City balks at taping meetings; issue tabled

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

The City of Grosse Pointe is the only one of the Pointes not taping its council meetings. And after a discussion on the subject Monday, it still is the only one of the Pointes not taping meetings.

Councilmember Myrna Smith moved "that all regular and special meetings of the council of the City of Grosse Pointe be tape-recorded by the city clerk and that those tapes be made available to citizens and councilmembers upon request. The tapes will be retained for a minimum of one year."

There was no second to Smith's motion.

Citing the Open Meetings Act, Smith said that meetings should be taped for legal proceedings; an aid to preparing the written minutes of meetings; for council members if they miss a meeting; and for citizen information under the Open Meetings Act.

Smith moved that the budget for the City council chamber renovations include $9,000 for a new sound system.

"There isn't a problem with taping per se," said Mayor Susan Wheeler. "I just don't think we need to keep the tapes for one year."

"We seem to approve everything that will cost the taxpayers money," said councilmember Peter LaFond. "We need to say no somewhere."

Some citizens in the audience wanted to know why the council seemed opposed to taping meetings. They felt the council was using cost as an excuse not to tape meetings.

Wheeler made a motion to tape meetings, as an aid for preparing the written minutes of a meeting, but that the tapes should be kept only until the next meeting when the minutes from the previous meeting are approved by the council.

"We can't compare ourselves with larger communities (who tape their meetings)," said councilmember Joseph Jennings. "Meetings here are atmospherically steeped in tradition. Written minutes have worked well for so long. This is symbolism over substance."

Councilman Dale Scrace echoed Jennings' feelings.

"Taping would add a whole different atmosphere," he said. "There would be procedural issues. It has nothing to do with the Open Meetings Act. It would change the way the City of Grosse Pointe runs its council meetings."

"I don't have a problem with taping, if that's what the people want," said councilmember Stephen Sholty. "But the dollars are another issue."

The motion to table the issue passed 4-3, with Smith, Wheeler, Sholty and Scrace supporting and Jennings, LaFond and Petz opposed.

Farms OKs $8 million budget, millage hike

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

Due to a number of factors, the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council approved an $8 million budget and an increase in the millage to 11.75 ($11.75 per $1,000 state equalized valuation) for the 1994-95 budget.

The 1993-94 millage rate is 10.40.

Excluding funding for the Mack/Moross purchase, the budget actually fell $27,500 to $7,509,710. The 3.36 percent increase in the millage (from 10.40 to 10.75), according to audit and budget chairman Edward J. Gaffney, is necessary to offset the slight drop in the average residential SEV, a loss in revenue from the passage of Proposal A, low interest rates on invested funds and decreased court revenue from lower criminal activity.

The Mack/Moross purchase comprises $515,000 of the 1994-95 budget.

The value of Farms property,

Taxes paid on Farms property, $6,190,000, will fund about 75 percent of the 1994-95 budget.

With a 3.36 percent increase above the current millage, the average homeowner who has not improved his home in 1993 will see a 3-percent increase. With the 1 mill addition for the Mack/Moross purchase, the increase is 12.6 percent.

"The 1994-95 budget calls for a utilization of $163,260 from the fund balance," said Gaffney. "This is a decrease of $71,740 from the current year's utilization of $235,000 to balance the budget and meets one of the goals of reducing reliance on the undesignated fund balance."

Gaffney emphasized that at 11.75, the Farms' millage rate is at least 1.5 mills below the 1993-94 rates of the other Pointes.

Cable is one step closer to rebuild

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Woods' approval of the new cable franchise agreement last week concludes the first stage of a rebuilding process that will bring state-of-the-art cable technology to Grosse Pointe.

The Woods was the last of the five member cities comprising Grosse Pointe Cable to approve a new cable franchise agreement that would expand the number of channels available to cable customers by stringing fiber optic cable.

Fiber optic cable is smaller than standard cable and can carry more television signals. When Grosse Pointe Cable was built, the cable used in the system had a capacity of 35 channels, which in 1979 allowed Grosse Pointers access to virtually every broadcast and cable channel available.

But in the past few years, a number of new cable channels were established, and Grosse Pointe Cable did not have the capacity in its system to offer them to customers.

Grosse Pointe Cable manager Mary Schultz said that the new system will have a capacity of between 60 and 80 channels. The fiber optic system will also allow two-way interactive television.

"We'll have pay-per-view, which we didn't have before," said Schultz. "We'll have new converter boxes, and two-way communications will allow us to add or remove a premium cable channel from the new converter box without having to send over a cable employee."

Schultz said that the cable board has not yet decided what new channels to add. Cable customers who want certain channels to be picked up should send a letter to Grosse Pointe Cable indicating what channels they desire, Schultz said.

"We've had a lot of requests for different channels, including the Catholic channel, The Learning Channel, the Sci-Fi Channel and the Comedy Channel," said Schultz. "We really haven't picked any new channels yet, and we would like to hear from the public."

Schultz said Grosse Pointe Cable is finalizing the purchase of new equipment for the rebuild. Grosse Pointe Cable president John Nicholson said that the rebuild will cost an estimated $6.2 million. He said that the Woods has approved the franchise agreement, the company can proceed with getting a loan to pay for the rebuild.

Nicholson said that he hopes to start laying the new fiber optic cable by Labor Day. It will take between 18 months and two years for every customer in the system to become upgraded. Some areas will receive upgraded service first by virtue of being closer to the rebuild's starting point.

"In the end, we will have a state-of-the-art cable system worth considerably more than it was before," Nicholson said.

Shores officials keep seats unopposed

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

Six percent of Grosse Pointe Shores voters turned out May 17 to re-elect their officials.

With no opposition, Village President John Huettman III, trustees Richard C. Mertz Jr., John F. Monahan, Barbara Willett and James T. Wright and clerk Ronald P. Laskowski were returned to office.

Of the Shores' 2,277 registered voters, 144 showed up at the polls. However, 6 percent is not the lowest turnout for a Shores election.

In 1991, 4.6 percent of Shores voters cast ballots in the council election, also an unopposed contest.

Last year, with one challenger and three incumbents, 12 percent of registered voters turned out.

Huettman, Monahan, Willett and Laskowski all win two-year terms. Wright, who was appointed to the council last year, wins a one-year term.

WE'RE CONCERNED ABOUT YESTERDAY'S NEWS.

News can appear one day and be gone the next. But the paper news is printed on can and should live on.

Last year, more than one third of all U.S. newsprint was recycled. And that number is growing every day.

Recycling is the one way we can all give something back.

Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church on Moross will build two-story addition, enlarging the sanctuary, and will also increase the parking lot size.

5 Pointers file for Kelly's Senate seat

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

Five Grosse Pointe residents are vying for the same $45,450 a year job in Lansing.

State Sen. John Kelly, D-Grosse Pointe Woods, is leaving the 1st District seat he has held since 1978 in hopes of winning the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by Donald Riegle.

Two Democrats, Francis Hathaway and Neil Heffernan, both of Grosse Pointe Shores, and three Republicans, Peter Ecklund of Grosse Pointe Park and Sue Radulovich and Daniel Miller, both of Grosse Pointe Woods, are among nine candidates seeking to represent the Pointes, Harper Woods and part of Detroit in the state Senate.

Hathaway, an investment counselor and broker in Detroit, cites two main issues which have prompted him to run for office: education and crime.

"When you look at the 1st District, you're looking at poor sections and rich sections," he said. "Grosse Pointe has a very good school system, but bringing good education to the Detroit educational system is of great importance. Money and education don't necessarily go hand in hand."

Hathaway's other concern is crime. He and his wife were victims of a robbery and attempted rape.

"I've gone through the system and I know what it's like," he said. "I believe that instead of more prisons, the emphasis should be on prevention. The federal government offers us many programs that we don't take advantage of, and I want to know why."

Heffernan, a Detroit businessman, says that he's moderate to conservative on economic issues and liberal on social matters.

"I want to focus a debate on the real issues in Lansing," he said, "paying close attention to strategies which will revitalize the family and the economy."

Radulovich, an attorney and current Wayne County Community College trustee, waited until the last minute to make sure Kelly would be vacating his state Senate seat.

"There's a need to have a woman's perspective in the state Senate," she said, "especially with Debbie Stabenow (D-Lansing) and Lana Pollack (D-Ann Arbor) running for other offices."

"It's a travesty that the women of Michigan are not represented in the state Senate."

Radulovich is optimistic that a Republican can win the seat Kelly has held for 16 years.

"I'll concede that it's a Democratic district, but I think that a Republican woman has the best shot at winning the position," she said.

"Most of the ideas of the Republican Party, such as family

G.P. United Methodist gets OK for $2 million expansion

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

A two-story addition, new choir practice room, new fellowship hall and an enlargement of the sanctuary will all be part of Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church's expansion plans.

The Grosse Pointe Farms City Council last week approved the site plan allowing the church to make the additions and increase parking by more than 100 spaces.

"We've been struggling with this for about 10 years," said the church building committee's Chuck Veenstra explaining the expansion. "There's not enough room in the sanctuary."

Expansion of the sanctuary will provide seating for at least 60 and up to 90 additional people.

"Our dream is to build a larger sanctuary," he said. "We started to raise funds years ago for a new sanctuary addition on the northeast side of the church, but it would have cost between $3 million and $4 million. So, we decided to expand the present sanctuary."

The parking lot will expand to the east and south to hold 238 vehicles. Presently, there are 135 spaces.

Since construction vehicles will be using the west entrance, the east entrance will have a split configuration, with landscaping added, to accommodate entering and exiting vehicles.

Construction will not interfere with regular church services.

"We plan to have a full program during the construction," Veenstra said. The total cost of the project, including parking lot expansion, will be just under $2 million, Veenstra said. The project was originally estimated to cost $1.4 million, but some of the classrooms needed renovations, he said.

"We hope to start construction in September and finish by next summer," Veenstra said. "Our 50th anniversary is in September 1995. It should be completed by then."

and domestic issues and job opportunities, are supported by women."

Ecklund, an attorney in Grosse Pointe Farms, is also seeking the Republican nomination.

"Getting involved in the community is something I've always wanted to do," Ecklund said. "I think Grosse Pointe has a unique opportunity to have a say in state government in addition to (Rep.) Bill Bryant."

Ecklund said he has ideas concerning education and welfare reform.

"I think my message is one people want to hear," he said.

Miller is a bookstore supervisor.

"I'm just a citizen who decided that instead of writing a letter to the editor of a newspaper or venting my frustrations to my friends I would get involved and try to change things," he said. "Members of each level of government are so detached. We need the input of regular citizens."

Miller, a conservative, feels that opinions on the left are heard much louder than those on the right.

"I would like to be a voice of the silent majority, as Richard Nixon called it," Miller said.

Corrections

Corrections will be printed on this page every week. If there is an error of fact in any story, call the newsroom at 882-0294.

A recent article about the Junior League of Detroit's Designers' Show House should have said that the house will be closed Memorial Day.

A picture on the business page last week should have identified the business in question as Artona's in the City of Grosse Pointe.

An article in the Entertainment section last week should have identified the winner of a Grosse Pointe Theatre scholarship as Patrick Moltane.

The front-page caption last week announcing "A Very Merry Unbirthday Party in Wonderland" at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial should have said the event is on Thursday, May 26.

Commissioner Richner runs again

Andrew Richner, Wayne County commissioner, R-1st District, will try to retain his seat on the commission; however, he said he did think about running for Kelly's seat in the state Senate.

"I considered it until the last minute," Richner said, "but it was a family decision. It meant being up in Lansing three or four times a week."

He chose, instead, to seek a second term on the Wayne County board.

"This is a great position," Richner said of his county commissioner job. "I can still have an impact in the state Legislature from here by recommending legislation and lobbying to get it passed."

He said he wants to complete unfinished business and keep the commission's 1st District a Republican seat.

"I think we need the two-party system in Wayne County," said Richner, one of two Republicans out of 15 members on the board of commissioners.

Shores navigator recalls German raids, going down twice

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

The fighters never got to us," said Peter Kernan, of his B-27 raids over Germany, "but the flak was unbearable."

On New Year's Eve 1944, the Shores resident's plane was hit during a bombing run over Mannheim. The two left engines were out, forcing the plane to head toward friendly territory in which to land.

"We found a tiny airfield in Brussels, but there was a plane parked directly in front of our path," he said. "I sat tight waiting to crash, but just as we were almost on top of the plane, it took off."

That was his first combat mission.

Kernan graduated from high school in South Orange, N.J., in 1942, and when he turned 18 that December, enlisted in the Army in Newark.

He flunked the colorblind test and was denied enlistment.

He went back to work at Brewster Aeronautical, where he had taken a job following high school. On a visit to the company nurse, she showed him the color chart, the same chart the recruiter used, and he memorized the numbers 89, 43, 56, 27.

"I went back to a different doctor at the recruiting station," Kernan said. "When he asked if I was colorblind, I said, 'Not me. 89, 43, 56, 27.' I passed."

Kernan went to Jefferson Barricks, Mo., for basic training in May 1943, then to Cleveland for College Training Detachment (CTD). He then went to San Antonio, Texas, to an aviation classification center at the end of September.

"I asked a buddy of mine about the colorblind test and he told me there was nothing to it," Kernan said. "They (the personnel) took the pages and rearranged them on the table. I flunked."

His high grades and test scores enabled him to receive a waiver on the colorblind test.

After navigation school, proficiency, gunnery and crew training, Kernan left Goose Bay, Labrador, for Valley, Wales, using celestial navigation because the Germans could intercept radio transmissions.

Kernan went from Valley to Stone, England, and eventually to Kimbolton in December 1944, during the time of the Battle of the Bulge, where he joined the 8th Air Force, 379th Bomb Group.

After being forced down during his first mission, Kernan anticipated receiving a three-day pass in England. Instead, he was told by his colonel, "breakfast at 4 a.m. Briefing at 5 a.m." that Saturday morning.

That day, Kernan's bombardier was injured, but was told he must fly on the mission to Mannheim anyway. He asked for Kernan's help toggling the bombs.

"All of a sudden, pow!" Kernan said. "A piece of flak came through. Lucky for me, it hit a plastic gun handle, which hit me in the arm. I had been hit by a baseball before, but I'd never felt such an impact. I was looking for the blood. I had no blood. No Purple Heart."

Kernan was to fly to the same target for the third consecutive Saturday, one of eight missions during January 1945, but the weather was horrendous, he said. Upon returning to England, the weather affected the landing and the crew was grounded for about a week.

Kernan flew seven missions in February and nine in March.

His last mission was on March 18.

"If you think about the Thanksgiving Day parade, that's what the 8th Air Force was like that day," Kernan said. "Group after group after group hammering Berlin."

Kernan's plane was in the first group of the parade.

After dropping its bombs, the B17 pulled away and soon lost engine No. 1 as result of flak fire.

"I thought, if we fell back, no one would bother us," he said. "We had dropped our bombs. Why would anyone pick on us?"

Then a sharpshooter took out the number four engine.

"We were over the Ruhr Valley, where there were 1,080 flak guns," Kernan said. "The alternatives were to try to cross Holland and go back to the U.K., with a 100 mph wind in our face, or go east to Poland."

By this time, the Russian were about 30 miles from Berlin, he said. Allies did not want to parachute over Germany because the German teen-agers were ruthless when they captured Allied soldiers.

"It was my decision, the 30 longest seconds of my life," Kernan said. "We went east and some of the P51s went with us."

(Kernan would learn later that the crew that replaced his group was shot down by the Germans the next day. The decision to head east was a wise one.)

The plane had two engines and they tried to minimize the weight.

"We threw everything out," he said, "and we used chisels to get rid of the ball turret. All of a sudden, the ball turret dropped and the plane shot back up."

Soon after, some fighter planes, Russian Yaks, pulled up alongside Kernan's plane.

"They were about to shoot us down until they saw the star on the plane," he said. "They led us into a Russian fighter base."

The base was located in Bromberg, Poland. The Russians hosted the American crew for five days and gave them a banquet.

"They were gracious," Kernan said, "but they knew nothing about what was happening in the rest of Europe as far as the war was concerned."

An American C47 transport plane dropped in at the base and took Kernan and his crew to Poltaba, a communications set up in the Ukraine.

"There was an intelligence network set up there," he said. "Poltaba was also an air base for B17s and B24s."

Kernan explained that Allied planes would take off from England, bomb Germany and continue east to Poltaba. Then they would load up with fuel and bombs, head west, hitting targets in Romania or someplace in the vicinity, and continue to Italy. There they would load up again with fuel and bombs, hit Germany, and return to England.

Poltaba, it was thought, was a secret to the Germans. But one night before Kernan's arrival, the Germans wiped out 39 B17s at the base.

"It wasn't publicized because it was an embarrassment," he said. "But that was the end of the triangular fighting."

Kernan and his crew were scheduled to leave for Italy on their way back to England on March 26, but they had to wait a month.

"An American pilot in Poland had picked up a Polish hitchhiker and taken him to Poltaba," Kernan said. "The Russians didn't like the hitchhiker and they told us that no one could leave Poltaba until further notice."

The U.S. pilot was court-martialed and sent to Moscow to stand trial. Once the Russians were satisfied that everything was in order, they allowed the Americans to leave Poltaba.

"Our pilots were mad," Kernan said. "They buzzed that airfield. The prop was cutting the grass."

Finally, Kernan and his crew took off for Bari, Italy, flying below 10,000 feet because they had no oxygen.

The pilot, Slim Abbott, had to fly higher to escape the bad weather. This move resulted in one engine conking out, which affected the compass, and the co-pilot passing out.

Kernan navigated by DED (deduced) reckoning.

"We were about 125 miles off course near Greece," Kernan said.

They had the plane fixed once they arrived in Bari. They flew to Marsailles, France, and then began the trip back to England.

Since the journey was not mapped out, and since the weather was clear, Kernan suggested following the Rhone River home.

"We got to Dijon and I gave Slim a heading toward Paris," Kernan said. "I used the G-Box (short range radar) and set it for the Eiffel Tower."

The weather turned bad as they neared Paris.

"I looked down and we were right over the Eiffel Tower," he said.

Peter J. Kernan Jr., November, 1944.

Kernan said that his last mission lasted 40 days and 40 nights.

"We were missing all of that time," he said. "An MIA (missing in action) report went to my parents, but I sent a letter from Poltaba, which arrived home first."

Kernan arrived home on July 25, 1945, the day a B25 crashed into the Empire State Building.

He enrolled at the University of Notre Dame, graduating with an engineering degree in 1949, and moved to the Detroit area after taking a job with the Ford Motor Co.

Since his retirement three years ago, Kernan has been active as the chairman of the Stewards for Tomorrow at St. Paul Catholic Church, a $100 million endowment program through the archdiocese.

The 379th Bomb Group will hold a reunion from Sept. 7-11 in Nashville, Tenn.

Hummingbirds due

One of the most fascinating birds to visit our yards is the ruby-throated hummingbird.

Some interesting facts about these hummingbirds:

- Their wings beat 80 times per second.
- They can fly straight up or down, side to side, forward and backward.
- Five hummingbirds equal the weight of one chickadee.
- Their flight muscles are 1/3 of their body weight.
- They can complete their migrational journey from this area to the southern United States (or vice versa) in as little as 20 hours.

Hummingbirds occur only in the western hemisphere. Of the 320 species of hummingbirds, the ruby throated hummingbird is the only species found in North America east of the Mississippi River. This welcome visitor returns to our yards in May, following the bloom of flowers from the south to the north. Since their arrival is dependent upon flowers, the exact date they arrive varies.

How do you attract hummingbirds to your yard? Large areas of red flowers is the surest way. Some of their favorite flowers are cardinal flower, bee balm, trumpet creeper, columbine, fuschia, salvia and impatiens. The more flowers you plant, the more likely a hummingbird will notice your yard. This attraction to the color red is the reason why commercial nectar feeders have red parts.

If you want to offer nectar to hummingbirds in a feeder, you should start out with a small feeder. The nectar should be used up between cleanings. Hummingbird feeders should be cleaned every two to five days depending on weather conditions. If the nectar solution is left in the feeder for too long, it may begin to ferment or bacteria could form. A hummingbird feeder should be easy to take apart and clean. Place the feeder in close proximity to the flowers that you have planted, and preferably in the shade and out of a windy area. Commercial nectars should be avoided if they contain red dye. The dye may be harmful to hummingbirds because of their high metabolic rate. A simple solution of one part table sugar to four parts water is closest to natural nectar. Boil the water and add it to the sugar, mixing it so that the sugar dissolves. If you boil the solution for any length of time the sugar will concentrate beyond the desirable range. Store any unused nectar in the refrigerator. Honey should not be used.

Rosann Kovalcik
Wild Birds Unlimited

If ants become a problem on the feeder, use a commercial ant trap hung above the feeder or coat the wire that holds the feeder with oil or petroleum jelly. The same substances can be rubbed around the feeder holes if bees become a problem.

Nesting hummingbirds use spider webs, lichens and moss to construct their nests. Their diet is greatly supplemented with insects during the nesting season. Be careful to offer a pesticide free yard — the concentration of chemicals in young hummingbirds could prove to be fatal.

Perhaps the iridescent color on a hummingbird is one of its most striking features. With its metallic green body and red throat, no other bird can catch the sun and throw it back to us in quite the same way.

If the shoe fits — it was probably bought at Village Shoes

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

This shop aims to make sure its customers are all well heeled and have a lot of sole. Village Shoes has been in business since 1977 meeting the needs of Grosse Pointers.

"At the time the store opened it was one of three shoe stores in the Village," said store co-owner Don Sullivan. "There was a store on the Hill, and several on Mack. But right now this is the only shoe store left in Grosse Pointe."

Sullivan was quick to point out that several stores like Jacobson's and Hickey's sell shoes, but that's just one item among many. His is the only store that specializes in shoes.

"The last three years have been difficult for retailers," said Dan Sullivan, Don's son and store co-owner. "The situation has started to improve in just the past six months. Our landlord stood by us during the hard times and made it possible for us to remain in Grosse Pointe. People go the the malls to buy shoes, they come here for the service."

Service, said Don Sullivan, is the key reason why he has stayed in business. People come to the Village to get the kind of service they can't get at places like Eastland. In addition to selling shoes, he dyes shoes and laces baseball mitts.

"I know my customers and they know me," Sullivan said. "We often get calls from busy parents who tell us they are sending over their children to buy a pair of shoes. They know their kids won't come back with a $1,000 pair of shoes or something too outrageous. Personalized service, that's what it's all about. People like long-time employee Lynn Sittaro make that possible."

In an effort to stay competitive with large shoe chains, the store has added a number of lines of shoes that customers have asked for, like Teva sandals, New Balance and Asics athletic shoes, Keds athletic shoes and women's Vaneli dress shoes, as well as many other different brands.

Tammy St. Pierre, who is Sullivan's daughter and also works at the store, noted that men and women have different styles of shopping for shoes, and the store has to keep that in mind when determining stock.

"Men come in the store and get exactly what they are looking for," said St. Pierre. "Women often come in with no preset idea of what they want. Women browse more. If men don't find exactly what they are looking for, they will leave and check somewhere else. Women, if they don't see what they want, will pick something very similar. Men tend not to do that."

Holding no firm theories on why this is so, St. Pierre did note that women's shoes come in a greater variety of styles, colors and heel lengths. Men's shoes, she said, tend to come in a very limited number of styles, and usually just two colors — black or brown.

A recent trend in footwear is sandals, said Sullivan. Like 20 years ago, sandals are very popular, but today's sandals are very different from the ones of 20 years ago, he said.

"Today's sandals are often not made of leather, they are made of synthetic materials designed to go under water," Sullivan said. "They also have, instead of buckles, Velcro straps, making them much easier to use. I've even seen kids wear sandals in the winter."

In addition to selling shoes, Sullivan also sells a number of shoe polishes and shoe preservers. The products work and Sullivan recommends their use on expensive shoes.

"Polish and the like protect the shoe by keeping moisture in the leather," said Sullivan. "When leather dries out, it cracks and splits open. By polishing the shoe or using mink oil on it, a person can really add life to a shoe."

Park council chilly to ice cream shop request

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

When Vanna DeDonna came to the Grosse Pointe Park City Council for a parking variance seeking her proposed ice cream store/card shop, she never expected to be quizzed on school children or store hours.

DeDonna, a Warren high school counselor, has been planning for the past several months to open a store at 15304 Kercheval that will sell soft ice cream in one section and greeting cards in another section. When she presented her site plan to Park inspectors, she was told that she would have to get a parking variance.

City regulations require a certain number of parking spaces per square feet for retail shops. DeDonna's plan indicated that she would be three parking spots short of what the city requires for a store of the size she is proposing.

The business that occupied the building DeDonna wants to lease was formerly a plumbing supply store, said landlord Jon Velick. He felt that when it came time to renew the lease, the neighborhood would be better served by a business meeting the city's zoning ordinance. The plumbing shop was operating under "grandfather" protection.

Velick told the council that he and DeDonna have spent a lot of money fixing up the building, and urged the council to grant the variance.

But several councilmembers had questions. Councilmember Valerie Moran asked DeDonna what her hours would be. Mayor Palmer Heenan asked if DeDonna knew anything about ice cream stores across from South High School. He understood that City police had trouble with students hanging out there.

"I work at Pierce," said Moran. "I spoke with several teachers there, and they are concerned about an ice cream shop being so near a school. Your proposed location is also near Defer, which doubles the problem. Will you be open during school hours?"

Heenan and councilmember Dan Clark expressed great concern about traffic problems. They noted that traffic around the two schools is very heavy, especially when school lets out. They both are worried that an ice cream shop would be an attractive nuisance for children and could lead to pedestrian/automobile accidents.

DeDonna, for her part, expressed surprise at the council's questions.

"I came here to discuss parking," said DeDonna. "I am unprepared to talk about store hours or traffic problems. When I asked if I could open a shop, I was told there would be no problem. Now I come before the council, and am asked about traffic and public safety. I feel there has been a breakdown in communication."

City manager Dale Krajniak told the council that while an ice cream shop is allowed under ordinances, the city did not see DeDonna's site plan until a few weeks ago. He said it was then that the city discovered the lack of parking.

Mayor Heenan said it's the council's responsibility to ask the questions it posed Monday.

"We will not act in haste and repent at leisure," Heenan said. "It's our job to make sure that this shop won't disrupt the neighborhood, and that's what we are doing. No one should take for granted what the council will do."

DeDonna asked if she could open the card portion of the shop. City attorney Herold Deason said she could, but if she wanted to open the ice cream section of the store at a later date, she would still need a parking variance. The ice cream portion of the store would add square footage, and require three additional parking spaces as set forth by city ordinances.

The council tabled DeDonna's parking variance request, and asked her to consult with the public safety department over traffic and safety, and to have more details about the store's operation when the issue comes before the council again. No date has been set at this time for another review of the issue.

School board appointed library panel called best for all concerned

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Although the proposed district library for Grosse Pointe also will serve a portion of Harper Woods, officials in that city had little to do with the selection of the new seven-member board which will govern the new library.

The board of library trustees was appointed earlier this month by members of the Grosse Pointe school board. Should the proposed agreement between Grosse Pointe public schools and the City of Harper Woods be approved, the panel of representatives of the six communities involved will serve two and four year terms.

The agreement calls for the school board to continue appointing library board members when terms expire.

And the arrangement seems to please all parties involved. Harper Woods Mayor James Haley was the only public official who expressed any concern over the arrangement.

"I thought the school board wanted to get out of the library business," Haley said. "I don't really understand how they get to be the deciding board. If they are the appointing board then they are the governing board."

Although Haley said he was expressing a personal opinion and not that of the city, he also noted that he is fully supportive of the proposed district library. The plan calls for the establishment of a library district within the boundaries of the Grosse Pointe Public School System, comprising all five Pointes and approximately a third of Harper Woods.

The district library would become a separate entity governed by the library board of trustees, and would no longer be funded and operated by the Grosse Pointe public schools. The library district would serve a population of 55,555 (5,456 of those people residing in Harper Woods).

Michigan's district library establishment act of 1989 allows two or more municipalities (a school district in this case is considered a municipality) to join together to form a district library.

District library law allows a board to be either elected or appointed.

"Every district has the right to decide what type of board they will have, and if that board is appointed, how that board will be appointed," said Ruth Dukelow, library establishment specialist with the Library of Michigan in Lansing.

Two other communities in the metro-Detroit area recently established district library systems and both opted for an appointed board of library trustees.

In Mount Clemens, the Mount Clemens Community Schools and the City of Mount Clemens established a district library on April 4. The library district retains the same boundaries as it did when it was funded and governed by the school district and serves a population of 18,405.

The Mount Clemens district library board is a seven-member panel. Three members were appointed by the school board, three were appointed by the city commission and the six new members appointed a seventh, said Donald Worrell, library director.

"We had a precedent for that system of appointment," Worrell said. "I also operate the local cable television network and our cable commission was comprised the same way. It seemed to be a fair way to constitute such a board."

On March 1, the Bacon Memorial District Library in Wyandotte became the first district library formed between a public school system and a city, said Barbara Wallace, director of library services at Bacon Memorial.

Like Mount Clemens, Wyandotte's library and school system shared identical boundaries and served the same population — in this case 30,825 people.

The Bacon library has a five-member board. Two members are appointed by the city, two are appointed by the school district and one is appointed by the four other board members, Wallace said.

Although this system seems like the fairest way to go for Mount Clemens and Wyandotte, Harper Woods city manager James Leidlein said it wouldn't work with the Grosse Pointes-Harper Woods arrangement.

"If Harper Woods had direct involvement, then the other five (Pointes) might object as to why they didn't have direct involvement," Leidlein said. "With the school board selecting (the library board), they serve to represent all cities within the school district."

Grosse Pointe schools superintendent Ed Shine reiterated the same point and noted that the Grosse Pointe Public School System was the initiating municipality in the proposed agreement.

"This was not even an issue that anyone raised in our dealings with the Harper Woods city council and library," said Doug West, legal counsel to the Grosse Pointe schools. "It is not an accurate statement to say that Harper Woods did not have an input in the decision. They didn't raise the issue.

Their important issue was having representation on the board."

Harper Woods city and library officials agreed to the plan with the condition that the board be appointed rather than elected, with representatives from each of the participating communities on the board.

Although the proposed district library agreement is not worded to include provisions for future boards to be elected at large, West said the agreement certainly could be modified to allow for an elected board.

West also added that it made sense that the Grosse Pointe school board be the appointing body rather than Harper Woods, which has only a small portion of its constituency within the district.

If the Harper Woods and Grosse Pointe libraries were to merge someday, West said it would be appropriate for an at-large election because the proportion of Harper Woods residents who would vote in the election would be such that it would give Harper Woods a good opportunity to elect a board member.

New teachers' union chief takes over at a crucial time

By Kathleen Ryan
Special Writer

Lynn O'Connor hopes the only rough waters she experiences this summer are when she's sailing on Lake Huron.

As the new president of the Grosse Pointe Education Association (GPEA), the local union for teachers, O'Connor begins her tenure at a time of major transitions in education at both the local and state levels.

"The result of the buyout plan is that we will have over 100 new teachers coming into the district," O'Connor said. "We'll be negotiating a new contract. And we still don't understand the full implications of Proposal A."

"Needless to say, I'm going to be very busy."

O'Connor will bring over 30 years of social work experience to her new position, which she sees as a definite asset.

"My whole professional life has been spent dealing with problems," she said. "I know I'll be able to put my social work training to good use in this position."

O'Connor joined the Grosse Pointe schools 27 years ago as a school social worker with little interest in union activities.

"I didn't think I needed a union then," she said. "I was good at what I did and didn't feel that I needed any kind of union protection."

But her involvement as a

parent and community member in the proposed school closings began to cloud her professional life.

"I found that as long as I followed the same message as the board that I was safe," she said. "But because I was opposed to the closings I began to have problems. I was made to feel uncomfortable by some of the principals in the buildings I worked in."

Then O'Connor was reassigned to South High School.

"I really wanted the position at South," O'Connor said. "But then a new director of special education services came in and assigned another person to the South position, someone who was not a certified school social worker, which is a legal certification. The person was not legally qualified for the position."

"That radicalized me."

The case went to arbitration, with O'Connor and the union eventually winning. It also began her GPEA commitment.

Her first position was with the negotiating team, on which she has stayed through four contracts.

Her most recent position has been vice president for professional rights and responsibilities, which handles members' grievances. "This is really where I've been able to use my social work training," O'Connor said. "So often these grievances grow out of misunderstandings and personality conflicts and can easily be resolved by sitting both sides down and talking about the problem."

"The best labor relations occur when you can settle the problem at the lowest possible step, which is the building level with the principal and the teacher calmly discussing the issues."

The GPEA has 540 members, and includes teachers, school social workers, school psychologists and librarians. District employees are not required to join the GPEA, but non-members must pay a representational fee to the association. O'Connor will retain her school system salary during her two-year term as full-time GPEA president. She replaces Tom Whall, who is retiring.

O'Connor's new title will make for an interesting home life as well.

Her husband, William, is a labor attorney for management at Blue Cross and Blue Shield.

"One of the reasons we get along so well is that we agree

Lynn O'Connor, a social worker with the Grosse Pointe Public School System, has taken over as the new boss of the Grosse Pointe Education Association.

more than we disagree," O'Connor said with a laugh. "We've found so many shared interests."

One of those interests is sailing and O'Connor looks forward to cruising Lake Huron this summer. An avid skipper, O'Connor has also taught sailing at the Detroit Yacht Club.

But charting a course for the GPEA has most of O'Connor's attention now.

"I don't think there will be a more critical time for the superintendent, the board, and the union to work together," she said. "I'd like to see all of us work to develop a win-win situation for all."

"We have just a little over five years before we move into the next century. We really must work together."

Public safety reports

She said he had a gun

A 19-year-old Detroit woman told Grosse Pointe Farms police that a man pointed a gun at her on May 21 as she was leaving a party on Kenwood.

The homeowner on Kenwood apparently was having a problem with unwanted guests and was turning away a number of people who showed up at her door. Among those being turned away was the Detroit woman and a carload of teenage boys.

Farms police were called to Kenwood on a complaint of heavy traffic and were flagged down by the Detroit woman. She said a boy driving a red Pontiac Grand Prix pulled his car next to her, pointed a blue-steel revolver at her and said, "Are you afraid of this?" and then drove away.

Farms police were unable to locate the alleged gunman or anyone else who had witnessed the incident.

Unlucky day at the station

A 42-year-old Detroit man might have been in less trouble had he kept calm while being interviewed by Grosse Pointe Farms police detectives on May 18.

The man contacted Farms police after he realized his truck had been stolen and was told by Detroit police that it was impounded by Farms police.

Detective Mike McCarthy said the man was told he could get his truck back if he came into the station and answered a few questions. The man's truck was involved in a high-speed chase with three police departments on May 15 and despite intensive efforts, the driver was never found.

When questioned by Farms detectives, the man allegedly became infuriated and refused to answer questions, McCarthy said. Detectives ran a background check on the truck owner and found he had several outstanding arrest warrants from Fraser and Detroit police departments and had a suspended driver's license.

When asked how he got to the station, the man said he had his motorcycle parked in front of the station. When detectives went outside to look at it, they saw it had expired plates and was registered to another person. The man was arrested and held on $600 bond and later turned over to Fraser police.

Stolen bike recovered

While responding to a complaint of suspicious acting teenagers gathering in the 1000 block of Berkshire on May 13, Grosse Pointe Park police saw a young man riding a bicycle that fit the description of a bicycle that had been reported stolen earlier that day.

Police confiscated the bicycle, which was determined to be the one taken while its owner was inside a store at Fairfax and Beaconsfield. The suspect was questioned and released while the case is reviewed by the Park City attorney for possible charges against him.

Elusive driver collared by cops

Grosse Pointe Park police arrested a Detroit man on May 14 after he led officers on a chase down Alter Road rather than comply with a routine traffic stop.

Patrol officers stopped the motorist at Alter and Mack for speeding. As officers approached the car on foot, the driver suddenly drove away. The chase down Alter ended when the driver lost control of his car and jumped out at Korte. After a brief search of the neighborhood, the man was found hiding in a rear yard on Barrington.

Park police detective Lt. David Hiller said the man is expected to be charged with speeding, driving with a suspended license and fleeing and eluding police.

Hide and seek — he's under arrest

A man wandering the Jefferson and Harvard neighborhood all night on May 16 made residents uneasy and they called Grosse Pointe Park police to complain.

When officers responded to the calls and began questioning the man, he fled on foot through the neighborhood.

Park police looked for the man for more than two hours and located him hiding in the area of Mack and Harvard. He was arrested at 3 a.m. May 17. Police learned he was wanted on two warrants by Detroit police and had violated his parole.

Park police turned the man over to Detroit police and are seeking charges of resisting and obstructing police.

Local dignitaries received with honors and nursing home staff at St. John-Bon Secours Senior Community Center in Detroit. Officials include Fremman Hendrix, chief of staff, City of Detroit; Ted Wahby, mayor, St. Clair Shores; Rose Collins, from the office of state Sen. John Kelly; Susan Wheeler, mayor, City of Grosse Pointe; Eric Steiner, council member, Grosse Pointe Woods; Robert Nugent, chairman, board of trustees, Senior Community; Judith Smith, chief executive officer, Senior Community; and Pansy Hairston, of the office of Wayne County Commissioner Bernard Parker.

75 athletes vie in Senior Olympics

More than 75 seniors from area nursing homes proved to be spirited competitors during the fifth annual Senior Olympics, hosted this year by St. John-Bon Secours Senior Community. Seniors tested their skills at jarts, ring toss, basketball and other games.

The May 13 event capped a weeklong celebration to commemorate Nursing Home Week (May 8-14).

More than a dozen trophies were awarded to winners from Bon Secours Nursing Home in St. Clair Shores, St. Joseph's Home for the Aged in Detroit, Henry Ford Belmont Center in Harper Woods and the Senior Community in Detroit.

Senior "olympians," nursing home staff and public officials attended a barbecue luncheon to kick off Senior Olympics. Special guests included Fremman Hendrix, chief of staff, City of Detroit; Susan Wheeler, mayor, City of Grosse Pointe; Ted Wahby, St. Clair Shores mayor; Eric Steiner, Grosse Pointe Woods council member; Rose Collins, from the office of state Sen. John Kelly; Pansy Hairston, from the office of Wayne County Commissioner Bernard Parker and Robert Nugent, chairman, board of trustees, St. John-Bon Secours Senior Community.

In a brief address, Hendrix praised the efforts of the Senior Community and said the Archer administration wanted to "get things pointed in the right direction" by getting acquainted with mayors from the east side.

The Senior Community was honored with official documents from the Michigan House of Representatives, City of Detroit and Wayne County commissioners. A special tribute to the State House of Representatives stated, "... it is with great respect and appreciation for their effectiveness in providing exceptional nursing care and assisted living to seniors that we are proud to commend the management, staff and volunteers of St. John-Bon Secours Senior Community."

Senior Community chief executive officer Judith Smith said, "We will reflect on those words as we go about the daily care of the elderly."

The Senior Community is a collaborative effort of the Sisters of St. Joseph and Sisters of Bon Secours. Founded in 1988, it provides residential care, assisted care and nursing care for up to 250 residents, many of whom are from the Grosse Pointes, St. Clair Shores, Harper Woods and other area suburbs.

2 outstanding senior citizens sought

The Michigan Office of Services for the Aging (OSA), in conjunction with the Michigan State Fair, has begun its search for two outstanding Michigan senior citizens — one in the area of service and one in the area of leadership — to be nominated for selection as 1994 Senior Citizens of the Year.

Strong personal commitment to helping others and evidence of that commitment are the most important considerations, said OSA director Diane K. Braunstein.

"Helping others is one of life's most enriching experiences. We know there are thousands of older Michiganders who help run senior programs, provide consultation and leadership through committees and policy boards, or actually deliver services," Braunstein said. "They may be eligible for special recognition."

The two older adults selected for this award will be honored at a ceremony at the Michigan State Fair on Aug. 29, Senior Citizens Day. In addition to state recognition, Consumers Power Company will underwrite a cash award to the winners. This is the third consecutive year Consumers Power has participated.

The person to be nominated must be age 60 or older as of Aug. 5, 1994, may not be nominated for providing service in paid position, and may not be member of the State commission or Advisory Council on Aging or an employee of the Michigan Office of Services for the Aging or the Michigan State Fair.

Nominations will be accepted from organizations only and must be signed by the organization's presiding officer. Applications provided by OSA must be used. Copies of nomination applications (OSA Report -300) can be obtained by contacting OSA at (517)373-8230.

The deadline for nominations is Aug. 5. Completed applications should be sent to the Michigan Office of Services for the Aging, Senior Citizen of the Year Award, P.O. Box 30026, Lansing, Mich. 48909. Questions about the award should be addressed to Linda Kimball at (517)373-8230.

Library caters

to senior readers

May is senior citizen month and in celebration of that the Grosse Pointe Public Library invites seniors and other adults to become acquainted with services of special interest to them.

The Outreach Program, designed to meet the needs of adults outside the library walls, was begun by Helen Leonard in 1973. Leonard, a certified specialist in gerontology, launched several initiatives to meet the informational and leisure reading needs of the adult community.

Currently, the library provides video programs for the seniors in the Food and Friendship Program at Barnes School each Monday morning, September through June. A Great Books group meets monthly at Central Library and another group meets weekly at the Neighborhood Club to discuss the humanities.

Monthly discussion of notable books takes place at two sites, Barnes school and the Park Branch. The Friends of the Library provide paperbound copies for this program.

At the Institute of Ophthalmology, Leonard also leads a monthly discussion following meetings of the Friends of Vision support group. The theme for this year is humor in literature.

The library also works closely with local organizations to network information about available resources in the community, frequently targeting the informational needs of older citizens. There is active linking between visually impaired residents of Grosse Pointe and the Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped. The library holds at its three branches a fine collection of large print books and at central, a visual magnifier and a Telephone Device for the Deaf.

For information on programs or services, call 343-2076.

Education — Alzheimer's protection?

It is too early to tell if higher education levels can protect against Alzheimer's disease, as suggested in a new study published in this week's Journal of the American Medical Association.

Senior Community volunteers needed

Volunteers are urgently needed at St. John-Bon Secours Senior Community. The greatest need is for volunteers at the gift shop, which sells ice cream, snacks and crafts made by residents.

Those interested are invited to attend a meeting on Thursday, June 2, at 4 p.m. The meeting will be held at the Senior Community, located at 18300 E. Warren, east of Cadieux. Parking is adjacent to the center, with an entrance off Warren Ave. Refreshments will be served. RSVP by May 31 by calling Debbie at 343-8000.

For more information, contact volunteer coordinator Frank Guns at 343-8264.

tion, according to the Alzheimer's Association.

"We are concerned that people might oversimplify the research findings and conclude that 'use-it-or-lose-it' is the best defense against Alzheimer's disease," said Dian Wilkins, president of the local association. "Education level probably does not affect whether someone will get Alzheimer's disease, but may have an impact on when symptoms are detected."

The researchers studied 593 individuals over the age of 60 over a period of four years, and categorized them by education level. People with the highest education level were found to be the least likely to be diagnosed with dementia. The researchers propose two possible explanations:

1) That more educated people perform better on tests of intellectual ability than people with lower educational level, and thus are not as easily identified as having Alzheimer's symptom; and

2) Higher levels of education may increase brain reserve, delaying onset of Alzheimer symptoms for several years.

Wilkins said that while some previous studies have linked lower levels of education with a higher risk of dementia, other studies have found no such link. Furthermore, educational levels are associated with many other factors that are known to influence individuals' health: access to medical care, nutrition, occupational and recreational activities, smoking and alcohol intake.

"It is extremely difficult to conclude from these studies that education alone is the deciding factor for Alzheimer's disease," Wilkins said.

"There are many brilliant, highly educated and accomplished individuals who have had Alzheimer's disease. Research that can offer new insight into delaying intellectual decline would be most welcome."

zone the key to a stadium?

New negotiations in Lansing indicate that sponsors of the Detroit baseball stadium and downtown development have wisely begun to scale down the public contributions they are seeking to finance the projects.

Gov. John Engler and his staff have proposed a Detroit enterprise zone which would funnel the area's income tax revenues into infrastructure improvements and into floating bonds to finance the development projects.

The early Democratic response was negative. Detroit legislators have said their constituents object to being saddled with most of the burden of financing the projects, but similar arguments were heard by outstate legislators when greater state backing was sought.

The Detroit News business reporter, Jon Pepper, who broke the story of the new plan, said the state would make an outright grant of $20 million toward the cost, plus $65 million for road improvements, and would give up about $2 million in annual tax revenues from the enterprise zone.

The plan also calls on the Detroit and Wayne County governments to contribute the remaining amount needed to float a $65 million bond issue for land acquisition and infrastructure improvements.

Overall, the enterprise zone plan would reduce the public costs from an estimated $230 million, cited by Mayor Dennis Archer in his appeal to Lansing, to about $150 million from state, county and city sources.

That reduction is welcome but does not eliminate all the criticism of the project.

For example, Mike Ilitch, as the major beneficiary, ought to take part in a public session in Lansing or Detroit to give the voters and taxpayers his views about the investments, his own as well as the public's, that will be required to complete the stadium and the other developments.

Unless he does so, Mayor Archer and other backers are unlikely to win the legislative approval they need, especially in an election year when legislators are wary about boosting public spending for any purpose.

There are other hazards to be surmounted if the project is to succeed.

One could be raised by attempts to revive an earlier plan to use casino gambling profits to help finance the public's share of the development's costs.

True, that proposed financing method is also being used to woo Detroit voters to approve casino gambling in the city's fifth test of that issue Aug. 2.

But in the Legislature, use of casino receipts to finance the stadium could become a statewide controversial issue, which could doom both the stadium and casino gambling.

In addition, major league baseball, which has sought to avoid public contacts with gambling ever since the 1919 Black Sox scandal, might veto any baseball stadium financing linked to casino receipts.

On the other side, the major argument in support of the Aug. 2 referendum seems to be that since Windsor's new gambling casino already is reaping heavy profits from this side of the river, Detroit and Michigan people deserve to share in those gambling gains.

Yet foes still hope to defeat this fifth effort to obtain public approval of casino gambling in the city. At least one early radio poll indicated that the public still is narrowly opposed.

But the Windsor casino's successful debut, coupled with the narrow defeat of a Detroit gambling referendum about a year ago, indicate that the gambling proponents could win, despite their four previous defeats and their promises last year to stop campaigning for casinos if they lost.

With or without gambling receipts, the baseball stadium project still could lose — and should — unless Ilitch agrees to reduce the size of public investment, as indicated in an enterprise zone.

But he also must be able to justify to the public's satisfaction his need for a large public subsidy to support his own private enterprises.

Ending the Camelot legend

With Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, the nation has buried the myth of Camelot that she created and kept alive as her first husband's legacy.

Immediately after the assassination, it was comforting for the Kennedy family, the survivors of the Kennedy administration and the president's other friends when Mrs. Kennedy told historian Theodore H. White that the words of the song from the musical, "Camelot," had represented her husband's career:

Don't let it be forgot, that once there was a spot, for one brief shining moment, that was known as Camelot.

An F in history

Older viewers of NBC's "Wheel of Fortune" quiz show couldn't believe their eyes and ears the other night.

Three students, competing in a college week contest, were unable to tell the contest host the name of the only four-term U.S. president.

One guessed Theodore Roosevelt, another said Lyndon Johnson and the third stood mute. The students represented the University of Pittsburgh, the University of Arkansas and Georgia Tech.

It was clearly an F in history for the three students — and added evidence of the failings of American education.

It also was further proof that fame is fleeting, even for the only U.S. president ever elected to four terms, Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Delay on lighting is justified

The Farms council's delay in deciding whether to approve installation of permanent lighting on South High School's football field was justified in view of the divergent views expressed at last week's council meeting.

As is often the case on controversial is-

Correction

The May 19 editorial on Pointers who have filed for public office contained several errors.

Eight candidates — two Republicans and six Democrats — are seeking to succeed Democrat Donald W. Riegle Jr. as U.S. senator.

One of the six Democrats is John Kelly of Grosse Pointe Woods who is vacating his 1st District state Senate seat to make the U.S. Senate race.

Seeking to succeed Kelly are four Republicans and nine Democrats. One of the Democrats is Neil Heffernan of Grosse Pointe Shores, not previously identified as a Pointer.

The editorial also misspelled the name of Patricia Kukula of Grosse Pointe Park, one of four candidates for the Wayne County Community College board from the 1st District.

The News regrets the errors.

But White himself, an admirer of Kennedy, later wrote he thought Mrs. Kennedy's characterization was a misreading of history and that the Kennedy Camelot had never existed.

At the time, however, White quickly relayed her views to a sorrowing nation and Camelot became the ultimate brief description of the Kennedy presidency.

Mrs. Kennedy herself apparently planned many of the intimate details of the Kennedy funeral, from John-John's salute to his father to the riderless horse in the funeral procession.

Those details, and the way she overcame her personal tragedy, helped the nation endure its own sorrow at the untimely death of its young president for whom it had held such high hopes.

But Mrs. Onassis was more than the creator and custodian of the Kennedy legend.

During her husband's brief presidency, she had enhanced his career with her own performance, not only as a lady with social position but as a First Lady dedicated to transforming the White House into a place of elegance and culture.

After leaving the White House, she also, at some cost, was able to retain her privacy and raise two children to responsible adulthood while employed as a highly regarded book editor.

While the dream of the Kennedy presidency as Camelot, based on the Arthurian legend, dies with its creator, she will be long remembered as a prime example of what a modern presidential wife can do and be.

sues, there are two important sides to this discussion of using the school's athletic field for night competitive events.

The pro side is that night lighting would increase attendance at and revenues from South football games and also attract greater attendance at other athletic events.

But an important con side is expressed by property owners who live near the football field. They are concerned that night games would create more opportunities for exuberant youthful activities that might adversely affect property values in the area.

The issue arose after the school board had accepted a gift of the estimated $80,000 cost of the lights and installation from a committee that had raised funds to buy four 80-foot light towers. That left it up to the Farms council to make the final decision on installing the lights.

Whether any consensus can be achieved by the July 11 date of the next Farms council consideration of the issue is doubtful but the delay at least should give those involved more time to consider and study it.

However, we are currently sympathetic to the property owners' concern about their property values, despite the support for the lights from sports enthusiasts.

Fireworks donations still short

To the Editor:
The fund drive for the MACK AVENUE, USA fireworks program at Parcels field on Sunday, June 26, has gained a little momentum in the last week. But it still needs a big push in order to reach the $33,000 goal by June 26.

As of May 20, contributions of $12,000 have been collected. Many pledges of contributions have been promised, which would help reach the half-way goal of $20,000 by May 31. But, then, there is only a month left to reach the needed total of $33,000 by June 26!

The MACK AVENUE, USA committee hopes that the families that attend and enjoy the fireworks each year will consider sending a contribution. They would also like to hear from the families that host parties at their homes before the fireworks display and from the grandparents that take their grandchildren to enjoy the fireworks.

The fireworks project is one of the largest community and family-oriented programs undertaken in our area. It is hoped that all who appreciate a project such as this will support it by sending a contribution to MACK AVENUE,

U.S.A., 17401 Mack Avenue, Detroit, Mich. 48224. Make check out to MACK AVENUE, U.S.A.

Don't toss old baby equipment

To the Editor:
At last it is spring and we welcome it wholeheartedly. Some of us even enjoy the annual ritual of cleaning out the dusty corners of attics and basements. If you are one of those people, I want to give you a gentle reminder.

It is possible that you have stored away the old baby crib, the infant car seat and a couple of boxes of used clothing from your children along with your other family treasures. When you bump into those things this year, would you think about donating those much-needed items to one of the many charitable organizations in Detroit that work with troubled families and young people? When your grand-children come along, you're probably going to find out that the old equipment isn't as wonderful as it seemed when you put it away. The car seat won't compare to the newer models. Your children won't want to dress your beautiful grandchild in those used sleepers.

But right now, today, there are young people who are starting out in apartments without the benefit of family support. They don't have the money to buy the many things that need to care for their children. There are families that have only the most basic necessities. Those young people and families would really appreciate that old crib you have stored away in the attic.

So as you sweep out the cobwebs, please consider giving your old baby furniture and clothing to someone else. Boyssville of Michigan will come and pick up your donation and get it to a family who needs help. If you're not sure whether your things are needed or you want to arrange a convenient time to have them picked up, call Victoria at 313-838-7500. Your used equipment will be most wholeheartedly appreciated.

University Liggett School has appointed two new members to the school's administration, effective July 1.

Michael P. Papa has been named ULS' head of the upper school. Papa comes to ULS from his position of upper school principal at Beth Tfiloh School, a coeducational college preparatory day school of more than 700 students in Baltimore.

Previously, he served as division head and department chair from 1974 through 1990 at the Charles E. Smith School, a coeducational college preparatory school of more than 1,000 students in Rockville, Md., where he also taught science and coached three sports. He possesses a broad range of educational and administrative experience and has excellent communication and public relations skills.

Papa earned a bachelor of science degree from Nasson College in Springvale, Maine, and holds a master of science degree from George Washington University. He has served in the United States Naval Reserve since 1986 and is currently assigned as a naval intelligence officer with the Naval Criminal Investigative Service in Washington, D.C.

Also in July, Stephen Lind Billhardt will assume the position of ULS' head of lower school. Billhardt holds a bachelor of arts degree, cum laude, in economics from Dickinson College in Pennsylvania. He earned his master's degree in education, summa cum laude, from Lesley College in Massachusetts, and recently received his certificate of advanced studies and principal certification from the Harvard Graduate School of Education.

Billhardt comes to ULS from the Mather School in Boston, where he served for nine months as an administrative intern in the 650-student inner-city school. His varied duties included working with the principal and assistant principal on curriculum review and performance-based assessments. From 1990-93, Stephen was on the faculty of Moretown Elementary School in Moretown, Vt., where he taught mixed age classes and implemented portfolios in both math and writing, as well as thematic units of study. Previously, Billhardt was an elementary school teacher at schools in Cambridge and Weston, Mass., and in Salisbury, Conn.

Kids say Strachan is the best

The Christian education board of Grosse Pointe Baptist Church established a Teacher of Excellence Award in order to challenge the children and youth involved in the church programs to express gratitude for their teachers.

Young people from kindergarten through 12th grade submitted their nominations, naming a teacher and explaining why they felt this teacher deserved to be called a teacher of excellence.

Jean Strachan, a first-grade teacher at Defer Elementary School in Grosse Pointe Park, received the most entries. One student commended Strachan for her "warm, wonderful smile," and noted that she "really cares for others." Another student added that Strachan "patiently answered our many questions. . . I still love to visit her for a warm hug."

Strachan was honored at a teacher appreciation service at Grosse Pointe Baptist on May 15.

They like animals

The Humane Society of Macomb County celebrated "Be Kind to Animals" week May 1-7 with a visit by Girl Scout Troop 405 representing Mason Elementary School. The Brownies delivered 60 pounds of dog food donated by Lou's Pet Shop and learned about how to be responsible pet owners.

Mathletes

Ferry Elementary School students Katie Shuster, Katie Minturn, Eric Chan, Scott Paavola, Woody Floyd, Lauren Keller, Robin Tocco, Alison Rauss, Emily Edick, Beth Arnone, Alexa Caralis, Kevin Paavola, Eric Werner, Michael Hadgis, Joel Kielbowicz, Joe Frazzita, Chandow Waller and Anthony Antonelli competed on May 7 in the mathematics pentathlon tournament held at Orchard Lake Middle School. There were more than 200 "mathletes" in the Division III tournament open to fourth- and fifth-graders around the Detroit area.

Student Spotlight Christine Budai

Each week in this column we focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment, a woodworking project or a book review.

Christine Budai is the daughter of Paul and Nancy Budai of the City of Grosse Pointe. She is a fifth-grader at Maire Elementary School.

A Summer Night

I look at the sun setting pink on a warm summer night. I feel the dew-covered grass on my toes and feet, and let it soak the hemline of my cotton nightgown. I let a cool breeze flutter through my hair and let it refresh my warm tanned body. I hear the same breeze whisper in the old apple tree's leaves, telling secrets to the birds and squirrels.

Christine Budai

I hear the neighbor's swing creaking in the night air. I smell mother's roses with their fresh fragrant scent, and father's grass clippings waiting to be carried to the curb. And I think of the day to come.

Academy head is honored

Grosse Pointe Academy headmaster E. John White has been appointed to the resident faculty of the NAIS (National Association of Independent Schools) Institute for New Heads. The Institute for New Heads brings colleagues together at a critical early stage in their tenure as school heads to introduce key concepts and strategies of school leadership.

The focus of the institute is the head's role as intellectual, managerial and moral leader of a complex and dynamic institution and community.

White will assist six other faculty members in providing lectures, seminars, one-on-one sessions and discussion groups on key educational issues facing elementary and secondary independent schools at a July 21-28 conference in Wellesley, Mass.

White is one of only 10 elementary school headmasters nationwide to belong to the Country Day School Headmasters' Association of the United States.

The picker and other road tales

I spend a lot of time behind the wheel. Certainly not as much as a long-haul trucker or a police officer on patrol, but more time than I would prefer considering I'm not heading toward a vacation destination.

Anyway, according to my calculator, I spend about 90 minutes a day commuting to and from the office. Take that and multiply it by five and you get 450 glorious minutes taken out of my precious time. Multiply that by an average of 21 work days in a month and you get 9,450 minutes of time spent sitting in a car. Yikes.

This can pose a problem for a person who has trouble sitting still for more than five minutes. It's not like I can get out of a moving car and stretch my legs and it's not like I can put the car on auto pilot, climb into the back seat and take a cat nap.

In the almost two years that I have made the daily commute to Grosse Pointe from the hinterland, I have found the morning trek is easier. I'm usually in a not-quite-fully-awake state that keeps me sedate. But on the way home, as I'm inching my way north in a bumper-to-bumper crawl on any main road in Macomb County (I don't care what street you take, I've tried every shortcut, you can't get away from it) I feel a panic welling up from deep within me.

Spending time sitting in an idling car has forced me to find ways to amuse myself. Sometime last fall I started listening to talk radio. That has helped to soothe my frustration. But sometimes the topic or the host is not to my liking and I'm forced to listen to whatever are the lesser evils on FM radio.

I Say

Shirley A. McShane

When that doesn't work, I begin to clean out my purse, or sneak in a few paragraphs of a novel I'm reading or file a hangnail.

Lately, I find my eyes straying to the rear-view mirror to see who's doing what in the vehicle behind me. Does anyone else do this? Am I sick, engaging in this vehicular voyeurism?

Here's a sampling of what I've witnessed: Nose and ear pickers aplenty. And when the excavation is complete, pickers engage in some unsavory methods of disposal. I've also seen hair brushing and combing, makeup application of varying degrees and intensities, a man using an electric shaver, a woman brushing her teeth, the usual red-light lovebirds embracing, and once — while driving in an unsafe neighborhood in Detroit — I saw a man wearing on his nose a curious piece of apparatus that could only be bought in an adult book store and most likely was not intended as nose wear. Yuck!

But what I saw last month on my way into the office was infinitely more disgusting than all of the previous offenders combined.

Driving behind me was a woman who could easily weigh 300 pounds. It was 8:30 a.m. and she had just pulled out of a fast food restaurant drive-through. It appeared she had ordered a double-decker half-pound hamburger slathered with mushrooms, onions and soaked with some kind of brown, drippy, greasy sauce. The sandwich was accompanied by a double order of french fries and one of those gallon-sized buckets of pop.

I don't know how this caught my attention, but once it did, I couldn't drag my eyes away from the rear-view mirror. This woman was engaging in a one-person food orgy. Gravy was dripping down her chin and splashing onto her shirt as mushrooms and onions showed out of the back end of her sandwich. Between bites she sipped her drink, stuffed a handful of fries into her mouth and dabbed at her stained shirt with a paper napkin.

This went on for several miles. Bite. Sip. Stuff. Dab. Bite. Sip. Stuff. Dab.

I felt a combined sense of pity and revulsion. I wondered if this woman was getting off the night shift somewhere or was ending a hunger strike because I cannot imagine any other reason why someone would be that ravenous.

I'll tell you one thing. All these stolen glances have forced me to clean up my act. Not that I'm a picker or a digger or a mascara applier. But I have sworn off all singing along with the radio after a carload of teenage boys pointed and laughed and mooned me.

Imagine what they would have done to the fast-food junkie.

Fox Creek: Hope springs anew

What makes a neighborhood? Is it green lawns? Human activity? Housing stock? Flowers and trees? City services? Schools?

For two hours on a sunny, cool evening last week, Don Voelker and I mulled the question as he drove me around his neighborhood. We drove past blooming dogwoods and pretty brick houses, past kids playing basketball and riding their Big Wheels, past fishermen and boaters and ducks swimming in a canal.

Front porches. Yes, front porches are an important ingredient, a place for neighbors to gather, share a cool beverage in the heat, watch the kids. There were lots of people on front porches.

Voelker has lived on the banks of Fox Creek for 16 years, watching the slow decline of his community — and he's out there now, trying to do something about it.

He's not alone. The Jefferson-Chalmers area is blessed with several active community groups working for neighborhood improvement. Voelker is a member of Creekside, a community development corporation that wants to improve neighborhood life by attacking blight, improving parks, and upgrading houses.

A generation ago, the border between Detroit and Grosse Pointe wasn't such a shocking line of demarcation. In those days, a tour of Jefferson-Chalmers would have revealed the same gracious homes — without the potholed streets, the vacant lots, the boarded-up houses, the junk piles that now mar otherwise potentially attractive neighborhoods.

Creekside is trying hard to see a glass half full. With a new Detroit administration, they expect to be taken seriously downtown. They'd like to be taken seriously as well by their neighbors across the border in Grosse Pointe.

We pay a visit to Creekside president Marlene Dysert, who is renovating a house on Ashland. Located just at the bend in Fox Creek, Dysert and her husband, Dave, glory in a rural feeling in the heart of the city. An enormous cottonwood stands beside the house and as we tour the rooms, her family dogs gather outside the window, wagging their tails hopefully.

Dysert is fretting over the disappearance of two white flowerpots from her front porch. In years of living on the street, it's her first brush with crime, and it really tees her off — partly because it occurred just when a journalist showed up, but mostly because the pots came from her grandmother's house. But she's confident she'll get them back.

"I don't feel like I need an iron grid to protect me," she says. "We wouldn't have bought the house if we were going to live in terror. We've found a real sense of community here."

We make another stop at a renovation scene. Dysert's house is a big project, but she lived in it for some years before the re-do.

Juergensen's house is something else again.

He's just closing a deal with the city of Detroit to buy the big fieldstone Arts and Crafts bungalow for $750. Inside, the house is stripped to the wall studs; two fires left it with a gaping hole in the roof. The house stood vacant for four years before he came along. The yard grew high weeds that only partly concealed the piles of junk dumped there.

But to Juergensen, an architect, licensed builder, and developer who had a hand in the nearby Victoria Park project, that abandoned and unloved house represents an opportunity. He's named it The Cornerstone, for what he hopes it can come to mean to the neighborhood.

"This is affordable housing," he says enthusiastically. "I put a price tag of $128,000 on it when it's done. That's for a 3,000-square foot house! I'm using it as a model, a demonstration project.

"My hope is that somebody from the city will ask me how the city can make (home renovation) easier. Or somebody from Grosse Pointe will capitalize a quarter-million dollar revolving loan fund so we can do this again."

He's doing this job at his own expense and plans to live in the house when it's done.

Juergensen's project has al-

Supervising the sidewalks

Our copy editor, George Lathrop, shares with me a fondness for at least two things: walking, and reading everything in sight. Maybe the second item is more like a compulsion, since people who have been in his business for a while find it hard not to copy read the whole world.

So I wasn't too surprised when George revealed recently that he is also a slab watcher, a pastime best described as concerning oneself with the subtle points of every square of concrete sidewalk you cross.

Confirmed slab watchers marvel at the way the imprint of fallen oak leaves gets inked into the surface of new cement, and note with interest whether the divisions between sidewalk squares are filled with grass, or moss, or ant imitations of little volcano cones.

They remember if the concrete surfaces are smooth, wearing off in sharp flakes, or weathering down to bumpy pebbles, and file away for future reference those sections that are lifted by tree roots or curve around trees, including trees that aren't there anymore. Residents of some suburbs miss this fun, since their towns seem to have been laid out for people who have lost the use of their legs except for taking them to and from their cars.

The Pointes are lucky. Here, sidewalk fans can find art treasures like the square on the west side of Grayton between Kercheval and St. Paul that features outlines of two hands, a heart and a smiling face and declares that S.C.M. and M.S. were "best friends" in 1991.

Unintentional art is represented by things like the wild mix of kid and dog footprints on the north side of St. Paul midway between Harvard and Grayton or the amazingly long swoop of bike tire grooves along Notre Dame behind Bon Secours Hospital.

There are mysteries like the impression of a pair of scissors and a comb in the walk just west of the Brooks Brothers store across from the Central Library. And I could swear I once saw a railroad spike embedded in a walk somewhere around here, yet we're nowhere near a railroad.

True Pointe slab watchers become connoisseurs of vintage cement, appreciating the full-bodied ruggedness of a Paul G. Thoen '91, the solid, footworthy authority of a J.J. Barney '78, or drinking in the litting rarity of a '68 Kevin O'Sullivan (south of Kercheval between Grayton and Harvard).

(Is it possible that the reason so many J.J. Barneys are still around is because of the old schoolkid superstition that walking on them would bring bad luck, so they were spared the pounding of decades of little feet?)

In his travels, George has discovered some sidewalk Methuselahs, such as a Golden Seal Cement Co. slab dated 1926 on the west side of Three Mile between Charlevoix and Vernor and a contender for the Oldest Slab in Grosse Pointe on the southeast corner of Devonshire and St. Paul stamped 1917, the year Woodrow Wilson was inaugurated to his second term as president.

If you can find an older specimen than that, you just might qualify as a winner in the George Lathrop Memorial Slab Watchers Contest. I'm not at liberty to reveal what the prize is, but I guarantee it'll be something concrete.

Sidewalks II

The average sidewalk square (a 5-by-5-foot section called a flag) in the Farms lasts about 30 years, says assistant public service director Joe Leonard, and the city only replaces flags heaved out of line by 3/4 inch or more that are a trip-and-fall hazard.

"If you condemn sidewalks you are costing adjacent homeowners money, which is an indirect tax," Leonard says. "We don't replace them if they're merely cracked and still lying flat."

Sid Rosen remembered

To the Editor:
I was saddened to read of the death of Sid Rosen, who lived for a number of years at 1411 Bedford.
As a citizen, he was a worker for civil liberties. As an employee of the City of Detroit, he was in charge of the department that dealt with the needs of senior citizens. For some of his tenure, he was himself an octogenarian. He persuaded MichCon to institute a "no turn-off" policy in wintertime for impoverished elderly Detroiters.
But I shall remember him best for a very vivid evening of which he was, one might say, master of ceremonies. Its purpose was to aid the 1948 campaign of Henry Wallace for president on the Progressive Party ticket.

That event took place on what was then an empty lot at 1405 Bedford at the corner of Charlevoix. Supported by posts there were signs chest-high and attached to one another, forming a sort of heavy-paper fence.
Wallace was not present; the speaker of the evening was Sen. Glen Taylor of Idaho, Wallace's running mate and a very charismatic personality who, regrettably, was only a one-term senator.

What was memorable about that midsummer evening was that such signs as "Jim Crow Must Go!" pretty inflammatory for the Grosse Pointe of 1948, drew some rather rowdy teenagers, not to mention a handful of adults, to hoot and holler over the paper fence. They were yelling not very flattering remarks at the gathering of people sitting on their lawn chairs.
Another speaker was the late John Ciardi, poet and columnist for the Saturday Review, previously called the Saturday Review of Literature. In the midst of his remarks, some presumably right-wing youth set off a torpedo firecracker, to which Ciardi responded, "Wallace and Taylor are worth a 21-gun salute."
A few moments later, when Ciardi had finished, Sid Rosen took the microphone and in a very friendly and good-humored way invited his neighbors to come in and listen to the speakers and meet some local supporters of Wallace and Taylor.
Eventually the police were called to soothe the passions of the onlooking rabble-rousers. No arrests were made.
I wouldn't want to have missed that evening. It was an education in political action, and I think it did great credit to Sid Rosen, who showed himself a gallant citizen who believed in a noble cause.
Too bad that Wallace wasn't elected instead of the truculent Truman. We probably would have had a friendlier world from 1949 to 1994. It was Truman who chose to applaud the belligerent Churchill at Fulton, Missouri when he first used the divisive phrase "the Iron Curtain." We might have had no Cold War for the second half of the twentieth century. And so I salute the memory of Sid Rosen.

Confusion rife on teacher strike bill

The misinformation out and about concerning recent legislation affecting teacher strikes, bargaining and political fundraising is troublesome. These are complex issues and deserve accuracy when they are being debated.
Last week I talked to a veteran research staffer at the national office of the Federation of Teachers. I had called him about another issue. He was fascinated to find out that what he had been told about the strike bill was totally wrong.
"It doesn't keep teachers from negotiating with the health insurance carrier?" he asked again.
"No," I reiterated. "It only allows the school board to insist, if it chooses, as the employer, that the board, the district, be the 'policyholder' so the board has a right to see insurance usage experience data. The MEA wants to be the policyholder so the district cannot have access to experience data. And there is no limit in the bill as to who the carrier could be. That is fully negotiable."
"What about the bill to make it impossible for the MEA to get political contributions from its members?" he asked.
"There is no such bill," I responded. "All we did was make

From Lansing
William R. Bryant Jr.
State Representative
it so the union has to ask once a year and get a positive consent to a political contribution, not do as they do now and make the member ask for the money back later if he or she objects."
"What about bingo?" he asked. "Didn't you stop political parties and committees from holding bingo games as fundraisers and wasn't the Democratic Party making millions from such games?"
And I said, "Yes they were. And yes, we stopped it. The real question was, would we approve such bingo operations today, if they did not now exist? And we said we would not. Bingo is for charities, not for campaign coffers."

Babes in joyland

Babbling worse than any brook, last week six women were seen in varying positions on the floor, bouncing up and down and gurgling, as a new grandmother invited her friends and several other recent grandmothers for a "Viewing Tea." Our perfect granddaughter was visiting and several of our friends are celebrating first "grandparenthood" this year. The hostess granny went all out with teddy bears, gingerbread boys and girls and a multitude of toys as we introduced our young progeny to each other.
One of the grandmothers brought presents for the babies on display. Each child wanted the toy which was meant for his friend. It's amazing how early babies learn to demand and fight for what they want. Several rolls of film were used as grown-up human beings cajoled and pleaded with their tiny heirs to smile, laugh and perform tricks, such as clapping and "how big is the baby." Mature women, who almost always sit cross-legged, were down on all fours in assorted stages of disarray crawling after infants.
The language employed on that afternoon was dialogue used only in pre-kindergarten. The ladies spoke in squeaky, high, condescending voices and the children responded in monosyllables. We all pretended to understand each other.
Grandparents, I have learned, have special privileges. Their behavior is radically different than it was with their own children. Very little is forbidden a grandchild. Special objects that were once "no-no's" are touched and played with without reaction or observation. The grandmothers are not the only ones who are totally besotted. I recently heard of a grandfather-granddaughter luncheon arranged by a group of dotting granddads. What a terrific idea.
There was so much love and harmony in that room I wish that I could have bottled it. The innocence of the babies and the acceptance from their mothers and grandmothers almost bordered on worship as three generations came together to acknowledge what was good and pure in their lives. We are so grateful to have these tiny people, with the clean slates that are their world and to have the opportunity to watch them grow and develop. It will be a formidable task to exercise discipline on the parts of the grandparents and to keep spoiling at a minimum. But then whoever heard of giving a child too much love???

Composer, students at North present a work in progress — and it's free

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Feeling a little sleep-deprived because he's working two jobs, getting a bit anxious because a big deadline is nearing and appearing frazzled as he sits at a desk while a flurry of activity whirls around him, Michael Shaieb nevertheless is happy in his role as composer in residence at Grosse Pointe North High School.

Most days since his arrival in February have not been as hectic as last Friday, he said.

The 32-year-old Park resident is writing a Broadway-style production to be performed by North chorale music students. He is doing this in addition to holding a full time job as a computer programmer in his family's business in Warren. And his deadline to showtime is fast approaching.

While Shaieb was working on his musical, "Reign of the Pawn," to be performed at 7:30 p.m. Monday, June 6, in North's Performing Arts Center, students dressed in formal wear were scurrying in and out of his makeshift office at North, looking for this and that in the last tense moments before the curtain rose on Bess Bonnier's production, "Suite William," the culmination of another long-term project at North with a visiting artist.

Shaieb is working with the staff and students at North through the New York-based "Meet the Composer" program. This is the second year North has hosted a composer.

Last year students worked to produce a musical score with the help of Turkish composer Deniz Ince, a graduate student at the University of Michigan.

Shaieb is working on the musical score and narrative for "Reign of the Pawn," to be performed in a workshop style show.

What that means, he said, is that four months was not enough time to produce a musical from start to finish. On June 6, Shaieb and the North students will perform a work in progress and hope to get additional funding to finish the project next school year.

"(The musical) is about people who think they have control of their lives and what happens is that they realize they really don't," Shaieb said. "It's kind of a sad story, almost a thriller, but that's what's popular in today's market. All of the characters have a startling realization about life."

Schaieb said he has eight pieces of music written and is now working on the storyline.

"It's not designed to be a final performance," said Margaret Steele, assistant chorale director at North. "It's kind of a way to experiment with a show without having all the fine tunings of a full performance, such as having all the technical assistance. So, what we are going to present is the music that has been written so far. We will not charge admission for the work in progress."

Schaieb grew up in a Detroit neighborhood near Indian Village, was trained in classical piano by Grosse Pointe Woods music teacher Ruth Burezyk and has played locally and at a number of benefit concerts. He has a degree in information systems and works as a computer programmer.

"This is the first time I have written a musical and I'm hoping it's not the last," he said. Although he enjoys his work, he would love to have a career as a musical composer.

Steele and Schaieb are hoping the "Meet the Composer" program will extend the grant through next school year so they can bring the production to a full performance.

"Part of the point of the program is to get the students involved," Steele said. "We asked a number of students who were interested and we had a large response. That has sifted down to a certain few and one student in particular to whom this project has been inspiring. They have given (Shaieb) a lot of guidance."

Last year, the entire concert choir was involved with Ince's composition, Steele said. This year, because of the nature of the project, only students interested in the project are participating.

"I see the value of this program as multi-purpose," she said. "The students get creatively involved. They have to look at what's necessary to connect the music and the dialogue."

Steele said students have asked which comes first, the music or the words? The answer varies, she said, but a majority of composers will say the words come first.

"It's the storyline that's being expressed," Steele said. "Sometimes these experiences touch a student. Sometimes these experiences help to draw someone out in a special way. I cannot overlook how this has happened with some of my students and that it could similarly ignite a fire in another student. As a teacher, it's a really exciting thing to see happen."

Two Grosse Pointe South advanced photography students and their instructor were featured at the Speakers Forum of the Michigan Friends of Photography May 18 at Oakland Community College in Royal Oak.

Seniors Kelly M. Breslin and Kelly Horrigan and south art teacher Jack Summers discussed South's photography program.

Also featured in the program was the photography program at the Model High School in Bloomfield Hills, which is under the direction of Tom Hoydic, who student-taught at South under Summers.

The two schools offer strong yet very different photography programs. South offers a more traditional approach while Model High School allows students to pursue their communications skills through a state-of-the-art lab.

The program at South offers the students assignments that range from 19th-century non-silver processes, stand black and white processes and some digital photo experiences.

Cyanotype and casein printing are among the non-silver processes students may explore. They also work with straight, manipulated and hand-colored images. Although this program stresses the fine arts approach to photography, students do receive some experience with commercial applications.

A flatbed scanner and a digital camera have been added to the lab so that students can begin to use some of the new processes that are gaining momentum in today's market.

Grosse Pointe Public Library and its future hang in the balance

In 1929, when it became clear there was a need to provide what we now call "lifelong learning" opportunities for all citizens, the Grosse Pointe board of education voted to form a public library. Because the Grosse Pointe Public School System served all five Grosse Pointe municipalities and a portion of Harper Woods, it was natural that the board of education also assume responsibility for the community's library system, which served the same population. The post-war growth of the area and the complementary nature of schools and libraries supported this successful marriage for more than 60 years.

The most recent crisis in the relationship between the schools and the library was generated by the passage of Proposal A, which no longer permits the Grosse Pointe board of education to levy a separate millage for the library. The only resources available to the library now are from the school system's revenue, most of which will come directly from the state, based on the number of pupils enrolled. As school enrollment fluctuates, so will resources for the library, even though the library's mission is to serve the entire community, not just its students. If the state does not fully live up to its promise of funding our schools at $6,500 per pupil, and there may be some reason to believe it cannot, there will be additional financial problems for the public library.

Views on Schools

Grosse Pointe Schools Superintendent Ed Shine

Because the Grosse Pointe board of education knows how important our public library is to the community, it has directed me to pursue options that would allow the creation of a district library independent of the school system, with its own governing board and its own separate funding source.

To create an independent district library system that would serve the same area the school system (and the current public library) now serves, two municipal entities must agree to the creation of the library. According to current law, those two municipal entities are the City of Harper Woods and the Grosse Pointe board of education. Because the Grosse Pointe District Library and the Harper Woods Public Library would have some overlapping boundaries, the consent of the Harper Woods Library Board was also required.

In the past few weeks both the Harper Woods Library Board and the Harper Woods City Council agreed to the formation of a Grosse Pointe district library. The next two steps are a) approval by the Grosse Pointe board of education and b) approval by the Library of Michigan.

The last, and arguably most important, step is the approval of a millage for the new district library to replace the old millage eliminated by Proposal A. Approval of the new millage must take place before to June 30, 1995.

Separation, no matter how compelling the reasons, is always painful. However, the goal of an independent, vibrant, healthy library system with a stable funding source is in sight. We need to stay focused on that goal in order to secure the library's future once and for all.

Jeffries' editorial wins national honor

Chris Jeffries, associate editor of The Tower student newspaper at Grosse Pointe South High School, will be honored this June in Las Vegas by the National Federation of Press Women for his September 1993 editorial "Joint principalship can't, won't work."

Jeffries won first place in the organization's national high school journalism contest. He will receive a $250 prize. Earlier this school year, Jeffries placed first in both editorial writing and sports writing in state competition sponsored by the Michigan Press Women, an affiliate organization. Jeffries plans to study at the University of Virginia this fall.

Memorial Day tributes aren't only way to honor our fallen heroes

By Bruce Thiesen

They said goodbye to their mothers and fathers, sisters and brothers, and went off to war.

They hugged their children tight, and kissed their spouses or sweet-hearts one last time with a sense of the great longing that was to come.

Bruce Thiesen

They left the towns and cities and farms where they had been born and raised. They left schools and jobs, hopes and dreams, careers and callings. And they went off to war.

They said they'd return. And everyone hoped and worked and prayed for that day. But they never came home again.

The remains of many were returned to rest beneath the green grass of a thousand cemeteries in a thousand cities and towns across this great land. Some were buried where they fell, far from home. Thousands more fill the sprawling military cemeteries overseas. And the great oceans have swallowed the crews of a vast armada.

The fate of untold numbers is known but to God.

Each Memorial Day we honor the memory of those men and women who went off to war, never to return.

Our nation owes its very existence to those who answered the call to duty.

Thomas Jefferson said: "The ground of liberty must be gained by inches." Yes, by inches, and by the lives of those who fought for liberty's hallowed ground.

More than 6,000 patriots died in battle during the American Revolution. Who will honor their sacrifice if not those of us who are blessed to call America our home?

The Civil War, which tore this nation apart, has since bound us together with the strength of a common history that we might not otherwise have had. We lost 500,000 — North and South — that war.

In World War I, 116,000 lost their lives in service to America. Who will cherish their memory and mourn their loss if not all Americans who love this country?

World War II saw 400,000 U.S. servicemen and women lose their lives. Then came Korea, Vietnam, and more recently, Desert Storm. And we must not forget those who have died in our latest peace-keeping missions.

In all, more than a million Americans have died in war since our country was founded. Who will remember those who gave the last full measure of devotion to the cause of justice, freedom and democracy if not those who live under the protections of these great principles?

All Americans — "We The People" — must remember what they fought for. We the people must cherish their memory and honor their sacrifice.

Memorial Day ceremonies are not the only way to honor our fallen heroes.

Whenever we show respect for the American Flag, we honor our war dead. Whenever we vote, we confirm the democracy they died for. Whenever we exercise our freedoms of speech and to peaceably assemble, we honor their sacrifice. Whenever we gather in places of worship, we are blessed by this greatest of freedoms which they fought to protect.

As national commander of The American Legion, I'm proud to say that throughout our organization's 75-year history, we've never forgotten our fallen comrades.

Each Memorial Day, in cities and towns large and small across the United States, my fellow Legionnaires gather at cemeteries and town halls, at churches and in parks, to pay tribute to those who did not return.

And overseas, the American Legion provides the 16,000 flags that decorate the graves of our fallen troops and allies each Memorial Day.

To the young people who may read this column, I want you to know that those we honor on Memorial Day did not die because they loved war.

They did not. They loved the peace and freedom that is our American heritage.

As General Douglas MacArthur said: "The soldier above all other people prays for peace, for he must suffer and bear the deepest wounds and scars of war."

Thus, America's war veterans and our fallen comrades bequeath this heritage to our children and future generations: A free and just country unlike any other in world history.

Soon, their young hands will steer the course that America will take into the 21st century.

No doubt they too will face troubled times and crises from within and without. No doubt there will be wars and rumors of wars. But America will remain strong if our young people step into the future girded with the knowledge of our country's proud history.

On Memorial Day with grateful hearts we honor those who selflessly gave all they had to give.

They died for their country, for their friends and families, and for you and me.

Let us thank God for America.

Let us thank God for those patriots who went off to war. And let us never forget those who did not return.

Bruce Thiesen is national commander of the 3.1 million-member American Legion, the nation's largest veterans organization.

Half-truths about schools

To the Editor:

Half-truths and misrepresentations can be dangerously misleading. Unchallenged, they can erode the quality of our public services through our unwitting susceptibility to the glib quote that bears easy repetition.

Specifically, the following "facts" have been disseminated about the Grosse Pointe school system and the board of education:

- The school budget increased by 25.6 percent during the last four years. What you also need to know is that the costs of faculty retirement and the employer share of FICA have gradually been shifted to the district as a cost savings to the state over that same period of time.

- Administrators will deficit-spend $3.4 million of the reserve fund. Aside from the fact that "deficit" spending is prohibited by law, the alternatives were painful budget cuts or levying additional millage of the amount already approved by taxpayers. In recommending a 0.0 percent increase, board president Tim Howlett proposed funding from the district's equity fund and specifically spoke to the concerns of citizens who do not have children in school and the fact that the board represents the interests of all taxpayers.

- Less than 50 percent of the current budget is spent on teachers, computers, textbooks and supplies. The remaining 50 percent deemed not worthy of mention includes teacher retirement, special education, secretaries, building engineers, building principals and all expenses for building maintenance, including roofs, windows and boilers.

Whole truths require greater understanding and more thorough research. As citizens and taxpayers, we must insist on facts and we must not be confused by verbal hand grenades and quick fixes.

Martha Hutting
Grosse Pointe Woods
Dems' libidi

To the Editor:

The liberal Democrats have all the fun! In recent memory, there was Jack Kennedy (aka, Jack the zipper), who cut a swath through the maidens of Washington (if such exists). While we thought Lyndon Johnson's hands were busy signing documents to send more troops to Vietnam, in truth, they were grasping anything female in sight. Jimmy Carter seems to undo the promise, for he only had lust in his heart, but then one supposes he handled this great Democratic mandate like he handled the rest of his presidency.

Republicans can't seem to do it right. Bob Packwood would be suffering far less bad press if he'd only change parties. In one's mind one cannot conceive of a philandering Richard Nixon or Bob Dole. Worse, think of Robert Taft or Orrin Hatch in a compromising position.

At one time, I thought the White House could be recaptured in 1996, but how can Dole, Danny Quayle, John Engler, or William Bennett match up to the president's prowess in the boudoir. I thought I caught a look in Pete Wilson's eye that might be promising in this all important mandate on presidential performance, but it's too soon to tell. If the GOP wants to capture the state and presidential elections, they know what they have to do! Don't you really wonder if Vice President Gore is a closet Republican?

Fair is foul?

To the Editor:

Several days ago my daughter and I had a disagreement pertaining to the half day of school scheduled for Friday, May 20. She asserted the reason was to permit the Parcels Middle School student body to attend the St. Joan of Arc fair, which was being held that Friday afternoon and through the entire weekend.

My husband and I were naturally incredulous. It would be very difficult to fabricate an academic justification for such an occurrence. However, in spite of my reservations, I did call the school if only to determine that my daughter had been correct. I was told that the ostensible reason for the day off was "curriculum development." In reality, the students are dismissed at 11:30 due to the high absentee rate caused by the fair. Coincidentally, Ferry Elementary students have the same day off — for "staff developmental meetings."

I don't know where to begin to express my dismay and anger at the Grosse Pointe Public School System. First of all, I can't believe that a whole school can be shut down because of a fair. What does this tell our students? Does fun and play come before school work? It used to be the other way around. You cannot put these kids out in the business world with that kind of attitude. Are we telling our future citizens that it is perfectly acceptable to take the day off for a golf outing or gambling in Windsor? My husband is not going to take Friday afternoon off from work to attend the fair.

Secondly, I find it difficult to understand how a few absences could possibly affect the remainder of the student body. It should be the responsibility of each individual student to make up for the time missed. It should not be the onus of those attending to be held to task by those who do not attend. School should continue as usual, regardless.

Moreover, isn't it unusual that school is not cancelled on genuinely inclement and dangerous days? Apparently, we are forcing our children to brave unreasonable conditions so as to be able to take time off during the nicer spring days to have fun. It would seem that there could be both a legal and an ethical liability on your part as a school system.

It is too late to reschedule school for last Friday. However, it is not too late to do something about next year.

ready brought the neighborhood together a bit. Relieved to see the blighted house improve, the neighbors turned out to help clean up the dumped debris. And the project has provided at least one nearly fulltime job for a nearby resident.

He has already held a "before" open house to dramatize the project, and plans an "after" open house within the year. He's eager to have the project known, so take a drive by. He's on a corner of Lake-wood Street. I don't think you can miss it.

Juergensen doesn't think he's just whistling in the wind. He's a member of the Joint Cities Development Corp., a group of Detroiters and Grosse Pointers dedicated to the idea of reaching across the border. The group is focusing currently on projects to improve the Mack corridor.

Of course, houses aren't the only thing that count in a neighborhood. Voelker made sure I had a look at the chain of riverfront parks, from Angell to Maheras, which he says are the last remaining riverfront parks in Detroit. They're in sad need of some maintenance, but Creekside is working on that, too.

FYI

"We've got some sidewalks that have been here since the '20s," he boasts. (Nice going, Joe.)

The Shores doesn't bill homeowners for replacing sidewalks, says supervisor of public works Brett Smith.

Instead, the village simply does whatever work is needed and pays for it out of general taxes.

Not so in the Park, currently undergoing a replacement program. Those big orange dots spotted on cracked, badly oxidized or out-of-line concrete mean a cost to homeowners of about $2.15 a square foot for regular 4-inch-thick walk and $2.40 a square foot for the 6-inch thickness needed for driveways and aprons, says Ron Burlette, who is in charge of the program.

Homeowners can either pay the city rate or have their own contractor do the work, he says.

Woods director of public works Tom Whitcher says that city's ongoing program requires bidding out the work every year, and current costs are $2.67 a square foot for 4-inch and $3.12 for 6-inch concrete.

"We've got some sidewalks that have been here since the city began in the '50s and are still good," says Whitcher.

Who pays depends on whether the city or its utilities caused the problem, or it's just general wear and tear. A white X on the concrete means the city pays, a yellow X means it's the homeowner's responsibility, he says.

Grosse Pointe City residents are off the cement hook until fall, when another 3-year cycle of sidewalk inspection begins, says administrative assistant Brian Murphy.

Then, like a pox, yellow dots will start appearing.

Clubmeister

Dan Follis may know a lot about football but he's also no slouch at whacking those little white spheres around.

Follis, a lifelong Pointer of 56 years, took part with three other amateurs and golf pro Steve La Montagne in the Greater Greensboro Open last month and his team won the pro-am competition.

"The weather (in North Carolina) was wonderful," says Follis, a former longtime radio pigskin commentator and now marketing director for the Buick Open which takes place in August.

Call Ken Eatherly at 822-4091 if you have an FYI item or know of a sidewalk slab that goes 'way 'way back.

Clock owner still seeing red

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

While it's been said that time stands still for no one, it has apparently done so for Marc Alan in his attempts to get the clock outside the Old Cook School in Grosse Pointe Woods repainted.

Alan, who owns and maintains the Old Cook School, permitted the clock to be painted red, white and blue, last year after an "enterprising group of people asked permission" to change the clock's colors as part of a photo program, said Alan. Apparently clocks in the last century were painted in more vivid colors than they are today.

Alan said that the group promised to repaint the clock black with special gold leaf trim. The repaint was supposed to be completed by October of last year.

Alan has given up hope that the group that originally painted the clock will honor the agreement. He has proceeded without them, and has contacted a painter trained in such intricate work.

"I'd like to have this done by the Fourth of July," said Alan. "I've received a lot of comments, pro and con, about the clock. Getting it repainted has turned out to be a bigger job than I anticipated. It's not a matter of simply repainting the clock yet again. It already has five or six coats of paint.

"In order to show off the fine detail of the clock it will be necessary to remove those layers of paint. It's not just a matter of stripping the paint off. We have to be careful of the bezels, the rings that hold the glass on the clock."

In a case like this, said Alan, the preparation will take more time than the actual painting. He had originally planned to have the clock removed for a repaint and a check of its inner-workings, but that proved to be too expensive.

Alan said it would have cost $2,000 to take the clock down and another $2,000 to put it back up.

The clock, Alan said, was moved from its former location in downtown Detroit to 20276 Mack in the late 1960s when his family purchased the Old Cook School.

Handsome Graham succumbed to an ugly economy

This '36 Graham Supercharged was purchased from Richard Kughn's collection by RM Classic Car Productions.

Among cars that Richard Kughn recently sold from his collection to Ontario-based RM Classic Car Productions was a '36 Graham, an example of a nameplate that was once an established entry in the American auto market but which now hardly anyone has heard of.

The most popular Grahams with collectors are the '39 "sharknose" and the '40 and '41 Hollywoods, which used dies originally utilized in production of the famous "coffin-nose" Cord. But one of the most beautiful and popular models was the '36 Graham-Paige.

Since the sale of the Graham was private, its price is not available, but recent auction prices indicate a value of between $8,000 and $9,000, with higher prices for the supercharged models.

The Graham brothers, Joseph B., Robert C. and Ray A., began building trucks immediately after World War I, teaming up with the Dodge brothers in 1921 after the deaths of John and Horace Dodge in 1920. The Graham truck became the Dodge truck.

The brothers sold their interest in Dodge in 1926 and the following year got back into the auto business by acquiring the financially tottering Paige-Detroit Motor Car Co. The new Graham-Paige had first-year production of 73,195 cars, topping the first-year record which had been set just the year before by Pontiac. (The record was reset again in 1928 by Chrysler Corp.'s new DeSoto.)

Paige was dropped from the car's name in 1930 and became the name of a new line of trucks. The Paige trucks did not sell well and Chrysler Corp. reminded the brothers that they had agreed to stay out of the truck business for five years after they sold out of Dodge. So the Grahams discontinued the Paige truck line and just built the Graham car.

The Graham was an excellent car and its 1932 Blue Streak, with body styling by Amos Northrup of Murray and detailing by Raymond Dietrich, was an exceptionally handsome car. But the Depression was taking its toll on the auto industry and sales continued a steep downward trend. Ray Graham committed suicide in 1932.

The remaining brothers introduced a Supercharged line in 1934, enhancing its already excellent reputation as a high-performance car, but having only a minor positive effect on sales.

The handsome styling introduced in 1936 did not help much and the company introduced a new body design it called "Spirit of Motion." Because of its unusual front end and radiator grille design, it became known as the "shark-nose" and fared poorly on the market. It was widely regarded as too radical, or even ugly. For these reasons, it is now a favorite of collectors and they bring a couple thousand dollars more than the more conventional '36 and '37 models.

Desperate, Graham purchased the Cord 810/812 dies from Hupp, which was also on its way out of business. The very handsome Hollywood models made with those dies in 1940 and 1941 fetch $4,000 to $6,000 more at auction than the '36.

But for that generation to whom the '30s models are what cars are supposed to look like, the '36 Graham is beautiful.

GM key to theft avoidance

Most automotive theft deterrent systems seem to aggravate neighbors more than car thieves, but Chevrolet thinks it has a system that will actually prevent thefts and not irritate anyone — except the thief.

General Motors' PASS-Key system, which will be standard on new 1995 Chevrolet Lumina and Monte Carlo models, uses a small resistor pellet embedded in the ignition key. Electronic sensors read the pellet's code when the key is inserted in the ignition switch. If the correct code is not detected, the system disables the starter motor and fuel system for several minutes. "Hot wiring" and similar techniques of stealing cars are thus thwarted.

The system has been successful on Chevrolet Corvette and Camaro, which were both near the top of the car thieves' chart in the '80s. After the system was introduced on the '86 Corvette, thefts of that popular target were slashed by 24 percent in the first year. When the system was added to Camaro in 1989, thefts of that make were cut 66 percent, Chevrolet said.

Mustang pace cars at the Indy 500

A 1994 Mustang Cobra convertible will pace this year's Indianapolis 500 race, the third Mustang pace car in the nameplate's 30-year history. On the track are the first 1964 pace car, which was driven by Benson Ford; the T-top 1979 pace car driven by champion driver Jackie Stewart; and the 1994 Mustang Cobra, to be driven by Parnelli Jones.

Residents angry as Park increases water, sewer rates without notice

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Park recently raised rates for water and sewer service, much to the surprise and anger of residents who found out about the 6.1 percent change in water rates and the near doubling of water and storm processing fees when the latest water bills were sent out.

"I was surprised to get my bill and see an increase," said Park resident Stephen Ham. "I called city hall and learned that the council changed the rates a couple of weeks ago and didn't tell anyone. How much would it have cost the city to send out letters to Park residents explaining what had happened."

Park city comptroller Peter Dobrzeniecki said the increase in water and sewer fees was necessitated by two factors, the first being an increase in the rates Detroit is charging the Park, and the other being the weather.

"The costs involved with sewer rates are directly related to the weather," Dobrzeniecki said. "The Park has a contract with Detroit's water and sewer department to process storm water and sewage. The Park is charged a fee based on the volume of water and sewage sent to Detroit for processing."

On average the Park annually sends 130 million cubic feet of combined storm water and sewage for processing, sewage making up about 81.4 million cubic feet of that amount, said Dobrzeniecki. Year in and year out, the sewage flow to Detroit remains predictable, he said, but the amount of storm water processed depends entirely on the weather, and he said that's impossible to predict.

"In a dry year, not a lot of rainwater or melted snow enters the sewer system," said Dobrzeniecki. "Residents also use more water to take care of their lawns and gardens. We can charge people for the amount of water they use, and can collect fees accordingly. But in a wet year, a lot of storm water enters the system. When that happens it becomes harder to control costs. We don't charge according to weather."

Lake levels

During the month of April precipitation on each Great Lakes basin was above average. For the year to date, precipitation is about 3 percent below average for the entire Great Lakes basin. The net supply of water to Lake Superior, Erie and Ontario was above average in April, while Lakes Michigan-Huron were below average.

In comparison to their long-term (1918-1993) averages, the April monthly mean water level of Lake Superior was 1 inch above average. Lakes Michigan-Huron, St. Clair and Erie were 8, 11 and 11 inches above average, respectively, and Lake Ontario was at its long-term average. Shoreline residents on Lakes Michigan-Huron, St. Clair and Erie are cautioned to continue to be alert to possible adverse weather conditions, as these could compound an already high lake level situation. Further information and advice will be provided by the Corps of Engineers should conditions worsen.

Lake St. Clair at the end of April was at elevation 575.46 feet (175.40 meters) above the mean water level at Rimouski, Quebec, or about 38 inches (100 cm.) above Chart Datum. The April monthly mean level of 575.16 feet (175.31 meters) was about 11 inches (27 cm.) above the long-term average for April. The lake was about 20 inches (51 cm.) below the all-time high April monthly mean level, which was recorded in 1986. The forecast shows that the May monthly mean level of Lake St. Clair will be about 4 inches (10 cm.) above what it was at Mid-April. The lake is expected to continue its seasonal rise into July. The water level in Mid-October 1994 is expected to be about 11 inches (27 cm.) above the long-term average for that month, or about 2 inches (4 cm.) below what it was at the same time in 1993.

We charge a flat fee for all sewer processing costs. Until 1992, we charged each home $11 on a bi-monthly basis. We then raised the fee 11 percent and charged $11.66. The council recently raised that fee to $20 every two months."

The reason, Dobrzeniecki said, is simple. It rained and snowed a lot more in the last year than it has in the past several years. The city lost $400,000 in its water and sewer operations, and was forced to dip into the water and sewer contingency fund to make up the deficit. The fund is now empty.

"On some years we will have a surplus of funds with the $20 flat fee," said Dobrzeniecki. "But on other years we will have a deficit. The council had two choices, raise taxes or raise rates."

The city raised water rates because Detroit increased the cost of water to the city. Park city manager Dale Krajniak said that even with the recent increases, Park residents are getting a bargain when compared to the other Pointes. Krajniak said that Woods residents are charged $17.40 per 1,000 cubic feet of water used. City residents pay $21.50, Farms residents $20.72 and Woods residents pay $23.42. Park residents pay $20 on a bi-monthly basis for sewer services, said Krajniak. Woods residents pay $12, City residents pay a minimum of $32.25 and Farms residents pay a minimum of $38.58.

Dobrzeniecki said that it was difficult compiling figures to compare because each city does things differently and operates under different circumstances.

The Woods is currently paying for Milk River improvements. Farms and City residents get water from a local municipal water system, not from Detroit.

When asked why the city did not do a better job of notifying the public about the increase, Park Mayor Palmer Heenan said the city does not have a lot of experience in raising water rates.

Parcells school to install electric message sign at intersection

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

After 18 months of waiting and planning, Parcells Middle School in Grosse Pointe Woods will get a new electric sign to replace the one knocked down in an automobile accident in November 1992.

The sign that was knocked down was located at the corner of Vernier and Mack and was a 12-foot-wide by 8-foot-high bulletin board. Messages formed by movable letters were placed on the sign. When it was knocked down, Parcells officials considered updating the sign, said assistant principal Deborah Hubbell.

Instead of rebuilding the old sign that required messages be changed by hand one letter at a time, Parcells officials decided to erect an electric sign.

This would allow messages to be programmed into the sign through a computer kept in the school. It would take a lot less time to change messages, and it would be a lot easier to do so during cold or rainy weather.

The sign design finally agreed upon by Parcells official was larger than allowed by a recently passed electric sign ordinance, said Hubbell. The electric sign ordinance permits such signs to be as large as 32 square feet and 6 feet tall.

The proposed sign would be 9 feet tall and have 24 square feet of sign space. A pediment and two brick Colonial posts at either side of the sign are what violated city ordinances. The pediment adds 3 feet to the sign's height, and to approve the Colonial-styled design required a variance by the city council. Before variances are granted, the Woods requires the city planning commission to hold a hearing on whether or not to grant the variance. Last April, the commission held a hearing and was deadlocked 4-4 on whether or not to grant a variance.

At the last Woods council meeting, Hubbell requested the variance on behalf of Parcells. Hubbell noted that the pediment was what put the sign over the top, and the pediment was designed to give the sign a "Colonial" flavor. Councilmember Thomas Fahrner said that the council did not have a problem with the pediment, but he was afraid that an electric sign would be distracting to passing motorists.

Hubbell replied that the sign would be located on the exact location as the previous non-electric sign, and she didn't see why it would cause any more accidents.

"This won't be a flashing sign," said Hubbell. "The messages won't 'scroll' across the screen. They will remain stationary, like the old sign. We can change the message three times a day, but it takes only a second or two for the message to change after it's been programmed in."

But because the school would have to rebuild a new foundation, it would not be an inconvenience to move the proposed sign location five or 10 feet closer to the school and away from the street, said Hubbell.

With that agreement, the council voted 6-0 to grant the variance. Hubbell said that it would cost between $10,000 and $15,000 to build the sign, depending on bids for the electronic portion of it. She said insurance from the accident, PTO money and some money from the central office will pay for the sign. They hope to have it complete by June 15, the last day of school.

70 turn out as 'Littlest Club' hosts grand opening

Last month, the ribbon was cut and the Grosse Pointe Boat Club (Grosse Pointe's Littlest Club) officially opened for the season.

The boat club has acquired shared use (with the City of Grosse Pointe) of the carriage house of the Whitely estate. The City purchased the Whitely property two years ago to increase the size of Neff Park.

Executives of the City and members of the boat club have worked to provide space in the carriage house to house the boat club's equipment.

"This is the biggest event in the Grosse Pointe Boat Club's history since formation of the club in 1960," said commodore Greg Tisdale.

istrative assistant Brian Murphy, and swim team manager Diane Zedan, present, Mayor Susan Wheeler cut the ribbon.

Past commodore Chuck Howe orchestrated the event, which drew 70 people. He expressed his gratitude to past commodore and chairman of the City parks & recreation committee Chuck Witzke, past commodore John Onstwedder, commodore Tisdale and their spouses for all of their assistance.

Tisdale unveiled the charter plaque, which is mounted on the wall of the Littlest Club, to honor the names of contributors.

The boat club plans include renovation of the facilities and a new carriage house roof.

Donations to fund these improvements are welcome and appreciated. If you wish to contribute, your name will join the others on the charter plaque: Patron, $80; benefactor, $60; and donor, $40.

For more information, call membership officer and past commodore Witzke at 886-6331 or database officer and past commodore Ed Harrah at 886-5275.

"Our club is open to all boat owners in Grosse Pointe City and other City residents interested in boating and our Norbert Neff Park," said first commodore Ed Stoliker in 1960.

City announces pool hours at Neff Park

Swim has sprung at Norbert P. Neff Memorial Park in the City of Grosse Pointe.

New play equipment has been installed and the picnic tables are waiting to be filled.

The pool opens Friday, May 27, with Monday through Thursday hours, 3:30 p.m. until 8 p.m.; Friday, 3:30 p.m. until 9 p.m.; Saturday, 10 a.m. until 9 p.m.; and Sunday, 10 a.m. until 8 p.m. These hours are in effect until Wednesday, June 15.

Beginning Thursday, June 16, pool hours are 10 a.m. until 9 p.m.

Registration for the first session of swim lessons is Saturday and Sunday, June 18 and 19, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the pool office. Swim lessons will be offered for American Red Cross levels 1-7.

Water aerobics, synchronized swimming, introduction to competitive swimming and diving classes will also be offered.

A parent/swimmer meeting of the NORBS, the City swim team, is at 4 p.m. on Wednesday, June 1, at the Neff Park pavilion. Swimmers must be ages 6-17. All interested members should attend this meeting. Swim practices begin Thursday, June 2.

G.P. Park homes to be surveyed

Grosse Pointe Park's English Tudor Revival homes will be surveyed and catalogued for an architectural survey conducted by two college professors.

Robert Schweitzer, a teacher of architectural history and historic preservation at the University of Michigan and Eastern Michigan University, and Robert Young of the University of Utah, are comparing interpretations of the architectural style in different parts of the country.

The project is partially funded by the Grosse Pointe Historical Society.

Owners of homes involved in the project will receive letters asking for information about construction dates, architects, builders, costs and the names and occupations of the original owners.

Grosse Pointer Lisa Manardo, a recent graduate of the University of Michigan's College of Architecture and Urban Planning, is the primary data gatherer for the project. Anyone interested in contributing information should contact Manardo at 882-3115.

Do you have a hearing or speech problem?

May is Better Hearing and Speech Month. St. John Hospital and Medical Center's speech and language department reminds us that our ability to communicate is precious and good hearing and speech are important aspects of that ability.

If you've wondered if you may be suffering from a speech or hearing problem, the checklist below may indicate a need to visit a qualified audiologist or speech language pathologist.

- Do you:
- Often ask people to repeat what was said?
  - Confuse or misunderstand speech?
  - Fail to hear sudden loud noises?
  - Find that others complain that the television or radio is too loud?
  - Have ringing in one or both ears?
  - Avoid talking with others?
  - Use speech that is different from others of your age, sex and background?
  - Notice that others have trouble understanding you?
  - Have memory difficulties?
  - Hesitate, repeat, or prolong sounds or words?
  - Feel that your voice is too high, low, harsh or hoarse?

If you are experiencing these

Protective helmets can prevent head injuries from summer sports

Bike riding and spring go hand-in-hand. Unfortunately, so do bike riding and head injuries.

Each year, more than 100,000 people in the United States will die as a result of a head injury. Among children and young adults, traumatic brain injury is the leading cause of disability and death.

"Most children's head injuries can be prevented," said Dr. Mark Rosenblum, chairman of the department of neurosurgery at Henry Ford Hospital. "It's important to educate children about head safety and provide them with basic safety skills."

One of the best ways to prevent head injuries, Rosenblum said, is to make sure children wear protective helmets when riding bikes, rollerblading, skateboarding, playing baseball or participating in other contact sports.

With summer around the corner, Rosenblum warns kids when swimming not to dive into water except in specially designed pools. Back yard pools can be shallow and lakes may contain hidden rocks.

Parents can help prevent head injuries by following these tips:

- Never leave toddlers unattended in high chairs, grocery carts or strollers.
- Always buckle up children over age 3 while in the car.
- Always place younger children in approved infant/child carriers while riding in the car.

To help educate children, Henry Ford Hospital has developed a head injury safety program led by Cheryl Sears-Lang. She visits elementary schools in southeastern Michigan to teach children the importance of head safety.

During the presentation, each child receives a fun and informative activity book, "Having Fun With Head Safety," which was developed by Sears-Lang. Lessons in class are brought to life through Henry, a large stuffed rabbit used for demonstrations. For more information on the program, call 876-2241.

The opera company's 24th season begins and ends with Puccini. The passionate story of an innocent young geisha betrayed by her American "husband," "Madame Butterfly" opens the fall season at the Fisher Theatre, followed by the company premiere of Donizetti's delightful comedy "The Daughter of the Regiment," not seen in Detroit for 22 years. The spring season at the Masonic Temple opens with Mozart's powerful drama and dark comedy "Don Giovanni," followed by Tchaikovsky's ballet "Swan Lake," starring National Ballet of Canada principal dancer Margaret Illmann. The season concludes with Puccini's opera thriller "Tosca."

Commenting on the new season, Michigan Opera Theatre general director David Dichiera said, "This is a season of classic works from the opera and ballet repertory performed, directed and designed by artists of outstanding caliber. I am particularly pleased to announce that there will be no increase in subscription ticket prices this year, and that many of our single ticket prices will also be maintained. And in an effort to accommodate the varied schedules of our growing audiences, we have added a new Sunday matinee series." For more information, call 874-SING.

There's fun at the 'Whorehouse'

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

It's a winner. Out at the Birmingham Theatre through June 12, you can lay odds on its latest production of the season, "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," and come out feeling lucky.

It's sassy, exuberant and high-spirited.

The show is staged and directed by Worth Gardner, who has a knack for making a small stage seem much larger than it is and for making an audience feel it is watching a full-scale Broadway production.

Much of this is accomplished by three-tiered stairways where members of the cast are seen performing on different levels. Their constant movement keeps the production going at a fast pace.

Gardner doesn't confine activity to the stage. The cast spills out into the theatre's aisles. Members of the ensemble come running offstage down the aisle, or sometimes appear from the back of the theater. Much of the action takes place on the apron of the stage. It's like a three ring circus, there's so much going on.

Your attention is riveted from the minute you enter. The set, done in bright red and gold, has a huge poster hanging over center stage done in red and gold heralding in outside letters what is coming. A marimba band is playing on-stage.

The action takes place in a smalltown chicken ranch converted into a bordello. When the media exposes what takes place there, a group of holier-than-thou citizens demands that it be closed down to save the town's reputation. But the chicken ranch already has a reputation: It is known as the place to be on pay night. It counts among its patrons, a governor, a senator and the Texas A&M football team.

Heading the establishment is the elegant Mona (Shannon Montgomery) who carefully screens the girls and insists that they follow her strict code of behavior. She has a friendly relationship with Sheriff Ed Earl Dodd (Hal David) whom she pays well to overlook what goes on there.

Everything goes fine until a zealous televangelist declares Mona's operation a public scourge.

Scott Wholly, who has worked with Gardner on his previous offerings, is musical director. The music and lyrics are by Carol Hall. Most memorable are the nostalgic duet "Bus from Amarillo" and "Hard Candy Christmas" which ends on an optimistic note, with the girls singing about moving on to tomorrow and a new future.

Lavish costumes, beautiful girls, and handsome men give the show polish but the non-stop action and a talented cast are what make the production shine. You'll have a great time at "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" without damaging your reputation. It's sassy, funny and altogether outrageous.

—Summer movies are hot—

'Maverick' charms and delights

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

With the opening of "Maverick" the summer movie season has officially begun, and it couldn't have a better introduction.

While "Maverick" is the latest big-budget movie based on a television show, it has certain advantages over such recent efforts as "The Beverly Hillbillies" and "Car 54 Where are You?"

"Maverick" always had an attitude that could translate well onto the big screen.

Its creator described the show about a wandering gambler as an "anti-western" that had fun with the cliches of western movies and TV shows. The audience does not have to spend a lot of time having the premise of the story explained. Too many TV adaptations really come off like long TV pilots. It's all set-up and no pay-off.

"Maverick," on the other hand, does have a payoff. The story begins with Brett Maverick (Mel Gibson) seeking to raise the $25,000 needed to enter the All-Rivers Poker Championship. He has $22,000 and getting the remaining $3,000 proves to be a difficult task.

He must contend with the vicious Angel (Alfred Molina), the winsome Annabelle Bransford Jodie Foster, Mel Gibson and James Garner team up to make "Maverick" fun.

(Jodie Foster), and the stern marshal Zane Cooper, played by the original Maverick, James Garner.

In a movie about con artists nothing is simple and very few people are what they seem.

On the way to the poker championship, Maverick witnesses a bank robbery, recovers money stolen from a wagon train (for a 10 percent recovery fee) and encounters some Indians playing host to a visiting Russian archduke.

The fun of "Maverick" is in the approach. While all these events are fairly standard western scenarios, they're looked at with a cynical eye.

Those who triumph in "Maverick" do so on the strength of their brains. The spoils go not to the fastest gun or the strongest fighter, but rather to the cleverest mind.

"Maverick" is meant to be a lot of fun, and for the most part it succeeds in its mission. But the pace could have been tightened up a bit. It's more than two hours long and feels like it.

The sound is also distracting — it seems as though a lot of time was spent in the studio redubbing the actors' voices, and it's sometimes difficult hearing who's saying what. There are also a few profanities in the film that could have been left out.

But overall, "Maverick" is simple fun, and these days that's not all bad.

Violent, but also literary, 'Crow' soars to higher levels

By Hobe Echin
Special Writer

"Nothing is trivial," Eric Draven (Brandon Lee) tells Albrecht (Ernie Hudson) in the macabre action thriller "The Crow."

In a better world, Eric would be telling this to his therapist, sipping some mineral water and discussing the trauma of his fiancée's murder. But this is "The Crow," a surprisingly faithful adaptation of Detroit's James O'Barr's comic book series about an angsty hero who returns from the dead to avenge his fiancée's death by murdering her attackers one by one.

Things are, well, darker, than real life. But they are just as real, drawn from painful memories and dark obsessions, those teeming impulses that are Eric's motivations.

Set in Detroit, as is the comic book, "The Crow," masterfully captures, as Crow artist O'Barr puts it, "Detroit's bleak mystique," stylized to an almost nightmare gothicness, courtesy of ace set designer Alex McDowell and a wealth of state-of-the-art computer imaging.

That's good, because Lee, as a hero, needs this kind of backdrop to exercise his morbid curiosities — memory and revenge, not necessarily in that order.

More action hero than actor, Lee — who in a dark prelude to the whole film was killed while shooting its final scenes — moves hypnotically through the rainy streets and street-lamped alleys, aided by the Poe-esque specter of a crow, existing on a jagged diet of vengeance and literary epiphany.

Director Alex Proyas has taken care to preserve the alternately physical and cerebral nature of O'Barr's hero: he's both Robin Hood and angel of death.

In one scene reverently reconstructed from the comic, Eric interrupts a narcotic liaison between one of head crime guy Top Dollar's (Michael Wincott) boys and a delinquent bar-keep mother. After dispatching the villain, Eric reminds the mother of her maternal duties. The next morning, she's off drugs and making eggs for her daughter, Sarah (Rochelle Davis) who is, understandably, amazed. Of course, although this is a cartoon world, it has its roots in a dark side of reality.

And like the comic book, villains and heroes quote the late-night verse of poets like Arthur Rimbaud and Edgar Allan Poe making their way into the long nights living fast and dying young. Once again Proyas knows pace is the key. Where the comic broods and scowls, the movie is quicker to action, quite literally explosive, aided by swooping aerial shots of dilapidated buildings burning on Devil's Night and quick-cut fight scenes.

The development of both the benevolent cop Albrecht and the little Lollapalooza-age, Doc Marten-wearing, skateboard-toting street waif Sarah does an admirable job of grounding Eric's chaotic, contradictory character. They ask Eric the questions both obvious and philosophical that the audience is dying to ask, from what it's like to be dead to just why he's stomping around punk rock clubs killing all these bad guys.

Occasionally, though Proyas overdoes it, especially with the movie's extreme violence. Although it looks like "Batman," "The Crow's" tone is more akin to "Taxi Driver's" shocking extremes justified and explained by a literary subtext.

But in its MTV way, the violence is as digestible as it is reprehensible. Proyas, an Australian-born video director, knows how to make things look good. His interpretation of Eric's telepathic flashbacks to his fiancée's rape and murder are effective without being exploitive.

Proyas is also a pro at keeping things moving right along, which he does with the aid of a strong alternative rock soundtrack led by underground favorites Nine Inch Nails, Stone Temple Pilots and The Cure.

But that the movie should culminate with a cliché-ridden, streamlined shoot-out of boundless violence, made to look like a music video, is good filmmaking but perhaps poor judgment. Gone is the ironic tone of Eric's literary precision and the black humor that until now had saved "The Crow" from being the senseless shoot-em-up that it becomes.

Jazz and classics blend as Turtles guest with Jarvi

Jazz and classics met and mingled once again at Orchestra Hall last weekend. Returning to the podium, Neeme Jarvi brought with him the intriguing Turtle Island Jazz Quartet representing the eclectic diversity of contemporary American music.

The three works they performed with the DSO synthesize the divergent musical styles of classics and the most refined levels of jazz and pops.

"Spider Dreams" by David Balakrishnan, co-founder and former violinist of the quartet; "Interchange" by Jeff Beal, California educated composer; and Vince Mendoza's arrangement of Dizzy Gillespie's "A Night in Tunisia" offered a rich panoply of jazz riffs, syncopation, hints of Hindu Ragas, swing band, dewop and symphony all intertwined in a high energy, highly spontaneous performance.

Beal's "Interchange" is an interesting example as the orchestra served mainly as rhythm background while the quartet played a musical metaphor of the merging, blending and ultimate re-separation of streams of traffic. There were takeoffs on the traditional styles of jazz and swing, hints of rock and raga and some remarkable percussive effects by the quartet's cellist.

The mixing of these disparate traditions was hugely successful bringing a sense of contemporary life to the symphonic experience. The collaboration, in fact, was so smooth as to demonstrate that Jarvi and the DSO can be just as "cool" as any jazz group. The quartet seemed to agree as the players exchanged grins of pleasure over the orchestra's truly hip treatment of some of the highly syncopated, unclassical-sounding segments of their parts.

There was a remarkable improvised duet between the violin and viola of the quartet in the arrangement of "Night in Tunisia." It redefined the musical capabilities of those two instruments. And there was the encore when the quartet, playing without the orchestra, let down its last restraints and performed an outrageously uninhibited piece with all its exuberance and rock entertainer style.

In bringing this experience to his DSO audience, Jarvi may have given us a vision of the future. It might also expand the role or even redefine the symphonic tradition although the thought of the Turtle Islanders playing a Beethoven quartet with mikes on their fiddles stretches a classicist's imagination.

Sharing the program at the Thursday evening concert was Symphony No. 2 by 19th century Czech composer Zdenek Fibich. A work of considerable charm and skill, it is most worth mentioning because Jarvi's superb musicianship in interpreting this elegantly classical music with its romantic, soap opera sentiment, makes the work seem better than it is.

Which is to say, it was a pleasure to hear, and a welcome foil to the adventures of Turtle Island.

The season concludes this weekend with a four-concert set starting tonight and a program that is a Jarvi classic. Saint-Saens' "Danse Macabre" will open followed by the "Cinderella Suite No.3" by Prokofiev. Rachmaninoff's "Capriccio Bohemien" follows and the crashing climax is Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture." They will be repeated Friday morning and evening and Saturday night. For times and tickets call 833-3700.

Goombay Festival to help raise funds for Children's Center

The Goombay Festival, an annual fundraiser for the Children's Center, will be held on Thursday, June 2, at the Roostertail.

The party will kick off the Gold Cup hydroplane races.

The party theme — patterned after the Goombay Festivals celebrated in the streets of the Bahamas each summer — will include colorful costumes, music, Junkanoo dancers, a mini-auction, a raffle (the grand prize is a cruise in the Bahamas), a Caribbean supper and tropical drinks.

The festivities will begin at 6:30 p.m. Guests are encouraged to wear tropical or boating attire and to be ready to do the limbo and to learn some tropical line dances. Tickets are $50; for $100, you will also get a private tour of the hydroplane pits. For tickets, call the Children's Center at 831-5535 Mondays through Fridays between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Tickets will also be available at the door.

The Children's Center is one of Michigan's largest community-based providers of emotional and mental health services to children and their families.

Fund drive: The Neighborhood Club has collected $81,978, nearly 82 percent of the goal of its 1993-94 Annual Fund Drive. So far, 905 individuals have supported the drive.

"Members of this community have been generous in their support of our Annual Fund Drive," said John Bruce, executive director of the organization.

Only 70 percent of the non-profit organization's costs are covered by membership and program fees, he said. The Annual Fund Drive is a crucial part of funding recreational and educational programs for residents.

The club has been around for more than 80 years, Bruce said, providing organized sport leagues for children and adults, fitness activities for all ages, adaptive recreation programs and computer classes. The Neighborhood Club, at 17150 Waterloo in the City of Grosse Pointe, houses a nursery school, a senior center and the Neighborhood Club Thrift Shop.

Donations are tax-deductible. For more information, call 885-4600 Mondays through Fridays between 9 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

When death claims the life of someone we love, our life is changed forever. The hurt is so deep and so painful that we sometimes wonder if we will survive our loss.

When the death is that of a parent, no matter how old we are, it feels like the loss of our childhood. We've been the child of our parent all of our life. We have no experience like this to call upon. It matters not that we are parents/grandparents ourselves. Sometimes with the death of one parent, the role of the adult child to the surviving parent changes and we become caregivers to them as they were to us.

If the death is that of a remaining parent we may feel like orphans. There is now no one who knows and understands us as only a parent does. The generational order changes and the adult child becomes the senior generation. Often this makes us aware of our own mortality.

There is really no way to prepare ourselves for this. We must allow time to grieve the death of the parent and to adjust to all the changes this brings. Grieving is hard work. There is no right or wrong way to grieve, just difficult ways. We must allow ourselves to experience the emotions that death brings — overwhelming sadness, sometimes anger, maybe relief, regret, longing. These are appropriate feelings.

We need to cherish and share the memories of our parents. We are their legacy. Our families are the legacy they left. Eventually we heal and become whole persons again. There will be a return of purpose and meaning to our lives.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT

Holy Spirit, you who make me see everything and who shows me the way to reach my ideal. You, who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with you and my loved ones in your perpetual glory. Amen.

Thank you for your love towards me and my loved ones. Pray this prayer three consecutive days without asking your wish, after the third day your wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. ## More, better courses await Michigan's links brigade

Michigan golfers know only too well how unpredictable our weather can be.

A couple of weeks ago I took several of my lady friends to northern Michigan with me for a few days' visit to our place on Big Bear Lake. Four of us planned to begin our '94 golfing season by playing Threetops, the nifty little par three course at Sylvan Resort.

Despite the fact that this would only take us a couple of hours, we dragged along our clubs with enthusiasm. Sharon Mertz and I had played this course before and we assured the others that they were in for something really special. On the Tuesday we arrived the sun was out and the temperatures were downright balmy.

Wednesday was a different story. We awoke to a day-long rain and, regrettably, were forced to cancel our 10 a.m. tee times (the weather really was too nasty to brave). We felt bad for the folks who were scheduled for a shotgun-start tourney on the course at noon.

Instead, we spent our day shopping and noshing in Gaylord and planning a return visit. (For reservations at Threetops, or any of the other outstanding courses at Sylvan Resort, call (800) 444-6711.)

The 1994 golf season is under way in Michigan and there is lots to report:

Because I have a personal interest in improving my golf game, I'll first discuss the new women's golf school being operated by Schuss/Shanty Creek near Bellaire. (Shanty Creek is home to the highly-rated Legend course.) The "Fore Women Only" golf schools run through July 3. Classes are limited to eight female students with two instructors. All levels of play can be accommodated and beginners are especially welcome.

The Thursday-Sunday packages cost $599 a person double occupancy and include lodging, breakfasts and dinners, clinics, course play, health club entry and free day care for infants to age 10 (9 a.m. - 5 p.m.). Dates remaining this season are June 2-5, June 16-19 and June 30-July 3. Call (800) 678-4111 for details and reservations.

Golfers who are familiar with the two courses at Michawaye should know that they are now being operated separately. The former Lakes course is now known as The Lake Golf Club and may be booked by calling (800) 525-3719. The Pines course is now formally known as Michawaye Hills Pines Course and is booked by calling (800) 322-6636. They will have separate clubhouses about a mile apart on Opal Lake Drive.

Over near Traverse City, Grand Traverse Resort has decided to roll back its greens fees some 30 percent, to make the Bear and Spruce Run more reasonable. (Early last summer, the highest walk-in rate was a whopping $140.) Call (800) 748-0303.

New courses opening include Loon Lake Golf Club near Gaylord on July 1. It is located between Marsh Ridge and Michawaye and is developed and designed by Mike Husby, the same fellow who brought you that tricky Marsh Ridge course. Lots are already being sold for a residential community to surround the course. Call (800) 280-LOON.

For years, visitors to Mackinac Island have enjoyed playing the Grand Hotel's nine-hole course, The Jewel. Finally, a second nine holes, called The Woods, will also open around July 1. The two courses will be 1-1/2 miles apart and players will be transported between them by horse and buggy. Call (906) 847-3331 for tee times.

Also opening this summer is the Quest near Houghton Lake, to be operated by Tom Weideman, longtime Michigan golf professional. Nine holes will open in mid-June and the other nine in July. Call (517) 422-4516.

Garland's new Fountains course won't open until 1995, but there will still be plenty of action on Swampfire, Monarch and Reflections.

And just to up the ante a bit, Garland is sponsoring a "One Million Dollar Summer Shoot-Out" this season. Anyone scoring a hole-in-one on any of the three courses from now until Sept. 24 is eligible to come back on that date to compete for the $1 million and other prizes. (Note: Last season 22 golfers recorded aces.) Garland is located outside Lewiston. Call (800) 968-0042 for details.

Courses which opened last season and are just starting to become well-known include the Gailes at Lakewood Shores Resort in Oscoda. Designed by Bob Cupp and Kevin Aldridge as a pure Scottish Links course, it was named the best new resort course in 1993 by Golf Digest.

located in the center of the fairway. Brisk winds off Lake Huron routinely sweep the course, adding to the authenticity of the challenge.

"There are replicas of famous holes — the first at St. Andrews, the postage-stamp par three at Royal Troon — but the Gailes stands on its own as an inspired salutation to the game's birthplace. Walk if you can; you risk seasickness riding the topsy-turvy fairways in a car." Call (517) 739-2073. (This resort is owned by Stan Aldridge, who also owns Indianhead near Lake Orion, site of the 1994 U.S. Women's Open, July 18-24. Call 800-334-OPEN for ticket info.)

Quite different is the Thoroughbred, the new course at the Double JJ Ranch north of Muskegon. Designed by Arthur Hills, it was an unusual addition to a place that has catered to city slickers in search of the wilderness since 1937. But it must be working because it has received rave reviews and more than 15,000 rounds have been played since the course opened last July. Note: Horses have right of way on the course. Golfers can stay in ranch-style accommodations or opt for modern rooms in the new hotel and condos. Call (616) 894-4444.

Also not to be missed is Elk Ridge near Atlanta which was ranked second-best new resort course in 1991 by Golf Digest. Call (800) 626-4355.

Here are some additional phone numbers: "Sunrise Side," eastern Lower Peninsula (800) 729-9373; Gaylord Golf Mecca, (800) 345-8621; Northwest Michigan Golf Council, (800) 937-7272; Sleeping Bear Dunes Golf Association, (616) 228-5461; ext. 804; Shoreline Links Golf Association, (616) 857-2000.

compositional and thematic sophistication of the greatest European masters. Yet its style and content reflect the brash exuberance and confident energy of 19th century America and a sense of wonder that one might experience contemplating the development of our nation in Chadwick's lifetime (1854-1931).

There is no reason to believe that the composer had these things in mind. In fact, he resisted urgings of Antonin Dvorak to forge a national style from native American and black music. But Chadwick's music is nonetheless proudly American in its mood, emotions and originality, while acknowledging its debt to such greats as Brahms and Mendelssohn.

Maestro Jarvi is especially fond of the andante second movement for its singing melodies and rich harmonies and has the DSO perform it with elegant drama. But equal delights are found throughout the work. The vivace third movement has a delicate but lively opening counterpoint of dance-like tunes. And the finale rings with robust optimism.

The performance, invested with Jarvi's exceptional talent for bringing music to life, even has the appeal of a world premiere; it has been neglected since first performed 100 years ago when it won a competition conducted by Dvorak as director of America's National Conservatory of Music.

Completing the disc's program with the music of Samuel Barber, Jarvi has put the Chadwick work in appropriate company. The orchestral excerpts from Barber's opera "Vanessa," his "Music for a Scene from Shelley," and "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" are great 20th century American classics. Again, they are not heard as much as they deserve.

There is no question that this CD writes its own paragraph in recording history. It is certainly a high note in the recorded performances of our orchestra. It is also very good listening, but it requires repeated hearings to appreciate fully and you will have to wait until it becomes available in the middle of June.

CD makes Rachmaninov lovers rejoice

The enterprise of maestro Neeme Jarvi in bringing new music to Orchestra Hall and to his impressive discography is admirable. And his latest achievement is a coup of major proportions, making an important contribution to the available repertory of Rachmaninov's compositions for piano and orchestra.

Moreover, it is now available on the 10th CD by Jarvi and the DSO, just released, providing a rich new orchestral treasure of the composer's characteristically Russian musical imagery.

Of the three works on this CD, the principal composition is monumental but required the genius of pianist/arranger Alan Kogosowski to recognize that the original chamber work, "Trio Elegiacque," mourning the death of Tchaikovsky, was actually orchestral in character and scope.

His orchestration, performed here by himself at the piano with Jarvi and the Detroit Symphony, is an eloquent vindication of his theory. Notwithstanding Rachmaninov's youth when he composed it, the work is rich in the hallmarks that made his music popular and famous during his career as pianist/composer.

And Kogosowski's performance with the DSO recreates it in its fulsome, glorious, mournful mood. Moreover, the design of the work to honor the memory of Rachmaninov's friend and mentor, gives it a distinction that allows it to take its own unique place among the composer's other great works for piano and orchestra.

With the complete mastery of sprawling works like this now very familiar to his Detroit fans, Jarvi has given the orchestration, now renamed "Concerto Elegiacque," a powerful drama and momentum that richly fulfills the tragic passions that Rachmaninov poured into his mourning for the death of his friend. The music and the performance alike are well worthy of the profound sentiments and magnificent artistry of this creation.

A more cerebral orchestration, without piano, has been created by Rumanian conductor Corneliu Combraneanu and is included here in its premier recording. It was named by the composer in its original piano version as "Variations on a Theme of Corelli" and once again it appears to have just been waiting for orchestral treatment. It may also have been waiting for Jarvi's powers of interpretation, for in this performance of the new orchestration, the variations make profoundly fascinating music that explores a wide range of mood and expression. While the original piano version achieved its principal significance as a precursor of Rachmaninov's hugely successful "Variations on a Theme of Paganini," this performance now rivals the fascination and excitement of that work.

Concluding the 68 minutes of music, the lovely "Vocalise" in an orchestration by the composer himself, stands almost as a charming afterthought, like an encore to treat the listener to just one last pleasantry before the concert ends. It may still be best in its original version as a song without words for soprano with accompaniment, but Jarvi's sure hand at the podium evokes the fluid character of the pensive, wordless song with the same elegance that made the original a hit when first performed.

No question, this disc is a treasure not only for fans of Rachmaninov but also for connoisseurs of orchestral performance with elegant style and the most beautifully sensitive shading of every phrase.

Track regional brings out area athletes' best

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Steve Zaranek's words were prophetic last week when the Grosse Pointe South girls track coach said that the 3,200-meter relay team he had put together for the state regional "could have a real good time."

His prediction turned out to be an understatement.

The team of Kristine Mueller, Amy Zanglin, Katy Lupo and Rachel O'Byrne ran a blistering 9:37.4 to win the relay at the regional event hosted by South. It also broke the school record of 9:48.8 set by the Lady Devils when they finished fifth in last year's state meet and was the best time in the state this season.

O'Byrne's final split was 2:20.7 — the second-fastest in South history.

The performance of the Lady Devils' relay team highlighted a fine day for all four Grosse Pointe teams that competed in the regional.

South's girls collected 98 points to finish second to defending regional champion Detroit King, which had 134 points. Grosse Pointe North was third with 55 points.

Local schools also did well in the boys portion of the meet. North was third with 84 points and South took fourth place with 69. King was also the boys winner with 110 1/2 points, while De La Salle was runner-up with 88.

"We scored in every individual event," said Pat Wilson, who coaches North's boys. "I thought it was a great day. Some of our dual meets recently have been kind of dull and our best times were posted a while back, so I was a little concerned, but the kids were ready for this one."

Eric Peters had an outstanding day for the Norwemen. The junior sprinter won the 100 in 11.3, finished first in the long jump with a leap of 21-feet-9 1/2 and was second in the 200 in an thrilling race with King's Carlos Jackson. Jackson was clocked in 22.5 and Peters was a tenth of a second behind after the two ran step-for-step over the last 75 meters.

"This was the first time Eric has had to run all six races, preliminaries and finals, so we were really happy when he got off a real good jump on his first longjump attempt," Wilson said. "That was the only jump he made."

It was good enough to beat his closest competition — his brother Hosen — who was runner-up with a leap of 21.4. It was the best effort of the season for both Peters, with Hosen topping his previous best by 10 inches.

North's other state qualifiers — the first two placed in the event — automatically qualify for the state meet — were Shareef Simaika, who was second in the 500 hurdles in 41.4, and Bill Stevenson, who was runner-up in the 3,200 in 10:02.

Simaitka broke the last hurdle, but he was so far ahead of the rest of the field at the time of the mishap he still finished second.

Other individual place winners for the Norsemen were Bob Stevenson in the 1,600, Simaitka in the 100 hurdles, Dave Slane in the 800, Tom Fennell in the shot put and discus, Tom Paquin and Nick Goerke in the pole vault and Bill Clark in the high jump.

Bob Stevenson has been waiting for a breakous race and he got it in the 1,500," Wilson said. "He ran a 4:35.5 and his previous best was 4:44. Fennell had his best in both throws and Clark just missed winning the Claret jumpoff when he caught his heel on the bar."

North's 3,200 relay team of Kevin Grant, Justin Finnes, Mike Klan and Mike Weigand each posted season-best splits on the way to a sixth-place finish.

South's boys qualified the 800 and 400 relay teams, which were each second to King, and the Blue Devils had three individual qualifiers.

Freshman Dennis Lopez was second in the pole vault as he cleared 11-8 and senior Matt Reynolds had a second-place throw of 165-5 in the discus.

Ron Waters was third in the long jump with a leap of 20-11, but his effort met the state qualifying standard.

Taking individual places for South's boys were Chris Johnson in the 300 hurdles, Michael Lahey in the 200, Matt Debacki and Adam Rhodes in the 3,200 and Guthrie Hardesty in the pole vault.

Sophomore Aimee Vasse won the 3,200 in 11:41.6 for South's other regional victory.

Other state finalists were Katie Weed, second in the 1,600 in 5:31.6; Lisa McCurdy, second in the 300 hurdles in 49:2; the 1,600 relay team of Mia van, Gretchen Carter, Lupo and Zanglin, which was runner-up in 4:09.2; and Lupo, who finished second in the 400 in 1:00.9.

Rachel O'Byrne placed in the 100 hurdles and the 1,600 and 800 runs. Other individual place finishers for South's girls included Becca Walter in the 300 hurdles, Dara O'Byrne in the 1,600 and 3,200 runs and Kate Crowley in the 3,200. McCurdy in the 100 hurdles and long jump, Carter in the 400, Zanglin in the 800 and Weed in the 3,200.

North's girls had a pair of state qualifiers in senior Anne Maliszewski, who was second in the 100 in 13.0, and freshman Katie Daniels, who was

Members of Grosse Pointe South's girls 3,200-meter relay team celebrate after learning that they broke the school record in the event with a time of 9:37.4 at last weekend's Class A regional hosted by South. It was the fastest time in the state this season.

Eric Paters of Grosse Pointe North is a couple steps ahead of the rest of the field during a preliminary heat in the 100-meter dash at the Class A regional at Grosse Pointe South. Paters went on to win the 100 finals. He was second in the 200 and first in the long jump.

"We tried to figure out what to do with Anne, because she could have qualified in the 300, 400 or 400," said North coach Charles Buhagiar. "With the long jump in the afternoon, it would have been too many races for her to try to qualify in more than one so we picked the 100 because that's where she's been the most consistent all year."

The strategy worked as Maliszewski finished second behind Monica Moore of Murray-Wright, who had a winning effort in the 100.

Maliszewski might have done even better if the 100 hadn't had to be run a second time because of a timing malfunction on the initial start.

"I'm Anne's coach so I'm biased, but I think she was the first time," Buhagiar said. "I know her time seemed slower the second time."

Maliszewski also placed in the 400 and long jump and was in the 1,600 relay team that was fifth.

Daniels' performance was something of a surprise to her coach.

"I wasn't surprised that she was able to stay with the leaders over the last two laps," Buhagiar said. "What surprised me was that she went out early and was right up with the leaders on the first two laps."

North's all-freshman 3,200 relay team of Carolyn Pruitt, Daniels, Lisa Tye and Erika Dattero just missed qualifying for the state as it finished third.

"We got a fine effort from Jean Seo, who placed in both hurdles and two relays, and from our two sophomore throwers, Michelle Peleman and Renee Kreig, who each placed in the shot put and discus."

Other individuals placing for North's girls were Cara Colucci and Becky Pranger in the 1,600 and Molly Prater in the 300 hurdles.

North placed all four relay teams, including the 800 quartet of Sarah Merz, Adriane Salomon, Leilani Afrin and Paters; the 400 team of Merz, Seo, Afrin and Jenny Wirsing; and the 1,600 team of Maliszewski, Seo, Pruitt and Salomon.

"What's nice is that Anne and Leilani are the only seniors among the kids who placed for us," Buhagiar said.

Following are the winning efforts in each event, along with the North and South athletes who placed:

Everything clicks for ULS

By Chuck Klonek
Sports Editor

University Liggett School's girls soccer team is playing so well this year that coach David Buchkral's good moves turn into great ones.

And now the wind even blows in the Lady Knights' favor.

Took last week's Metro Conference showdown with Lutheran North, for example.

Backhurst sent Brooke Wright into the game as a defensive replacement in the first half with ULS trailing 1-0. Moments later, Wright scored the tying goal and got the Lady Knights rolling to win their 3-1 victory over the Mustangs that clinched the conference championship.

"We put Brooke in because she's such a good defensive player, but to have her score is like an extra bonus," Backhurst said.

Lutheran North took a 1-0 lead nine minutes into the game, but that didn't slow down ULS. Teige set up Wright's goal with a nice crossing pass to the far post, and Wright came up from her out-of-midfield position and timed a shot just inside the far post.

Five minutes later, Melanie Buhalski passed to Teige on the left wing. She attempted a crossing pass, but the wind took the ball and carried it into the net.

Lutheran North came out applying heavy pressure at the start of the second half, but with the Mustangs pinching in, ULS threw a break. Buhalski passed to Teige, who scored on a cannon-like shot from 20 yards out.

The Lady Knights dodged their final bullet with five minutes left when North drilled a penalty kick just over the crossbar.

"I think my sigh of relief could have been heard around the whole field when that ball went over the top of the net," Backhurst said.

With the championship safely in hand, ULS had one more goal — to complete its first undefeated season.

That was accomplished with a 1-0 victory over Cranbrook Kingswood in the regular season and league final at the ULS. The Lady Knights a 12-0-1 overall mark and 8-0 Metro Conference record.

"We were a little bit down after the big game against Lutheran North, but I think it's the sign of a good team to win against a good opponent while having an off day," Backhurst said.

Once again, a piece of coaching strategy paid immediate dividends.

I moved Abby Tompkins from midfield to the regular forward because I thought we had a mismatch with the girl who was marking her," Backhurst said. "She wasn't quite as swift as Abby, but she was a game-changer. Tompkins could make something happen up front."

"I did."

Tompkins stole the ball inside the 35-yard line, got a step on the ball and crossed it into the net to give ULS a 1-0 lead with about five minutes left in the first half.

Another Kingswood turnover resulted in a break. Teige passed to Teige, who scored on a cannon-like shot into the second half and Teige collected her second goal of the game when she converted a pass from a Julianne Casasin with 15 minutes to play.

"We had a very strong defensive effort in that game," Backhurst said. "That was our ninth shutout in 10 games. Laura Haggerty has done a great job marking the best player on the other team, while Karin Saldon has been very scrappy and tenacious on defense. Laura Samotij and Katy Spiller have played well, too. This could be the best defensive group I've had here by the time they're through playing."

Goalkeeper Melissa Buhalski has also come up strong for ULS.

"Our defense has kept her from facing a lot of shots this year, but she seems to make at least one big save a game — the kind that picks people up," Backhurst said.

Earlier, ULS beat Lutheran Northwest and trounced Harper Woods 10-0.

In the Northwest game, Melissa Buhalski suffered a cut mouth when she was stepped on during a goalmouth scramble so her sister Melanie replaced her in goal and completed the shutout. Tompkins scored all three goals in that contest.

Tompkins led the way with four goals against Harper Woods, while Teige scored twice. Spicer, Liz Eldridge, Saldon and Casasin added a goal apiece.

Grosse Pointe South's baseball team caught fire too late to win a league championship, but the Blue Devils are hoping their recent success will provide momentum for the state playoffs.

"We've won four straight league games, but I wish we could have some of those early game backs that we lost," said coach Dan Griesbaum after Monday's 10-1 win over Romeo in the Macomb Area Conference White Division.

"We're playing so well now, but we're 7-5 and there are three teams tied for first at 8-4 with one game left. The best we can do is tie for second."

Hitting is one of the reasons for the Blue Devils' improved record.

"Chris Fox is back and he's hitting well," Griesbaum said. "We didn't have him early in the season. Our pitching has been good all along and now our defense is getting better."

Fox missed several early season games while he was playing in the national junior hockey championships.

South will host a district tournament on Saturday, June 4. The Blue Devils play Detroit King at 10 a.m., while Detroit Public School rival Southeastern will play a regular season game at 12:30 p.m. The winners play for the district title at 3 p.m.

"We hope our improved play carries us in the tournament," Griesbaum said. "Southeastern is ranked ninth in the state in Class A so we're looking to pull an upset on them."

Fox led the offensive attack against Romeo with a 4-for-5 performance that included three RBIs. Sean Rechi knocked in two runs with a pair of singles and Brian Nugent had a single and double and two RBIs.

Eugene Agnone was the beneficiary of the 16-hit attack. The senior lefthander scattered seven hits, struck out six and walked one.

"He's been throwing real well lately," Griesbaum said. "He's very effective when he doesn't walk people and he's had only one walk in each of his last two starts."

South broke a 1-1 tie with three runs in the third inning. Jay Harrington started the rally with a double, took third on an error and scored when Nugent bounced into a fielder's choice. Todd Malbout doubled and Rechi followed with a two-run single.

Last week South posted its second victory against MAC White co-leader Warren-Mott, beating the Marauders 6-3 behind the combined eight-hit pitching of Harrington and Karl Davids.

Harrington struck out 10 and walked three in 8 2/3 innings. He was relieved by Davids with the bases loaded and two out in the seventh. Davids retired the only batter he faced on a groundout to record his third save.

South scored five runs in the first inning on six straight singles. Cory Geer capped the outburst with a two-run single and Rechi, Bill Stars and Mike Fomale each had RBI hits. The Blue Devils added another run in the second on consecutive singles by Nugent, Fox and Malbout.

Fox and Malbout each had three hits, while Stars collected two.

Earlier, Agnone pitched a two-hitter through six innings in a 10-5 victory over Ford II. He struck out eight and walked one. Davids pitched the seventh.

Agnone helped himself with two hits, including a double, and three RBI. Harrington had two hits and knocked in a pair of runs and Rechi had two hits and an RBI.

South broke the game open with a four-run sixth, featuring an RBI double by Ryan Messar, RBI singles by Geer and Harrington and a sacrifice fly by Malbout.

ULS shows maturity in playoff tuneups

John Fowler is confident that his University Liggett School boys lacrosse team is ready for the state playoffs that started this week.

"He became a believer when the Knights dropped a 4-2 decision to defending state champion East Grand Rapids after beating Grosse Pointe North by an identical 4-2 score."

"We were a very mature in our composure in each of those games," Fowler said. "That was encouraging from a team that had a lot of inexperience a month ago. We cleared very well against (East Grand Rapids) and we used a variety of rides or forechecks. The North game was a good experience for us in beating a zone. They took away the easy inside points and their goalie (George Christensen) played very well and stopped our outside shot."

ULS had beaten North 17-1 a week earlier, but the rematch was nothing like the first game.

The game was tied 3-2 at halftime. Fowler named that they would until Brad Espy and John McNaughton scored fourth-quarter goals while the Norsemen were shorthanded.

Espy finished with two goals and Hank Ackerman had a goal and three assists for the Knights, who are 5-3 in Division AA of the Michigan Interscholastic Lacrosse Association and 8-5 overall.

McNaughton and Tom Waldron were the ULS marksmen against East Grand Rapids, which scored its fourth goal with 30 seconds remaining.

In earlier action, the Knights beat Troy Atters 9-3 on McNaughton's goal in the second overtime. ULS also beat Grosse Pointe South 7-1 and edged Bishop Foley 8-6. The Knights were beaten 12-9 by Cranbrook and bowed 9-8 to L'Anse au Lac.

Pat Molano leads ULS with 29 goals, followed by Espy with 20, Ackerman 16, Steve Fitzgerald 12 and McNaughton 10.

Fowler praised the play of defenseman Don Wolford and

PLEASE DON'T DELAY! SPAY or NEUTER YOUR PET TODAY!
An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy.

Lifelong partners since kindergarten, Stan & Dave would like a chance to become lifelong partners with you! Dave Levy and Stan Schwartz, the owners of Classic Window & Siding, have been friends and partners in business ever since they were little kids. Though, as youngsters, back in the days of Kool-Aid stands, they probably never suspected that they would grow up to be the men behind the East area's most respected name in windows and siding. On the other hand, if their Kool-Aid was any indication of what was to come, on a hot summer day, they knew even then what it meant to be in demand.

Antiques by Ralph & Terry Kovel

Q. I have a 9-inch blue vase marked "Catalina Pottery, Made in U.S.A." Is it old?

A. Catalina Pottery operated from 1927 to 1937 when the firm was sold to Gladding McBean Co. and moved to Los Angeles. Many of the original molds were used, and the name continued in use until 1941. In the past few years, there has been renewed interest in many of the California potteries that worked after 1920. Prices are beginning to rise.

Q. I have a strange mystery object. It looks like a small metal washing-machine wringer. It has two corrugated copper rollers and a handle to turn them. On the base it says, "Star, Pat. Oct. 1875...Reissued March 25, 1880." We tried putting paper through the "wringer" and it came out with impressed ridges almost like corrugated paper.

A. In the 1860s, a number of different types of "fluting irons" were patented. These special irons were used to iron ruffles and pleats on clothing. A solid cylindrical piece was heated, then placed inside the roller. Extra cylinders were kept on the stove to heat. Your Star fluter was made by the American Machine Co. of Philadelphia.

TIP: Use Simichrome polish to clean metal mesh bags. Unpainted mesh bags can be cleaned in a solution of equal parts ammonia and liquid laundry detergent. Swish the bag up and down in the mixture. Rinse, then dry with a hair dryer to keep rust from forming.

Q. My 14-inch-high vase is marked "Dickens Ware Weller." It has a green-to-blue background and pictures a man playing a stringed instrument. How old is it?

A. You probably own a piece of second-line Dickens Ware. It was made between 1897 to about 1905 by Weller Pottery of Zanesville, Ohio. The picture shows a minstrel playing a mandolin. Dickens Ware has been steadily rising in price for the past 10 years. Your vase is worth more than $1,500.

THE HAZARDS OF LEAD

Old glass vinegar cruets and wine decanters have joined the list of items that may be hazardous to your health. Recent studies of the hazards of lead poisoning warn about foil wrappers on old bottles of wine, paint dust from refinishing wood-work and acidic liquids kept in old glass bottles.

It has been shown that if wine is stored in a lead glass decanter for a long time, some of the lead can leach into the wine. Vinegar in an old glass cruet also can cause problems. It is safe to fill the containers and use the liquid within a few days. Do not store vinegar or wine in old lead glass containers for any length of time. Commercial bottles are not made with lead glass.

Q. My pressed glass jar is 12-1/2 inches high and 5 inches in diameter. The Statue of Liberty is embossed on the side above an eagle. Do you know anything about it?

A. Many commemorative pieces of pressed glass remain a mystery. Your jar was probably made about the time that the Statue of Liberty was unveiled in 1886. It is pictured in a book printed in 1948, so we know it is not new. However, it could have been made at any time between 1886 and 1948.

We just heard that the newest collectible for the pre-teen set is key rings. They hook the dangling key rings in bunches or carry or wear them. Look for older key rings at flea markets.

Give me a break — coffee break that is

Where would the world be without coffee? Most of us would find it hard to face a new day without that first heartening cup, and think how much business is transacted during office coffee breaks.

Throughout the centuries, poets and writers have sung of coffee with passion clad in flowery words. The composer Bach was moved by it to compose his beautiful "Coffee Cantata." Made in dozens of ways, drunk thick or thin, dark or light, strong or weak, pure or diluted with other substances, hot or iced, coffee stands as a symbol of hospitality throughout the world.

The United States consumes more coffee than any other country, but Scandinavians, Belgians, Italians and South Americans consume it in almost equal quantities.

The coffee plant is thought to have its origins in Abyssinia or Ethiopia, but then gradually spread to other countries bordering the Indian Ocean and the eastern Mediterranean. Around 1720 it was brought to the French West Indies, then to Brazil, which is now the largest coffee producer. However, Guatemala, Colombia, El Salvador, Costa Rica, Java and Malaya depend on coffee for much of their economy. It is a tropical plant and grows best in a hot, moist climate.

The trees themselves, as well as the picking and processing of the coffee beans, demand constant attention. The fruit of the tree, called the coffee cherry, must be picked by hand because blossoms, green cherries and ripe cherries occur all at the same time.

The cherry consists of an outer skin, then pulp, then a parchment-like skin, and then a thin, silvery skin, all around two beans. To process the cherry, the outer skin and pulp are removed, then the cherry is dried for about 20 days. After that it is hulled to remove the next two layers of skin. The beans are then graded for size and weight and hand-inspected for uniformity in color and to eliminate imperfections, and then they are ready for export.

No wonder coffee prices are so high!

Later they will be roasted, ground, and, in the case of instant coffee, still further processed by being brewed and then having the water removed. Decaffeinated coffee also has the caffeine removed.

Coffee has been the inspiration for more flights of fancy than any other non-alcoholic beverage.

In Turkey, coffeehouses have abounded for centuries, where men sat cross-legged on cushions while the precious brew was prepared before their eyes. Each tiny cup of coffee must have the proper amount of creamy foam on its surface. This is called the kaimaik, a symbol of without which the cup of coffee would be a disgrace.

European coffeehouses differed in appearance but were attended with equal enthusiasm. There were hundreds of them in London in the 18th century. They were the gathering places of poets, philosophers, artists and politicians, and admission to this erudite company was a penny.

In Colonial America, too, coffeehouses were common. Here coffee consumption was given an added impetus by the imposition of taxes on tea.

Coffee was customarily served in shallow bowls and the coffeehouse habitue called for "a dish of coffee." Handles were added to the bowls toward the end of the 18th century, and in late Victorian days mustache cups, with a special protective rim, were popular because of the fashion for large mustaches.

Thomas Jefferson considered himself a coffee connoisseur and in his writings there are many references to coffee, and its preparation. He served it in small cups with deep saucers and was adamant about its being served very fresh, very strong and very hot.

In Colonial America, long before Jefferson's day, seeds from the Kentucky coffee tree were used as a substitute for imported coffee beans by families in rural areas from New York to Tennessee. Throughout New England, especially, every kind of nut or grain was parched or boiled in the effort to find a substitute for coffee. Two of the most popular were rye grain and chestnuts.

Coffee is used in many ways. Primarily a beverage, it is also popular as flavoring for desserts, ice cream, syrups, liqueurs and candy. And many a recipe for chocolate cakes and cookies includes a dash of coffee for an extra touch.

Iced coffee is also a Turkish idea. In this country its popularity rivals that of iced tea, and there are some dedicated iced coffee devotees who drink it year-round when the rest of us savor a steaming cup while the snow flies.

When choosing a builder, price isn't everything

In the market for a new home? If so, you should shop for your builder as thoroughly as you shop for the home itself. Whether you are buying a condominium, a townhouse, a house in a subdivision or a custom-built house, the quality of your home will be determined by the quality of the builder.

"Most buyers give a lot of thought to the style of home they want," says Robert R. Jones, president of the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan. "Usually, though, they don't think enough about the builder. It's important that they find one who can build the style they want the way they want it."

The real estate section of your local newspaper is a good place to start. You can find out which builders are active in your area, what types of homes are being built, and what price you might expect to pay.

In addition, the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan has a list of builders who construct homes in various areas. Local real estate agents are also often helpful in conducting the search.

Friends and relatives can provide useful recommendations. Ask them about builders they have dealt with or for the names of their friends who have recently had a good experience with a builder.

After making a list of builders, make notes about their reputations and quality of work. Recording factual information as well as your own impressions will make comparisons easier later on.

Perhaps the best way to learn about builders is to visit homes they have built and talk to the owners. Ask the top builders on your list for addresses of their recently built houses. At the very least, drive by to see if the homes are visually appealing and, if possible, get the phone numbers of the homeowners so you can see how they feel about the homes after having lived in them.

Ask people if they are happy with their homes and if the builder did what was promised and performed in a timely manner. The most telling question of all may be whether they would buy another home from the same builder. Most people will tell you if they are pleased with their homes; if not, they usually will want to tell you about their experiences.

When you buy a home, you are looking for quality and value. The construction features of the home, such as the detail work on cabinets and trim, will tell you a great deal about the prospective builder. Price is important, but value is more so — just because a home is more or less expensive than another does not mean it is the better value.

"Value takes more than just price into account," Jones said. "The quality of the construction and the location of the home, along with the price, make up the value of the home. Each home will have a different value for different buyers."

Another important factor in selecting a builder is the warranty provided on the home. Get a copy of the builder's warranty and read it over. If you feel you need help understanding any aspect of it, take it to an attorney. Don't wait until you move in and a problem arises to find out what coverage you have.

"Most builders offer some form of written warranty," Jones added. "Many of them back their own work while others offer a warranty backed by an insurance company. To get an insured warranty, you must buy from a builder who belongs to an insurance program."

Another thing to find out from a prospective builder is what kind of service you can expect after the sale. Typically, a builder makes two service calls on a new home. One comes between one and three months after move-in, while the other comes at around 11 months, usually right before a one-year warranty would expire. In an emergency, the builder should send someone to your home immediately.

Be thorough in choosing your builder. Ask a lot of questions and make sure you get specific answers. If you receive the answers verbally rather than in writing, take notes. Never hesitate to ask a question for fear of sounding stupid or uninformed. What seems like a stupid question might yield an informative answer.

"Buying a home is one of the biggest and most important purchases you'll make in your lifetime," Jones said. "By doing your homework, you'll be able to look for your home with a sense of confidence and the knowledge that will help make the right decision."

Home Tips

OLD BOOKS — Here's a tip on what to do with old encyclopedias and dictionaries. Our local Friends of the Library group accepts donations of all books of any kind for their semi-annual book sale. They sell these materials at garage-sale prices and give the proceeds to the library to purchase new books. I suspect many other "friends" groups do the same. Call your local library. Lydia C., Worcester, Mass.

THERE IT GOES AGAIN — Here is a recycling tip given to me by my mother. Instead of giving all your old belts to the Salvation Army, drive a nail through the middle of a belt on a wall in your garage or workshop and buckle up your lawn chairs, water hoses, etc. Ginny V., St. Louis, Mo.

HARD WATER FIGHTER — Another use for white vinegar is to add one tablespoon to the bottom of the dishwasher and you can use any dishwasher soap.

The dishes come out sparkling clean, even where I live where water is hard and has many mineral deposits. Stephanie V., East Fishkill, N.Y.

LABEL IT — Label all containers with leftovers by using masking tape and a felt-tip pen. This way, there will be no surprises in the refrigerator. Ann P., Hallieville, Ark.

Tune in and turn on to color

Color does not stand alone, nor is there color without light. And since light is constantly changing, we need to know that when we shop.

Did you know that color is a part of everything we purchase and the surrounding light affects our decisions? That's why that gallon of paint mysteriously changed from soft pink to a bright cotton candy pink in the trunk of the car.

Subtle changes in light not only can change and affect how colors look but also can change the mood of the room.

Here is some "wizdom":

- Natural light changes throughout the day. Colors are at their peak at mid-day. If you are a photographer, take your "mood" pictures before 10 a.m. or after 4 p.m. If you are selecting colors for the interior of your home, pick colors at the time of day you'll be using the room the most.

- Northern light tends to be cool and consistent. That's why artists who work with natural light prefer their studios to face north. You may want to decorate a north-facing room by using warm colors, such as yellows, oranges or reds.

- Eastern light gives a yellow cast, especially in the morning hours, and then slowly evens out throughout the day. Remember this when selecting colors for the room and time it will be used.

- Southern light always makes a room glow. It feels great during the cooler seasons but may need to be cooled down for the summer. Use cool accents of colors in greens, purples or blue. By evening as the sun moves to the west the room can take on a red-dish glow.

- Western light also changes throughout the day. It goes from a cool light to a warm toasty glow at sunset. A combination of warm and cool colors can be used. But again, remember to select your colors to complement the area where you'll be spending the most time.

- Artificial light: The type of lampshade and the kind of bulb and its intensity can also influence the colors in your room. Incandescent bulbs emit a "yellowish" cast and can dull colors. Fluorescent bulbs commonly give off a cool cast of blue or green, (looks great on a green salad but doesn't do much for a red apple). Halogen bulbs are the best to mimic natural light. They show off colors as close to what they really are.

Take your time when selecting color for anything. Remember, color is free: we are free to choose from a vast array of products and materials. Color only becomes costly when we have to re-do. From paint to carpeting, cabinets and even clothing, always make your selections in the right light. No more surprises when you open the paint can or turn on the light.

Yes, eating well can help keep you well

Q. Are there specific foods that an adult should eat that will help prevent illness?

A. No diet can ward off diseases and aging indefinitely, but eating more fruits (two to four daily) and vegetables (three to five) may help reduce the risk of illness. Vitamins C, E and beta carotene are considered protective nutrients and have anti-oxidant properties. These vitamins, as found in certain foods, may be helpful in reducing the risk of certain cancers, heart disease and some forms of cataracts.

Q. Does washing food improve its safety?

A. It's OK to scrub most fruit and vegetables with a vegetable brush and warm water. Scrubbing removes soil bacteria, pesticide residue and the wax coating found on some fruits and vegetables. Do not use soap or detergent for scrubbing; ingesting soap or detergent can be harmful. Scrub apples before making unpasteurized apple cider. This is particularly important if apples drop on the ground. After scrubbing, rinse again in clear water. Don't wash cheese to remove the mold. Toxins formed by mold might be absorbed into the cheese. You can safely remove mold from hard cheese such as cheddar and colby by cutting a 1-inch section around the mold. If you detect mold on soft cheese, such as processed cheeses and cottage cheese, throw them out; there is no way you can safely remove the mold.

Q. Is the fat substitute "Simplese" safe to consume?

A. In 1990 Simplese became the first fat-free product to gain approval of the Federal Food and Drug Administration. It is a mixture of food proteins, such as egg whites, whey and milk protein, that is cooked and blended to form tiny round particles that trap water. Inside the mouth, the particles roll over one another, and the tongue perceives them as a creamy, smooth liquid similar to fat. It is used in foods such as cheese, dairy products, baked goods, frozen desserts, salad dressings and sour cream. Foods made with fat substitutes contain less fat and fewer calories (fat provides nine calories per gram, Simplese supplies one to two calories per gram). Since heat causes it to gel and lose its creaminess, it cannot be used for frying or baking.

Dealing with the dreaded dandelion dilemma

Whether they try to cut them, dig them or dynamite them, dealing with dandelions can cause frustration for many homeowners who don't know how to treat the problem.

Because dandelions have such long roots — sometimes up to 2 feet — it is very difficult to get rid of them by simply yanking them out of the ground. Digging weeds by hand may give immediate results, but because the root is still growing underground, a new flower quickly replaces the old on your lawn's surface, and you're back to square one.

According to the lawn care experts at The Scotts Co., there is an easier way to solve the problem — apply a broadleaf weed control. A broadleaf weed control goes into action immediately after application, usually affecting the weed's top-growth within the first 24 hours. After a week, the dandelion is shriveled up and dead. The entire plant is gone — roots and all — 4 weeks after application.

"By applying a weed control to troublesome dandelions, not only is the flower affected, but the root begins to disintegrate and eventually dies," explains Scotts turfgrass expert Ashton Ritchie. "Unfortunately, homeowners waste a lot of time and energy for a temporary solution when they pull weeds. A weed control is not only more effective in getting rid of dandelions, but it's less painful on your knees as well."

One of the most time- and labor-efficient ways of controlling broadleaf weeds is to apply a combination product which contains both a weed control and a dose of fertilizer to help your lawn regain some of the important nutrients that dandelions may have stolen and to help the grass fill in the bare spots left by the weeds. Scotts Turf Builder Plus 2 weed-and-feed puts an end to unsightly dandelions and other broadleaf weeds, while feeding your lawn important nutrients it needs to grow into thick, green turf. Turf Builder Plus 2 consists of uniform particles that each contain timed-release nitrogen plus phosphorus, potassium, and weed control to ensure consistent weeding as well as feeding which lasts up to two months.

Ritchie says the best time to apply a broadleaf control is when the weed is actively growing, but the application can be effective whenever any part of the plant is showing. Since the control works through the surface of the weed's leaves, it is important to make the application to moist grass when no rain is forecast within 24 hours, and when traffic on the lawn will be minimal. This reduces the chance of fertilizer particles being dislodged from the leaves' surface.

No matter which way you slice it, a dandelion will keep popping up. Dandelions are so resilient, that even if you cut them and planted the pieces (frames 1 and 2) dandelion plants will spring up again (frame 3). The only effective way to treat dandelions is with a broadleaf weed control that kills the plant, root and all.

How to make a winning offer on the home you want

By Doug Stranahan
Division President
Century 21 Great Lakes Inc.

Offering too much or too little money for a home can be one of the many pitfalls involved in the home buying process. Obviously, offering too much money can be costly for the home buyer. If the offer is unrealistically low, the negotiations can be stymied by an insulted seller who may refuse to consider future counter-offers.

With help from a real estate sales associate and a little common sense, however, a home buyer should be able to make a reasonable offer that jump-starts negotiations with a seller.

A good first step in the process is to compare the seller's asking price with the prices actually paid for similar homes in the same area within the past year. Using local Multiple Listing Service (MLS) data, a real estate sales associate can provide a list of selling prices for similar homes and help the buyer make comparisons.

Typically, a buyer's first inclination is to make an offer which is comparable to one of the lowest recently accepted offers for similar homes. The seller may not be overly enthusiastic about this type of first offer, but may not immediately reject it either — as long as it's reasonable. In any case, researching selling prices of similar homes usually provides a figure which can be used as a starting point for the negotiation process.

An evaluation of selling prices may not be possible if the home in which a buyer is interested does not compare with others in the area. In this case, the buyer could have the home's value professionally appraised. There is always the risk, however, that another buyer could make an offer and purchase the home before an appraisal is completed.

The actual offer should be made in writing and accompanied by a deposit, or "earnest money." The written offer should be drafted with your real estate agent, and because it is a legally binding document, you may choose to have it reviewed by a lawyer. It should also contain a time limit for the seller to accept, reject or negotiate your offer on the property.

By submitting a deposit check with the written offer, the buyer demonstrates that he or she is serious about purchasing the home. A deposit of 5 to 10 percent of the buyer's offer is not abnormal, but a larger deposit may be more encouraging to the seller. In a situation where two buyers make the same offer, the seller will often select the buyer with the bigger deposit.

In certain cases, the deposit check should be payable to an escrow company. This is usually done so that the earnest money can be immediately returned to the buyer if the seller rejects the offer. The earnest money can sometimes be turned over to the seller, however, if an offer is accepted and the buyer later defaults on the sale.

Making a well-researched offer and applying a reasonable amount of earnest money best demonstrates a buyer's serious interest and encourages the seller. These are the best steps a buyer can take toward successful negotiations in the home buying process.

Housing affordability index highest since 1970s

During the first quarter of 1994, the purchasing power of home buyers continued to rival levels not seen since the early 1970s, according to the National Association of Realtors' housing affordability index.

NAR's composite housing affordability index, which measures affordability factors for all home buyers, was 140.9 in the first quarter of 1994, compared to 132.5 during the same period a year ago. When the index measures 100, a family earning the median income has exactly the amount needed to purchase a median-priced resale home, using conventional financing and a 20 percent down payment.

Since the median is the midpoint, the composite index shows that half the families in the nation had at least 140.9 percent of the income needed to qualify for the purchase of a home with a median price of $107,400. The typical family could afford a home costing $151,300.

Despite a slight dip in the affordability index for January, February and March, compared to the previous quarter, affordability conditions have not been as consistently favorable since early 1973. The slight drop between the fourth quarter 1993 and the first quarter 1994 is attributed to the recent rise in mortgage interest rates.

In comparison, NAR's first-time home buyer index, which shows the ability of renters who are prime potential first-time buyers to qualify for a mortgage on a starter home, was 91.6. When this index equals 100, the typical first-time buyer can afford the typical starter home under existing financial conditions with a 10 percent down payment. The first-time buyer median income represents the typical income of a renter family with wage earners between the ages of 25 and 44.

Although the first-time buyer index continued to lag behind the composite index, it improved from 86.7 during

The 1994 first-quarter, first-time buyer index shows that the qualifying income needed for conventional financing covering 90 percent of a $91,300 starter home was $26,666. Yet the median income of prime first-time buyers was $24,436, a difference of $2,230. Even so, a typical first-time buyer could afford a home costing $89,200.

"Despite the recent rise in mortgage interest rates, affordability conditions remain at a level not seen in more than two decades. If you look at the market, home sales are up across the board, indicating that consumers recognize that the conditions are right to purchase a home of their own," said NAR president Robert H. Elrod.

"Current market conditions are expected to remain steady, which could open the home ownership door for thousands of families this year — both first-time and repeat buyers."

NAR executive vice president Almon R. "Bud" Smith noted that the affordability gap between first-time buyers and move-ups has slowly climbed over the past year with the 1994 first-quarter gap at 35.0 percent, compared to 34.6 percent a year ago.

"We are confident that proposals affecting the Federal Housing Administration's (FHA) single-family mortgage insurance program could help close this gap by increasing home ownership opportunities," Smith said. Those FHA proposals are presently before Congress awaiting approval, he added.

Smith explained that the major difference between first-time and move-up buyers is that first-time buyers don't have equity to put into their purchase, and as a result, often have difficulty in raising a down payment.

"The proposed changes in the FHA programs could help ease that down payment burden and help increase the value of this particular financing tool in the marketplace," he said.

Under current affordability conditions for all buyers during the first quarter of 1994, a family earning $20,000 a year would have sufficient income to qualify for a $79,000 home with a $63,200 loan. A family earning $30,000 would qualify for a $118,500 home using a $94,800 loan. For a family earning $40,000, qualifying for a loan of $126,400 would enable them to purchase a $158,000 home. Finally, a family earning $50,000 annually would be able to buy a $197,500 home after qualifying for a $158,000 loan.

HUD outlines strategy to increase home ownership

A broad-based federal strategy to increase the rate of home ownership and expand affordable housing production was announced recently by U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) secretary Henry G. Cisneros during a speech to members of the National Association of Realtors.

Cisneros said a "comprehensive, national commitment to homeownership" could greatly help spur economic growth and urban revitalization. "It's time to turn things around, and I know we can do it," he said.

The HUD plan is based on four main strategies:

1) To increase the availability of financing insured by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA);

2) Develop a plan specifically to expand home ownership opportunities for low- and moderate-income people;

3) Increase home ownership financing by working with state and local governments, as well as private sector sources of capital, such as pension funds and foundations;

4) Vigorously enforce anti-discrimination laws.

NAR president Bill Chee said HUD's plan indicates that the administration realizes the vital role housing plays in stimulating the economy.

"A strong housing sector is crucial to the nation's economic health," he said. "NAR looks forward to working with HUD on shaping a national housing policy that focuses on increasing home ownership."

Cisneros called the revival of FHA's single-family mortgage insurance program a "key element" in the housing production and home ownership strategy. Although use of the program had tapered off markedly in previous years, FHA use rose by 42 percent over the past year, assisting nearly 400,000 first-time buyers, he said.

HUD is planning to further expand FHA by proposing an increase in the program's mortgage insurance limit from the current maximum of $152,725 to $172,675, Cisneros said.

NAR said it would support such a measure; the association has long contended that FHS insurance limits should be adjusted to reflect home prices in high-cost markets. Such an increase would expand FHA's reach by enabling more buyers to use the program in more areas.

"We arrived at this proposal (raising the limit) after we took a look at middle-class working people in high-cost areas and discovered they couldn't get FHA loans. They make good money, but they live in communities where housing costs are high, and they can't accumulate enough money for down payments on conventional mortgages," Cisneros said.

In addition, HUD is considering a no-down payment FHA program targeted to low-income families in urban renewal areas. The mortgage insurance limit for this program would be restricted to about $75,000, and an income restriction would be imposed, which would possibly be 115 percent of area median income, Cisneros said. Users would not be required to pay closing costs under this program, he noted.

HUD also is considering a proposal to allow penalty-free withdrawals from individual retirement accounts to be used toward a down payment on a home. This plan would help alleviate the down payment shortage many buyers face, Cisneros said. The HUD proposal would permit withdrawals from the accounts of family members such as parents or grandparents to enable the buyer to make the purchase, he said. NAR has testified before Congress many times in support of such a plan.

Another part of HUD's home ownership strategy would involve helping working public housing residents to become home owners. Under this plan, they could purchase FHA-foreclosed homes or other publicly-owned single-family homes.

"Many meetings with public housing residents have convinced us that most of them prefer to buy and move to a private home of their own, rather than purchase their existing apartment," Cisneros said.

HUD is planning to act as a "catalyst" for housing capital, tapping new funding sources such as pension funds, life insurance companies, and other institutional investors, to draw more funds into home production and home ownership.

"Leveraging is key to all the new initiatives — using the federal government's constrained budget in coordination with the additional private and public investment, resources and expertise," he said.

Regarding anti-discrimination efforts, HUD's enforcement of the fair housing and fair lending laws is becoming increasingly aggressive, Cisneros noted.

"We are changing the ways that we do business, and we mean business. We cannot accomplish our goal of expanding affordable homeownership unless we end discrimination and allow genuine choice," Cisneros said. "NAR strongly supports equal opportunity in housing, and promotes fair housing education for members and the public. The association has an ongoing agreement with HUD, the Voluntary Affirmative Marketing Agreement (VAMA), which commits members to compliance with the federal fair housing law."

COLDWELL BANKER SCHWEITZER REAL ESTATE

This large home is designed for a narrow lot

By W.D. Farmer

The large entry foyer directs traffic into either the formal or informal space of this interesting European-style home. Sloped, vaulted or tray ceilings prevail throughout.

The first floor encompasses the family - kitchen - breakfast combination of rooms and the formal living room and dining room. In addition, the master bedroom suite is enriched by a luxury compartment bath, tray ceiling, easy access to the kitchen and a walk-in closet from the bath, that creates a perfect dressing space. A powder room and washer and dryer space are adjacent to the entry from the garage.

The island kitchen sink is surrounded by a breakfast bar. It is in full view from the great room and a spacious breakfast room. Traffic flow is superior and esthetics include a sloped ceiling that soars to a balcony above, immediate access to the large deck and a wood burning fireplace.

There are two additional bedrooms, a bonus room and a full central bath on the second floor. Vaulted ceilings embellish one upper bedroom as well as the formal living room on the first floor.

The European exterior is constructed of stucco, and decorative arched windows, a bay window and steep gable roof complete the picture.

Plan No. 2841 is computer generated. Total heated space is 2,522 square feet plus a bonus space of 363 square feet. All W.D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency. For further information, write W.D. Farmer Residence Designer Inc., P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, Ga., 30345.

Household Help

If you haven't already done so, you should get your air conditioners checked immediately by a qualified contractor or service technician.

For example, if your unit is not cooling sufficiently, this could be a simple thing, such as a fuse or resetting a circuit breaker. It could also be a matter of checking the thermostat setting. Of course, if the above-mentioned aren't the cause, the refrigerant may be at a low level and need to be replenished. If further investigation proves that's not the cause either, you may have a compressor problem. This would be indicated by strange noises emanating from your unit when you try to run it.

If you need more information, you can send for the Air-Conditioning and Refrigeration Institute's free pamphlet, "How to Keep Your Cool and Save Cold Cash," at ARI, Dept. 94/U1, 4301 N. Fairfax Drive, Suite 425, Arlington, VA. 22203.

Besides your normal spring/summer spruce-up you should turn some attention to accident-proofing your home for the safety of your family, particularly your children. The best way to do this, according to KinderGard's 1994 "Safechild" booklet, is to actually get down on all fours to see what dangers lurk at a child's eye level.

When a child progresses from the crawling stage to the walking stage, he will generally try to pull himself up on whatever's available (including the family dog).

If the child does this in the kitchen, an unsecured cabinet door could swing open revealing all the potentially dangerous contents, such as household cleaners. An opened kitchen drawer could cause a rainfall of knives and forks. To prevent this, fasten cabinets and drawers with child-proof cabinet locks or latches.

To obtain your own free copy of the "Safechild" booklet, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to KINDERGARD, Dept. MM7,2154A Chennault, Carrollton, Texas 75006-5022. You could also check your local hardware store, home decorating center or baby furniture store. They may still have a supply on hand as the booklets were distributed to them in early spring to be handed out.

DETROIT EXIDE NAUTILUS BATTERY

APBA GOLD CUP

GO FOR THE GOLD EXIDE!

Exide Battery Corporation Named Title Sponsor of 1994 Detroit APBA Gold Cup.

Veteran Unlimited driver Mark Evans will be piloting one of the two MISS EXIDE hydroplanes campaigning at Detroit's Exide Nautilus Battery APBA Gold Cup, June 1-5.

There have been more than 300 Unlimited Hydroplane races since the hydroplane MISS EXIDE was last seen competing on the Detroit River. That will all change June 1 when two turbine-powered MISS EXIDE hydroplanes debut at the 1994 Detroit Exide Nautilus Battery APBA Gold Cup.

To say that Exide Battery Corporation is re-entering the sport is an understatement.

Exide is coming onto the Unlimited hydro scene in a BIG way. First, by campaigning two MISS EXIDE hydroplanes and second by becoming the Title Sponsor of Detroit's APBA Gold Cup trophy race.

"We have a long-term commitment to this sport," said Exide spokesman Robb Thomson. "We own two complete Unlimited boat rigs and are also sponsoring the most prestigious Unlimited contest on the race circuit. It's a great association for our company."

The Exide Battery Corporation, with executive offices in Bloomfield Hills, Michigan, is committed to keeping the boat and its team based in Detroit.

"Keeping the boat based in Detroit is a big plus for our event and the City of Detroit," commented John Gysin II, Chairman of the Board of Spirit of Detroit Thunderfest, the civic organization that stages the Gold Cup competition. "We are pleased that Exide Battery Corporation has made this exceptional commitment to our sport, our association and our community."

The MISS EXIDE U-9 will be driven by veteran Unlimited driver Mark Evans. Evans has raced Unlimiteds for more than 15 years, racing for Fred Leland Racing in 1993 and Ron Jones Jr. Racing in 1991 and 1992. Evans won the Indiana Governor's Cup in Madison, Indiana, in 1991. Jimmy King, a Grand Prix hydroplane racer, has signed on to drive MISS EXIDE U-9-2. King is also driving for Exide Nautilus Batteries in the Detroit Big Boy Grand Prix Hydroplane Championship.

Jay Leckrone is serving as Crew Chief for the Exide Nautilus team with the assistance of engine builder John Rice, assistant engine builder Tom Alfano, lead hull technician Chris Brinsfield and hull technicians John Leschinski and John Coulter.

The team began testing their tandem-wing hull the week before Easter in Washington and hoped to test its second boat on the Detroit River soon. "We will have both boats ready and use the boat that is better suited to each course as the year progresses," said Thomson. It is our intention to be a major contender on the 1994 Unlimited Hydroplane racing circuit."

The tandem-wing hull is equipped with a T-55-L7C turbine-powered engine. The boat was built in 1992 by Ron Jones Racing and campaigned that year as COORS DRY. The COORS DRY had an Unlimited victory in San Diego that season.

The second EXIDE boat is the original Atlas turbine boat that was driven by Chip Hanauer to four Gold Cup wins in the mid-1980s. Most recently, the boat raced as the AMERICAN SPIRIT in 1992 and served as the back-up CIRCUS CIRCUS hull in 1993. The boat has been rebuilt by the EXIDE team after its '93 flip in Pasco.

Exide entered Unlimited racing for the first time in 1963. Even though the first Exide hull was destroyed in a crash, the team was able to come back and finish fourth in the 1963 High Points standings, including back to back wins at Madison in the Indiana Governor's Cup and in Washington, DC, at the President's Cup. Another fourth place overall followed in 1964. In 1965 MISS EXIDE won the Diamond Cup but slipped to sixth overall in National High Points. Early Exide drivers have included Mira Slovak, Russ Schlee and Bill Brow.

Although missing from the Unlimited hydroplane arena for 29 years, Exide has been active in other forms of motor sports, including NASCAR racing and 2-1/2, 5 and 6-liter boats during the 1993 season.

GRAND PRIX

OR RACING and TOM BAKER RACING.

This year's race will bring a slightly different format for choosing finalists for the Big Boy Championship heat. Friday morning all GP boats will run two-lap time trials with the fastest two boats automatically being qualified for the final. The boats will run in sets of two which should make for some exciting river action. On Saturday, two sets of elimination heats will select four more GP boats. Sunday will feature a "last chance" heat in which the first and second place GP boats will qualify for the final Big Boy Grand Prix Hydroplane Championship Heat scheduled for 2 p.m. that day.

Many of the GP boats are expected to convert to enclosed cockpits for the 1994 season. All new GP boats built after January 1, 1995 must have the mandatory enclosed cockpit.

Elias Brothers Big Boy Restaurants is the proud sponsor of the Big Boy Grand Prix Hydroplane Championship, June 1 - 5. Big Boy will be on hand to present the winning trophy.
