a big way a few years from now.

Tuning in a score of years from now, you will probably pick up something like this: Station L-Y-F broadcasting, Hazleton, Pa. Dr. Faust, eminent scientist and inventor and now Professor of Physics at Pen Pitt College, announced an important discovery in the realm of scientific research to a group of friends gathered at his home here tonight. This discovery ends a series of long and patient experiments conducted since and during his college days, when he, like Dr. Johnson, nearly flunked out through blind devotion to only one course of study. According to Dr. Faust, this discovery will eliminate all atmospheric disturbances in the fields of radiography and enable students to hear lectures while lying in bed.

"Wanted: A Man."

If any person has heard this worthy student from Mercersburg orate upon this, his pet subject, in his sincere, fervent, and pleasing (?) manner, then that person will know what Faust is striving to be.

The truth is, he is physically a man with his 190 lbs. of bone and sinew (not counting his head). His character more becomes that saying "A Man," a true friend as honest as could be expected in all his dealings, straight (?) in all his activities, his character must be one worth while.

Bill

Class Poet (3); Goethean Literary Society (1) (2) (3); Prepared at Fleetwood High School and Keystone State Normal School; A.B. Course.

Ladies and gentlemen, yon noble countenance is that of William Armour Fegeley. No, he is not related to the famous Armour of the meat corporation, although many a time and oft, due to his varied facial contortions, he has been taken for one of their products.

Bill is a student of the first magnitude and undoubtedly one of the few that ever attended a college. It is generally known that he is now a pledge to the Phi Beta Kappas and will upon graduation wear their insignia, as an anchor to his watch chain. Ha! Ha!

But be ye not mistaken, gentle reader, although Bill is a student and not generally recognized as a "social lion" or a "tea hound," nevertheless he is known to be able to acquit himself with all honor when dashing around among the weaker sex. Hooray for Bill.

Ray staggered to us after having successfully handled for two years the principalship of the High School in his home town. Ray's happy disposition impels us to like him. We can hear him humming his favorite tune any time during the day. As he is especially interested in English, he quotes poetry quite often and at length in the weekly novels he writes for her amusement and education. This scholar is very proficient in diction and many are the times he has helped a "Frosh" to make an excellent mark in English composition. Ray is a steady worker and, after all, through steady plodding, the tortoise won the race.

This unhelmeted mass of red could never fail to catch the eye at a football work-out. Nor could Red fail to attract attention in any other manly contest. He is all heartiness from his ready laugh to his performance on the wrestling mat. Red is the kind of fellow that doesn't sleep well at night unless he has done a day's duty to himself and everyone else. As a worker, he is a second Edison, and though always in a hurry, he is glad to step aside for a moment to help the other fellow. Red goes home frequently over week-ends and always looks mournful for a few days after returning. Well, we've seen her photo and admit he has at least one good reason for his gloom.

A flower cannot live without sunshine and a man cannot live without love. Hence the robust health of this modest and unassuming member of the Order of Shrinking Violets. We here present a product of Lehigh County, who joined our class last fall. With two years' teaching experience and studious leanings, he can, when the spirit moves him, outtalk ten good men and true. As he says, "That is natural, it's in my relation to talk much." We wonder at his backwardness toward the fair ones of Lancaster (if such there be), but we realize that he is exceedingly interested in Religious Education. We will not be surprised to see him enter the Seminary across the way. Go to it, Buddy, the more the merrier!

Stu Stewed

Phi Upsilon Kappa; Prepared at Lancaster High School; A.B. Course.

"The bigger they come the harder they fall" seems to apply to Stu. He falls heavily for so many different things in a college man's life that he deserves some mention on the proverbial mythical team (that of Steve Brodie, not Walter Camp's). Who in class can equal his record in falling for Greek, Latin, French, and Spanish in one year, to say nothing of his other pet diversions? Stu has worked hard enough to complete his college course in three years, an accomplishment to be envied. Then during his spare time, he graces the counters of Meister's Drug Store and Soft (?) Drink dispensary, and is assistant rector at St. John's Episcopal Church, where his services are greatly appreciated. The modest child has fallen, like other modest but great men, and goes through all the motions except that of wearing a ring in his nose. But, then, he loves her.

Jack worked for the York Gas Co. for some time, so we know why he has been able to pass calculus, play football, and even sleep without any difficulty. When football is not the prevailing attraction at F. and M., Jack is not in evidence, but when the grid-iron is the central point of interest he is always a "real king." To him has been given the leadership of the 1924 football team, for none was more deserving of that honor. If the whole team "carries on" as ably as its captain, there can be no doubt of a successful season.

Behold the Sheik who unconsciously vamps all the girls he meets. "Now really, fellows, I can't help that all the girls like me," says Turk. He is quite a clever artist, and the walls in his room prove it. But the art at which he excels is the gentle art of sleeping. Morpheus is his patron Saint and a more devoted disciple is hard to find. Sleep should have been dedicated to Rip. Turk's usual occupation is playing basketball, but when not engaged in that he is usually helping Dr. Carroll to determine why the Spermatozoa are left-handed.

Because this phantom of delight has one awful expression of mirth it does not necessarily follow that his mind is like a tramp's stomach in Jerusalem—empty. On the contrary, however, his mind is as littered with débris as a picnic train. Yes, our Sam is a very busy lad, with his hurdling, chortling, etc., not to mention studies. As captain of the Track Team this lovely apparition cuts a figure which would make Apollo blush. Our one wish is that he will hurdle the problems of Life as swiftly and as skillfully as he does those on the cinder path.

Ted, according to the records of his home town, is a minister's son, but, unlike his dad, he forsook the road to the ministry after spending registration day at Pitt. It did not take long, however, for him to decide on a business career. Continuing his business course, he slowly imbibed knowledge in Political Science, but politics according to his interpretation became an art rather than a science. With his increased popularity as a politician, it became necessary for him to step out as a real college man. Again he misunderstood the term, but a long-distance phone to Pittsburgh set him right again. Lately we have been impressed with his keen desire for learning and, although he has not given up Hiemenz's entirely, he has denied himself many activities. Well, "so gehts," Ted, "life is a thing of joy seasoned by some with a little vanity, but tested by responsibilities you shall possess."

Besides specializing in chemistry, Holland is a regular radio bug and tin lizzie chaperoné. He really is a clever lad, however. By dint of patient daily smuggling of sundry scientific equipment, via a little brown leather bag, he now has a completely furnished lab at home, where he is prepared to analyze all the synthetic hooch Rothsville can produce.

When this panting soul found out that God is Love, he yearned for religion like the true cuckoo that he is. So the Ministry will probably land another parson, unless Earl finds out in the meantime that Love can be the Devil too.

Although Earl agrees with Bacon that too much study is sloth, yet many a time he hands a right merry argument to that fathomless gulf of learning, yclept the Faculty. By means of that wild, seraphic fire of his, this simple creature has awed more than the Faculty, meaning his fellow students. But he is endured, because we think we might as well let him orate before he gets married!

This young man can be seen most any day in the corridor of the Science Building conversing with Professor Weisgerber or Dr. Carrol. Though he is a fairly hard worker, he does place unlimited confidence in the power of the almighty line. Tony is an admirer of Cyrano de Bergerac. It is probable that the personal appearance of Cyrano consoles him immensely. His greatest delight is in discussing social and biological problems with his college friends. He always wins at all arguments. Generally he is right, but if he isn't he wins anyway. Carl is a B.S. student and intends to study medicine at some distant date. Tony's greatest misfortune in college is the fact that although he is an ardent follower of "Tubby" Hies-ter, he is only rewarded by the privilege of taking make-ups.

Hoover hails from the town of Millersville. There is much to be said of him in the line of athletics. His semi-weekly gym performances are spectacular and he hopes only that the new gym will be built before he graduates, for in it he would like to develop a fine physique. Hoover is known by nearly everyone, but in conversation he belongs to the "solitaire class." He is not to be seen on the dance floor, for Psychology teaches us that men of his nature do not dance. When in class Hoover surely knows his subjects and is with the rest of the hard workers and we know that he will always plug away.

Phil has taken up Astronomy this year, and it is rumored he has organized a summer class among the opposite sex up in the River town. If you've ever strolled along the Susquehanna on a moonlight Summer's eve, then envy him. Phil is admired for his common sense and grit. We are not sure where he will hang his hat after graduation, but it is rumored he has aspirations of making Wrightsville a second Detroit.

Prof. Kunkle officially awarded Mr. Oil-Wells the Charlie Apple Cup for Political Science when that financier innocently recited that the "King of England has no power; the Queen has it all."

Though 'tis rumored that Pud's land up at Tidioute is so full of oil wells that no room remains for the old-time crops, Pud, known to eat more of other people's food at one sitting than any other man in college, manages to feed up during classes—"Hey, Fritz, what're you havin' for dinner tonight?"

This light-haired, rather stout youth is not slow when it comes to participating in the different college activities. There is an old saying that nobody loves a fat man—this is not true about our classmate, for we know about the Lansford trips that occur over the week-ends.

Paul is one of those fellows whose sense of humor is so keen that they take French from Dr. Harry, because they are sure to get a good laugh at least twice a week. But he also takes chemistry and shows his keen wit by trying to blow up the Laboratory. Now it is hard to tell which course suits him best, but we are inclined to believe the latter. Anyway it would be much safer for him to have a class in Romance Languages than one in Chemistry.

Do not be deceived by the picture, dear reader; he may look tall in the picture, as one of his lady friends said, but if you reduce your conception by half, you will understand his size. Kaupie is a chap beloved by all who come in contact with him. He is overflowing with good humor, practical jokes and, indeed, has all the earmarks of your typical Irishman.

Irish is very desirous of becoming a "Sky Pilot." That he will reach the heights in this profession, we have no doubts.

Many will be the regrets when this little Red Head leaves our midst to take his place in the world.

NORRIS JACOB KIRK

Tiny Pansy

Diagnothian Literary Society (2) (3); Prepared at Little Britain High School; B.S. Course.

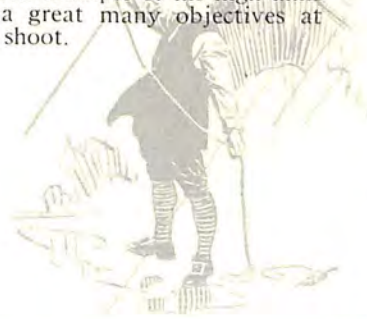

Norris Kirk, better known as Tiny, alias Pansy, is an ardent student of human nature, a bear for punishment, fat, and an admirer of Venus and her motley crew. Starting out from the wilds of Little Britain on a quest for knowledge, his adventurous disposition set him down on Pine Street, from which place, by means of numerous detours, he makes his enormous presence felt in the gym.

Pansy's dislikes are few, his desires many. Thus, he always occupies a front row seat at the Colonial and a rear one in the class room.

On a hunting trip this fall, Kirk was suddenly surprised by the appearance of a rabbit in a gulch fifty yards away. Raising his cannon toward the skies, he shot across two corn-shocks and an oak tree and, dropping the full charge upon his quarry, annihilated it. This is a true and vivid example of his high aims and ideals. Life holds a great many objectives at which he will be able to shoot.

Such is the fate of the black-haired acrobat and aspiring lawyer. He is talented in music, and being the "jazz king" of Pine St., could not resist the temptation of playing "jazz" in a prayer meeting.

Monday afternoons you can always find him with Albitz occupying the front row seats in the Colonial.

Glux is known to be an ardent student the last week in January and the first week in June, when he borrows books from some of his good friends and then prepares for his exams.

Although only a short time at F. and M., Al has endeared himself to many of us. Almost immediately upon arrival he was christened Sheik and Sheik he is till this day; no wonder, just look at his hair. But notwithstanding this, Al has had time to join several societies and to do his school work. He loves mathematics; ask Professor Long! Al, as you may have noticed, was the "baby" who played the big bass drum during football season. Our characterization of him is that he is full of fun, gets serious every now and then, mostly then, and finally is a true gentleman. What more can we say but that a real maniac has come to F. and M.? Rutger's loss is our gain.

Did you ever see a social hound? Well, here is one from the West. He comes from that small berg of Manor. With him came Western Ideas, but that isn't anything against him. Jack has become quite a biologist; he tells the Sophomores all about cats, fish and sharks. He knows a lot about sharks, because he belongs to that species himself. His hobby is dancing. He collects all the new steps and some old ones by taking courses at the "Garden" and "Hiemenz's." Jack also loves the Freshmen, I mean the present Sophomores. He was one of their worst enemies. They seemed to arouse his righteous indignation by their playful pranks. But, then, sharks never did like playful humans.

This well-dressed Sheik has two failings, love for hard work and the terpsichorean art. His name indicates that he is of Irish parentage, even though he is Hungarian. He has attempted to introduce the culture of ancient Europe into our college, but thus far he is the only follower of his own ideas. However, the Bohemian atmosphere is growing more evident and we fear that our college is becoming a second Greenwich. But after all he is harmless as long as he does not turn Bolshevic.

After wandering about the United States, attending various schools in the West, mid-West and the South, it became quite evident that the East was still the place to go, and thus we have James with us. Having exposed himself to a "Fine Arts" course at a University, we can well imagine an art gallery before us upon entering his sanctuary. While at the University of Dubuque he succeeded in carrying off second prize in an Oratorical contest. He is also musically inclined and can now play the scale with little difficulty. Studying is his second nature and along with the other insurmountable qualifications should become most successful in his life work.

Behold! The picture of Roy Kriner! It's a fine photograph and one can see that Kriner is an inspiring teacher, a brave warrior, and an ardent disciple of Nimrod.

Roy was actuated by the altruistic sentiments of service to the coming generations. He entered Shippensburg Normal in 1916. When the call to the colors came the following year he patriotically responded and served two years overseas with the Sixth United States Engineer troops. Upon his return to the States in 1919, he reentered normal school from which he was graduated.

Then he decided that some practical experience in the pedagogical profession was the proper procedure. For three years he taught in his home town until the need for higher learning urged him to enter F. and M.

No, this is not the author of the tales of Shakespeare, but by the English course he has chosen he at least shows an interest in them.

Dannie, being a two-year man, is not so well known among his classmates. He seems to have escaped the sting of the social bug, so most of his time is usefully employed upon his lessons. His friends are at a loss at times to explain his knowledge of his subjects, but believe that sleeping on his textbooks accounts for his successes in his work.

Beanie

Paradise Club; Board of Control (3); Goethean Literary Society (1) (2) (3); Prepared at Palmyra High School; B.S. in Ec. Course.

We approach "Beanie" sitting in an arm-chair and ask him this simple but dignified question, "Are you thinking?" "I am meditating" is the very enlightening answer. He is wont to do this periodically and we think he would be a good subject for Rodin.

However, since Woman makes up no small part of his existence, we presume that he is meditating on some fond remembrance or some future escapade. Then again, it may be sheer joy in utter relaxation. But the time comes when this Brooksy boy needs some recreation. So he saunters to the Garden or the Y. W., where he recreates by "shindigging" with the best of them.

This handsome youth is a fitting example of what a College education can do in developing a mere embryo into modern collegiate manhood. His motto: "Do not allow your college work to interfere with your pleasure, for life is short and the world is large."

Diagnothian Literary Society (3); Square and Compass Club (3); Prepared at Mansfield State Normal School, University of Pennsylvania and Bucknell University; Entered F. and M. Junior Year; A.B. Course.

Pete belongs to the Tioga County Delegation at F. and M. We have the facts to prove that it was in this part of Pennsylvania where he first saw daylight, but it is beyond our ability to ascertain just where he spends his vacations, either Christmas or summer. One time it is in Louisburg and then somewhere in New Jersey, and again he comes back to Philadelphia. One thing we do know is that he never spends them in Sabinsville (Tioga County).

He acquired a reasonable amount of dignity, however, by several years of teaching which will go a great ways in the development of this future college professor.

As a Freshman, Limbert made a calm and quiet entry into F. and M. He was filled with high ideals and noble purposes. In other words, he was determined to be an exemplary student.

But oh, what a change! He was scarcely settled down until he found himself at odds with the Sophomores. It is rumored that he had several conferences with them in the late hours of the night, but always escaped unscathed. Limbert has several peculiarities, one of which is "his domesticated laugh," resembling that of the equine species.

He is headed for the ministry? The only question is will Cupid or Greek prove his undoing. We predict it will be the former; in fact, according to the newspapers, it's all over but the confetti.

"Bill" is an affable fellow, which one is bound to discover upon making his acquaintance. Early last fall he became the acknowledged "Diomedes" of the Richards Hall misogynists when they made their famous charge upon the K. K. K. ceremonies at the Fair Ground. But two weeks later this famous general and his band were captured while on a "Treasure Hunt" by a band of Greek Helens. The loss of five fossiliferous bones apiece and the dissolution of this once illustrious band was the outcome. "Bill" is a staunch and true Nevonian, active in a large number of organizations and a student who does not know the words "not prepared." Hunting, both large and small game, is this man's hobby. He has secured some very fine trophies, among them a pretty buck head.

Here is Mantz, who always wears a big, broad smile as a token of friendship. He came to us as a graduate from Keystone Normal, where he made a fine record both as an athlete and student. He immediately became a Nevonian and went out for various sports, chiefly wrestling. His husky form and brawny arms are enough to make Earl Liederman feel uneasy. One thing remains a query in our minds—that is, why he is so frequently seen driving a Nash about town.

Chic is an active member of the Diagnothian Literary Society and takes great interest in the Y. M. C. A. and Press Club. Diligent in his studies, regular in his exercises and prompt in his activities, we feel proud of Chic as a future captain of industry.

George wakes up too late for 8:10's, too late for classes, too late for almost everything; but just in time for meals.

Besides taking stabs at baseball and football, the best thing Dope ever did around here was tutor the gang in accounting—and then be the only one to flunk it.

Doc hails from the small town of Sinking Spring, but that is not saying anything against him. He is one of the busiest and most energetic men in college, although not all of his interests are in college. He believes in "embracing" his opportunities outside of college. Doc can play quite well on the violin, but his hallmates at the Sem. do not seem to think so, since they have applied to the Salvation Army for more shoes to use as a means of registering their protest against his playing when they wish to study.

Doc is a frequent visitor to the Chemical Lab., where he has a locker and makes an occasional experiment. He expects to become a surgeon some day and is trying to find an element which will enable him to work and sleep at the same time, since sleep ordinarily takes so much of his valuable time.

Joe Mac

$\Delta \Sigma \Phi$; Prepared at Franklin and Marshall Academy; A.B. Course.

Joe has been spending most of the last eight years acquiring a higher education—of course a few were spent at the Academy. He is a great believer in the adage: "Don't do today what you can leave for tomorrow." He applies this constantly—especially with respect to Chapel and studying. Nevertheless Joe always accomplishes what he sets out to do. Therefore we know he will become a prosperous young M.D.

Carroll passed through the trials and hardships of Freshman life at U. of P. and entered F. and M. as a full-fledged Sophomore. This psychical gentleman when seen on the Campus is going to classes, laboratory, or meals, ambulating with the same hasty step. He is very punctual, habitual and orderly, which may explain his frequent week-end visits home. But some of these visits are to Philadelphia and not to Penn. If he continues to follow the path he is now treading, he will occupy the Chair of Psychology somewhere.

Pat is a quiet and retiring youth and where and how he spends his time when not in classes is a mystery. It is rumored that he has some fair young lady awaiting his return from the rigors of college life. His efforts with the college band should not be unheralded and unspoken. The boy has ability and he may yet startle the world. Plug away, Pat. His favorite quotation is, "I'm not so strong with the women, but I'll get a 'major' in pinochle." Pat is attempting to hold in friendship various members of the Faculty, so that he may be able to be graduated in June, 1925, and then follow his father's business as a lumber dealer.

Unheralded and unsung came this modest youth from the backwoods of Pennsylvania. Today we know him better, and can see behind that sincere countenance not only the brains which make him the good student he is, but the elements of a princely fellow, namely, a love for wholesome fun and a wealth of geniality well saturated with natural humor which makes a universal welcome for him. He believes in upholding the old proverb, "Better late than never." Wherever this young man goes assuredly he arrives late. In the morning he arises late; as a result he stows away a light breakfast. Never stop him when you see him run across the campus, because he has but several seconds to get to class.

John came to us from Dickinson. His interest in his work, especially Political Science and French, threatened to interfere with his plans for a scientific future, but his characteristic sagacity and faithful application set things aright. His friends will always remember his exhortation "Now come" when a dallying classmate was delaying the German translation. Chon is also athletically inclined and his interests will undoubtedly bear fruit in the future. His love for mankind is illustrated by his strenuous objection to the term "the common herd" which one of his friends frequently applies to that mass of individuals who sometimes seem to measure below par.

The man's a man for a' that.

Artie didn't come to us until his Junior year, and then when he did come, he either didn't like our company or something, 'cause one semester was all he could stand with us. However, as soon as Artie was seen on the campus with his Packard, not only did the Fraternities rush him, but even the she-males. You see it all came about this way. Jim lives in Mt. Joy, and having been "shipped" from Lafayette he came to F. and M., but was only able to study here one semester. He is now working with his father and we college "studes" sort of envy him riding around in his auto at leisure—well, you know how these jobs with "dads" are!

Some would-be honest men, when rubbing up against this chapel monitor, complain of the scratches they receive from the square, sharp edges of his honest character which, as Bartol wrote, is the diamond that scratches every other stone.

Punk is a pebble on the streamlet scant who, as his classmates believe, will turn the course of many a river.

When he came to College we were all sure that he would like F. and M. well enough to stay at least five years, but the miracle has happened—he has done it in three. Blondie is an exponent of that familiar saying, "Be not hasty with your tongue"; for of this diminutive chap a great deal may be said without stirring the least emotion. It is probably because of his quiet nature that some of our professors have taken advantage.

Previous to coming to college, Myers was an accountant, and, to say the least, his previous experience has helped many a man who has fallen by the wayside. Likewise it is most obliging to have a man in class who can explain the true significance of business relations when playing for time.

Possessed with a big heart and a keen desire for farmer advancement, we surmise that his purpose in life will be along the evangelistic line. However, whatever it may be, one can rest assured that the hills of Cumberland County will find a fellow that is always willing to lend a helping hand.

He has never been known to flunk a subject, due to his convincing line, which even the professors can't resist. He is a father to the boys and a source of advice to the "profs," who occasionally ask Pete to teach mathematics or do private tutoring. Every one who knows Pete is his friend, although some of the friendships are questionable.

One of the numbers of commuters from Millersville who either spends all his time in the laboratory or else part in the lab and the rest in the gym. So much has he become acquainted in the gym that he is the fear of all the forwards in the Intra-Mural League.

Heinie evidently must be a big man in his home town or else he has been running an engagement bureau for the fellows at college. Whenever anyone is in need of a date, he is always on the job lending his services. The reason for this probably is due to the fact that he is building a large acquaintanceship, hoping some day to be repaid when he hangs out his shingle.

George is our business expert par excellence. Whenever the Business Course wants to know anything, it asks George. He and "Barnsey" have formed a mutual admiration society and are pushing this course to make it the leader. The Senator spends his evenings downtown, dining and getting the local color. His week-ends are usually spent in the Quaker City, where he and the Republican machine dope out the schedule for the following week. Withal he is a popular fellow, a good student and a poor politician. When George grows up and gets fat and prosperous, he will become Mayor of his native city, and it is for this reason that the auto bugs in the Faculty are keeping in his good graces—no F. and M. Prof. will be pinched when George is in the saddle. He'd make a mighty good Internal Revenue man, were it not for the fact that he does not like cigars or whiskey.

If Dickens were to describe this young man, he could not find fewer words more fitting than "Here is a big boy with a big heart." Stretch, measuring 6 feet 2 inches and weighing two hundred pounds, claims to be one of the biggest men on the Campus. In fact, at the beginning of the year Stretch is a bit worried for fear a bigger man than himself might appear on the Campus. Robb possesses business qualifications; he has successfully managed the college book room. He has made a splendid record for himself working during the summer vacation for Pictorial Review Company. Stretch thinks that he may travel westward to the golden gate during the next summer; if he does he carries with him our best wishes for success.

No, this is not Cecil B. de Mille, but Fred. DeP. Rothermel, an ardent movie critic. Since he sees every movie in town the first two days of each week, he saves his associates the time and expense of going themselves. He hopes by seeing all the movies to become a movie producer, but we predict that if he doesn't cut them out he will be producing ditches with pick and shovel. Psychology tells us that we learn best by pictures. If that is true, Fred is the most learned man in the universe.

Fred. P. D. surprised himself and the world two years ago by his high jumping. He is still jumping, but not so high!

We are sure that he can follow his father's footsteps in the successful practice of law.

One blink at the Rand McNally beside this paragraph and one understands the origin of the nickname Babe. One glance at yon physiognomy is sufficient to lull any human into a feeling of perfect security, for with those baby blue eyes what else could he be but a gentle Babe. In sooth he is so gentle that he seldom obliges his Profs. to be annoyed by his voice in the classroom, in fact—but that's another story. Well, to make a short story long, this Mogul of the Football Team is bound to make his mark in this world, even if it is for the Bertillion System.

After discovering that even with the wisdom of a Freshman he couldn't face the Faculty, Ralph has settled down and shown the Faculty that they can't stump him. This comedian has been with us only a part of a year, but has become well known through his various characteristics. At first sight, he is a mild-looking chap who could, with the proper trimmings, pass for a member of the opposite sex, as in the Mock Trial. On closer acquaintance it is discovered that he is an artist on the piano and "sax." In addition, he is somewhat of a contortionist with his face and feet. The latter are often turned so that one cannot tell whether he is coming or going.

As a High School teacher Larry has proven himself worthy at Connellsville, Pa. With this training and the remainder of his college work he will land a lucrative position some time, somewhere.

However, he has dread fear of being paged by the Dean, because the letters from the college always reach home before he has time to visit the office.

F. H. is one of those small quiet studious bozos who uphold the old saying, "good things come in small packages." Frank is the older of the company Strauss & Strauss, which company was incorporated at F. and M. with small prospects of achieving distinction in any line, but living up to a strict routine of application to study has developed into a Senior firm in three years.

At the mandolin, Frank is an artist and proved his ability by being the only Freshman to make the Mandolin Club in his Freshman year. The music in his soul was also poured forth from a cornet in the College Band.

In the classroom F. H. is one of those wizards who can induce the Prof. to give him a 9 or 10 for a 4 or 5 recitation. In his Sophomore year Frank was on the Honor roll, among the first ten.

The Junior member of Strauss & Strauss is the Daniel Webster of his class, as may be surmised by his varied oratorical achievements. George is the only man in school this year who is a charter member of T K A, and partly through his efforts has a chapter been installed at F. and M.

His soul is also musically inclined, but the incline is not sufficient to allow the music to roll forth.

George is no star athlete, although he does occasionally play funny games on a Wednesday night. He is quite fond of examinations.

George's three ambitions in life are: to graduate from F. and M. in three years; to become a capable lawyer; and to find some loving better half to brighten his earthly existence.

Here is one fellow from whom Pop Korn makes money. Howie has been known to have been up for breakfast as often as twice a semester. Perhaps this delinquency is due to the fact that he takes a shower every morning, whether he needs it or not. Howie makes a fine figure upon the debating platform with his intellectual radicalness and soft voice and long hair. His penetrating remarks of great depth often cause consternation in the ranks of his worthy opponents. What we like most about Howie is the refined and cultured way he swears. It's a treat for one's aesthetic senses to hear him utter a tirade at something or other.

Dr. Gray Rev.

Diagnothian Literary Society (2) (3); Porter Scientific Society (3); Prepared at Franklin and Marshall Academy; A.B. Course.

Here's one of the brightest and soundest members of the class of '25. Gray has taken a fancy to biological work and herein stands out preëminent as Dr. Carrol's assistant. However, not only in Biology is he exceptionally bright, but also in Greek, for he has often corrected Professor Schaeffer's Greek translations. Socially we must admit that Rev. isn't quite up to snuff. His college education has, however, broadened him along this line, for he has been seen frequently at the "Y. W." dances. Thus we see that he is sort of stepping out, as it were. Although lacking the social and athletic sides of a college life, Gray is nevertheless an ideal student, gentleman, and scholar.

Editor's note: After perusing this compilation we feel quite confident that Gray wrote this himself.

Besides being ambitious in oratorical ways, this chap has many aspirations in other respects. Ray is one of the married men of this class and is striving to reach his ultimate goal of being graduated from the preacher factory. This big hulking personage is quite the boy, being of an athletic turn of mind in sports as well as parlor and dance floor, but with all his social achievements he is a business man first, last and always. Cocky makes week-end business trips to a little town in New Jersey. He has been given the appellation of Lionel Strongfort and certainly lives up to it in their presence. No, Cocky will not be a bachelor and we predict that in a short time our strong man will settle down in perfect contentment in Matrimony, and then Cocky will pass out of the social world to enter the business world.

JOHN PYLE WEISE

September 26, 1899

Lancaster, Pa.

Johnny

$\Delta \Sigma \Phi$; Soccer Squad (3); 28th Division A. E. F.; Prepared at Lancaster High School; B.S. in Ec. Course.

John is one of those good-natured fellows who is always getting in trouble with the Veterans' Bureau or else Prof. Barnes. Just as soon as he is called upon, alias Roosevelt tells him to sit down with the statement, "another wise crack."

Nevertheless, Weise is persistent and no matter how many times he receives unkind words, he always comes back for more.

During the last year he has seemed rather lonesome, probably because of the loss of his old friend Sam. To those two belongs the honor of cutting classes during the hunting season, which is probably the reason for their expert marksmanship. The hunting trips have always been educational to John, here and in France, with the result of making him an entertaining conversationalist. A crowd of fellows, a box of cigars, a smooth line of talk, and lastly our friend John, one can picture a well-spent evening.

Gene

$\Phi \Sigma \Kappa$; Glee Club (3); Diagnothian Literary Society (3); Phi Upsilon Kappa (3); Varsity Tennis (3); Prepared at Franklin and Marshall Academy; A.B. Course.

Last year there blossomed forth upon the campus a person whose main object in life seemed to be to try to make the ties of all the other men pale before his own. Gene nearly realized his ambition. Not content with that, he made the audiences at the Glee Club concerts—well, we won't say what they did. And then when he attempted to play tennis, the referees were again at a loss to follow his shots burning with speed and cutting the lines time after time. All this evidence to the contrary, Phi Ups elected him its treasurer. Such is the trustfulness of impractical persons! It is reported from authoritative sources that a Cadillac has recently been repainted.

The only thing we have against Gene is that he takes Greek and plays a 'cello.

THOMAS AUSTIN WILLIAMEE

April 2, 1902

Morris, Pa.

A X A; Goethean Literary Society (3); Varsity Debating Team (3); Entered Junior Year; Prepared at Central State Normal School and State College; A.B. Course.

Far away in the town of Morris, Tioga County, there once lived a chap who heard of a very prominent institution known as Franklin and Marshall College, located at Lancaster. Then and there he resolved that some day he would attend that wonderful institution of learning. He realized that the jump from Morris to Lancaster was too great to be made at one time. So he wisely decided to attend Lock Haven State Normal School, from which place he was graduated in 1920.

Then deciding he needed more experience, he spent one year as principal of Boalsburg High School and two years as principal of Hopewell High School.

Williamee is a hard-working, conscientious student who has never been known to cut a class. And yet he finds time to make his regular weekly visits to Millersville.

EARL GRIMLEY WOLFORD

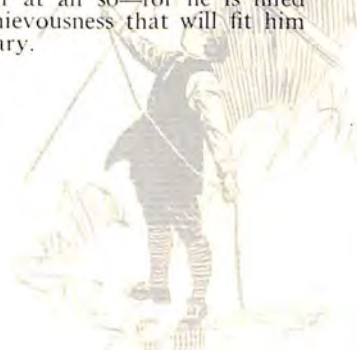

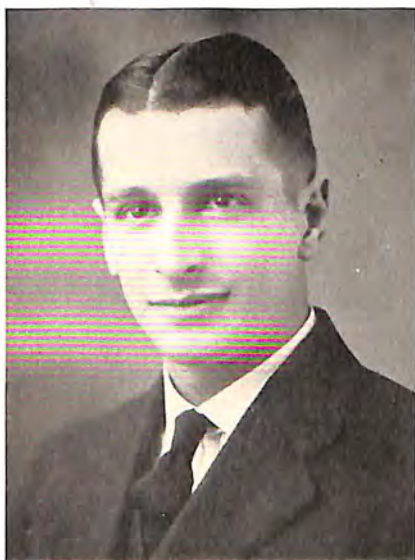

September 21, 1902

Spring Mount, Pa.

Wooley

Paradise Club; Assistant Manager of Debating (3); Oriflamme Staff (3); Goethean Literary Society (1) (2) (3), Chaplain (2), Secretary (2), Vice-President (3); Y. M. C. A. Cabinet (2) (3), Treasurer (3); Prepared at Perkiomen School; A.B. Course.

Wooley is an example of height being sacrificed in the interest of brains. He is just a vest-pocket edition, as men go, but with the mental capacity of an encyclopaedia. His thirst for knowledge has recently led him into the social field, where he is making a diligent study of Woman. This, too, in spite of the fact that he claims to be a misogynist. (Look that word up, Wooley; it's hot! I got it from "Herby" Beck.) From this it is evident that Wooley dare not be taken too seriously—if at all so—for he is filled with the tricks and mischievousness that will fit him admirably for the Seminary.

D. F. WORKMAN

July 5, 1901

Saxton, Pa.

Workman

Prepared at Shippensburg State Normal School; Entered Junior Year; B.S. Course.

What's in a name? More than you might imagine. Here's one human being who lives up to his name. They say that in Normal School he had quite a reputation as a boxer, in addition to being the best Apollo in the place. Hanover seems to have quite an attraction for him, although he says it's only Platonic. However, a Degree often makes a great deal of difference, especially the Degree of B.S.

ROBERT F. ZECHER

July 11, 1903

Lancaster, Pa.

Bob Zech

Prepared at Lancaster High School; B.S. in Ec. Course.

Who says there is nothing in a name? Bob always possesses the advantage of coming into class two or three minutes late and still being in time to answer to the roll call. He is said to be of an inventive turn of mind, and would not Lancaster County be proud to have two "Quicksilver Bob's" in one century? Bob is frequently heard to remark that the Lincoln Highway from Lancaster to Chambersburg has Lancaster City streets beaten as badly as the concrete pavement toward the Science Building beats the path from Diag Hall to the Observatory in the Spring. It seems that he travels it often. Bob is a devotee of Prof. Lancaster's courses and expects to make his X in the world.

HENRY FREDERICK ZIPLINSKY

January 15, 1905

Lancaster, Pa.

Zip

Class Vice-President (2); Oriflamme Staff (3); Manager of Debating (3); Post-Prandial Club (3); Diagonthian Literary Society (1) (2) (3); Inter-Class Track (2); Prepared at Lancaster High School; B.S. in Ec. Course.

Zip used to be a red-head and his hair looked almost like an exploded can of tomato soup. But now the lad is different and, since hair-groom was invented, he has begun to look almost human. In the days of yore, Henry, when on a date, was as pathetic as an octogenarian messenger boy. The great trouble was that he lacked confidence, often remarking that he had as much chance as a quart of whiskey on an Indian reservation. But now he has a Ford—Ah! that makes a difference, for he's as popular as a soda slapper in Hades, the girls flocking to him as if to a consumptive millionaire. Zip intends to go to Harvard, after graduating here. He says that F. and M. is a good school, but as thrilling as a swimming lesson to a middle-aged gold fish. We don't know how he got on the Oriflamme Staff, but we have an idea.

CHARLES ARTHUR ZITTLE

January 1, 1904

Strasburg, Pa.

Zit

Assistant in Chemistry Laboratory (3); Prepared at West Lampeter Vocational School; B.S. Course.

An enigma as trying as his unknowns, this favorite assistant in chemistry has many acquaintances, but few close friends. To his friends who have known him in his three years of college life, he has one outstanding quality, his rare ability to inject humor into every situation, however barren of such quality. Such an exceptional characteristic makes it pleasant to be about him, and gives him the position of father confessor to many of his friends. His brightest future lies in this line. We advise him to develop it.

Ainsworth H. Brown

The first week of the College term this year was marred and saddened by the death of one of our fellow-students—AINSWORTH BROWN. BROWN, a member of the Sophomore class, died September 29, 1924, supposedly from injuries received in the annual Tie-up. It was a most unfortunate occurrence and did not fail to make an impression on the entire College. A delegation of students attended the funeral, thus paying their last respects to one who was so rudely taken from their midst.

Brown was a native of Tenafly, New Jersey, where he spent his early years and received his early education. He entered Franklin and Marshall as a Freshman in September, 1922, and he was just starting his Sophomore year when the accident occurred.

Brown was a member of the College Y. M. C. A. and the Delta Sigma Phi Fraternity.

After its unfortunately unsuccessful attempt to produce a play last year, the Green Room Club was reorganized this year with a view to presenting one or perhaps two plays. Due to unfavorable circumstances it was impossible to produce a play during the first semester, so this plan was abandoned. However, work started soon after the beginning of the second semester, when it was decided to present a musical comedy, which was forthwith selected.

It is not possible to tell the outcome of the Club's efforts, but it is hoped that they will be successful, because a dramatic club is an important and helpful element of the College.

One of the unique phases of our institution is the Hungarian Department established in the fall of 1922 with Prof. Alexander Toth at its head. F. and M. is the only American College in which systematic instruction in Hungarian Literature, History, and Language is obtainable in a standard college curriculum. At the founding of this department there were six Hungarian students in all; this number has now increased to eighteen, of whom a few attend the Academy and the Seminary. Besides two societies, The Széchenyi Literary Society and The Bethlen Circle, an organization of the ministerial candidates, Hungarian students have a choir which has made several welcome appearances in various churches of Lancaster.

BARTO MORRISON MCCOMSEY DUFFY

Janitors

WILLIAM A. BARTO—

It is impossible to conceive of F. and M. without either the Bell Tower or Dad Barto. Dad is the grand old man around the College. Born at Lebanon, Pa., April 14, 1860, he worked at various places, including the Penn Iron Co. and Herr and Co.'s hardware store. Realizing that the atmosphere about an institution of higher learning was more to his liking, Dad made his appearance at F. and M. April 17, 1914. His job is to keep Morrison, Duffy and McComsey working.

GEORGE W. MORRISON—

Morrison is none other than Dad Barto's son-in-law. Born April 15, 1880, near Bainbridge, Pa., he waited until September, 1922, before Dad entered him at F. and M. George is the fellow who rings the Chapel Bell exactly at 8:10. His extreme punctuality in this matter is due to sixteen years of railroading on the P. R. R.

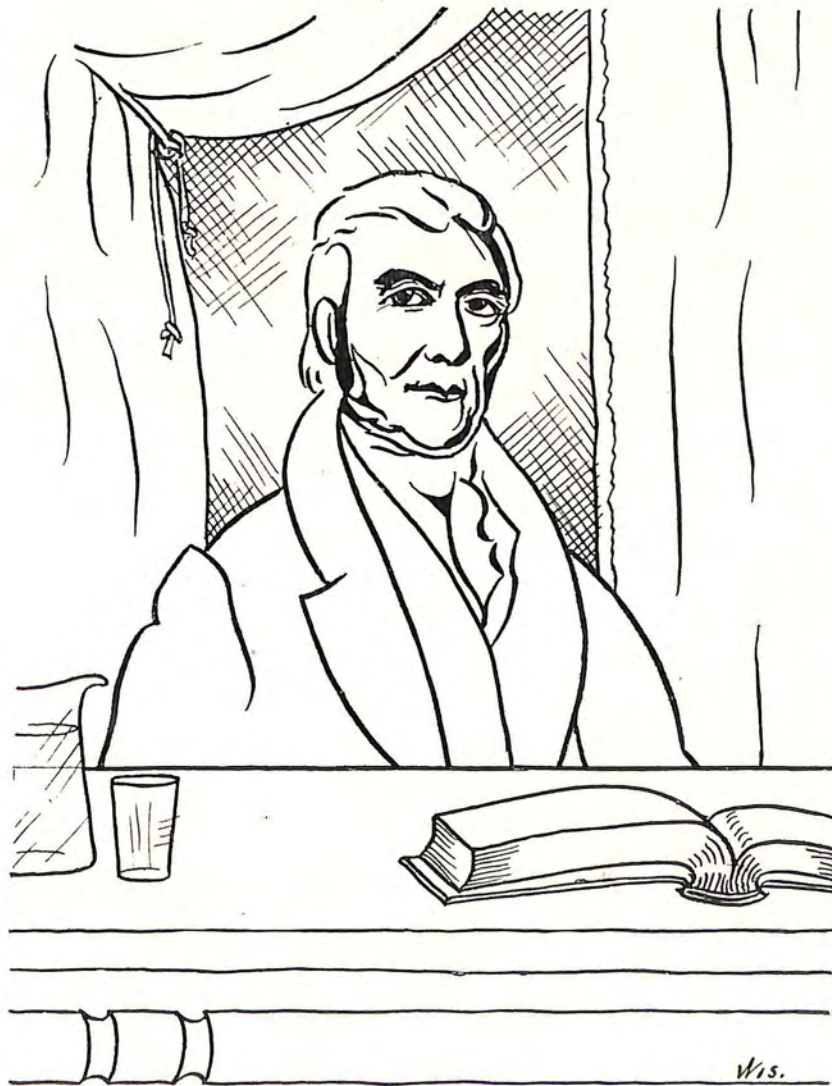

WALTER W. MCCOMSEY—

Walt made his début on Mother Earth February 16, 1882, in nearby Quarryville. Before signing up at Franklin and Marshall as groom of the Science Building, Walt worked sixteen years with the Park Run Tanning Co. His next important job was keeping Lancaster straight in his capacity as a policeman. This training probably accounts for the orderly appearance of the "Chem Labs."

WILLIAM DUFFY—

Every frequenter of the Gym knows our genial friend Bill. Duffy is the youngest of our janitors, having been born December 31, 1892, at Salunga, Pa. After working many years as a lockmaker, from 1911-1914 we find him in the U. S. Army. From thence via Linoleum Plant and Bell Telephone Co. he came to F. and M. in August, 1922.

Debating Resume

Following the successful resumption of debating at Franklin and Marshall last year, under the guidance of the two literary societies, inter-collegiate debating has been given the support of the College and has become one of the major activities.

At the end of last season, five of the six varsity debaters were graduated leaving only one man about whom a team could be built. The success of last year aroused interest in the student body and during the various try-outs forty men competed, from whom a varsity team of twelve men was chosen.

The team, naturally, was unseasoned and a little inexperienced, but the results have been very good. Losses to Lafayette, Bucknell, and City College of New York were by close margins and, in every instance, followed spirited debates. In the open-forum debate with Washington and Jefferson, the first to be held at F. and M., the negative side, composed of two F. and M. men and one from W. and J., earned the decision of the audience and, hence, a technical victory. The debates with Albright, Gettysburg, and City College of New York were more successful and gave a fitting conclusion to Franklin and Marshall's first extensive venture in debating.

In view of the interest in debating shown by the student body and the fact that only three of the varsity debaters will graduate, it is reasonable to expect an even more successful season in 1924-25. The nine debaters who will remain at the beginning of next Fall are scattered through the three lower classes and promise a steady succession of experienced men in years to come.

Credit for the showing made by the debating teams belongs, aside from the debaters themselves, to Dr. H. M. J. Klein, who devoted a great deal of his time and energy to unearthing and developing the varied talent that made itself evident before the end of the season. In his work, he was ably assisted by Professors Kunkle, Limbert, and Truxall, whose counsel and coaching added much to the successful outcome of the season.

Resume of Eighty-ninth Year

The eighty-ninth year of the Diagonthian Literary Society proved to be in no wise inferior but in many respects superior to the hectic recent years of its existence. Not the least among its attainments has been the production of full many a modern Demosthenes, and many and varied were the violent philippics which resounded through its renowned and lordly halls.

At the beginning of the year the membership was the largest in the long existence of the Society, and, although the number has slightly decreased, the faithful have continued their course in love and service.

A large, successful smoker opened the gates of the Fall Term, at which much goodly ice cream was served, resulting in the aforesaid large enrollment. Now it followed that Mr. Lampe, jolly Speaker that he was, ascended the chair and gave commandment for a most elaborate Mock Trial, whereupon the sturdy oaks on the Committee proceeded to find cause wherein to "razz" the Faculty in unmeasured terms. May the shades of Harry rest in peace! Furthermore, much "pep" was installed into the Society by the noble Officers who performed their duties in most acceptable fashion; following which there was another election and Mr. Kutz mounted the Throne.

During the Winter months many failed to discharge their honorable duties of paying dues and taking no more than the allowed number of cuts, hence the unhewn timber was expelled from the ranks of the Faithful. Proceeding manfully through the bitter winter, the Society produced several Varsity debaters and indulged in a joint meeting with our fellow-litterati—the well-known Goetheans, God wot, and great was the excitement and pleasure of our many visitors.

Now it was time for the eighty-ninth Anniversary of the Society and again a most illustrious program was prepared, and the Anniversary was enjoyed by a capacity audience which made the old Chapel to ring with applause.

With but one term left, Honaman was called to the High Seat of Honor, and the Inter-Society Debate and the Freshman-Sophomore Oratorical Contest were planned and carried out with success exceeded only by that of the American army at Yorktown.

With the present members as a nucleus about which to build, it is as evident to the naked eye as the Woolworth Building what the future of the Society will be.

One Hundred Twenty

Resume of Eighty-ninth Year

The year of 1923-1924 has been a fairly successful one for the Goethean Literary Society. The annual "Goethean Smoker" again ushered in the New Year and met with great success, twenty-six men signifying their intentions of becoming members of the Society. A number of the Faculty members and former loyal Goetheans addressed the gathering, welcoming the new students to the College and impressing upon them the ideals and work of the Society and likewise inspiring former members to continue their good work in literary activities.

The enrollment this year has greatly surpassed former years, which tends to show that greater interest is being shown in literary activities in the College, and that the future of the Society will be brighter and that greater results will be attained. On the College debating teams, the Society is represented by twelve men, who owe their present success in part to active participation in literary work in the Society. This year the annual inter-society program was held in Goethean Hall, the great display of oratory being enjoyed by the numerous persons in attendance. In accordance with former years, the challenge to an inter-society debate was issued by the Society and accordingly was accepted by the Diagonthian Society. With the eighty-ninth anniversary drawing near, much interest is being manifested in this memorable occasion, the crowning event of the year.

Upon glancing over the numerous activities of the Society this year, we can see a real spirit of pride and enthusiasm at work in it, indicating that the Goethean Literary Society still holds a prominent place among the College activities.

Dr. John B. Price

Dr. John B. Price, who coached the football team during the 1923 season, concluded four years of highly successful football coaching at Franklin and Marshall, when he returned to his Alma Mater, Ursinus College, early in 1924 to practice medicine. While at F. and M., Dr. Price's elevens either won or tied twenty-seven out of thirty-six games played, which is a very good record for any coach at any college.

His teams have always held the mighty Penn to a low score and have given us two ties and one victory over our ancient rival, Gettysburg. He has lifted the Blue and White to the plain of king of small college football.

Dr. Price was graduated from Ursinus in 1905, where he played a brilliant game at end. From 1908 until 1913 he coached the gridiron teams of his Alma Mater, turning out a team in 1910 that beat the University of Pennsylvania 8-5.

From Ursinus he went to Hartford, Connecticut, where he coached football at Trinity College until 1915. In that year he continued coaching at Muhlenburg.

During the war Dr. Price was in the medical service at Camp Greenleaf.

He entered the medical service of the United States Army in 1917 and became head coach of the U. S. Army Ambulance team at Allentown, one of the strongest service teams in the country. Following the war, Dr. Price came to Franklin and Marshall, in 1920, as Director of Athletics.

Coach Barr

Dr. Price had as his assistant coach during the past season no other than the inimitable John Shober "Tubby" Barr.

"Tubby" started his football career at Lancaster High School before the World War. After finishing High School, he entered the Navy, where he helped coach and played on one of the service teams.

In his first year at College, Barr made the 'varsity, alternating between guard and center. After his Freshman year he held down a guard position and last year captained the team. His work as coach was highly acceptable and of great assistance to Dr. Price.

Manager Myers

Much of the work connected with arranging for and conducting the football games, but with nearly all the glamor missing, is loaded upon the Manager.

C. Paul Myers handled the job in fine shape during the past Fall and deserves much credit for it. Managing football teams seems to be one of Myers' favorite pastimes, for while at Lancaster High School he held a similar position. Faithful and steady work, many, many hours spent on the football field and in the gymnasium, and careful financial arrangements are necessary if the Manager is to be a successful one. Manager Myers was a successful one and is surely deserving of praise for what he accomplished.

DONOVAN CRAGIN—“Don” was the pilot of the team and certainly set a brilliant example for his team mates to follow. A triple threat man, his opponents were forced to watch him constantly. Unfortunately the injury jinx followed “Don” throughout the season, forcing him from several of the big games.

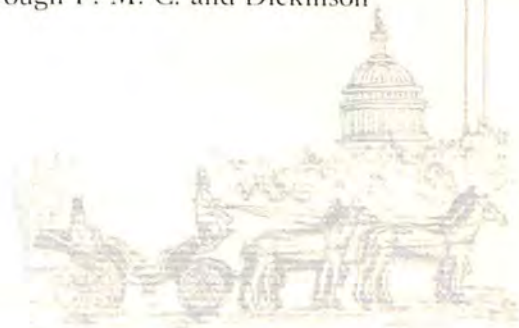

JOHN GEESEY—Our Captain-elect surely proved himself worthy of the honor last Fall. “Jack” plays a tackle position and is able to use his “head” as well as his brawn. A good clean player and leader, we place great confidence in “Jack” for success next season.

Review of the 1923 Season

The football season of 1923 was marked at Franklin and Marshall by an unusually heavy schedule, carried through with relative success. Mt. Saint Mary's College and Western Maryland College were missing from the roll and their place was taken by Lafayette College, a worthy successor. No outstanding performer appeared, at the opening of the season, from the ranks of the yearlings to fill the places of the nine letter men who were lost at the end of the 1922 season. As the season progressed, players of more than usual merit developed and, at the time of the Swarthmore game, the team had developed into a smoothly working combination that clearly outplayed that college and pushed through P. M. C. and Dickinson for decisive victories.

One Hundred Thirty One

HORACE BASSETT—Bassett entered the "Hall of Fame" by his marvelous work during the 1922 season. The past season saw Bassett performing at left end with all the old ability. We surely hate to lose this dependable end.

PAUL KUNKEL—A man who doesn't know how to quit. "Tiny's" work at tackle was all that could be desired. Kunkel will be ready to deliver again next season with all the "ole time pep."

Meeting the University of Pennsylvania in her first game, the Blue and White played the fighting defensive game that only thoroughbreds display. With a scant two weeks' preparation, she met a heavier team fresh from a summer of training and forced it to fight tooth and nail for every inch of gain. As in every battle, the palm of victory went to the team with the strongest reserves. Penn's touchdowns were made in the first and last quarters, for the touchdowns of the first period acted as a goad to stiffen the weakened ranks of the Blue and White into an impassable barrier which endured until the weight of fresh recruits bore it down in the last quarter.

The game which followed with Albright was somewhat listless. The ball was kept in Albright territory during the greater part of the game, while one touchdown and a field goal went to make up the first victory of the year. Albright scored six points on a very pretty run through center, but she did not threaten in any way during the remainder of the game.

LLOYD WEAVER—"Cocky" was the bulwark of the line and a continual menace to his opponents. He certainly could rip open the enemy's line. We expect to see him on Williamson Field again in the Fall.

ROBERT JAMIESON—"Fighting Bob" made some of his opposing centers look pretty sick. The first man down under the kick-off, he was always in the thick of action. "Bob" will don the pale blue jersey again next Fall.

Lafayette College proved to be too strong for F. and M. and rode roughshod over our lighter team during three periods. But F. and M.'s brief moment of glory came in the second quarter. Unleashing a sudden fierce forward pass attack, the ball was carried down the field in a spectacular rush that swept the mammoth off its feet. Four successive first downs were made before Lafayette recovered and prevented a score. As in the Penn game, superior weight and fresh substitutes proved too strong for exhausted gameness.

Emerging from the Lafayette game in a somewhat battered condition, the Blue and White was met by the intercepted-forward-pass jinx that tagged its footsteps throughout the season. In Lebanon Valley F. and M. caught a tartar. Scoring a touchdown a few minutes after the game opened, the Blue and White failed to make the added point and the two teams fought back and forth on the field without endangering either goal. In the third quarter Lebanon Valley intercepted a forward pass and ran 38 yards unhampered to a touchdown. A clean-cut drop kick gave the visitors a one-point margin of safety which F. and M.'s heroic efforts could not overcome.

One Hundred Thirty Three

EDWARD GARRIGUES—Opposing backs couldn't get through "Ed's" part of the line. Although a guard, "Ed" was a sure receiver for forwards in the open formations. "Ed" is going to catch more forwards for us next Fall.

GEORGE BROWN.—The faster and rougher the game, the more "Bevo" liked it. "Bevo" and Bassett were two well-matched ends, hard to duplicate. We hate to think of "Bevo" not lining up with the squad in the Fall.

The 1923 football season of Franklin and Marshall reached its greatest height in the Swarthmore game. The team that faced the Garnet was marked by no individual stars, but rather by eleven brilliant players, each outshining his past performances and playing as he had never played before. Play, on the part of the Blue and White, was distinguished by a skillfully varied attack that left the game ever in her hands.

Displaying sound tactics, F. and M. resorted during the first period to a punting game which placed the brunt of the attack upon Swarthmore. The second quarter marked another of the ill-starred breaks that scarred the past season. Shut off from even one first down, the Garnet managed to intercept a forward pass and draw themselves out of defeat with the lone touchdown it brought. Coming back during the third quarter, the Blue and White opened up an offensive that paralleled the attack of the Americans at Chateau-Thierry. Sweeping down the field in a rapid succession of end runs, line bucks, and short forward passes, the SAMUEL YOHNS—Small, elusive and accurate on passes, "Sam" was a constant source of worry to opponents. This diminutive field general will be on hand in the Fall to "carry on" and outguess rival quarterbacks.

JOSEPH CRAGIN—Brother of the mighty "Don," "Jo" was a tartar for our rivals. Always fighting from the starting whistle to the final minute of play, "Jo" showed the F. and M. Fight. "Jo's" services at half-back were invaluable.

great climax to a great game came when F. and M. went into open formation like an army going into action and Ed Garrigues fought to Swarthmore's one-yard line to catch a 35-yard pass from quarterback Sammy Yohn. The ball went across for the touchdown that brought a tie—one that, like many ties, was truly a victory. During the remainder of the game the Little Quakers carried on in an unsuccessful effort to win a victory.

Continuing with the impetus picked up in the Swarthmore game, Pennsylvania Military College was defeated by a margin of three touchdowns. The Cadets, who began the game in disabled condition, fought fiercely to ward off an outcome that was as certain as that of the Penn game and much like it in result. Against Dickinson the Blue and White avenged her defeat of the previous year by a seven-point victory. Dickinson presented a plunging attack that at first appeared formidable, but resort to a punting game gave F. and M. the advantage and led to ultimate success.

FRANK MURPHY—This big fullback is certainly building a reputation and judging from the start he got will be a fixture in the backfield for the next two years. "Murph" was a hard worker and consistent line plunger.

VINCENT FAUST—"Tarzan" delighted in opening holes in the line. To see him jump into action was a joy to many an F. and M. Grad. Fight and more fight, but always a clean game with "Tarzan" in the line.

Ursinus dealt the second unexpected blow to the pride of the Blue and White. For more than three periods, and until within a few minutes of the end of the contest, F. and M. played a lifeless game. Holding the advantage at all times and never seriously threatened, she seemed to lack the power to score. A perfect drop kick from the distant 43-yard line gave Ursinus a three-point lead with only three minutes to play. Stung to action by the prospect of defeat, the Blue and White became a fighting machine that tore through the Colledgeville eleven for a gain of fifty yards on two plays, only to have the game end before a score could be made.

The annual Thanksgiving Day game with Gettysburg brought the first loss for four years. The game was marked with misfortune, for, on the first play, WILLIAM SCHMIDT—When "Don" couldn't play against Lafayette, "Bill" stepped into his shoes and put up a great game. We always counted on Bill for forward passes and he always came across with the goods.

HOWARD SCOTT—This speedy end played a "bang up" game, from beginning to end. To win was "Scottie's" aim and he made his opponents know it by contributing with forward passes pulled down from all angles.

Captain Don Cragin was injured and forced to leave the game. Gettysburg brought a steady smashing attack that swept up the center of the field, only to be stopped by a stone-wall defense whenever the Blue and White goal line was threatened. Playing a sterling game without the services of their leader, F. and M. kept her goal line uncrossed and held the Battlefield eleven to two field goals.

As ever, no one man can be singled out for praise. Every wearer of the Blue and White in battle fought his hardest and each one stood out above the rest at some time during the season. Of Captain Don Cragin no more fitting tribute can be paid than to say that "as a leader he led."

It is not for us to attempt to foretell or even to discuss the prospects and possibilities of the coming season. Suffice it to say that if it be no more successful than the season of 1923, it shall not have been a failure.

One Hundred Thirty Seven

MILES MESSICK—The only Frosh regular on the squad. "Dum" doesn't know one thing, and that is when to quit. Since Messick will be back for a halfback berth again next season, we expect great things from him.

GRANVILLE FISHER—This modest guard failed to be photographed, hence the absence of his picture. Fisher played a great game at either the guard or tackle position and especially in the open formation.

THE SCRUBS

When we think of our football team, we usually think of the sixteen varsity men and forget those who made the varsity what it was. The scrubs! How little do we realize what service they performed day after day, and how little credit they have received. It is discouraging to come out and play every day on a wet and muddy field and then not get into one game. It is like going to class every day with your work prepared and then flunking at the end. But they stuck, and thanks be to them that they did! They are the unsung heroes.

After the regular season was ended a game was played between the scrubs and Muhlenberg Freshmen. It was a good game and, although they came out on the short side of a 13-7 score, the scrubs played well and deserve all credit.

This was the beginning of recognition of the services of the scrubs. Let's hope that it will continue and be multiplied.

Fresh-Soph Football Game

We usually think of a Fresh-Soph football game as a good joke and "free-for-all" fight. But this year they fooled us. The game was one of the best and most interesting played on Williamson Field all season. It was remarkable for good football, good spirit, and hard fight. At first the two teams appeared to be evenly matched, but the Freshmen finally came into their own and walked away with a 10-0 victory.

It is difficult to select any stars on either team. Both, and especially the Freshmen, were well balanced. "Tubby" Barr coached the Freshmen and "Jack" Geesey the Sophomores, and they made a good job of it.

If all inter-class games will give evidence of the same amount of spirit and pep, it will be a great step forward for the College.

Coach Samuel Taylor

Sam Taylor, our popular basketball and baseball coach, is an alumnus of Hillsdale College, Michigan, from which institution he was graduated with honors. While there, he secured his letter in football, baseball, basketball and track.

During his last year at Hillsdale College, Taylor was in charge of all athletics there and captained the basketball team which won the intercollegiate championship of Michigan in 1920.

For a time Taylor served as athletic director and commandant at Florida Military and Naval Academy. While in Florida he played for two years on the Jacksonville basketball team and captained the team the year they won the championship of Florida.

For the past two years he has been head coach at Franklin and Marshall Academy, where he has been very successful.

His connection with the College began during basketball season, when he undertook to coach both College and Academy fives. Although handicapped in many respects, he developed a team which, though not brilliant, succeeded in winning a majority of their games. With the approach of Spring he was selected to coach the baseball team and succeeded in producing probably the best team to represent F. and M. in many years.

Review of the 1923-24 Season

Although the Blue and White 1923-24 Basketball combination, coached by "Sam" Taylor, was not a world-beating quintet, for in fact the players succeeded in winning only one more game than they lost, yet the past season can by no means be termed a failure.

Doubtless the quintet lost games they should have won and they won games that they were expected to lose, but throughout every game in the season they established themselves as a team that could and would fight to the final whistle. There were no individual stars on this team. It was a five-man team if ever there was one, with each man sharing equally in the success or failure.

Someone has rightly said that the small floor of the College gymnasium was a great handicap to this year's team. Proof of this fact is evinced from the results of the two games played on the Convention Hall floor, where they gave an indication of what might be expected on a floor where Taylor's style of attack could work as it should.

To Coach Taylor goes practically all the credit for the success of the season. At the beginning of the year, realizing that he had no star to build a team around, he welded those five units into a rapid passing machine which brought out the best in each player and made every one a star. To Manager Barr go the laurels for having arranged such a fine schedule which included a trip to the New England States.

Should any individual honors be awarded, they would probably go to Captain Garrigues. Time and time again we noted the games in which "Ed" was the main cog in breaking up the opponents' attack. He was indeed an able leader, but he was ably abetted in his efforts by other members of the squad. To "Sammy" Yohn go the scoring honors, making over fifty field goals during the season. In Jamieson we had a good center and a strong man on the defense, but due to an injured ankle he was forced to the bench for several games. In "Turk" Gerber we also had a strong scorer and a hard player at all times. His scoring honors were exceeded by Yohn and Garrigues. "Ted" Glass was one of the hardest players, being all over the floor and fighting with all the grit of a soldier, but in a true sportsmanlike manner. The two Cragin brothers were always dependable and gained almost equal laurels, for coincidentally they both registered within one of the same number of field goals for the season. Stroeble, Mantz, Schneebeli, and Pontz were in reserve and were called upon many times to substitute, and to them go the honors of subs.

The season opened with a victory over Moravian College, 44-21. The next three games were played on foreign courts and comprised a New England trip which was indeed a novelty to a Blue and White cage team. On this trip St. John's and Wesleyan defeated us, but our aggregation came back strong by defeating Trinity, fresh from a victory over the strong Williams Quintet. "Hook" Mylin's college was next and them we trounced to a 25-17 tune. Our next victim was the State Forestry School, whom we walked all over in the first game in Convention Hall. Our ancient rivals, the Battlefield boys, had little trouble in winning this battle by a 36-14 score. The second game was played in Convention Hall and we won from the "said to be strong" aggregation from Blue Ridge College. Journeying to Swarthmore, we were defeated in an interesting and exciting game, 20-13. We made short work of Haverford, but were beaten by Albright, 21-19, in one of the worst demonstrations of basketball on the home floor. Gettysburg then came to our floor and defeated us, 37-22; however, this score in no way indicates the type of a game displayed by our five, for it proved to be the most interesting game of the season. In this game we gained a six-point lead on Gettysburg before they made a point and all seemed to be pointing to an F. and M. victory; however, in the second half our boys were unable to hold their own and due to the superior team work of Gettysburg our quintet went down nobly to a glorious defeat. Washington next defeated us, we again defeated Haverford, and then won from two new teams, Muhlenberg and the University of Pennsylvania Junior Varsity. Albright again trounced us on their own court and little Ursinus continued their winning year in athletics, as far as F. and M. is concerned, by defeating us 28-16. The Alumni game was easily won by a 43-21 score and rang down the curtain for the 1923-24 season.

For next year the prospects are indeed bright, because not a single man will be lost through graduation and the new gymnasium in all probability will be in operation by that time. So when another basketball season rolls around it is not unreasonable to expect great things of the Blue and White aggregation.

He that would be beforehand in the world must be beforehand in his business.

Prof. Charles W. Mayser

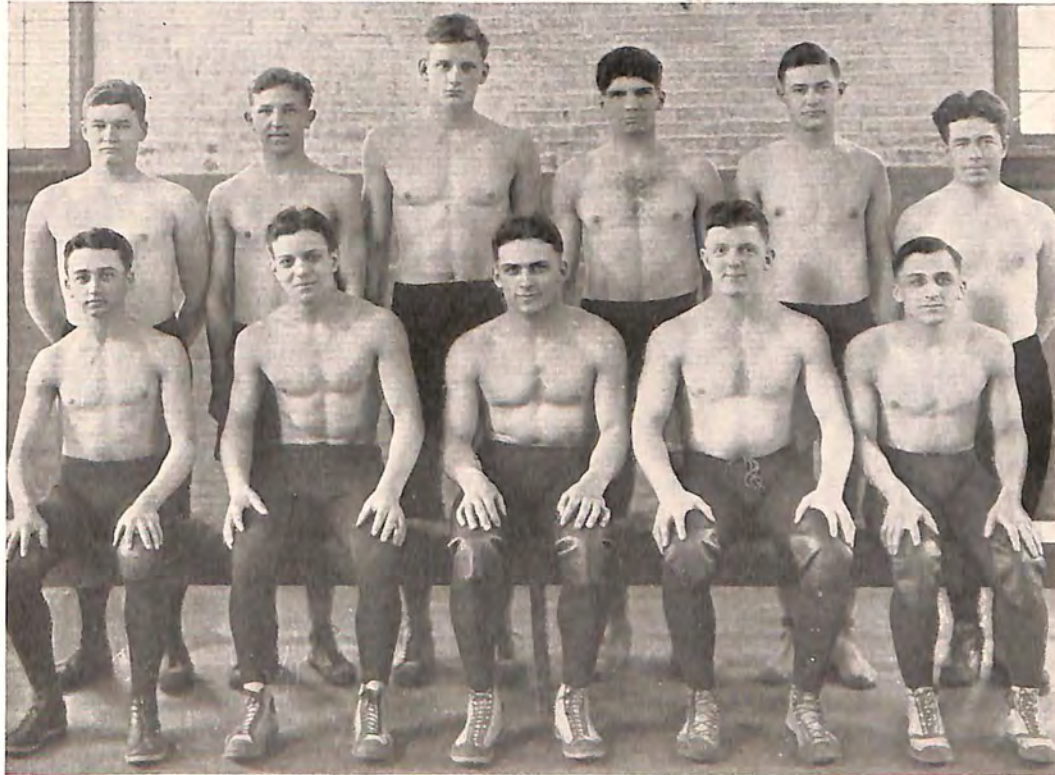

After an absence of eight years, Prof. Mayser returned to Franklin and Marshall during the Fall of 1923 in the capacity of athletic director and during the past collegiate year has been in full charge of the physical training courses.

While at Franklin and Marshall, in 1914 and 1915, Prof. Mayser coached football, basketball and track, and had full charge of all athletics in the College. His teams met with rare successes in all fields, and especially so in football. In 1914 his Blue and White outfit held the powerful Penn eleven to a 13-7 score, and in 1915 defeated the Red and Blue 10-0, with one of the greatest teams ever developed at Franklin and Marshall.

After leaving F. and M., he had full charge of athletics at Iowa State University, Ames. While at Iowa, Prof. Mayser coached football for five years, losing only six games in that time against the strongest teams in the West. During this period one of his gridiron teams defeated the greatest eleven the University of Nebraska has put on the field, the one which defeated the University of Pittsburgh.

The return of Prof. Mayser marks the beginning of a new athletic era at Franklin and Marshall. With the new Gymnasium available for use next Fall, and with an exceedingly popular instructor in charge of all athletics, the future in F. and M.'s athletic world has a rosy hue, indeed.

Review of the 1923-24 Season

With the advent of Professor Mayser at Franklin and Marshall, a new letter sport made its appearance on the athletic program. The classic form of competition practiced back in the days of Greek gods and Olympic heroes, as introduced by Professor Mayser, took a firm hold on the student body with the subsequent powerful and successful wrestling team.

From the very start of the season it was evident that the team would be a successful one. Although none of the candidates had ever grappled before the early winter months, by the time of the final meet a well-balanced, clever and experienced team was representing the Blue and White. The credit for this feat goes to Coach Mayser, already widely known by the successful wrestling teams he coached while at Ames.

The popularity of the baby sport with the student body was immediate and increased as the season passed until it reached the climax at the final meet with the University of Pennsylvania, when a cheering section of several hundred students was on hand to encourage the battlers. That the sport is a fixture at F. and M. is scarcely to be questioned judging from the enthusiastic support it received during the entire season.

Western Maryland College had the privilege of being the first opponent to face F. and M. on the mat. Although the first public appearance of the Blue and White, they succeeded in vanquishing the Southerners by a 24-5 score. Three falls and three decisions for F. and M. did the trick, Western Maryland being satisfied with one fall.

Still inexperienced and handicapped by wrestling on a foreign mat, the Nevonians received a severe trouncing at the hands of the University of Pennsylvania, 25-6. Penn had everything its own way, its experienced matmen taking advantage of the unfinished F. and M. grapplers, succeeding in obtaining five falls as against F. and M.'s two decisions.

More experienced and with more coaching the team completely shut out Western Maryland in a return match on the opponent's own mat, 21-0. The Southerners presented a well-balanced line-up and proved to be a stronger opponent than on the occasion of the first meet with Coach Mayser's proteges. Unable to gain a fall, F. and M. took every match by time decision only after four of them went into extra periods.

Against Muhlenberg College the team showed its superiority by defeating the Allentown combination 26-5, allowing only one fall to the visitors, while securing four falls and two decisions themselves.

Flushed with the pride of these victories, the team was invincible in a return match with the Quakers. Penn sent the second half of its varsity squad to meet the Blue and White, but was unable to again take the measure of the Mayser combination. The team which faced the Red and Blue was not the inexperienced and untried squad of the first meeting, but an experienced, well-conditioned and well-coached group of grapplers. The score tells the story very well, 18 points for F. and M. gained by two falls, two decisions and one draw, as opposed to 10 points for Penn resulting from two falls and one draw.

From every angle the season must be considered a phenomenal success. Although its maiden attempt, F. and M. came through with four victories in five meets. With every man on the squad expected to return next year and with Coach Mayser again at the helm, prospects for a successful season are very bright indeed and the baby sport is expected to mature as a permanent part of F. and M.'s inter-collegiate competition.

Review of the 1923 Season

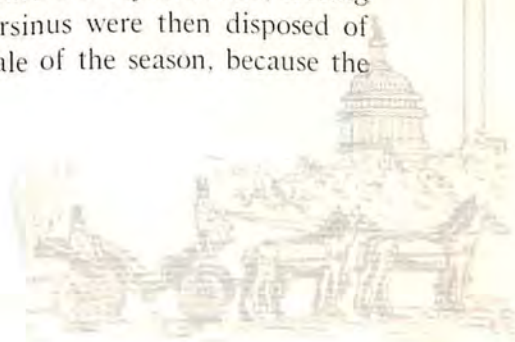

The opening of the 1923 baseball season found the team lacking the services of several veterans who had played the year before and Coach "Whitey" Price was confronted with the problem of building up practically a new team. That he was able to meet this problem was evidenced by the fact that Franklin and Marshall was represented by one of the best teams in years. Eleven games were chalked up in the win column, with but six defeats. One game, that which was to have been played with Albright on April 14, was postponed, because of snow and a wet field. With this one exception, the schedule went through an uninterrupted season.

Captain Cocklin was about the only man to maintain his place, that of catcher. Several men were shifted and a number of new men made their debut. The pitching corps, headed by Rohrbach, and including Polack, a Freshman, and Harris, a veteran, was unusually strong. Don Cragin was moved in from center field to first base. Childs, another Freshman, covered second, while Joe Cragin supported him at shortstop. Marshall Payne, a newcomer, played at third base. The outfield was composed of Horine, Yohn and Fessler. Martin, Rumbaugh, Bennethum and several others broke into the line-up as scrubs.

The season opened with two games with Dickinson, both ending in a 5-2 score. The Carlislians won the first, but Franklin and Marshall came through with a victory in the second. Lebanon Valley and Haverford were next disposed of, the former in an exceedingly close game, with the score finally standing at 8-7. The University of Pennsylvania then turned back Price's men by a 3-2 count. Rohrbach held the great Red and Blue team to 4 hits, but all in vain. The Blue and White won the next five games in a row, conquering P. M. C.; St. John's, of Annapolis; Gettysburg; Drexel and Swarthmore. The Gettysburg game was particularly pleasing. Rohrbach let the Battlefield boys down with two hits and helped to win the game with several hits of his own. The final score was 3-0. The game was in celebration of the annual Straw Hat day.

Developing a mid-season slump, F. and M. dropped the next four games, culminating in the game with Gettysburg, on the latter's field, which was, perhaps, the poorest exhibition of the whole season. Rohrbach had been lost to the team, due to sickness, and Don Cragin took up the mound duty. Receiving wretched support, he was forced to retire early in the game and his successors were not able to do any better. The final count was 9-4. The season closed with three fine victories. Penn State Forestry was the first to fall before this rejuvenation, loosing by the very large score of 25-3. Haverford and Ursinus were then disposed of by the Blue and White in what proved to be the finale of the season, because the annual Alumni game was not played.

Cheer Leaders

Like all cheer leaders they are supposed to have lots of "pep," and like some cheer leaders they do have lots of it. Anyway they kept us cheering and kept us amused at all the Football games last year. A good humor goes a long way to foster the spirit of Victory and they kept our humor gleeful. But they deserve lots of credit for their spirit of loyalty and courage which never failed.

Review of 1923 Season

In 1923 Track became more popular than ever before, and a large squad gave promise of a successful season. The inter-class meet was first and in this meet a varied amount of ability was shown.

The Penn Relay Team was unfortunate enough not to place, but they ran a good race in spite of defeat. Yohn, Cragin, Payn, and Childs composed the team who ran at the big Carnival. Rothermel also competed in the high jump with the country's best.

The first Dual Meet was with our ancient and ever-present rivals—Gettysburg. The men from the Battlefield carried off the honors and left us a poor second. However, this was the first meet and better success was looked for in the future.

Haverford was next and, although the result was somewhat more pleasing than the former meet, it was almost the same, for Haverford had nearly everything her own way. The score was not as one-sided as our first meet, however, and this fact helped to soothe the sting of defeat.

Late in May came the final test—the Middle Atlantics. The stars of the East were in competition at Muhlenberg College, and the best F. and M. could do was to take three places in the finals.

Prospects for the 1924 Season are much brighter than last year. There is a great deal of new material in school and this year's team under the leadership of "Sammy" Hauck should accomplish great things.

Review of the 1923 Season

At first glance the 1923 Tennis Team might appear to have had a very unsuccessful season. From a total of five matches F. and M. won one, tied one, and lost three, but scored a total of thirteen points while its opponents scored fifteen. However, there were several distinct hindrances to the team's success. In the first place, failure to elect a manager left the team without a guide. In the second place, but one varsity man remained from the preceding year—Captain Andrews. In the third place, the team was not chosen until late in the season. Considering all these disadvantages, the season was less unsuccessful than might otherwise appear.

Captain Andrews was easily the outstanding player on the team. His game was at all times consistent and at times brilliant. Only once during three years of play was he defeated on his home court.

The other members of the team, A. R. Ott, H. E. Wieand, and G. H. Stein, deserve all the credit that can be given them for their work. Following their leader, they were good disciples.

Two letter men remain for this year. This is half the team, and if they continue their excellent showing, this year should surpass last year.

Resume of Accomplishments

Inter-Fraternity Athletics had slowly been declining in the College until two years ago, when they nearly became extinct. Due to the efforts and leadership of Professor Mayser an Intra-Mural Athletic Association was formed consisting of one man from each Fraternity and one man from each of the three unorganized groups. The purpose of the organization is to promote athletic relations and conduct contests between the various organizations on the Campus. The student body heartily supported the Association and the results thus far have been remarkably gratifying.

The Intra-Mural Basketball League was the first result of the new system. It was a success in every way, and showed the value of Professor Mayser's ideals. An Intra-Mural Wrestling Match brought out many unknown wrestlers and helped to create that much-desired spirit of rivalry and competition which it was felt the College needed.

Perhaps the best contest was a track meet held in Convention Hall, March 20. The entry list was large, and though no man was allowed to participate in the event in which he had earned a letter, the time was fast and the distances long. An outdoor meet was held early in the Spring with no less satisfying results.

This year has marked the beginning of Intra-Mural activity. Let us hope that the coming years will show as much improvement as the past has done. It is the spirit of Intra-Mural activity which is most valuable and the seed has taken root and sprouted.

GEORGE FULMER MULL, LITT.D.

Dr. Mull's Birthday Party

BY PROFESSOR J. NEVIN SCHAEFFER

On October 7, 1923, there occurred an event that was unique in the annals of Franklin and Marshall. It was the birthday of Dr. George F. Mull, and the Alumni and undergraduates took it as the occasion on which to commemorate the forty years of Dr. Mull's close and vital connection with their Alma Mater.

Two Hundred Six

A letter signed by Judge W. H. Keller, 1891, Mr. S. H. Ranck, 1882, Dr. C. P. Stahr, 1897, and Prof. J. N. Schaeffer, 1903, had previously been sent to the Alumni of the past forty years, calling their attention to the forty years of service and suggesting that at the proper time they send letters or telegrams of congratulation and appreciation. When the time came, a veritable flood of messages poured in upon Dr. Mull. These messages breathed forth an unusual warmth of affection and esteem and fairly overwhelmed their recipient.

On the morning of October 7 the local members of the committee called upon Dr. Mull and presented him with a Hamilton watch of the best grade, a suitable chain, and forty gold half-eagles, symbolic of the forty years. (An additional purse of gold was given at a later time.) On behalf of the donors Judge Keller in an address deeply touched with emotion indicated that the gift was but a slight token in substantial form of the warmth of feeling on the part of Dr. Mull's many students. Prof. Schaeffer read the Latin inscription on the inner cover, and Dr. Mull expressed his heart-felt thanks.

The Student Senate later presented a bouquet of forty American Beauty roses. Several fraternities sent gifts. From many Alumni came individual gifts; from one a check for one hundred dollars.

After Chapel exercises the next morning the undergraduates gathered in front of Main Hall and gave repeated cheers until Dr. Mull came out and responded in his usual happy and earnest fashion. The local newspapers all featured the event and contained laudatory editorials. The Student Weekly did the same, as also The Reformed Church Messenger. The Sophomore Calendar was later dedicated to Dr. Mull, as had been the case with the Oriflamme of 1923, although at the time the latter dedication was decided upon there was no thought of a celebration. With and without mention of the name, the event has since been the theme of editorials, sermons, and addresses in various places where Franklin and Marshall men have been.

The entire tribute, however, was only a slight evidence of the depth of regard felt by those privileged to associate with and to know Dr. Mull. The depth of regard, perhaps, did not appear even in the letters, because such feelings are not easily expressed in writing. It was more evident in what former students said in conversation with one another. Perhaps the best evidence lay in the fact, known of course to only a few, but a fact none the less, that those called upon to help regarded it as a rare privilege, and that many who, by reason of incorrect mailing address or other inadvertence, did not in due time learn of the "surprise party" felt deprived of much personal pleasure. There seemed to be general delight on the part of former and present students thus to join in common address to him they know irreverently, yet affectionately, as "Georgie."

"Serus in caelum redeat."

WILLIAM B. ARNOLD

Our Editor-in-Chief

This year's Oriflamme, that of the Class of 1925, suffered an inestimable loss while the book was yet in the very early stages of preparation, when the Editor-in-Chief was obliged to quit college for a protracted period because of illness. William B. Arnold was elected to the highest office of the staff because of his excellence as a student, his conscientious work in all matters which he undertook, and his previous experience in similar work as Business Manager of the Sophomore Calendar and as Editor-in-Chief of the 1921 Oracle of Lancaster High School. Nor was this confidence misplaced, as the success of the subscription campaign and the preliminary planning of this volume bear ample evidence.

Early in January, Mr. Arnold was stricken with typhoid fever and confined to bed for a period of two and one-half months. His convalescence was slow and consequently he was unable to direct or assist in the detailed planning and compilation of the Annual. That the Oriflamme Staff felt the loss of his ability and originality is without question.

The feeling of sympathy for the unfortunate Editor was universal among Staff and student body alike. Mr. Arnold's illness was not only personally unfortunate, but to the success of the Oriflamme and to the consummation of his many ideas with regard to the beautifying and arranging of the volume was both unfortunate and regrettable.

Two Hundred Eight

The Art Work

It seems unfair to the persons responsible for the Art work in this volume to pass it by without calling particular attention to it and to discuss it briefly. In the Foreword it has been stated that we have "aspired to recreate the atmosphere" in which Franklin and Marshall lived and worked. In attempting to accomplish this aim innumerable difficulties arose and we were obliged to forego many of our plans. We believe, however, that a consistent plan and arrangement of Art work is an end to be desired if the Annual is to be an artistic one.

INTRODUCTORY SECTION

The BORDER used here is the same as that which appears on a ten shilling note "Printed by B. Franklin and D. Hall, 1757." The arrangement of the border was suggested by the style of ornamentation used at that period. Of course, it was altogether fitting that pictures of Franklin and Marshall be inserted on the Title page.

The SEALS, which are printed as phantom tones, are practically self-explanatory. On the Title page is the familiar seal of Franklin and Marshall College, and on the Foreword and Staff pages are the seals of its two respective components, Franklin College and Marshall College. The seal of Lancaster County Academy found on the Divisions page is of importance because this Academy and Franklin College were merged early in the history of both.

DIVISION PAGES

On the Division pages we have attempted a difficult feat, to link some act in either the life of Franklin or Marshall with the title of the Division. Added to this was the task of searching to be sure that the drawings would be as authentic as possible. We believe that the best obtainable have been secured.

The first page, THE COLLEGE, pictures the land-mark of Lancaster, the College Tower, which has stood for seventy years as a monument to the memory of the men whose name the College bears.

On the next page, we find Franklin as a representative of a then young and insignificant nation, in the most extravagant and exclusive of all European courts, that of France. What could be more appropriate than the title CLASSES. Indeed, Franklin might be compared to a Freshman starting a College career when he acted as the first representative to France of what was to become one of the most powerful nations on the Earth.

Franklin signing the Constitution of the United States, which was to begin the greatest organization in the history of mankind is very significant for the division dealing with ORGANIZATIONS.

For the PLATFORM page, Marshall as Chief Justice of the United States was deemed most fitting.

Two Hundred Nine

PUBLICATIONS recalled Franklin's profession at once and our choice was obvious.

John Marshall was used for the ATHLETICS page. The Chief Justice was an inveterate and skillful horseshoe pitcher. Records remark about the unusual sight of Marshall, in his Justice's robes, on hands and knees measuring with sticks to determine the winner.

The fact that both Franklin and Marshall belonged to the Masonic order was utilized in drawing the FRATERNITY page.

From Franklin's Autobiography we find "and, to show that I was not above my business, I sometimes brought home the paper I purchased at stores through the streets on a wheelbarrow." What a FEATURE a similar act by a successful business man today would be for our newspapers.

On the corner of King and Charlotte Streets for almost two centuries stood a tavern, which had entertained Lafayette and other notables when Lancaster was yet young, with its simple ADVERTISEMENT, Plow Tavern. In view of the recent agitation to save the historic building it seemed especially appropriate for use in this connection.

BORDER

The corner pieces in the border design are also of historical significance. On alternating even-numbered pages one finds old FRANKLIN COLLEGE. This building was better known as the Brew House and was located in Lancaster. MARSHALL COLLEGE, in its earlier years, was housed for a time in the building pictured on alternating odd-numbered pages.

A CONESTOGA WAGON, peculiar to Lancaster County and to Franklin's period is used on the second set of even-numbered pages. Facing it is a picture of MARSHALL IN HIS CARRIAGE at Washington with the Capitol dome in the background.

JUNIOR SECTION

The phantom tones used throughout this section portray Franklin as a scientist "snatching the thunderbolt from Heaven"; and Marshall engaged in a friendly game of horseshoes. In order to connect the upper and lower corners for the latter idea, an unusual perspective was used.

EX LIBRIS

The Ex Libris, a new feature for the Oriflamme, pictures Franklin at his bookstore, selling to patrons. The border is a copy of an old type of signboard used during Revolutionary times.

And now, in conclusion, we hope that our abbreviated description may render more intelligible what we have attempted to do. Whether or not we have succeeded is for the readers to decide.

ORIFLAMME OF 1925

Two Hundred Ten

Fresh-Soph Tie-Up

The books tell us that in the time of the great Julius there were horrible combats and bloody battles in the Circus of Rome. Those stories were very good once upon a time, but they are now obsolete. The Fresh-Soph Tie-up has entirely replaced these struggles of old.

When two angry groups of rival classmen are determined to exterminate each other, the fuzz surely does fly. That's what happened last September. However, the Sophs had an undue advantage in that they had tied up numerous Freshmen prior to the official festivities and that they had one year's experience. But the Freshmen put up a game fight and showed a brand of pep that is hard to beat.

The score was one-sided, 52-3, but it was a good Tie-up and all the spectators were thoroughly satisfied.

Interesting Letters of a Freshman

Affording the Reader an Innocent View of
FRANKLIN AND MARSHALL

Lancaster, Pa.,

Dear Mother—

This is the very first time I've had to write to you since I got here, there are so many things to be done right at the opening of school. I didn't even have time to wash my face this morning, as a big, pompous—spoken, shaven—headed Senior named Boyer came barefootedly across the hall with his gossamer pumps in hand for me to clean before breakfast. But except for a few things like that the whole place is wonderful. Everybody is so nice and so accommodating.

When I first stepped off the train in Lancaster I was met by some college Y. M. C. A. men. Their leader, a Mr. Kerr, was very nice and gave me a chance to buy a dandy Chapel seat right in the parquet for only $1.00. As I knew they'd be in demand, I bought an extra seat which I'll sell for $2 or $3 to some poor chap without any foresight. I also subscribed for a year to the Student Handbook. On the car going to the College I happened to sit beside a man named Noll, who, I learned, is one of the big men at school, and has even had his picture published in the college paper. He belongs to the Phi Upsilon Kappa Fraternity. I know that if you could see him you wouldn't be so mistrustful of fraternity men any longer!

The first glimpse of the College I had from the car was what seemed like a lot of red and white banners, but on coming nearer they proved to be only the Dean's red flannels hanging out to dry. As soon as we were past this scenery, however, the College itself appeared. It consists of a Statue with a Library behind it, a cute little Gymnasium, a fairly good looking Science Building, an Observatory, two cement walks

*“ And topping all, the Collee Tower
Whose ivy-covered, redden-co'ored walls
Smile down upon the squirrel's bower,
And on its twins—the Literary Halls.”*

The Main Building and Literary Society Halls stand just like the barn and tobacco shed and wagon shed at home—only the wagon shed isn't quite so high as Goethean Hall. And then there are the finest old trees all around that almost hide some of the buildings. They make the campus look wonderful!

After I had gotten my room in the dormitories of the Theological Seminary across the Avenue, I went to register with Prof. Meyers who advised me to take English from Prof. Grose and also gave me much other necessary advice. It was terribly warm there, but I got fixed up at last and went to get my supper at the “ Fat Man's Delight,” a quaint little lunch room only a square away. The first bite made me feel homesick and a few more made me deathly sick. I left, leaving most of the food still on my plate, which the proprietor waddled across the floor and ate.

Next morning I went to Chapel to hear the opening address by prim little Dr. Harbold, who stoutly maintained that the increase of college students during the past year was 23.2%. I thought of the song about the Katy-Did—“Thou sayest such an undisputed thing in such a solemn way!” I looked for the Chapel seats I bought, but since they were in the front row and the other fellows’ seats were all in the back, I think I’ll have them exchanged. The regular classes started Friday and yesterday was the Freshman-Sophomore Tie-Up.

I have said my prayers every night.

Your loving son,

Alexander.

P. S. Could you send me my old pair of pants by special delivery? Someone must have taken mine by mistake yesterday in the Tie-Up, and I don’t want to miss any classes if I can help it. A.

Lancaster,
Wednesday, September 26.

Dear Prudence—

Me voilà—a college man! I don’t feel very different, tho, and I’m afraid I never will be very “collegiate” if it means to run around in wing collars, learn to drink and smoke, and spend all one’s allowance for clothes, as it seems to mean. I’d rather spend my money in carfare to come home to see you!

I wish you could have seen the Tie-Up contest between our class and the Sophs last Saturday! I was on my way to the field, when a group of fellows seized me, removed some rather necessary clothes, and locked me in a garage with sixty other Freshmen. One fellow, a preacher's son, was so scared he began to pray, and in about half an hour his dad came to let us out, trousers or no trousers, and soon we were lined up with our outnumbered Class, ready for combat. At the signal, I, valiantly leading my comrades like Winkleried of old, fiendishly charged the Sophomores. Single-handed and with ridiculous ease I tied up Murphy and Faust, big football men, and was coming back for more, when George Hoover fiercely grappled me. Like a modern Ajax he tigerishly clawed and tugged until we both fell, each writhing and wriggling to get on top. The stifling heat and choking dust made me gasp for breath but finally the whistle blew. Hoover looked like a mighty ruin, but after my toying about I felt as fresh and frolicsome as ever.

Wonder what hospital they have Hoover at! I stayed in bed the next day (as it was Sunday).

Have you been wondering about the frat pin I promised you? I haven't quite decided yet which to join, tho I've received bids from every house, as I'll tell you after you've read the copy, on the next page, of the pamphlet issued by the Inter-Fraternity Council. It was bound up in last year's Oriflamme but a fellow named Morgan caused it to be cut out because he claimed it underestimated his frat in still quoting its Freshman strength as only between 20 and 30, when they had just initiated ten new ones.

These Here Fraternities

COMPILED FOR THE BENEFIT OF RUSHEES

- CHI PHI—Political and social headquarters of Harold Miller. Bassett almost got into politics but Barr won the election. Type of house that the girls call up and ask “Who wants a date?” and then take their pick.
- DELTA SIGMA PHI—Brick, literary eating house filled to the gills with 20 or 30 freshmen who are trained to eat in shifts according to alphabetical rotation. For particulars consult College Directory.
- LAMBDA CHI ALPHA—Lodging house and literary society presided over by William T. Lampe. If they would eliminate the former they might accomplish the latter.
- PARADISE CLUB—A hard working group of studious young men situated near Esrey’s. Trying hard to regain the prestige of palmy days. Too close to Esrey’s for their own good.
- SIGMA PI—Hearty group of obscures occupying site on College Avenue. Group of nice leaved boys who are fast wasting away the “rep” built up by “Pud” Smith and “Nev” Harner.
- PHI KAPPA TAU—Are speedily getting to be a regular fraternity, having flunked one during the past academic year. Assemblage of students who glory in getting high marks.
- PHI KAPPA SIGMA—Pompous and phlegmatic conglomeration situated near Theological Seminary and car line to city. Acknowledged by themselves to be the best house on the campus.
- PHI SIGMA KAPPA—’Tis with pride that we waste our time and ink on “Tubby” Barr and his playmates. Stock is improving somewhat slightly now that Barnes is on the faculty. Try to rival Phi Psis and Phi Kaps for speed but can’t cut the buck because they don’t have the class.
- PHI KAPPA PSI—Varsity training table on James Street and overlooking Phi Kap sleeping porch. Claim to be elite and highly sophisticated. Social climbers.

This pamphlet gives a basis on which to judge the frats, but, Prudence, there are lots of other things to consider! The Lambda Chi Alpha pin, for instance, is the prettiest on the campus, and the others range clear down to the Chi Phi; but I wondered how the majority of those Lambda Chi men ever got beyond grammar school! So you see, Prudence, I'm taking my sweet old time to choose, meanwhile diplomatically managing to keep them all on the string and get almost my whole first week's board for nothing. I'm going to send you a box of candy with the money I've saved.

The night I got to Lancaster I was around to the Phi Kappa Psi house for a smoker. I thought they had a pair of pajamas flying from a flag-pole at the front of their lodge, but I understand that's the fraternity banner. It's some heraldic device on their coat-of-arms. Their front door is in two parts, just like the stable door at home, but inside is the dandiest reception room you ever saw. The lights are arranged on carriage wheels which (so the story has it) belonged to one of the former college presidents' Sunday carriage, which was spirited away by students one night, next to appear re-assembled at the top of the college tower. Altho President Apple and President Wilson are Phi Psi men, and the local chapter is majority stockholder in the Student Weekly, conversation was terribly scarce. These birds are too subjective for me, and you wouldn't like their pin, either.

Next day I had a good dinner at the Sigma Pi house—the frat that had the first honor man three years ago. They have a nice big fireplace, and over it hangs the chapter motto, written by one of their own men:

*"Come loaf with me and be my love,
Or friendship we must sever;
We rest on all the rainy days
And ditto in fair weather."*

A. O. Horn.

Isn't that Shakespearean? I'm going to take English from Prof. Grose, too. In the evening I was at a smoker of the Delta Sigma Phi's, alias the $1.65's, as I've heard them called. This frat must be terribly popular—there are so many members. They even said two or three were absent—Joe McCaskey haunting the Colonial and Art Morgan "utilizing his potential talents for the good of humanity." They had last year's baseball captain, too, but I know you don't like baseball, so I'll not pledge there.

I was to tea the day of the tie-up at the Phi Kappa Sigma's. They really aren't so much, tho, Prudence, in spite of their reputation and pedigrees. They say a chap there named Selsam traces his ancestry clear back to the Roman god Janus, and another one, Ludington, descended from Jupiter. But he's not a bit stuck up about it, and he's so popular that they made him cheerleader. Finished up the day at the Lambda Chi Alpha sorority, which people say used to be a good place. They can't make much noise on the campus now because they don't have the men; but—Boy!—in their own house they'd raise the roof unless the neighbors called up at every house dance and in between times to threaten a nuisance suit. Their refreshments were good, tho, and their pin would look great on your blue Normandy voile dress with the white dots on it!

I had a rest on Sunday, as all the frat men were at church and Sunday-school. My! But it felt like a breath of the virgin mountain air to get out of that Greek atmosphere for a little while!

Lunched the next noon with the Phi Kappa Tau's, and heard the debating team practice while I waited for the second table. Bet F. and M. will lose all her debates this year! And then the introductions and shaking of hands. Whew! Mine's still sore since "Dean" Roeder and big Strauss landed on it. I was asked to dinner in the evening at the Paradise Club. What a misnomer! After dinner I was sitting admiring their nice reception room, when one of them tiptoed over and whispered convincingly in my ear, "Come up and see our bathroom!" They just had it remodeled, and now it's the show spot of the house. They're first in scholarship, too, but of course they have a whole bunch of profs on the faculty.

Was at the Phi Sigma Kappa house, or the Five Year Club, for dinner Tuesday. I like those fellows—they seem to be such well-rounded men! And then they had honor enough not to be a party to that filthy Oriflamme election deal that Walburn and Honaman pulled over this Fall. They've just put a pair of the duckiest red and green lights at their front door, too, so they can always tell which side is starboard and which is port when they come back at night.

They say Cap'n Dan's trying to get a pair something like 'em put in down at his landing. He was coming up stream one night under full jib an' mainsail, and was signalling the craft showing these red and green lights that he'd pass her to port, when he came near hitting a reef right abaft her beam, and had to heave to. Maybe he didn't cuss when he found he'd missed his landing and was too far upstream!

I was entertained at the Chi Phi's, too, but I don't think I'd better tell you about them. I must stop now and study, to the end that my Valedictory Address at High School shall not be the last one you shall hear me give. Do write soon to
Your ever faithful
Alex!

October 12,

Darlingest Ted:—

The candles of the night were rapidly disappearing and faint gleams of dawn were streaking up the eastern horizon, when your little Alex, armed with a bucket of flour paste and a belt full of posters, led his triumphal march on Franklin and Marshall.

“Softly and swiftly they put them up—
O, Whose the hideous blunder,
That never a Soph or a cop came near
To spoil their marvellous wonder!”

But, down to earth, Ted, like the chief of the other big march announced, even Inter-class war is Hell! It was all O. K. till we'd planted a poster on Esrey's plate glass. But just then the old tub himself and a big gun-totin' thug of a cop came snooping around the corner, and the cop ran us all down to the cooler. We explained that we weren't rowdies or muckers, but only rollicking college boys bent on upholding the traditions of our Alma Mater, but of course the Chief Minion couldn't savvy that, so it didn't do any good. He thought Alma Mater was one of the college widows! Then we called up the President, but the 'phone didn't answer, so one of my chums rang his pater, who's an undertaker.

He came down in a coupla minutes, and after passing out his cards, bailed us out. But just to show that there wasn't any hard feelings for getting gay with the best families, we stuck a poster on the outside of the station before we left.

In chapel this morning we had one of Dippy's old-fashioned revival services, and it would have been awfully inspiring if the organ hadn't stopped! Oh yes—and Doc Klein met our History class this morning. He recited very entertainingly about the discovery of America, as it was Columbus Day. I'm glad I didn't have to do it, as all I could think about was how I discovered the wading pool in Buchanan Park last night for answering roll call at Mass Meeting for five other Freshmen!

My boy, learn to appreciate your dear mother's cooking while you have a chance! I put a pretty good kink in the bread line down here while I was sponging on the frats the first week—the grub was generally pretty good, what there was of it, or fairly abundant such as it was. But over here in the preachers' mess we get balanced rations—prayers and beans—and if you call a fellow a “poor prune” over here in the dorms, he's liable to knock you for a goal! The first night I ate here I had to get supper down town at a restaurant. You see, “Posey” Scheirer said grace that night, and by the time that was over and I'd opened my eyes, the other birds had cleaned the joint. I don't even shut my eyes in chapel now.

Boy! You ought to see how I've got my room fixed up! It's almost as good as Charlie Meck's—only I don't have quite as many underwear advertisements. I've got a College Avenue car sign, a police standard, the sign I wore on my back hiking to the Penn game, some spiffy Holeproof Hosiery ads, and the football Don Cragin made that kick with in the 1922 Gettysburg game! I bought it from “Stretch” Robb over in the Book Room, so I know it's the real thing. I'm going to get a little “Vic,” too, so I'll be able to drown out the sound of Matternes's violin when I want to study.

Do you remember our Literary Society at High? Man! That's out of it! The ones here do like Prudence's mother at home and set up feeds! Both societies had their opening smokers the same night, and I got three plates of ice cream at each place. I told 'em both I liked their bunch a lot and would probably join there, but that's banana oil! They say you almost have to understand Pennsylvania-German to join the Goetheans, but I haven't found out yet what's wrong with the Diags—except their speaker, Lampe. They had good ice cream, too, at the Porter Sci. smoker tonight. But Prof. Weisgerber spoke—half an hour—advising the men to join Lit and learn how to make a speech. I don't believe that he belonged.

Did I tell you about our pajama parade last Thursday? They made me pass out a whole roll of "programs," but at last I was rescued by a Soph, as I'm being rushed by his house. One woman looked at her program a second, and then remarks icily, "Well, if that's higher education, I want none of it!" Tried to get out of going to gym yesterday on the weak heart excuse, but found 63 others in line ahead of me with the same ailment. Mayser asked if we thought he was as green as we were!

Ted, it's Hell to be green! Don't you ever do it. The second day of school Georgie Thomas and I were sauntering along sort of stuck-up like, I guess, when "Beany" Warner comes along and sings out, "Well, boys, did you get your Phi Beta Kappa keys yet?"

"No," says I, "What's that?"

His physiognomy registered pity. "What's that?" he repeated amazed like. "Didn't you ever hear about Phi Beta Kappa? Why, it's the club everybody belongs to here—like the Houston Club down at Penn! But you've gotta have a key for your locker, so you'd better snap into it and ask the Dean for yours!"

"Thanks for the tip," I says, and we made a dash for the Dean's office. There was an awful mob there, so we had to wait all afternoon, but at last we got to him. I let Georgie talk first.

"Mr. Dean," he says, "I'd like to have my Phi Beta Kappa key right now, before they're all gone." The Dean gurgled sort of funny in his throat, and looked as if his red tie was goin' to fall off. Georgie noted it too, and hastened to reassure him. "Oh, I've got the thirty-five cents deposit fee, all right, sir!" he says.

The Dean looks at his pretty stenog for a minute, and then snaps out kinda severe like, "Bought your dink yet?"

"Yes, sir," says Georgie, sort of scared.

The Dean patted him on the head, and then asks sort of paternal-like, "My boy, d'ye know where Elmer Highberger lives?"

"Yes, sir," says Georgie.

"Well," says he, "I got him an extra big green button for his dink last year. Mebbe he's still got it. You go down and see if he'll sell it for thirty-five cents."

Ta! Ta!

Dear Prudy—

The die is cast! I have become a brother in the bond and entered into the mysteries of Phi Upsilon Kappa! Their badge looks something like an alarm clock key, but I knew you'd rather have me associate with men of purpose than with a bunch of hoodlums whose only beauty lies in a pin! The other frats make their men so petty and clannish that they've almost ruined fairness and real college spirit here; but our purpose is to make all the world our brothers, or as our motto succinctly puts it,

*“ If of daily toil you’re chary,
Come and be a Missionary;
Travel, travel everywhere—
You don’t need to pay the fare!*

And of course I wouldn’t be counted among those unorganized men! They used to be too slow to do anything, but now that they’ve become the tools of Boss Faust, even they are dabbling into politics. (I s’pose the other frats will begin to rush Faust pretty soon!) Another reason for my joining here is because I knew you’d want my pin as soon as possible, and this is the only fraternity that initiates before February. I haven’t seen our lodge house yet, as that’s one of the mysteries we don’t get till after the second degree initiations, but I know it must beat any of the other frat houses I’ve seen! Since I’ve joined here the other frats have cut me like the deuce, but as long as I please you, nothing else matters to me!

Maybe the Dickinson game last week wasn’t a thriller! Right before it began, even Coach Price thought we didn’t have as much chance as a swimmin’ missionary with a hungry shark. But the band needed practice anyway, as usual, so “Red” Knight had ’em play over “F. and M. Will Shine To-Night” a coupla dozen times. And—by gum!—Prudence, we just cleaned Dickinson that afternoon, even if the cheerleaders did lead a “Big Hooray the New Way” so nobody could cheer for laughing!

Yesterday was Poverty Day, when all the Freshmen had to come out in their worst clothes and their best blushes and parade down town. There were prizes, too, for the most immodestly dressed; but of course I didn't win any! And then last Thursday was Colonial Night, so we all went down to the theatre early and ran off a few cheers, after which the applause-starved actors drank their fill for one night. But we paid the penalty—they encored those awful acts! Why, Larry Seaman and Bill Diller made better looking girls in the Diag Mock Trial than any that were in that show!

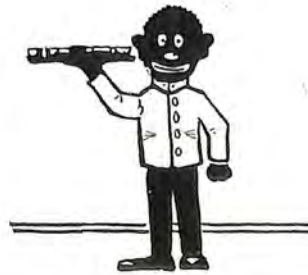

Thanksgiving Day at F. and M., Prudy, is the finest day of all the year—when all the loyal grads come back, Prudy, to help old Franklin and Marshall cheer! I wonder if you'd come, Prudy, to watch that game with me? We'd see a show or dance that night—and Boy! What a great old time there'd be! I've got a big moustache, Prudy, to serve as my disguise, so I can sit with you the entire game—right under the Sophomores' eyes!

Dear Ted—

Say, aren't women funny? Here I've been to college half a year, and I don't understand 'em yet! You see, it was the Junior Hop last night—where you have to go all dolled up in a boiled shirt 'n' everything just like a darkey waiter. Now I like Prudy mighty dern well, but since Thanksgiving I figured she might act kinda green at a swell affair like that, an' not wear the right mesh mosquito bar 'round her neck or cut her mouth with her knife or somethin'. So I makes up my mind last Saturday to go down to Hiemenz' and pick me up a little birdie that's used to that stuff. I sights a lonely little brunette sittin' along the West Side, so I goes up and says sort of sophisticated like, "Say kid, how 'bout it?" She lamped me a second, and then, "Sniff!" she went, "Sniff!" as tho some guy had swiped her last handkerchief, and turns her back. Whereupon I dives for my hat and seeks the cool air of Orange Street! And then those drippy sentimental novels calls 'em the gentle sex! Bah!!

Two Hundred Twenty Seven

But I was already separated from three bucks for my ticket to the Hop, so I says to myself, "Faint heart ne'er won fair lady!" and trots up to the Y. W. a-hummin'! They were having a Paul Jones when I got there, so I jumps in and—by gum—the third time around I finds myself waltzin' with a pretty neat little kid named Helen. So I pops the question.

"Dern tootin'!" she says, with a grin that makes the gold tooth in her upper right shine with ecstasy. "What time?"

"Half-past, sharp," I says, and then I beat it before she could dance with me any longer and have a chance to change her mind. I needed to study that night, anyway, for the Mid-Year exams that started Monday.

Gosh, but those exams had me worried! I thought I'd flunk 'em all, till a Senior over at the frat showed me how to buy adding machine paper and make trots to roll and unroll like the old Roman books. They worked fine!

Oh! And Ted, did I tell you how I was at Literary Society the other week? Man! I never saw anything like it! Pete Noll debates heatedly for four minutes, and then "Chent-le-men," he closes dramatically, "Ven I vas inwited to choin in dis here debate I inwestedigated dis question, und da answer vas ' No.' So I says dat in spide of da ladest oil scandal, dere iss still blenty of good oil in da bowels of Old Mother Earth!! "

But coming back to what these women make you do, Ted—Were you ever in a rented dress suit or a Tux—for the first time? Ah, my boy, then don't do it!

I started to don my armor for the Hop last night at six o'clock—and then was late. First thing, the shirt had no buttons. You're s'posed to have pearl studs, Ted, but I didn't know that. So I had to spend an hour trying to borrow three nickeled collar buttons that I could pass off for platinum studs. By that time it was half-past seven—and the whole hall were peeping in the transom to watch me dress. But I wasn't going to let that fuss me! So I starts to put my suit on as cool as you please, Ted, when—Hell!—that pack outside starts to yell an' guffaw like crazy. That blasted tailor had sent the wrong pants!

That was a heluva note—at this time of day! Well, there I sits starin' at them circus tights, while those cheap skates outside were gettin' my dander up with their wise remarks. But lucky for them—and me, too—all of a sudden they shuts up, an' down the hall we hears someone cussin'—not the flighty way, but powerful, deliberate, an' sonorous! It turns out to be Ralph Leshner tryin' to drape himself in his brother's Jr. Hop pants, which was as much too big as mine were too small. So, Ted, we swapped! Boy, but it was a grand an' glorious feelin'!

Well, I got to Helen's place late, but of course she wasn't ready yet, so her Ma comes in an' grills me for awhile, after which we gets started at last an' walks down to the Stevens House. We coulda walked a lot faster if she hadn't got a jiu-jitsu around my arm, but we wasn't so late after all, as after we'd squeezed all the hands an' mumbled over names to all the chaps in the receiving line, it was only the third dance.

Oh, boy! The orchestra was good, girl good, dancing good—but my gosh those food! How we were rooked! They served us highly seasoned hot water with two spoons. After a while I looks at my girl, as is my custom, an' sees her broth untouched, while she glances covertly at the other tables. "Here," says I, "Use this spoon!" Oh boy! She got red, an' started drinkin' like a revenue officer.

We danced till one o'clock, and mebbe I wasn't dead by that time! And Helen lived 'way out at the other end of town, too. So, when it was all over, I takes her up to the Square, kisses her good-night in front of the Monument, slips a nickel an' a penny in her hand for carfare, and beats it. I thought she was a nice kid then, but when I called up to-night for a date she was sore as all blazes—just because there were no more cars last night an' she had to walk home. I never did think much anyway, Ted, of girls that let you kiss 'em good-night. They remind me of public drinkin' cups.

Dear Prudy—

My exams are all over now, and I'm writing to say I'll be home Wednesday night. Will you come to the train to meet me? Gee! But it'll be good to see you again! I'd like to come home right away, but I don't want to miss the Phi Beta Kappa Oration or the big baseball game right after Commencement, in which they say Bill Lampe and Tom Amelia have been put back at their old places to play grandstand! And then, of course, I want to hear the orations of the Honor men, so I'll know how to talk about democracy, and ideals, and service myself, three years from now.

But in another way, Prudy, I wish I didn't have to come home. The campus is so pretty now, with its big, cool trees full of birds, and those pretty, old buildings that you just grow to like, with the gorgeous crimson sun-sets over those hills to the west as a background! I didn't know enough to appreciate it last fall, Prudy. And then everybody is so nice! Politics and pettiness and ambitions are gone—for the present—and with the old Alumni coming back, you can just feel a new spirit everywhere.

And then at night, Prudy, the fellows gather on the porches of the fraternity houses with their guitars, and sing!—Not like they do at frat parties—this time—but low and sometimes almost plaintive—old songs, Prudy. Just a little while ago it was “ Carry Me Back to Old Virginny ” and “ Aunt Dinah's Quilting Party,” and then they sang about the Billy Goat and the Green, Green Freshmen. I can hear and see it all from my window. And just now a bunch of Seniors—off by themselves, maybe for the last time—started up some more college songs. Oh, it's not just the words, Prudy! It's those haunting tunes—and the way they sing 'em—that gets you! Can't you hear it, Prudy—the tenor and bass and the banjos—

*“ Sing a song of colleges,
I'll tell you where to go,—
F. and M. for learning,
Cornell to learn to row,
Harvard for her foppish dudes,
Princeton for her men,
Yale for her dogged luck,
But for football, F. and M.”*

That's college, Prudy.

Alex.

OLD Benny Franklin talked with Kings—
Such was his fame for knowledge;
So wise promoters used his name
And started Franklin College.

BUT business went to Marshall's school:—
So 'mid some heav'nly verdure
The shades of John and Benny met
And figured out a merger.

FOR thirty years old F. and M.
Wrought living works of fame;
But men passed on, nor mem'ry kept:
So came the Oriflamme.

FOR forty years these books have made
Our college life the wiser:—
For how our funds were gained, read on—
And boost each advertiser!

BARK from the cork oak of Spain, linseed oil pressed from the flaxseed of the Argentine, and burlap woven in Dundee from jute grown in India—come to the Linoleum Plant, across the tracks from Williamson Field.

Many former F. & M. men are employed in testing these materials and combining them with various gums and color pigments to make Armstrong's Linoleum, the comfortable, durable floor for your home or office.

“Hickory Town”

In 1721, the first semblance of what is now Lancaster probably showed itself. The exact date is not known, or long forgotten. The settlement was called “Hickory Town” or “Gibson’s Pasture.” The story that accompanies these two names is that one George Gibson kept a Tavern, in front of which stood an old hickory tree.

From these early beginnings, Lancaster has grown and prospered, living a mass of great history. Many men of fame have trod the streets that are still important in the life of today. Washington, Lafayette, Lincoln—all have visited Lancaster and added lustre to its historical background.

Here are some of the names of men and women who, dwelling in Lancaster County, have grown to make it famous:

General Edward Hand
Robert Fulton
Benjamin West
Simon Cameron
Frederick Muhlenburg
Rebecca Gratz
George Ross

Dr. John W. Nevin
Lloyd Mifflin
Thaddeus Stevens
James Buchanan
Baron Stiegel
Peggy Shippen
Jacob Eichholtz

Today Lancaster is a rising, thriving city of nearly 60,000 population. Its industries are varied and great. It owns:

The largest Linoleum Plant in the world.
The longest Silk Mill in the world.
The oldest Cigar Store in America.
The oldest Hardware Store in America.
The oldest Drug Store and Department Store, in the same family, in America.
The largest Stock Yard east of Chicago.
The largest umbrella factory in the world.

Lancaster is known as

and she lives up to this title, because she produces more agricultural products in proportion to size than any county in America.

Finally, Lancaster is a real HOME city.
