

Futuring report presented to community: 'We're coasting'

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

The five Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods hope to have 20/20 vision when looking toward the future. For the past two years, more than 150 citizens from the six communities have joined together to draw a blueprint of what the area will be like in the year 2020.

About 100 citizens and futuring committee members gathered Sunday at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial to listen to what might be in store for the future.

"It's important to take time out, step back and take a look at where we are," said internationally known futurist Ed Barlow, who has assisted futuring projects in Troy, Portage, Meridian Township and Farmington Hills. "You cannot assume that something that works well today will work well tomorrow."

The futuring study comprised seven task forces: Financial and Economic Vitality, Public Facilities and Services, Public Safety, Leisure and Culture, Beautification and Preservation, Human Services and Community, each of which gave a report and made recommendations based on its findings.

"We're coasting on prior generations' momentum," said John Rickel, chairman of the Financial and Economic Vitality task force. "While Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods still maintain a strong group of core decision makers who could locate businesses locally, we could join the competition (with communities like Novi and Bloomfield Hills) and let our advantage of the lake, excellent schools, parks and public safety tip the balance in favor of Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods."

His task force recommended an office and/or research park be located near I-94 to establish a viable economic environment to support accessible, high-value jobs.

"We have lost the battle to other suburbs for competing jobs," he said.

Woods girl to co-host parade

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Lauren Parrott's gift of gab and ease in front of the camera won her a spot alongside Chuck Gaidica as co-host of the annual Thanksgiving Day parade and festivities.

A fifth-grader at Monteith Elementary School in Grosse Pointe Woods, Lauren was selected from a group of 200 children who auditioned in October. She and Carollette Goodman, a seventh-grader at St. Mary Catholic School in Detroit, were selected as the finalists.

"She was number 127 and there was three hours left to go," said Lauren's mother, Lisa, of the six-hour audition on Oct. 22 when the Parrotts went to the WDIV-TV studios in downtown Detroit. "I think there were about 200 children auditioning. They selected nine semi-finalists and then she had to go through the whole process again."

Finalists, sometimes known as "Chuck's kids," co-host the parade preview program on Nov. 23, which is commonly known as the "Hob Nobble Gobble," and commentate on the parade from 9 a.m. to noon Nov. 24.

"We like to give the parade viewer the perspective of a young person," said Jeff Fish, producer of special projects at WDIV. "We, as adults, have forgotten the child's perspective."

Both co-hosts will be shuttled to the events in a limousine and will participate in the indoor carnival at Cobo Center, where the "Hob Nobble Gobble" is held, Fish said.

In its fifth year, the program searches every fall for outgoing, poised and expressive children to co-host the parade, Fish said.

"She loves the idea of broadcasting; she admires Diane Sawyer and Carmen Harlan," Lisa said.

Lauren is no stranger to broadcast studios and entertaining in front of audiences, her mother said. She has been studying jazz, ballet and tap dancing for seven years and is one of the hosts of Grosse Pointe Cable's "Young Viewpointes," which airs weekly on Cable Channel 32.

"Lauren has practiced for the parade with a couple of people," Lisa said. "We sort of ad lib questions to her. I think by doing the local show it has helped her already to prepare for the parade. The important thing is being able to ad lib."

No surprises in Pointe vote tallies

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

Keeping in step with the rest of the nation, Grosse Pointe voters in large numbers turned out at the polls, mainly in support of the Republican candidates. In every partisan contest, Republican candidates, led by Gov. John Engler — who accumulated more votes in the Pointes than any other candidate — defeated the Democrats, often by more than 4-to-1 margins. The closest a Democrat came to winning one of the Pointes was in the Park, where state attorney general Frank Kelley,

School board OKs ballot language for millage election

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

After much debate the Grosse Pointe school board on Monday approved ballot language for the Feb. 7 millage renewal election.

Board members — with the exception of trustee Sears Taylor — supported superintendent Ed Shine's recommendation that the district seek a renewal of 18 mills on non-homestead property and 8.5 mills on homestead property.

The school district's voter-approved millage expires in December.

Voters will be asked to approve two proposals:

- Renewal of 18 mills levied on non-homestead properties — businesses, rentals and second homes — for five years. In order for the school district to qualify for the state allocation of $6,500 per-pupil, it must have a voter-approved levy of 18 mills on non-homestead properties. The state automatically levies 6 mills against homestead properties.

- Since Grosse Pointe spent approximately $8,000 per pupil in the 1993-94 school year, the state foundation grant of $6,500 will fall short of current spending levels unless voters approve a "gap" levy of 8.5 mills for five years to restore that level. Grosse Pointe is one of only a handful of school districts in the state allowed to seek "gap" mills.

Taylor cast the only dissenting vote partly because he wanted the board to vote separately on each proposal and because he felt a five-year authorization was too long.

"The numbers do not speak well," Taylor said. "When I ran for election, we were looking at a $65 million budget. Now we are spending almost $74 million. I wanted to see a commitment to cutting administrative and support services; there's plenty of room to cut."

At the board's Nov. 7 conference meeting, members spent a great deal of time debating whether the millage authorization should be for 10 years, five years or three years. A majority agreed on the five-year authorization.

Taylor, acting on the suggestion of some community members who spoke during the public hearing portion of the meeting, supported a three-year authorization. Anything longer, he said, would silence the voters.

"One thing the audience should keep in mind is that the 'gap' millage is the last bit of local control we can produce in this community," said secretary Linda Schneider. "We have the opportunity to come forward and decide for ourselves if we want to keep that local control."

In 1993-94, the school district levied 30.4620 mills. This year, the tax rate is 14.5679 for homesteads and 24.2 for non-homesteads.

Shine emphasized that the proposals are renewals and not increases in the tax rate. The ballot language calls both proposals increases, he said, because when the current authorizations expire in December, the district's tax rate is reduced to zero.

Of the dozen or so community members who commented on the board's action, only two objected to the proposals based on the five-year authorization.

who won in the overall election, lost to Republican John Smietanka by a 2,808 to 2,521 count.

In the race for the Wayne County board of commissioner's First district, Grosse Pointe voters helped return Republican and Grosse Pointe Park resident Andrew Richner to the board for another term. He beat challenger Chris Cavanaugh in the Pointes by a 17,335 to 4,762 margin but only by a 23,019 to 20,233 count overall.

"I expected to do well," Richner said. "But the high turnout in Detroit made it much closer."

"The message I take is that the voters support what I've done the past two years and what I will do the next two years. I'd like to thank the many voters in the Pointes who supported me and who believe in the job that I've done."

In the Wayne County Community College trustee race, City of Grosse Pointe resident Mary Ellen Stempfle defeated Grosse Pointe Woods' Patricia Kukula by 9,600 to 6,073 in the Pointes and by 21,758 to 17,773 overall.

"I was surprised with the results," Stempfle said. "I expected it to be much closer."

Stempfle is also pleased that voters across the county voted for the 1-mill renewal for the college.

"It's a good vote of confidence," she said. "We will have to live up to it."

Although the millage passed, the Pointes rejected it by an almost 2-to-1 margin.

In the race for state Sen. John Kelly's seat, Democrat Joe Young Jr. defeated Republican and Grosse Pointe Park resident Peter Ecklund 39,179 to 26,566 despite Ecklund's strong showing in the Pointes, where he beat Young 17,845 to 4,099.

"We're excited," Young said. "It was a difficult election. I have great and renewed faith in the constituents."

Young said he has applied for the following committee assignments in the state Senate: corporations and economic development, health policy and senior citizens and natural resources and environmental affairs.

Thirteen was a lucky number for Grosse Pointe Farms' William R. Bryant Jr., who will head back to Lansing for a 13th term in the state House of Representatives. He defeated Democratic challenger Kerry Baitinger by a 24,003 to 10,471 margin overall and by a 18,242 to 5,122 count in the Pointes.

Voter turnout was much higher than in 1990, the last gubernatorial election. The Shores led the way with a 68 percent turnout, up from 61 percent four years ago. The City and Farms each had 66 percent turnouts. In 1990, the City had 58 percent and the Farms had 57 percent show up at the polls.

The Woods had a 60 percent turnout, up from 55 percent four years ago, and the Park's turnout was 58 percent, up from 45 percent in 1990.

Cyclist, driver clash in Woods

A 15-year-old Harper Woods boy was chased and attacked by a motorist on Nov. 12 after the boy yelled an obscenity at the driver.

The incident happened in the 1900 block of Fleetwood in Grosse Pointe Woods when the Harper Woods boy and his friends were riding their bicycles along Mack. When the cyclists rode in front of a car stopped at a stop sign, the driver allegedly yelled at them. The Harper Woods boy said he yelled back at the driver, provoking him to follow the cyclists up and down several sidestreets along Mack.

Several people witnessed the driver chasing the boys down the street and up onto the grass on Fleetwood. The driver got out of his car, pulled the Harper Woods boy off his bike, knocked him to the ground and pinned him down, yelling threats at him.

The driver then stood up, got back into his car and drove away. When police arrived, they found that the boy appeared to have suffered a fractured forearm but he refused medical treatment. Police were collecting witness statements earlier this week and are continuing their investigation.

On Nov. 11, a resident who lives in the 200 block of McKinley reported to police that sometime between 9 and 10 p.m. a paint ball was fired at her front window, shattering it.

Also on Nov. 11, a paint ball shattered a 2-foot-by-3-foot front window of a house in the 100 block of Moran sometime between 8:30 and 9:30 p.m. Police are investigating.

Driver may face charges

A Grosse Pointe Park police officer grew suspicious when he saw a woman driving in the alley behind Beaconsfield with her car headlights off.

The officer circled the 900 block of Beaconsfield and found the car parked behind a gas station and the woman hiding inside. She was questioned and released by police pending further investigation.

Police confiscated a scale and suspected controlled substances. The matter is being reviewed by the city attorney for possible charges of violating a city ordinance prohibiting the possession of narcotics paraphernalia.

John Lord Booth

John Lord Booth

John Lord Booth, known to his friends as Jack, died Friday, Nov. 11, 1994, at his home in Grosse Pointe Farms. He was 87.

He was the only son of Mary and Ralph Harmon Booth, who was the first president of the Arts Commission of the City of Detroit when the Detroit Institute of Arts was founded. He was also the nephew of George G. Booth, the founder of Cranbrook.

Born in Detroit, Mr. Booth attended Detroit University School and was a 1930 graduate of Yale University. He spent part of his youth touring Europe with his sister and his art-collecting parents. Following his years at Yale, he was a private secretary to his father, the U.S. ambassador to Denmark.

After his father's death in 1931, instead of joining Booth Newspapers, the family's Michigan newspaper company, Mr. Booth purchased a partial interest in radio station WJBK-AM in Detroit, becoming an early partner of radio pioneer George Storer.

Mr. Booth subsequently bought his own AM radio station in 1939 and then applied for and received permission to construct one of the nation's first FM stations, WJLB.

Following World War II, during which he served as a lieutenant in the U.S. Navy, he built and purchased a number of radio stations. After a brief experience as a Michigan UHF-TV pioneer in the 1950s, he joined the ranks of the early cable television pioneers during the early 1960s and was awarded a number of franchises to build systems in cities in Michigan and Virginia.

At the time Booth Newspapers Inc. was sold to the Newhouse newspaper group in 1976, Mr. Booth was a member of the executive committee and the company's largest individual shareholder. By the end of the 1970s, his sons, John and Ralph, took over the management of the family's media business, Booth American Co.

The company remains private.

Sailing was a lifelong interest of Mr. Booth's. He helped introduce the six-meter class to Lake St. Clair and built the Detroit Boat Basin on East Jefferson in Detroit.

In his later years, he became a Florida resident and devoted much of his time to his family and philanthropy. He served for many years as a trustee of University Liggett School, becoming an honorary trustee after establishing a science center and a library in his name at the school.

Mr. Booth was a major benefactor of the Detroit Institute of Arts and a trustee emeritus, serving several decades on the board of trustees of the Founders' Society. He also was an honorary trustee of the Detroit Historical Society, establishing an auditorium named in honor of his wife.

Mr. Booth is survived by his wife, Louise Preston Camper Booth; two daughters, Doreen and Jackie; two sons, John and Ralph; 11 grandchildren; five great-grandchildren; and a sister, Virginia Booth Vogel. He was predeceased by a daughter, Winkie.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests contributions be made to the Detroit Institute of Arts, 5200 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich. 48202 or to the Michigan Cancer Foundation, 110 E. Warren, Detroit, Mich. 48202.

"My husband loved his family and took great pride in his business, enjoying most the close camaraderie built between colleagues over so many years," his wife said.

Services were held Tuesday, Nov. 15, at Christ Church Grosse Pointe.

Christine Kennedy Todd

A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 19, at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church in Grosse Pointe Farms for Christine Kennedy Todd, 79, of the City of Grosse Pointe, who died Friday, Nov. 4, 1994, at the St. John-Bon Secours Senior Community in Detroit.

She is survived by a daughter, Caroline Todd Akers; two sons, Charles D. Todd III and Dr. James K. Todd; 12 grandchildren; one great-grandchild; and three sisters, Jane K. Miller, Phyllis K. Moore and Edna K. McDonald. She was predeceased by her husband, Charles D. Todd Jr., a sister, Mary Ann K. Rann, and a brother, Charles S. Kennedy Jr.

Arrangements were made by the Faulmann & Walsh Golden Rule Funeral Home in Fraser. Memorial contributions may be made to the Founders' Society of the Detroit Institute of Arts or to the Wayne State University School of Medicine scholarship fund.

Frances A. Whitney

Memorial services were held Friday, Nov. 11, at Christ Church Grosse Pointe for Frances A. Whitney, 89, who died Tuesday, Nov. 8, 1994, at the Moroun Nursing Home in Detroit.

Born in Columbus, Ohio, Mrs. Whitney was a resident of the City of Grosse Pointe.

She graduated from the Columbus School for Girls in 1923 and from Mount Holyoke College in 1927.

A seamstress, Mrs. Whitney had her own sewing business for many years and was known for the smock dresses she made for Young's Clothes and the Neighborhood Club Thrift Shop.

She was an active member of Christ Church and was given special recognition for her efforts. She was also a member of the Founders' Society of the Detroit Institute of Arts.

Mrs. Whitney is survived by her daughter, Persis Whitney.

Hill Association has big plans for promoting holiday shopping

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

With Christmas just around the corner, the Hill Association has developed a plan to show eastsiders the benefits of shopping close to home.

The association will start the season with a traditional Christmas tree lighting ceremony on Thursday, Nov. 17, at 5:30 p.m. at the gazebo in front of Richard Elementary School, kicking off the Hill's "Holly Days."

The Grosse Pointe South Choir will be on hand to sing, and the Friends of the Library have lined up Avi, a nationally-known author of books for young adults, to hold a book signing at the central library at the corner of Kercheval and Fisher beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Hill merchants will follow up the tree lighting with two days of holiday specials and demonstrations. Something Special Too will feature Bev Hindson, who will show customers some paper ideas for the holidays. On Sunday, Nov. 20, there will be a Christmas ornament and package demonstration at Something Special Too.

In addition to these activities, Hill merchants are holding several sales aimed at the holiday bargain hunter. The League Shop is holding a special "Santa's Bag Discount," where customers draw the amount of their discount from Santa's Bag.

Pongracz will be open on Sunday, Nov. 20, for a silver sale, offering great bargains on some of the store's silver items. Kennedy & Co. will offer a 20 percent discount on anything in the store — except Christmas decorations, candles and potpourri.

Collectors of music boxes might want to visit Young Furniture during the Hill's "Holly Days" because they can get a 30 percent discount on boxes by Enesco, which feature scenes of Santa's workshop complete with elves — one-of-a-kind bargains for the discriminating collector.

The Hill Association's merchant's group also got together this year and purchased advertising time on classical music radio station WQRS, said association spokesperson Betty Young.

In addition, the association sent out promotional materials to all homes in Grosse Pointe, as well as selected demographic areas.

The idea behind the mailing and the radio advertising, said Young, is to remind people that the Hill is a great place to shop and has the kind of upscale stores that people want, without the hassle of going to some far-off mall.

"The merchants on Kercheval have also spent time and money making the alley behind the stores on the Richard side of the street nice,"

The signs are all around! The Grosse Pointe Hill Association is preparing for the holidays this year with special "Holly Day" events. Those seeking some ideas for Christmas or just interested in finding some bargains should visit the Hill this weekend.

Young said. "It's right by the parking on the street, that municipal parking lot, which get to the stores from the parking lot, and if they don't see people tend to forget about. We don't mean there isn't parking available."

Veterans can get a benefit package to help you live and learn

The United States government recognizes that its veterans deserve special benefits. That's why 50 years ago President Roosevelt signed legislation, known as the Readjustment of 1944 Act or GI Bill, to make education, training and home ownership more accessible and affordable to veterans.

In recognition of Veterans Day, the Michigan Association of CPAs (MACPA) offers a summary of the types of assistance currently offered by the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA).

Since the GI Bill was first introduced, several different educational programs for veterans have been established. The Post-Vietnam Veterans' Educational Assistance Program (VEAP) is a voluntary contributory matching program for persons entering military service after December 31, 1976. To receive benefits under this program, you must have enrolled in and contributed to VEAP while on active duty before April 1, 1987.

Your total benefit generally is equal to your contribution plus matching funds equal to two times your contributions. Benefits end 10 years from the date of your last honorable discharge or release from active duty. You can receive benefits for a wide variety of training, including courses leading to a college degree, certificate or diploma from a business, technical or vocational school, as well as apprenticeship or job training programs.

Currently, recently discharged veterans are receiving the Montgomery GI Bill Chapter 30. Similar benefits are available to individuals who entered active military service or the Selected Reserve after June 30, 1985, and meet specific service requirements.

Under the Active Duty Educational Assistance Program, entitlement to educational benefits is based on three years of continuous active duty, although individuals with at least two years of continuous active duty may qualify for benefits in some circumstances.

In addition, to qualify for the program, you must allow the government to keep $100 of your monthly pay for the first twelve months of service. Remember, though, this money will not be returned to you even if you don't take advantage of the educational benefits.

Generally, if you serve in the Selected Reserve for a period of six years, you also qualify for educational benefits. The Selected Reserve includes the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, Coast Guard Reserves, the Army National Guard and the Air Guard.

MACPA points out that you may be eligible to receive up to a maximum of 36 months of education benefits under one program, or 48 months of benefits under more than one VA program.

Educational and vocational counseling is also available to assist you in planning your program of education. If you decide that educational training is not necessary, your local Department of Veterans Affairs can provide you with employment assistance.

In addition to these benefits, veterans should know that 100 percent home financing is available, no down payment is needed, unless the purchase price of the property is more than the reasonable value determined by the VA.

Except in special circumstances, the VA does not make direct loans to veterans. Instead, the VA guarantees loans that are made to you by private lenders, such as banks, savings and loan associations or mortgage companies. The guarantee means the lender is protected against loss in the event you cannot repay the loan.

VA loan guarantees range from 25 percent of a home loan, depending on the size of the loan. Most lenders require that a combination of the VA guarantee amount and any cash down payment equal at least 25 percent of the reasonable value or sales-price of the property.

Generally, to qualify for VA home loan guarantees, you must have served at least 90 days on active wartime duty, 181 days of continuous active peacetime service or have been discharged for a service-connected disability. Unmarried surviving spouses of service personnel who died on active duty, or as a result of service-connected disabilities, also qualify for VA home loan guarantees.

Waterfront condo auction

How would you like to buy a waterfront condominium in St. Clair Shores for $100,000 off?

In a rare opportunity, Piku Management Co. is auctioning a luxury condominium in the Lakeview Club at 1 1/2 Mile and Jefferson. Piku originally built the condominium development.

"The owner's out of town and he doesn't want to carry it over the winter," said Frank Piku. "It's a real good philosophy of marketing. It's making a sale happen in a 30-day period."

The condominium to be auctioned Sunday, Nov. 20, at 3 p.m. has two fireplaces and a state equalized valuation of $335,000.

Piku said real estate auctions are new to the Midwest and said his will be perhaps the first "on this side of town."

A licensed real estate broker and experienced auctioneer, Piku will handle the sale himself. Bidding will begin at $200,000.

"Somebody could get a real steal," Piku said.

In the latest study done by the National Research Corporation, HAP's HMO had the highest member satisfaction scores of any measured health plan in Southeastern Michigan.

It was only by a little bit, but in the latest survey of Southeast Michigan's leading health plans, HAP's HMO is number one. In statistical terms, it's just a percentage point or so. But in human terms, it means that HAP members feel good. And when our members feel good, we feel good. We'll continue to try

Park OKs liquor license — but no dancing

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

In a move that will permit another restaurant to open and serve alcohol, but will not permit dancing by its patrons, the Park City Council voted to permit the transfer of a class C liquor license from Diamond Phillips to Park bar owner Dennis Dallacqua Monday night.

The transfer was made conditional, however. The Phillips license also would have permitted dancing at Dallacqua's new establishment, which the council didn't want. So they did not approve the transfer of the portion of the license that would permit dancing.

"I kind of expected this," said Dallacqua. "But I can't say that I am not disappointed by the decision."

Dallacqua told the council that he plans on putting a family-style restaurant in the location of the former Tom's Oyster Bar on Mack. He owns the building and said he has wanted to open his own place there for some time. Dallacqua has owned O'Flaherty's in the Park for the past two years.

Dallacqua told the council that he worked in Detroit for many years, including a stint in the city's rumor control department, and that he never heard rumors spread as fast as the ones concerning his plans for the old oyster bar.

"I am not going to turn the place into a topless go-go bar," said Dallacqua. "I did not fill out the entertainment portion of the liquor license forms. I would have dancing by customers only. I want the council to know that I have received the city's beautification award twice, and have no intention of detracting from the neighborhood."

Dallacqua added that he envisioned possibly allowing dinner dancing at night, and wanted to run a family-style restaurant. He said that he was just too old to run a hard rock dance club.

Despite his assurances and his history of running a bar in the city, Dallacqua was asked by councilman Vernon Ausherman how he would prevent underage drinkers from trying to get in a bar with dancing.

Dallacqua said that he's instructed his employees to carefully check identifications, and he noted that he's the only one in the Park with a liquor license who does not accept out-of-state I.D.

He also said that the city periodically checks the bars and sends underage agents in to try to buy alcohol, and his employees have always passed that test.

Phillips was on hand and told the council that he has received many offers for his license. When Dallacqua offered to purchase it, he and his wife investigated him, and found him to represent a stable interest. Phillips added that the more stable businesses there are on Mack the better it would be for everyone. He also noted that the Old Place had dancing for many years and there was never a problem.

Dallacqua told the council that he never really intended to have dancing, but got the idea from Phillips when he talked about the Old Place.

"I'm 90 percent sure that I won't have dancing, but I'd like the option in case it's needed to boost business," said Dallacqua.

Councilmember Dan Clark noted that Dallacqua was an honorable businessman whose history in the city was a good one. But he also noted that the bar would be near homes, and the council had to balance the needs of the residents with the needs of the business people.

Councilmember Steve Safronek suggested that Dallacqua try running the bar without dancing, and if it didn't work he could always come back to the council and they could allow it at a later date.

In the end, the council decided to approve the transfer of the liquor part of the license, but declined to transfer the part of the license that would have permitted dancing. Only Ausherman voted for that option.

Let there be lights . . . in Woods parking lot

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Hoping to light up the city, the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council voted last week to spend some $24,000 on lights for a parking lot and for the front of city hall.

The funds will be used to buy decorative outdoor lights for the new parking lot being built at Hampton and Mack. The city recently agreed to purchase residential land to alleviate the shortage of parking in the Hampton and Mack area.

The property, which is currently being converted from a residential area to a parking area, has no exterior lights. Matika Electrical won the contract with a low bid of $10,650.

"The lights will be decorative in nature," said city administrator Peter Thomas. "By that I mean they will light the parking lot at night, but they will look old-fashioned and nice. They are like the ones that light up the city hall parking lot."

Money to pay for the lights will come from the bond recently floated by the city to pay for the parking lot, said Thomas, stressing that it is not coming from the general fund.

But that's not the case with the electrical and lighting system that was approved for the front of city hall. The council recently approved the planting of about 150 trees in the front area of city hall, said Thomas, and part of the plan to improve the look of the area, Thomas said.

Woods director of public works Thomas Whitcher said that the city will install four floodlights that will illuminate the city hall after dark. These lights will be an upgrade from the three that are currently in use.

The city will also install an electrical system that will allow the placement of holiday lighting on the trees closest to the entrance, exit and horseshoe drive, Whitcher said.

The electrical lines that will reach the trees can also be used for other purposes, Thomas said.

Dallacqua told the council

Ad executive sells heart disease awareness

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Michael Howe, of the City of Grosse Pointe, is executive vice president for corporate projects with the advertising firm of Young & Rubicam. An important job to be sure, but when you ask him about his professional accomplishments, he's just as likely to talk about his work for the American Heart Association of Michigan as about his work in the advertising field.

"My father died of heart disease about 4 1/2 years ago," said Howe. "But he had heart problems his whole life. About six months after his death, I was contacted by Regis Bowers, a good friend of my father for many years. He asked me to chair an event, the Heart Walk. Then it was a new event the heart association was trying to get going in Detroit."

The project was launched on a national basis and it was Howe's job to figure out how to make it work for Detroit. The goal of the walk was to raise money for heart research, while at the same time increasing the awareness that walking was good for the heart.

Awareness of heart disease and how to fight it is very important, said Howe. He noted that about half of all Americans die of heart disease. That's why it's equally important to raise money and awareness, he said.

"I made the walk non-competitive," Howe said. "We held it at the Detroit Zoo, and we did it differently. Instead of recruiting a small number of people who would end up doing a lot of work, I recruited people from across Detroit's advertising community, and they, in turn, recruited people within their firm, who then recruited more people to walk and make donations. It was a win-win situation."

Howe said he started with 10 industry leaders in professions like law and advertising. They then went to five firms or companies in their respective professions. The company leaders then recruited 10 people within the company to participate in the walk. The goal was to get each walker to donate $75. The recruiters at every level of the chain also walked, said Howe.

POINTER OF INTEREST

Grosse Pointer Michael Howe, poses with (l-r) Detroit Mayor Dennis Archer, and Howe's children, Michael, 16, Carrie, 13, Julie, 8, and Detroit's First Lady, Trudy Archer, on the night Howe received the American Heart Association of Michigan's Cor Vitae award.

"Each walker was supposed to bring in $75," said Howe. "But we had people who brought in as much as $4,000. We had people who had received heart transplants walking. We had people walking in memory of someone they knew who died from heart disease."

The walk turned out to be a success and the heart association held its third walk earlier this fall.

Howe was honored with the American Heart Association of Michigan Cor Vitae award (Latin for Heart of Life) earlier this year for his work for the association.

Howe said that he enjoys working in advertising and has spent his entire professional career in the industry. He has lived in the Pointes since graduating from John Carroll University in Cleveland. While working in Detroit he also earned an MBA from Michigan State University.

He has worked for a number of firms in Detroit, including Kenyon & Eckhardt, and was general manager of Chrysler Plymouth's advertising division. "It's the nature of advertising to move around," said Howe. "I enjoy it a lot."

But all work and no play is not what Howe is about. He enjoys downhill skiing, something he picked up in college. He also is a big boater and currently owns a 22-foot-long Boston Whaler, which he uses for waterskiing with his three children on Lake St. Clair. He is divorced.

He used to own a sailboat, but sold it. "Sailing is a very expensive hobby," Howe said.

Howe has been working with Detroit Mayor Dennis Archer as a member of the Detroit Image Team, which will shortly present a plan to the Detroit Area Chamber of Commerce and Detroit Renaissance on how to improve the city's image and attract business back to Detroit.

"The idea is to get people to be proud of Detroit," said Howe. "I think Mayor Archer is a good guy to work with."

Howe has handed over the Heart Walk to others and is currently working with St. John Hospital of Detroit on a national heart attack risk study. St. John Hospital has agreed to study 25,000 people for five years. It's part of a 500,000-person nationwide study to determine who is at risk for heart attacks.

Howe is working with Eunice O'Loughlin at St. John. It's his job to find advertising people willing to participate in the program for five years. Participants get heart check-ups twice a year.

Howe, working through the Adcraft Club of Detroit, has arranged with six advertising agencies across metro Detroit to permit employees to receive the heart exams at the office. The reason, explained Howe, is that it's easier to bring an examiner to the office as opposed to having study participants who work all across the tri-county area take a day off to go to St. John.

"It's a major study that should help tell us if advertising people are especially susceptible to heart attacks," said Howe. "It should also prove once and for all that advertising people do have a heart after all."

ULS names AP scholars

Nineteen members of the University Liggett School class of 1994 have been named AP scholars by the College Board in recognition of their achievement on the college-level advanced placement (AP) exams.

Students who qualified for the AP scholar with distinction award by earning grades of 3 or above on five or more AP exams, with an average exam grade of at least 3.5, are: Laura Bouwman, Andrew Dempz, Jed Howbert, Anastasia Hryhorczuk, Eric Lindauer and Bobby Rabbani.

Students who qualified for AP scholar with honors by earning grades of 3 or above on four or more AP exams, with an average exam grade of at least 3.25, are: Lisa Amatan-gelo, Kai Bickenbach and Francesca Nesi.

Ten ULS students qualified for AP scholar by completing three or more AP examinations, with grades of 3 or higher. They are: John Addis, Rasheen Carbin, Jennifer Ettel, Abigail Hulme, Jeffrey Mertz, Andrew Partridge, Liam Ryan, Christian Sandel, Jennifer Slone and Zhenyu Zhu.

AP exams, which students take in May after completing challenging college-level courses at their high school, are graded on a 5-point scale, with 5 being the highest grade. Most of the nation's colleges and universities award credit and/or placement for grades of 3 or higher, and more than 1,300 institutions award a year of credit to students with a sufficient number of qualifying grades.

Park resident takes flight

Grosse Pointe South graduate Katie Bower, an industrial design technology student at the Art Institute of Seattle, is one of 100 volunteers working on the RAVEN project to create human-powered flight.

RAVEN is a team of nine schools and eight professional organizations designing and building a human-powered, 30-foot long craft, with a 114-foot wing span.

Bower graduated from South in 1989 and attended Ferris State before transferring to Seattle. She is the daughter of Ken Bower of Grosse Pointe Farms.

Knights aid St. Clare

The Knights of Columbus, Gabriel Richard Council, has assisted St. Clare of Montefalco School in a venture that has taken the school on a historic journey linking Catholic and Lutheran educational programs.

This was accomplished by having the K of C lend financial support to a special needs program at the school.

St. Clare has been seeking to provide more defined and comprehensive assistance for its special needs children and the Lutheran Schools Special Ministries caught their attention.

The group was approached with a proposal and St. Clare principal Hank Burakowski, along with the Lutheran Special Ministries board, formed a partnership. The Knights of Columbus agreed to fund the program, which began with the 1994-95 school year.

Teacher's script gets published

A manuscript written by University Liggett School's middle school librarian Karen Roggenkamp has been accepted for publication in English Journal, the official publication of the Secondary Section of the National Council of Teachers of English.

Roggenkamp's manuscript, "Long Live the Queen: Literature and Life Philosophy," will be published in the December issue of the journal. Roggenkamp is a graduate of the University of Michigan and has taught at ULS since 1991.

Family fun

Brownell Middle School students get silly during the 10th annual family pizza night on Oct. 19. Each year the Brownell PTO sets aside an evening early in the school year to bring families together for dinner and entertainment. PTO volunteers decorated the gym in a Halloween/autumn theme and furnished the crowd with catered pizza and entertainment by the sixth-grade chorus and student rock band, Hangman's Jury.

International Stars

Representing seven countries on international day at Our Lady Star of the Sea school are, left to right, Christina and Patrick Hagan, Poland; Joshua Corbo, Scotland; Will Ahee, Lebanon; and Alexandra Hathaway, France. The day began with a world peace ceremony in church. Classroom activities included a luncheon of ethnic dishes, presentations of different ethnic customs, including a demonstration by Yee Tom, owner of the Golden Dragon, on how to make egg rolls, and an Arabic dance performed by parent Marie Ghanem. Students were issued passports that were stamped as they "visited" each country. The event was planned and orchestrated by Beth Ahee, Eileen Sweeney, Nancy Ciotti and Pam Thomas.

Joe Ricci

Ricci supports athletic center

University Liggett School dedicated its new athletic training center on Oct. 28, a facility that was built through the generous donation of auto dealer Joe Ricci.

As coach of the ULS girls' ice hockey team, Ricci stresses the importance of balancing academics and athletics. His donation provided the school with more than $30,000 in weight training equipment. Last year he made contributions toward athletic field improvements, dugouts, electronic scoreboards, drainage tiles and landscaping.

GOP's state sweep elects 4 Pointers

Gov. John Engler led GOP forces to a sweeping victory in the Nov. 8 election in Michigan, with Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley as the lone Democratic holdout in the state capitol.

The GOP not only won the governorship handily but went on to capture the open U.S. Senate seat, control both houses of the Legislature and the state board of education, and even take the secretary of state post long held by Richard H. Austin.

Yet the Democrats lost only one U.S. House seat and still hold a 9-to-7 advantage in congressional seats in Michigan. And they lost only a single state House seat, although that loss gave the GOP control by a 56 to 54 margin.

The Democrats did retain the state Senate seat in the 1st District, with Rep. Joe Young Jr. of Detroit defeating Grosse Pointe's young hopeful, Peter Ecklund, even though the latter carried Grosse Pointe by a wide margin. The GOP retained state Senate control, however, by the same 23-16 margin.

By leading all candidates in total votes in the Pointes, the governor gave a boost to four Republican Pointers who won their respective contests.

The only Pointer on the state ticket, Clark Durant, was one of two GOP nominees elected to the state board of education for a six-year term. Their election gave the GOP control of the board by a 6-to-2 margin.

Another feature of the GOP sweep was the election of the senior House Republican, Rep. William R. Bryant Jr., of Grosse Pointe Farms, to his 13th term in the state House, a victory that helped the party regain House control.

In another important contest, Commissioner Andrew Richner of Grosse Pointe Park notched his second term on the Wayne County Commission, which also enlarged the GOP minority to three members on the 15-member board.

On the nonpartisan ticket, another Pointer, Mary Ellen Stempfle was elected the district's representative on the Wayne County Community College board with the support of the Eastside Republican Club.

The WCCC appeal for a four-year extension of its 1-mill tax levy was narrowly approved, chiefly because of strong Detroit support, but lost by almost a 2-to-1 margin in the Pointes.

Engler's big victory projects him into new consideration for higher GOP office, and raises an interesting question:

Will his interest in a possible 1996 bid for the GOP nomination for the vice presidency persuade him to become less doctrinaire and more generous in his attitude toward mental patients, welfare clients and other needy people?

His answer probably depends on whether the GOP in 1996 will seek to win as a right-wing or as a more moderate party closer to the middle of the road that generally decides presidential elections.

Test GOP on acts, not words

It is too early to know for sure what the Republican Congress will try to do next year but one thing is already certain.

Until the GOP Congress gets its two houses in order, people would be well advised to pay more attention to what the new majority party does in power than what it says it would like to do.

After enjoying several days of peacock-strutting in Washington, Rep. Newt Gingrich, the next House speaker, did promise to cooperate with the Clinton administration, but not to compromise with it on principle.

That promise came only belatedly and after Gingrich had declined to take a call from the president and then waited an hour and a half before calling him back.

In an earlier reaction to the election, Gingrich had resorted to name-calling in identifying the Clintons as "elite far-out liberals" and the president as "the enemy of normal Americans."

Gingrich's performance seems to deny the hope for the spirit of cooperation held out by Clinton and by Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas.

While Dole will become the Senate majority leader in the next Congress, he also is expected to be an active but unannounced candidate for the GOP presidential nomination in 1996.

Some Republicans, and especially those also contending for the presidential nomination, are grumbling that Dole ought not try to occupy two positions of that importance at one time, but Dole made it clear even before the election that he intended to continue to serve as GOP leader regardless of the Nov. 8 outcome.

Dole no doubt realizes that the 1996 election will offer him his last opportunity to bid for the presidency, but which Dole will he become?

Will he revert to the slashing, acerbic candidate that he was as Gerald Ford's running mate on the unsuccessful 1976 GOP ticket — or will he adopt the more moderate role he sometimes played as the GOP Senate minority leader?

As the majority leader, he now could seek and possibly work out accommodation with the Democratic president on important legislation.

Such a strategic and constructive move might be agreeable to President Clinton and even helpful to him, but it would also aid Dole's own ambitions by showing he could play a major role in developing legislation that presumably would benefit the country.

As for Clinton, he will not be without an important weapon of his own in any contest with a GOP Congress. He retains his right to veto GOP legislation and probably could beat back most attempts at an override because it requires a two-thirds majority.

True, Dole as Senate majority leader will be under enormous pressure from the Republican right wing to support the social and tax agenda that it claims the election endorsed by defeating Democrats and their program.

Yet GOP voices of reason have told both Dole and Gingrich that moderation is no sin and, indeed, adopting that principle could put the GOP in the middle of the road in preparation for the 1996 campaign.

In view of the right wing's strength, such a course would involve some risks for Dole both as a Senate leader and a presidential aspirant, of course.

But it could capture broad backing from people tired of the mean and destructive rhetoric of the 1994 campaign and eager to accept forward-looking GOP leadership.

Broadening the gift of reading

Most of us remember for the rest of our lives the first books we read as children because they started us on a happy and life-long trip of discovery.

Since our childhood, books have continued to inform, entertain and offer simple pleasure as we continue our journeys of discovery through life.

Unfortunately, not all children have equal access to picture books which can attract them and arouse an interest in reading that would serve them so well.

That is why the Park and Woods branches and the Central Library will cooperate in the annual Gift of Reading book drive which opened this week and will run until Dec. 7.

Grosse Pointe residents are asked to contribute new picture books for children under age 7, and drop them off at one of the branches so that they can be distributed throughout the metro area by public and private social agencies.

Since 1990 the Grosse Pointe community has contributed more than 5,000 books to the cause.

In the Pointes, the campaign is being sponsored by the Friends of the Grosse Pointe Public Library. The area-wide campaign is conducted by the Detroit Free Press, which since 1987 has distributed new books to more than 400,000 disadvantaged Michigan children.

How can anyone live and learn without books?

6 millionaires on senior tour

Six players on the senior golfing tour wound up the season as millionaires last week with Dave Stockton capturing top honors with more than $1,400,000 in tournament earnings.

Dave Hill, Michigan's top entrant on the tour, took a month off this fall to hunt deer and pheasants and enjoy the scenery but still reported season winnings of $580,000.

The Michigan golfer took home $48,100 for tying for seventh in the final tour event at Myrtle Beach, Fla., last weekend.

The other senior tour millionaires in addition to Stockton were Ray Floyd, Lee Trevino, Jim Albus, Jim Colbert and Tom Wargo.

Hill, the senior golfer of the year in winning more than $1 million a couple of seasons ago, captured only one tournament title this season and finished in about 16th place in tour earnings.

But a half million dollars isn't a bad season's take.

Letters

Open letter to Pointes' school superintendent

To Ed Shine:

I attended the Nov. 7 board meeting, and I would like to say I was surprised, but I was not. Your recommendation to the board of asking the taxpayers in early 1995 to approve a millage at the maximum 8.5 is just another example of the arrogance that your administration has for the taxpayers of Grosse Pointe.

The board and yourself pondered for over 45 minutes on whether the millage should be approved five years for homeowners, 10 years for business, or five and five with a group consensus for five and five. There was no consideration for the fact the taxpayers will have to approve 18 mills in order to receive state funding of $6,500 per student; recognizing this is definitely necessary.

To ask the taxpayers to give the school board the maximum allowed by state law and to presume that it should be approved based on the board's and your opinion that you do not have to use it all is ridiculous.

The actions of the board speak loud and clear that the money will be used at a rate of 90 percent or better, and that is why you are asking for the maximum at this point.

Of course, I should, as a taxpayer, consider Gloria Konsler's remarks where it appeared she was appointing herself and the entire board as self-proclaimed guardians of the community's property values. Her assumption is that higher property taxes assures high property values, and that the taxpayers should be happy only meets the board's goal when the real truth is that lower property taxes with good schools have a tendency to raise property values substantially and secure the community much better than the evil forces that Konsler was discussing.

money being spent on our children should deliver tax relief for the taxpayer and a great Grosse Pointe education for our children. Do not take credit for 90 percent of the students going on to higher education. That is a direct result of the community's affluence and the new lower standards set for higher education.

Robert Duquet

In fact, it should be noted that high property taxes lower property values. As a matter of record, there is still no evidence that great public schools come out of soaking homeowners.

I would ask the board to seriously consider if they believe a five and five for the homeowner and business community is a good idea. I would ask that the maximum not be requested but an amount closer to six mills, with five on homeowners and five on business. Also, for the first time, deal with the real budgetary problems, such as administrators and our building maintenance cost, so that the ratio of 50 cents on the dollar for our children can be broken. Instead of patting yourselves on the backs, maybe 60 or 65 cents will be spent on our kids and the community will pat you on the back for doing a good job.

Candidate says thanks

To the Editor:

Thank you for your endorsement of my candidacy for trustee of the Wayne County Community College board, 1st District. Although I was not elected, your confidence in my abilities is deeply appreciated. It is my hope the new trustee will not participate in "business as usual" behavior while on the board. I wish her well and will offer my skills in pursuit of a better institution.

I'm happy I chose to run a positive and issues-oriented campaign. My family, friends and supporters can be proud of our clean campaign and sincere efforts to put the interests of the students at WCCC first.

Again, thank you for your endorsement. I enjoyed this experience and look forward to continuing to contribute to our community.

300 guests have a grand old time at Defer party

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Student Megan Linne couldn't decide who was her favorite "grand person" so she invited them both to the first-ever Grand Persons' Day at Defer Elementary School last week.

The fourth-grader hugged her great-grandmother Helen Worrell while her grandmother Mary Kay Linne filled out a questionnaire prepared by the Megan and her classmates. The questionnaire was part of a specialized project that each class planned to welcome their visitors. Some classes read stories to the guests, others made elaborate photo collages and displays while other students played computer games with their visitors.

About 300 guests arrived at Defer on Nov. 10. Each student asked a parent, or a grandparent, a favorite aunt or uncle or a neighbor to spend the morning with them.

The program began with an assembly in the school gym that featured music, singing and skits. The students then invited their guests into the classroom for one-on-one activities.

The older students conducted interviews, read stories and wrote essays with their guests. Some classes prepared photo collages and posters in advance to show the guests what their school days are like.

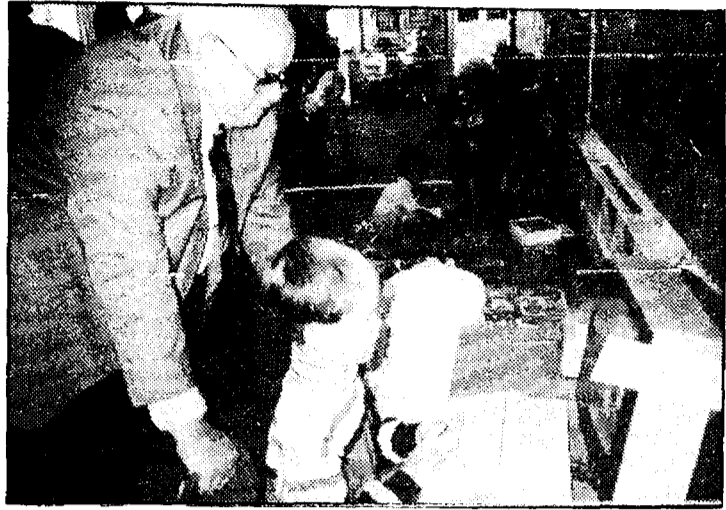

The younger children played board games, invited their guests outside to the playground during recess and showed their guests how to use the computers.

"The interaction is the most important part of this day," said Pat Zens, Defer PTO programs chairman. "The seniors and the guests feel wanted and needed. They get to see the building, the classrooms and the computers. And the students have someone whom they admire and respect there with them."

Grand Persons' day has been discussed for a number of years by the PTO, teachers and parents, Zens said. The idea was proposed by first-grade teacher Elizabeth Sossi, who learned of such a program while teaching in another school district.

Residents of St. Joseph's Nursing Center in Detroit were invited to attend as "stand-ins" for those children who do not have any relatives in the area, Zens said.

"Ultimately we'd like to have this every other year," she said.

Socks off to the father of 'soul'

Hey Notre Dame grads, remember when $2 in your pocket and a clean shirt were all you needed for a great Friday night? That's because you were headed to "the hop." And no one made the hop more hip and happening than the "good father" of soul and rock, Father John Bryson.

Join Bryson and other former and current faculty members and alumni during the Notre Dame High School 40th anniversary celebration Nov. 25-26.

A stag pizza and beer night will be held Friday, Nov. 25, at the school, 20254 Kelly in Harper Woods.

A dinner dance will be held Saturday, Nov. 26, at the Mirage Banquet Center on 18 Mile and Garfield in Clinton Township. For more information, call the Notre Dame alumni office at 313-371-6610.

Raptors make big donation

Parcells Middle School's Raptors, a sixth-grade service team, has been working to support less fortunate community members during October.

Students painted pumpkins donated by Nino Salvaggio's Market to decorate rooms at Bon Secours Hospital. They also donated candy to youngsters at Children's Hospital in Detroit.

"Catering to Families"

The Stickford Files

Boy, am I glad election season is over. And no, it's not because candidates I support lost. Actually, some people I voted for won, and some people I voted for lost. It usually goes that way when I vote.

And it's not because of the Republican landslide. I remember feeling the same way two years ago when the Democrats did well at the polls.

No, it has nothing to do with who won or lost, rather it has to do with those damn commercials. They were everywhere on TV in the final weeks before the election. And they were annoying, they were insulting and they were unescapable.

Unless a person watched nothing but HBO, Showtime and the Disney Channel, they were bombarded with commercials accusing candidates of all sexes, races and political beliefs of being everything but cannibals, and for all I know I missed that one.

It was the same in '92 and in 1988. The commercials are mean. They present a view of the world that's so bleak and depressing that voting seems almost a pointless exercise in sending the most unqualified and evil rascals (this is a family newspaper) to Lansing/Washington, so why bother at all.

My teachers taught me that elections are the ultimate expression of the will of the people, a truly noble exercise in which people of good and true got together and debated the great issues of our time in a civilized manner.

James M. Stickford

What I've seen lately indicates to me that elections are about raising money for one candidate to trash the record, character and reputation of the other. Obscure votes cast 20 years ago become evidence that one candidate will tax and spend us to death, or cut off such vital services that we will all starve on the streets.

I didn't see a lot of candidates saying this is what I believe, and this is what the other candidate believes; it's up to you the voter to choose among us. We often heard what people were against, but very seldom what they were for.

My greatest fear is that the election process, which has been conducted in such a negative way for such a long time, can't help but sour voters on the whole thing. Maybe I worry because I am too young to remember the old days and what they were like. But I truly believe that the negative trend in elections is a bad one.

Everyone I spoke to shared my relief that the elections were over, so I know I am not alone in this thinking. And that's dangerous. It's always dangerous when too many people agree with me.

What scares me the most is that everything I read in the papers and hear on the news indicates that candidates go negative because negative works. That lays the blame at the feet of the voters, perhaps where it should be.

But in this day and age of media glut and factoid news, I feel the public is not being served by the kind of superficial coverage given to elections by the major media outlets.

I can't count the number of times people have come up to me and asked an opinion because I, as a reporter, would be able to give a more accurate picture of a candidate than the questioner has seen from the candidate's own TV ads.

I truly feel that people are looking for reasons to vote for a candidate, as opposed to voting against the candidate's opponents. When a candidate can't promote himself without tearing down his opponent, then we're all in trouble.

I don't know what the answer is. All I know is that I'm dreading 1996. It's a presidential year, and the campaigns last a lot longer, and who needs 10 months of what we've just had for the past month. Not me.

Forget umbrella, realign parties

The elections are old news now — but the ensuing silence is blessed. The various candidates are all relaxing somewhere in the Caribbean.

May they get lost on their way back.

I have to admit that, so far, I haven't stayed awake at night worrying about increased Republican influence in Washington. But let's be clear that it wasn't my idea to send them there.

I'm still trying to figure out how they can rationalize a call for lower taxes and smaller government with (they said this, not I) building prisons all over the country like Holiday Inns.

So long as everyone continues in a state of denial about the real financial ills in this country, don't look for any improvement under a different party. The biggest disappointment in this election was the failure on all sides to step up to the truth about Social Security, which is headed for collapse if we "stay the course."

Every single candidate knows that in order to permanently repair our fiscal mess, we have to control subsidies — to a whole array of interests, including you and me. But not one, including the president, would say so. Instead they bashed welfare, a much smaller piece of the pie.

So what else is new? Enough of that, however. Some good things came out of the campaign, among them, improved media coverage.

There was far more space devoted to minor party candidates, both in the papers and on television. The televised five-way senatorial debate wasn't the station's idea, of course; it was forced on the station by a court order. The so-called debate was chaotic — but so were the two-way debates televised earlier. That's the fault of the moderator. What's important is that voters realize that some widely divergent viewpoints exist.

Probably the biggest surprise came when both the Chronicle and the Free Press endorsed the very Republican they'd loved to hate for four years. It didn't sit well among readers, who apparently want both predictability and orthodoxy from their papers. Chronicle readers reportedly marched into the office and canceled their subscriptions.

That's just one more symptom of why we lack real discussion in the public arena. The demand for orthodoxy squelches any possibility of creativity.

Did you know that, back in 1944, liberal Democrat Franklin Roosevelt and liberal Republican Wendell Willkie met several times with an eye to starting a new liberal party? The idea was to realign parties so that one would be clearly liberal and one clearly conservative, instead of the umbrella that both parties use to include both views.

It didn't happen then — but not because it wasn't a good idea. Rather, Willkie died suddenly, and Roosevelt's health deteriorated.

But it might be happening now, in a slower and messier form. How much longer can the Republicans make room for both a Mitt Romney and an Olie North, a Jack Kemp and a Pat Robertson? Democrats are, to put it mildly, in near-total disarray, while out there on the horizon is Ross Perot.

But even if the old parties dissolve and new ones form, they probably wouldn't resemble anything Roosevelt and Willkie would have imagined. Just as the Roosevelt years shifted the whole political spectrum to the left, the Reagan administration shifted it to the right. If you liked Ike and Bill Milliken, and you never changed your views, you were a conservative then, but a liberal now. Get used to it.

In election issues, the illegal nanny reared her head again — though not in Michigan. Nannies from Central America seem to be a coastal phenomenon. Are we out of it, or what? The nanny thing reveals a schizophrenia in the classes wealthy enough to hire one. Hiring an illegal, or failing to pay taxes on a citizen, is enough to sink your political ship. But no-no or not, everybody does it, while tsk-tsking at the ones who get caught.

An old friend has worked in the refugee resettlement field on the West Coast for years. Some time ago, he was interviewed on TV, decrying the abuses refugees are subjected to as domestic workers. The host shook his head in dismay; the other guests on the show were simply shocked.

But when the cameras were turned off, they converged on Greg, wanting to know how they, too, could find a refugee to hire on the cheap.

Sigh. Finally, just when I thought nice guys were finishing last — in the person of poor Howard Wolpe — a nice guy won. The folks in St. Clair Shores and points north had the good sense to oust loudmouth state Sen. Gil DiNello and sign on with mild-mannered consumer advocate Ken DeBeaussaert.

That did this old pundit's heart good. My belief in the feasibility of governing by consensus and finding the common ground through fruitful discussion had been stretched pretty thin. That outcome went a little way toward putting things right.

Geepee tepee

It was voting day at Trombly school in the Park and there out on the playground was something that may not have been seen since the Huron, Ottawa, Potawatomi and Miami Indians used to roam these parts in the 1700s: a 15-foot-high tepee.

Tidying up inside was Toby Benetti, an environmental scientist who invited me in and explained his mission: to remind Trombly students, teachers and parents of the fact that we are all connected with nature.

A slim and slow-moving gent with steel-rimmed glasses, Toby was asked to conduct a two-day seminar when Trombly teacher Mary Hooper learned of the Earth Circles program that he and partner McCann Thompson offer for elementary schools, using the tepee as a classroom. The Trombly PTO paid their fee.

I am impressed when he says he's been living in the tepee since Monday and will stay right through Wednesday afternoon before packing the 300-pound Lakota lodge on his VW Rabbit and returning to his family in Lake Orion.

Why does he do it? "Environment is my passion," Toby says. "We're here for such a short time and the kids need support to plug them into an awareness that we can all be part of the solution, not just part of the problem."

Later, Trombly principal Jean Rusing tells FYI that the students all loved their classes' hourlong sessions on tepee-cology. A group of 26 parents even stayed quite late one night, talking about environmental matters around the campfire in an informal meeting Toby called "a magical moment."

"I was sorry to see it go," Jean said. "We hope we can do it again sometime."

That's got my vote.

Speedi winner

An hour after I dropped off some mail at her desk at Christ Church, parish secretary Barb Anderson called to tell me, "It pays to read the Grosse Pointe News."

Barb was just informed she was one of the two winners of the paper's Happy Howling Halloween contest of a few weeks back. For finding the lines of a poem sprinkled throughout the classified ads and taping them together, she was to receive a $50 gift certificate from Speedi Photo on Mack.

What was she going to do with it?

"That's easy. We just had a new grandchild and we'll be needing all sorts of picture frames," said a gleeful Barb.

In the pink

For all the talk of Grosse Pointe being the Land of Pink & Green, I was having trouble

Sunday coming up with many things hereabouts that sport our traditional color combination.

Close to home, of course, there are this paper's vending boxes, new this year and spotted around the Pointes. And I recall the world wall map in the second floor editorial offices has a pink Canada and a green United States.

Across Kercheval, the outdoor trash containers at Perry Drug feature the community's trademark hues. And the menus at the Woods' bustling Mack Avenue Diner are printed on pink and green paper, while those at Clairpointe in the City are pink with green lettering.

Right there I drew a blank, and was still scratching my head around dinnertime when Doc, the lady I'm married to, asked if I'd like some fried green tomatoes fresh from our garden.

"Put some of those pink tomatoes from the refrigerator in with them and you're on," I replied. With a sprinkling of good peccarino cheese from R. Hirt Jr.'s at Eastern Market, the results were definitely upscale. And thus was born another Pointe tradition, at least at our house: fried pink & green tomatoes.

From G.P. to TV

"I was watching the 'Ellen' show on Channel 7 (last) Wednesday night when suddenly there was Matt Letscher, playing Ellen's brother," said the Farms' Polly Ledyard.

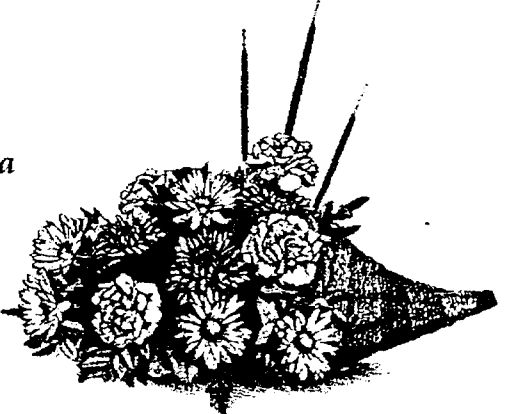

Matt graduated from South High in '88, says the sharp-eyed Polly, who recalls that he later switched from engineering to drama at U-M.

It looks like he's engineered a way to tell the folks back home that his acting career is on the move.

If you have a news tip or something pink & green that I've missed, call FYI at 822-4091.

Regulate political signs

To the Editor:

In the aftermath of yesterday's election, we will be only too happy to put the campaigning behind us. That would include the removal of signage throughout our neighborhood.

I would propose to the mayors and councils of the Pointes that an ordinance be passed requiring a permit to post signs (accompanied by a fee kept in escrow, pending return upon removal). For each day that campaign signs remain after an election, that candidate will forfeit a portion of the funds held in escrow. If the candidate's committee has not removed signs after one week's time, the municipality would be free to remove them and keep all monies held in escrow.

It appears to me that this is a win, win, win situation. It would clean up our neighborhood, responsible candidates could retain funds to pay campaign debts, and the cities have a new source of potential revenue.

Since the majority of candidates come from the incumbency, this ordinance could be a way for candidates to police themselves. It could also mean that we'll never see it happen. Officials, we would love to hear from you.

Lake needs protection

To the Editor:

I think the problem about the lake is serious. I was supposed to go to sailing camp, but the class was canceled on account of the pollution. In the docks of Lakeshore park (Woods Park) few boats were out on the weekends. I saw many dead ducks, too. I am glad I did not go to camp, but I hope I can go next summer.

I think the federal government should not be held responsible but should pay to repair the sewers and expand them. They are old and not extensive enough, but Oakland County lacks the funds to rebuild the sewers alone.

I hope someone-anyone will do something soon.

North night game was fun

To the Editor:

On Friday night, Oct. 14, I was one of nearly 2,000 people in attendance at Grosse Pointe North High School football game.

I had the pleasure of enjoying a night out with my family, not to mention an excellent high school football game between North and Roseville High School.

The game was played under portable lights, a first-ever at the high school. The student body participation was great, and it was nice to see the bleachers packed to capacity.

All in all, the evening was a great success.

Haunted house a tragedy

To the Editor:

I'm a resident of Grosse Pointe Park who works as a security guard at the Gear and Axle plant in Detroit. I've lived here for almost a year now with my wife, son (6), and daughter (4). Grosse Pointe Park is a nice community full of nice people who obviously think and feel the same way and who clearly intend to keep it that way.

That's why I'm writing this letter. It's about "Halloween in the Park," a nice, publicly sponsored event at Windmill Park, and in particular something not so nice - the holocaustically gory display euphemistically labeled, "The Haunted House."

Having had general reservations about entering in the first place, I now wish I had followed my instinct to scout out this house of horrors before allowing my wife and children to enter unaware. That would have been the right thing to do. Now I'm sorry that I did not. I guess I just assumed that if all these decent people (and there were scores of them) and their children (including a babe-in-arms) were standing in line to see this, then it couldn't be all that bad.

Boy, was I ever wrong! After being herded through this dark maze, I was left with this distinct sense of violation, as if an unwitting victim who had sheepishly allowed himself and his family to be led to some sort of symbolic slaughter.

If this analogy seems a bit extreme to you, then follow these brief descriptions of what we saw, imagine how you would have felt and judge for yourself. And remember: You and I are paying for this.

Among other things (witch, skeleton, decomposed corpse, etc.), "The Haunted House" featured:

- A guy sitting in a chair, gouging out his own guts with a stick and offering his entrails to a young passerby.

- A bloodied girl bound to a showerhead, being tortured.

- A crazed guy running around with a bloody (real) meat cleaver with a nine-inch blade.

- Another person (gender unclear) bound to another showerhead, being flogged by a dark figure with a whip.

- Severed heads on a table on platters. One of the heads was still alive, apparently - and your reward for enduring all this was a bag of potato chips. (Something to eat in remembrance of the ordeal?)

In a symbolic sense, the thing most disturbing to me is that the scene of all this simulated pandemonium was the girl's locker room! For those of you who don't have a daughter, this might be a little hard to grasp.

However, I am sure that this so called "Haunted House" was not what I call "fun" (Ted Bundy, Jeffrey Dahmer, Charles Manson and Richard Ramirez will disagree strongly); that the Grosse Pointe community is a less-nice place because of it; that I do not consent to public money being spent on it; that copies of this open letter will be circulated as extensively as possible; and that I will not (nor will any member of my family) be attending "The Haunted House" next year, except to pass out copies of this letter - of these things I am certain. You have my personal guarantee.

More sports for boys needed

To the Editor:

I think there should be more boys teams at the middle schools. At Parcels we only have girls basketball teams.

I think it's important for boys to have as much fun as girls. All Parcels has is clubs. Do you think boys that like soccer, hockey, basketball, baseball, football and like playing in mud and getting dirty are going to join a garden club?

I personally think that boys need intramural sports so we can meet and compete with Pierce and Brownell. Years ago they competed against each other.

I propose that they should make a hockey team, soccer team, and a basketball team for boys and for girls. It would be more fun for all.

Among other recommendations, Rickel suggested encouraging a national temporary employment firm to locate in the area to consider public or private funding of leisure pursuits, such as a municipal golf course.

Karen Kendrick-Hands presented the Public Facilities and Service task force findings on how to improve the quality of life in the Pointes and Harper Woods as it relates to facilities, services and environmental issues.

She suggested developing a plan to protect and maintain our infrastructure. Kendrick-Hands also recommended establishing a local/regional transit system to reduce air pollution, promoting equipment sharing among the six communities to reduce costs and to encourage recycling and composting yard waste.

"Our fate is not independent of our neighbors," she said, in reference to the lake's problems, much of which came from Macomb County.

The Public Safety task force report, presented by Fred Olds, commended the six public safety departments for a high level of service.

"Without safety, everything we are striving to meet in this study would be meaningless," Olds said.

He did suggest more community education to deal with the problems of drugs and family abuse. He also suggested establishing a fact-finding group to identify common needs and coordinate employee benefits packages.

Olds also mentioned the possibility of establishing a district court (Harper Woods already uses this system). The five Grosse Pointes and Eastpointe are the only communities in the state with municipal courts.

"This report identifies topics that can be considered for further study or enhancement or, perhaps, additional coordination," Olds said. "However, it's basically an exercise in polishing what we believe to be a community jewel."
John Bruce, chairman of the Leisure and Culture task force, suggested in his committee's presentation that there be more coordination and less duplication.

"Our community has high use of community programs," he said. "But we have less physical space than the national standards."

The task force recommended improving access to all facilities, such as the library and the "information superhighway."

Also suggested were more projects with public and private partnerships.

Maintaining our older homes and our history is one of the aims of the Beautification and Preservation task force, whose findings were presented by Jim Clarke.

"We have a major asset," he said. "It's something we need to preserve."

He suggested designating more buildings and neighborhoods as historic sites and districts, promoting adaptive reuse of some of the older and larger homes; and cooperatives to expand buying power when renovating the older structures.

Clarke also recommended maintaining our commercial districts and he commended Grosse Pointe Park for its efforts on this front.

"If you do not think your commercial strip is important, look at Gratiot, Michigan Ave-due or other streets in Detroit," he said.

Kathy Clark and Elaine Yates presented the Human Services task force findings to ensure that residents have access to emergency and basic health care services.

They recommended expanding some of the 63 different programs offered by churches and the schools in our area as well as establishing more senior housing to keep seniors from moving out of the six communities.

The Community task force findings, presented by Ann Hoag, examined the changing demographics in the five Pointes and Harper Woods.

She recommended a doctrine of fairness which calls for equal education, employment, housing and health care.

The task force report promoted more racial and ethnic diversity as well as multi-culturalism.

Robert Keller, president of Detroit Renaissance and a resident of the Farms, delivered the keynote address, stressing creativity, collaboration and commitment.

"This is not the end but the beginning," he said. "We need to look to the future and redefine our community. The boundaries that have isolated this community can no longer exist."

Engler's nemesis — MEA retains its clout

By Dave Conklin
Capitol News Bureau
Lansing — The Michigan Education Association, the state's largest teachers union and one group that has consistently opposed most of Gov. Engler's education reforms, has once again beaten the odds and will influence 56 of 110 votes in the state House next year.

HIV virus or another sexually transmitted disease. The state was awarded the funds from the Local Law Enforcement Assistance program for fiscal year 1994. The money will be used to promote usage of the new measure by local units of government.

Prosecutors just say 'No'

The takeover started last August when MEA-backed Republican candidate Gerald Law defeated incumbent GOP state Rep. Jerry Vorva in a primary election challenge.

What does this mean for a second Engler term? Some political pundits believe this could kill or severely cripple any educational reforms unless they have the support of the MEA.

It also means any attempts to address the constitutionality of charter schools next year could be derailed.

Lansing — During last week's meeting of the state Senate Family Law, Mental Health and Corrections Committee, the lobbying group representing the state's prosecutors said it will oppose Senate bills 710-713.

If approved, these measures would encourage judges to send non-violent criminals to local jails rather than to state correctional facilities. Prosecutors cite many issues in their opposition, including concern that the state once again is creating mandates that will hamper the safety of local communities.

Woods public safety to get new computer

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer
Who among us can say what the cost of progress is? Well, for the Grosse Pointe Woods Public Safety Department, it's $14,650 — the price of a modern computer system to replace one that dates back to the early 1980s.

The Grosse Pointe Woods City Council last week approved spending that amount to purchase a new AT&T/NCR 3430 computer for the public safety department. Public safety chief Jack Patterson said the department is in dire need of a modern and up-to-date computer system for the handling and processing of records.

"We need it because our current system is outdated in terms of speed and capacity," Patterson said. "We have an AT&T 300B that we got about 12 years ago, and it was old technology when we got it. Our record-keeping requirements are greater now than they were 12 years ago, and the current system just isn't keeping up with demand."

Patterson said the department has a lot of records, in its building enforcement section as well as its police and fire sections. Because the department is computerized, a new system shouldn't affect operations, said Patterson.

"The cost of training staff on the new system is included in the price of the contract," Paterson said. "The new system can be used for a lot of things, and we expect the order to go out sometime this week. We hope to get the computer in the next couple of weeks."

Once the department gets the new computers, records must be electronically transferred from the old system to the new system. Patterson said that the department will keep its old video display terminals, because they are compatible with the new system.

It's just a matter of having them networked into the new system, Patterson said. The department will also stay with its current printers.

When asked about trading in the old computer, Patterson said that the department had considered that, but discovered that the old system has no trade-in value.

"We'll turn the old computer over to city hall," said Patterson. "They can store it or find someone who can use it. That was one of the problems with the system, it was so old that no one used it anymore. Keeping up with technology isn't easy."

Coming or going, the Studebaker is still a classic

This seems like a good time of year to think about next summer and the good weather should be well in place for the Eyes on Classic Design show at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House June 18, Father's Day.

The featured marque next year will be Studebaker, according to John Bissa, who coordinates the event which benefits the Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology and its research into vision disorders.

"Reaction has been very enthusiastic," said Bissa, noting that the post-war cars that people remember seem to be of more interest to show visitors than the more classic nameplates.

We agreed. Many people when recalling the cars of their childhood and youth remember Studebaker. Even if their family did not own one, everybody knew someone who did and the cars were so distinctive that they have come to be a leading image of Detroit's "Golden Age" — even though Studebaker was headquartered in South Bend, Ind., and most of its cars were not built in Detroit.

The revolutionary '47 Studebaker ("couldn't tell if it was coming or going," comedians claimed) was the first post-World War II design and it caused a sensation, with its fenders integral with the body and squared-off front and rear decks.

This car, like the bullet-nosed Studebakers of '50 and '51 and the classic '53 and later coupes, Speedsters and Hawks, were designed by Raymond Loewy's innovative team, which included Gordon Buehrig, Virgil Exner, Bob Bourke and Bob Koto.

That period from the end of World War II until the end of Studebaker (1963 for U.S. production, 1966 in Canada) included the company's golden age of high production and profits.

The magnificent Studebaker mansion in South Bend, which now houses an elegant restaurant, was not built with automotive money. It was built before the company got into making cars, when it was a major producer of horsedrawn wagons.

Autos

By Richard Wright

Started by Henry and Clement Studebaker in 1852, the company began as a blacksmith shop, building a few wagons. After brother John (who had made a fortune building wheelbarrows for the gold rush miners in California) joined the firm, it grew into the largest producer of horsedrawn vehicles in the world (rivaled by William Durant's carriage works in Flint; Durant later founded General Motors).

Studebaker began building electric cars in 1902 (Thomas Edison bought one), then got into the gasoline car business in 1904. Over the years, in addition to building Studebaker cars, it built the Erskine from 1927-30, a smaller car named after the firm's president, Albert Erskine, and the Rockne in 1932-33, named for Notre Dame football coach Knute Rockne and built in Detroit.

Studebaker was among the biggest auto producers until the stock market crash in 1929. The firm went into receivership in 1933, but Paul Hoffman and Harold Vance took over the company from Erskine and guided it through the Depression.

During the '30s, Studebaker had three car series, the Dictator, Commander and President. By 1938, however, Adolph Hitler and Benito Mussolini had given dictators a bad name and Studebaker dropped the Dictator, to be replaced by the Champion.

When auto production resumed after World War II, Studebaker was the first maker — in 1947 — to introduce a car with postwar design. With that new design and the succeeding bullet-nosed models, the company enjoyed record sales and profits. Studebaker's Starlight Coupe, with the wraparound four-section rear window, was a sensation then and is still a favorite of collectors.

But when the seller's market ended in the early '50s, profits eroded. By 1953, when the classic Loewy coupe was introduced, Studebaker was in the red.

All the independent makers were in trouble. Nash and Hudson merged to create American Motors and Studebaker and Packard merged. Packard died, but Studebaker came out with the Lark, the Gran Turismo Hawk and the Avanti. But the die was cast. Production in South Bend ceased in 1963 and in Canada in 1966.

Enthusiasts have kept the Studebaker alive and the Avanti continued to be built by a couple of independent companies until two years ago.

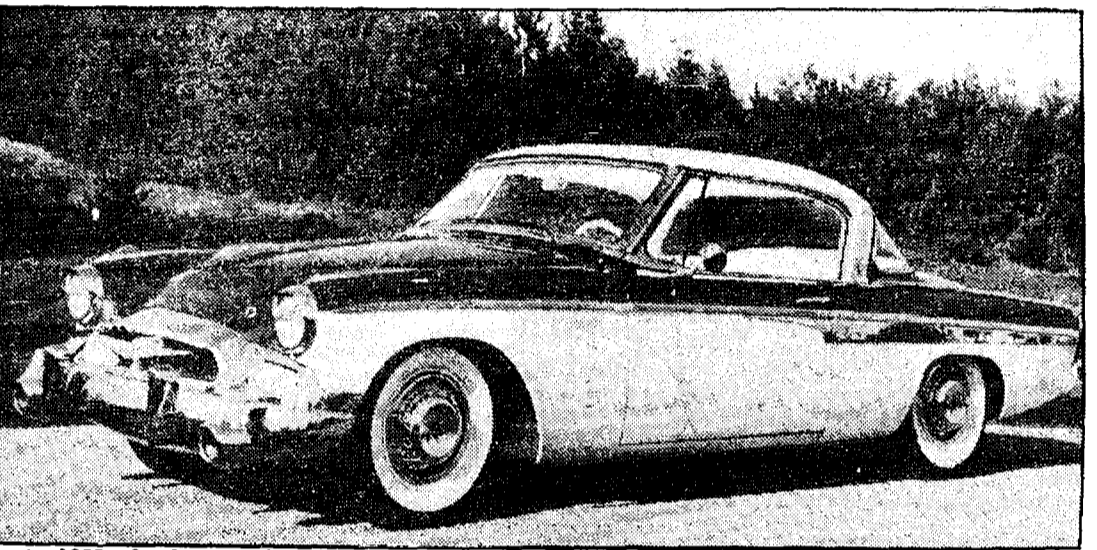

One of the most popular Studebakers was the 1950-51 Land Cruiser, an unusual looking car, a period piece which makes little sense to younger show visitors, but is immediately recognizable to anyone who came of automotive age in the '50s or earlier.

The resolutely weird 1950 Studebaker Land Cruiser with bullet nose and rear suicide doors was a big seller.

The Starlight Coupe version of the '51 Studebaker Champion Deluxe is a favorite of collectors.

By 1955, the beautiful Raymond Loewy coupe had evolved into this chrome-laden but still magnificent Studebaker President Speedster.

Salvation Army deploys across a wide front

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

Lew Rockwell of Grosse Pointe Shores started volunteering for the Salvation Army about 30 years ago. He tagged along with a friend who was helping senior citizens at the organization's Harbor Light Center.

Since the 1960s, Rockwell has worked on a variety of Salvation Army programs — from dishing out food for Christmas dinners to developing programs for unwed mothers to assisting with fundraisers. Now he is involved with policy-making. He's former chairman of the organization's advisory board for metropolitan Detroit and current co-chairman of the development committee.

"It's just the greatest charity organization in the world," Rockwell said. "It helps people of all status levels."

The Salvation Army is an international religious and human service organization dedicated to bettering the lives of people in need. It serves about three million people annually in 106 countries.

Capt. Barry Swanson, general secretary of the Eastern Michigan division, said the best description of the organization he ever heard came from former Gen. Eva Burrows: "The Salvation Army is a spiritual force with an acute social conscience."

The Salvation Army was founded in London in 1865 by William Booth, a Methodist minister. Booth took an open-air ministry to the people of the east end of London, Swanson said.

"He soon realized the people needed more than his spiritual message. They needed food. Clothing. Jobs," he said.

The concept was successful, Swanson said, because it was right for the times. As people immigrated to other parts of the world, they took the Salvation Army with them.

"The military structure worked. It facilitated growth," he said. "The Salvation Army came to the United States in 1880, first to Philadelphia. Today the national organization is divided into four territories, then into divisions and communities. We're part of the Eastern Michigan Division."

Local need determines the focus of each community center. Detroit, for instance, has three residential treatment centers for drug and alcohol rehabilitation.

Detroit also has a mobile unit that delivers food on a regular route seven days a week, 365 days a year. "We feed about 800 people every day," Swanson said.

The Salvation Army's message and work is the evangelical arm of the universal Christian church, he said, so a religious program is available — but not required — for participants in other programs.

Kurt Tech of Grosse Pointe Shores is a member of the metropolitan Detroit advisory board and has been a Salvation Army volunteer for the last 10 years.

"The Salvation Army doesn't just provide temporary meals and shelter — although they do that too. They take individuals who are down and make them whole again," Tech said.

Besides the drug and alcohol rehabilitation programs, the metropolitan Detroit area army provides emergency services during disasters like fires and the crash of Flight 255; it provides food, clothing, transitional shelter, educational and youth programs.

Tech, a retired engineer/businessman, is proud of the board's recent fundraising efforts.

"We raised $4.75 million to refurbish the new Eastern Michigan headquarters in Southfield and to convert an older building on Bagley in Detroit," he said. The Bagley outpost provides transitional housing, a soup kitchen and clothes closet for hungry and homeless people, a summer day camp for children and several educational and religious programs.

"The dedication (of volunteers) is something to experience," Tech said. "This is really caring; really giving. It's the most rewarding activity I've been involved in in my entire life."

"Despite the uniforms, we are keeping up with the times," Swanson said. "We have modern equipment; computers; growing sophistication; we network. Nobody does what we do — others may do drug rehab, or food, or shelter, or youth programs. We do it all."

Swanson would like people to know that the army cares about the total needs of people.

"There is a stereotype — that the Salvation Army is only for people who are down-and-out. That's only part of what we are. Our mission is to meet the total needs of people and to do it proactively and creatively," he said.

Those who want to help the Salvation Army's holiday assistance programs have a variety of choices. Direct mail programs and hundreds of red kettles and their bell-ringing attendants raise about $2 million during the holidays each year, but there are many opportunities for assisting the work of the Salvation Army at Christmas time.

• Volunteers are needed to serve Thanksgiving dinners on Nov. 20, 23 and 24, at locations in Detroit and Mount Clemens.

• Between now and Christmas, volunteers are needed to wrap gifts for prison inmates; deliver gifts to shut-ins and senior citizens; type; pick up food and toy donations from schools and businesses; and serve Christmas dinners in Detroit and Royal Oak.

• Groups of volunteers are needed to fold, stuff, seal and sort hundreds of thank-you letters.

• Volunteers who speak Arabic are always needed to help clients with assistance applications. People are always needed to visit nursing homes, receive donations and write receipts, sort and pack food, help in the office and to pack and deliver food baskets.

• And — as always — volunteer bell ringers are needed to staff the familiar Salvation Army Christmas kettles at locations throughout the metropolitan Detroit area.

To volunteer, call (810) 443-5516 or (810) 443-5500.

Psychiatrist offers program on overcoming holiday blues

On the surface, the holiday season seems to be a festive time. But for many people, the glitter of the season reflects sadness and depression. Holiday depression may rise from the void left by lost or distant loved ones or from unrealistic expectations. Norman Rockwell, Ozzie and Harriett, Martha Stewart and others have left impressions of the perfect home and holidays, sometimes causing us to expect more of our families and ourselves than is realistic. The feelings of "not measuring up" take hold and depression sets in.

On Tuesday, Nov. 22, Dr. Dan G. Guyer, psychiatrist, will explore the roots of holiday depression in a community program at Henry Ford Cottage Hospital.

"How to overcome holiday depression" will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. in the lower level boardrooms of the hospital at 159 Kercheval in Grosse Pointe Farms. Parking tickets will be validated.

The program is free, but reservations are requested. Call 884-8600, ext. 2455.

Leukemia support group for families

A support group for families touched by leukemia, lymphoma, multiple myeloma and Hodgkin's disease meets the fourth Thursday of each month from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at First English Evangelical Lutheran Church, 800 Vernier in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Because of the Thanksgiving holiday, the next meeting will be Thursday, Nov. 17. For more information, call the Leukemia Society at (810) 778-6800.

"HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION"
BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD ♠♥♦♣

The common denominator of all players of our game is that sometime in their lives they were somewhat bungling beginners. Many of course pretend never to have been, but one can't eradicate that bit of background. Two who recently were, and readily admit it, are Jeffrey and Joy Balsar of the lovely country town of Northville. Joy will tell you with a bit of humility and refreshing frankness, "We're both relatively new players. Our participation spans just the past decade, even though my mother, Helen Cunningham, was one of Fort Wayne's early life masters."

The Balsars move to our suburban community 10 years ago gave them a wonderful entree to many new bridge friends. With their grown sons' adventuresome travels to such faraway places as New Zealand and the likes, Joy found bridge fulfilling and unusually consuming as her interests went beyond play. Of course, first came her life master rating and then a commitment to direct, which required extensive training. Today she directs two of the west side's most popular duplicate games on Tuesday and Wednesday at noon at The Plymouth Cultural Center. Next was her election to the Michigan Bridge Association board. When the president's mantle of that unit was passed to her this year, Joy concluded her capacity for involvement had been reached. Jeff, with a wry smile, will only say, "Time will tell."

Both Balsars love the confrontation of defending. Joy says, "It's especially gratifying when an opponent oversteps the limit of the 13 cards they have been dealt. If you and your partner are in sync, the damage can be extreme." Today's escapade comes from a board a match event Joy played in last year at a Florida regional.

North's double was daring, but she obviously had confidence in Joy's play. North's low heart lead was mediumistic and resulted in the first three defensive winners ending in South's hand. Joy was careful to next take off both of her minor suit aces before leading her fourth heart which partner ruffed with her spade king. After six tricks, the defenders had six winners and still one to go. At trick (7), North played her diamond queen won by West king, but there was no way declarer could get to dummy to successfully finesse Joy's spade queen. The defense ended with seven for a plus 500 top board. As you can see, N/S had no chance of matching that score as declarer. Effective defense often generates its best results against partials and here is a Movietone News example.

played the same trick with their best friends and with others and before long a group of the duped embarks on a detective search to determine who is the common link between them all. The play moves hilariously and seamlessly forward to an ending that you don't expect, but was inevitable nonetheless. It's not easy to explain the weight of the sadness this play leaves you with, nor is it easy to put words to the thoughts it stirs up.

What develops as the action is played out, is a strange bond between Ouisa and Paul, a bond that, despite Ouisa's best intentions, is brutally cut, and she alone is left to wonder what it all meant.

The acting by Lehfeldt and Kennerly is central to the play. Both turn in finely textured performances, although one might wish Lehfeldt were a little less shrill at times. Kennerly has been biding his time by giving good performances in featured and supporting roles. He uses this role to shine, finally.

The supporting and minor roles are also well realized;

Jarry J. Campbell and Greg Trzaskoma particularly.

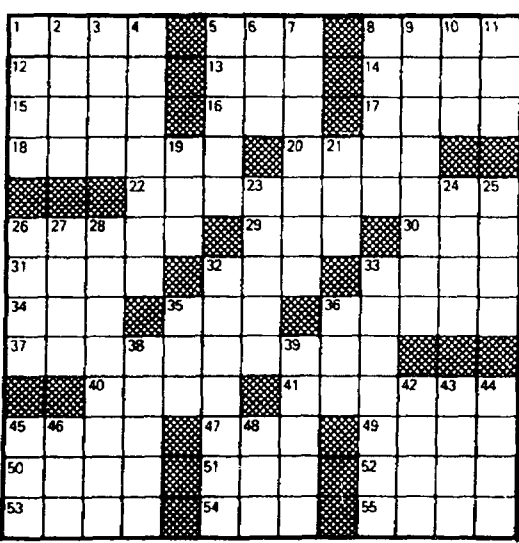

Director Schmitt keeps the story moving — the play runs about 90 minutes and there is no intermission — while you wait on the edge of your seat for the next bizarre turn of events. Don't miss this one. You'll find yourself talking about it at the next cocktail party. "Six Degrees of Separation" runs in rotating repertory through Feb. 3. Call (313) 577-2972.

Abbey gets the warts and all treatment

Epitaph for a Desert Anarchist: The Life and Legend of Edward Abbey

By James Bishop Jr.
Atheneum. 254 pages. $22
As James Bishop Jr., a writer and teacher from Arizona, explains in his illuminating introduction which opens his "Epitaph for a Desert Anarchist," this excellent book "is neither a definitive biography nor an academic study of Abbey's work. It is my attempt to record the impact of his work on our times and on his admirers who, like him, like all of us, are struggling to exist in a shrinking natural world."

By Elizabeth P. Walker

Abbey (1927-1989) "was one of the fortunate ones, because before he was 20 years old, he found his Eden in the American Southwest. There he proceeded to make the arid landscape of the Colorado plateau his special amphitheater, a bizarre and beautiful hundred-million-acre expanse of magic and strength the size of New York and New England; prehistoric home to cactuses, snakes, scorpions and vultures; cut by rivers, countless canyons, and pocked by the necks of prehistoric volcanoes standing like guardians on desert floors."

Bishop makes very clear "just who was this man, Abbey, who intrigued and frustrated scholars, critics, and devotees of his writing; and why does the mention of his name still elicit so many contradictory feelings? Depending upon one's companions, he's either revered as the Thoreau of the West who fought the modern megamachine that is insulting the great Southwest with bombing ranges, foul power plants, and ugly urban blooms; or he is despised as a xenophobic environmentalist."

Abbey's fierce and protective passion for the preservation of the natural wondrous, both flora and fauna, of America's magnificent Southwest is "fused with a clear, silky writing style" which "helped to turn him into a legendary figure to his followers, who came to regard him as a prophet and a visionary. Truth was the hero in his writings" and "perhaps most of all, Abbey is remembered for the way he saw the land. To him the despoliation of the great Southwest, the very centerpiece of the American Dream, was not just a heinous crime against nature, it also threatened America's spiritual resources and its freedom."

In his more than 20 books, from "Jonathan Troy," his first published book in 1954, to "A Voice Crying in the Wilderness: Notes from a Secret Journal" which saw print the year of his death, Abbey never failed to reveal his love of the wilderness which led him to his true home, the Great American Desert.

He fought constantly and furiously against the creeping encroachments of modern civilization whose machines and building projects threatened, even to this day, to be the doom of a pristine Southwest, unspoiled land quickly being sullied and consumed by "machines and technology" which Abbey viewed "as monsters from another world, monstrosities bent on destroying the very soul of the living land."

Just one example out of many: The Glen Canyon Dam which was erected by the United States government 30 years ago to control the awesome power of the Colorado River for the benefit of ranchers in Colorado, Arizona, and California, has been discovered to be biologically unhealthy. "This shocking discovery," Bishop said, "has brought hordes of experts to study the patient, and they all have come up with the same diagnosis: A man-made illness in the form of erosion is spreading in the canyon, and it is doing more than destroying age-old archaeological sites." This disaster, among many others, has occurred in spite of Abbey's ardent crusade to save the Grand Canyon country.

Abbey, therefore, has been proven time and time again to be a man of vision. Bishop points out that "years before the biological concept of deep ecology entered the mainstream," here he was, "declaring where he stood: All creatures have equal rights, so if diversity is to be preserved, the anthropocentric, or man-centered, order of things must shift to a more biocentric view."

Quick, fancy, chocolate: What more do you want?

Are you stumped for a quick and easy dessert recipe for entertaining or holiday parties? Here are a few elegant-looking, but easy-to-make recipes, featuring Hershey's Nuggets.

According to legend, the cocoa tree was the most beautiful tree in the paradise of the Aztecs, and they attributed many virtues to it. It was thought to appease hunger and thirst, give universal knowledge, and cure sickness. In 1502, Christopher Columbus was offered, as a sign of welcome, weapons, fabrics, and sacks of brown cocoa beans, the latter, in Aztec society, served as currency as well as food.

In today's world of mass marketing and transportation we can all enjoy chocolate without owning a cocoa tree. Hershey's Nuggets, a distinctive new thicker product, are available in three flavors, Cookies 'N' Mint, Milk Chocolate, and Milk Chocolate with Almonds. Each works equally well in these recipes. You will find that in using the Hershey Nuggets, the size and shape holds up even when you make "Maximum Brownie cups." The chocolate retains its shape and stays soft, providing an extra special, creamy chocolate surprise in the middle of every brownie.

Maximum Brownie Cups

- 18 Hershey Nuggets
- 1 cup (2 sticks butter or margarine)
- 2 cups sugar
- 2 t vanilla extract
- 4 eggs
- 3/4 cup cocoa or European style cocoa
- 1 3/4 c all-purpose flour
- 1/2 t baking powder
- 1/4 t salt

Heat oven to 350 F. Line 18 muffin cups (2 1/2 inches in diameter) with paper or foil bake cups. Remove wrappers from chocolate pieces.

Place butter in a large, microwave safe bowl. Microwave at high 1 to 1 1/2 minutes or until melted. Stir in sugar and vanilla.

Add eggs, one at a time, beating well with spoon after each addition. Add cocoa; beat until well blended. Add flour, baking powder and salt; beat well.

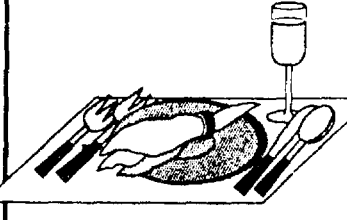

Remove 1 1-1/4 cups batter; set aside. Divide remaining batter evenly into muffin cups. Place one chocolate in center of each cup. (Do not push into batter.) Place slightly rounded tablespoon reserved batter on top of each chocolate.

Bake 18 to 20 minutes or until surface is set. Cool completely in pan on wire rack. Garnish as desired. Makes 18 brownie cups.

Pediatricians give tips to parents for preventing in-home accidents

Your home could be the most dangerous place for your baby. Injuries are the leading cause of death and disability in childhood, and most injuries occur in the home.

"It's important for parents to talk with their pediatrician about ways to prevent falls, poisoning, drowning and fires, which are some of the most common sources of childhood injuries," said Dr. Terence Joiner, a pediatrician with Henry Ford Hospital.

"Children up to 2 or 3 years old require constant supervision," Joiner said. "Within the first year of life, children go from a newborn with no self-care abilities to children who can walk, crawl or scoot. They can gather objects and put them into their mouths and climb into awkward and dangerous situations. The potential for injury is very great."

Parents can take some simple precautions to make their homes safer for kids. The following are some of the most common sources of in-home accidents and advice on how to prevent them:

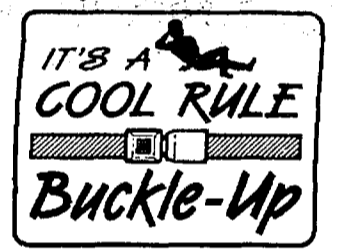

- Household poisonings. Parents need to keep toxic substances, including cleaners and medications, out of reach or out of the home. Some of the most fatal ingestions among young children are acetaminophen (a non-aspirin pain-killer) and iron supplements. Keep one-ounce bottles of syrup of ipecac in the home to use in case of poisoning.

- Falling. Children can fall out of beds, cribs and open windows. They can also fall down stairs. Parents should install window and stairway gates or guards and make sure screens in windows are securely attached.

- Baby walkers. These are very dangerous and are a cause of an increasing number of serious injuries. Children end up falling down stairs or tipping the walkers, often resulting in brain, spinal cord and other serious injuries. The use of baby walkers should be discouraged.

- Unsupervised bathing. This is a major cause of drowning. Young children can easily slip and hit their heads in bathtubs. Babies left alone for a short time can submerge themselves and have trouble recovering if they have difficulty breathing.

- Fires. House fires kill hundreds of children each year, mostly in the winter when parents use space heaters or stoves. Smoke detectors are a must and should be checked monthly. Batteries should be replaced every six months. Families also should have a fire evacuation plan and practice it monthly.

Mobile unit takes breast cancer detection into the community

The Michigan Cancer Foundation's new mobile breast cancer detection center will begin its travels throughout Wayne County in December.

The new unit offers screening mammography, clinical breast exams, breast self-examination instructions and educational materials.

The $300,000 wheelchair-accessible unit — one of only five in Michigan — can accommodate up to 20 patients a day. Its purchase was made possible through the support of Kmart, the Ford Motor Co., MasterCard and several private individuals.

"If we practice just what we know now, we could be much more successful in our treatment of breast cancer," said Dr. Vainutis Vaitkevicius, president of the Michigan Cancer Foundation. The new unit will be available to worksites, community and senior citizens' centers and churches. The goal is to create greater awareness of breast cancer and to take cancer screening to women who might not otherwise participate in preventive programs.

Groups interested in scheduling a visit by the mobile unit should call Debra Riekema at (313) 833-7700.

First Church of Christ, Scientist plans Thanksgiving Day service

The First Church of Christ, Scientist, 282 Chalfonte in Grosse Pointe Farms, will hold a Thanksgiving Day service at 11 a.m. A special lesson-sermon from the Bible and from "Sci-

St. John sponsors support group

A group providing support to adult cancer patients, their families and significant others meets the third Thursday of every month from 5:30 to 7 p.m. at St. John Hospital and Medical Center, 22101 Moross at Mack.

Tom Cruise and Brad Pitt star in "Interview With The Vampire."

Who cares about the answers to questions asked in 'Interview'

By Ronald J. Bernas
Assistant Editor

Eternal life, at least for some vampires, sucks.

That's the message of Anne Rice's existential horror novel, "Interview With The Vampire."

Actors, directors and other movie people have been trying to get this film made for the nearly two decades since the book was first printed. And frankly, the controversy caused by the making of the film is more interesting as a whole than the film itself.

First, Rice very publicly decried the casting of Tom Cruise as her most intriguing creation, Lestat. Then she changed her mind after she saw his performance. Oprah Winfrey walked out of the film after 20 minutes and had to hold a prayer meeting to determine whether she should interview Cruise. She did, and billed it as "The Oprah show that almost wasn't."

"There's an evil in this film," she told Cruise. "I can't promote a film like this." Of course, her saying that only ensured that thousands of curious moviegoers would check it out.)

She's partly right. A large part of the movie glorifies, even eroticizes, the taking of life. If you closed your eyes during most of the killing, the grunts, groans and gasps you hear might make you think you're in another type of film altogether.

Between killings — and there are quite a few murders — there is a lot of talk about the nature of vampires and the value of eternal life.

For vampires like Lestat, eternity is one endless pleasure trip full of new people to kill, new places to see.

For other vampires, like the brooding and sensitive Louis (Brad Pitt), it's just endless.

And Louis is the focus — and the teller — of the story. It begins today in a sleazy room in San Francisco where Louis has been brought by a young interviewer (Christian Slater), a "collector of lives," as he calls himself.

He had seen the pale and interesting-looking Louis in a bar and wanted to get his story. But Louis' story — a 200-year-long tale of love, murder and regret — is more than the interviewer expected.

But it's less than the audience wants.

The story begins in 18th century New Orleans where Louis, a young widower who longs to be released from his life of mourning for his wife and child, meets Lestat in a seedy bar. Lestat, out of loneliness, plies Louis with the pleasures of eternal life — "No pain, no death," he says — and Louis agrees to become eternal.

But the very fact that he has to kill to stay eternal is a problem for Louis. Accepting that killing is in a vampire's nature does not come easy for him.

That sets up the conflict: Lestat loves the hunt and the kill, Louis cannot.

Just when Louis is about to give up on eternity, Lestat gives him a gift — a little girl, Claudia, who Lestat turns into a vampire. Louis stays so he can keep the girl human — well, as human as a vampire can be.

Claudia becomes more of a vampire than Louis ever will be, embracing the killing, yet still repulsed by what she is — a grown woman in a child's body.

Her anger at Lestat for making her boils over and she and Louis kill Lestat and set off on a worldwide search for more of their own kind.

The search ends in France where a colony of vampires led by the sensuous Armand (Antonio Banderas) runs a Gothic theater, where France's elite go to be horrified.

It is there that Louis must face his own demons and accept the darkness, under the loving tutelage of Armand, or be done with it all.

Another irony in Winfrey's reaction to the film is that after the first 20 minutes or so, the script, also by Rice, downplays the gore and concentrates instead on the kind of psychobabble heard ad nauseum on shows like Winfrey's. And it sucks the life out of the film.

The film's biggest surprise is not Cruise's passable performance, it's Pitt's horrible one. He's unbelievable from the opening scene and doesn't get any better. Cruise, who everyone thought would ruin Lestat, is acceptable, although he isn't flamboyant enough. He swaggers through the role in the same way he's done in every film he's ever been in. The only difference is the clothes he wears and the horrible blond 'do he sports.

Kirsten Dunst, as Claudia, is the only tragic character in the film. But after a while, she merely seems shrewish. Banderas, as Armand, is the only one who seems to be having any fun. But his role is small, and comes too late to save the film.

In the end, one is left with one thought: Eternity would be terrible if you had to live it surrounded by these boring, arrogant, tedious, morose bloodsuckers.

As it is, two hours was plenty.

'Six Degrees' connects with devastating insight

By Ronald J. Bernas
Assistant Editor

It's easy to explain what John Guare's "Six Degrees of Separation," which opened last weekend at Wayne State University's Hilberry Theater, is about in a literal sense.

It's about a young black man who conned his way into the lives of several wealthy New Yorkers by saying he was the son of Sidney Poitier.

It's even easy to explain what the title means. It's the theory that between you and anyone else in the world there is a string of only six people — you know someone who knows someone who knows someone, etc.

But it's not so easy to explain what the play is about figuratively, because so much is happening and because the play is not as much about what is said as it is about what is left unsaid.

After two disappointing productions, the Hilberry company, under the direction of Anthony Schmitt, comes through this time with an evening of hilarious, thought-provoking theater.

The play is based on actual events and is told directly to the audience, as someone would tell a story at a cocktail party.

Witty and urbane Ouisa (Lynnae Lehfeldt) and her husband Flan (Michael Hankins) tell the story of Paul (Kevin Kennerly), a young man who infiltrated their home, claiming to be a friend of their children and, incidentally, the son of Sidney Poitier.

lievable as he discusses the link between "Catcher in the Rye" and murderers like Mark David Chapman and John Hinckley. He tells Ouisa and Flan how much their children like them and also promises them roles in the film version of "Cats," which his father is in town to cast.

His ebullience helps Ouisa and Flan close a very important deal, adds spark to their lives and, perhaps most importantly, gives them something to tell their friends at the next cocktail party.

But as it turns out, he's

Music glows despite some low Watt-age

Shakespeare with a Russian accent was clearly the result when Tchaikovsky used the Bard's "The Tempest" as inspiration for an orchestral fantasy.

And maestro Neeme Jarvi, in using this neglected work to open the concerts last weekend, gave full expression to both the drama and the Russian flavor the composer added to it.

Four moods of the play are represented in some of Tchaikovsky's most beautifully descriptive program music.

It opens with the storm followed by episodes of Miranda and Ferdinand's love, Ariel's magical mischief, and finally returning to a peaceful sea. The unique orchestral style was amply rendered to create a vivid and satisfying evocation of Shakespeare's fanciful love story.

The showpiece for the evening was Mendelssohn's animated First Piano Concerto performed by Andre Watts. It was a mixed experience.

In the opening, Watts did not project the fast moving piano solo with a clarity and definition to match the orchestra's echoing of the music. Nor could he always avoid being overpowered by the orchestra, creating an imbalance that detracted from the ingenuous charm of this bright concerto.

As the work progressed, and especially by the second movement, the performance became beautifully balanced and played with grace and feeling. And in the finale, Watts delivered a sparkling treatment matched by Jarvi's perfectly dovetailed accompaniment.

The real surprise and treat of the evening, however, turned out to be another neglected work, Symphony No. 1 by Austrian composer Franz Schmidt.

Influenced primarily by Brahms and Bruckner, he reflects their styles. Yet even in this early work he displays his own distinctive muse.

This first symphony is brighter and more appealing than the music of Bruckner and less passionate than that of Brahms. It is rich in fanfares by the trumpets and pizzicato by the strings and Schmidt's themes develop in a rich, romantic style.

It is just the kind of music in which Jarvi revels to yield a sprightly and inspiring performance. The symphony became almost rhapsodic in the song-like second movement to which Jarvi brought especially warm expression greatly abetted by a series of lyrical parts played in turn by the brass and woodwinds.

There and in the third movement, Jarvi brought out what are Schmidt's most endearing qualities as a composer, a charm and gemütlichkeit that are distinctly Viennese. This is especially effective when Schmidt makes subtle but very effective use of three-four time without having it sound like a Strauss waltz. The lilt was unmistakable and Jarvi caught the spirit like a native of Vienna.

For an encore, he presented an elegant, smoothly textured Largo from Handel's "Xerxes" in a superb orchestration that showed off the rich tone of the DSO strings to exceptional advantage.

The classical concert series will resume on Friday evening, Nov. 25, with guest conductor Eri Klas and piano soloist Eduardus Halim. On the program are "Festina Lente" by Paert, Piano Concerto No. 2 by Chopin and Symphony No. 1 by Tchaikovsky. It will be repeated Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. For tickets call (313) 833-3700.

GPCM plays this Sunday

Grosse Pointe Chamber Music will present a concert at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 20, in the Crystal Ballroom at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

Sonata in A Major, K. 305 by Mozart will open the concert with Gerda Bielitz on violin and Zelda Miller on piano.

Irmgard Fernholz, soprano, Agnes Ricard, contralto, and Lawrence La Gore, piano, will perform "Strains of Moravia," by Dvorak. A medley of five songs by various composers will be presented by Maria Post, soprano, Betty Jane Barnes, piano, and Susanne Hoerauf on flute. Debussy's String Quartet in G Minor will be the final work on the program and will be played by Julia Kurtyka and Florence McBride on violin, Tracey Riggs on viola and Timothy Nicolai on cello.

Tickets are $16 for seven concerts or $5 for this concert. Call (313) 881-7511.

Pride of the Pointes

Among the Grosse Pointers who graduated from Western Michigan University last summer were Meredith Lincoln, who earned a bachelor's degree in business administration, cum laude, and Lisa Provenzano, who earned a bachelor of science degree in interior design, cum laude.

Kim Putnam of Grosse Pointe Woods was cast in Bald-

Brendan C. Keating, son of Patrick Keating of Grosse Pointe Park, graduated from Albion College in August with a degree in economics and management.

Heather King, daughter of David and Janice King of Grosse Pointe Park and a junior at the University of Evansville, recently played the part of Svetlana in the school's production of "Chess."

Brittany Reeves of the City of Grosse Pointe was named a dean's scholar at Purdue University.

The first woman to reach the highest point in the Western Hemisphere.

Annie Smith Peck chose to try mountain climbing after seeing the Matterhorn on a trip to Switzerland.

She climbed her first in 1888. By the turn of the century, she had reached the top of twenty major mountains, including her original inspiration, the Matterhorn. But her biggest conquest came in 1908 when she scaled the north peak of Mount Huascarán in the Peruvian Andes (21,812 ft.).

It was the highest point anyone had ever reached in this hemisphere. At the vibrant age of sixty-one, she was the first person to reach the top of Mount Coropuna (21,250 ft.) in Peru. Peck's career ended with the conquest of New Hampshire's Mount Madison. Its elevation was only 5,380 feet.

Of course, Peck was only 82.

great choices

The new high point in women's health care.

Finally, you can have health care that is close to home, filled with options and provided in a comfortable environment. It's the Women's Diagnostic Center, a part of the WomanWise Health Services Network. And it's located just next door to Henry Ford Cottage Hospital.

"I chose Cottage's Women's Diagnostic Center because a friend recommended it. I was a little apprehensive . . . this was my first mammogram. I didn't know what to expect, but they made it really easy. The atmosphere of the Center was very warm and friendly; I was more at ease as soon as I walked through the door. And everyone was very helpful. They answered all my questions and took the time to explain everything that was involved."

We took women's diagnostic health services out of the hospital environment and brought them together in one place; a comfortable, convenient setting with a singular focus on women and wellness. It's a caring, supportive atmosphere - ideal for services like mammography and ultrasound. Of course, these are just two of the many services available through WomanWise, including regular check ups for preventive care and special services like obstetrics care, menopause management, nutritional counseling and osteoporosis therapy. All in all, WomanWise services represent 17 different specialties.

"One woman at the Center was pregnant, another was old enough to be my mother. It's great to see that the services of WomanWise and the Women's Diagnostic Center cover so many different phases of a woman's life."

All of our services are part of Henry Ford Health System. So you have access to over 2,000 physicians in a nationally recognized health care system. The range of WomanWise services also extends to home health care and hospice programs, including Kaleidoscope Kids® - the only pediatric hospice program of its kind in the Midwest.

"This is the first time I've experienced women's services that felt like they were specifically designed for women. If someone had asked me to create my own kind of health care, this is what it would be like. I'm glad WomanWise did it for me."

When you call the WomanWise information and referral number or send for a free subscription, you will also receive our bi-annual newsletter, special invitations to WomanWise health seminars, and information about all other upcoming events.

North, South off to good start in tournament

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Sue Karber's smile stretched from ear to ear as she gathered her equipment and got ready to leave Grosse Pointe North's gym.

"It feels good to beat them -- and twice in one year, yet," said North's senior center after the Lady Norsemen outlasted Regina 40-33 in the Class A district hosted by North. "We've waited a long time for this."

North rolled past the Saddlelites in an early-season game, but Monday's opponent wasn't the same Regina team. It was more like the one that knocked North out of the state tournament each of the last three years.

"My kids have improved a lot," said Regina coach Diane Laffey. "I don't know if they can see it -- they're pretty frustrated right now -- but I can see the improvement."

North coach Gary Bennett realized his team would have its hands full trying to get past the Saddlelites.

"I knew they'd be a lot better than they were the first time," he said. "And they were."

North led for most of the game, but it never reached the point where Bennett and co-coach Ray Ritter could lean back in their chairs and relax. The Lady Norsemen had a chance to open up some breathing room when Regina was forced to foul late in the fourth quarter, but North made only eight of 17 free throws in the final period and missed the front end of one-and-ones six times.

It was the perfect opportunity for Regina to get back into the game, but the Saddlelites couldn't capitalize on the misses.

"We felt we had to do two things to win tonight," Laffey said. "We had to shut down Karber and I don't think we did that very well. And we had to control the boards. We controlled them at times, but we didn't do a very good job during crunch time when they missed those free throws."

Karber picked off two key rebounds after missed free throws and so did Molly Peters, eating up some valuable seconds on the game clock and forcing Regina to foul again.

"We knew what we had to do, but we didn't box out," Laffey said. "Not getting those rebounds was the difference in the game."

Bennett agreed that North's effort on the boards was a key to the victory.

"We showed a lot of heart in getting to those balls," he said. "It wasn't one of North's better offensive efforts, but the Lady Norsemen's defense was solid throughout the game."

"If Regina scored they had to work for it," Bennett said. "We were determined not to let

Devils keep their cool

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

It's a good thing Grosse Pointe South had a day of rest between its first two Class A district tournament games.

The Lady Devils were probably exhausted after their hectic 66-59 victory over East Detroit in the opening game of the tournament at Grosse Pointe North.

To say the Shamrocks push the ball up court in a hurry is an understatement.

"They play like they're using a five-second clock," one observer remarked before the game.

But the Lady Devils handled the helter-skelter pace with poise.

"For the pace of the game I thought we maintained our composure very well," said South coach Peggy Van Eck-oute. "The kids played with a lot of confidence. I don't think they ever thought they'd lose this one."

Some of the folks in the crowd might have had a few doubts when East Detroit, which trailed by 13 points early in the second quarter, pulled into a tie and briefly took the lead during a hot streak late in the third quarter.

It was the kind of thing tournament upsets are made of. But the Lady Devils were having no part of those thoughts.

The third quarter ended in a 49-49 tie, but after that it was all South.

Grosse Pointe North players Kristen Loesher, Sue Karber, Molly Peters and Tanya Latinis celebrate the Lady Norsemen's Class A district win over longtime nemesis Regina this week. North's 40-33 victory sent it into the district semifinal game against Detroit Finney.

North survives test by South

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

It's tough enough to go through a league season undefeated, but doing it two years in a row is a major accomplishment.

That's why Grosse Pointe North's girls basketball team was especially proud after wrapping up its second straight perfect season in the Macomb Area Conference White Division with victories over Grosse Pointe South and Anchor Bay.

"It's tough because everyone's shooting for you," said North coach Gary Bennett. "You have to be ready to play every game."

"This group of seniors has lost only two games in the last three years. They lost twice to South when they were sophomores. It's a good bunch of kids."

South gave the Lady Norsemen a better game in the rematch than it did in the first meeting. The teams were tied at 15 at halftime and while North led for most of the second half, the margin was never greater than six points until the Lady Devils were forced to foul late in the game and North wound up with a 44-33 victory.

"We really played a great game," said South coach Peggy Van Eckoute. "It was everything we had hoped for. I was ecstatic about the way we played. All the girls felt good when they left the court."

Sue Karber finished with 21 points and 15 rebounds and took over the game during the last five minutes.

"She was great down the stretch," said Bennett. "And Molly Peters had an outstanding game. It was her first game back after missing two weeks (with a broken finger) and she took care of the basketball, played great defense and made some key free throws at the end."

Peters wound up with nine points.

Bennett was impressed with the effort South put forth.

"I thought South played very well," he said. "They made a game of it all the way and we needed that going into the tournament."

Shannon McGratty led the Lady Devils with 13 points and she pulled down eight rebounds. Katy Lupo had a team-high 10 rebounds and did an excellent job on defense.

"Katy is so valuable I hate to take her off the court to give her a breather," Van Eckoute said. "She never lets up and she makes everybody around her play better."

Molly McKenzie had five points and five assists and Becky Soltis added six points for South. The Lady Devils also got a strong effort off the bench from Meredith Wolfe.

North followed its victory over South with a 51-26 win over Anchor Bay to finish 12-0 in the MAC White and 19-1 overall during the regular season.

"We didn't play real well in the first half, but we played better in the second and pretty much blew the game open," Bennett said.

Karber collected 19 points and 10 rebounds, while Kristen Loeher added six points and 10 rebounds.

South didn't fare quite as well in its regular-season finale, dropping a 51-44 decision to Utica in double overtime.

"We just showed up and didn't play basketball," Van Eckoute said. "What was most disappointing was that it came right after we had played so well against North."

South trailed most of the game and Utica had a chance to win it in regulation but the Chieftains missed two free throws after time had expired and the teams remained tied 39-39. The Lady Devils missed a free throw with 12 seconds left in the first overtime that would have won the game.

Lupo had 10 points, eight rebounds, two assists and two steals for South, while McKenzie had five points and broke the school record with 13 steals. The old mark was 12 by Lynn Vismara in 1984. McGratty added nine points and nine rebounds.

South finished the regular season 9-3 in MAC White play and 15-5 overall.

Highlights

The Neighborhood Club will complete its first girls volleyball season tonight, Nov. 17, with a tournament to conclude the instructional league that is offered to fourth through eighth graders.

"We're very excited about this new program," said Betz Johnson, recreation director for the Neighborhood Club. "The girls meet for one-hour sessions in which practice drills are performed and at the end of the session games are played on lowered nets."

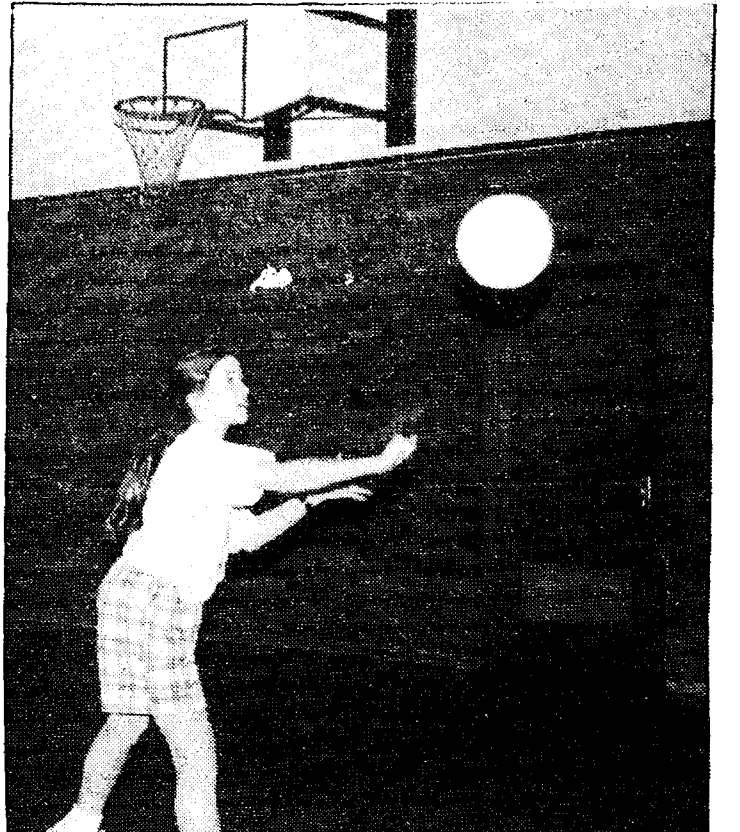

Players learn how to bump, set and spike and serving techniques and rules of the game are also taught.

There are 138 girls participating on the 16 teams. The program is structured differently than most Neighborhood Club youth leagues. Volunteer coaches are integral to most leagues, but the girls volleyball program uses instructors instead.

"This is due to the newness of the program," Johnson said.

Once the program becomes established, volunteer coaches will probably be used.

The club plans to offer girls volleyball again next spring before the start of softball. The spring session will begin in late February and continue through early April.

Laurie Brescoll, a member of the sixth grade Ash team in the Neighborhood Club instructional volleyball program, practices her serve.

can have any easy baskets."

North jumped out to a 9-3 lead in the first quarter but the Saddlelites closed the gap to 9-7 at the end of the period. There were four ties and two lead changes in the second quarter before Regina's Kathryn Kiehl fired in a three-pointer with about a minute left to send the teams into the locker room tied at 17.

Bennett and Ritter offered a few halftime pointers on how the Lady Norsemen might improve their defense in the second half and they paid off.

"We got into some foul trouble quickly in the first half so at halftime we made some suggestions on how we could move our feet better on defense and how we could get better positioning," Bennett said.

Regina, which was in the bonus with a minute left in the first quarter, didn't get into the penalty situation in the second half until there was about a minute remaining in the game.

North scored the first seven points of the third period to take a 24-17 lead. Kristen Loeher, who had 13 points and was also in double figures rebounding, scored nine of North's 11 points in the third quarter.

"If teams try to stop Sue and Maureen (Zolik) we have a third person who can give us a lift offensively," Bennett said.

Regina took advantage of a

North turnover in the closing seconds of the third quarter and Lisa Francis hit a three-point goal at the buzzer to cut North's lead to 28-26 after three periods.

Maria Nagel scored on an offensive rebound in the opening minute of the fourth quarter to tie the game at 28, but North answered with a layup by Karber and two free throws by Loeher. Another basket underneath by Karber with 5:42 remaining gave the Lady Norsemen a 34-28 lead.

North maintained at least a five-point lead the rest of the way.

Karber finished with 14 points and 10 rebounds and Zolik added 10 points and four steals. The three seniors scored 37 of North's 40 points.

"There are eight seniors on that club and there's no substitute for the leadership and poise that comes with that kind of experience," Laffey said. "I like to think that my young kids will play like that when they get more experience."

Bennett also had praise for the performance of sophomore Peters, the only underclassman in North's starting lineup.

"Without Molly we probably don't win tonight," he said. "She does so many things to help the team that a lot of people don't see, but I notice them. Next year I think she'll really assert herself."

Rangers on a roll

The Grosse Pointe Rangers Squirt A hockey team bounced back from its 3-2 loss to the intra-city rival Jaguars with a pair of victories.

The Rangers dominated the Royal Oak Eagles in a 7-0 victory that featured three goals by Andrew Amato. Blake Goebel scored two goals and Avery Schmidt and Kenny Wiczera added one apiece. Defenseman Marc Callert picked up two assists and helped goalie Jimmy LaLonde earn his third shutout of the season.

The Rangers followed that victory with a seesaw 6-4 win over the Elwood Blues.

Goebel opened the scoring with an assist from Callert, but Antwan Hall and Chris Burger scored for the Blues to give them a 2-1 lead early in the second period.

The Rangers then scored three straight goals, including two by Joe Perye. Mike Amorby and Wiczera assisted on Perye's goals, while Amato set up Goebel for his second of the game.

Early third-period goals by Burger and Danny Spalding pulled the Blues into a 4-4 tie, but Tim Vandenoorn broke in from his defense position and scored an unassisted goal to

Middle school lacrosse program

The lacrosse clubs at Grosse Pointe North and Grosse Pointe South have been improving, but the president of South's Lacrosse Club would like to see them get even stronger.

"Most of the kids who come to high school don't know anything about lacrosse," said John Bianco. "In the east, kids play lacrosse like they play T-ball here."

Bianco would like to see if there's interest in the community in forming a program to introduce middle school students to the sport.

"We'll work with kids who'll be going to both high schools," Bianco said. "If 10 fathers show an interest, I'll work with them to get something started at the junior high level, no matter how rudimentary the program is at first."

Any parents interested can call Bianco at 224-0452 during business hours or at 343-0724 during the evening.

ULS' Magical Mystery Tour ends in state final

By John Miskelly
Special Writer

David Backhurst would have had to hold back a snicker a couple months ago if someone had suggested that his University Liggett School soccer team was destined for a trip to the Class C-D championship game.

"My main concern then was pulling the team together after some disagreements," he said. "At the end of September, playing for the state championship was the farthest thing from my mind."

But in a year of rebuilding and ups and downs, the Knights made it to last weekend's C-D title game where the "Magical Mystery Tour" as Backhurst dubbed it, ended with a 3-1 loss to Kalamazoo Hackett.

"We have a lot of youth," said Backhurst. "This was a rebuilding year."

Among that youth, however, was a solid core of five seniors — Frank Tymrak, Chris Adamo, Steve Verb, Chris Corneau and Scott Lanzon — who decided they weren't going to go out with a losing record.

The Knights entered the state tournament with an 8-8-2 record, then put together five straight victories to reach the finals.

"They really took charge," Backhurst said. "Before each (tournament) game we had a team meal, then watched one of the Rocky films."

ULS defeated Allen Park Inter-City Baptist 5-1 in a semi-final game last week at Goodrich. The Knights led 3-0 at halftime and coasted to the victory.

"We were at our peak in that game," Backhurst said.

Tymrak scored twice, while sophomores Peter Birgbauer and Berc Backhurst tallied one goal apiece and freshman Matt Nowak rounded out the scoring.

Hackett finished the season 22-1-1 and won its third state championship in four years under coach Neil Crumpton.

ULS won its last state title in 1983 when it was playing in Class B-C. The Knights also won the 1982 championship in Class D.

The Irish came into Saturday's game with the intent of moving the ball with authority and putting pressure on goalkeeper Ian McMillan. McMillan faced 12 shots in the first half as Hackett took 10 corner kicks.

Another weapon for the Irish was the throw-in. Senior James

Lee, who played on the 1992 championship team, made several throw-ins from Hackett's offensive end and his strong arm became a weapon in the 10th minute when teammate Justin Lareau headed a throw-in over the outstretched arms of McMillan.

Sophomore Ian Fines nearly tied the game a minute later, but his kick was just wide.

"We were better defensively this time," coach Backhurst said, referring to an earlier meeting in a scrimmage when the Irish used a late flurry to post a 5-1 victory. "I was impressed with their team. We were clearly outmanned. They were bigger, stronger, faster, older and deeper than we were."

Hackett continued to control play in the second half and seven minutes into the half Paul Van Huysen retrieved a loose ball at the top of the goal crease and beat McMillan low on the right side.

Five minutes later, Lee again figured in the scoring when Aaron Couture headed another of his strong throw-ins past the stunned McMillan.

Adamo replaced McMillan and was immediately tested by a shot off the crossbar.

Freshman Brad Cenko put the Knights on the board when his low shot from 20 yards beat Hackett's goalie on the short side during the 15th minute of the half.

Cenko's goal changed the complexion of the game and ULS began dictating the play. But the rally was too little, too late.

Backhurst praised his goalkeepers, who combined to stop 26 of Hackett's 29 shots, many of which came as a result of 13 corner kicks by the Irish.

"Both goalkeepers did a great job," the coach said. "They held us in the game." Backhurst said that what started out as a frustrating season ended as one of his most satisfying.

"Seeing them jell and come together as a team was satisfying," he said. "It was also one of my most challenging years, but the greater the challenge the more glorious the triumph."

South

played all 32 minutes and collected 24 points and 12 rebounds, triggered an 11-0 run with a three-point play during the first minute of the fourth quarter.

Amy Wendt followed with a bucket, then Kim Hepner hit a pair of free throws and Becky Soltis, who had two of her four blocked shots during the run, hit a free throw. After another basket by McGratty and a free throw by Molly McKenzie, South was leading 60-49 with 4:21 left in the game.

"It was just what I expected from East Detroit," Van Eckoute said. "They play like that all the time. We've never played anybody who plays like that. We tried to run an offense, but it's almost impossible because they'd come flying up behind us."

McGratty wasn't the only South player to have a big game against the Shamrocks. Soltis finished with 16 rebounds, seven steals and 11 points, while McKenzie added 13 points, many of them off the fast break.

The Lady Devils continued to get solid production off the bench, especially from Hepner, Wendt and Meredith Wolfe.

"Hepner did an outstanding job on defense," Van Eckoute said.

Several times it looked like South was going to break the game open. The Lady Devils led 21-12 after the first quarter and boosted the lead to 27-14 after a putback basket by Wendt.

East Detroit scored seven straight points late in the first half to cut South's margin to five points, but a basket by McGratty with four seconds left sent the Lady Devils into the locker room with a 37-30 lead.

South went back up by nine early in the second half but a three-point basket by freshman Kristen Zabavalicious ignited an 11-2 spurt by the Shamrocks that gave them their first lead of the game, 47-45, with 1:45 left in the third quarter.

Zabavalicious led East Detroit with 15 points and Kelli Schmidt added 13.

The Shamrocks, who started the season 1-7, finished with an 8-12 record. South improved to 16-5.

Grosse Pointe South's Shannon McGratty looks like she means business as she battles East Detroit's Kristen Zabavalicious for the basketball during Monday's Class A district game won by the Lady Devils.

The right circuit protection will prevent blown fuses

An electrical fuse has a metal link that melts, breaking the circuit, when excessive current flow raises its temperature beyond a certain point. A plug fuse is a screw-in device with a window to show the condition of the metal link. Main service fuses and those in 24-volt circuits are usually cartridge fuses, mounted in a holder that must be pulled from the panel to gain access to them.

A circuit breaker is a heat-sensitive switch that automatically trips when excessive current demand causes a temperature gain. After the problem has been corrected, the lever can be returned to the on position, or reset position.

A ground-fault interrupt (GFI) breaker will trip the instant it senses a circuit imbalance. A screw-in, plug-type breaker, which can replace a fuse, has a pop-out button; pushing it in resets the breaker.

A circuit breaker or fuse is rated by the maximum amperage it will carry, which must match the current-carrying capacity of the wires in the circuit. If it has a higher rating, it can allow an excessive current flow, which could overheat the wires or a fixture dangerously.

A demand for too much power — an overcurrent — occurs when too many devices are connected to a circuit or when a failed device or a loose wire causes a short circuit. It also may occur when high-wattage fixtures and appliance motors are turned on, because they momentarily need much more electricity to start than they draw when operating.

If a circuit is near capacity, a start-up overcurrent can blow a fuse, even though there is no danger to the system. Circuit breakers are built to withstand these momentary surges; standard fuses are not. If you have a circuit that often blows a fuse when an appliance is turned on, try using a time delay or "slow blow" fuse, which can cope with brief surge demands. If the problem continues, call a licensed electrician, who can identify the source of the difficulty.

WARNING:

When you open a service panel to work with the circuit protection system, stand on a dry, nonconductive surface. Use one hand so you cannot touch something that will complete a circuit, if there is a current leakage.

Palmer Woods 1994 Home Tour features stately homes

Palmer Woods' rich architectural heritage will once again be celebrated this year as the area's Fifth Annual Architectural Society Holiday Home Tour features five elegant dwellings. The tour takes place Sunday, Dec. 4, from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The 1994 Palmer Woods Home Tour will emphasize the era of the Tudor Revival, as reflected in Detroit homes built in the 1920s and 30s.

Five stately homes, including the Meyer Prentis mansion, will be on display, demonstrating the diversity, fine craftsmanship, structural integrity and quality materials of the period.

The carefully planned Palmer Woods residential community, located near the Seven Mile - Woodward area of Detroit, comprises broad, curving avenues, wooded vistas and artistically grouped shrubbery. Its spacious homes reflect the ultimate in quality of construction materials and craftsmanship of a bygone era. The living areas of the 1994 tour homes range from 5,000 to 12,000 square feet.

Tickets are $12 per person or $10 per person in groups of 25 or more and may be obtained at Blossoms in Berkley, Grosse Pointe, and Birmingham; Sidney Bogg in Detroit, Birmingham and Royal Oak; Pronto! in Royal Oak; the Detroit Gallery of Contemporary Crafts in the Fisher Building in the New Center Area; or by sending a check or money order to P.O. Box 21086, Detroit, Mich. 48221. Additional information is available by calling 313-368-0714.

On the day of the tour, participants should go to the Detroit 12th Precinct police station at 1441 West Seven Mile, where the tour will commence, to purchase tickets or to exchange their tickets for the tour guide brochure.

Proceeds are designated for charitable and environmental beautification purposes.

There are several considerations before buying a furnace

By Gary Marowske
Flame Furnace Co.

Buying a new furnace is one of those necessary evils that most people do only once or twice in their lifetime.

There are several elements that you must decide upon before your final purchase. You must decide on a contractor and the brand of equipment you are interested in purchasing. The most important decision is in choosing the contractor who will come into your home and install this technical piece of equipment. Remember, they must have been in business for one to five years to be able to support the warranties you will be given.

There are several ways to locate a qualified contractor that handles the brand you have chosen. First, call the factory branch for the names of two or three dealers that are trained and certified to install the equipment you are interested in purchasing. Next, contact your city hall and speak with the building inspector. He will not recommend anyone, but he can tell you if there have been any problems with a particular contractor.

The next decision is to select a brand or manufacturer of equipment. There are between 15 and 20 different types of equipment available in the metro Detroit area, but only two have a factory branch with factory personnel on staff. These are Lennox and Carrier (Lennox (810) 377-2900, Carrier (313) 522-5000). I would recommend that you select one of these products.

Ask the Furnace Doctor

When you are satisfied with which contractor to call and which equipment you are interested in, call the contractor and set up an appointment to come to your home at your convenience. Make sure the contractor is licensed and insured. He should be able to give you copies of his Certificate of Insurance, and state and city licenses. When meeting with the contractor be sure to have him leave you a written estimate on a proposal form (not the back of a business card).

Make sure that you understand exactly what they are going to do. If you don't, have the man come out again.

Be aware that the newer high efficiency furnaces require several items most people are not familiar with. One is a liner that must be inserted down your chimney to prevent it from early decay. Another is that P.V.C. pipe is used for combustion air intake and another for exhaust.

Once you have decided on a contractor, a brand, and price, go ahead and sign a contract to have it installed. You do not have to pay in full for any installation until it is inspected and approved by the local inspector.

If you have any questions regarding purchasing a furnace or anything relating to your heating or cooling system, please feel free to call me Monday through Saturday at (313) 527-1700.

Existing-home sales remain steady in September

Despite rising mortgage rates, sales of previously owned homes remained steady in September, reflecting the overall strength of the nation's economy, according to the National Association of Realtors.

The association recorded a seasonally adjusted annual sales rate of 3.97 million existing single-family homes nationwide in September, 1 percent above the August rate of 3.93 million units, and the same rate as that posted for July. The September resale rate was only 1 percent below the September 1993 rate of 3.99 million units, even though mortgage rates have risen noticeably over the past 12 months.

Through September, 3.09 million single-family homes had been sold nationally in 1994, compared to 2.83 million units sold during the first nine months of 1993, an increase of 9.1 percent. "This year's healthy pace is indicative of strong economic growth," said NAR president Robert H. Elrod.

He noted that the rise in mortgage rates probably has caused some buyers to go ahead with their purchases rather than risk future rate increases.

"People on the verge of buying tend to get antsy when rates are going up. Instead of waiting around, they'll make their move," Elrod said.

The Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. reported that the national average commitment rate for 30-year, conventional, fixed-rate mortgages was 8.68 percent for September, up from 8.51 percent in the previous month. One year ago, the average rate was 6.91 percent.

Steady activity in the trade-up segment has kept the market strong, Elrod said.

"People who already own and are thinking of moving up tend to be less sensitive to rate movements and more sensitive to economic indicators than people buying their first homes," he said.

The national median price for existing single-family homes was $108,800 in September, up 1.5 percent from $107,200 during the same time last year. The median is the midpoint — half the homes sell for more, half for less.

On a regional basis, the Midwest posted the strongest resale increase in September. The Midwest's existing-home sales pace was 1.09 million units last month, up 7.9 percent from the August rate, and up 3.8 percent from the rate for September 1993. Economic stability and an ample supply of affordable homes keeps that region's housing market robust, Elrod said. The median price in the Midwest was $87,100, up 2.8 percent from the price recorded one year earlier.

The South posted a resale rate of 1.46 million units for September, up 0.7 percent from August, but down 2 percent from September 1993. The South's median price was $94,600 in September, down 1.3 percent from a year ago.
