

G.P. travel group in Europe for D-Day ceremonies — and memories

By Mireille de Bary Wilkinson

Mireille de Bary Wilkinson, president and owner of de Bary Travel Inc., led a contingent of World War II veterans on the Grosse Pointe War Memorial Association's invasion of Portsmouth, England, and Normandy, France.

On June 5, the group attended a drumhead ceremony in Portsmouth solemnized by Queen Elizabeth, Prince Philip, Princess Margaret, Prince Andrew, the "Queen Mum," "Lady Di" and the President and Mrs. Clinton.

In the forefront were three Grosse Pointers who participated in the original D-Day invasion: Ben Prescott, a member of the 462nd Anti-Aircraft Battalion assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division of the 1st Army. He vividly remembers the Boford 40mm guns and the halftracks that were mounted with quad 50 caliber machine guns that were his personal tools of the war.

On D-Day plus five, his group moved inland and separated from the 1st Army, which drove to Cherbourg.

Don Holzhauser hit Omaha Beach on H hour plus five under fire with the 282nd Port Company of the 5th Engineer/Special Amphibious Brigade of the 1st Army.

His job was to clear a path for equipment received over Mulberry, a through-the-beach area, by removing barbed wire, mines and disabled military vehicles.

The resistance was intense and their small group suffered five deaths and 12 wounded in the first hour of fighting. Holzhauser spent four more weeks on the beach after D-Day keeping the vital supply lines open and functional.

Chuck Battilochi went ashore on D-Day plus two with the 298th Engineer Combat Battalion of the 7th Corps of the 1st Army. His job was to protect the seam between Omaha and Gold beaches.

He dug in that night with the warning, "Dig deep or we may be soon going for a swim tomorrow."

And so it was that Hitler released three Panzer divisions that nearly drove their way to Omaha/Gold Beach, but reached the sands of Sword/Juno Beach the third day. If the Panzers had been allowed to wreak havoc on the first day, Chuck and his compatriots

Fireworks' fuse flickers, donations $12,000 short

The Mack Avenue U.S.A. Fireworks program is in serious need of help with only two weeks left before the June 26 display at Parcels Field in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Robbie Curry, chairman of the program, said that as of June 2, $16,500 had been contributed by area residents and business people. An additional $4,500 has been pledged, leaving a shortfall of about $12,000.

"Many area residents who urged us to go on with the fireworks this year have sent in contributions, but we still need to hear from other residents and businesses that enjoy the program every year," said Curry.

Those interested in supporting the program can send a tax-deductible contribution to: MACK AVENUE U.S.A., 17401 Mack Ave., Detroit, MI 48224.

Fond farewell

The Grosse Pointe Public School System held a special reception on May 31 in the ballroom at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial to bid farewell to 114 employees retiring from the school district. Retirees were presented with a gift from the school system; received a "memory book" of photographs, notes, cards and other items collected by friends, parents, students and colleagues; snacked on beverages and hors d'oeuvres; and listened to music performed by the Grosse Pointe High Jazz Band. Spotted in the crowd were Gene Kohut, right, gym teacher at Brownell; Jan Kay, center, a Poupard Elementary teacher consultant for the visually impaired; and Bev Kohut, Gene's wife.

School board votes Tuesday in next step toward district library

By Shirley A. McShane Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe school board is approaching another significant step in the process of establishing a district library system for the Pointes and a section of Harper Woods.

On Tuesday, June 14, the school board will consider a resolution to establish a new library system that would be effective July 1. If the board should adopt the resolution, it will be the third in a series of five steps necessary to complete the process.

As a direct result of Proposal A, which eliminated a school district's ability to levy taxes for public libraries, Grosse Pointe and other school districts in Michigan that operate public libraries have sought to establish district libraries.

The district library will comprise the same area as the Grosse Pointe Public School System. The Harper Woods library will remain a separate entity and, after one year, Grosse Pointe libraries will become their own entity, no longer directly governed or funded by the school system.

In April, the Harper Woods library board of trustees unanimously adopted a resolution supporting the proposal. In May, the Harper Woods city council, in a 4-3 vote, adopted a resolution in favor of the plan.

After the school board acts next week, the agreement will be subject to approval by the Library of Michigan. The fifth and final step will be voter approval of a millage to support the district library. A ballot proposal would be presented to voters in mid-1995.

"For many, many months we have been deliberating and consulting with the leadership of the public library, public library employees, Friends of the Public Library and interested citizens and taxpayers about issues of school finance reform, library millages, services and programs and employee salary, benefits and working conditions," said superintendent Ed Shine at Monday night's board meeting. "I am ready to move to the third step of the five-step process in the establishment of a district library."

Should the school board adopt the district library resolution, Shine said the next logical step for the board will be to adopt a resolution to lay off library personnel.

"As of June 30, they will no longer be employees of the school system, although they all will be offered employment with the district library," Shine said. "In communications several weeks ago with the librarians, they specifically asked about this. The district library agreement guarantees the positions with the same salary and benefits substantially the same for one year until the district library is established and it begins to negotiate with its employees."

The layoffs will affect 10 librarians and 17 library clerks. The librarians will be offered positions with the district library. Clerks have the option of taking a job with the district library or seeking a position with the school system, Shine said.

The board also discussed the recently appointed library board of trustees. Harper Woods officials agreed to the plan only if the board was appointed, thereby guaranteeing their city would have representation on the panel.

Trustee Sears Taylor suggested the appointed board members only serve two-year terms as a compromise. Taylor said he feels that an appointed board is not directly accountable to the electorate.

Shine said that to make a change of that nature at this late date would require a new agreement and set the process back to its first step.

"I'm against the idea," said trustee Gloria Konster. "It takes time to understand the workings of a board."

Vice president Carl Anderson said it will take the library board members about three or four years to get a good understanding of how to operate a district library system.

WCCC board of trustees in middle of legal battle — again

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Once again the elected officials of Wayne County Community College find themselves embroiled in a legal controversy, this time concerning the selection of a new college president to replace the outgoing Raphael Cortada.

The Detroit News and the Detroit Free Press, as well as Wayne County commissioner Andrew Richner and college trustee Sue Radulovich, are suing the school over what they say is an illegal presidential search process.

The suit began when Detroit News columnist Pete Waldmeir was denied entry to a meeting of the school's presidential search committee on May 12. Waldmeir had been selected by trustee Sue Radulovich to serve on the search committee. He had received a letter from trustee Denise Wellons-Glover saying that Radulovich's nomination of him had been accepted.

"I thought I was on the committee," Waldmeir said. "I received a letter saying so, and when I heard about the meeting on the 12th from someone else, I thought I should attend. When I got there I was told that I wasn't on the committee and couldn't attend as a taxpayer and a member of the public." Radulovich and Andrew Richner also attempted to attend the meeting and were denied entrance.

"I didn't intend on getting involved, but Sue Radulovich asked me to attend the meeting," Richner said. "I was curious about what was going on at the college, and decided to go. I went with her, and was denied entry. I felt from a public standpoint that members of the public had a right to attend. Pete Waldmeir was also denied entry. These actions are wrong, considering the open meetings act."

Radulovich said she decided to sue the college for violating Michigan's open meetings law, and Richner agreed to join the suit.

"The school does not have the right to bar me, a school trustee, from any meeting I wish to attend," said Radulovich. "I also strongly believe that keeping the public out of meetings violates Michigan's open meetings act. That's why I started a suit."

Waldmeir was a part of Radulovich's suit until his paper, The Detroit News, joined with the Detroit Free Press in filing their own suit against the college. Free Press attorney Michael Gruskin said that Michigan has a very broad open meetings law.

"U-M lost a similar suit for acting in a similar manner," Gruskin said. "The state Supreme Court ruled that under Michigan's open meetings law a committee or subcommittee acting on behalf of U-M's board of regents did indeed constitute a public body and that U-M was wrong to bar the public from attending the school's presidential search committee meetings."

Gruskin added that under the state's open meetings law, public officials can be criminally prosecuted for illegally closing a meeting.

"We're not looking to have anyone arrested," said Gruskin. "That would be up to the county prosecutor's office anyway. We just want future meetings to be open to the public and that any decisions made in secret be invalidated."

George Swan, WCCC's director of public affairs, said that the board of trustee members can't comment on the lawsuit while it's pending, but he did say that the board has changed its search procedure.

"The board is now looking to hire an interim president," Swan said. "Anyone interested in the position should submit credentials by June 17. The search committee will hold public interviews on Saturday, June 25, and on Sunday, June 26. The board of trustees will vote on selecting a candidate on Monday, June 27. That vote will be open to the public as well."

Gruskin said that he does not know how the school's new plan will affect the suit, and added that a June 10 meeting with Wayne County Circuit Court judge John Murphy is scheduled. He plans to ask that the school open all of its future meetings to the public and that any actions made in secret be voided.

"You'd think they'd have learned from the U-M case," said Gruskin. "All anyone wants is that the school conduct a search for a new president in an open and legal manner — it's that simple."

Public safety reports

Car windows broken in Woods

A resident who lives on Littlestone in Grosse Pointe Woods said that on June 5 someone smashed the rear and side windows of his Plymouth Laser.

The night before he discovered the vandalism to his car, the man said he had heard a lot of yelling and screaming coming from the street where his car was parked. He didn't think anything of the commotion, he said, because his street has a lot of children.

Woods police found a broken beer bottle in the street near the damaged Laser and determined it was the object used to smash the car windows.

On June 3, a woman visiting a house on Aline in the Woods said that her car was vandalized when someone smashed the driver's side window. Neither she nor anyone else in the vicinity heard a disturbance before she discovered the damage.

A pair of vandals caught in the act

A security guard helped Grosse Pointe Woods police capture two youths who were in the process of vandalizing three vehicles parked in the University Liggett School parking lot on June 4.

The guard called police around 1:30 p.m. when he heard the sound of something breaking in the parking lot by the ice rink on Cook Road.

Upon further investigation, the guard saw two boys in the parking lot and one of them was holding a piece of dashboard plastic in his hands. He managed to detain the boys, ages 14 and 15, until Woods police arrived.

Police found that one of the vehicles had not been entered but had a broken rear windshield wiper and a damaged antenna. The second vehicle, a van, had been entered through an unlocked door and had a damaged dome light and dashboard.

The third vehicle, where one of the boys had been caught, also had heavy dashboard damage and the radio had been ripped from its mounting and left dangling.

Police found screwdrivers and a dome light bulb in the boys' possession.

Both of the youths were arrested for attempted larceny and released to their parents. The matter is under review by the Woods youth officer.

Detective Sgt. Jim Fowler said the department is investigating whether the youths involved had anything to do with a previous incident of vandalism on ULS property.

Woods robber sentenced

The man who pleaded guilty to holding up Hollywood Pharmacy in Grosse Pointe Woods in December 1993 was sentenced by a Detroit Recorder's Court judge to serve between seven and 15 years in prison.

Booze, boats don't mix

Now that summer is here, many Michigan residents will take to the waterways with their speedboats, jet-skis and other watercraft. However, fun on the water can turn into folly or even disaster, when boat operators drink alcohol.

Twenty-seven boaters died in Michigan waters in 1993 and over half of those incidents involved alcohol. While the death toll seems modest, the odds of being killed while boating are 18 times the odds of dying in a motor vehicle crash.

Drunken boaters can crash into other vessels or fixtures in the landscape. They must also be concerned about...

- fatigue from sun or weather;
- inexperience with high-powered boats or being "rusty" early in the season;
- and drowning, should anyone fall overboard.

Nationwide, four people die each year for every 100,000 registered watercraft. Michigan boaters did a little better in 1993, with 3.1 deaths per 100,000 watercraft. Considering that Michigan's motor vehicle fatality rate was a very low 0.17 deaths per 100,000 vehicles in 1992, the boating fatality rate is something to be concerned about.

High speed boats, discourteous practices and fatigue all figure into a disaster on the water, but alcohol is the biggest contributing factor.

In 1993, Michigan implemented a law to more strictly penalize people who operate watercraft while impaired or under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

Under the new law, boat operators are impaired with a blood alcohol concentration (BAC) of 0.07 or more, and under the influence with 0.10 BAC or more. These levels are the same as for motor vehicle operators, and the penalties are similar including possible suspension of boating privileges.

In addition, all boaters using public waterways must submit to a breathalyzer or chemical test when requested by a law enforcement officer.

Perhaps the second-most important safety precaution on the water is to use a personal flotation device (PFD). As of April 1, PFDs became required equipment for all children under age six in a boat that is under way. In 80 percent of boating fatalities, the victim was not wearing a PFD.

New Park business goes to the dogs — and cats and birds

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Cheri Musial is looking forward to the dog days of summer. For her, business is for the birds and while the cat may not have gotten her tongue, they're certainly on her mind.

Musial celebrated the grand opening of her store, Pointe Pet Supply, on June 4, the culmination of a longtime dream to open her own business on Kercheval in Grosse Pointe Park.

"For the past 21 years, I've worked in dentists' offices," Musial said. "My husband Bill owns the barbershop next door, and has owned this building for the past 10 years. About five years ago, I started thinking about opening my own business here, but we had a renter. When the used-book store moved, I decided to take the plunge."

Musial originally wanted to open a coffee shop, but decided to go with a pet supply store after learning that there was already a coffee shop in the neighborhood.

"The store is next to Dr. Lawrence Herzog's veterinary practice," said Musial. "So the location is good, plus this part of Kercheval is oriented toward providing services to customers, whether it's a veterinarian or a barber or a dry cleaner. People don't come here to go clothes shopping, so a pet supply shop fits right in."

Opening the store proved to be more difficult than she expected, Musial said. She did most of the conversion work herself because she wanted the store to be hers "from the ground up."

"I sell pet supplies only," Musial said. "We don't sell pets of any sort. When I started out, I expected to sell supplies for dogs especially. While I carry supplies for cats, birds and other pets, much to my surprise, I have found that Grosse Pointers are cat people, and the cat supply portion of my business is much greater than I thought it would be."

In addition to providing pet supplies, Musial arranges gift baskets for pets. She also hopes to develop a niche as the supplier of hard-to-find pet items like the modern pet carrying cases. These are designed to allow travelers to carry their cats or small dogs with them on an airplane.

The case was designed by an airline stewardess, said Musial, and is much more convenient for pet owners than older model pet carriers.

"One of the things I really enjoy about this job is that I get to spend time with my customers," said Musial. "When I was working in dentists' offices, the emphasis was on efficiency, not customer relations. My customers educate me about how to take care of their pets, and I am able to pass that information along to others. That's nice."

While her store is adjacent to Herzog's clinic, there is no formal relationship between the two businesses. She does admit that opening a pet supply store next to a veterinary clinic wasn't the worst idea she ever had, however.

Is your teen's after-school job safe? Parents urged to check

By Linda F. Golodner

Some things never change. Things like kids racing out of school when the final bell sounds for the day. Everyone remembers that wild dash for the door and an evening or weekend of freedom.

Today, more than any other time in our nation's history, students are racing from school buildings to worksites. They juggle their time to meet the demands of school and employment. They often combine school and work for 12 hours a day, which means many teens have longer workdays than their parents. Little time is left for homework, participating in extracurricular activities, and spending time with family and friends.

Despite state and federal child labor laws, thousands of children are illegally employed in the U.S. When laws such as minimum age requirements and bans on working in dangerous occupations or with hazardous equipment are ignored by some employers, kids stand an increased risk for serious injury. Health professionals estimate that at least 100,000 youth are injured and over 100 are killed each year in the workplace.

Limited after-school employment can offer young people spending money and even valuable life experience. But, carte blanche employment can turn a positive experience into a detrimental or tragic situation. Therefore, parents need to monitor employment and set boundaries.

The foundation for effective monitoring is knowledge. You and your teen need to know the restrictions on hours, equipment, and occupations. State labor departments have information delineating the child labor laws.

It's important to set limits on hours. Most experts recommend that teens 14 to 16 years in age should not work more than 15 hours a week and older teens no more than 20 hours a week, or after 10 p.m. on a night preceding a school day. Ask teachers to notify you if they see a decline in grades, attendance, or attention.

Meet your child's employer and tour the facility. Ask the employer what your child's duties are and what machinery he or she and other teens their age use on the job. The employer should also be told the hours guidelines you have set with your teen. Question the employer as to whether that location has been cited for child labor violations in the last year. If an employer is negligent about child labor laws, it means the employer is negligent in protecting your child on the job.

Since most youth employment is in the service or retail industries, it is easy to visit your child's place of employment. Frequent visits will help you stay abreast of your teen's duties and level of supervision.

After-school jobs are a part of our teenage culture. With over 5.5 million kids working in the U.S. and limited government oversight on youth employment, it is critical that parents take an active role in ensuring that youth are safe in the workplace and that education remains the top priority.

Linda F. Golodner is president of the National Consumers League, a national membership organization committed to safety and fairness in the workplace and marketplace. For more information on the league or to obtain the "Parents' Primer on After-School Jobs," call (202) 639-8140.

Monitor tax withholding — change may be wise

Prepared by the Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants

You wouldn't consider going to the grocery store each week, paying the cashier more than the actual cost of your bill, then asking for a refund at the end of the year. Yet this is what millions of Americans do when it comes to paying their tax bills. They allow the government to withhold more taxes than necessary from their paychecks, and request a refund at tax time. If you are in this group, it's time to check your withholding.

The Michigan Association of CPAs (MACPA) recommends that employees annually update their Form W-4, Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate, to ensure that they are having the correct amount of federal income tax withheld from their paychecks. Overpaying the government means money that could be used to build your savings or pay off debt is languishing in the government's coffers — without earning a nickel of interest. On the other hand, if you substantially under withhold, you could face some stiff financial penalties.

The amount of taxes withheld from your salary throughout the year depends on the amount of your wages, your marital status and the number of exemptions, the withholding allowances you claim and any additional amount of withholding you've requested. You provide this information on Form W-4, which you obtain from your employer.

Completing the Form W-4
On the Form W-4, you can choose to have your taxes withheld at a single rate or the lower married rate. You must claim single if you are single, married but legally separated, or if either you or your spouse is a nonresident alien.

Married individuals can claim either the married or single rate. If both you and your spouse work, or, if in addition to wage income, you have income from other sources — such as interest dividends, alimony, capital gains or rent — consider having your taxes withheld at the higher single rate. This will enable you to increase your taxes withheld for purposes of applying it to all your sources of income. You can also ask your employer to withhold an additional amount or claim fewer withholding allowances.

You may claim from zero to 10 allowances on Form W-4. The more allowances you claim, the less tax will be withheld from your paycheck. To avoid having too much tax withheld, you may want to claim withholding allowances for itemized deductions and credits for which you qualify, such as the credit for the elderly and totally disabled, the dependent care credit, the earned income credit (if you have not filed for an advance payment of the credit).

When filling out your W-4 form, you may claim exemptions for yourself, your spouse and dependents. Allowances for exemptions correspond to the exemptions allowed on your tax return.

In addition, you may be eligible for a special withholding exemption. If you are unmarried and have only one employer or are a married person who has one employer and your spouse is not employed, you may claim this exemption.

You also have the option of filing exempt from withholding. Generally, you can claim exempt from withholding if you had no income liability in 1993 and expect none this year.

When to change your withholding

If you are subject to the new tax law changes, such as limitations on deductions of business entertaining, you may need to adjust your withholding. So, too, should taxpayers who have had increases in adjusted gross income that result in the phase out of their itemized deductions or personal exemptions.

If you have recently experienced or expect changes in your personal life, such as a marriage or a divorce, or the birth of a child, you should also consider changing the amount of taxes that are withheld from your paycheck. Be aware, too, that if the number of allowances to which you are entitled decreases for any reason, you must file a new W-4 form with your employer within 10 days.

The MACPA points out you must be certain that the amount of taxes withheld from your salary plus estimated tax payments equal 90 percent of your 1994 income tax or 100 percent (110 percent for some upper income taxpayers) of the taxes you owed in 1993.

City amends Pavel's liquor license; cafe may now serve across the bar

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

The City of Grosse Pointe's only establishment with a full Class C liquor license is finally able to serve alcoholic beverages over the bar.

Last month, the City council amended their liquor license ordinance to permit patrons sitting at Cafe Pavel's bar to be served alcoholic beverages.

Before this amendment, the law said that spirits could only be served to patrons at the restaurant's tables.

Only recently did Cafe Pavel owners and City officials realize that the City's liquor ordinance did not allow service over a bar.

"They had indicated to the city manager (Tom Kressbach) that they wanted to expand their seating capacity," said City police chief Bruce Kennedy. "He asked me to look into it to see whether the expansion plans needed permission from the Liquor Control Commission or whether it could be handled locally."

"When I went into the restaurant I saw they had a bar. Recalling the ordinance, I told them (owners Paul Bednarski and Kim Schwarz) they could not serve alcoholic beverages over the bar."

Bednarski and Schwarz bought the restaurant and liquor license from Cafe LeChat/Merry Mouse in 1992 and installed the bar, which runs parallel to Notre Dame.

"We put in the bar because we had a Class C liquor license," Bednarski said. "We decided this space would be best utilized by having a bar. It's also a traffic area for our waitstaff."

For the past five months, Bednarski, Schwarz and their waitstaff have had to explain to patrons who sit at the bar that alcohol could not be served at the bar.

Bednarski said that people would sit at the bar and order a glass of wine or a drink while waiting for their spouse or friend who was shopping in the Village. He would have to seat them at a table in order to serve them due to the wording of the ordinance.

"The furthest thing from our minds was a 'shot and a beer' place," Bednarski said, "but we understood the council's concern. I think they chose a pretty good solution."

The amendment to the ordinance states that an establishment with a liquor license in the City of Grosse Pointe "may have service of alcoholic beverages to a guest over a bar or counter. However, the total number of seats at the bar or counter may not exceed 20 percent of the total number of seats in the restaurant."

Only eight seats of Cafe Pavel's total interior seating capacity of 46 are at the bar. There are 40 seats along Notre Dame outside the restaurant. The expansion plans at the front of the restaurant will add an additional 36 seats. The expansion is scheduled to begin after the July 4th weekend.

Cafe Pavel will keep its retail wine display in the front, Bednarski said, and pasteries will be consolidated in the main part of the restaurant. Delicatessen specials will be listed on a chalkboard.

Cafe Pavel and Jacobson's have two of the City's four liquor licenses. Jacobson's has a tavern license, which allows only the sale of beer and wine. The owners of Parini's, which opened last month, have picked up a liquor license application, the City said, but have not returned it yet.

Meter reader foils pranksters

A group of high school students stole a magnetic sign attached to a Grosse Pointe Farms parking enforcement car on June 2 — but they didn't get far.

The parking enforcement officer — who was on duty in the area of Mack and Kerby — saw the students in the act of removing the sign, jotted down the car's license plate number and immediately called the incident in to the police station.

Within minutes, Farms police had located the car and pulled it over at Beaupre and Touraine and questioned the four teenagers. While talking to the youths, police saw the sign folded up and partially tucked under the passenger side seat.

The sign was retrieved and returned to the parking enforcement officer, who then resumed his duties.

Park police nab burglar

Residents asleep in their apartment on Mack in Grosse Pointe Park on May 30 were awakened by the sound of their door being kicked in.

When the residents ran to their front door, they saw someone running down the staircase, out the front door and through the alley. The residents flagged down a patrolman in the area and reported the break-in.

The burglary suspect was located within minutes by Park police and arrested. Further investigation by the detective bureau resulted in the suspect admitting he was responsible for two separate break-ins in recent weeks.

In 31 years, she never tired of teaching eager first-graders

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

First-graders are wonderful. Just ask Deana Georgopoulos. After 31 years of teaching, she knows that nothing can match the enthusiasm and openness of a young child entering the first grade.

"They are so much fun and so eager to learn," Georgopoulos said. "They're like little sponges and all they want to do is please you."

After three decades of teaching pre-school, kindergarten and first-grade, Georgopoulos is retiring from University Liggett School. Except for a few years of teaching in the Port Huron public schools, Georgopoulos has spent the majority of her career with ULS.

She began teaching nursery school in the early 1960s at what was then called Liggett School on Burns in Indian Village. When Liggett merged with Grosse Pointe University School, she moved to the Grosse Pointe Woods campus on Briarcliff.

She has never tired of teaching enthusiastic 5- and 6-year-olds, but Georgopoulos said she has noticed a change in the children over the years.

"They are different today," she said. "They're exposed to a lot more through the television and video games. I don't approve of video games at all.

ULS teacher Deana Georgopoulos retires this month after three decades of guiding pre-school, kindergarten and first-grade students. She said nothing is more heartwarming than a visit from a former student.

"Some of the children today are 'overprogrammed' with tennis and swimming and other extra-curricular activities. The children don't have time to be inventive and to use their imaginations. We have to give children time to be children. Let them get a little bored — then they can use their imaginations and get creative."

She doesn't think day care and working mothers have had a negative impact on children, however, because many working parents are still able to provide quality time for their children.

"The most important thing (working parents can do) is spend quality time with their children. Talk to them, read to them and make them aware of the family situation — what do mom and dad do during the day? You can be at home all day and still not be involved with your children," she said.

Realizing that many of her students' parents wanted to be more involved, Georgopoulos started the Wonderful Wednesdays program that encouraged parental involvement in the classroom.

Each Wednesday morning during the school year, parents come into the classroom and work with the children on a special project. Sometimes it's arts and crafts, other times it's math or reading enrichment and sometimes it's a special presentation, she said.

"We had a father bring in his coin collection and another parent, who is a radiologist, brought in X-rays, and one parent who is a short-wave radio buff had all the kids talking with someone very far away," she said. "Parental involvement is very important for a student's success in school."

Georgopoulos said she remembers every teacher she had in elementary school and became a first-grade teacher because of the kindness of her first teacher.

The daughter of Greek immigrants living in Port Huron, Georgopoulos said her mother didn't speak English and kept her and her siblings close to home in their pre-school days so they had no contact with other children or the English language.

"When I started school, I was terribly frightened," she said. "I didn't know what anyone was talking about."

POINTER OF INTEREST

Fortunately, a first-grade teacher at the Port Huron school was a close friend of Georgopoulos' father and offered to teach her English.

"She was a wonderful teacher. She took me under her wing and that made my entire elementary school career a happy one," she said.

After high school, Georgopoulos attended Marygrove College and graduated in 1952 with a bachelor's degree in education from Michigan State College.

After her marriage to Alexander Georgopoulos, the newlyweds moved from Port Huron to St. Clair Shores and then to Grosse Pointe Woods. They have a daughter, Gaia, who is a pediatric orthopedist, and a son, Alexander Jr., who works for Gordon Foods.

Georgopoulos recently was named as a runner-up for outstanding teacher of the year in the fourth annual Golden Apple Award competition sponsored by Health Alliance Plan, Chrysler Corp. and Metropolitan magazine.

Her retirement days will begin with a six-week visit to Greece and a tour of the Greek Islands. Her longterm retirement goals include more travel, reading, and volunteering to work with children at St. John Hospital.

The first phase includes the installation of two multi-purpose play apparatuses and the installation of the perimeter sidewalk. Phase II completes the project, when the City installs a pirate ship as the centerpiece to the new play area.

Families of lost submariners sought

GROTON — A nationwide search is under way to locate the next of kin of the 3,500 known submariners who lost their lives during World War II.

The search is being conducted by members of the U.S. Submarine Veterans of World War II who are sponsoring the construction of a long-overdue Submarine Memorial Wall of Honor.

The black granite memorial wall will include the engraved names of each of the lost men.

Its inauguration is set for Sept. 2, 1995, the 50th anniversary of the war's end.

The dignified design is reminiscent of the Vietnam War Memorial in Washington, D.C., and is expected to cost $250,000, more than a fourth of which has already been raised.

The chosen site for the impressive construction is Groton, Conn., the submarine capital of the world, where most of the lost submariners had received training.

The submariner veterans have multifold reasons for contacting the surviving family members and friends of these honored men.

The veterans want to be sure that each name is correct and properly identified and represented on the Wall of Honor.

They also believe that the participation and support of these family members will help guarantee that the project is completed as planned and delivered on time.

The massive polished black granite memorial will be erected in a serene park setting just down the Thames River from the renowned Nautilus Memorial and Submarine Force Library and Museum, also in this seaside community.

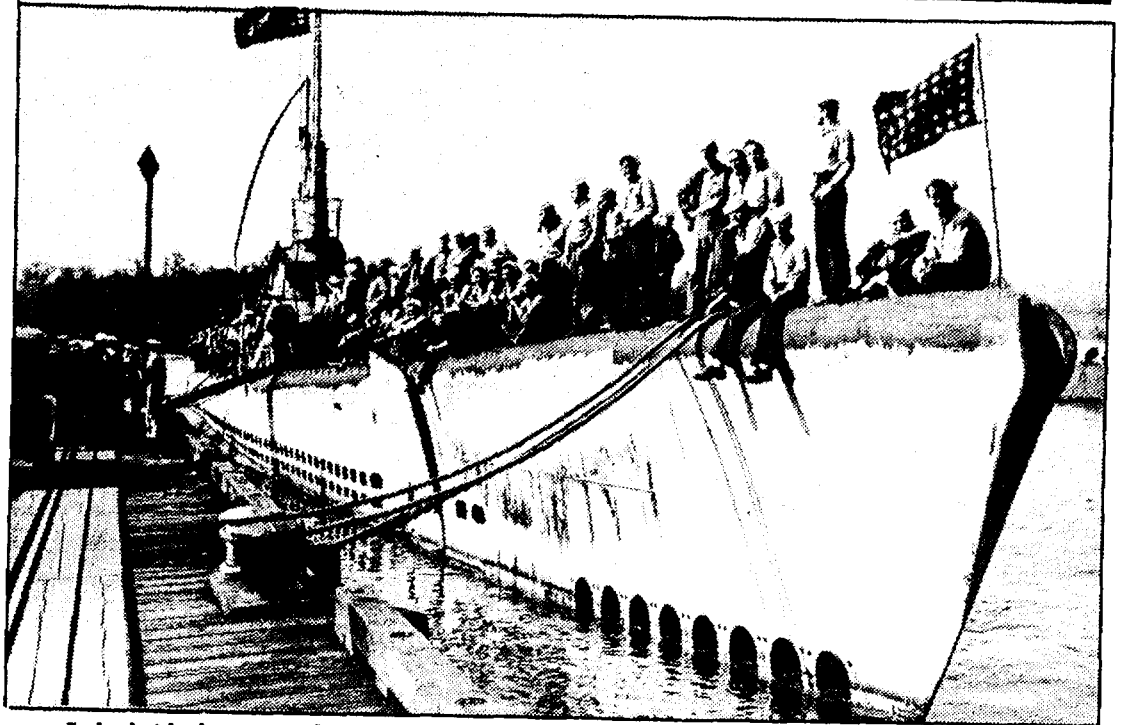

The list of names the committee is working with may be incomplete and the lack of hometown information has made cross referencing and spell checking particularly difficult.

The memorial chairman (and World War II submarine veteran) Robert H. Moore is urging the surviving family members of lost submariners to please contact the U.S. Submarine Veterans of World War II at Post Office Box 1024, Groton, Conn. 06340.

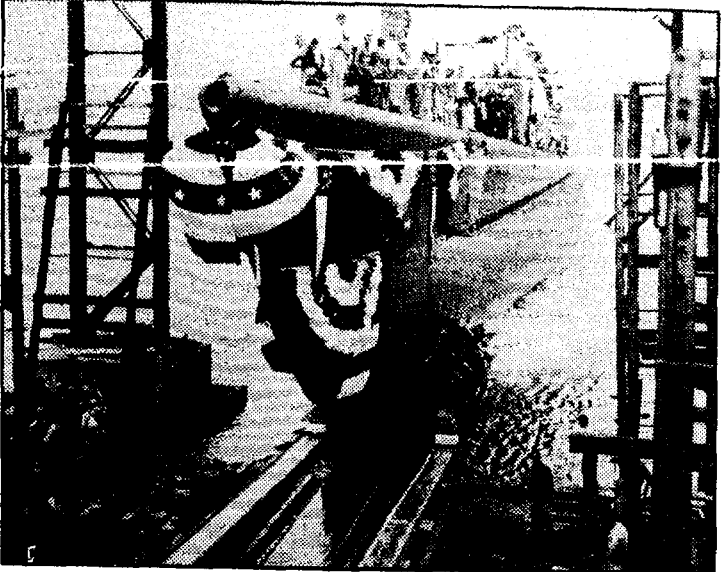

Of the 52 submarines lost in the war, approximately 139 crew members are believed to have come from Michigan.

The wartime record of the U.S. submarine force was a particularly glorious one, according to World War II historians. Although it represented only 1.6 percent of total Navy personnel, it was responsible for 55 percent of our enemy's maritime losses.

It is also true that our fleet's frontline submarines took the brunt of our own Naval losses as well with the loss of one fourth of our men and 52 submarines.

A dockside between dangerous patrols, World War II submariners escape their crowded boats by going topside for fresh air.

This World War II class submarine was launched at Groton, Conn., on July 4, 1943. Fifty-two of these boats were sunk in the war with a loss of 3,541 men.

Points of View: His and Hers

This occasional column is written by a retired Grosse Pointe physician and his wife.

His: As part of the D-Day commemorations in England, we were fortunate to attend a ceremony in London's Grosvenor Square. The American embassy and the Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force are adjacent to the square. Two statues in the square pay tribute to Franklin Roosevelt and Dwight Eisenhower. At the ceremony, Bob Hope was given a plaque by a veteran's organization and Dolores Hope sang "We'll Meet Again," made famous by Vera Lynn.

Hers: "Overpaid, over-sexed and over here." This was a famous World War II quotation regarding the 1.5 million U.S. troops in England at that time. Interestingly enough, the British always seem to have their own on-going sex scandal. The current one involves Alan Clark, a retired politician who allegedly had affairs with the wife and two daughters of a South African judge.

His: At Normandy the most impressive memorial is the American cemetery above Omaha Beach. The long rows of white grave markers contrast with a beautiful view of the sea.

On the hour, a carillon plays compositions which immediately bring tears to the eyes. One remembers the sacrifice of those who lie here and how vulnerable they were in attempting to mount this invasion.

Hers: "General Hillary plits her own invasion of Europe," stated a headline in The Sunday Times in London. The article went on to say, "For weeks now Hillary's office in the White House has been handing out directives and press releases that have confused and amused the Europeans. "She does not want to be known as the first lady, but as the presidential partner."

One of every five U.S. subs was sunk, going down with their valiant crews in waters too deep to be rescued. None were lost, however, without first having wrought tremendous damage to the other side.

Post-war records give them credit for sinking 1,178 merchant vessels and 214 warships for a combined total of 5,631,117 tons.

Another glorious tale about our World War II submarines was the considerable number of downed airmen they rescued from the high seas. Many were scooped up out of rough waters by submariners who had lashed themselves to the conning towers of the small, cramped and overcrowded subs.

Among the 511 airmen rescued between 1941-45 was Navy Lt. George Bush, who later became the 41st president of the United States.

The Submarine Memorial Wall of Honor Committee would like to hear from any of those rescued airmen and their families as well. They are hoping they, too, will get involved in supporting the monument's construction.

The U.S. Submarine Veterans of World War II envision it as being a major gathering place for those who wish to remember and honor those submariners who were lost at sea in the "Silent Service."

Former presidents Jimmy Carter and George Bush already have contributed with their financial and moral support.

Niemi. "This agreement was apparently worked out between the leaders of the Legislature and the governor's office. The money will go toward school finance. In order to raise the billions needed for education, some of the money is being shifted from other areas of the budget — in this case revenue sharing — to schools to make up for the loss in taxes resulting from the passing of Proposition 13."

Niemela went on to say that local governments have two choices when facing reduced revenue. They can cut services or raise local taxes, which is something local governments hate to do.

"At a time when local budgets across the state are very tight, the Legislature shouldn't be changing the revenue sharing rules in the middle of the game. They certainly shouldn't do this without holding public hearings."

G.P. AARP to meet

The Grosse Pointe chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons will hold its regular meeting and the annual Indoor Picnic on Monday, June 13, at the Neighborhood Club, 1751 Waterloo in the City of Grosse Pointe.

The picnic will begin at 12:30 p.m., following the board of directors meeting at 11:30 a.m. Entertainment will be provided by Rose Rossi at the piano for a sing-a-long and dancing. Bring a friend.

City of Grosse Pointe Woods, Michigan
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the City Council, meeting as a Board of Appeals under the provisions of Section 5-14-1 of the 1975 City Code will meet in the Council-Court Room of the Municipal Building, 20025 Mack Plaza, on Monday, June 20, 1994, at 7:30 p.m., to hear the appeal of Gilbert and Clara Mack, 1321 N. Renaud, who are appealing the denial of the Building Inspector to issue a building permit for construction of an addition to their residence at 1321 N. Renaud, Grosse Pointe Woods. The building permit was denied due to a deficiency in the required front yard setback as set forth in Section 5-4-3(F) for the Zoning Ordinance of the the City Code which allows private garages with a ground floor area of not to exceed six hundred (600) square feet. A variance is therefore required. All interested parties are invited to attend.

Park man kept saboteurs from East Coast, couldn't get overseas

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

Frank Huster stormed the beach soon after he entered the U.S. Army in 1942.

The beach, however, was Miami Beach.

"We were administrative officers backing up the men who went overseas," the Park resident said. "You were always trying to get yourself into a position to get overseas. That's where the action was."

Huster, a native of Philadelphia, was drafted into the Army at the age of 29.

At Fort Meade, Md., recruits with last names in the first half of the alphabet were put into the Army Air Corps. Those in the last half of the alphabet went into the infantry.

His unit's job when it was sent to Miami was to take the hotel, which the military requisitioned, and bring it to Army specifications.

"It was like permanent KP (kitchen patrol)," Huster said of the first two months in Miami. "Sanitary conditions weren't what they are today."

A graduate of the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton evening school, Huster was one of four college-educated recruits to become drill instructors.

One of their duties was to patrol the beaches at night.

"It wasn't unusual to see 10 or 12 ships aflame at night," Huster said. "German U-boats were attacking our cargo ships. This was not known to the public. We had to patrol the beach for infiltrators."

A story published in Parade magazine in 1984 told of Nazi saboteurs landing on Long Island and Florida in June 1942.

The arrests of each of these groups were publicized, Parade said, but the trials were kept secret to prevent Germany from discovering how their plot to bomb American factories, bridges, water supplies and stores owned by Jews had been revealed.

Huster graduated from the Air Corps Officer Candidate School in April 1943.

"One of the reasons for going to OCS was to get an overseas assignment," he said, "but I was assigned to stay at the school and teach military leadership."

Huster had taught a Dale Carnegie class in civilian life and he didn't want to stay in the Army just to teach men how to talk.

He asked for a reassignment and was sent to Boca Raton to the port of embarkation for overseas assignment.

During this time the Army was forming the Air Transport Command.

"I was one of 50 men selected to attend the first school to become an air traffic officer," Huster said. "I had been in the trucking business in civilian life."

The Air Traffic Command's job was to load planes for overseas shipments.

Airport in New York.

All of the top brass went through this hangar for processing before traveling aboard C47s overseas.

"We were transporting (Gen. Omar) Bradley, (Gen. George) Patton," he said. "All the tops in the Allies came through there."

In 1944, Huster was assigned to a special missions outfit in Washington, D.C.

"We had Roosevelt's plane that he used to travel to meetings," Huster said.

The base, which is no longer in existence, was called Gravelly Point, the headquarters for the Air Transport Command.

"I was the commander for all enlisted personnel," he said.

Huster met (Russian statesman Vyacheslav) Molotov and other foreign dignitaries, but his unit was told to keep everything secret about who was coming through the base.

"We would meet them and take them to a processing point," Huster said. "After processing them, the Army personnel took over. On their return, we would debrief them. They would have to show credentials. It was tight security."

Even dignitaries who were recognizable had to be finger printed and show identification.

"They were pretty helpful," Huster said. "They understood why."

Although Gravelly Point was a small base with one or two flights a day, there was always activity. It took time to process the various personnel. Planes were searched and checked for sabotage.

"It was an interesting assignment," Huster said. "One of the best if you weren't overseas."

"Several times I was assigned for overseas shipment with the Air Transport Command and orders got changed each time. I kept getting pulled down to headquarters. They liked the cut of my jib and I did the job they wanted done."

On Jan. 5, 1945, Huster graduated from Command and General Staff School at Leavenworth, Kan., with the rank of captain.

As the war wound down, he was sent to Brazil (where troops sent to Africa were stationed) to deactivate the bases there.

"People were glad to see me there," Huster said.

He served in the military until April 1946, when he returned to The Budd Co. in Philadelphia. Huster settled in Grosse Pointe Park when he was transferred to Budd's Detroit office.

At age 82, Huster is the 12th-ranked 80 and over tennis player in the nation, participating in tournaments across the country.

might not have been able to land and the battle may have been lost.

All three men are proud of their contributions and thankful of the outcome.

Other World War II participants on the trip are Dean Lyon, who entered the Army Air Corps in January 1944. He just missed active combat. He did, however, train in 1951 on the assembly of an atomic bomb. He remained in the Air Force Reserves and only recently retired as a lieutenant colonel after 42 years of service.

Two tour members, Shirley Lightle, who served in the U.S. Navy in Washington, D.C., and Lorraine Dieterle, who served in the Coast Guard Photographers Corps, are ladies very active in the WAVES National Association and the Women in Military Service Memorial, which will be located at the entrance to Arlington National Cemetery.

Other Grosse Pointers on the tour are Rosemary Holzhauser, Grayce Lyon, John Mills, Dorretta Prescott, Ralph Wilgarde, Keith Winheim and Jim Brenner.

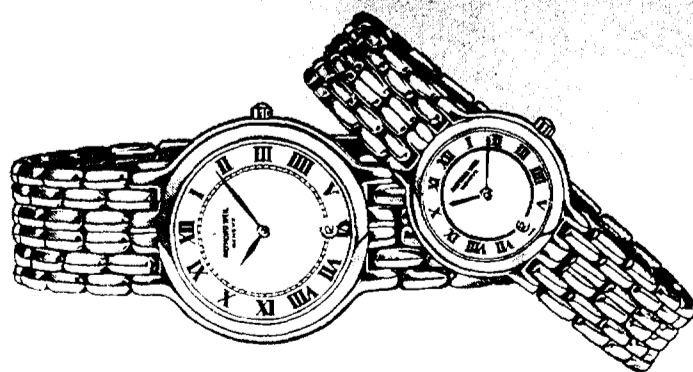

Headquartered in Plymouth, the tour has traveled from Heathrow Airport to the headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower at Southwick House, through the cabinet war rooms in London, in and about the Imperial War Museum and the Tank Museum at Bovington.

Our English driver, Len Thomas, served in the British Light Infantry in the Falklands invasion and the invasion of Port Stanley.

Tomorrow, we face the channel crossing with a new armada set to invade Normandy. More to follow.

Will funding issue affect school vote?

As Grosse Pointe school district voters prepare for the June 13 school board election, the major issue under discussion still seems to be the present and future funding of the district's public schools.

In its interviews with the two school board candidates, reported in detail last week, the Grosse Pointe News heard concerns expressed about the current and future financial needs of the district.

The challenger, David Hunt, making his second run for the board, asked whether the board has put sufficient funds into classrooms, but also questioned whether the board has paid enough attention to the public's concern about costs.

The incumbent chairman, Tim Howlett, contended the board had shown consistent interest in economy and had listened to and informed the public about its actions.

Yet the board's failure to achieve all of its objectives in its negotiations with the teachers still arouses a good deal of criticism, not only by Hunt but by letter writers to the Grosse Pointe News.

Even though the school district has begun negotiations with the Grosse Pointe Educational Association on next year's contract, some letter writers are still criticizing the 1993-94 settlement, and especially the board's failure to achieve a wage freeze.

While the school system lacks the data to answer all of the questions raised, the maximum pay for master's degrees in school districts in the three-county area after the recent contract settlements does shed some light on comparable costs.

Among 14 Wayne and Oakland county districts, Grosse Pointe ranked 13th from the top in the maximum for a master's degree holder with pay of $60,465 a year, but the local district's maximum MA degree pay ranked No. 1 compared with four Macomb County districts.

In the first group, the top maximums were reported by Livonia at $62,570 and West Bloomfield at $62,016, while in the second group the highest Macomb district payments were $58,405 for Chippewa Valley and $58,293 for South Lake.

Superintendent Edward J. Shine says it is impossible to make meaningful comparisons with the average salaries of other districts because they do not use identical criteria to determine their averages.

However, almost 80 percent of the Grosse Pointe district's teachers earn extra pay for their advanced degree work with a large percentage receiving additional pay for seniority. Those are the major causes of the high average pay for the Grosse Pointe teachers, now estimated at $56,500.

These factors also enabled the board to hold the 1993-94 increase to 2.75 percent, or less than the settlements reached in all but two of the comparable districts cited by the factfinder in recommending that settlement this spring.

The board, however, did offer teachers an early retirement program which, over time, will substantially reduce the average pay, and, in addition, won savings through the union's acceptance of a board plan that trims its health care costs.

Proposal A's victory in the March 15 referendum also means a sharp reduction in the district's property tax rates for next year, with the homestead rate for 1994-95 seen as an estimated 6 to 7 mills, plus the state's 6-mill imposed rate.

However, before July 1, 1995, the district must also pass new millage to replace the property tax repealed in 1993, but the exact figure will depend on the amount of state funding and the school needs agreed upon.

These uncertainties also could affect voters' attitudes when they go to the polls on June 13. A vote for Howlett could be regarded as general support for the board's policies and his leadership while a vote for Hunt could be seen as a criticism of the board's handling of its finances and other school issues.

However, voters in general ought to study the candidates' records and promises, and support the one who will not only reflect the community's financial concerns but also its belief that the schools should prepare Grosse Pointe young people as adequately as possible for life in the 20th century.

The real heroes of D-Day

As Grosse Pointe joined Michigan and the world in observing D-Day, the most moving and notable stories have been the individual tales of heroism from all the U.S. military services.

Since November, the Grosse Pointe News has published almost 20 stories about the exploits of this community's veterans during their World War II service on the ground, in the air and on the seas.

Some individual Grosse Pointers, including 13 who traveled to France on a Grosse Pointe War Memorial tour, made the trek back to Normandy to pay their respects, too, to those who had fought and, in hundreds of thousands of cases, had died there.

In their tributes to the specific heroics of June 6, 1944, television and the daily newspapers appropriately extolled the heroes, GI Joe and his sea and air compatriots, who swarmed over and through the Nazis' tough defenses on Normandy's deadly beaches.

True, President Clinton and other national and international leaders took center stage for much of the 50th anniversary observance, but the news media wisely put the emphasis on the sacrifices of the individual soldiers, airmen and seamen.

That was appropriate because in the end it was the Allied manpower, a large proportion from the United States, that turned the tide. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant had adopted that same tactic by using the North's superior manpower to overcome the doughty Confederate defenses and bring the Civil War to a close.

But the people in the services knew what they were fighting for, too, because of the inspiring leadership of Gen. Dwight Eisenhower. The supreme Allied commander in Europe gave all the fighting men a sense of their own importance to the success of the mission.

"I have full confidence in your courage, devotion to duty and skill in battle," he said. "We will accept nothing less than full victory!"

They listened, they learned and they emerged victorious.

Even those of us who never left the home front during that bitter struggle still feel a sense of pride in the World War II victory for the free world that ended the reign of the totalitarians who led Germany, Italy and Japan into ignominy and defeat.

Many of us also feel a sense of loss over the relatives, friends and colleagues who, like millions of others in the Allied services, gave their lives to defend and preserve freedom, democracy and their homeland.

However, we should also be proud that they did not give their lives in vain and that their contributions helped create a postwar world in which democracy has a better chance to flower.

Stadium dead until next year

Perhaps it's just as well that state legislation to help finance a new Detroit baseball stadium is dead until after the November elections.

It still could be an issue in the election, of course, but it won't be fought with the same fervor as if the state money had been appropriated or the proposal had been rejected.

The message that came out of the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce's annual Mackinac Island conference was clear, especially after Mayor Dennis Archer of Detroit had failed in his attempt to put most of the blame for legislative delays on Gov. John Engler.

Instead, most press post-mortems put the blame where we think it ought to go: on Tigers owner Mike Ilitch for his failure to make a personal and direct pitch to the legislators and the public for the state's support.

In fact, Ilitch himself has not yet said, to our knowledge, that he would be willing to accept less than the proposed $230 million state investment that would be substantially more than his own $175 million investment in the project.

In fact, we doubt that any realistic stadium deal is possible even after the November election unless and until Ilitch himself puts on a solid sales performance in full public view.

Even if that is done, however, the Legislature's answer still could be a sharp "No!" in view of the outstate legislators' continuing hostility to pouring more state funds into Detroit.

It's up Hill for senior golfer

Mike Hill, Michigan's only consistent winner on the senior PGA golfing tour, boosted himself back into 1994's top 10 money winners with a second-place finish in the Senior Bell Atlantic tourney at Malvern, Pa.

Winding up only two strokes behind winner Lee Trevino, Hill took home more than $61,000 which brought his winnings for the year to $278,610. That finish lifted him to seventh place in the 1994 senior money standings.

Unfortunately, however, Hill was an also-ran in Bruno's Memorial PGA Classic in Birmingham, Ala., last weekend, coming in with a two-under par score that brought him only $7,067.

In Detroit, however, Hill has been Michigan's forgotten man on the senior tour since he won top honors and more than $1 million in 1991. Detroit's daily newspaper (just one paper on Memorial Day) cited only Trevino's victory in the Bell Atlantic tourney, with no mention of Hill's second-place finish.

Why not more Detroit daily sports page interest in the home-state golfing star? We dunno.

Reply to Andrews: Same space, location

To the Editor:
This letter will respond to last week's letter from Clinton Andrews, previously an unsuccessful candidate for the school board.

First, Mr. Andrews ignores the latest teacher's contract in which the Grosse Pointe board of education obtained a lower salary increase than any of the other 15 school districts in Local 1, health insurance concessions that no other school district obtained, and an early retirement program which will save the school district approximately $18 million over the next 10 years. Moreover, the school board did not raise taxes this year.

Second, Mr. Andrews states 50 percent of the school district's budget goes to overhead. In fact, less than 10 percent of the budget goes to administration, including building principals who have direct contact with the students. Mr. Andrews includes our special education students as overhead. He also considered extracurricular activities, such as athletics, theatre, art and music, as overhead. I believe they provide some of the best teaching our students receive, and I believe the community agrees.

Third, and most troubling, Mr. Andrews attempts to make the administration building at 389 St. Clair an issue in this election. Mr. Andrews knows I voted against placing 389 St. Clair on the market. In fact, he knows I proposed an alternative plan in an attempt to avoid putting 389 St. Clair on the market. In response to my plan, Mr. Andrews himself publicly stated at the June 7, 1993 school board meeting:

"Thank you Mr. Howlett. That was a very creative proposal, and I'm glad you made it."

More about half truths

To the Editor:
It is my duty as a trustee of the Grosse Pointe school system to ensure that the community is provided with accurate information regarding operations of our school system.

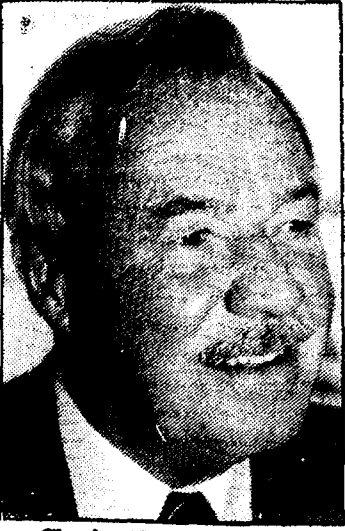

Therefore, I am compelled to respond to a letter written to the editor by Martha Hutting of Grosse Pointe Woods, which was published on May 26 in the Grosse Pointe News. I suggest Ms. Hutting's letter merits attention. She stated, "Whole truths require greater understanding and more thorough research." I agree because more thorough research by Ms. Hutting would have revealed the following:

• The school budget has increased by approximately 30.34 percent during the last four years. Indeed, part of the increase is due to the shifting of FICA and pension contributions from the state to the local districts. However, if FICA and pension costs are added to each of the preceding four years, the increase is the 25.62 percent. This "fact" is the information the community needs to know because these costs are directly attributable to the actions of the board of education.

• I suggest there is confusion about the terms "deficit" and "debt." A deficit is created when expenses for any one time period exceed the money received during the same time period. The concept parallels that of net income or, in this case, net loss, in a for-profit institution. The incurrance of a net loss does not necessitate borrowing if the company has enough cash built up from previous periods. The Grosse Pointe public schools are in this situation. There is equity built up from previous fiscal years which is enough to

Did you know that the U.S. Postal Service represents the best communications value in the world?

It's true. No other postal system in the world delivers such fast, reliable and widespread mail products and delivery services at such low prices. That's why consumers and businesses from coast to coast rely on the U.S. Postal Service to deliver 580 million letters and packages each day.

But, we're not content.

The U.S. Postal Service and its nearly 700,000 employees are striving to improve service by:

- Processing letters and packages more quickly and efficiently.
- Introducing products and services that provide solutions for our customers' communications needs.
- Offering quality products, at affordable prices, at 40,000 post offices nationwide.
- Delivering world-class volume at world-class value — 171 billion pieces of mail annually, or more than 40 percent of the world's mail.
- Protecting you and your mail with 2100 Postal Inspectors dedicated to the sanctity of the U.S. Mail and consumer protection.

We continue to be our toughest critic.

We've taken a long, hard look at ourselves to determine how we can be better. So far we've streamlined our operation and lowered our operating costs (as always, no tax dollars support us).

And we'll do more.

So that the U.S. Postal Service continues to provide the best communications value and service in the world.

Phantom flushers ruin my reveries

Showering is boring. Rote. Automatic.

It's a programmed activity. It's something we do so frequently, like brushing our teeth, that we do it in a daze. We go through the same motions — the same routine of soaping, rinsing, shampooing and drying — day after day after day after day. We could do it in a coma.

The good part of programmed activities is that we can think about other things while we're doing them. Our minds can wander.

I do my most creative thinking while showering.

Creative, that is, until the flush.

Some young people in my family — anonymous here, but THEY KNOW WHO THEY ARE — often go for days without flushing a toilet anywhere in southeastern Michigan.

Nationwide, mothers report their most-repeated phrase is: "Get back in there and flush." Ask Erma Bombeck.

It's way ahead of "Because I said so," "Ask your father," and "Don't run with that or you'll put your eye out."

Anyway, as soon as I step into my shower for some brainstorming and problem-solving, these same young people are sucked as if in a wind tunnel to the bathroom adjacent to mine, often called "the children's bathroom," where they flush. And flush. And flush.

As soon as the handle on the toilet in the children's bathroom is depressed, the shower head in my bathroom hesitates — as if catching its breath — then spews forth several hundred gallons of scalding water.

The occupant of this shower (me) who until that moment was pleasantly pondering, musing, creating, outlining a bestselling novel, planning a luau, redecorating a room, planting a vegetable garden, financing a new business or plotting the perfect crime — then suddenly yelps; leaps aside; curses; pounds on the tile wall with both fists; fiddles with the faucets (to no avail, ever); grumbles; folds her arms and taps her foot until the water temperature returns to normal. This takes five minutes, minimum.

Afterward, the perpetrator looks wide-eyed and sheepish. "I forgot," she says. "Sorry."

Sometimes I plan to shower when nobody is home.

As soon as I get lathered and shampooed, as soon as my eyes are squeezed shut and soap is cascading down my brow, somebody (WE ALL KNOW WHO) roars down our street, zips into our driveway, rips up the garage door, slams the inner door, pounds up the stairs, slides into the children's bathroom — And flushes.

And flushes again. Revenge. How can I get some?

The shower in the children's bathroom is unresponsive to the flush of all other household toilets. I've tried this. Boo. Reciprocity is not one of my options.

Now that the perpetrators are adults (or nearly so), the traditional punishments for inconsiderate behavior — docking of allowances, curtailing of phone hours, restriction of privileges, grounding and isolation — are no longer available.

Perhaps I could hand-letter and frame a reminder to hang on the wall behind the toilet in the children's bathroom — something like the signs we see in public bathrooms and restaurants.

Something that sends a gentle, loving message; no threats; no punishments; no consequences.

Something melodic, perhaps. A familiar tune will help them remember. Like, to the tune of "Humoresque":

"Occupants will please refrain from flushing toilet while the reigning head of household showers. I love you."

Weed of crime bears bitter fruit

Designed to ward off unwanted fertilizer, a set of delightful Burma Shave-type signs is having trouble staying planted in the garden of John and Lylas Mogk.

Ken Eatherly

First spotted last month spaced along the sidewalk on Jefferson near Yorkshire, the five neatly hand-lettered signs read:

"If you with pet poop so disgrace and spoil the beauty of this place may indigestion rack your chest and ants invade your pants and vest."

Apparently someone is less than completely delighted with the cleverness of it all: A recent FYI check showed only the beginning and end signs still there.

"They've been pulled out and tossed over the fence two or three times so far," says John, adding that the signs got a bit bent in the uprooting and were being straightened before being reinstalled.

"My mother first saw the idea in a magazine, supposedly translated into English from signs in Thailand or Burma," Lylas says. "She sent it to me and my dad built our signs."

Whether they are all there or not, they seem to be doing the job, she says. "I kneel there to work on the plants and it (the doggie doodoo problem) was pretty bad before."

There's no word on whether the FBI will be called in because it's an across-the-flower border offense, but one wonders if a certain culprit might be getting mysterious itches in the trouser and waistcoat area about now.

Hill for 80 flower vases for their tables.

"It wasn't too many months later that they came back to me for 100 more, because the first batch had been swiped by diners.

"Sometimes they'd have to run after guys in tuxedos and ask them to return vases that still had the flowers in them," he chuckled.

At this rate, they might as well include the vase in the price of the entree.

On the other hand ...

Gardening's good guys starred at the May 26 A Very Merry Unbirthday Party in (Alice's) Wonderland sponsored by the Grosse Pointe War Memorial and the Grosse Pointe Garden Center.

The Center's president No-rah Williams says 85 children ages 3-10 and their accompanying adults enjoyed the party (along with an indeterminate number of live worms, but more about that later).

Dr. David Michener, assistant curator of the U. of M. Matthaei Botanical Gardens, came dressed as a caterpillar and presented a kids' program on gardening which included a nice big platter of worms, dirt and flowers.

All were entertained with flute music provided by the very accomplished Meg Sipey.

The children planted flowers to take home, watered them and some even added a worm or two from the platter.

OK, so maybe the worms weren't actually that crazy about the whole thing, but the people had a fantastic time.

Loss we all dread is averted

A week ago I couldn't have faced writing this.

But a week makes a big difference, and the baby we thought we'd lose is getting better.

Even with our renewed hope, though, it isn't easy to render the feelings concrete, share them with thousands through the printed word.

In part, I'm too superstitious, afraid I'll jinx the recovery process. Silly, isn't it? But I liken it to primitive people who called their children ugly and stupid so the gods wouldn't notice their obvious charms.

In part, I'm reluctant to appear to be seeking sympathy with a sappy "disease-of-the-week" scenario. And lastly, though he's too young to know he's entitled to any privacy, I hesitate to breach his right to remain anonymous.

But the heartbreak of nearly losing a child is as close to a universal as we're likely to find. This is our story.

Erik John is my third grandchild, first grandson. He's a fine, 10-pound, strong-looking boy — with a weakness no one could predict.

In the first hours after he was born last week, we passed him around the way you do, admiring him, cuddling him, confident he was surely the best baby ever born, chuckling fondly over the cute little noises he made in his throat.

But the cute little noises turned out to be a warning signal. He wasn't getting enough oxygen; breathing was a struggle and getting worse. The next two days were spent in intensive care on and off a ventilator, alternately improving and declining.

And then he crashed altogether. His young parents rushed to the hospital at 5 a.m., to see their son turning blue in spite of the best efforts of the medical team swarming around him. He was whisked in an ambulance to the children's hospital at University of Michigan, where he was put on an ECMO machine.

ECMO. Extra-Corporeal Membrane Oxygenation. It's an incredible high-tech heart-lung machine, wired right into the tiny body with tubes and monitors, taking over the entire life process.

It's merely intellectually fascinating when you see it on PBS; face-to-face, it takes on a searing emotional reality. No reportorial curiosity here, just a scared grandma staring at the maze of tubes that administer drugs and nourishment, provide oxygen, drain the stomach, bladder, and pleural cavity, measure the blood gases of this precious child. I can't think of a single question beyond "Will he get better?"

The answer is that, thanks to ECMO, he probably will. Our baby would have died without it.

Erik's problem is that his system stayed in the fetal circulatory pattern after he was born. As a fetus, there's no need for the blood to go to the lungs for oxygen, because a fetus doesn't breathe; at birth, three little valves are supposed to click shut and let the blood start circulating to the lungs. His valves wouldn't stay closed.

It's a condition so unusual that my friend Jean, who spent her whole career as a pediatric nurse, had only read about it, never seen it.

Jean helped me understand that we needed to bring Erik's sister to see him. Kerianne "held" him when he was born, but hadn't seen him since then and had even wondered aloud if he had gone back into her mommy's tummy. So it was obvious that he was becoming less real to her.

But we were worried that the

It was another in our recent unbroken string of first-class weekends and the crowds were out enjoying the sunshine at the Village Art Festival on St. Clair at Kercheval.

The vintage car exhibit was a smash, thanks to car owners Dale Bowering, Ken Carver, August Cornacchia, Tom Driscoll, Pat Gaugh, Leo Poupard and Jim Slaughter.

Mainstay Pottery Jim Webers was there displaying his trademark stock of whimsical ceramic animal sculptures. They run heavily toward pigs and puns, including such groaners as two pigs driving a car, titled "road hogs" and a stack of nine porkers bearing a resemblance to human vertebrae, titled "swinal column."

cover the difference between the expenditures and the revenues. The problem is that this equity is shrinking.

According to information supplied to the board in a memo from Chris Fenton dated April 7, 1994, the board authorized a budget which resulted in a deficit created between this school year and the next school year of $3,451,346. Given the constraints placed on our system by new state regulations, the opportunity to raise revenues in the future is severely limited. Therefore, the board must wisely review the budget and decrease spending in order to stay within the bounds of our reduced revenues.

This deficit will not be funded by the issuance of debt, but it will be using cash reserves dropping the fund balance to $2,987,000. Our schools have the lowest fund equity level in 10 years. What is disturbing about the fund level is not the amount as much as it is the percentage of the total budget which it represents. Past boards have chosen to keep equity fund levels between 6.4 percent and 13.4 percent of the total budget. The fund equity level at the end of the current fiscal year will be only 5.4 percent of the total budget, and is budgeted to be only 4.2 percent of next year's budget.

• Less than 50 percent of our budget is spent on classroom and special teachers, textbooks, supplies, and classroom computers; this includes the costs associated with athletics, art, music, and special education. The facts are that the other 50 percent was not mentioned because it is overhead. I believe this community is intelligent enough to understand the balance of spending includes administrators, buildings, maintenance, clerical staff, etc. I think the question is, should this overhead constitute 50 percent of our school budget? Are there other ways the same or higher level of service could be provided for much less expense? Such a move could free up hundreds of thousands of dollars for the classrooms.

As a board member, father, citizen, and taxpayer, I also insist on facts. I think the community wants facts too!

Appalled over endorsement

To the Editor:

I am appalled that the Grosse Pointe News has endorsed a school board candidate whose literature is misleading. Your own reporters were present at the board meetings when the shortage of books at Richard School was presented to the board on several occasions and it was reported in your newspaper. Yet you have chosen to endorse a candidate whose literature states, "no school has ever reported a shortage of textbooks."

The parents at Richard, not having their book problem solved, donated $4,000 to Richard to buy books, which the board accepted.

Another misleading quote is, "represents the community not a vocal minority." Was it representing the community when the board ignored 5,000 signatures seeking to put the proposed sale of 389 St. Clair on the ballot?

And now, ignoring the community, parents, students, faculty, the selection committee and the Grosse Pointe South Mothers Club, the board, under this candidate's direction, allowed Dr. Shine to bypass the promoting of Bernie LeMieux to principal at South. This mistake is the last straw in the teacher bashing and severed communication between the faculty and the administration. Our teachers and principals have been humiliated.

All of these situations could have been corrected at their onset if the board would have followed its own resolutions.

Instead of restructuring our budget now, while we still have a year of control, the budget was not overhauled so that we could bank some savings to bolster our fund equity, which we never again will have the opportunity to rebuild. This board is "banking" on a millage vote next year that may not pass. We can no longer allow the board to rubber stamp every decision made by our administration. With only one man on the board actively questioning and listening to the community we must have someone else on the board to speak his mind. We can no longer afford to allow the board to act in lock-step.

The Grosse Pointe News, I believe, should have endorsed David Hunt — for the community!

Editor's note: To the best of our knowledge, there is not a shortage of textbooks at any Grosse Pointe school, including Richard Elementary. The $4,000 gift-purchase referred to in the letter was for non-required literature books.

Nearsighted school board?

To the Editor:

I am at a loss as to why the Grosse Pointe board of education rescinded the layoff of six administrative employees.

If the layoffs were acceptable and justified in the fall, why are they suddenly not justified? The fact that the board apparently has more money than expected, is not an acceptable answer.

The present millage expires next year and the fact that Southfield voters and Warren voters both turned down millage renewals by more than a 2-1 margin should send a message. Again our school board fails to look past its nose and plan for the future.

Stop catering to teens

To the Editor:

I read with interest the front page article in the June 2 issue of the paper regarding the students of Grosse Pointe South High School disrupting the area businesses.

I further read that assistant principal B. LeMieux stated that it would take four lunch periods to handle all the students.

I really found this statement funny. I am the parent of a suburban high school student with 1,600 students and guess what, they have three lunch periods to accommodate all the students. We also do not have an open campus lunch period. Why does Grosse Pointe have to do so?

Why can't the police issue loitering tickets to these rowdy students? Why don't the businesses do as they do in Detroit: say no students between 7 a.m. and 3 p.m.? Why don't the police issue littering tickets? I find these to be good questions. Wake up and get with the times. Stop catering to these kids and make them responsible for their actions.

Scratch one tanning lotion

I swear I will never again call anyone an "itch". For the past several days I have itched where I didn't know I had nerve endings. I have friends who have had severe allergies and have complained about itching. Knowing there was nothing I could do to help, I offered sympathy and went on my way. The next time anyone starts scratching in front of me, I will offer my soul to help.

This itchy problem began strictly as a result of vanity. My skin was looking pale and I decided to try a self-tanning lotion. In past years, I have had moderate success with assorted products. However, many of these lotions have unpleasant odors, so, when a friend told me about a lotion that had no smell, I decided to give it a try.

Within five hours my skin turned a golden bronze. I felt great; no harmful rays, no perspiration, just a healthy glow. On the morning of the second day I noticed tiny bumps on my legs and they itched. Throughout the day the bumps multiplied and the itching increased, spreading to arms, behind the knees, the neck and chest and, worst of all, the face.

I had been told that this particular product was considered to be so gentle that it was safe to use on the face. What a dream come true; no makeup would be necessary! The bumps started just under my ears and made a path through the chin and lips to the opposite ear. I think I know what it feels like to have fleas in your beard. The more I scratched the worse the itching became. I tried alcohol, witch hazel and finally sat with buckets of ice for temporary relief.

While trying to take my mind off the itching I began to sort old photographs. In the process I touched my eye and it swelled up and turned red and not only did it hurt, it itched! I tried another focus and decided to shine some silver to keep my hands occupied. I used rubber gloves. I have ALWAYS used rubber gloves for household chores. Today my hands broke out in huge welts and, you guessed it, they itched.

The obvious thing to do was take Benadryl; however, I fell asleep immediately after taking the drug. It was the weekend and we had plans which required me being upright and awake. I decided to tough it out as some of the welts were clearing. I went to the yard to pick some flowers and of course I was bitten by a mosquito. Now the decision had to be made. Did I want to have a drink when we went out or did I want to give in to the antihistamine? I realized that my hands were so busy scratching that they couldn't even hold the glass. Guess which route I took. Buzzzzzzzz!

Big 3 to build powder paint test facility at Ford's Wixom assembly plant

A Big Three consortium will build a paint test facility at Ford Motor Co.'s Wixom assembly plant to test the use of powder paints that reduce hydrocarbon emissions.

Wixom's current pilot test facility will be expanded by 60,000 square feet for the consortium's dedicated facility which, by late 1995, will begin testing powder clearcoat paint, the final coat in an automotive paint process. Chrysler, Ford and General Motors have selected ABB Paint Finishing Inc. to engineer, build and help operate the estimated $20 million facility. It will be staffed by Big Three engineers and technicians and United Auto Workers employees at the Wixom plant.

Plans for the facility were announced at a Society of Manufacturing Engineers trade conference in Livonia recently by Yogen Rahangdale, manager of paint and anti-corrosion systems at Chrysler and a member of the management committee of the Low Emission Paint Consortium (LEPC), one of 11 Big Three joint research efforts under the umbrella of the United States Council for Automotive Research (USCAR).

A number of Michigan plants were considered, and Wixom was selected because it provided an existing liquid paint pilot facility necessary for total paint processing, had access to staff and utilities, and was the lowest cost alternative.

Powder paints have been used in domestic automotive applications since the mid-1970s for selected components such as engine blocks, chassis parts, wheels and since 1991 as anti-chip and primer surfacer coatings on cars and trucks.

Powder paints are used in other manufacturing processes, such as lawn and garden equipment and metal furniture, but those products don't require the quality of finish vehicles do, according to John Young, LEPC chairman and executive engineer for Ford's body and assembly paint operations.

"The industry has reduced paint shop emissions of volatile organic compounds (VOC) by approximately 80 percent in the past 20 years, but making further reductions will require new paint technologies," Young said. "Powder clearcoat paint has the potential to satisfy customer expectations for appearance and durability while dramatically improving emissions. "But the technology requires development in a production-scale, pilot facility before the process is reliable enough to be used commercially. We have to know it will work when we build 1,000 vehicles a day, free of defects, while maintaining a uniform, smooth, high-gloss finish that we get with today's solvent and water-based paints."

LEPC's research objective is to reduce the remaining solvent emissions from paint shops by another 50 percent, if powder paints prove to be viable.

The test facility should accelerate the development time of powder clearcoat paint systems by more than two years and cut overall development costs, Young added. LEPC will study issues such as storage, handling, reuse and reclamation of powder clearcoat materials; facilities; application equipment; process and integration and validation of the total paint system.

ABB Paint Finishing is a leading global supplier of system design engineering, manufacturing, installation and service of paint finishing equipment, paint application automation and related environmental equipment to the automotive industry. Its parent company, ABB Inc., provides products and services for power, automotive, process, industrial automation, environmental control, mass transit and other markets. ABB Inc. and its subsidiaries have sales of $6 billion and some 30,000 employees in the United States.

LEPC was formed in 1993 to research ways to reduce stationary-source emissions at the Big Three's more than 50 North American automotive plants over the next decade. LEPC's management committee includes Young, Rahangdale and Thomas Meschivitz, director of North American operations paint engineering at General Motors.

the '50s and '60s, that were decidedly more affordable. And that is where the real interest in the Motor City is at present.

"The age group of collectors is changing," said Ed Lucas, a Troy-based Duesenberg restorer and the Concours d'Elegance master of ceremonies. "People between 45 and 55 aren't as interested in the classics.

"Older cars require greater skill to keep them running, and parts may be hard to find. Younger collectors remember cars from the '50s and '60s and they look for them."

Detroit-area enthusiasts tend to know cars and to have lots of access to them, Lucas said. There are dozens of car clubs here and they meet, have shows and go cruising. For the last couple of years the Mid-June Carnival of Cars alone has drawn up to 1,200 vehicles to a huge vacant field west of the GM Technical Center in Warren.

"This is a jaded market,"

Lucas said. "It will take time and effort to establish a successful auction here."

For Dreisbach Cadillac's Mark Dreisbach, the RM Classic auction was a chance to test the market. Dreisbach put two cars on the block: a 1955 white Cadillac Fleetwood Sixty Special with wire wheels and a "very '50s" blue interior, and a 1964 Corvette Stingray (neither sold).

Dreisbach spent five years painstakingly restoring the Cadillac. He admitted he was not anxious to sell it, so he put a fairly high reserve on the limited-edition hardtop sedan. It drew a bid of $16,500, not enough.

"I think the market is coming back," he said. "But the interest is more in the muscle cars of the '60s than in the older cars. Buyers want vehicles they can drive and enjoy."

Gari Kersten, a long-time collector of cars and trucks even including fire engines, said he has never bought at auction. Nor has any of his Grosse Pointe cronies. "We seem to buy and sell from each other," he said. "Our guys already know what's for sale and where."

Kersten thought auctions attract two kinds of buyers: "bottom fishers and the big boys." The former are folks likely to be just getting started at collecting, and they are looking for great bargains.

"The big boys are buying at $25,000 and up. For them auctions are a good deal — they don't have a lot of time to look," Kersten said.

Restaurateur Joe Muer fits Kersten's second category. "I love cars," said Muer, whose present collection includes two Mercedes Benz 190SLs from the '50s. "I go to shows and I have bought at auction before. There are some good deals at auction, but you have to do your homework."

Lucas agreed. Check price guides published by enthusiast books. Talk with other collectors and people at the auction site. There usually are experts at sales. Members of the auctioneer staff maybe helpful, he said.

"Most people have an idea of something they'd like before they go to a sale," Lucas said. "Get to the sale in time to inspect the cars before they go on the block."

"I've never been to an auction where there weren't some great vehicles sold at incredible prices, especially vehicles with no reserve."

Auctions themselves have come and gone in the Detroit area. Lucas said California-based Rick Cole had some successful sales in the past at Cobo Hall during the Grand Prix. They since have been discontinued. Autorama hot rod auctions worked for a while. An auction out at Domino Farms a year ago was "OK," he said.

"It's a shame we haven't had a major auction here in Detroit," Muer said. "Maybe it just hasn't been done right."

Muer said that means spending big bucks on promotion. "I need to get mail about it," he said, "not just hope to see a story in the paper."

At RM Classic, Howitt said the company had invested $80,000 in promotions. The indoor facility (a "must," according to Muer) in Novi cost $40,000, he said.

"We know we'll lose money this time," he said. "Earlier Detroit auctions haven't spent much. The really nice cars don't come. We had a good selection of fine cars."

"We've been running successful sales in Toronto for years," he said. "Michigan isn't tight-fisted. We hope to expand our sales to other areas in the state in the future."

Parent-bashing unjustified

To the Editor:
I am going to retire in June after 24 years of teaching English at North High. I have been very fortunate to have been able to share something that I enjoy with so many people. To me, that is the essence of teaching: sharing your knowledge and enthusiasm for a particular aspect of life.

Unfortunately these days parent-bashing has become as popular as teacher-bashing. The parents of this community have been very supportive of me and of their children. They have had remarkable success in raising outstanding young people — individuals that I would be proud to claim as my own.

I am very grateful for that support. I am also very grateful for the opportunity to share in the lives of these young people and to enrich theirs as they have enriched mine. Ours has been a very successful partnership.

While we may not be perfect as parents or as teachers, we should not hesitate to celebrate our many successes.

Legislative license?

Dear Mr. Bryant,
When you called the American Federation of Teachers some time ago you identified yourself as a state representative from Michigan who was looking for information on the scope of bargaining. You indicated you had been referred to me by researchers in the Education Commission of the States, a group that we share information with from time to time. You failed to indicate that you were also a fiction writer. I found out, unfortunately, only when I read the column titled "Confusion rife on teacher strike bill" in the (May 26) Grosse Pointe News.

Oddly enough your column begins with concern about misinformation, and goes on to spread enough misstatements and outright fabrications to move you to the head of the class. I didn't take notes on the conversation, but remember clearly that I told you I knew the bill limited what was required to be discussed in bargaining, but that I did not have the bill nearby for reference. You asked for specifics on the bill and I offered that the scope had been narrowed regarding the right to bargain over health insurance. You pointed out that it was the carrier choice that was limited. In the column you attribute a quote to me that I never made. We never discussed access to data or any of the other items you made up to make the point you wanted to get across in the column. Does legislative license allow you to take such liberties with reality at my expense?

The balance of the column reports a dialog about political contributions and bingo, two topics we never discussed. You are confused, perhaps, or simply expanding the information to fit your own reality. Whatever the case, you and I never discussed political contributions or bingo, or any political action activity. You owe your readers an apology for making up information and pretending that it happened when it really is just the misinformation you cynically claim to object to in public debate.

At the close of our conversation, I located the files I indicated I had during our conversation, called our state federation office to apprise them of your request, and eventually sent the reports to our office in Lansing where they wait for you to call. For my trouble, I am misrepresented to the public and our members who live in the area and read the Grosse Pointe News. I am appalled that someone with your responsible position feels free to lie to his constituents about our conversation. Perhaps you thought you could do so and not be found out. Whatever your motivation, it failed. Could I please have a copy of the column in which you set the record straight for your constituents?

Trying to locate G.P. WWII vet

To the Editor:
I need the help of your newspaper to locate a resident of the Grosse Pointe area who served with honor in World War II.

Specifically, I am trying to locate Gerald B. Queen, who fought for his country in Belgium and Germany during the Battle of the Bulge and beyond.

He served in the U.S. Army 395th Infantry Regiment, 99th Infantry Division.

His last known address was 652 Pemberton in Grosse Pointe Park.

The great state of Michigan should be very proud of her sons, like Gerald, who served with the 99th and who made history in the Battle of the Bulge.

Also, all veterans, no matter what outfit, who fought that ugly battle of the winter of 1944-45, should never ever worry about going to heaven. They have already served their time in hell. Amen.

Family remembered

To the Editor:
Praise to Betty Buffa, whose obituary appeared in last week's Grosse Pointe News. In our house we remember her and her late husband and son Tom very well (the other children we didn't know).

What was wonderful about Mr. and Mrs. Buffa was their serving as hosts to foreign students over many months or even a whole school year. They made their home truly international.

The Buffa children could now travel almost anywhere and find a "brother" or "sister" to whom they were very close.

'DSO Reports' marvelous

To the Editor:
Although I live in Detroit, I have been a Grosse Pointe News subscriber for some 20 years. It is great to have a paper that gives you all the news of cultural events, etc., on the east side.

As a symphony goer I have always enjoyed the "DSO Reports" by Alex Sucek. He writes a marvelous column. It is not only what he says that's important, but what he does not say is also meaningful. His music background and his writing ability could have enabled him to be a professional music critic. His is a finely developed skill.

Imagine the dismay this mess will cause for the child who happens to step in it on his or her way to school. Please show some courtesy toward others.

When you choose to have a pet, you also choose the responsibility of cleaning up after it.

Hoops slammed in the Woods

To the Editor:
My findings through inquiries of our neighboring communities regarding restricting frontal property basketball hoops are as follows:

Harper Woods, city offices: "We have no ordinance restricting hoops."

Clinton Township, city offices: "We have many complaints about hoops, but have nothing to restrict the front yard hoops."

Grosse Pointe Farms, Mr. DeFoe: "The Farms has no ordinance, yet many residents have made complaints and show concern about the hoops."

Grosse Pointe Park, Ms. Jane Blahut, "We have a very vague ordinance which includes personal property restrictions and may not apply to hoops."

Most of the residents I've spoken with agree that these hoops are not a "recreational" matter. Rather, "the hoops are a matter of diminishing property value and an infringement on other residents' rights!" "We have some residents in the Woods community who do not understand why they, personally, must be concerned with community values, other's rights and etc."

To reiterate from my findings of concern about front yard hoops in our community:

1. We all pay our taxes and deserve recognition of our rights.
2. Front yard basketball hoops are unsightly, diminish property value in the Grosse Pointe Woods community.
3. Owners of the hoops have other alternatives as to where they place these unsightly hoops.
4. Grosse Pointe Woods has an ordinance which restricts front fencing and residents have no restrictions on the ugly hoops. Why not?

It certainly appears that our neighboring communities are seeking answers, as are we, concerning restricting front yard hoops. Therefore, we sincerely ask our Grosse Pointe Woods mayor and councilmembers to set an example of initiative of precedence by putting in place an ordinance which will remove and restrict front yard basketball hoops.

Clinton plan bad for seniors

To the Editor:
According to a study conducted by the economic research firm DRI/McGraw-Hill, the typical American household may have to forfeit $461 worth of annual medical services under Clinton's proposed health-care scheme.

That's the same as nine visits to the doctor.

For some people who just don't get sick very much, this may not be a big deal. But to thousands of elderly Americans who are getting more susceptible to illness and injury every day, this loss of medical services could be devastating.

And since I'm sure elderly Americans will be asked to bear a huge portion of the cost of this plan — just as we had to with Clinton's recent tax increase on Social Security benefits — it doesn't make sense that we should also have to suffer the most.

Of course, I think this plan is bad for all Americans — not just the elderly. No one should have to face sub-quality, rationed health care. America, despite its very real problems, is still the envy of the world when it comes to quality medical care. No one is denied life-saving emergency treatment.

But if President Clinton's plan passes and the government limits how much the nation can spend on health care, our medical quality is going to plummet along with our access to care. Just look at the experience of the former Eastern bloc nations.

tubes and machinery would scare her. She's only 2. "She probably will be scared," Jean told us, "but it's important that she see him so she can buy into the situation and feel part of it. It will help later with bonding."

How right she was. Erik wrapped his fingers around his sister's bigger ones and held on tight. She's still talking about it.

Erik John. He has two grandpas, a step-grandpa, and a great-grandpa, all named John — and they all think he's named after them. But in his father's heart, Erik is named after Jan Hus, a Czech reformer of the 14th century, who tried to change the church two hundred years before the Reformation and was martyred at the stake for his principles. The Slavic "Jan" is foreordained to be mispronounced, so they Anglicized it.

Woods denies resident's bid to rezone home for parking lot

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

June 6, 1944, the longest day, the beaches of France erupt in battle. June 6, 1994, Woods residents and business owners square off over rezoning an address on Brys from residential to commercial.

While the issue was an old one, passions were close to the surface. The issue of granting a rezone on Brys had been before the council and the city's planning commission on previous occasions. The owner of the house at 1868 Brys, Dr. Matthew Fontana, asked the planning commission earlier this year to approve the rezone of the property from residential to commercial.

Fontana owns several pieces of commercial property on Mack in the Woods, including the property directly in front of the house on Mack. Fontana, in the past, has come before the council with plans to develop commercial property on Mack by Brys and Aline, a street next to Brys.

His plans have provoked protests from neighborhood residents who fear that already serious traffic and parking problems will become worse. The planning commission was unable to come to a decision last April on whether to recommend the rezone, and the matter was sent to the Woods City Council.

Fontana and his attorney, as well as several Woods business people, spoke in favor of the rezone Monday.

"I think the business people, the city and the residents have more in common than they think," said Fontana's attorney Ralph Kliber. "We all want the best place for residents and businesses. If the council approves the rezone, we'll be able to determine the amount of parking available. The parking in the Woods determines the size of the building. Once we know the size of the building, we can attract tenants and come up with the appropriate plans."

Kliber went on to say that the residential lot on Brys would be turned into a parking lot. The property on Mack by Brys and Aline would be built on. The parking lot would be used to meet the parking needs of the new buildings.

Several business owners got up and spoke to the council about how the Woods needs a forward thinking developer like Fontana.

"The Woods business district was built in the 1950s," said Mack property owner Sharon Mannino. "This is the '90s. There are more cars, and people can't park and are going elsewhere. The Woods has been looking for solutions for years, and here comes someone who has a solution; rezone a lot he already owns, and he'll provide the parking. The Woods, if it doesn't get into the '90s, will be stuck in the '50s."

Woods resident John Brucia described Fontana as a man of vision, and said that 50 years ago this country fought a battle against petty dictators, but it seems that they are still around. Carol Chaundy, owner of an art gallery by the Mack Ave. Diner, said that Fontana already owns several buildings in the Woods. There have been no problems with his other buildings, and he is providing much needed parking.

These expressions of support for Fontana's plan did not impress neighborhood residents who came to voice their opposition to the plan. Charles Loeher spoke for many Aline residents when he said that he was worried about traffic. He noted that Mack narrows around Brys and Aline. Adding a large building that will attract even more cars to the area would only make a bad problem worse, said Loeher.

Dorothy Fleming, who recently moved to the neighborhood, voiced fears that property values would be adversely affected by a rezone. She said that Fontana knew the property on Brys was residential when he bought it, and he shouldn't try to change the rules in the middle of the game.

Josef Bogosian, owner of Josef's Bakery, on Brys and Mack, said that he already has problems with parking in the area. Putting up another big building that will attract more people to the area would not help him. He was the only Woods business owner to speak against the rezone.

Several other residents pointed out to the council that Fontana owns a lot of undeveloped property on Mack by the two streets. He does not need a rezone to build on that property. He wants a rezone so he can build an even bigger building than he can currently.

"We're not against business," said Brys resident Thomas Sullivan. "But we think residential property should stay residential. He owns commercially zoned property, and we do not oppose his building on that, but he should not try to rezone."

Councilmember Thomas Fahrner said that he is acutely aware of the parking problems on Mack. He said that Fontana had come up with a simple solution that would add to the long-term viability of Mack businesses. This statement met with fierce opposition from many audience members.

Mayor Robert Novitke and councilmember William Wilson expressed concerns that rezoning the property would prevent the city from being able to mediate a solution that would please all parties.

City attorney George Catlin told the council that because neighborhood residents were able to get the signatures of over 20 residents who lived within 100 feet of the proposed rezone on a protest petition, city rules required that the council approve the rezone request by a two-thirds majority; in this case five affirmative votes would be required.

Novitke's and Wilson's concerns proved enough to prevent the rezone. Councilmembers Eric Steiner, James Alogdelis, Thomas Fahrner and Jean Rice voted for the rezone. Peter Gilezan was absent from Monday's meeting.

Fontana has the option of revising his plans and submitting them again to the planning commission. He said it was too early to tell what he would do.

Woods cautions Lansing on further tax shifts

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Afraid that taxes will again be shifted away from local governments to pay for education, the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council passed a resolution Monday asking the state legislature not to pass bills that would do that very thing.

Woods Mayor Robert Novitke said that legislation, SB1130, SB1131 and SB1132, was discharged directly to the state Senate floor without public hearings being held.

"When we heard about this legislation from the Michigan Municipal League, we knew we had to voice our displeasure," said Novitke. "The legislation will affect cities greatly, but no hearings have been held so far."

John Niemela, of the Municipal League, said that the legislation was discharged to the floor of the Senate on Wednesday, June 1, and was approved by the Senate the next day. No hearings were held by the appropriations committee.

"I'm afraid that the House will act quickly and pass the legislation without giving the public or local municipalities a chance to voice their opinions and objections."

The three bills, explained Niemela, will reduce the revenue sharing funds available to local cities by about 5 percent.

Under the current formulas, municipalities can expect state revenue sharing funds to increase by about 11 percent. If the legislation passes, local governments will see only a 6 percent increase for 1994-1995.

The bills would change three of the four components of state revenue sharing, Niemela said. The affected areas include the state income tax, the state single business tax and the state's intangibles tax, a tax collected by the state on intangible business assets like insurance policies.

"The state income tax portion of revenue sharing is determined by a formula that distributes dollars to local governments based on population," said Niemela. "The legislation would reduce the amount of money available. It's like having a pie. If you reduce the size of the pie, your portion is smaller even though the cut remains the same."

The legislation would also eliminate about $6.9 million in funds from the single business tax and $9.5 million in funds from the state intangibles tax.

"If the bills pass, cities can expect the amount of income from revenue sharing to drop by $67 million, from $1.214 billion to $1.146 billion," said Nie-

INTEREST RATE A.P.R.

If you're in the market for a new home or to refinance your mortgage, you're probably looking at both fixed and adjustable rate mortgage loans.

First of America Bank has something that combines the best of both—our Adjustable Rate Mortgages. You'll benefit from a five-year period with a low, fixed initial rate. Which means you can get more house for your money.

After the initial five-year period, your interest rate will adjust annually based on the U.S. Treasury Securities rate in effect at that time. If rates increase, your interest rate is protected and cannot rise more than five percent. So whether you plan to move to another home within five years or stay for a while, our Adjustable Rate Mortgage Loan should be your first step.

And use our pre-approved loan option to find out how much of a mortgage you qualify for prior to writing an offer to purchase.

John Vandervest

Vandervest is a Canfield scholar

The St. Paul Parish Scholarship Committee has named John Vandervest as the 1994 recipient of the Monsignor Francis X. Canfield Scholarship. Vandervest will receive $800 toward his tuition at DeLaSalle Collegiate High School.

In addition, he will receive $800 a year for his three remaining years of high school, provided he maintains a B average.

Vandervest is the son of Diane Vandervest and is an eighth-grader at St. Paul. He is active in the Boy Scouts and recently achieved the rank of First Class Scout. He also has been elected to the position of chaplain's aide and serves as the religious leader of his troop.

Runners-up in the competition were Yvette Alger, Drew Harris, Veronica Jamieson, Nicholas LeFevre, Yvonne McShane, Nicole Rondini, Lara Rutan, Tracie Schings and Jane Thomas.

Previous winners who earned a renewal of their grants are Paul Kowalski, DeLaSalle; Jennifer Fasulo, Regina High School; Colette Jamieson, Regina; and Carolyn Prince, Regina.

The Monsignor Canfield Scholarship, originally called the St. Paul Parish Scholarship, was renamed in 1991 to honor Canfield upon his retirement after 20 years as pastor.

U-M, South form art partnership

The faculty of the University of Michigan School of Art has established a three-year partnership arrangement with the faculty of the Grosse Pointe South High School art department.

In a letter to Jack Summers, associate dean Eugene Pijanowski said, "In order to foster closer professional relations with select high school art teachers in Southeastern Michigan, dean Allen Samuels and I have decided to assign specific art school faculty at your school."

Assigned to South is professor James Cogswell, whose specialties include drawing and painting. He will be a liaison between the school of art, Summers and South students.

Associate dean Pijanowski is starting the collaborative effort by offering a tuition-free summer workshop to South junior Mollie Sullivan.

Hunt for Value in Education

Is the current Board of Education taking a leadership role, or acting as a rubber-stamp for the administration and the unions?

You be the judge:

Fact: The school budget increased by 25.6% during the last 4 years -- double the rate of inflation

Fact: To fund expenses during this year and next, administrators will deficit spend $3.4 million of our $6.4 million school reserve fund

Fact: Less than 50% of the current budget is spent on class room teachers, computers, textbooks and supplies. This includes art, music, sports and special education

RM Classics happy with first Detroit-area auction

First there was the stunning success of the Concours d'Elegance, born at Meadow Brook some 15 years ago, and today a Pebble Beach of the Midwest. Then there was the re-birth of Detroit's annual auto show — once an almost provincial affair that in the last few years has taken its place among the great international draws.

Now the Motor City may be moving toward becoming an auction center for classic car and truck collectors.

That's what car fans in general — and RM Classic Car Productions in particular — are hoping. The Ontario-based auction and restoration specialist RM Classic launched its first public sale south of the border. By most observers' calculations, the 1994 Springtime in Detroit event, staged at the Novi Expo Center April 29-May 1 with the expert services of Kruse International, Auburn, Ind., was a success.

Close to 400 vehicles went on the block and just about half were sold, a very respectable number, according to Mitchell Kruse, president of Kruse International, who said that 30 percent or better is considered a successful sale.

The stars of the Spring in Detroit classic car auction didn't sell. But that is in line with the current market, in which affordable automobiles are coming back strong, but the top classics are not bringing what their owners think they are worth and are not selling.

A lot of cars did sell and among observers who judged the event a success were buyers who got their dream cars at a price they considered good.

"I really did not intend to buy anything," said Richard Vincent, head of Traffic Jam and Snug restaurant (better known as TJ) just south of the Wayne State campus. But Vincent, who wound up buying three cars, was delighted with his unexpected acquisitions. He loves the old cars, he said, but is not really a collector but an investor. "I figure it is more interesting than buying stock," he said.

"I guess I got swept along with the excitement," he added, but he feels he got good buys in the '57 and '63 Ford Thunderbirds and the '54 Jaguar XK-120 roadster he acquired. The

Autos

By Jenny King

'57 Thunderbird is particularly rare because it is one of only two right-hand-drive Birds of that vintage known to exist in the United States.

Vincent said he unexpectedly became the first customer in a new venture he and a couple of partners have launched, Classic Car Storage, in a historic building in downtown Detroit, which had been a horse and carriage barn before the days of the automobile.

The most ballyhooed car to cross the auction block at Spring in Detroit was a ZIS-110 convertible sedan once owned by Soviet dictator Joseph Stalin. Bidding went to $90,000, but that was not enough for the owner — RM Classic — to let it go.

Also on sale were 85 cars which RM bought from the Richard Kughn collection a few months earlier. Top bid of the auction was $490,000 for a 1929 Mercedes-Benz Nurburg convertible sedan, but that fell short of the reserve and was no sale, as were bids of $260,000 on a '37 Horch 853 sport cabriolet, $166,000 on a '57 Mercedes SL roadster and $137,500 for a '37 Cord 812SC Sportsman.

The top sales that were completed at the Novi auction were fairly modern cars: a '93 Dodge Viper which went for $65,000; an '85 Ferrari Testarossa which brought $61,000; and '81 Lamborghini Countach which brought $58,000, and a '78 Bentley Corniche convertible, which sold for $48,000.

Little Auburn, the home of the Cord, Auburn and Duesenberg automobiles, now commemorated in a charming art deco museum, casts a giant shadow across the Midwest. The Kruse annual labor day weekend auction just south of town attracts 2,000 vehicles for sale. Drove of buyers and assorted car fans swell the town's modest 8,000 population during the popular week-long event.

"Detroit isn't known yet as a center for auctions, but why shouldn't we try for a third jewel?" asked David Hollis. The Bloomfield Township collector and retired General Motors executive was a chief architect of Michigan's Concours and is an admirer of the city's auto show success.

He said that quality of cars for sale at an auction means more than numbers, citing a 1935 Packard Twelve convertible Victoria with Waterhouse body and a couple of rare Rolls-Royces as examples of great cars which were available at Novi but did not sell. The Packard drew a bid of $125,000, but that was not enough to make reserve.

Hollis has already spent some private time with one of the vehicles for sale: a 1949 ZIS convertible that was one of Joseph Stalin's parade cars. Because it so closely resembles a 1941 Packard, it has long been thought that the car is a Russian reproduction of a Packard. Hollis examined it carefully and has some other theories.

"We were amazed when the ZIS arrived here intact," said Bill Howitt, a spokesman for RM Classic in the company's Canton office. "Nothing was stolen during shipping — something we were warned to expect. There even are the little parade flags for the front fenders and a large portrait of Stalin."

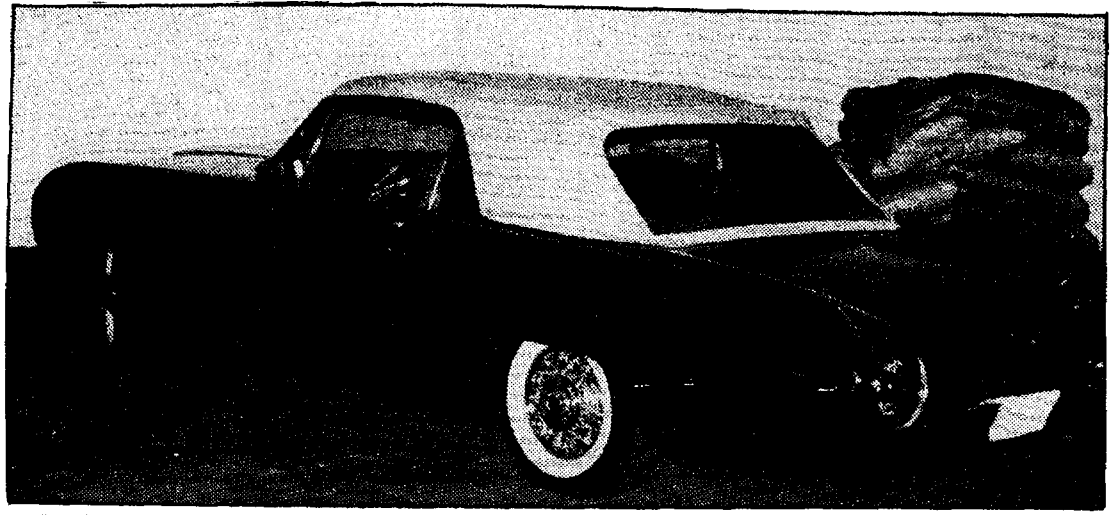

Howitt figured the Stalin ZIS, reportedly kept tucked away by the dictator's chauffeur for the past 40 years, would attract some serious buyers. He wouldn't put a price on it, but said one of the other vehicles for sale, a 1930 Packard, was worth about $300,000. The ZIS brought a bid of $90,000, but did not make reserve. (The reserve is a figure the owner puts on his car, not known to bidders, below which he will not sell.)

At the other end of the spectrum were cars, mostly from

This British racing green '54 Jaguar XK-120 roadster was an unexpected bargain Richard Vincent acquired at the Spring in Detroit auction.

Bright red factory hot rod '63 Ford Thunderbird was another offer at the Novi auction that Vincent couldn't refuse.

Brownell's Electrike energizes tech students

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Students and staff at Brownell school still look twice when they see Kerry Pytel or a member of the Solar Team coming.

They never know what to expect. Last week Pytel and team members rode the second prototype of their Electrike up and down the hallways, its small battery-operated engine whirring as the bicycle-like vehicle flew past a half-dozen students.

The Electrike has been in the making since February, when technology teacher Pytel and the newly formed Solar Team received about $2,000 in grant money to fund their project.

"The purpose of the club is to design and to construct an alternative energy vehicle capable of transporting a person," Pytel said. "The students originally wanted to design a solar bike (which explains the team's name) but there wasn't enough time."

Instead, students began their project with an idea of an electric bike, a set of plans from a now-defunct Canadian company that built recumbent cycles and scrap bike parts.

Pytel encouraged team members to write letters of inquiry to local businesses, corporations, universities and service organizations.

"We always asked for used parts and equipment, but everyone gave us new equipment. This really has been a community project," Pytel said.

Sponsors include Roy O'Brien Ford, the Wayne County Regional Educational Service Agency, Start-All Enterprises, Ramsey Winch Co. and the Grosse Pointe Rotary. Pytel said Pierce and Parcels middle schools also have donated equipment to the project. Brownell engineers Ted Reaume and Nick Woods also lent their expertise to the team, he said.

The first prototype was built in May using bike parts designed to handle the force of one-half horsepower, Pytel explained. When the Electrike was fitted with a high-power electric motor — a power source five times as potent as what the parts could withstand, the bike broke apart.

"Pieces were flying all over like it was a popcorn popper," he said, noting that he conducts all test drives.

The second prototype was completed last week and after it was test driven, team members were able to ride it to determine what problems needed to be fixed.

"The team does most of the work on its own," Pytel said. "They come up with the ideas that I either approve or reject. You know, I have told them to do things a certain way and sometimes it's been wrong. Some of these kids are so bright."

The Electrike resembles a cross between a bicycle and a motorcycle with a sidecar. It is powered by a 24-volt battery. Problems that need to be worked out: the bike does not have a place for the rider to place his or her feet and the center of gravity is off.

"To me, this is the essence of learning," Pytel said. "The practical applications the students learn in math and science are being put into a true technological education."

Pytel was inspired last summer when he attended a technology conference and saw an electric bike on display that had been made by a high school team.

The Twins that Loved the Lake

Once upon a time there were two twins. Their names were Alexa and Elin. They lived with their mom and dad in a cabin near a lake.

Alexa and Elin would play around the beach with their friends. They would ask mom after lunch, "Can we play at the beach?"

Mom would say, "Yes." They were so happy they could scream. But they didn't know better not to do that.

One night Alexa had a dream that if the lake had no litter in it, they could swim in it. The next morning Alexa told everybody she knew. They did it. They cleaned up the lake. Then the lake was good enough that they could swim in it again.

ULS senior 2nd in scholarship

University Liggett School senior John "Jed" Howbert won the second prize in the Ayn Rand College Essay Scholarship.

Competitors had to write an essay based on Rand's work, "The Fountainhead." There were more than 4,000 entries nationally; Howbert was one of five second-place finishers. There was one grand prize winner.

Howbert, who will receive $1,000 as his second-place award, is the son of Edgar and Susan Howbert of Grosse Pointe Farms. A National Merit Scholarship semi-finalist, Howbert will attend Harvard University this fall.

South students score high in French exam

Twenty Grosse Pointe South High School students placed among the top 10 in various divisions of the National French Examination which was administered in March.

Kate Garvey (Level 1), Mark Conrad (Level 2), Eileen Erbecker (Level 3), Caitlin Walsh (Level 3), and Yvonne Krywyj (Level 4) placed among the top eight in their divisions in the nation.

Big fish

Well, it's really a mammal. Students at St. Paul Catholic School in Grosse Pointe Farms constructed a 50-foot blue whale out of plastic and duct tape and inflated the creature by forcing air into it with a small fan. The project was inspired by teachers Sue Kotas and Kay O'Neill, who have been teaching the fifth-graders about oceanography. Students also painted a mural of sea life and wrote poems and essays on marine issues.

'Eyes on Classic Design' is June 19 at Ford Estate

By Jenny King
Special Writer

The real beauty of "Eyes on Classic Design" is not the flowing lines and deep, rich colors of the 200 vehicles in the annual auto show.

The real beauty is the noble purpose of the 6-year-old auto and design display slated for June 19 on the gracious grounds of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House.

Proceeds from "Eyes" will fund research, professional technical training and education for visually impaired women and men through the Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology.

According to the DIO, for the past three years, "Eyes" has raised about $140,000 a year -- 60 percent of its operating budget.

"We're now in the process of enlarging the education area in our building on E. Jefferson from 200 to 1,400 square feet," said Dr. Phillip Hessburg, a founder of "Eyes" and president of the DIO board of directors.

"The Gorey Resource Center for the visually impaired will include a kitchen to help people with macular degeneration -- a loss of central vision -- learn how to get along," Hessburg said.

Loss of vision for many often means loss of independence. Through DIO programs, these adults can learn how to function in a kitchen setting, or how to select clothes that match -- not an easy task for someone with macular degeneration.

"The DIO also has an active, accredited teaching program that trains ophthalmic assistants," he said.

Hessburg, who admits to a keen personal interest in scientific research through the institute, said it was the unreliability of government funding several years ago that led to the first "Eyes on the Classics" in 1988.

"I had been using grant money for the institute," he said. "One year it was approved but never funded."

he chuckled. "Our cumulative knowledge could have been stuffed in the ear of a flea."

It took the interest and expertise of enthusiasts like General Motors executive Dick Ruzzin to transform the board's mini-show concept into a cele-

"Eyes" will offer things like the Private Eyes brunch, a popular outdoor food fest that this year will offer French country cuisine on the lush green lawn of the Ford estate.

A banquet the night before (it's intimate -- limited to 500 guests) will allow partygoers a chance to see Cadillac's new World Headquarters at the GM Tech Center in Warren. Italian automotive designer Nuccio Bertone and retired Detroit-area designer and Center for Creative Studies professor Homer LaGassey will be honored at the June 18 Vision Honored banquet.

An on-site studio of the future will have designs produced by students from the Center for Creative Studies for show visitors to see.

Students and design enthusiasts will have an opportunity to meet Bertone and LaGassey Friday night at the Ford home. Eve of the Eyes, new for 1994, is a less-formal reception at which young designers will have a chance to meet their heroes, Hessburg said.

Then, of course, there are the cars. Two weeks before the show, more than 200 vehicles had accepted invitations to "Eyes," said John Bissa, the man who runs the event for the DIO.

It's more than a car show, he said. Last year there were some military vehicles. This year visitors will see vintage fire engines, Indy pace cars and Indy race cars alongside classic vehicles like Marybeth Adderly's 1937 Cord 812, Grosse Pointe Richard Thams' 1939 Plymouth convertible sedan and William Dunlop's 1956 Chevrolet Bel Air sedan.

Vehicles are coming from as far away as California, Massachusetts and Italy, Bissa said. "Owners have a passion for their vehicles," Bissa said.

"They are willing to bring them some distance to show them off and to talk with visitors about them."

Bob Schellig is a perfect example. The former Grosse Pointer is hauling his hand-built wooden-body 1926 Ford depot hack to the Ford estate from his home in Rochester Hills.

"I was really proud to be asked to bring it," said the railroad executive, who built the truck on a chassis he found sinking into the mud on a Michigan homestead. "Wooden-body vehicles are a new class this year. It will be interesting to see the evolution of the oak-and-mahogany designs as they progressed into the ultimate Sportsman and Town and Country vehicles of the 1940s."

In keeping with Dick Ruzzin's always-go-first-class approach, awards this year are Tiffany crystal, Bissa said. Bob Schellig wouldn't mind one. His depot hack already has picked up a couple of first-place honors at Rochester's annual Heritage Festival.

"Most non-profit 501-C3 operations would sell their souls to get a fundraiser that will bring people each year," Hessburg said. "The continuing popularity of 'Eyes' is like a prayer being answered."

"Eyes on Classic Design" automotive design show will be open from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Sunday, June 19. Awards will be presented at 1 p.m. Admission is $10 at the gate. For more information, call 824-EYES.

The Friends of Vision, a support group for visually impaired people, will raffie a 1994 Mustang convertible at the "Eyes on Classic Design" car show. From left is Judi Dara, executive administrator, Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology; Dr. Philip C. Hessburg, president, board of directors, DIO; and Ludmila F. Kruse, member of the Friends of Vision. Call 313-824-EYES for information about purchasing a raffie ticket.

The pain of laying people off caused Hessburg and the board of directors to re-examine support for the DIO.

When member Al Ricca suggested to the board that it organize a car show as a fundraiser, the naysayers told Hessburg that car shows wouldn't do well in Grosse Pointe.

"At that point we were thinking about having a couple of cars in the parking lot of the professional offices at Grosse Pointe Ophthalmology and maybe charging $1 per person," bration of design on a grand scale. As Hessburg tells it, Ruzzin, prompted by his wife Merrie Lynn, a volunteer reader for the blind, showed up at a planning meeting.

Ruzzin, then chief of design for Cadillac Motor Division, agreed to get involved, but only if the show focused on the art of design and things were done first-class.

This year, "Eyes" has changed its name to better reflect that purpose. The former "Eyes on the Classics" is now "Eyes on Classic Design."

The annual spring luncheon and fashion show of the Friends of Vision was held recently at the Lochmoor Club.

portant. A presidency as tarnished as yours may keep the public more vigilant about whom we elect. Unfortunately, such vigilance is such a part of your legacy that we have come to an easy distrust of our leaders. That Watergate model framed our thinking. It bred images of "Irangate" and "Whitewatergate." If remembering is important, forgiving is more important, not just for you, but for everyone.

You died on Arbor Day, a day for the planting of trees. Maybe there's a sign in that. An ancient Hebrew psalmist wrote: "Hope deferred makes the heart sick, but when the desire comes it is a tree of life."

All of us live, I believe, with some measure of heart-sickness that only the fruition of our hopes can cure. We all live our lives somewhat crippled in a way no earthly physician can cure. I wish your restless heart peace now, Richard Nixon. However great our differences may have been, I know that in but a blink of eternity we shall be as one.

tively the morning after Olivia and Sebastian's first encounter as though representing the flowering of love. It is a breathtaking effect.

In all, it is a totally engaging evening of laughter, tears and the thrill of remembering (or rediscovering) what love, in its many guises, is all about.

"Twelfth Night" will be performed in repertory at Stratford through Nov. 13 on the Festival Stage. For tickets and accommodations call (800) 567-1600, (519) 273-1600 or (313) 962-2391.

Journey

less expressed, in past productions.

The four actors make us feel the strong bond of love that survives all anger and conflict. They find moments of humor in O'Neill's text describing their condition and relationships that invite the audience to laugh with them at themselves. And they exhibit a strength of family bonds throughout their adversity.

The third act scene between James and Edmund, for example, is a classic mutual discovery between father and son at the end of a long drinking bout. For the first time, they exchange confidences about their lives that make possible a new respect and understanding. In that moment, Hutt and McCamus become archtypes of all fathers and sons striving to surmount the barriers of stubborn pride, to express their love and share their dreams.

That the hopes they raise are not false is assured by the fact that Edmund, in the person of Eugene O'Neill, did survive and give the world deep insights into the human condition through his plays. It is also evidenced by the fact that the play could inspire this quartet of actors to a powerful and moving portrayal that is no less than a theatrical tour de force.

"Long Day's Journey Into Night" runs through Sept. 17.

The Pastor's Corner To Richard Nixon:

Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church

You are gone, Richard Nixon, and it's time I make my peace with you. I must admit you trouble me in death even as you did in life. You challenge my avowed belief in the inherent dignity and worth of every human being. You challenge my belief in forgiveness — more specifically in my ability to forgive. Above all the eulogies, well-couched phrases, muted characterizations and pleas for history's long look at you, I hear Harry Truman's terse summation of your character: "No good, lying son-of-a-bitch."

It's not that I am unmoved by your death. I feel sympathy for your children. Whatever you did, and whoever else you were, you were their father. Julie and Tricia have always appeared to be good, solid people. That says something for you. That your wife Pat was so faithful and loyal to you must also indicate something good about you, too. And certainly in years of public service there is more than raw ambition and lust for power. I want to believe there was some purity in your young dreams about leadership. And yet...

And yet, I remember the words of a seminary classmate: "Nixon's an evil man."

"Why do you say that?" I asked.

My classmate looked at me a second and said, "Watch what surrounds him. Evil men attract evil. Evil surrounds them. Look at what happens. Look at the people nearby." This was said years before Watergate.

When you resigned, I wished you no ill. I fancied no prison term or public pillorying. I just wanted you to leave. I just wanted for you the rebuke of isolation from public life, from all that fed the power lust that kept hurting you and our country. I suppose that's as close to forgiveness as a fellow citizen can get.

I forgive, but I do not forget. I remember, and I believe that it is important for generations of Americans to remember. Your defenders claim you didn't do anything other presidents hadn't done. Maybe, God help us, they are right. But what a collection of egregious deeds you wove into the tapestry that was your career. There were the dirty tricks, lots of them, you played on your political opponents. There were the lies. Clips from your statements on Watergate could make a newsreel of them. There was your "enemies list," the way you hunted people like Daniel Ellsberg who "leaked" the Pentagon Papers. There was the Communist witch-hunting of your earlier years. Then there was the Vietnam War.

You ran for office claiming you had a plan to end the war. Once in office you talked of "peace with honor." Meanwhile, the war went on for four more years. A generation of American men was decimated, and the population of a people far away ravaged while the world waited to find out what "peace with honor" meant. Of all the things you did, I find this the most difficult to forgive.

You were safely tucked in a back file drawer of my mind, forgiven through benign indifference until the news of your stroke and death was broadcast. Now, once again, the memories are out. Remembering is im-

'Night' is a triumph of love, theater

By Alex Sucek
Special Writer

As the characters make their entrances in the opening scenes of Stratford's new production of "Twelfth Night," the most heart warming and touchingly amusing of all Shakespeare's plays, a remarkable triumph of theater unfolds.

Every one of the principal roles is a virtuoso performance in a production that sweeps the audience up in a web of love adventures ranging from idealistic to earthy and comic to tragic.

Lucy Peacock as Viola, spokesman for all lovers, pleads the case of Orsino's suit to Olivia with heart warming eloquence in some of Shakespeare's most exquisitely beautiful poetry.

In contrast, David William as the steward, Malvolio, dreaming of dominating his fellow servants through marriage to his Lady Olivia, is a thoroughly mean-spirited, egotistical suitor. His masterful characterization brings down the house in his misguided efforts to woo his employer with the most sourpuss smile ever stretched on a face.

Alison Sealy-Smith as Olivia, on the other hand, is astonishing as the unapproachable love object until Orsino's messenger warms, and wins her heart, although he is actually Viola, a woman in disguise. Her passion for the girl disguised as a man is only fulfilled when Viola's twin brother appears on the scene and takes over.

One wonders and chuckles momentarily in the rush. "What's going on here?" as Orsino falls out of love with love (the unattainable Olivia) and wakes up to real love in response to the disguised devotion of Viola for him.

Meanwhile, there's the subplot of Olivia's kinsman, the witty and lovable drunk, Sir Toby Belch, using the prospect of marriage to Olivia as a lure to keep his drinking buddy, Sir Andrew Aguecheek, as house guest and companion in midnight mischief and to fleece him of his money. Lewis Gordon and the remarkably versatile Stephen Ouimette are the quintessential comedy team in these two roles, playing off against each other with characterizations and stage business that kept everyone in stitches throughout their scenes.

Joining their antics, Yanna McIntosh as Maria is the perfect foil for their mischief and aptly arch as the conspirator who engineers the famous entrapment of Malvolio.

And even among these comic conspirators, there is a touching love interest as Sir Toby and Maria flirt warmly in the course of their machinations and ultimately wed. Sir Andrew, however, remains forever unrequited after a brilliantly comic duel with the disguised Viola in which both are hilarious reluctant dragons.

Most poignant of the show's generous endowments, however, is Brian Bedford as Feste, the "fool." It is his superb balance between humor and philosophical commentary in word and song that brings the mood of "Twelfth Night" into its sharpest focus. The new musical setting of "Oh Mistress Mine" in mambo rhythm is captivating even as he makes the words communicate with rich meaning. And his tender chanting of "Come Away Death" has the power to bring tears to your eyes.

These standout performances along with an ideal setting in an exotic, isolated world that might be a Caribbean island or North African hideaway and an unusually perceptive concept of the play by the festival's new artistic director, Richard Monette, coalesce in a magical result.

And the costumes and special effects are no less dazzling. A tropical bazaar is erotic in its rich play of color, and giant hibiscus blossoms open sugges-

Stratford revisited

Alex Sucek, who reviews Detroit Symphony Orchestra concerts for the Grosse Pointe News, has spent the last 40-odd summers taking in the theater at Stratford on Avon in Ontario.

His reviews of this year's offerings begin today and will continue as shows open throughout the season. The Stratford season began May 31 and will continue through the middle of November.

This 'Journey' finds love amid O'Neill's family angst

By Alex Sucek
Special Writer

In "Long Day's Journey into Night," America's great playwright Eugene O'Neill unburdened his soul.

It must have been both agonizing and liberating to tell the story of his own bitterly troubled family. That may be why it was his last play, published only after his death.

After all, who could admit that his father was a miserly alcoholic, albeit one of America's most popular actors. Or that his mother spent her adult life as a morphine addict as the result of irresponsible medical care at his birth. Or that his older brother was an alcoholic failure. Nor could it have been pleasant to recall his own near fatal bout with tuberculosis, or his guilt over his mother's addiction. Nonetheless, after O-

Neill's death, the first performance was hailed as final evidence of his genius; one of his greatest plays.

In reviving it at Stratford's Tom Patterson Theatre this summer, the festival has acknowledged this with a remarkable quartet of actors who play their roles with an authenticity that transcends the stage.

Longtime festival veteran William Hutt is James Tyrone, the father whose quirks strain family ties to the breaking point. His sons are Jamie, played by Peter Donaldson, and Edmund (the role representing O'Neill) performed by Tom McCamus. The mother, Mary, is played by another Stratford star of long standing, Martha Henry. Her performance is in a class by itself.

In fact, Henry dominates the first two acts with the power of her brilliantly portrayed, fragile and tragic figure. She achieves a remarkable yet subtle transition from a gentle delicateness to the artificial strength and determination not to face the reality that she gets only because of the morphine.

Otherwise, Mary Tyrone and her three men are all prey to the same confusion of motives and impulses and the actors render the love/hate conflicts with unnerving accuracy. Each exhibits palpable resentment of any admission of the cruel truths of their lives. Each also displays the all-too-familiar human frailty of ascribing blame to others while denying it in themselves.

These are behaviors we all have seen to some degree in friends or family. And here, seated on three sides of the living room set on the thrust stage of the Tom Patterson Theatre, we experience an overpowering illusion of being invisible observers in the Tyrone's private lives, witnesses to their agonizing self-destruction. Yet amid the recriminations, this performance provides an uplifting thread missing, or

'Flintstones' is candy for the memory

By Hobbie Echlin
Special Writer

"Flintstones, Meet the Flintstones..."

Well, for the most part, we already know the Flintstones, and that's half the fun of this live action romp through the animated public domain of Barney and Fred.

Director Brian Levant knows there's a sort of twisted innocence (some might argue cultural atrophy) to staging a full-scale Hollywood production of a cartoon, and that's exactly what we get. From the opening scenes — a hilariously exact duping of the old cartoon intro — Levant makes it clear that, like "The Brady Bunch Live," we're going to laugh at what we already know.

Memory-candy it may be, but it's still entertaining.

Key to "The Flintstones" hilarity is its incidentals, its mater-of-fact punning on our modern world. As with the cartoon, all household appliances are some kind of prehistoric animal. Only Levant and his writers have included cave-painting versions of cash machines, McDonalds and other "modern" conveniences to carry on the Hanna-Barbara tradition. Some of the film's funniest moments, like "Airplane's," are its most off-handed — everyday details (lunch, lawnmowers, labor) get absurd interpretations in their dawn-of-man incarnations.

And to its credit, the film's reverence for the cartoon prehistoric is thorough, from Fred's neanderthal-pirouette bowling form to the elaborate cave art-deco set designs.

All that said, though, there's the matter of the plot.

As usual, it's Fred, the already-animated (and ample) John Goodman, and Barney, comic veteran Rick Moranis, learning the value of true friendship through life experience.

The script oscillates wildly between the cartoon-speak axioms of the original and more mature dialogue, where the actors make fun of being dressed up in cave suits with bones in their hair.

Then again, with Liz Taylor playing Fred's mother-in-law, this kind of obvious irony is hardly avoidable. Likewise, matter-of-fact cameos by comic Jay Leno, original "Saturday Night Live" cast member Laraine Newman and even modern rock precursors the B-52's (renamed the B.C.-52's) add a much-needed comic overtone to the otherwise cartoon-simple plot.

Not surprisingly, the film does take liberties toward the adult side of things, adding exotic diva Halle Berry as Fred's scheming sexpot secretary and introducing a manual labor vs. modernization subplot that would make the UAW proud.

As such, "The Flintstones" is not just the kidstuff of its ads and posters, and that's both good and bad. Seeing a talented Hollywood-heavy cast teetering around in caveman outfits acting out cartoon drama is a funny, if limited schtick; but it's really the only foot — and a bare one at that — "The Flintstones" has to stand on.

Still, it's a funny, if bizarre, effort from a Hollywood that still has a tongue firmly in its cheek.

Murphy scores with 'Beverly Hills Cop III'

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

It's been 10 years since Eddie Murphy's blockbuster "Beverly Hills Cop." As Detective Axel Foley, he left audiences clamoring for more of his bug-eyed expressions, gap-toothed smile and inimitable laugh. Fast on his feet, he was even quicker with his verbal jabs.

Three years later, he was back again with "Beverly Hills Cop II." It was generally agreed that it was not as good as the original but was still big box office.

Now we have "Beverly Hills Cop III" which is not as good as "Cop I," but better than "Cop II" and undoubtedly will be a big ticket triumph.

In this one, Axel's boss, (played by Detroit councilman Gill Hill) is shot. Axel vows to track down the killer. The trail leads to Beverly Hills, where he calls on his law enforcement friend, Billy Rosewood (Judge Reinhold).

Axel's return to Beverly Hills is greeted with apprehension by his friends. They suspect trouble and they are sure of it when he accuses Ellis De Wald (Timothy Carhart), one of the town's leading citizens and owner of Wonder World, a Disney-like theme park, of shooting his former boss.

Behind the glitter and excitement of Wonder World, Mr. Nice Guy, De Wald, is running another operation printing counterfeit bills. With some inside information provided by comely and friendly Janice (Theresa Randle), who works there, Axel follows a labyrinth of passages that lead to the money-making machine.

The special effects in "Cop III" are spectacular, particularly those shot in Wonder World. In one sequence, wild animals are so lifelike, they scare Axel almost as much as the goons chasing him. Director John Landis goes all out to make Wonder World a feature attraction which probably added considerably to the film's $54 million budget.

Murphy's frenetic performance is enhanced by the return of Reinhold, his laid-back police pal, and new faces Hector Elizondo as veteran detective and family man who hasn't seen a $50 bill since his marriage, and lovely Randle. A special mention goes to Bronson Pinchot's Serge who appeared in the original "Beverly Hills Cop."

No longer working in an art gallery, Serge now owns a Survival Boutique dealing in fashionable self-defense weapons. It's a riot to hear him explain in a tortuous foreign accent, the use and purpose of his "weepons."

'Noises Off' on again

Grosse Pointe South's Pointe Players have been selected to perform "Noises Off" on the main stage at the International Thespian Society Festival '94. The festival is attended by students from around the world. Performing at the festival, which is held at Ball State University in Muncie, Ind., June 20-27, is an honor granted to only five of the 90 schools which are represented at the festival.

Students in the cast are Courtney Jo Dempsey, Bill Drummy, Neely O'Brien, Greg Sharrow, Heatha Bossler, Paul Cure, Joe Calarco, James McGovern and Katie Kingsley. It is directed by South teacher Mary Martin.

The show will be presented for school and community at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, June 17-18, at Grosse Pointe South High School's auditorium. Tickets are $5 for students; $7 for adults. Call 343-2617.

Tips for tourists

Cleaning out the mailbox: Most of us have just finished paying our annual federal and state income taxes and are wondering just what we got in return.

One good thing supported by the money we pay is the Michigan Travel Bureau. This is the division of the Department of Commerce which promotes tourism. So you can take advantage of the fact that the bureau recently published its second edition of "Michigan Travel Ideas," a 114-page guide put together by Midwest Living magazine. It is available free if you call (800) 5432-YES.

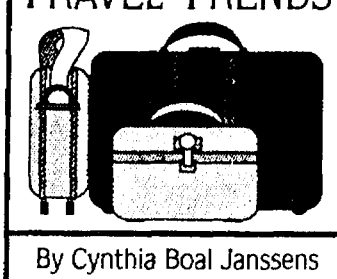

This comprehensive publication contains lots of the details, phone numbers and other information you need to plan trips in Michigan. Every household should have one.

Great Lakes Cruises: It's been many a year since a cruise ship has sailed the Great Lakes on any regular basis. However, Blyth & Co. of Toronto will offer several trips on our lakes this summer on the 79-passenger Akademik Ioffe, which is actually a Finnish-built icebreaker.

The eight- and 10-day programs operate between Toronto and Duluth, Minn., and all include a two-day stay in Toronto. As the trips are only one-way, a flight back to the originating city (Toronto or Duluth) costs $175.

Trips begin July 31, Aug 9, 15, 24, 27, and Sept. 3, 6, 13. The eight-day trips are priced from $1,295 to $2,495 a person plus $295 in port taxes. The 10-day trip costs $1,795 to $3,295 plus $395 in taxes. Note that B and C cabin categories share bathroom facilities. For details, Traverse is Toll-free: If you are planning a trip to Traverse City this summer, then you might want to take advantage of the city's new central reservation system. The Convention & Visitors Bureau sponsors the service. Call 1-800-TRAVERS from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday to book a variety of accommodations.

New State B&B Guide: The Lake to Lake Bed & Breakfast of Michigan Association has issued its 1994 directory.

The extremely useful guide contains detailed information about more than 100 bed-and-breakfast facilities in both the Upper and Lower peninsulas.

I have my own favorites, like the Sylvan Inn in Glen Arbor and the H.D. Ellis Inn in Blissfield, but you are sure to discover your own favorites. All members of this association have adopted similar standards and passed mandatory inspections.

To obtain a copy, call 1-800-832-6657 or write B&B Directory, P.O. Box 428, Saugatuck, MI 49453. There is a $3 postage and handling fee which may be charged to a credit card.

New Ship, New Itineraries: Royal Caribbean Cruise Line, a popular choice of mainstream cruisers, has announced that the company's newest ship, the 1,808-passenger Legend of the Seas will sail Panama Canal and Alaska cruises as well as the line's first ever Hawaiian Islands voyages in its 1995 inaugural season. It is not too soon to begin booking those dates.

The ship's maiden voyage, an 11-night transit of the Panama Canal between Miami and Los Angeles, departs May 16, 1995. (The 24-knot cruising speed of the vessel makes it one of the only cruise ships in the world that can sail such an itinerary in 11 nights.) After a summer of seven-night cruises in Alaska, the ship will offer its 10-night Hawaii itineraries beginning Sept. 24 and Oct. 4. Contact your travel agent for details.

Jai Alai Returns to Acapulco: We haven't heard much about jai alai lately — that Basque version of handball in which spectators are encouraged to bet on the outcome — however, it seems that Acapulco, where jai alai drew crowds in its early years, is bringing it back.

A new jai alai fronton (arena) will open in Golden Acapulco, across the boulevard from the Hyatt Regency.

Reputed to be the fastest game on Earth, each player wears a basket-like wicker glove and hurls a ball at a wall on a 175-foot court. I saw my first jai alai matches at the fronton in Dania, Fla., and was confused through most of them, but eventually caught on to how the game is played.

However, what attracts visitors is the betting. At this time, there is no other form of legalized gambling in Acapulco, although hoteliers continue to push for the legalization of casinos.

"Jaws" in Japan?: The company which owns the Universal Studios theme parks in California and Florida will lead a consortium of Japanese companies in building a similar park in Osaka.

Universal Studios Japan will be developed on 140 acres of waterfront and should open in 1999. It is expected to feature the same "ride-the-movie" theme employed in the U.S. parks; however, like most things Japanese, it will be physically smaller (140 acres vs. 480 in Florida).

Expectations for attendance are ambitious. It is expected to attract 8 million visitors in its first year; Universal Studios Orlando now draws 7.5 million annually. It will also include a state-of-the-art movie and television production facility.

"Share the Adventure" Fares: Those in the know will tell you that, if you have the time, one of the best ways to explore the Inside Passage of Alaska is aboard the SS Universe, operated by World Explorer Cruises.

This 550-passenger ship makes 14-day trips which visit nine ports of call and offer more than 40 optional excursions. Its lecturers on geology, history and culture are exceptional.

For the 1994 season, World Explorer is offering "Share the Adventure" fares, whereby two full-fare passengers in a cabin can bring along a third and/or fourth person free.

Okay, I admit that can be tight, but if you are willing (after all, so little time is spent in a cabin) the savings can be considerable. Usually, a third or fourth berth would cost $795 a person. Airfares and the $99 port charges are additional. For details, call (800) 854-3835.

Take the Kids Along: Perhaps you've heard of Elderhostel. Maybe your parents or grandparents have taken advantage of its travel-and-learn programs for seniors.

Now along comes Familyhostel, a similar program for parents and grandparents who want to take along their school-aged children. Programs will be offered this summer in Wales, France, Australia, Prague, Norway, the Netherlands, Switzerland and Mexico. For more information, call (800) 739-9753.

Knights' state tennis title is especially sweet

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Bob Wood has guided 25 University Liggett School tennis teams to state championships in his 29 years at the school, but few have been sweeter than the Class C-D boys crown the Knights won in Battle Creek last weekend.

"This has been a group of over-achievers all year long,"

Wood said. "We've had more talented teams than this, but this team has great heart. It's been a very rewarding season from a coaching standpoint for myself and (assistant coach) David Tidwell, who has made a significant contribution to the program."

ULS swept the three doubles flights and won two of the four singles finals to finish with 24 of a possible 28 points. Kalamazoo Christian and North Muskegon were a distant second with 12 points each and Bay City All Saints, Grandville Calvin Christian and Whittemore-Prescott tied for fourth with 11.

The state championship capped a season of highs and lows for the Knights.

The players Wood had been counting on to play the first three singles flights were forced to leave the team for one reason or another. A fourth singles player came down with an ulcer during the season and had to stop playing.

"Last September I was thinking this could be one of the one or two best teams in the state, regardless of class," Wood said. "Then we lost the kids who were supposed to be our one, two and three singles players and I didn't know what to expect."

Once the season started ULS took some lumps because of the rugged competition it faces, but the Knights did post impressive victories over some of the best Class A and B teams in the state.

"I think we play the toughest schedule in the state and that's by design," Wood said. "This year we played eight of the top 10 teams in Class A and six of the top 10 in B. That really makes a difference. Our players rarely have any two and two (6-2, 6-2) or one and one matches. Most of the time they're playing three sets and tie-breakers and when it comes time for the

North long jumper is best in the state

By Chuck Klonke

Eric Peters doesn't walk away from a challenge.

When East Lansing's Chad McMillan leaped 22-feet-6 1/4 at last weekend's state Class A track meet in Midland to take the lead in the event it was just what the Grosse Pointe North junior needed.

Especially when McMillan started celebrating like he had the gold medal wrapped up when Peters still had two chances to catch him.

And that's exactly what he did. On his next attempt, Peters regained the lead with a leap of 23-3, breaking one of North's oldest track records in the process.

"Eric told me, 'That was like a slap in the face. I needed that,'" said North coach Pat Wilson. "It's great that he won, but the best thing was the way he answered a challenge. It was a treat to watch him jump."

A year ago, Peters was sixth in the state with a 22-1/2 performance and he set his sights on improving his standing this year.

"He had three goals," Wilson said. "To break the school record (22-8 set by Jeff Mika in 1981), jump 23 feet and win a state championship. He accomplished all three of them with that one jump."

Peters came out of the preliminary round in the lead after jumping 22-2 1/2 and he matched that in his first jump of the finals. Then McMillan got off his best jump of the day but Peters, who was jumping last in the second round, deflated the competition with his winning effort.

"Eric jumped once more but we didn't even bother to measure it because we knew it wasn't as good as his other one," Wilson said. "It's tough to come right back and do it again when you've broken a record."

Older brother Hosia finished seventh with a personal-best 22-4 3/4, and he's a success story in his own right.

"Hosia broke his ankle playing football and didn't plan to come out for track this year," Wilson said. "The ankle bothered him for most of the season and he didn't even start jumping until May."

Grosse Pointe dominated the long jump as South's Ron Waters was fifth with an effort of 21-6 3/4.

"He worked out last week with Eric and Hosia," Wilson said. "Dick Green, who works with the long jumpers, was really feeling good Saturday."

Girls meet

Grosse Pointe South's girls track team posted several season-best performances in the Class A state meet.

The highlight of the day for the Lady Devils was a fourth-place finish by the 3,200-meter relay team of Amy Zanglin, Kristine Mueller, Katy Lupo and Rachel O'Byrne. Their time of 9:39.4 was the second fastest in school history behind the 9:37.4 that took first place in the regional.

South's 1,600 relay team of Mueller, Gretchen Carter, Lupo and Zanglin won its heat and finished ninth overall with a season-best time of 4:08.2. Lisa McCurdy ran South's fastest 300 hurdle time of the year with a 47.8.

Open house at North Star

The North Star Sail Club will host an open house for its sailing camp on Sunday, June 11, from 1 to 4 p.m.

Beginning sailors, both junior and adult, can review the course outline, meet the instructors and go for a demonstration sail.

The club is located at 32041 South River Road in Harrison Township, approximately a mile east of Jefferson.

Troy puts on a show

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe South coach Tom Caranicolas is going to have his VCR going if Troy plays in the state Class A soccer finals this weekend.

"I want to be able to show our kids how they set up their defense," said Caranicolas, whose Lady Devils were knocked out of the state tournament in a 5-0 loss to the top-ranked Colts last week at Troy Athens. "It's something you can't really explain without showing it on film."

"They move in fours all over the field. It's something that's usually done only in college and the pros by women's teams or by the top high school boys teams."

Caranicolas doesn't think anybody is going to stop Troy's drive to the state title. Last weekend they beat third-ranked Birmingham Seaholm 4-0 for the regional championship.

"I think the only thing that could stop them is if half their team came down with the flu," Caranicolas said. "They have talent, speed and they handle the ball so well."

South fell into a hole early when Troy scored twice in the first six minutes after starting goalie Sarah Attie had to leave the game when she was shaken up after making a key save.

Jessica Limauro opened the scoring with a high shot from inside the 18-yard line at 3:53 of the first half and Jenny Long scored on a penalty shot at 5:40. Limauro was pulled down in the penalty area and had to leave the game with a leg injury.

"We had hoped to keep the game scoreless and frustrate them, but when they scored the two quick goals it put us at a disadvantage," Caranicolas said.

South got a boost late in the first half when Attie, who returned after Long's goal, made two spectacular saves on point-blank shots by the Colts. That kept the score 2-0 at halftime.

The Lady Devils, who didn't have a shot at freshman goalkeeper Katherine Kobylak in the first half, mounted a stiffer attack in the second half.

"I thought we played them even for the first 25 minutes of the second half and if we'd have scored the next goal, who knows what might have happened," Caranicolas said.

Liz Rolands scored Troy's final two goals in the last 13 minutes, one on a rebound that South's defense failed to clear and another off a crossing pass.

"We got tired at the end and they were able to cross the ball," Caranicolas said. "Sarah didn't have a chance on those goals."

Caranicolas was encouraged by the performance of some of his younger players.

"We had a lot of freshmen and sophomores on the field during the last 25 minutes and they did a good job against a team like Troy," he said.

South loses four starters to graduation, including standout defender Kate Grenzke, but the Lady Devils have a solid nucleus returning.

"Maybe we'll get another shot at Troy next year," Caranicolas said. "Our young players are coming in with a better knowledge of the game. Instead of having to teach the basics of trapping and dribbling, now we can teach situations."

South, which finished second in the Macomb Area Conference White Division with a 10-2 record, wound up with a 14-6-2 overall mark.

"All of our losses were to ranked teams," Caranicolas said.

Next year the league schedule figures to be tougher for both South and Grosse Pointe North, who will each move into the MAC's Red Division.

"Instead of it being a two-team league, it'll be a five-team league," Caranicolas said.

"Playing the tougher competition will make us a better team."

PGSA to hold trials

The Pointe Girls Soccer Association will hold tryouts for next season's travel teams in four age groups.

The PGSA, the only all girls soccer association in Michigan, sponsors teams in the Michigan Youth Soccer League and the Little Caesars Premier Soccer League.

Squads will be selected in the under-10, under-12, under-14 and high school age brackets. The travel program provides an opportunity for girls with above average skills who want a more competitive setting.

Following are the tryout dates: Under 10, Monday, June 20 at Barnes Field. Under 12, Thursday, June 16 at University Liggett School. Under 14, Wednesday, June 15 at Barnes. High school, Thursday, June 16 at Barnes. The tryout times for all age groups is 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Contact any of the following PGSA coaches for further information: Stu Dow (884-4979), Barney Byron (884-2210), George Saady (884-5720), Rick Grenzke (884-9453), Ed Egnatios (881-5536), J.J. Imesch (884-3453), Mike Shapiro (882-9773) or Bruce Muncy (882-7314).

North, South in top 10

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe South tennis coach Tom Berschback was as happy as he could be, short of winning a state Class A championship.

Grosse Pointe North coach Ken Gutow didn't quite share Berschback's exuberance, but he had no complaints over the way his Norsemen performed in last week's Class A finals in Midland.

Both teams had top 10 finishes in the state meet. South was eighth with 10 points and North and Rochester Adams tied for ninth with eight points.

"Our goal was a top 10 finish, but for a while I thought it was a very elusive goal," Berschback said. "I wondered if we could do it because this team isn't as talented as some we've had in the past, but they're a gutsy bunch. They all felt they could win that one match that would get us a top 10 finish."

"I don't believe it and the kids are happy as larks. During the season we lost 7-1 to North and 6-2 to Adams but we beat them both in the state meet."

Berschback's teams have never finished out of the top 10 since he took over as coach in

Discounts for Pointers

Residents of the Grosse Pointes, along with all other cities beginning with the letter G, will receive discounts on Tigers' tickets for Friday, June 17, as part of the team's new City Nights promotion.

Folks who live in the Grosse Pointes will receive discounts on tickets — $12 reserved seats for $10 or $8 grandstand tickets for $5.

regional and state meet, it's nothing new for them because they're so well prepared. At the state meet we had a couple of kids come back from being down 2-5 and 0-4 to win three-set matches.

"We like to refer to University Liggett School as 'the advanced placement' of high school tennis."

By the time the state meet rolled around, the Knights were ready to play their best tennis.

"Our performance Friday (in the first day of the state tournament) was a coach's dream," Wood said. "All seven cylinders exploded at once. Every flight played his best tennis of the season. It doesn't happen every year that you get the best efforts from everyone at the state meet."

"When all of our singles players and each doubles team made it to the semifinals I knew we were in good shape and would probably have to win only a couple more matches to win the team championship."

ULS' Peter Brown and Steve Verb beat Bill Franks and Leigh Kakaty of North Muskegon 6-0, 6-2 in the final at No. 1 doubles. Jeff Mertz and Sameer Patel posted a 6-2, 6-4 victory over Randy Campbell and Nathan Wilson of Almont at second doubles. Eric Kim and Jeff Kenzie capped the Knights' sweep of doubles with a 7-5, 6-3 win over Tom Farmer and Eric Langdon of North Muskegon in No. 3.

Singles champions from ULS were Omar Sawaf, who beat Scott Poustine of Calvin Christian 6-3, 6-4 in the No. 3 final, and Jason Wikency, a 6-4, 3-6, 6-4 winner over Jason Boersma of Kalamazoo Christian in No. 4.

Two freshmen playing first and second singles — Shaun Jayakar and Peter Birgbauer — made it to the semifinals before losing their first matches.

Wood said he sensed a turnaround in his team early in May.

"We struggled in April, but we have a team made up mostly of seniors and freshmen and the three-year gap in age can be difficult in bringing a team together," he said. "It took some time, but because of the outstanding senior leader-

Gutow's only complaint was that some of his players he felt should have been seeded weren't.

"We got a few bad breaks that could have made a big swing, but all my kids played well," he said. "We were hoping for a third or fourth place finish and 16 or 17 points, but it wasn't because our kids didn't know what they were there for."

"Our second doubles team (Sean Brady and Jeff Barlow) should have been seeded and if that had happened they wouldn't have had to play Ann Arbor Pioneer until the semifinals. That could have taken us up to fourth or fifth in the standings."

Brady and Barlow played well against a Pioneer twosome that had only lost once in 28 matches before the state meet. The North pair had a match point in the third set before losing 3-6, 6-3, 7-5.

The Norsemen's Craig Rogowski wasn't seeded at No. 2 singles, but he proved he should have been when he advanced to the semifinals before losing to the eventual flight champion, Steve Schubert of East Lansing.

"That's the first time since 1978 that anyone from North has made it to the semifinals," Gutow said.

Mike McHugh advanced to the quarterfinals at No. 3 singles before losing a hard-fought match to East Lansing's Matt Hagen. North also got points from Mark Levine in first singles and from the first doubles team of Ajit Sarnaik and Jon Van Assche.

Although South had only one seeded player, the Blue Devils reached the quarterfinals in four flights.

Berschback said he couldn't help but admire the effort of Jeff Wheeler, who plays No. 1 singles for South.

"He was on the court for seven hours to reach the quarterfinals," Berschback said. "He had four 7-6 sets. I don't think many people understand the amount of talent there is in that flight. It's a dogfight. I don't think there was anybody in the class of (former South champions) Jeff Giraldo or Lee Lorenzini, but there were 20 very good players killing each other."

South's other quarterfinalists were Andy Loredo in second singles, Todd Scallen at No. 4 singles and the first doubles team of Andy Giraldo and Rob Hostetter.

"Loredo was injured three weeks ago and for him to come back and reach the quarterfinals was a very gutsy performance," Berschback said. "And Scallen came through when he had to."

South also got a first-round victory from the No. 3 doubles team of Matt Galnor and Ryan Parshall.

Berschback is proud of the consistency his squads have shown.

"You have to win at several flights to break into the top 10," he said.

Gutow, who planned to retire after last season, had no regrets about returning for at least another year.

"We accomplished 99 percent of our goals," he said. "We won the league dual meet championship, we won the MAC tournament and we won the first regional championship in at least 10 years. The only thing we didn't do was get more than two flights seeded at state."

"South played well at the state meet and they had only one seeded player. You have to give them credit."

Weak district hurts Knights

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

University Liggett School's girls soccer team paid for taking the easy way out of its Class B-C-D district tournament.

"Our schedule was on the weak side after we played Lutheran North for the second time," said Lady Knights' coach David Backhurst after Trenton ousted ULS 3-2 in a regional semifinal in Dearborn Heights.

"We mercied Bishop Gallagher 10-0 in our first district game and then Lutheran East had only seven players and didn't even show up for the district championship. We wasted a week — the week of districts and up to Wednesday of regional week — by not getting any competition."

ULS' ouster became even more disappointing when Lutheran North, which lost twice to the Lady Knights during the Metro Conference season, beat Trenton 3-2 to advance to the state semifinals against Bishop Foley.

"They beat Lakeview 4-1 in the district final, which had to help them a lot more than not playing helped us. All that did was help us avoid injuries," Backhurst said.

ULS outplayed Trenton most of the first half, but had only a 1-1 tie to show for its efforts.

The Trojans opened the scoring 10 minutes into the game when a corner kick deflected off a Lady Knights' defender and eluded goalkeeper Melissa Buhalis. ULS scored the equalizer midway through the first half. Abby Tompkins sent a pass to Shera Teitge, who broke through the defense and rolled the ball into the corner of the net.

Trenton dominated the second half, but Teitge gave ULS a 2-1 lead early in the half when she fired a shot from a bad angle that eluded the Trojans' netminder.

"That might have broken some teams, but to Trenton's credit, they got tougher," Backhurst said. "That's a Class B school with 900-plus students so they have the depth we didn't have. Our defense, especially, got worn down and didn't get enough help from the offense."

The Trojans' tying goal was a floater from beyond the 18-yard line and the second was a hard shot through Buhalis' hands.

ULS put on a push for the last 15 minutes, but couldn't score the equalizer. Once Tompkins made a pass to the right wing, but her teammate couldn't quite get to the ball. Trenton's goalie and defense stopped some other attempts and a pair of free kicks by ULS sailed over the crossbar.

The Lady Knights finished with a 14-11 edge in shots.

"We had some chances but we weren't quite on target," Backhurst said.

Although the season ended on a sour note, ULS finished with a 14-1-1 record.

"We had our awards ceremony after the game and it was hard to come back for that, but we had a lot of positive things happen during the year and we chose to dwell on them," Backhurst said. "It was supposed to be a rebuilding year, but it turned into an outstanding season."

St. Clare holds sports camps

Registration is now being taken for the annual summer sports camps at St. Clare of Montefalco school.

Girls volleyball, grades three through six, will be held July 11-15; track and field, grades three through eight, will be held July 11-15; boys basketball, grades three through six and seven through nine, will be held July 18-29; and girls basketball, grades three through six, seven and eight and nine through 12, will be held July 18-29.

Fees range from $25 to $40. For more information, call 885-8654 or 882-4226.

ship from Brown, Patel, Mertz and Sawaf, the team gained confidence and was positive and supportive of each other.

"I've always believed that the success or failure of a team is directly related to the leadership it gets from its seniors."

That's what also made the state title especially gratifying.

It ended a three-year drought for the Knights — the longest without a state title since 1969-71.

"It was the first state championship for our juniors and seniors," Wood said. "I'd have hated to see them complete their high school careers without experiencing that."

The Cardinals provided some of the best hitting of the season. Maggie Kingsley and Sarah Slone homered for the Bargainers and shortstop Betsy Schmitt made a key defensive play.

Cadillac Overall Supply 12, Creative Print 4

Cadillac's offense was keyed by Stefani Smith, Maria Tocco, Scarlett O'Keefe, Christine Ritok, Carter Debski and Becky Johnson. Regan Keating, Lizzie Siefer and Annie Reinholz made good defensive plays, while Kerrie Walker, Rhea Young, Maggie Moore, Emily Knaus and Tia Rutledge have been solid players throughout the season. Creative Print's top hitters were Maya Zayat, Andrea Szabo, Katherine Albert, Meaghan Reardon, Tracy Rinaldi, Christine Anderson, Stacey Atkinson, Lauren Mattina, Allison Secord and Gina Bordato. Erika Schmidt had an excellent game at first base, while Atkinson and Jenny Edmonds pitched well.

Shortstop Zebot and first baseman Nyenhuus turned a double play in the first inning, while Jennifer Jung threw out a runner from right field. Sandy Turnbull played well at first and Samantha Wilberding and Colleen Dely provided strong pitching in the Free Willies' excellent team effort. The Belles, who came into the game with two wins and two ties, have had good leadership from their seventh graders and spark and enthusiasm from sixth grade rookies Andrea Davison, Noel Egnatios, Katie O'Neill, Lauren Marderosian and Monica Regan.

South slugs its way past PSL foes

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Two Detroit Public School League baseball teams ran into a buzzsaw in the form of Grosse Pointe South in the Class A district hosted by the Blue Devils last weekend.

"Saturday was just our day," said South coach Dan Griesbaum, who takes his squad into the regional at Madonna University in Livonia against a familiar foe.

The Blue Devils crushed Detroit King 23-1 in the district opener, then rolled to a 10-0 victory over PSL champion Southwestern as South's Jay Harrington pitched a no-hitter. He also provided all the runs he needed with a two-run homer.

South will face Warren-Mott in the regional semifinal at 1 p.m. Saturday. The Blue Devils own a pair of victories over their Macomb Area Conference White Division rivals.

"We beat them 14-3 and 6-3 but we didn't see their best pitcher, Reagan Rice, in either game," Griesbaum said.

U-D Jesuit will play Detroit Mackenzie in the other regional semifinal at Madonna. South posted a non-league victory over the Cubs in an early-season game.

"We have a shot at winning the regional if we keep playing like we have been," Griesbaum said of his team, which takes a 20-14 overall record into Saturday's tournament.

South, which finished tied for third in the division with Mott, is one of four MAC White teams to win district titles. Fraser, which tied Anchor Bay for the division crown, and Romeo are the others.

Harrington struck out 12 and walked eight in beating Southwestern, which upset South 5-4 in the district last season.

"Southeastern is a good team and a class act under (coach) Henry Washington, but they're not used to facing pitching like we have," Griesbaum said.

South scored four runs in the third inning with the key blows an RBI triple by Brian Nugent and run-scoring singles by Chris Fox and Todd Malbouef.

The Blue Devils added three more in the fourth when Harrington homered and closed out the scoring with a three-run burst in the sixth, featuring a leadoff homer by Bill Starrs and an RBI single by Sean Recht.

Harrington, Nugent and Fox each had two hits for South.

Ryan Messacar led the offensive attack against King with a 4-for-4 performance that included two doubles and four RBI. Nugent had three hits — two of them triples — and four RBI, while Malbouef and Fox each had three hits, including a double, and drove in three runs apiece. Corey Geer had two hits and knocked in three runs and Mike Formolo had a double among his three hits and drove in two runs.

Karl Davids started in place of the ailing Eugene Agnone and went three innings, allowing two hits and a run while striking out seven. Paul Coyro blanked King without a hit over the last two frames, posting two strikeouts.

Earlier, South split a pair of non-league contests with Harper Woods and Brother Rice.

Agnone and Geer each had two hits and knocked in a run apiece in a 3-0 victory over Rice as the Blue Devils scored all of their runs in the bottom of the sixth inning.

Davids, who pitched the last 1 1/3 innings in relief of Malbouef, picked up the win. He came in with the bases loaded and two out in the sixth and got the final out on a groundball. Malbouef allowed only two hits in his 5 2/3 innings.

Coyro pitched a brilliant three-hitter but absorbed the 2-1 loss to Harper Woods.

Mike Hendrie drove in South's only run with a sixth-inning double.

North playing well at tournament time

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe North's baseball team is hitting on all cylinders at just the right time.

"We're playing a lot better now," said coach Frank Sumbera after the Norsemen won the Class A district championship at North with a 7-0 victory over East Detroit.

"We're getting good defense and good pitching to go with the hitting. Everything is falling into place."

North had excellent pitching performances in each of its district games. Joe Maceri threw a one-hitter and struck out 16 in the 10-1 romp over Detroit Osborn in the district semifinal and Derek Ottevaere had a one-hit, 13-strikeout performance against East Detroit.

The district title sends North into the Class A regional Saturday at Troy Athens. The Norsemen will meet Fraser in a semifinal game at 12:30 p.m. Chippewa Valley plays Romeo at 10 a.m. in the other semifinal. The championship game is scheduled for 3:30 p.m.

"We've beaten Fraser three times, but two of them were one-run games," Sumbera said. "They'll be tough. They won the (Macomb Area Conference) White and they're playing well now."

The only hit off Maceri in the first game was a home run that just cleared the fence with one out in the sixth. He struck out the side in the first, second and seventh innings.

North took a 2-0 lead in the first on an RBI single by Steve Guest and David Guaresimo's sacrifice fly. Maceri capped a four-run fourth with a two-run single. The inning also featured run-scoring hits by Guest and Sean Ziegenhagen. Donny Tocco completed the Norsemen's scoring with a grand slam in the sixth.

A second-inning single was the only hit allowed by Ottevaere against East Detroit.

"Derek walked five, which is a few too many, but sometimes he likes to throw too many curves," Sumbera said. "I told him not to throw any in the seventh and he struck out the side on 12 or 13 pitches."

Maceri opened North's scoring with a three-run homer in the second inning.

The Norsemen added four runs in the fifth on RBI singles by Guest, Guaresimo and Chris Copus and a sacrifice fly by Nate Treska.

Maceri, Nick Chapie, Ottevaere and Copus each had two hits for the Norsemen.

The two wins improved North's record to 25-8. The Norsemen finished the regular season ranked eighth in Class A in the state coaches' poll.

Cummings qualifies for nationals

Marla Cummings of Grosse Pointe Farms has qualified for the United States Association of Independent Gymnastics Clubs national meet, which is being held this week in Greensboro, N.C.

Cummings, a sophomore at Grosse Pointe South with a grade-point average of 3.9, scored 33.8 in all-around. She had a 9.10 on vault, 8.55 on bars and 8.65 in floor exercise.

Cummings is competing with the Blake Acronauts of Bloomfield Hills and is one of five members of the team to qualify for the nationals. She competes in Open Optionals, the highest level in USAIG.

Two other Grosse Pointers, who are members of the Blake Acronauts, did well in the Silver Junior Division (ages 12-14) at the Level 5 state meet in Saginaw.

Robbie Langlois of Grosse Pointe Woods was first in all-around with a score of 35.20. Langlois also had the top score in vault (8.75), beam (9.0) and floor exercise (8.35) and was fourth on bars.

Allison Janos of Grosse Pointe Woods finished eighth in all-around, bars, beam and floor exercise and 10th in vault.

South's Ryan just like Nolan

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe South's Maureen Ryan must have looked like Nolan Ryan to a pair of Detroit Public School softball teams last weekend.

The Lady Devils' pitcher fired her third no-hitter of the season in the Class A district semifinal as the host South squad beat King 16-1.

Ryan was just as sharp in the championship game, pitching a one-hitter in a 15-1 romp over Southwestern. She struck out 10 in the title game after posting four strikeouts in the opener.

"They just aren't used to seeing pitching like that and Maureen did what she had to do," said South coach Peggy Van Eckoute.

Ryan pitched a no-hitter against East Detroit early in the season and had one against Lutheran East in a district tune-up.

The second district title in two seasons moves South into the Class A regional at Madonna University. The Lady Devils will play Macomb Area Conference White Division rival Warren-Mott in their semifinal game at 10 a.m. Saturday.

"On paper we have a strong chance of winning the regional," Van Eckoute said, "but you still have to play the games. We beat Mott 13-0 and 11-1 during the regular season and in both of those games we played very well. Maureen was outstanding, we hit well and we didn't make any mistakes. If we play like that on Saturday, we'll be in good shape."

South had an 11-run inning in each of its district games.

The Lady Devils erupted in the first inning of the King contest. Laura Stuckey led the attack with a 3-for-4 performance that included four RBI and three stolen bases.

Meredith Wolfe was 2-for-2 with a pair of stolen bases and an RBI, Ann Halpin hit a run-scoring triple and Katy Leins scored two runs and knocked in a pair.

South waited until the fourth inning of the title game to explode for 11 runs.

Erin Gleason had one of her best games of the season with three hits, including a homer run, and four RBI. Kristen Apple had a triple among her three hits, Jenna Nutter was 3-for-3 with two RBI and Halpin hit a home run.

PLEASE DON'T DELAY! SPAY or NEUTER YOUR PET TODAY!

An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy.

DAVE and STAN

Lifelong partners since kindergarten, Stan & Dave would like a chance to become lifelong partners with you! Dave Levy and Stan Schwartz, the owners of Classic Window & Siding, have been friends and partners in business ever since they were little kids. Though, as youngsters, back in the days of Kool-Aid stands, they probably never suspected that they would grow up to be the men behind the East area's most respected name in windows and siding. On the other hand, if their Kool-Aid was any indication of what was to come, on a hot summer day, they knew even then what it meant to be in demand.

Home Tips

EARRING HOLDER - I have dozens of pairs of long, dangling earrings for pierced ears.

They were always getting tangled in my jewelry box, so I bought a piece of canvas and attached it to the wall behind my bathroom door with a few push pins. I pushed the earring posts through and snapped the backs on. Janie K., Loveland, Colo.

WALL CALENDARS - Instead of searching for and often paying more for wall calendars with large numbers in the squares (that some seniors and nearsighted people need), buy the regular size.

I use a felt-tipped black pen and write larger numbers in the squares. They can be seen from across the room. Ginger L., Tyler, Texas.

JUST THE FAX - Fax machines make life in the office so much easier but I've always had one annoying problem with these electronic marvels. I write the recipient's fax number on the cover sheet which has to be inserted upside-down into the machine before dialing; then I find I've forgotten the number.

A co-worker suggested writing the number on the back of the first page as well. It's so easy to read while dialing. Ken P., Washington, D.C.

CO-PILOT - Here's a great tip for someone who is driving a car alone and needs another person to read the directions in unfamiliar territory.

Before your trip, read the direction into a tape recorder and play back the tape in your car as you are traveling, stopping the tape after each segment.

With my tape recorder/player, when you start the tape again, it backtracks just a bit, which is very helpful. Ida M., Suffern, N.Y.

Cool steps to turning on your central air for first time

By Gary Marowske Flame Furnace Co.

Summer is just around the corner and it is time to start thinking about your central air conditioner and getting it ready for those hot, muggy summer days.

There are several preventive maintenance steps that can be performed to save you the inconvenience, and cost, of breakdowns:

- Have your central air conditioning system inspected by a qualified service technician or contractor. My company, Flame Furnace, is currently running a special for $59.95, which covers a thorough checking and cleaning.

- Remember to clean your air filters once a month.
- When changing a filter, be sure to install a replacement that is the same size as the original. Also, make sure that it is facing in the right direction. Most filters have the air flow direction marked on them.
- Make sure that the outdoor unit is free of debris. Trim or remove shrubs or obstructions within one foot of the unit.
- Be careful when mowing the lawn near the outside unit and make sure that grass clippings and leaves are not blown toward the unit.
- Never try to add refrigerant to an air conditioner yourself. Call a trained service technician who has the knowledge and equipment to do this job properly. New federal regulations require that the unit be serviced in such a way that no refrigerant escapes into the air. Verify that whoever does service your unit is certified in refrigerant recovery.

- Do not run a central air conditioner when the outside temperature is below 68 degrees. Operating a residential air conditioner in cool temperatures may cause premature compressor failure.

Also remember to use only a contractor that is:

- Licensed by your community.
- Carries workman's compensation and liability insurance.
- Certified in refrigerant recovering/recycling and handling.

By following these steps, you should be in great shape for the summer months ahead.

If you have any questions or comments, call me anytime at 527-1700. Next time, I will discuss what to look for when purchasing a new air conditioner.

Grand Hotel experts offer tips on caring for geraniums

It's easy to tell that geraniums are the trademark flower at Mackinac Island's Grand Hotel—the theme is carried throughout the premises, from the striking geranium carpet in the hotel's parlor to the specially commissioned handmade needlepoint chair seats picturing geraniums in the Geranium Bar.

The hotel annually plants more than 5,200 geraniums in all its flower beds combined and 2,500 geraniums in the flower boxes on its famous front porch. Stephen Bernard, Grand Hotel's superintendent of grounds, offers the following advice and tips on caring for and rooting geraniums.

Geraniums are considered tender perennials and can be kept alive and beautiful by bringing them inside during cold weather months. Most often, though, they are used as an annual for one season. Sizes of plants are dependent on the varieties grown and range from the large "Yours Truly" variety (featured on Grand Hotel's front porch) which grow to about 20 inches tall with equal width to the compact "Kim" geranium which reaches only 7 or 8 inches tall and wide.

While geraniums have traditionally been grown and thrived in containers or window boxes, they can also be grown in the ground, bedded out. Here are some simple tips to keep geraniums blooming from spring until frost:

- Choose a sunny location: geraniums prefer a half day to a full day of sun (full is best).
- Plant in an area with good air movement to discourage disease.
- If possible, select a location with warm to hot day temperatures and cool night temperatures (this temperature range is why geraniums thrive on Grand Hotel's front porch).
- Provide geraniums with soil that has good drainage (geraniums do not like wet feet!).
- At the time of planting give geraniums a half-handful of good flower fertilizer, like 5-10-5 (available at a local nursery).

- Once a month, give geraniums a shot of liquid fertilizer—a balanced type like 20-20-20.
- Pick and remove faded flower stalks and yellow leaves.

Best mosquito control is eliminating standing water

Q. What is advised for mosquito control?

A. For the most satisfactory and long-lasting control, eliminate or modify existing water accumulations and manage areas of tall vegetation. Control operations may be directed against the larval or adult stage of the insect or sometimes both. One method of temporary control for the adult is the application of a liquid insecticide containing malathion or pyrethrum to vegetation and other resting sites.

When standing water or floodwater mosquitoes are the major problem, larval control, if it is to be effective, must extend from your home for a distance that extends the flight range (that can be up to a mile!) Also, their breeding sites frequently include areas in which insecticide applications will adversely affect aquatic life other than mosquitoes. For these reasons, extensive larval control is not recommended unless the operation is directed by a qualified entomologist or biologist and is a part of an organized mosquito program.

Individual efforts to control either the early season or floodwater mosquitoes usually are more effective if directed against the adults.

Q. There are caterpillars in my trees that make a large web-like nest. Are they the gypsy moth? What can I do to control them?

A. The caterpillars that make the white tents in tree crotches are eastern tent caterpillars, the larval stage of a small brown moth. They belong to the same order of insects as the gypsy moth, called lepidoptera, but they are quite different. For one thing the gypsy moth does not create a tent, but feeds throughout the canopy of the tree. The tent caterpillar tends to defoliate the branch that its colony is located on and surrounding branches as well. This limited early spring feeding does very little if any permanent damage to the tree and therefore it is not usually responsible for tree loss. If the defoliation is allowed to continue for many years, the tree may be weakened and predisposed to other problems.

Both moths overwinter in the egg stage but the eggmass of the gypsy moth is tan in color and feels like felt and is about the size of a silver dollar. The eggmass of the tent caterpillar looks a lot like black hardened foam that wraps around the twig where you usually find the tent. In both cases you can reduce the number of caterpillars that hatch in the spring by removing and destroying the eggmass.

To control eastern tent caterpillars in valuable fruit or ornamental trees, destroy eggmasses during the winter, remove the tents and young larvae in early spring and burn or bury them. You can spray with a commercial preparation of the bacterium bacillus thuringiensis, which is a disease of the soft-bodied caterpillar and considered harmless to people, other animals and insects, birds and plants. Be sure the spray is on the leaves, because the caterpillar must eat it to be effective.

When gobbling turkey, don't ask for skin

Q. Is there a difference between ground turkey and ground turkey meat?

A. Yes. Ground turkey meat is just that - ground muscle meat with no skin included. It will be lower in total fat than ground turkey, which includes the accompanying skin. For example: 3 1/2 ounces of cooked ground turkey has about 13 grams of fat compared to about 5 grams from the same amount of cooked ground turkey meat.

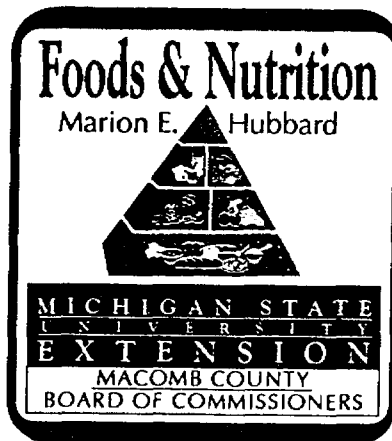

Q. I have a hard time getting my child to eat breakfast. Can she make up for the nutrients during the day?

A. According to findings from the Bogalusa heart study, (Journal of the American Dietetic Association), children who miss breakfast never make up for lost calories and nutrients. In a study done during 1984-88, these children ate between 200 and 500 fewer calories than the breakfast-eaters. Breakfast-skippers also fell short of the recommended daily allowance for vitamins A,E,D,B-6 and calcium

Q. Does childhood obesity predict obesity later in life?

A. Chubby young girls are not destined to become obese middle-age women, nor are skinny young girls assured of staying slim. A study of 50 years of height and weight data shows that childhood obesity in females does not produce obesity at age 40 or 50. These studies show that female bodies go through a lot of changes between puberty and middle age. However, there was a correlation between childhood obesity in males and obesity at age 40 or 50.

ON THE COVER

315 WASHINGTON ROAD

One of the great houses in America, its facade is English Renaissance influenced, with steep medieval roofs and gables.

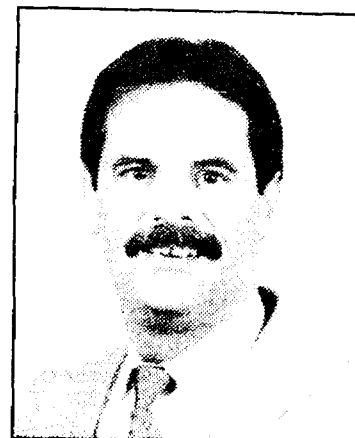

Designed to be a private home and also the repository of a great art collection. The main entrance hall and grand staircase are constructed of black Italian marble. The stone porticos in the living room came from an Italian palace in Madia. The 16th century fireplace in the Great Room thought to be from the studio of Donatello. The paneling and fireplace in the library was removed from the Standish Hall in Lancashire, England. It dates back to the 17th century. The Hall was the residence of Miles Standish's parents.

A home, a museum, a masterpiece. Beautifully maintained and magnificently restored this property is truly one of a kind.

Even before the Bard, a rose was a rose

Now it is June; summer is really here; and it won't be long before we will be surrounded by roses.

There are so many beautiful rose gardens in Grosse Pointe, and the Rose Society comes into its own in June and July. The rose garden at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House, with its several thousand roses, will be well worth a visit, and the rose trees at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial will soon be in full bloom.

Roses are some of the oldest flowers in cultivation. It is thought that they actually predate man, according to recent geological studies in Oregon and Colorado. Fossilized roses have been found that are believed to be from 35 million to 70 million years old.

In earliest recorded history there is frequent mention of the rose in literature, music, poetry, cooking and medicine.

The rose was called the queen of

Is home ownership for you?

If you have thought about owning a home but aren't sure you can afford it and are confused by all the financing options, this workshop is for you.

"Home Ownership" — a two part series — will be held on Thursdays, June 16 and 23. Classes will be at the VerKuilen Building, 21885 Dunham Road, Clinton Township, from 7 to 10 p.m.

The workshop, co-sponsored by Macomb County MSU Extension and flowers by the poet Sappho, and roses were grown in the ancient royal gardens of Persia and China, and in the Hanging Gardens of ancient Babylon. The Egyptians cultivated roses extensively and the perfume oils extracted from them were used abundantly. Roses were placed in the golden coffins of pharaohs, and Cleopatra welcomed Anthony with a 24-inch-deep carpet of rose petals on the palace floor.

Galen, a famed Greek physician who is often called the father of modern medicine and who lived in the first century A.D., developed a face cream using oil of roses, rose water, rose vinegar and white wax. The concoction is still used today as the basic formula for cold cream.

Roses were in such demand by the Romans that they developed vast nurseries and, later, greenhouses heated by hot-water-filled clay pipes to keep the Michigan State Housing Development Authority, deals with all aspects of purchasing and owning a home. The mysteries of the purchase process — from qualification to closing — will be explained.

The workshop is free but registration is a must. To register, call Macomb County MSU Extension at 469-6430. For more information, call Norrine Neville at 469-6430.

The early Christians cultivated roses in monastery gardens, and the rosary gets its name from the fact that the first ones were made of roses or beads made of rose hips.

Crusaders returning to Europe brought seeds of new species of roses and the famous rose windows in beautiful stained glass in medieval cathedrals are patterned after them.

Roses were an important ingredient in medicine, cooking and perfume. Many early coins depict roses and in England the Wars of the Roses led to the choosing of the rose as the floral emblem of the country.

In ancient times a rose was hung from the ceiling of a council chamber as an indication that everyone present was sworn to secrecy "under the rose" (sub-rosa) since the rose was the symbol of silence, secrecy and privacy. The rosette sometimes used to decorate the center of the ceiling of our rooms today is a survivor of this ancient symbol of secrecy and privacy.

Josephine, empress of France, appointed Andre DuPont as rose supervisor at the palace of Malmaison and he was the first to hybridize roses. Before that all crossing had been by natural means. And when Napoleon had Josephine's sitting room at Malmaison redecorated, he decreed that the pale pink plaster for the walls be mixed with attar of roses and to this day that room smells of roses.

Rosewater, made by boiling rose petals, has been used as a food flavoring in most of the middle-eastern countries for centuries, and is also still popular sprinkled on carpets and draperies to scent a room.

Roses are the principal ingredient in most potpourris and rose perfumes are the most popular ones in the world. Books on flower cookery devote whole chapters to recipes involving rose petals and rose hips, the seed pods of roses, which make wonderful jam and have more vitamin C than oranges.

The rose is a symbol of happiness and optimism. We all know the saying about looking at the world through rose-colored glasses. Roses are used in decoration more than any other flower and fabrics, wallpapers, embroideries, china and silver patterns are replete with them. The rose in literature and poetry is universal and roses are mentioned countless times in the Bible.
