Dr. Faleh Hussein, resident of the City of Grosse Pointe and doctor at St. John and Bon Secours Hospital, was one of those responsible for bringing the open house together.

"People drive by all the time and see us (our building)," said Hussein. "We wanted people to come in and find out about us

Those who did visit were introduced to several members of the mosque from all of the Pointes and Harper Woods. The nationality of members ranges from Albanian to Syrian, Egyptian, Pakistani, Jordanian,

Magical appeal added to Village Santa Parade

The assemblage of new painted faces will descend on Kercheval as part of the pre-parade festival which takes place from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. Friday, Nov. 23.

Chuckles the Clown will kick off the parade's Magical Mystical Kingdom theme with a magic show in the performance area at the intersection of St. Clair and Kercheval at 9:45 p.m.

Clowns Around Redford will spread their cheer for the first time in the pre-parade festival with face painting and balloon sculptures along Kercheval.

Other new pre-parade performers include a cowboy stiltwalker and the Avenue of Mascots, featuring the Detroit Pistons' Hoops, DTE Energy's Louie the Lightning Bug, McGruff the Crime Dog, Vince and Larry the Crash Test Dummies and the Detroit Tigers' mascot Paws.

The Scottville Clown Band will be one of four new marching bands in this year's day after Thanksgiving parade in the Village.

"This year we'll have 11 marching bands in total, the most we've ever had," said parade spokesperson Cindy Melican.

About 30 out of 200 members of the Scottville Clown Band, based in the tiny town of 1,200 of Scottville in western Michigan, will perform in the parade and at Border's Books in the Village at 12:30 p.m. The otherwise respectable group of people from all walks of life, from former criminals to judges, perform in parades around the state and raise over $5,500 a year for college scholarships.

Other new marching bands will be coming from East Detroit High School, Lincoln High School and Spain Middle School.

Local Shriner groups will also do some clowning around in this year's parade. New this year are the Moslem Temple Shrine Female Clown Corps, the Moslem Shrine Precision Motor Corps on their Harley-Davidson motorcycles and the Moslem Shrine Temple Americans, who will be recreating their cowboy and Indian shoot-out on miniature motorcycles.

The female Shriner clown corps is the first all-female clown troupe to participate in the parade.

Another new addition to this year's parade will be the Rexford Therapeutic Horse Drill Team. The drill team is an outreach auxiliary of the Rexford Center for Therapeutic Riding in New Haven which provides riding and instruction to the disabled.

This year's parade festivities will begin at the Grosse Pointe High School track at 9 a.m. with the Grosse Pointe Lions Club Happy Holiday Jingle Bell Walk/Run, followed by the Pre-parade Festival.

The parade, which runs from Fisher and Grosse Pointe Boulevard to Kercheval and Cadieux, will begin at 10:30 a.m.

The Village Aglow Tree Lighting Ceremony will cap off the day's events beginning at 4:30 p.m.

Village shoppers will be treated to free off-street parking and special discounts, refreshments, trunk shows and a chance to win a $100 shopping spree through the weekend.

"We're always trying to tie in things with our theme and to bring in something to attract people of all ages," Melican said.

Gaffney, Kneiser remain at helm in G.P. Farms

By Bonnie Caprara

Election Day may have swept a wind of change in the makeup of the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council, but leadership at the helm remains constant.

The new city council voted to seat Ed Gaffney as mayor and Ron Kneiser as mayor pro tem for their second two-year terms at its Monday, Nov. 12 meeting.

Before the council cast its votes for Gaffney, council newcomer Terry Davis expressed his concern about unpopular decisions made by the previous council and called for changes regarding communication, citizen participation and the mayoral selection process.

"Based on past actions of the council, I cannot give Ed my support," Davis said. "But Ed will be elected without my support. When that's obvious, I'll move to make it unanimous and you'll have my support to make these changes."

Initially, Davis and fellow newcomer Therese Joseph cast the only two dissenting votes against electing Gaffney. But as promised, Davis turned to make the vote unanimous and the council passed it as such.

Gaffney was applauded after he expressed appreciation for the council in the faith and confidence it had in him. Gaffney also said he would continue to be open, work with everyone and coalesce the council into a force that would work through the changes Davis recommended as well as other changes.

Joseph nominated Kneiser as mayor pro tem without discussion. Council members Louis Theros and Fran Schonenberg initially cast dissenting votes. A call to make the vote unanimous was halted only by Schonenberg.

Farms city attorney looks at rescinding McKinley purchase

By Bonnie Caprara
Staff Writer

Whether the city of Grosse Pointe Farms' letter of intent to purchase two homes on McKinley is a binding purchase contract is under scrutiny by the city's attorney.

The Grosse Pointe Farms City Council voted unanimously at its Monday, Nov. 12, meeting to have the city attorney take the previous council's agreement to purchase two homes at 159 and 163 McKinley under advisement.

The motion was made in response to Farms residents near the lower Hill area who expressed outrage in not being informed of the council's decision to purchase two homes to raze for a 33-spot parking lot behind the Punch and Judy Building.

Area residents did not know of any such plans until they received a hand-delivered letter the day after the council agreed to purchase the homes at its Oct. 22 meeting.

"I am more inclined to look at the emotions and reactions of the Islamic world," said Salah, "and the majority (of his school mates and other Americans) are compassionate and are willing to listen."

The presentation given by the two Imams and the educational director of the mosque, Hamid Dana, went further in trying to bridge the gaps between cultures. Dana, who himself was raised in a Christian family but later converted to Islam after becoming lost in his faith, said, "A personal relationship with God will serve you well and is the most important thing."

Dana said that the formal counterpart to that faith can come in many forms and that Islam is the right form for many people.

Prosecution heats up in Hunt Club arson case

Fennell to face jury trial March 11

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer
Defense motions to drop all charges in the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club arson case have been denied. Stephen Richard Fennell, 23, of Grosse Pointe Woods, will therefore stand trial in Wayne County Circuit Court

March 11.
The decision last Friday by Circuit Judge George W. Crockett III didn't dissuade Fennell's attorneys. The defense team of three former prosecutors intend to convince a jury that Fennell's actions the night of the fire did not meet legal criteria for being charged with arson and 19 counts of willful and malicious destruction of an animal. Yet at this preliminary stage of the proceedings, where the standard of proof is far below that of a trial, Crockett couldn't find a hole in the prosecution's con-tion that "the defendant caused the burning of the barn by an act he intentionally performed," he said. Witnesses have testified under oath that Fennell threw a firecracker toward the horse barn moments before the structure erupted in flames and burned to the ground during the early hours of July 8.

Of 24 horses locked inside the circa-1890 wooden barn, 18 were trapped and died in the fire. A 19th horse, which battered itself so badly in a successful struggle to escape, had to be put down.

"This was a horrible way for those horses to die," said Ken Simon, the Wayne County assistant prosecutor assigned to the case. Fennell remains free on $1,000 bond.

Terms of his release were that he not play with fireworks nor consume alcohol, two actions witnesses testified set the stage for what has been called the biggest fire in the 50-year history of Grosse Pointe Woods.

Within minutes of ignition, fire engulfed the dry, hay-filled, two-story barn. Flames billowed through the roof and between blazing wall panels along the structure's 90-foot length. The Hunt Club's night watchman, Ray Neal, 69, saved five horses before heat and smoke forced him from the structure.

Flames were so hot vinyl siding melted off a nearby house. Firefighters' safety masks melted. Heat kept officers from using the fire hydrant closest to the burning barn. Among Fennell's lawyers, Mark Bilkovic is a former Oakland County prosecutor who grew up in the Woods.

"I know what the Hunt Club means to that city," Bilkovic said. He argued that Fennell's actions did not meet legal standards for arson and animal cruelty. For those charges to be warranted, he said, the law requires Fennell to have intentionally ignited the barn and harmed animals inside.

"That's simply not what the evidence showed," Bilkovic said. "(Michigan law) requires the prosecutor prove the defendant intended to set a fire."

Starting with Fennell's arraignment in Woods municipal court last summer, his lawyers have acknowledged his bad judgment in throwing fireworks repeatedly toward the barn. Witnesses said Fennell was hoping to "scare the horses."

said the charges fit the crime.

"You don't have to find he specifically intended to kill those horses, but that he had the general intent to do so," Simon said. "Anyone in the situation Mr. Fennell was in would know there's a very high risk of a fire destroying the building and killing horses."

He called Fennell's whim to scare the horses a "sick joke — that was torturing an animal."

Crockett based his ruling on written law and common sense. "Barns known to house horses are commonly known to contain hay," he said. "Hay is commonly known to be combustible. A person (is) charged with responsibility for doing that which he knows could cause harm. Throwing fireworks at, near or around a barn could cause not only a fire, but an explosion."

Neil Rockind, one of Fennell's lawyers, said, "We have the facts, we have the law on our side and we're prepared to stand by it."

Bilkovic added, indicating the steadfast trial strategy to come. "Based on the evidence and laws that have been applied throughout the history of these statutes in Michigan, it is our position that both of these (crimes) require a specific intent."

Simon was equally under-terred. "We have a good case," he said.

Attorneys present arguments in Wayne County Circuit Court regarding charges of arson and animal cruelty stemming from the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club fire July 8. Ken Simon, seated in the foreground, an assistant Wayne County Prosecutor, reviews testimony while Mark Bilkovic, at the podium, argues for the defense to have all charges dropped. Strong 'no' in the Pointes, HW fail to sway WC³ millage vote

By Bonnie Caprara
Staff Writer
Voters in the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods turned out strong but not strong enough to knock out a 150 percent Wayne County Community College millage increase.

The 10-year, 1.5 mill property tax, which passed by fewer than 2,900 votes, was swayed by a strong Detroit electorate which favored it by 124,020 to 59,607 votes.

Wayne County's 31 suburbs, including the Pointes and Harper Woods, proved no challenge despite more than a 4 to 1 margin against the millage. The total vote was 141,150 to 138,321.

In total, Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods voters voted against the millage by a 6 to 1 margin — 12,904 to 2,089.

Despite not having any other items on the ballot, 47.5 percent of Grosse Pointe Shores residents voiced a resounding "no" to the millage by 968 to 25 votes.

"On Oct. 17, we sent a letter from the township clerk informing the residents of the vote," said Shores village manager Michael Kenyon. "That helped a lot."

The letter stated the ballot language, reminded residents to vote and gave an example of the tax increase on a house with a taxable value of $200,000, which would rise from $199.90 to $499.90.

Other Pointe defeats included 126 to 904 votes in the City, 393 to 2,726 votes in the Farms, 548 to 2,205 votes in the Park and 541 to 4,133 votes in the Woods. Harper Woods turned down the millage by a vote of 456 to 1,968.

"I'm disappointed it passed for the reasons I voted against it," said WC³ trustee and City of Grosse Pointe resident Mary Ellen Stempfle. "There's no accountability with the 10-year time frame and it was sneaky to put it on the ballot this year. It was not fair to communities like Grosse Pointe Shores which did not have a regular election."

The new millage, which will increase from 0.9995 mill to 2.495 mills, will provide funds for all community college purposes authorized by law according to the ballot language.

Lions to jingle in the holiday

By Bonnie Caprara
Staff Writer
The Grosse Pointe Lions Club is looking for walkers and runners to jingle in the holiday season.

The Lions' Fourth Annual 5K Jingle Bell Walk/Run will kick off the holiday festivities in the Village on Friday, Nov. 23, at 9 a.m. The race route will begin at the Grosse Pointe South High School and will proceed down Kercheval to Cadieux and back.

In keeping with the holiday spirit, all participants are asked to wear bells. The walker or runner with the most bells will win a prize in addition to the first male and female finishers.

There will be a random drawing for 20 prizes at 10 a.m. and the first 500 participants will receive a race T-shirt.

"The numbers of participants have increased every year," said John Sarvis of the Lions. "It's a great activity for all members of the family, including pet dogs on leashes."

Entry fees are $10 post-marked before Nov. 18 or $15 the day of the race for adults, $5 for children before Nov. 18 or $8 the day of the race for children under 17 and $5 for dogs. Patron donations will also be accepted.

Mail checks and entries to the Grosse Pointe Lions Club, P.O. Box 36160, Grosse Pointe, MI 48236.

residents, chided the council for giving a variance to allow construction of a new retail/office building at 120 Kercheval and made reference to a 1999 parking study which said there was a surplus of parking on the Hill.

"If you have such a surplus of parking, why do you want to buy these houses on McKinley and knock them down?" Lizza asked. "There was a parking problem on the Hill when I moved in the Farms in 1959, they had parking problems throughout the years and you have parking problems now and they're going to be compounded when you keep giving variances like you did with 120 (Kercheval)."

"Get a grip on the parking problem, get rid of this McKinley proposed purchase and rescind the action at 120 Kercheval because that's the cause. You're looking around for parking and you caused the problem itself."

McKinley resident Daniel Allen expressed concerns about traffic safety and not being given notice on the purchase of the properties and chided the council for "giving in to the wishes and wants of several developers who want to disturb the nature of this community."

"I agree, we made a mistake in the way this was handled," said mayor Ed Gaffney. "What I said to you (Allen) about how there won't be a parking lot there and how we get to that, we'll have to listen to our attorney. We heard tonight there are serious problems with deed restrictions. We'll ask our attorney to get to work on that right away. That would be a reason why we would not go forward."

However, Michael Mehr, attorney for David and Patrice Thomas of 159 McKinley, disagreed and called the possible deed restriction escape as "an absolute rouse."

"To this day there is a legal binding commitment in my view that the city has agreed to purchase both 159 and 163 McKinley," said Lizza. "There's been an offer, there's been an acceptance and an approval by city council. There's a binding contract to acquire these properties. What you do with these properties after you close is another story."

Bush repeats rallying cry

In two public speeches last week, President Bush won strong backing at home and even in the controversial Middle East.

In a talk at Atlanta, Bush repeated the hero's cry, "Let's roll," uttered by a group of young American passengers who forced a fourth American hijacked commercial jet to crash land in a rural Pennsylvania field Sept. 11 rather than permit it to hit a Washington, D.C., federal building area at which it apparently had been aimed.

Speaking to the United Nations in New York later in the week, Bush won praise from a listener in Palestine, Yassir Arafat, for his comments explaining his interest in helping achieve the long-sought peace between Israel and Palestine.

In comments the next day, Arafat said he found the president's speech a helpful move in the search for peace between the two longtime rivals for the future control of some disputed areas now occupied by Israel.

Even that small recognition of the U.S. position immediately won recognition internationally as an effort to revive real peace negotiations between Israel and Palestine with perhaps other Palestine supporters in the Middle East.

His Atlanta speech, the president said, was "a call to citizens to be vigilant, to know that your government is on high alert and to add your eyes and ears to our efforts to find and stop those who would do us harm."

Repeating his comment to Congress that "we are also a nation awakened to danger," the president went on to say that "we are a nation awakened to service and citizenship and compassion. None of us would ever wish the evil that has come to our country. Yet we have learned that out of evil can come great good."

Speaking appropriately enough just before our Veterans Day, Bush reminded his audience that during the last two months since the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, "We have shown the world that America is a great nation. Americans have responded with courage and caring."

"We have seen it in our children, who have sent more than $1 million to the children of Afghanistan. We have seen it in the compassion of Jewish and Christian Americans who have reached out to their Muslim neighbors."

"We have seen it as Americans have reassessed priorities, parents spending more time with their children, and many people spending more time in prayer and houses of worship."

The president contended that "we also have gained new heroes." They included, he said, "those who ran into burning buildings to save others: our police and our firefighters. Those who battle their own fears to keep children calm and safe: America's teachers. Those who voluntarily place themselves in harm's way to defend our freedom, the men and women of our armed forces."

Calling attention to the latest victims of terrorism, Bush cited those who "never enlisted to fight a war, but find themselves on the front lines of a battle nonetheless, those who deliver the mail, America's postal workers."

Perhaps Bush's speech was heard on the battlefield because a couple of days after his speech, the tide of battle in Afghanistan turned in favor of the United States and its allies.

Whether our allied forces heard the president's speech or not, they acted in consonance with his appeal for Americans to be "vigilant" and "alert" and not be intimidated by the opposition wherever it may appear.

This good news was erased, however, when a passenger plane in New York plowed into the ground, killing all 255 passengers and nine crew members aboard. But, apparently, it did not crash because of terrorists.

Letters

Silent majority

To the Editor:
As I spoke with Dan Shine from the Detroit Free Press ("Font of Complaints," "Grosse Pointe's Village: Water walls meet an icy response; some say critics will grow to love them," Oct. 27 issue), I prefaced my comments by reminding him that no one is more motivated to write letters than someone who wants to vent a little spleen.

It is, of course, not surprising that some area residents are unhappy with the appearance of Kressbach Place. But where were these visionary taste-police when their opinions could have actually made a difference? Over a year ago, the architect prepared a drawing of the proposed project and distributed it to every resident of the City of Grosse Pointe, seeking input.

Shortly thereafter, a scale model was placed in Damman Hardware, one of the highest traffic spots in The Village, also seeking input. It was on the agenda of several City Council meetings over that period of time and large, color drawings were on public display at the City offices.

I could go on, but the fact is, not one single negative comment resulted from all of this.

The City of Grosse Pointe Foundation has invested a tremendous amount of time, effort and money to bring this project to fruition. One of their stated objectives was to attract visitors and shoppers to the area and as promotion manager for The Village, I believe their efforts should be applauded. After all, not a single taxpayer dollar was used in the construction of Kressbach Place.

The Village remains one of the finest, traditional, downtown shopping districts in Michigan because it is the merchants and their fine employees who create its character.

Oh, and one more thing: Sidewalks do not create gum stains — people chewing gum do.

To the Editor:
Congratulations to the Grosse Pointe Foundation on its wonderful fountains in the Village.

I walked through early one morning and totally enjoyed the calming flow of the falls.

It is a wonderful addition to this area that should continually highlight and celebrate our relationship to the water and majestic inland seas.

I think the letters you have received condemning this artistic and natural scape reflect the same diminished gene pool that condemned and persecuted Maya Lin.

Pirate's Guide to Lake St. Clair G.P. Woods pay hikes stink

To the Editor:
The 50 percent pay increase which the incumbent Grosse Pointe Woods council members and mayor have recently given themselves is deserving of comment. I feel it demonstrates a lack of integrity and character.

Utilizing an appointed local Officers' Compensation Commission to justify their action fools no one. This ploy is as reprehensible when employed by local officials as it is when used at the state and federal levels.

Elected officials who truly believe in public service and the democratic principle would have voted directly for the increase or put it on the ballot for the voters to decide.

When I asked what criteria were used by the commission, no one professed to know. Most assuredly, it was not based on the compensation lawmakers in the other Pointes receive. The Park, City and Shores pay nothing while the Farms pays its council persons $600 a year.

One must question if the efforts of our council and mayor are so superior as to merit $3,600 and $6,000 a year, respectively. Their double-speak about loving public service while citing the hours it entails is also wondrous to behold. Ten hours a week hardly

13 apt number for Gophers

By Wilbur Elston

As a University of Minnesota graduate in 1934, I probably have seen 30 to 40 Minnesota-Michigan football games, but I have seen Minnesota win only twice that I can remember.

In its encounter last Saturday, Minnesota put up a pretty good battle for the first half, which ended just after Minnesota kicked a field goal to make the halftime score 14-10 in favor of the Wolverines.

But the second half was all Michigan's Wolverines, and they finally wound up winning 31-10. The Wolverines did it by adopting a tough, new attitude toward running the ball in the second half.

Their offensive line simply ripped gaping holes in the Minnesota defense, through which a core of hard-running halfbacks ran almost without much opposition until they had covered 5 to 10 yards or more.

The Wolverines quickly scored two touchdowns chiefly with their running offense which quickly seemed to wear out the weary Gopher defense. So who said that Michigan had to rely heavily on the forward pass? That surely wasn't true Saturday.

In comparison, I recall one of the best Minnesota-Michigan games I ever saw in the fall of 1934 just after I had graduated. The good old days of Bernie Bierman's powerhouses that won a couple of national championships at that time were still in school and the final score was 34-0 for Minnesota.

It was a close game for the first half, as I recall it, with the halftime score 0-0. Minnesota contented itself with old-fashioned Bierman football. That meant running through the line if you had an efficient and good plunging fullback, but it also meant not using much of a passing game.

The second half was all Minnesota that year. Bierman departed from tradition by having his quarterbacks pass often and accurately to a journalism friend of mine named Johnson, who was the major pass-catching end. That led to a final 34-0 score in Minnesota's favor.

At that game, I was a reporter for the Minneapolis Star, where I was then employed, and I had a special assignment. It was to make an accurate record of the yardage piled up by Pug Lund, Minnesota's star halfback, who used the Michigan game to prove he was of all-American caliber.

When my family and I moved to Michigan years later, I recall going to most of the Minnesota games against Michigan every other year in the huge Michigan Stadium. My recollection is that Minnesota won only one game of perhaps 15 I saw in that stadium in those years, and that one was a surprise victory by a field goal in the last minutes of play.

Last Saturday's victory was the 13th straight that the Wolverines had beaten the Gophers, and this enabled them to hold onto the Little Brown Jug, the prize awarded for victory in the longest lasting college football competition in history. Michigan appears to be heading for another Big Ten championship, depending on the outcome of its last two games and the Wolverines are favored in both.

In recent years, Minnesota has never matched those Bierman years in football, but the Gophers still have loyal fans who hope for the best at the start of each year. But I'm beginning to wonder if at 88 I'll ever see even on TV another Gopher victory over Michigan in my lifetime. I can console myself with the thought that the first half was a pretty good one for both teams last Saturday.

Thanks for support

To the Editor:
I wanted to thank everyone for their support in the recent election.

In hindsight, the obstacles for my candidacy were more formidable than anticipated. In spite of a campaign without a core base, I received support from many. I am grateful that I had the opportunity to meet and talk with so many people that I would have never crossed paths with had I not run.

My postelection thank-you calls sparked some conversations more gratifying than I could have ever imagined. If you see me around town, feel free to toss a wave or say hello.

Affirmed pride

To the Editor:
Last spring I decided to pursue my 30-year-old dream of running for the Farms Council.

The following six months have affirmed my pride in the community in which we live. I thoroughly enjoyed and will not forget the many conversations with neighbors as we shared our goals for the city.

While disappointed that I was not elected, I am grateful for the many people who supported me, and hope I will get to know them and many others better in the next few years.

Other sources

What, it's my turn for the I Say? Instead of reading my opinions, here are some items lifted from other sources.

- On Veterans' Day, nothing was said to match what Pericles wrote 2,500 years ago in a funeral oration honoring Athenian dead in the Peloponnesian War. The translation appeared in the epilogue to "A War to be Won."
- "The consummation which has overtaken these men shows the meaning of manliness in its first revelation and in its final proof. Some of them, no doubt, had their faults; but what we ought to remember first is their gallant conduct against the enemy in defense of their native land."
- "They have blotted out evil with good, and done more service to the commonwealth than they ever did harm in their private lives. No one of these men weakened because he wanted to go on enjoying his wealth; no one put off the awful day in the hope that he might live to escape his poverty and grow rich.

"In the fighting, they thought it more honorable to stand their ground and suffer death than to give in and save their lives. So they fled from the reproaches of men, abiding with life and limb the brunt of battle; and in a small moment of time, the climax of their lives, a culmination of glory, not of fear, were swept away from us."

- Reporters at the Grosse Pointe News often sit patiently through lectures by aggrieved parents who are offended that their offsprings' illegal exploits have made it, anonymously, into the public safety report.
- The arguments generally boil down to the same tired makes of his friends.

"A good-natured Spaniel overtook a surly Mastiff as he was traveling upon the high road. Tray, although an entire stranger to Tiger, very civilly accosted him; and if it would be no interruption, he said, he should be glad to bear him company on his way.

"Tiger, who happened not to be altogether in so growling a mood as usual, accepted the proposal, and they very amicably pursued their journey together.

"In the midst of their conversation, they arrived at the next village where Tiger began to display his malignant disposition by an unprovoked attack upon every dog he met.

"The villagers immediately sallied forth with great indignation to rescue their respective favorites; and falling upon our two friends, without distinction or mercy, poor Tray was most cruelly treated for no other reason but his being found in bad company."

- Another Devil's Night has passed and Detroit still stands. Civic leaders are crowing.
- It took a vigilante corps numbering at least 30,000 — three times the number of American soldiers who invaded Guadalcanal in August 1942 — but Detroiters declined to burn their city to the ground.
- While the local population gushes over Detroit's collective restraint as a bellwether of the city's civic-minded and prosperous prospects, citizens around the nation have a different view.

Here's a wire service report from the Nov. 8 edition of the Dayton Daily News headlined "Kilpatrick inherits Detroit's shortfalls":

"Kwame Kilpatrick, the 31-year-old state House Democratic leader and son of a congresswoman, declared victory Wednesday in his race for mayor of Detroit.

"He faces a city with an estimated $33 million budget shortfall for the fiscal year, broken street lights and pavement and abandoned buildings that need to be torn down. Crime is still high; with 396 killings last year, Detroit had a murder rate about 2.6 times the national average.

"Kilpatrick also will inherit a police department under investigation by the U.S. Justice Department over fatal shootings by officers, prisoner deaths in lock-ups and allegations that detectives illegally detained potential homicide witnesses."

Diamond or not Adopt a pet

If you remember Jay White from the his 1975-80 sojourn in Grosse Pointe Park and the Farms, you probably recall that he looks and sings like Neil Diamond.

Well, if you want to compare how much he looks and sounds like Diamond, you can catch his act at the Windsor Casino through Dec. 1 in the Showtime Lounge.

"His (Diamond's) mother and son have come to see me," White said, according to casino publicist Bobbie Katz.

"After the show, his mom came up to me, put her hands up to her face and exclaimed, 'Oh, my God, you're just like my son on stage. And you have his eyes,'" according to White.

The Grosse Pointe Animal Adoption Society will display its current collection of cuddly, friendly adoptable pets — dogs and cats — at the Children's Home of Detroit on Saturday from noon to 3 p.m., according to volunteer Corinne Martin.

Each pet has been living in a foster home so the volunteers can tell you about their habits, strengths and weaknesses. But they will also want to know what your family lifestyle and home environment are like before they place a pet. They want to make sure the match works.

Swing by on Saturday. You can expect to see everything from a miniature pinscher named Macho to a Welsh Corgi named A.J. There are also a variety of cats and kittens ready to be taken home.

Terror and a reality check

The words "terror" and "terrorism" have become the watchwords of America since Sept. 11. In many ways, the use of the terms is understandable, but it is also unfortunate.

It admits to the world that we have been terrorized. That is exactly the intent of the terrorists, and they have succeeded beyond their wildest expectations. The use of the term also is tacit admission that this is a psychological war, and if we are to win it, we have to stop being terrorized.

The dictionary says that terror is "intense fear." As a psychiatrist dealing with terrorism on the home front, I wish to say it is "nothing more than" intense fear; it is "merely" intense fear.

So? Where's the danger? Further hijackings? Unlikely. Massive anthrax attack? Very unlikely. Intercontinental ballistic missiles? Extremely unlikely. Chemical, nuclear? Possible, but at this time in the realm of the unthinkable.

We are either going to go on with our lives as usual or not.

I think we are going on with our lives as usual. We have faith in the ability of our government to deal with this matter. We have a certain confidence that the forces of the free world will unite and combine efforts and stop this terrorism. It might take a few years, like World War II. But it has to be done, and it will be done. We have faith and hope and history on our side. We have won before and we will win again.

Let us examine this notion of terror, and I hope we will stop using the term and spreading it around.

A phenomenon of group psychology is "contagion," that is that feelings are contagious. If one person is in the grip of fear and communicates this, others become fearful. As the leader of a group expresses words to diminish this fear, calm and trust are restored, also by contagion.

Most of us have been agents of trust and hope, diminishing fear, but the media are exploiting terrorism and are spreading it far beyond anything that Al Qaeda is doing, just what bin Laden hoped for.

What we have to do is arm ourselves with defense mechanisms that mitigate against intense fear. The first and best one is what we call "reality testing."

What is really happening?

Words keep emanating from the government and the media to be alert and watchful, but that does not tell us much. Our reality testing tells us that nothing much more has happened. Countless sports events have transpired without ill effect and countless tall buildings are still standing, immaculate and impressive in the sunshine.

What about anthrax? Much as been said and speculated, but the truth is that a very few people were infected and died.

The latest theory, which I endorse, is that the anthrax scare is a home-grown variety, some lone "Unibomber" type, a laboratory bacteriologist, a bit unhinged, who has had fantasies of doing mischief with his own little collection of anthrax spores.

These are the same people who put poison in Tylenol capsules or Motrin tablets, the same people who put razor blades in Halloween apples or toxic substances in Snickers bars.

Sick.

There is sickness among us, that is a reality, but it is rare — that is reality — very rare. So relatively speaking, we are safe. No reason to be terrorized, no reason to have extreme fear.

It would be natural to have extreme fear (terror) if you find yourself locked in a room with a hungry lion or boa constrictor. If someone were threatening you with putting you in a room with a jungle cat or a snake, it could make you anxious, but that is not the case.

What is there to be anxious about, terrorized about? We might have a nightmare of being attacked by a jungle creature, and that would induce feelings of terror, but then we would wake up in our own bed and we would be relieved by reality.

We must distinguish between what is real and what is unreal. The dream was scary, but it was only a dream. Sept. 11 was a nightmare, that was real, but that was Sept. 11. Today is Nov. 15. Has anything bad happened to you lately?

There is no present cause for terror (extreme fear) or even great anxiety at this time. We fall back on our experience in life and America's experience in history. It should fill us with trust, confidence and hope, the best antidote to irrational feelings of terror. And let's stop using that word.

Addendum: Just before sending to the editor, I learned of the crash of an American Airlines plane in Queens, and at this time the cause is uncertain. I still think we should stop using the word "terror" and not be terrorized, because "terror" means "intense fear," and we are not intensely fearful and we are not going to be, no matter what.

Apparently, you all believe education is a good thing, as long as it is for your kids, and your kids only.

I have no idea whether WCCC needs or deserves a milage increase — none of you bothered to address that question with any facts, so busy were you defending your projected $286 per year expenditure for that expense (what is that your Starbucks bill for a couple of weeks?!).

Make-a-Difference Day

To the Editor:

On behalf of the sixth-grade class, we thank everyone at St. Clare who extended themselves in support of this wonderful event. From the first day, when the students read the article in the Detroit Free Press about the conditions and needs at the Toni Scott School, to their response of compassion and action, to the actual carnival two months later, the students received the encouragement and support of countless people. They experienced first-hand how the Spirit moves into and through a noble purpose and a commitment to help others, in the name of Jesus. We applaud these students who worked tirelessly and lovingly.

We thank all who attended the event, and all who sent in baked goods for our Cake Walk. Also, we would like to thank the following people and groups: coach Steve Grimmer, Pam Henderson, Detroit Edison, Linda Robinson, the Lusk and Sneden families, the sixth graders who created the booths for the event, the St. Clare Comic Club, Hean Irvin-Stanley, St. Clare's latch key staff, Matthew Pazarena, Mr. Burakowski and the rest of St. Clare's faculty and staff.

Coupled with the extraordinary donation of $1,000 from an anonymous donor, the event raised $2,532 for the Toni Scott School! May the love and abundance the St. Clare sixth graders felt during this event now be poured on the children in need at the Toni Scott School. Thank you, everyone involved, for such loving support!

A view from the Eye-Bank

To the Editor:

This year, we are especially grateful for the heroes who have given of themselves so that others may live and enjoy life. However, not all heroic acts involve breathtaking rescues, and not every hero makes national headlines.

Instead of saving a life during a moment of peril, our heroes give someone a lifetime of experiences they would otherwise have missed. They give the gift of sight.

This is the season when many of us reflect upon our experiences, look forward to new beginnings, and give thanks for all of the wonderful things that make up our lives. We thrive on the freedom to be with our loved ones in safe, supportive communities — to see and participate in all of the special moments this freedom allows.

At Thanksgiving, and throughout the year, we encourage you to show your appreciation for these gifts and support our community by becoming a hero. Help us give the gift of sight to someone who would otherwise be denied the freedom to see the world around them.

In the words of Helen Keller, "There is no better way to thank God for your sight than by giving a helping hand to someone in the dark."

Please add your name to the donor registry, and discuss with your family the decision to donate. Support our mission to preserve the many freedoms healthy eyesight allows. You will always be a hero in someone's eyes.

Horrendous service

To the Editor:

In this age of "customer service" and "customer care," it's refreshing to see that one of Grosse Pointe's institutionalized monopolies, Comcast, has its own idea of the concept: They provide horrendous service and they don't care.

How in the world were we ever roped into this "sole provider" nightmare? Weren't there any performance standards included in the agreement?

One can only imagine what kind of cable service we Grosse Pointers could enjoy if there were just a little utopia!

I've heard of entire communities that actually enjoy "choice" in a cable provider — What a concept! What utopia!

Perhaps some day, we, too, will have a choice. Until then, let's all be content knowing that Comcast even stoops to provide us with any service at all.

We may get terrible service, and it may be sporadic and unreliable, but it's ours. Heck, maybe competition is overrated anyway.

All must be accountable

To the Editor:

Thank you for printing the letter, "Direct attempt," in the Nov. 8 issue of the Grosse Pointe News concerning the loss of a horse, Chester, in the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club fire.

The letter writer wrote this letter to the judge who will be hearing the case of the accused arsonist. The letter writer very eloquently makes her case for the horses killed in the fire. She reminds all of us of how cruel it is when someone destroys a loving relationship that took years to nurture. Tears came to my eyes as I was reminded again of her loss.

With the national loss of 4,603 of our fellow Americans on Sept. 11, it is easy to forget about some animals that died four months ago. Yet that loss is very real and the people involved must be held accountable. We must not forget.

As our beloved country begins a long and difficult war against the enemies of the United States, we have already seen criticism and wavering in the media. The president of ABC News, at a speech at Columbia School of Journalism, said that he could not comment upon whether the terrorist attack on the Pentagon was justified because it was a military target. We have heard protesters claim that the United States shoulders the blame for the attacks because of our support of Israel and our international marketing of our Western materialism.

As this war wears on, and war casualties are reported, we must never forget the pain experienced by the letter writer over Chester's premature death. We must remember that even greater pain was experienced by 4,603 families. Every death must be mourned.

Every death must be taken personally. Every murderer must be held accountable. We must stay the course and pay the price for freedom.

May God bless America.

$5,000 question

To the Editor:

In the Oct. 18 edition of the Grosse Pointe News, the following question was asked and never answered: why was $5,000 of the Farms money given to a private group?

All the Pointes were solicited. The Park, Woods and Shores said "no." Why did the Farms say "yes"? Please explain in the Grosse Pointe News so we can vote wisely.

The article probably was not very clear to our council. The four (plus) in our council who voted for the gift probably thought that the leader of the council would answer. The leader of the council probably thought the incumbent, who is a past president of the group that received the $5,000, would answer.

Nobody responded. That should tell us something.

Painter shows 'People at Play' are the same all over the world

Jason Sweeney
Staff Writer

Until November 25 the dark wood walls of the historic Scarab Club, revived by the artists group from being one of Detroit's first premier night clubs of the early 1900s, will bear the work of Julie Sabit of Harper Woods.

The collection of watercolors, pastels and oil paintings is collectively titled "People at Play."

Sabit, a club member since 1999 is the current co-chair of the gardening committee which tends to the wall garden in the courtyard of the club's John R and Farnsworth location. Sabit said she was happy to be able to display her art so quickly after joining.

All members of the club must exhibit their work sooner or later as a requirement of membership. The person who was supposed to have the wall space for the month of November was unexpectedly unable to fill the room.

Sabit, who had already begun the application process to show "People at Play," was more than happy to step up her schedule and display her canvases this month.

What ties the works together, Sabit said, is, "People relating to each other and having fun."

She said she finds her best opportunities in, "little things that tickle me," opportunities that just present themselves and can't be

Harper Woods enjoys a 'sign of progress'

Jason Sweeney
Staff Writer

A new way to get information to the masses is complete in Harper Woods, an electric sign bearing 2,040 light bulbs has had the finishing touches to it completed.

The last touches to the sign board included a coat of paint, and the gold lettering naming it as part of Harper Woods.

"Just keeping the public better informed is the best reason for the sign," said city manager James Leidlein, and said the city is happy with how well the project turned out.

The sign, a $65,000 project, originally conceived a couple of years ago, was not budgeted until this, the city's 50th year. The sign itself features a strong brick base with two large screens, each of which hold 1,020 light bulbs, designed to relay text messages and simple graphics in an easily readable manner to passers-by.

Leidlein said the time duration of messages is still being adjusted and he is constantly adding more material to the list of announcements.

"I've only received one or two negative comments," said Leidlein, "and I've received several positive comments." Enough to greatly outweigh the detractors.

Several of the city council members have mentioned the sign as a great new tool for the citizens at the voter forum held at the Harper Woods community center as well as to the audience at council meetings and other at other locations.

The sign will feature messages about city functions such as meetings of the city council and planning commission as well as information about sports events and other public gatherings.

Mayor Ken Poynter said the sign was a great way to reach the people and it will help to keep the community tight knit. He said he hopes that it will make for better informed and more active citizens.

The sign will also feature information that residents need to be aware of, such as election days and city services like leaf pick-up, trash service and snow removal.

Another feature of the sign that will appeal to more passed by.

Those opportunities come from around Michigan, Italy and even Belize.

Sabit, who is also a member of the private flying club, the Nomads, said she loves the opportunity to travel and when the opportunity arose to visit Belize or return to Italy, she couldn't pass them by.

Sabit said one of the reasons for the trip to Italy was to participate in the La Remida school of art, located in Umbria.

"We stayed right in the grounds of an old monastery and would bus out into the hills and villages to find things to paint," Sabit said they'd come back for food, sleep, a little conversation and then head back out to paint.

Her trip to Italy produced a few of the pieces on display this month, including a canvas of two girls playing cards on a sunlit bench and a moment of time in one of the cafes.

"The two girls came along while I was painting the landscape over the wall behind them," Sabit said and admitted they were in just too natural a pose to pass by.

and later painted shows that people really are the same all over the world.

The painting shows an Italian woman with an intent look on her face as she goes to take that first sip of coffee, proving everyone needs caffeine.

Contrasting that piece, a painting done of the regulars at the Michigan Gallery in Detroit, features a few faces that may even be familiar to Pointers. It centers around the Tuesday ritual of coffee and a bowl of freshly made soup.

This common thread of humanity while at leisure also shows through when examining examples from Sabit's trip to Belize.

"We all have common threads that run through our lives when at play," Sabit said.

"We visited some of the Mayan pyramids while in Belize," Sabit said. Her piece "Breaktime" came from that side trip and is a pose that almost anyone could imagine themselves in.

The painting of three of the natives resting for a moment from their tour of the ruins bears striking resemblance to another of Sabit's works, which comes from no further from home than the Alter Road trailer park.

The park, which is one of Sabit's favorite hunting grounds for subjects, acts as a constant draw for vacationing fishermen and families.

"Canalside Break" shows a group of men that are strikingly similar to the men resting beside a pyramid in Belize in their posture and their intent.

Both canvases show a small group of people at ease, Sabit said, and both have a kind of slow comfort in them.

Another human interest story to play out through Sabit's brush from the Alter Road community is that of animals.

One piece on display, "Canal Dwellers," shows the cats that have made the park home coming to the call of a woman who adopts them throughout the summer and puts food out for them.

"It was just such a fun scene, though I worry about those cats when winter comes," Sabit said.

Her exhibit, based around people having fun engaging in activities, is sure to have something that any visitor would relate to in some way or another no matter where they are from.

Sabit's exhibition, "People at Play," will be on display on the second floor of the Scarab Club through Sunday, Nov. 25.

The gallery, open to the public from noon to 5 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday, is located at 217 Farnsworth, behind the Detroit Institute of Arts.

Two pieces by Sabit, "Canalside Break" above and "Breaktime" below show striking similarities in people at leisure from Michigan and Belize. Sabit said she looks for these moments to capture that spirit.

Parcells testing ground for mutual aid rapid response

By Melissa Walsh
Staff Writer

To ensure that Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods students are swiftly protected from any threat that could potentially enter school buildings and create a situation like what transpired at Colorado's Columbine High School in 1999, a multi-jurisdictional emergency rapid response plan was tested last week at Parcells Middle School.

A simulation of an incident involving an armed man was staged in Parcells to enable law enforcement officers, firefighters, EMS personnel and school staff and administrators to practice coordinating efforts in "mutual aid" rapid response.

Representatives from each party have been working diligently to build a network in order to protect students in the event of an emergency, or any "critical incident," such as the presence of an armed individual in a school, a fire or explosion or structural collapse.

Responding to the Statewide School Safety Information Policy, in accordance with Public Act 102, a cross-functional team representing Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods law enforcement agencies and the Wayne County prosecutor's office developed school safety guidelines that were agreed to by Grosse Pointe Public Schools System administrators in Dec. 1999.

A simulation that tests the plan

A father marches into Parcells Middle School's main office requesting that he take his son out of school. Aware that the father's custodial rights have been legally revoked, Parcells administrators deny his request. He is persistent, raising his voice. He then takes out a handgun, waves it at office personnel and demands that they call his son out of class. Shots are fired.

A call goes out to Grosse Pointe Woods Public Safety, announcing that shots have been fired and that the best route into Parcells is via Mack Avenue, given the location of the suspect, which is now the pool area. Mutual aid vehicles arrive within a few minutes.

About 20 officers immediately set up a command post in the off-library parking area, while four rapid deployment team officers enter Parcells' main door via synchronized, cautious procedure. Commanding officers are in radio contact with Parcells' administrators and with the officers in the building.

Parcells is under lockdown. Silence has fallen, essential for rapid deploy officers, who are specially trained to follow the sound of a fleeing or lurking suspect, corner him and work to neutralize the situation until the Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods SRT unit arrives.

Tracking sound, they move first into the auditorium, thoroughly search its stage and seating areas, again in swift, coordinated movement. Like a winning hockey or soccer team, they don't bunch up; each player knows his job and area to be covered.

The officers hear a noise outside the auditorium. "Where is he?" the lead officer shouts as the team runs out into the hall. Creeping cautiously by classroom doorways, officers scan for tags on doors and make their way down toward the tracked sound.

The officers then trail a sound upstairs. They find the suspect with a woman at the other end of the hallway. He is yelling, "What's going on?"

The woman screams, "Don't hurt me. You got to get me out of here."

The suspect demands, "I want my son."

The officers are trained to neutralize the situation, not to hastily go after a suspect unless he or she is actively engaged in action to cause immediate harm. The officers inch their way towards the suspect while questioning him.

"What's your name?" the lead officer asks. The woman yells, "You've got to get me out of here; he's got a gun."

"Hey ma'am," the officer says. "Can you talk to me?" There is no response. The suspect and what appears to be his hostage have changed location.

Through a stairwell, an officer suggests, "Let's talk." "Back off I want my son. When I get my son, I'll go." Meanwhile, the SRT unit is emerging from the command post — officers sporting fatigues and gear and armed to the teeth.

The suspect has moved into a classroom in the rear of the building. A hostage is released — Parcells' assistant principal. Officers carefully approach as the man is apparently having a heart attack. They make their way to him and then quickly move him to a safe location where medics meet him and carry him to an ambulance parked on Mack.

Meanwhile, with the suspect isolated in the classroom, officers evacuate students in classrooms set away from the suspect's location. They lead them out of classrooms and down halls towards the auditorium, where they will remain until the suspect is apprehended, which could take hours, longer than the time set aside for this emergency response training exercise.

The woman is released. She walks toward officers, who command her to put her hands in the air. They swiftly pull her to the ground and drag her into a doorway, discovering that she has a weapon on her. Their training has taught them not to automatically assume that she is a hostage.

After much time spent by officers perched outside the suspect's classroom location trying to lure the man out into the hall, he will not surrender. SRT will have to apply tactical procedures to apprehend him, within the parameters of synchronization, speed and strategic response.

Building on this initiative, Joseph, Young and Associates Inc. in Lansing, a mutual aid rapid deployment plan for school emergencies. Mike Thompson, owner of safety and security consulting firm, set out to prescribe "We all came to the table," Thompson said. "We sat down with a blank sheet of paper and started from scratch. The entire community has a role in what happens here. And one of the things that helped to drive this is that Grosse Pointe was ahead in a lot of places."

Lauding the efforts of local public safety and school officials, Thompson continued, "Grosse Pointe has taken it to the next level. Not only are they talking, they are coordinating. They know each other; they understand each other."

Thompson cautioned that there is still a lot of work to be done. "This is a culmination," said Thompson, "and there will be more in the future. In training, you crawl, walk, run; we're at the crawl phase."

Integral to the mutual aid plan, Grosse Pointe's five public safety departments and Harper Woods' developed a cross-jurisdictional Special Response Team (SRT), whose job would be to hone in on a threat, isolate it so that victims could be brought to safety and capture the suspect(s) creating the threat. While the SRT is en route to a school emergency, the plan calls for school-initiated lockdown procedure to be put in motion while the jurisdictional public safety department deploys its own four-man rapid response team to neutralize the threat until SRT arrives.

Thompson, who wrote the mutual aid rapid response plan, explained that the actions reports and debriefings in the wake of the Columbine tragedy revealed that "Police tactics were no longer current for that type of situation."

To prevent the confusion and communications inefficiencies between school staff and local and non-local police that likely led to the aggravated threat at Columbine, the International Association of Chiefs of Police and other organizations put together guidelines for rapid response procedure.

"The theory is that the first four or five officers who respond," explained Thompson, "immediately move to engage the threat and, if necessary, neutralize the threat because there were kids dying inside Columbine while the cops were standing around outside."

"Another problem was that they couldn't talk to each other — multiple jurisdictions: state, county, federal," said Thompson. "They couldn't communicate, so they didn't know what each other was doing. That's not an issue here. The public safety officers here in the Pointes all have common radio frequencies to communicate on, and that's what you saw played out here."

that a Columbine assistant superintendent advised her to be sure that schools have a reliable means of wireless communication, because Columbine's phone lines were cut before the attack, and that there are plans for emergency school reunification centers, because the panic among Columbine parents led to a civic gridlock that further hampered emergency response and rescue efforts. Grosse Pointe schools are being equipped with wireless communication, and plans for reunification centers are in place. Klein felt that the police

We hope we never have to use it."

During a student debriefing session in Parcels' auditorium after the simulation, students asked law enforcefor students so that response officers can most efficiently neutralize and eliminate the threat, such as being absolutely quiet during a lockdown and being sure to apply the door tagging procedure that helps officers better isolate the threat.

During lockdown, a teacher is to put a green tag on the classroom door to indicate that all inside are safe and well. A red tag would indicate to officers that someone inside needs immediate assistance. The tagging procedure is to assist the first, jurisdictional rapid deployment team, whose mission is to neutralize the threat while the SRT is making its way to the site.

At the conclusion of the exercise, Hiller assessed, "The cooperative effort went extremely well. The tactical team response was excellent. Because it's training, because it's a scenario, it goes differently than real life. We've identified a few areas we need to improve in;

we identified a few areas we did extremely well in. And that's the whole purpose of the training. We've all learned a lot from it. The ultimate goal is to be ready for an incident. And I would feel very comfortable saying that we are ready to go."

The Parcels' test was the first time for a training exercise of this magnitude. A rapid response simulation was tested in Waverly, a suburb of Lansing, but the training exercise did not involve the coordination of as many parties as Parcels' did.

This was also the first time the Grosse Pointe/Harper Woods SRT was tested. The many school administrators and public safety personnel from other districts observing the simulation live in Parcels' lounge, thanks to television production students from South and North high schools, were able to observe the swift and coordinated response of the rapid deployment teams and the SRT.

Sarah Kurcz and Maris Jackson, students from Grosse Pointe North, practiced broadcast journalism during the simulation. While questioning a public safety officer and Grosse Pointe Schools community relations coordinator Kathleen Roberts, the budding journalists had to contend with an actor staging the ravings of a worried parent.

North television production student Mike Greiner, who filmed the "broadcast," explained the students' role in the Parcels simulation, saying, "We knew that it's a drill going into this, but we were told to treat it as real and ask press-type questions as if we didn't know anything in advance. It's part simulation and part real."

Grosse Pointe Woods Public Safety Lieutenant Joseph Cardosi and Mark Mulholland held a debriefing Q & A session for students after they had been "evacuated from the threat" and brought into the auditorium.

and school response to the staged incident was successful in "matching what we've modeled and what they (students) learned in order to see if there are any blanks in the radar screen as to what we need to work on."

Assistant superintendent Chris Fenton concluded, "It indicated to us that we had the proper plans in place and good cooperation between the school administration and public safety. It did point out some areas to review and update, such as the use of emergency cell phones and what to do with people who are visiting a building during an emergency. For the first time over, it was very effective.

ment officers insightful "what if" questions, such as what if a student is in a restroom during lockdown, what if a student is taken hostage, etc. School administrators noted all student questions and are working to fine tune emergency response guidelines to help them better understand how to react in many different kinds of scenarios.

Grosse Pointe Park public safety chief David Hiller said that because "no two scenarios are exactly alike," public safety and school leaders can set guidelines

Swimmers request pool update

By Melissa Walsh
Staff Writer

"What if our football team had no football field?" was the rhetorical question that Grosse Pointe South swim team member Brady Brooks presented to the Grosse Pointe Board of Education at Monday's meeting.

Standing behind Brooks, figuratively and literally, at the meeting were South's boys' and girls' swim teams as she offered her analysis of why Grosse Pointe South High School needs a new pool. South's swimmers bring home many honors, Brooks explained, but they are successful despite the handicap of not having opportunity to compete on their home "turf."

According to assistant superintendent for business affairs and support services Chris Fenton, the board is looking at about five different possibilities. Some of these options include providing South with a competitive pool.

"We're reviewing possibilities for a pool at South and we're looking at options and the cost of those options," explained Fenton. "Can we meet the demands of providing a competitive pool to meet school and community needs without detracting from the building?"

The current four-lane South pool is located in the center of the old building, beneath the cafeteria. In a building that was built in 1928, building a new pool or expanding the old one would be a large and costly project.

New water depth guidelines for school swimming competition set by the state of Michigan last February have made the pool at North substandard. The school board understands the need to make the North pool deeper and is also considering adding two more lanes to it, for a total of eight. Fenton estimates that the cost of increasing the depth at the North pool could run about $400,000.

"Our board is taking its job very seriously in reviewing this request among other building needs," Fenton said.

Several adults supported the swimmers request at Monday's school board meeting.

Swim coach Bill Thompson explained to the board that, in order to bring in as many swimmers as possible, South's swim coaches split the team for two practice sessions at Brownell. According to Thompson, splitting the teams gets in the way of building team camaraderie to its full potential. Thompson also reported that doubling practices conflicts with ways community education and other organizations could use the Brownell pool for non-competitive water activities.

South physical education teacher Chad Hepner listed the benefits of swimming as a lifelong fitness activity and ways a new pool facility could be used for general physical education activities. Hepner underlined that water activities are particularly beneficial for special education fitness activities.

Pointing out that "swimming is a lifelong activity," lifeguard trainer and director at the City of Grosse Pointe park Diane Zedan reasoned that the pool would not only be used for team competition but for fitness enrichment activities for adults of all ages, youth and infants.

"We live on the lake," Zedan stressed. "Everyone should know how to swim, for safety."

Bob Rossbach, father of three and fitness swimmer for over 20 years, also listed ways a new pool could be used by the community. "It's not a matter of building it and waiting for them to come," he said. "We're already here."

Mark Craig of the Greatest Gift Foundation informed the board of strong support for a new South pool among parents who attended a recent adhoc meeting that he organized specifically to discuss the issue. Citing that over 2,800 members of the community participate in summer swim programs at Grosse Pointe parks, Craig called swimming "a family event."

"You have a lot of people willing to go out and do the work of finding out if the community will support it (a new pool)," Craig said.

House fire

The Grosse Pointe Farms Public Safety Department is continuing an investigation of a house fire on Hall Place which took place around 8 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 11.

The homeowner said she turned a lamp on in her second-story bedroom and left the room for a few minutes. When she returned, she found a pillow on fire, which she threw out the window. However, the fire spread to the mattress and caused severe heat and fire damage to the bedroom and an adjoining bathroom. Less severe smoke, heat and fire damage was sustained in parts of the first and second floors and attic.

Car vandalized

Sometime between 1:30 and 10:12 a.m. on Sunday, Nov. 11, a 1994 Pontiac Firebird parked in a circular driveway on Roslyn in Grosse Pointe Shores was scratched and spray painted with blue and yellow paint.

The yellow paint washed off, but the blue paint remained.

The Shores public safety department and the car's owner have no leads on who caused the damage.

Purses snatched

Seven Dooney and Bourke purses worth $1,510 were discovered missing from a store in the 17000 block of Kercheval sometime between 9 a.m. Tuesday, Nov. 6, and noon Wednesday,

PUBLIC SAFETY REPORTS

Nov. 7.

Two days later, a black female in her mid 30s walked into a store in the 16800 block of Kercheval and snatched six purses and two dresses valued at $1,769. The unknown suspect left the store without paying for the goods and left in an older model four-door burgundy vehicle which went eastbound on Kercheval, then northbound on Notre Dame.

Cleaned up

Two unidentified individuals cleaned up at a store in the 18800 block of Mack in Grosse Pointe Farms the evening of Wednesday, Nov. 7, between 9:20 and 9:30 p.m.

A store employee witnessed a 6-foot-4 black male with a thin build wearing black pants and boots take a microwave oven and a large size vacuum from a shelf then walk down an aisle. A second employee saw the man walk out the front door without paying for the items and get into a 1987 burgundy four-door Ford car.

At the same time, the second employee also saw a 5-foot-7 medium build black female leave the store with a cart full of groceries without paying for them.

Freebie

A man found passed out at midnight behind the wheel of a car parked behind a business in the 19700 block of Mack received a rare pass from jail by Grosse Pointe Woods police.

On Sunday, Nov. 11, an officer tried to wake the man. Having knocked repeatedly of the man's car window, the driver awoke and, for an estimated three to four minutes, fumbled to open the car door. According to the officer, the man confused the door locks with the car's speed control and ventilation switches.

It turned out the 39-year-old Pinkney resident had drunk too much while attending a wedding party at a private club. The man told police he "did not feel comfortable driving, since he had consumed alcohol, and decided to park in the rear of the (business) and sleep until morning."

The man was taken to Woods police headquarters and permitted to call someone for a ride home. Not being able to contact anyone, the man spent the night at the police station.

Harper Woods police involving a BB gun came from a home in the 20500 block of Hunt Club, nearly a week after the first batch of three reports.

The woman who contacted police explained she returned home to find three of her windows shot up with BB pellets. Police are still looking for this shooter, but currently have no suspects.

Assault or sob story?

Harper Woods police took a statement from a man near Harper and Kingsville at 3:15 a.m. Nov. 7. The man claimed he had been relieving himself near Salter Park when he was approached by two males who beat him and took his vehicle. The man, who was noticeably intoxicated, walked to a gas station down the service drive when the two men reappeared and beat him again, taking his wallet and cell phone.

Police have no suspects in the unarmed robbery but recorded the man's injuries and noted that a call for a single-vehicle accident was logged at approximately the same time and a man fitting the victim's description was seen fleeing the scene.

Shadow owner enlightened

A 1990 Dodge Shadow that was reported stolen two weeks ago from Grosse Pointe Woods was found last week in Plymouth.

The vehicle's ignition had been punched out but was otherwise undamaged.

A Woods man had reported the car stolen on Nov. 1.

Open door policy

On Thursday, Nov. 8, at 12:55 a.m., a Grosse Pointe Woods patrolman discovered an open door at Barnes School. An unoccupied car was parked in the school's carport.

Two officers entered and searched the school but didn't find an intruder or anything wrong.

Jeep wrangled

On Tuesday, Nov. 6, at 11 p.m., a silver 2001 Jeep Wrangler was reported stolen from the 20700 block of Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods. The Jeep's owner, a man from St. Clair Shores, said the vehicle was locked.

Mining trouble

A stranger wearing a miner's helmet outfitted with a flashlight was seen prowling the 1800 block of Norwood on Tuesday, Nov. 6 shortly after 11:30 p.m.

The unidentified man had been cruising the street in a silver or gray pickup truck of an unknown manufacturer. The driver got out of the Jeep and while canvassing a house, triggered a motion detector. The man went away when a warning light activated.

Invaded

A house in the 18900 block of Washtenaw was entered through a broken out rear window on Nov. 8. The owners returned home to find petty cash and a movie collection missing from the house. Police searched the home for evidence, and noted that the recent prevalence of home invasion is a seasonal phenomenon.

Cleaning up?

A woman who lives in the 18700 block of Roscommon returned home to find one of her windows broken and her home ransacked. Missing from her belongings was her Social Security check, which was later found to have been cashed by an unauthorized person.

The woman said she suspects that the woman she had hired as a maid or the maid's boyfriend who had spent time in the house may have committed the crime.

Hunting clues

Over $1,000 in jewelry, electronics, and other goods as well as a rifle were stolen from a home in the 20600 block of Van Antwerp during the day of Nov. 12. When the woman returned home from work, she found her home in disarray and the rear door nearly off its hinges. Her father, away for hunting season, had left the rifle behind. Police were able to get fingerprints from the scene and are aggressively investigating the case.

G.P. Shores to have first municipal court with metal detector

By Bonnie Caprara

Staff Writer
Grosse Pointe Shores will have the first court in the Pointes equipped with a walk-through metal detector.

Public safety director Gary Mitchell said that the village considered installing a walk-through device as part of its courtroom/city council chamber renovation plans.

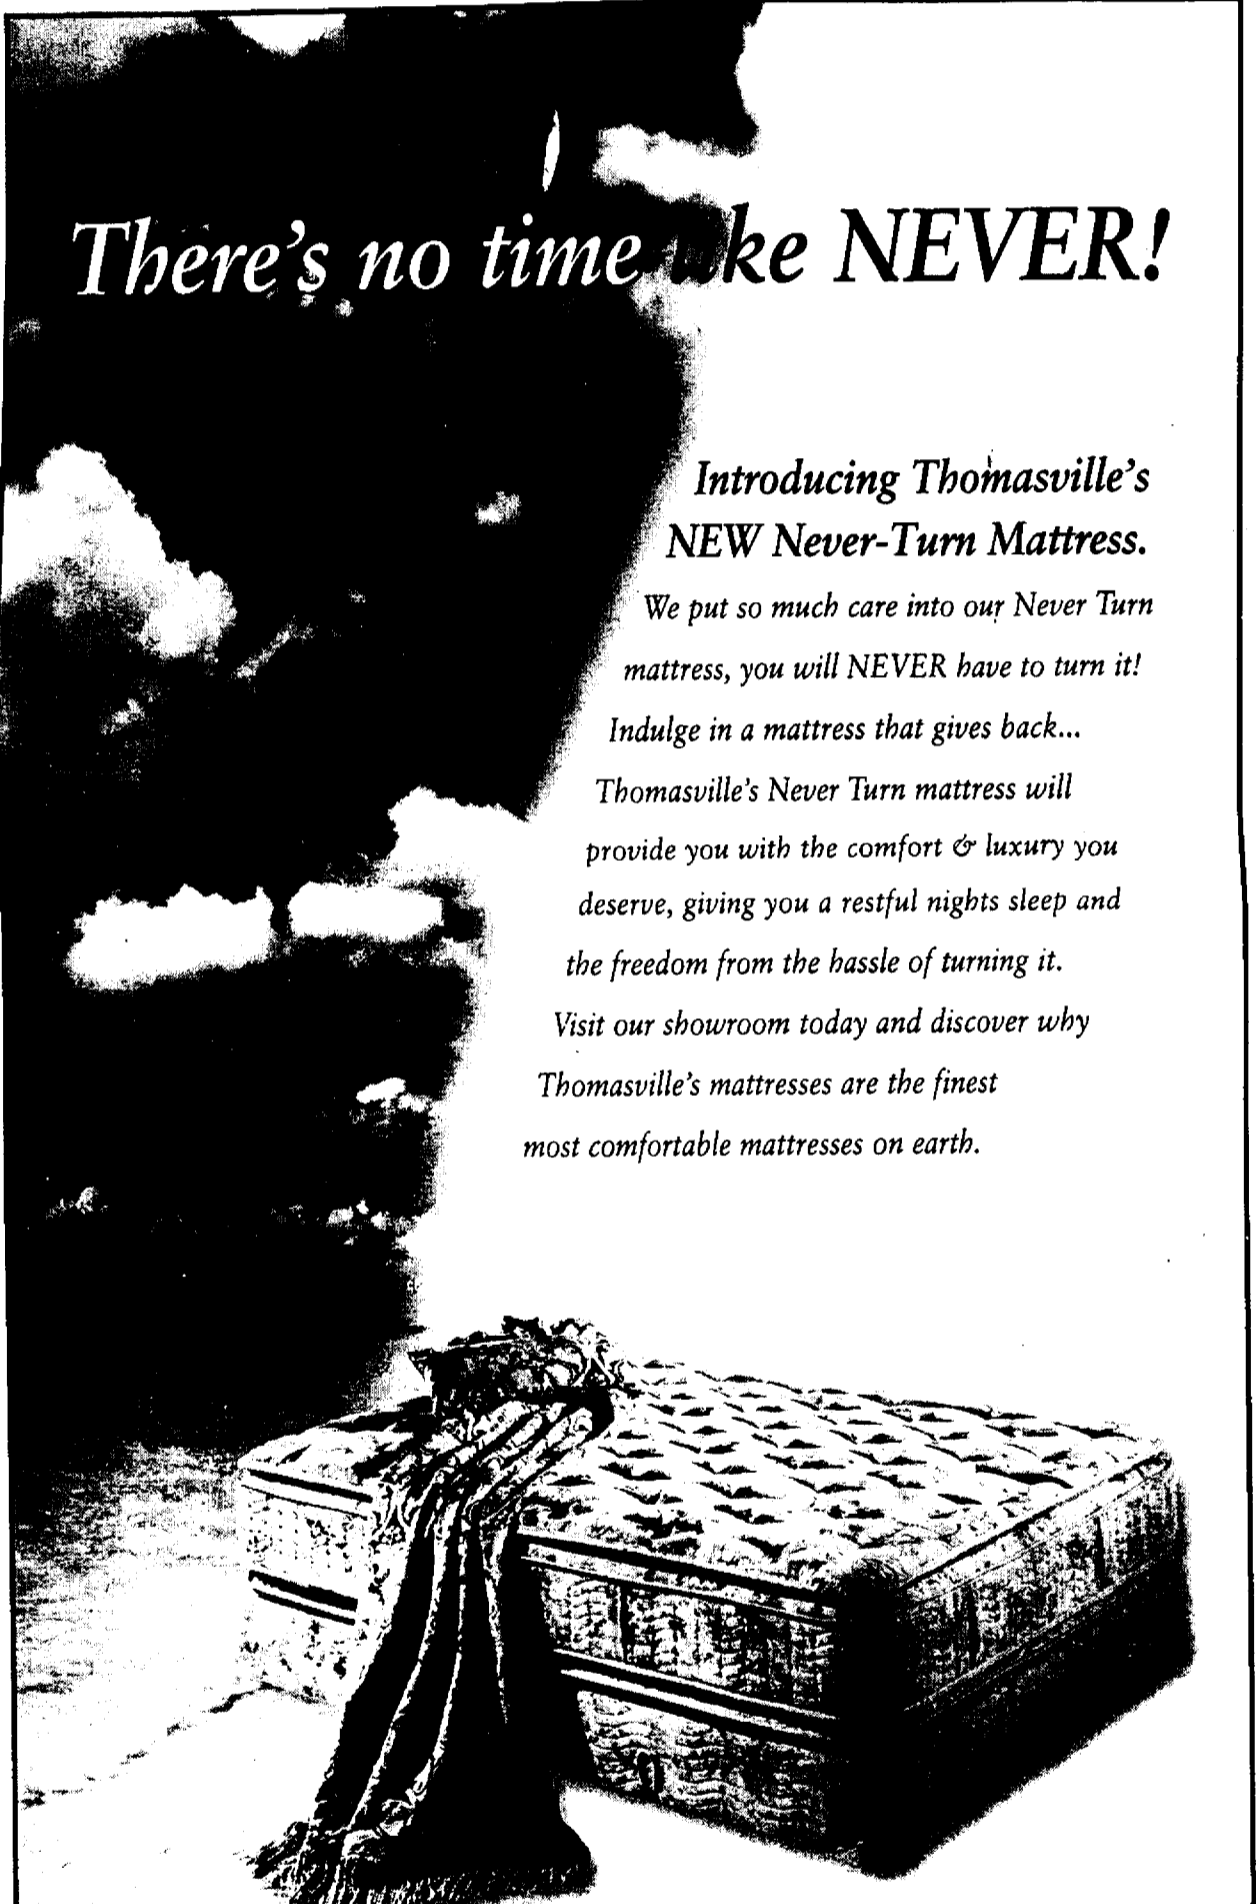

"The state court administrator recommends that every court be equipped with metal detectors," Mitchell said. "We'll be using it for court, but we may use it if we have an occasion with a large number of people." Shores municipal judge Lynne Pierce said, "I'm very pleased they're installing it. I think it's prudent. You never know what kind of baggage people bring in the courtroom."

Mitchell said the village has never had a problem with weapons in its courtroom, but, "we don't want to wait for something to happen."

Mitchell said the village is considering three different metal detectors, ranging from $4,000 to $7,000.

Mitchell said he expects the metal detectors to be installed by the end of the year.

Pointe girl receives a new heart and a future

By Madeleine Socia
Staff Writer

Most kids who slip folks a note asking for a Slurpee, the slushy, soda-based drink served at the local 7-11 store, would be answered by a perturbed parental glare. But when 12-year-old Sarah McPharlin of Grosse Pointe Woods did just that on Tuesday morning, Oct. 23, the request gave her mom and dad an overwhelming sense of joy, relief and a cause for celebration.

The Brownell Middle School sixth grader and avid soccer player had just awakened from a long-awaited, 12-hour heart transplant surgery at Children's Hospital of Michigan in Detroit. Though her request had to be denied for the present due to the breathing apparatus she depends on, it signaled the first glimmer of light at the end of a very dark tunnel that she and her family have been traveling since an irregularly slow heartbeat caused her to collapse in the Grosse Pointe Woods Lakefront Park pool on July 17, 2001.

After being diagnosed with myocarditis, a rare and sometimes fatal heart infection, which caused her heart to stop beating five times in less than one month, McPharlin became the first child in Michigan to receive a Thoratec Left Ventricular Assist Device (LVAD) system during a seven-hour surgical procedure at Children's Hospital on Sept. 6, 2001.

This measure was taken as a bridge to the heart transplant she desperately needed, but its effectiveness was definitely finite.

"She was deteriorating and it was very frightening," said her father Jim, a business analyst at Daimler Chrysler. "She was on the heart machine for almost two months and after a while, things seemed to be going downhill. We saw her failing right in front of us. We never knew when the new heart was going to come, so it was hard to comfort her emotionally and keep her spirits up."

The good news finally arrived on Monday morning, Oct. 22. The McPharlins, who kept a daily vigil at their daughter's side, were home overnight caring for their other children, Katie, 16, and Emily, 3. As her mother Dianne, a special education teacher in the Grosse Pointe Public School System, recalled, "I was in the shower crying and praying that Sarah would get a heart. That's when we got the phone call letting us know that a heart was available."

"We were happy but cautious," said Jim, who noted that the family had already endured one disappointment with a donor heart that proved not to be a good match. "Sarah was ecstatic, she had tears of joy, then she was scared. It was a very understandable range of emotion. She knew it was the day we had all been waiting for, but she also knew the reality was that she was going to have to have surgery."

At 1 p.m., the McPharlins placed their little girl in the capable hands of a surgical team lead by Dr. Henry Walters. The procedure lasted until 1 a.m. the following morning. Her family received their first indication of the success of the operation when Sarah responded to her doctor's request to squeeze his hand at 2 a.m.

Today, her prognosis is very bright. Though there will be some ups and downs and she will have to take anti-rejection medication, Sarah could be home by Thanksgiving and back in school in January. Her physicians are also confident that she will rejoin her team on the soccer field in the future.

The McPharlins are deeply grateful to the staff of Children's Hospital who more than lived up to their motto, "We treat our children like our own." And they are very appreciative of the efforts made by DaimlerChrysler, which provided the air transportation for the donated heart.

In addition, the McPharlins want to thank their family, friends and Sarah's classmates at Brownell who offered comfort and support during this long ordeal.

But they know that they are most deeply indebted to the family of the heart donor who had the courage to see beyond their own grief and make the decision to give Sarah the gift of life.

The irony of the situation was never far from their minds. According to Jim McPharlin, at one point Sarah asked whether her parents would donate her organs if she did not survive. When her mother assured Sarah that they would, Sarah said thank you.

"It's been hard to hope for a heart knowing that another family has to go through the pain of losing someone," said Dianne. "But we are going to take care of this heart and I know that Sarah is going to make a difference in this world. The love from the donor family will live on in Sarah."

The McPharlins' experience has increased their faith in the power of prayer and offered a new appreciation for the value of the simple things in life.

Sarah also envisions a new role for herself. "I think that she is going to be driven to do something about this," says Jim. "She has already said that she wants to go on the Oprah Show and get the message out about the importance of donating organs. And I think that she will encourage people to spend quality time with their families, because you never know."

Help the hungry? Pointers 'Can-Do'

Jason Sweeney
Staff Writer

Operation Can-Do, powered by 46 Boy Scouts, Sea Scouts and Venture Crews along with one Girl Scout troop gathered together 982 cases of food Saturday, Nov. 10.

The yearly campaign by the scouts to bolster supplies at soup kitchens and shelters around the metro area was a success again this year, according to Mike Rochowiak, a district and Troop 1407 leader, who worked the day on the semi loading the full cases of food.

Combating the growing mountain of food were Matt Elias, left, a scout from the Grosse Pointe War Memorial's Troop 96, and Simon Andzelewski, right, a Sea Scout from Ship 308. Both worked to package donations from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the district's collection site to help hungry families.

"We always have good unit participation and that is the key," Rochowiak said regarding the continued success of the food drive.

As trailers, pickup trucks, minivans and other vehicles drove through the collection center across the street from the 9 Mile Road Big Boy's, a staff of volunteers that peaked at around 40 unloaded, un-bagged, boxed and stacked the food onto pallets in the semi.

Matthew McNamee from Troop 39 out of Star of the Sea school was one of the volunteers.

He helped by unloading vehicles and packaging the food after scouting neighborhoods to find the donations left on residents' doorsteps.

Questions had arisen among the coordinators of the event about how much scouts would collect this year because though patriotic giving is at a high, many people had donated as much as they could afford to relief efforts in New York.

District coordinator of Can-Do 2001, John Carrick, said he was happy with the community's and the scouts' efforts though the estimated one and a half tons of food is slightly less than last year's collection.

"These trucks will go to the warehouse to be distributed," Carrick said of the semi-trailers that were at each district's collection points.

"What's a shame is it'll all be gone before Easter," Carrick said. "I'd like to see us do this more than once a year."

The contribution of Lakeshore district will be added to the overall total which district executive Tracy Glover said she hopes will top the record of 560 tons of food for needy individuals and families.

Jerome T. Ahlbrand

Jerome T. Ahlbrand
Former Grosse Pointe Park resident Jerome Thomas Ahlbrand, died of heart failure on Tuesday, Nov. 6, 2001 in Albuquerque, N.M. Known to family and friends as J. T. or Jerry, Mr. Ahlbrand was born on Nov. 30, 1936, into a second-generation family of German immigrants who settled in Seymour, Ind. The family was prosperous, first in the carriage, and then in the furniture business.

Established in the Detroit advertising community as a deftly stylized copywriter, his economic command of language earned him several "Caddy" awards, an honor bestowed on the "car guys" of the ad business. Ironically, though his paternal grandfather had been forced out of the carriage business by the advent of the automobile, J.T.'s creative skills would eventually be used to sell automobiles.

Having begun his writing career in the advertising department of WISH Television, a CBS affiliate in Indianapolis, Ind., he moved into the agency end of the business, first in Indianapolis, then in Cleveland. Eventually he came to Detroit to work for Campbell-Ewald, where he wrote print and television ads for Chevrolet and other clients.

Departing the Detroit ad community in 1974 for Clinton E. Frank in Dallas, Texas, J. T. worked as a Creative Director on accounts for Braniff Airlines, Conoco Oil and Toyota Motors. Mr.

Ahlbrand returned to the Detroit area at D'Arcy MacManus & Masius, Bloomfield Hills in 1976, where he wrote Pontiac, Cadillac and GMC Truck ads. It was there that he was part of a team that created "Mr. Goodwrench" for the GM Parts division. According to Mr. Ahlbrand's son, Tom Wilder, "Following his 1983 departure as Cadillac pitchman, sales of that brand have fallen dramatically."

Survivors include a daughter, Jennifer D.; two sons, Thomas W. and Jonathon D.; three grandchildren, all of the Detroit area, and his wife Maryanne of Albuquerque.

Mr. Wilder noted that, also surviving Mr. Ahlbrand's accomplishments are "The many wealthy shareholders of the numerous corporations his creativity helped to become and remain prosperous." Memorial services are private.

Coast clean-up can help you cleanup

By Ann L. Fouty
Staff Writer

If there's one thing that the Nautical Coast Clean-up can do is remove unwanted items. For six years, the group of volunteers has been cleaning the shoreline of Lake St. Clair. They have gathered more than 200 tons of stuff - car parts, lawn furniture, cement chunks, bricks, bottles, cans, plastic items, water-logged driftwood, cement blocks, boat parts and seaweed.

Now Jill Wrubel, dubbed the trash queen because this was her brainchild, and Tom Cleaver, head of the We Are Here Foundation, which sponsors the annual event, would like to broaden not only the area cleaned but how funds are raised to support the event, which is held on a May Sunday.

"We want to expand the clean-up in size and depth. We want to develop a website to connect with worldwide clean-ups. We would like to consolidate the other southeastern Michigan cleanups into one week," Wrubel said.

They would like to add Gull Island, St. John Marsh and Harsens Island to the list of cleanup sites. Some of their work would have to include renting specialty equipment, which is expensive.

To expand would require more funds. The 2001 Nautical Coastal Clean-up spent $40,000. The We Are Here Foundation provided a bulk of that funding and now the two are looking to the public for more help with residents donating cars, boats and now property.

Donors will receive a 100 percent tax credit and in some cases, cash and a tax credit can both be given.

"This is a prime time for donations," Cleaver said. People are looking for tax credits and getting rid of boats and cars they no longer are using.

Instead of selling a car for $800, the We Are Here Foundation can give the blue book price, which may be up to double what the owner is attempting to sell it for.

Property that is donated will be appraised. If the property is contaminated, Cleaver will work with a potential buyer on how the property can be cleaned up and developed.

The two also are looking for organizations that would host fundraisers or a corporate sponsorship, with a minimum donation of $15,000, because since the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, donations are down.

There is a 10-minute video that can be provided for those interested in sponsoring the clean-up, which will be held on May 20, 2002.

tions and assisting in debris removal, there has been a lack of Grosse Pointers who actually come out and help with the clean-up.

"The cities have been great, but the volunteers have been minimal," Cleaver said. He reminds residents that debris removal can increase property value.

With the help of volunteers and their donations, the Nautical Coast Clean-up can continue to improve the quality of the lake.

Education on water cleanup kits

All public and private middle school and high school teachers from St. Clair Shores and the Grosse Pointes are invited to a training session on how to use water quality testing kits at 3:45 p.m. Friday, Nov. 30 at Doc's Cafe on the Nautical Mile in St. Clair Shores. The 60-minute class will include light refreshments.

Each teacher will receive five kits per classroom to use as part of the curriculum.

The We Are Here Foundation is also offering to pay for buses to transport classrooms of students to the lake to test water quality.

All teachers must register by Nov. 28 by calling (810) 779-8777.

Salt contracts signed

In a harbinger of winter weather to come, a contract for road salt has been agreed to by officials in Grosse Pointe Woods.

The two lowest bidders received redundant contracts to ensure a steady flow of salt to city streets in case of extra bad weather or delivery problems.

Morton Salt Co. of Chicago will be the primary provider with the Detroit Salt Company serving as backup.

Morton's charge of $28.73 per ton compares to Detroit's $29.91 per ton.

The city has budgeted $47,856 for road salt this season, which translates into 1,600 tons.

Economy sputters on 3 cylinders; market up slightly

Last week, the market started with sharp rises on Monday and Thursday, anticipating the Fed's 1/2 of 1 percent cut in short-term interest rates.

But the Fed's action had already been discounted by the market, which saw sideways for the balance of the week.

Market commentators are having difficulty dreaming up comments about the market, which has now regained the 1,369 points it had lost after the terrorist attack on Sept. 11.

In fact, all three major indices — the Dow, the S&P 500 and the NASDAQ Composite — have recovered all their losses since Sept. 11 and in less than two months!

For the Dow, that's a 17 percent gain from its bottom, 16 percent for the S&P 500 and a remarkable 28 percent for the NASDAQ, a much-welcomed trading rally.

From a value point of view, the market is fully priced, or over-priced, based on P/E ratios, dividend yields, market-to-book ratios, etc.

But previously burned investors don't want to miss the "turn" of the economy since the stock market, as a leading indicator, usually turns four to six months before the economy turns.

To recap last week, the DJI sharply rose 284 points to close at 9,608, up 3.1 percent, while the NASDAQ Composite spurted 83 points, or 4.7 percent, closing at 1,828 last Friday.

At the same time, the tech heavy NASDAQ 100 roared ahead 89 points, or 6.3 percent, to close at 1,515, again handily beating its Big Brother, the Composite, percentage-wise.

How to increase income

Have you looked at your October brokerage statement yet? Read it and weep! On an annualized basis, money market yield is floating around the 2 percent level, down from over 5 percent a year ago.

So how do you increase income without walking on thin ice? John Waggoner in Forbes (Nov. 26) suggests a careful look at real estate investment trusts (REITs), which trade like stocks on the NYSE.

These REITs file income tax returns as real estate corporations but, under special tax provisions, do not pay corporate income taxes if they pay out 90 percent of their "taxable income" as dividends to shareholders (somewhat like mutual funds).

Thus, REIT cash dividends are not taxed at the corporate level and may not be fully taxed at the shareholder level, because their depreciation expense is deductible.

A relatively few REITs have mortgage portfolios, but most manage equity portfolios (which can be somewhat leveraged). Some REIT portfolios cover several real estate sectors, but most specialize in the category in which their management is most experienced.

For analysis purposes, REITs do not trade on a P/E basis, but on a special AFFO basis, in which the AFFO means "adjusted funds from operations," a cash-flow derivative.

Fitch quotes Lee Schalop of Bank of America Securities, who says that dividends that consume more than 85 percent of AFFO are suspect.

He recommends the four REITs shown in the accompanying table because of their low payout ratio, expertise of management and the stocks are all "large cap" with good liquidity.

By Joseph Mengden

Let's talk...STOCKS

Dividend achievers

Some portfolio managers prefer to increase dividend income through the purchase of "dividend achievers," those companies that have raised their annual dividend rate every year for at least 10 years.

John Waggoner penned an article on these achievers in USA Today (Nov. 9). You can buy the "Official list of 10-Year Dividend Achievers," compiled by Mergent, a financial publisher, in bookstores.

The average money market mutual fund today yields only 2.16 percent. But the stocks in your favorite index don't even yield that much. As of last Friday, the DJI dividend yield averaged 1.87 percent, and the S&P 500 only averaged 1.39 percent.

The NASDAQ 100's exchange-traded stock, symbol: QQQ, reports that its dividend yield is "not available," probably because so few tech stocks even bother with dividends.

Year-end planning

As we near year-end, it's time to take stock, to review one's own balance sheet. In spite of the market correction, many investors feel they are still over-extended in stocks. So an asset allocation review is a must.

Other investors have suffered devastating losses, even to the extent that their portfolios are now under-weighted in stocks.

For many of us, the "to do" list has gone the way of tomorrow. Why not take time to talk with an investment counselor or a professional money manager?

You'll be surprised that their fees are often less than the advisory fees charged by many wire-house stockbrokers to glance at your

A walk on the website wild side

Well, where shall we go this week?

How about a trip to a couple of my best of the best in websites?

Let's start off with www.iFilm.com. iFilm showcases all kinds of creative movie shorts, including many student projects, political satires and celebrity spoofs.

Aspiring directors can submit their work without losing their rights to it.

They can also get feedback from viewers, so don't do it if your self-esteem is low.

The good news is that there are a handful of hopeful moviemakers who have actually landed deals from the exposure.

But, most importantly, realize your holiday home videos don't stand a chance. Shockwave.com is an all-animation website. But don't knock it until you've tried it, since animation is where it's at for now.

I can still remember being forced to watch Simpsons by my kids — and they were 22 years old.

Well, maybe I wasn't forced, but I know cartoons can be hip and irreverent. Those words definitely describe a lot of the content at Shockwave — particularly Tim Burton's new series, Stainboy, which stars a winsome little superhero whose sidekick, Toxicboy, tries everything at home that you're not supposed to do.

See, I told you it was like the Simpsons — and my house.

Next on our agenda is www.NetFlix.com.

This site is a godsend to anyone who has ever made that 11:55 p.m. panic run to

Pointers on Technology

By Mike Maurer

Blockbuster.

Want to listen to all five commentary tracks on Fight Club? Relax.

For $20 a month, NetFlix will let you rent all the DVDs you can watch and hold on to them for as long as you want — providing you keep only four disks out at a time. (If you want more, you can pay for a premium plan.)

Watch your flick, send it back in the prepaid mailer, and NetFlix rushes out the next movie on your list.

Now let's sing a different tune. Take a peek at Musicmaker.com. After some really tough times, Musicmaker has gotten its act together. You can pick songs from the library of 150,000 tracks; the site burns a custom CD for you, complete with message printed on the disc.

Because the songs are licensed, labels get royalties, so there are no pesky copyright issues to worry about.

Of course, Musicmaker hasn't struck deals with every label (sorry, Springsteen fans), so for some tunes, you'll still have to hit the Napster...umm, never mind...you'll still have to buy the CD.

Are you going to be on "Who Wants to be a Millionaire?" You can cover your music knowledge on www.AllMusic.com.

On this longtime-favorite site for music fans, the numbers alone are impressive: 456,000 album listings, 41,000 artist biographies.

But it's in the details that All Music Guide wins us over: Who influenced the artists? Who has covered their songs? What books have been written about them? What instruments do they play? And, of course, who does their laundry?

Missed an episode of "Sex and the City"? Quit sucking up to your friends who have HBO. The synopses on www.MightyBigTV.com are often funnier than the episodes themselves.

The site doesn't cover every program on TV, just the good ones, like "The West Wing," and the ones that are easy to make fun of, like "Popular." There's so much detail here, you'll be amazed at how closely the reviewers watch each show. It's not the Zapruder film, guys!

None of us read the comics, right? (Oh, it hurts when I laugh that hard.) Try Captain Ribman on www.supercomics.com. Although you have to wonder about a superhero who takes his name from the Captain and Tennille. (Now I'll have "Muskrat Love" running through my mind all day.)

But this captain's no ordinary man of steel (he digs fast food, for one thing), and the strip boasts stylish graphics and a wicked sense of humor.

Ribman has delved deep into the Where Are They Now? files to dig up costars like Suzanne Somers and Dick Morris and stick them in adventures, such as "Thigh Masters of the Universe."

This year Captain Ribman ran for elective office under the campaign slogan "More public toilets are my No. 1 and No. 2 issues!"

If my editor doesn't cut that line, the captain has our vote.

County's best say 'So long'

Campaign tries to lure them back

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

Wayne County has a brain drain that could sap the region's recovery from recession.

Young, aggressive members of the work force are abandoning the area for more upbeat cities. A pair of University of Michigan economists might research the problem.

"It's ironic that the university we come from turns out thousands of engineers each year, and the very towns these people are living in have been crying for people," said George Fulton, senior research scientist at the University of Michigan Institute of Labor and Industrial Relations.

"My hypothesis would be most of the young people — the population of educated workers — seem to be going to successful cities like Seattle, Chicago and San Francisco," added Donald Grimes, the institute's senior research associate.

A city's attractiveness is often based on perception. Yet to many prospective employees, the abandoned buildings of Michigan's largest city form an image of the entire state.

"A lot of people want to live where there is a very successful, vibrant city," Grimes said. "As a public policy tool, it's important we have that (vibrant) city in Wayne County to sell Michigan."

As Wayne County enters what Fulton and Grimes said will be a 2 1/2-year downturn that will cost 26,000 private industry jobs, county officials are laying the groundwork for a return to prosperity. A $50,000 television advertising campaign to lure skilled, trained and educated employees has targeted Austin, Texas.

The 30-second spots began airing in October and will run 300 times until Thanksgiving.

Tim Johnson, director of the county's marketing and communication division, said the commercials show "the great amenities we have here in the county that would hopefully appeal to younger workers."

The spots portray "a tremendous urban environment in Detroit with lofts and lakefront — all the things they're looking for," he added. "The purpose is to promote Wayne County as a great place to live, work and play."

"We need to be prepared for the upturn in the economy to ensure we have skilled and qualified workers," said Edward McNamara, Wayne County executive. He said the marketing campaign is an "effective first step in anticipating future demand."

"We need more educated workers if we're going to have growth beyond 2004," Grimes said. "It is something policymakers cannot forget during what eventually will be a temporary time of labor surplus. Keep your eye on the long-term ball."

The county's image drive has competition.

"Every major metropolitan area has some sort of branding campaign," said Craig Anderson, a representative of Tech Oasis, an organization promoting Arizona as a hot spot for high technology companies.

Unlike Wayne County, which is trying to overcome a reputation for harsh winters, rust-belt manufacturers and a decaying downtown Detroit, Tech Oasis touts Arizona's sunny climate, lack of natural disasters and Sky Harbor airport in Phoenix that, except for super-hot days when the air is too thin to provide lift, is always open.

"Still, it can be an uphill battle," said Anderson. "There are companies that see only three or four major cities for their headquarters. If you're not San Jose, Austin or northern Virginia,

Village happening

Among the participants in this year's Halloween trick-or-treat party in the Village shopping district of the City of Grosse Pointe, William Kelly, 14 1/2-months, above, dressed as Winnie-the-Pooh, is pleased to meet a four-legged friend. Rebecca Carroll, 5, of St. Clair Shores, tries to look ferocious as a tiger. The annual Halloween candy giveaway was sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Village Association.

Ahee named a state retailer of the year

Honored for its annual sponsorship of the Capuchin Souper Summer Celebration, Edmund T. Ahee Jewelry of Grosse Pointe Woods has been named a Michigan Retailer of the Year.

"As we kick off the season of giving, it's a fitting time to recognize the retailers who display the spirit of generosity year-round.

The Retailers of the Year honor the best of the best," said Larry Meyer, chairman and CEO of the Michigan Retailers Association.

Ahee has underwritten the entire cost of the Capuchin Souper Summer Celebration for 20 years.

The event has raised $3.5 million to provide more than two million hot meals to thousands of needy people each year.

In addition, the money provides clothing, counseling, housing, education and recreation.

Edmund T. Ahee Jewelry has also contributed to community organizations such as St. John Hospital and Medical Center, Grosse Pointe Public Schools, Henry Ford Hospital "Shoot for the Cure," Toys for Tots and the American Red Cross. The jewelry company also donates several hundred gifts of precious jewelry each year to charities throughout metro Detroit.

The Michigan Retailer of the year is awarded in three categories. Ahee won in the category for medium-sized business. Other winners included Swift Printing of Grand Rapids in the small business category. Kmart won among large outfits.

There's still time for year-end tax planning

As we enter the gift-giving season, the financial experts at Godfrey Hammel, Danneels & Company of St. Clair Shores suggests a present you can give yourself: a lower tax bill.

Here are some tax-cutting ideas.

- Check your tax payments.
- To begin, estimate your 2001 taxes. Then fine-tune your withholding and estimated tax payments. Your goal is to pay the IRS enough to avoid a penalty, without making Uncle Sam an interest-free loan.

- If it looks like you're headed for an overpayment, consider skipping your fourth quarter estimate, or ask your employer to withhold less from your remaining paychecks.

- If an underpayment seems likely, increase your withholding, or consider making a catch-up estimate.

- Review your income and deductions.

Tax rates are scheduled to drop again next year. Consider pulling deductions into 2001 and postponing income until 2002.

But consider the opposite strategy if you expect to be in a higher tax bracket next year, or if you're subject to the alternative minimum tax this year.

- Take full advantage of employee benefits.

Flexible spending accounts and 401(k) plans at work are excellent tax shelters. Consider participating in these or other tax-advantaged benefits your employer offers.

- Review your portfolio.

If you own stocks, bonds, or mutual funds that have declined in value, consider selling them for a loss and replacing them with similar securities. This is called a "swap."

Be careful not to swap for an "identical" security within 30 days, or your loss will be disallowed under the "wash sale" rules.

A limited amount of net capital losses may be used to offset other income, including salary, interest, and dividend income.

If you want to take even larger losses, consider selling some of your profitable holdings. You may use these gains to offset your investment losses. And since gains aren't subject to the wash-sale rules, you may immediately repurchase your winning positions.

Godfrey Hammel, Danneels & Company merged recently with Garvey & Company, and Schroeder, Howell and Trefzer, CPA. The merger made GHD the largest CPA firm in the Grosse Pointe area.

At its 16,000-square-foot office on Greater Mack, the three-in-one firm handles a range of financial services, including tax preparation, business valuation and planning, personal financial and estate planning, human resource and employment consulting.

"All three firms were able to benefit from the merger," said Dave Hammel, grandson of Godfrey Hammel and a resident of Grosse Pointe Shores. "There is really a synthesis here that is one stop shop for out clients."

Other Grosse Pointe residents who work for the firm include Paul Abke, Bill Blake, Chuck Clute, Ken Dornbrook, Laura Gazall, Jeff Hammel, Heather Kupets, Cathy Lorenz, Stan Remus, Ely Sattler and Ted Trefzer.

Gambling rules, exceptions and the IRS

A trip to a casino in Las Vegas or Atlantic City obviously qualify as gambling under IRS definitions.

However, playing bingo or buying raffle tickets for a church fund-raiser is also gambling in the eyes of the government. So is a weekly lottery ticket purchase at the convenience store or a trip to the racetrack to bet.

All gambling winnings are taxable. In some cases, the gambling establishment will assist you by withholding taxes (particularly on sweepstakes and lottery winnings over $5,000 and on certain other wagering winnings as well) and issuing you a Form W2-G.

If you don't receive this form you must report your gambling winnings as "other income" on your tax return.

You can itemize and deduct money spent on gambling up to the amount of your winnings reported as income.

For example, if you win $500 at a slot machine but lose another $1,000 playing roulette, you must report the $500 as income. Deduct $500 of the losses if you itemize your deductions.

As mentioned above, playing bingo or buying raffle tickets for a church fundraiser is considered gambling. That means you CANNOT deduct your losses as a donation to a charitable organization, but you may be able to deduct the losses as gambling losses if you have other gambling winnings to offset them.

Save all of your losing lottery and raffle tickets, bingo cards and racetrack betting slips.

For games of chance that don't leave a paper trail, the IRS will allow a notebook record of gambling activities to prove your losses as long as you also keep a detailed record of your winnings from every hand of blackjack and poker, and every slot machine pull, etc.

Believe it or not, the IRS does recognize gambling as an occupation. Professional gamblers are entitled to deduct all gambling losses, regardless of the amount of their winnings.

However, professional gamblers are also subject to self-employment taxes and must prove their business activities related to gambling are for profit and not a hobby.

Paradise found — on an island not so far away...

By John Minnis
Editor

Ted and Mary Stahl of Grosse Pointe Woods have their own "piece of paradise." And better yet, it's less than an hour from Vernier and Mack.

For five years, the Stahls have been owners on Bob-Lo Island, enjoying a vacation lifestyle year-round. "We have a bed in Grosse Pointe," says Mary Stahl about their home in the Woods, which serves as a weekday base for her and for four of their five children attending University Liggett School and for Ted Stahl, who runs a global company headquartered in St. Clair Shores.

But every chance they get they head for the Ambassador Bridge.

"As soon as we get across the bridge," says Mary Stahl, "it's like all the tension goes away."

A weekend on Bob-Lo is all it takes to become a believer.

To get to the island, all one has to do is cross the bridge and hang a right for about 20 miles. Once in the 200-year-old town of Amherstburg, Ontario, turn right on Park Street, at the foot of which are the exclusive ferry boats for Bob-Lo.

You have to be a resident or invited guest to get across. While driving is allowed on the island, many of the residents get around on quiet, electric golf carts.

There are only about 56 residences among the town-houses and single family homes on the island now. That number is sure to grow when the condo project is completed. But for now, the Stahls and their Bob-Lo neighbors (including some 30 other Pointe families) pretty much have the island to themselves.

It is not unusual for Ted and Mary Stahl to take guests on a golf-cart tour of the 272-acre, 3.5-mile-perimeter island. During the trip, you may enjoy lunch and cocktails at the island's marina restaurant or savor some of the local cheese and wine on a blanket near the old lighthouse.

On the tour, visitors old enough to remember when Bob-Lo was a full-blown amusement park will be thrilled, awed, saddened and spooked by the remaining buildings.

The Needle is still there, offering a panoramic view of the island, the Detroit River, Lake Erie, Grosse Ile and the Ontario shoreline.

Several of the island's Albert Kahn structures remain, including the dance hall (later to become the roller rink) built by Henry Ford, the theater and two of the world's most impressive lavatories. "The church," the beer garden and the mammoth ferry boat dock that once served the famed Columbia and Ste. Claire steamers are still standing.

The old amusement park area of the island has an eerie, haunted feeling. With little effort, one can still hear the children squealing in delight and adults prouetting on the dance floor and laughing it up at the beer garden.

An emu and goat inhabit the island's old petting zoo. Bob-Lo is also home to 22 deer and turkey pheasant.

Returning to the northern, residential end of the island, you pass the new ferry-boat landing and the site of the condominium project, which broke ground this week. Meandering through the new homes and lots is an executive, par-3 golf course yet to be completed.

"And we saved the best for last," says Ted Stahl as the tour ends at his elegant Victorian home. The four-level home features seven baths and six bedrooms, all

The Stahls' getaway home is elegantly done in walnut, cherry and oak, with staircases and upper levels that seem suspended in air. The bottom-level has a bar, entertainment center, billiard and exercise rooms, a wine cellar and a doorwall to the in-ground pool and shoreline.

An avid collector of anything historic, Ted Stahl even has a classic car collection, including a 1911 Ford Model A brass and navy "Torpedo" tucked away in a garage on the island.

While the Stahls' home could easily fit in on the island in the 1880s, don't be fooled. It is state-of-the-art, completely computerized and boasts a heating/cooling system right out of HGTV.

History of Bob-Lo Stahls

Bob-Lo, located about 18 miles downriver from Detroit, was originally called Bois Blanc (island of white wood) by the French due to the island's abundance of birch and beech trees.

A Catholic mission was established by French priests on the island in the 1700s to minister to the Huron Indians. When Fort Malden was built at Amherstburg by the British in 1796, Indians by the thousands from all tribes came to trade furs and camped on the island.

During the Civil War, the island was a stop on the underground railroad.

Col. Arthur Rankin, M.P., who bought 225 acres on the island from the Canadian government for $40, sold the island to his son, Arthur McKee Rankin, in 1869.

The island was sold to McKee Rankin's partners, Col. John Atkinson and James A. Randall, who in turn sold it to the Bob-Lo Excursion Line in 1949. "Bob-Lo" derived from the non-French locals' pronunciation of Bois Blanc.

The first boat to take picnickers to Bob-Lo Island was The Promise. In 1902 and 1910, the steamers Columbia and Ste. Claire were built, featuring a dance floor and a beer garden.

Bob-Lo's first attractions were a boat ride, a park-like setting on the island, a carousel and, in 1903, a dance hall designed by Albert Kahn and commissioned by Henry Ford.

Bankruptcy threatened the island in 1949. The Browning family of Grosse Pointe, owners of a steamship line, came to the rescue and bought the island and boats.

The Brownings made the island an amusement park with indoor rides, roller coasters, a fun house, a ferris wheel and an antique car exhibit. Three hundred exotic animals were purchased for a zoo.

The freighter Queenston was sunk in place in 1961 and its deck served as Bob-Lo's massive landing dock.

In 1970, the Brownings sold the island. Since then it has had several owners, including the owner of the Ice Capades and Harlem Globetrotters and AAA Michigan. Rowdiness in the 1980s, including being overrun by the Outlaws motorcycle gang in 1987, doomed the island as a family destination.

The rides were sold off in 1994 and the island and other Bob-Lo properties were purchased by businessman and developer John Oram, who had gone to the island with his son to look at a roller coaster.

Oram begins developing Bob-Lo Island into an exclusive resort community.

a house like this," says a modest Ted Stahl. He is justifiably proud.

Dining out can be on or off the island. At the Vintage Goose restaurant in nearby Kingsville, Ontario, the Stahls enjoy a four-star meal with Tim and Stephanie O'Neill, who are friends as well as the Stahls' interior decorators.

"We helped Mary (Stahl) plus four other owners on the island," says Tim O'Neill. Though lifelong Canadians, Tim and Stephanie O'Neill say much of the work done by O'Neill-Harrington Interiors is in the States.

Visiting the island brings a lot of memories for Tim O'Neill. In 1972 as a kid, he worked at the amusement park as a magician.

In their line of work, Tim and Stephanie O'Neill have made many trips to Bay Harbour, the exclusive community popular with Pointers near Petoskey. But, Tim O'Neill says, Bay Harbour is three or four times more expensive — and farther away — than Bob-Lo.

Tim O'Neill cites family, safety, proximity and the value of the U.S. dollar ($1.60 Canadian) as the main reasons people like the Stahls choose to buy on Bob-Lo.

Ted and Mary Stahl point out that because the island is the ultimate gated community, they can let their children play and explore without worry.

The Stahls' next-door Bob-Lo neighbor John Oram, who bought the island and other Bob-Lo properties for $2.5 million in 1994, is an unabashed fan of the island and Canada in general.

Oram and Tim O'Neill believe Canada has retained a laid-back, European fla-

Businessman and developer John Oram, formerly of Oakland County, purchased Bob-Lo Island and its other properties for $2.5 million in 1994 and now makes the island his permanent home.

vor. In fact, Oram was so enamored with Canada that he relocated his family from Oakland County to Ontario. He now makes the island his permanent home.

"We didn't feel in danger in Oakland County," says Oram late one night around the Stahls' island campfire pit. "But we couldn't let the kids just run down to the corner, either. Here, it's different."

Oram says the development of the island is going along well and a little ahead of schedule. And, he says, bridge crossings are at pre-1994 levels.

"I believe more and more Americans are seeing Canada as a great getaway," he says. "Everyone is leaning toward resort style living close to home."

The Stahls were among the first to catch on to Bob-Lo's uniqueness.

In fact, a Stahl reunion is a frequent event on the island as the entire extended family has become Bob-Lo owners. Ted Stahl's mother has a townhouse on the island, as does his grown daughter, Erin, and her husband, Tom Guiney, and his oldest son, Brett, and his wife, Sara, and newborn son, Noah.

Ted and Mary Stahl say they considered building up north in Traverse City or

The Bois Blanc Lighthouse on the south end of Bob-Lo Island was built in 1837. The old blockhouse and "The Needle" are in the background.

Grayling. They even looked on Harsens Island.

But they discovered Bob-Lo while driving home on a dreary afternoon some five years ago from Mary Stahl's mother's getaway place down the road in southern Ontario.

"We saw the sign for Bob-Lo," Ted Stahl recalls. "We took the ferry over, talked with John (Oram) and put down a deposit that day."

"We knew as soon as we stood there in the cold, dank rain that is where we belong," Ted Stahl recalls. "It gave us the same feeling we had in the Thousand Islands of New York."

They never regretted the decision.

Jim Saros of the Jim Saros Agency and Dennis Andrus of Prudential Grosse Pointe Real Estate are the United States brokers for Bob-Lo properties.

"It's a piece of heaven," says Saros. "I bought a property on the shipping channel. It's phenomenal. And now is a great time to buy there."

He acknowledges that since Sept. 11 border crossings have become a little more time-consuming, taking anywhere from 15 to 45 minutes.

"It doesn't take as long as people think," Saros says. "You just have to be smarter. You feel like you are going up north, but the bridge is only 20 or 25 minutes away."

Andrus, a director of the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club, points out the opportunities Bob-Lo offers boaters. It is little more than an hour cruise from the yacht club to the island's 100-slip marina.

"We've hosted 10 to 12 Grosse Pointe families," says Andrus. "Everybody who comes loves it. They love the farm (the old zoo). They love petting the animals."

He is also excited about the approach of winter on the island with cross-country skiing, ice skating and a sledding hill.

"We have everything here you have up north," he says, "except for downhill skiing."

With properties ranging from the $200,000s to $4 million, there's a piece of paradise for everyone on Bob-Lo, and it's nearer than you think.

The Pastor's Corner Changing seasons

By the Rev. Morsal O. Collier
St. Paul Lutheran Church

Fall colors are a beautiful sight to behold. People make trips to the mountains, the woods and the countryside to watch fall colors.

Scientifically, trees shed their leaves in order to insulate their roots from the winter freeze and survive the bitter cold.

Fall colors remind us of the change of seasons. Winter is near. Animals in the wild begin to hoard food while others look for crevices and caves in which to hibernate.

For humans, this is the harvest season. We store in barns so that when the growing season is over, there may still be plenty of food for all to eat.

The changes of the seasons are a sign of God's blessings among us. In Psalm 74, God's victory over the forces of chaos is celebrated. In this Psalm we are reminded that God orders the seasons. This shows that He is in control. The changes of the seasons portray the cycles of life that God has ordered.

It is important that when we observe the seasons as they change, we come to God with awe and thankfulness. He is the author of it all. The day of Thanksgiving, which falls around harvest, is a stark reminder to us to come to a provident God.

The God who ordered all things and created us is good. It is He who created the times and the seasons to be a blessing for us.

Star of the Sea dedicates organ

Our Lady Star of the Sea Catholic Church in Grosse Pointe Woods dedicated its new pipe organ on Oct. 28. Bishop Kevin Britt blessed the organ at a Mass that was celebrated by Monsignor Dennis Hartry and the Rev. Roger Lumbré.

The 2-manual, 30-stop mechanical action instrument was designed and built by Karl Wilhelm of Mont. St. Hilaire, Quebec, Canada. A recital later the same day was offered by Dr. Ronald Prowse, dean of the Greater Detroit chapter of the American Guild of Organists and the director of music for St. Joan of Arc Catholic Church in St. Clair Shores. Also performing in the recital was Mrs. Kemmer Weinhaus, director of music for Our Lady Star of the Sea Catholic Church.

Blockbuster book adaptations make holiday movie magic

Jason Sweeney
Staff Writer

'Tis the season. No waiting. There are enough prompts of holiday cheer coming, much too early. No need to use one here. But this year there is a bright side — the holiday crop of movies.

Every year between Thanksgiving Day and the turn of the calendar that makes us all write checks which are 12 months outdated, there comes a bumper crop of films waiting for parents whose kids are out of school, people with small families or those who just can't stand their relatives.

The trend this year in movies is adaptation from novels, with titles like K-PAX already in theaters, trying their luck on the silver screen.

Several more accountable authors will have their works adapted to the picture show before 2001 is at its end.

Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone:

Don't expect to see this film on opening weekend, as many theaters are already sold out.

Hogwarts, Harry, Hermione, warlocks and witchery are so "in" right now, this movie will likely blow away box office numbers for all its competitors and throw a shadow over the profit margins of should-be blockbusters like "Monsters Inc." when it opens on Thanksgiving.

Covering just the first year at the school, the next installment is already being shot and the next book is on its way to adding to the longevity of this new cash cow.

The up side? This looks like a great film for the whole family and collecting the DVDs will be as much fun as collecting the books for the next generation.

The Lord of the Rings:

The mastermind of Middle Earth, J.R.R. Tolkien is finally, albeit decades posthumously, having a live-action film treatment of his epic trilogy.

The fan base of Tolkien's work is worldwide and in areas almost cultic, ensuring a strong start at the box office. The real question one should be asking of these films is, "Will this be another Planet of the Apes?"

Tolkien was never one to write vivid action, or romance for that matter. The characters have long been relegated to the mind's eye. Should they stay there and preserve the mystique?

All three installments are in the can after an 18-month marathon filming session in New Zealand.

True to form or not as Tolkien might have put it himself. The one ring shall find them, one ring to rule their wallets all and in the darkness bind them (to their seats).

Amelie:

After fighting for funding in a cynical French film market and being banned from the Cannes Film Festival as pearls for swine, this diamond in the rough deserves to shine.

Looking past subtitles (a daunting task for some American moviegoers) reveals a touching, simple and genuine tale of a shrinking violet who makes the world around her bloom.

People are touring the area of France where this film was shot and are asking to see the people Amelie helped. Every now and then a film becomes a phenomenon that uplifts the spirit.

This film is the now and when for this year and shouldn't be allowed to slip by.

Iris:

An adaptation of the memoirs of author and philosopher Iris Murdoch, this film brings the power of Oscar winner Judi Dench and two-time Oscar nominee Kate Winslett. They play Murdoch at different times in her life. Renowned composer James Horner steps up to the task of setting a score to the love, success and untimely end of this dynamic woman.

This film will hope to strike a chord with the people of "Chocolat," "The English Patient" and other visually simple but story- and emotion-intense films.

Concerts at United Methodist

David Wagner of Grosse Pointe Farms, associate professor of music at Madonna University, will present a series of organ concerts, "Music for Meditation," one Thursday and Friday each month.

"These are informal gatherings of people, many of whom are on their lunch hour," Wagner said. "It's a time to take a break from the hectic workday and relax while listening to the incomparable sonic sweep of the pipe organ."

The one-hour programs are free, with a different composer or theme to be explored each month. Friday concerts will begin at noon at Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church, 211 Moross, in Grosse Pointe Farms. The theme for Friday, Nov. 16 is "Music of the French Romantics."

On Friday, Dec. 21: "Music for Advent and Christmas;" Friday, Jan. 25: "The Music of Francois Couperin;" Friday, Feb. 22: "The Music of Johann Sebastian Bach;" Friday, March 22: "Organ Music of Lent and Easter;" and Friday, April 26: "Organ Students of David Wagner."

AHA awards grant for study of subclinical heart disease

Dr. Julius Gardin, chief of cardiology at St. John Hospital and Medical Center, has been named principal investigator for a grant funded by the national chapter of the American Heart Association to study subclinical heart disease among Mexican-American adults.

There is limited published information regarding the natural history of heart disease among U.S. Hispanics, the nation's second largest minority group, of which Mexican-Americans constitute a substantial segment.

"Despite reports that suggest increased rates of obesity, high cholesterol and diabetes among Mexican-Americans, cardiovascular death rates are reportedly lower, or at least not greater than, non-Hispanic U.S. populations. We are conducting a study to help us determine why that may be," Gardin said.

St. John Hospital and Medical Center is looking for 150 Mexican-Americans and 150 non-Hispanic Caucasians of European descent to participate in the study. Participants should be 25 to 70 years old and should currently not be treated for high blood pressure, heart disease or diabetes. Qualified women who are interested in participating in the study may be of childbearing age, but not pregnant.

Qualified participants will receive a free cardiovascular evaluation, including blood pressure measurement, non-invasive echocardiographic analysis of heart anatomy and function, and screening for calcium in the coronary arteries, diabetes and cholesterol abnormalities. Transportation will be provided if requested as well as a $25 stipend after the completion of all tests.

For further information, call Sharon Sklar at (313) 343-4170.

Meet the composer

Wayne State University music professor James Lentini of Grosse Pointe Farms, at the right, has received a grant from the New York-based "Meet the Composer" foundation to compose a new work for the Birmingham-Bloomfield Symphony.

His composition, "Shake, Rattle & Roll," will premiere on Sunday, Nov. 18 at Temple Beth El, 14 Mile and Telegraph in Bloomfield Hills. Also shown is his wife, singer Dana Lentini. For more information, call Kevin Devine at (313) 577-1783.

How to beat the holiday blues

By Sharon Maier
SOC Executive Director

The holidays are almost here. They bring a wide variety of challenges.

But what is supposed to be a happy time may bring on bouts of sadness for some people. Everywhere you turn you'll be bombarded with reminders of the holidays.

Feelings of loss, unresolved grief, disappointment, isolation and loneliness could all surface when we compare our lives to the happy times pictured in holiday ads. Even comparing this year's holiday to a holiday from the past may bring about the blues.

Sharon Maier

The solution to beating the holiday blues lies in the cause so it's important to examine what triggers your sadness.

If you feel overworked and stressed during the holidays, start them off with Services for Older Citizens at 11:30 a.m. today, Thursday, Nov. 15. We're celebrating a traditional Thanksgiving dinner and you don't have to lift a finger. No cooking or cleaning and the entire meal is only $1. Turkey and all the trimmings along with plenty of conversation are part of our Thanksgiving celebration. The best part is we wash the dishes.

Other ways to beat stress this holiday season:

- Don't commit to more than you can handle. If there is not enough time in which to do a project, decide not to do it. Don't be afraid to say no.
- Get plenty of rest.
- Make staying healthy a priority. If you haven't gotten your flu shot, get one. We still have a few openings for the Friday, Nov. 16 flu clinic. Advance registration is required, so call (313) 882-9600 for your appointment.
- Watch what you eat. Enjoy, but don't overdo your sugar intake.
- Exercise. It can play an important role in lifting your spirits. Join us every Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 9:45 a.m. The cost is $2 per class. Advance registration is not required.
- When shopping, stay within your budget.
- Avoid unrealistic expectations. Don't be critical of yourself or others if things don't go as planned.

Give up on trying to control family members. Many of us use the holidays as a time for reconnecting with our families, including those family members who would do so much better if they would just take our advice about how to fix their lives. Of course they haven't taken our advice in the past, but this might just be the time they're ready to "see the light." As an alternative, why not leave our teacher/counselor hat in the closet and just concentrate on being a loving son/sister/parent/grandparent.

• Enjoy the simple sounds of the season. Join us for a free concert at Grosse Pointe North High School on Tuesday, Dec. 4. High school students will be filling the air with melodies that are sure to lift your spirits. Call our office for free tickets. Holiday cookies will be available after the concert. No baking, no cleaning, no stress — just a fun afternoon.

• Do something different. Travel with us to Windsor Casino on Thursday, Dec. 27. The trip includes a lunch voucher, transportation on a deluxe motor coach and a box lunch to take home for $15.

• Reflect on your good fortune. We all have things we can be grateful for and this is a good time to focus on them.

If losses and grief trigger your holiday blues, join us on Monday, Dec. 17, for "Living for Today." Don Morris, a motivational speaker, will present an informative talk at 11:30 a.m. He'll help us stay focused on what is important this holiday season.

AHEPA serves citizens of the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods.

SOC 'makes a difference'

The Interfaith Volunteer Caregivers, a program of Services for Older Citizens, joined more than one million volunteers across the country for "Make A Difference Day" on Saturday, Oct. 27.

It's the nation's largest day of helping others, sponsored by USA Weekend magazine and the Points of Light Foundation.

More than 450 volunteers from churches, schools, clubs, youth groups, individuals and families devoted their time, talents and resources to making a difference in our communities. Volunteers raked leaves, delivered flowers and made cards and gifts for senior citizens in the five Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods.

The day started with breakfast at the Neighborhood Club, where more than 100 volunteers received the names and addresses of seniors who would benefit most from a friendly face and a helping hand. Volunteers brought their own rakes and brooms and were sent off into the community to work their magic.

Since Oct. 27, phone calls and letters have flooded the SOC office from all over the community. A daughter of a Grosse Pointe Woods resident said, "The leaf raking day was a real pick-me-up for my parents. [It was] like a party." Another citizen who received volunteers reported that a family en route to her house discovered an older woman raking leaves alone on the next block and pitched in to help her finish the task. "We hope to inspire people to be proactive and help older citizens throughout the year," said Suzanne Mondalek, volunteer coordinator for SOC.

Services for Older Citizens (SOC) is a non-profit organization with a 501(c)(3) designation. SOC was founded in the Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods Communities in 1978 to assist older citizens as they face changes in their economic, personal and social lifestyles. 10 ways to maintain peak emotional health

By Julie Sherbin, D.O.
Special Writer

For many individuals, caring for their own emotional health often takes a back seat to the demands of career, family, home and the needs of others. But psychological health affects physical health, and emotional well-being is as important for a long and healthy life as a strong heart and lungs.

The rewards of caring for your psyche far outweigh the effort. If your emotional health needs a tune-up, try incorporating some of the following suggestions into your life:

1. Find time to do things you enjoy. Spending time on something you're passionate about is rewarding, energizing and exciting. Focusing on one particular task, project or activity is personally satisfying and creates an outlet for day-to-day stress or boredom.

2. Exercise. Studies show that regular exercise — 30 minutes of daily physical activity — can give you more energy, a better quality of life, a healthier body composition, better balance and coordination, improved sleep and a longer life expectancy. In addition, physical activity is empowering and brings awareness and concentration away from thoughts of helplessness or hopelessness. It also allows the body to burn off the adrenaline and cortisone produced in reaction to stress. When these chemicals are present but not utilized for physical exertion, they continue to create stress reactions in the body. Chronically high levels of these hormones can contribute to poor health and immune function.

3. Eat well. By eating a balanced diet, you give your body the energy and nutrients it needs to function at its physical and mental peak. Eat a variety of foods from all four food groups, and be sure to include plenty of fruits and vegetables in your diet. The following nutrients are particularly beneficial for mental health:

- Essential fatty acids help lift depression and optimize mental function.
- Vitamin C and the B-complex vitamins, depleted by stress, are necessary for brain function.
- Antioxidants, used up in large amounts during stress, are important for immune function and the prevention of stress-related illnesses.
- Magnesium, which is rapidly lost during stress, is required for brain, immune and insulin function, cardiovascular health and quality sleep.

4. Avoid putting yourself last on the priority list. Don't become so concerned with taking care of everyone else that you forget about yourself. This is particularly true for women. It's all right to say "no."

5. Get enough sleep. Half of all adults don't get adequate rest, yet sleep is as important for physical and emotional health as exercise and good nutrition. If you're tired, chances are you'll lack the patience to effectively cope with strong emotions. During stressful times, your body requires even more sleep than normal. Make sleep a priority, and if the inability to fall asleep or stay asleep is interfering with your ability to function, see your physician.

6. Help others. Reaching out to others can help you gain new perspective on your own life.

7. Give yourself the gift of solitude. If you spend just 15 minutes a day alone, you might find yourself remarkably refreshed — mentally. Find a quiet place, even if you have to lock yourself in the bathroom with earplugs. Then just sit and focus on your breathing. Or take a walk alone, sit on the porch or gaze out the window. Doing so can clear your mind, slow your breathing and restore your calm.

8. Express your feelings and thoughts. For many people, emotions are mysterious, confusing and difficult to express constructively. Learning to experience your feelings fully and in ways that are adaptive and healthy is not a simple process. In general, it is important to become a good observer of your feelings, to accept and value them, and to attend to what they signal to you. Pay attention to how you feel. When deciding how to express yourself, give some thought to all of the ways you could do that — with speech, action, through writing or another choice. Be patient and don't become discouraged when you find yourself struggling. Learning to experience and express emotions is a life-long process.

9. Establish healthy relationships. Studies show that social connections are necessary for good emotional and physical health. These relationships also provide an outlet for expressing your thoughts and feelings. Maybe it's not advice you need sometimes — just a non-judgmental listening ear that will support and encourage you. Return the favor by being there for others.

10. Get help when you need it. If you feel blue for days on end, just aren't coping with life's challenges or need someone to talk to, seek help. Contact a professional therapist. It's possible that just a few meetings will put you back on the right track. For referral to a qualified counselor, call Bon Secours Cottage Physician Referral at (800) 303-7315.

The mind and body are connected. When you do the things that enable you to have good emotional health, you're far more likely to maintain the levels of physical and emotional health you need to live the life you desire.

Dr. Sherbin is a Bon Secours Cottage psychiatrist who sees patients at Pierson Clinic Psychiatry, located on Kercheval in Grosse Pointe Farms. For an appointment, contact Bon Secours Cottage Physician Referral at (800) 303-7315.

Letting go of need for control means freedom

"If you want to make God laugh, just tell him your plans." This old Jewish proverb is especially familiar to people in recovery from addiction, but everyone can glean some meaning from these time-tested words. They serve as a gentle reminder that most of what happens in our life and in the lives of others is beyond our control.

"Control is usually a fantasy and there is very little of it available," said John MacDougall, manager of spiritual guidance at Hazelden in Center City, Minn.

Parents, for instance, might think they can control their children by controlling their children's environments, he said. "Yet, if you have several children, can you make them grow up the same? Can you make all your employees behave the same way by issuing the same rules at the office?"

Even agencies of social control don't really have control, explained MacDougall. Although police can exert influence by beefing up a police department or having more visibility in a high-crime area, they can't control whether or not a crime will take place.

Although we often confuse influence and control, they are two distinct things. For example, we can influence our health by exercising, not smoking, eating balanced meals and getting an annual physical, but we cannot control our health or longevity. Even the healthy and virtuous are susceptible to disease and accidents.

We can guide and we can nag others, but we cannot script their lives or control how they will act or react. We can plot and plan our own lives, yet the unexpected happens. We can buckle our own and our children's seat belts and drive as carefully as we can, but we have no control over the careless driver who veers into our lane and smashes into our car.

The issue of control is at the heart of addiction and

St. John Hospital seeks volunteers

Those who are interested should call the Volunteer Services department at (313) 343-3680 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

recovery. For example, non-alcoholics can have a drink or two and stop without difficulty, said MacDougall. Alcoholics, however, experience a radical loss of control when they have alcohol.

"They drink well," he said. "What they don't do well is quit." Letting go of our need to control frees us to appreciate and remain open to the wonderful surprises life often hands us. We can become more spontaneous and accepting.

Remember that the Chinese character for crisis also means opportunity. The rain that canceled our perfectly planned picnic outing provides a chance to snuggle in and read the book we've been meaning to get to. A difficult situation at work that escalated beyond our control affords us the chance to bond with a co-worker.

Understanding the myth of control can also help us when we are in leadership roles, said MacDougall. "AA's Tradition Two says that our leaders are but trusted servants; they do not govern."

"If you see a leadership role as service, you can have a lot of influence because you aren't trying to control anyone," said MacDougall. "Think about your heroes. Did they become your heroes by controlling or by influencing

Bon Secours Cottage seeks volunteers

Bon Secours Cottage Health Services is seeking volunteers to assist and contribute as patient and visitor escorts, to work at the information and surgical reception desks, to assist with Meals for the Homebound, to perform clerical duties and to help on the nursing units. Volunteers also help by sewing hand-puppets and crocheting lap blankets for patients. People with musical talent (particularly pianists, harpists and acoustic guitar players) are also needed. For more information, call Bon Secours Hospital at (313) 343-1795; Cottage Hospital at (313) 640-2455; or the Nursing Care Center at (586) 779-7011.

The Caring Person Program is a 20-hour training course that Hospice volunteers must complete. For more information, call Marie Ciccone at (313) 343-6051.

and serving?" "A struggle for mastery and control only increases stress, not success," writes MacDougall in the "Clinician's Guide to Spirituality" (Hazelden, 2001), a book he co-authored with Dr. Bowen White. "Let go and let God" is a healthier approach to life than "I am the master of my fate and the captain of my soul."

"Let go and let God," is a slogan that people in Twelve Step recovery groups often quote.

Others might say, "Trust the universe."

A writer who is experiencing writers' block might be told by another writer to "Trust the process."

No matter how it is put, these various philosophies urge us to do the same thing: realize that the harder we try to control a behavior, a person, or a creative endeavor, the less likely we are to succeed. The struggle to control is usually a futile exercise that can drive us and those around us a little crazy.

This chemical health column is provided by Hazelden, a nonprofit agency based in Center City, Minn., that offers a wide range of information and services relating to addiction and recovery. Make these potatoes ahead of time Homemade mashed potatoes are a must on Thanksgiving day. Spuds from a box are unacceptable.

The problem is how to balance the bird, the veggies, the gravy, the stuffing and mashed potatoes from scratch all at the same time. It becomes overwhelming.

The solution? Make-ahead (up to 2 days) oven-baked mashed potatoes. This vintage recipe comes from an old Philadelphia Junior League cookbook that belongs to my gal pal Dorothy Farley of Grosse Pointe Farms.

Oven-baked

Mashed Potatoes

5 pounds russet potatoes, peeled and quartered
8 oz. cream cheese
2 teaspoons onion salt
1 teaspoon garlic salt pinch of white pepper
2 tablespoons butter

Cook the potatoes in a large pot of salted boiling water until very tender. Drain the cooked potatoes and mash in a mixer or food processor. Add the cream cheese, onion salt, garlic salt, pepper and butter. Beat until smooth and fluffy. Allow to cool and turn the potatoes into a large greased baking dish. Dot the top of the potatoes with additional butter. If you are making the potatoes in advance, cover and refrigerate until you are ready to bake them. For the sake of efficiency, allow one hour of "resting" time between the refrigerator and the oven. Bake in a preheated 350 degree oven for 30 to 45 minutes, until the top becomes golden brown. Serve hot.

These delicious mashed potatoes will be a hit at the table and a hit with the cook who can prepare them as early as two days before Turkey Day. You know a recipe is from the old school when it calls for onion salt and garlic salt. These are two items that you won't find in my pantry.

I bought the salts, however, and the potatoes turned out great. I also prepared them substituting 1/2 cup sauteed chopped scallions and 2 teaspoons chopped fresh garlic for the seasoned salts. For those who are watching their sodium intake, the fresh ingredients offer an updated alternative.

Both versions are rich and creamy and yummy and dreamy. You'll sleep well on Thanksgiving Eve knowing that your fresh homemade mashed potatoes are tucked away in the refrigerator.

One more dish can be checked off your list. With just one week to go, it's time to begin. Start with the sweet potato muffins (in my Nov. 1 column), bake them and freeze them. Then, on Monday, prepare the jellied cranberry and port sauce (in my Nov. 8 column). Then make the mashed potato recipe on Tuesday or Wednesday.

With a little planning,

À LA ANNIE

By Annie Rouleau-Scheriff

you can reduce your stress level for what is supposed to be a day of reflection and giving thanks.

Thanks for a great recipe, Dorothy. Next week I'll give you my vintage recipe for leftover turkey.

Grosse Pointe North didn't win the first Macomb Area Conference girls basketball tournament, but North coach Gary Bennett was happy just the same. "There are times when we win and I'm not happy because we didn't play the way I want us to play,"

Bennett said after the Norsemen lost 33-30 to Fraser in last Friday's championship game at East Detroit.

"The things I value were there tonight, so I'm happy even though we didn't win. We battled all the way. The effort was there. We competed."

Gallagher rips Kingston in regional final

By Bob St. John
Staff writer

Bishop Gallagher's football team is back in the state semifinals for the third time in the past four years, thanks to last weekend's 52-14 thrashing of the Kingston Cardinals.

The win gave head coach George Sahadi and his Lancers a Division 8, Region 4 championship.

"We had to prepare for a good Kingston team that used a very diverse offense," Sahadi said. "They had some success early, but our kids settled down and played very well."

Very well indeed as the Lancers' offense was never forced to punt, scoring on its first seven possessions and on eight of 11.

"We wanted to run the ball right at them and use our speed," senior running back Darnell Hood said. "We were focused today."

Hood, who earned the Detroit Free Press all-East first team honors earlier in the week, rushed for 209 yards on 19 carries with three touchdowns, while senior fullback Damien Brown had 142 yards on only eight carries with three touchdowns.

Kingston, which came into the game with an impressive playoff resume, gave up 20 points in each of the first two quarters and 12 more in the third period before the Lancers put a halt to their assault.

"They beat us with speed," Kingston head coach Mike Rea said. "We don't face opponents that have this much talent, but today we did and lost."

Junior quarterback Brian Seery was near perfect, completing 8-of-10 passes for 138 yards and one touchdown, plus he rushed for a score and passed for two two-point conversions.

Junior tight end Tim Becker (69 yards) and senior wide receiver Milton Johnson (33 yards) each had two receptions, while senior wide receiver David Jones (23 yards) and sophomore wide receiver Lonnie Pettway (13 yards) each caught one pass.

In the first quarter, the Lancers scored on a one-yard run by Hood, a 12-yard run by Brown and a 65-yard run by Hood.

Seery hit Johnson for a 26-yard touchdown pass to open the second period, plus Brown busted a 70-yard scoring run and Seery completed the first-half burst, scoring on a two-yard run.

The Lancers' final two scores were a 19-yard run by Hood and a 28-yard run by Brown.

Defensively, the Lancers yielded a little more than 200 yards in the first half, but only 20 in the final two quarters.

"Coach Sahadi told us to bear down and play defense like we can," Hood said. "We did a great job of shutting down Kingston after the first quarter."

Pettway and Becker each had an interception, while junior Pascal Iwu and Jones each had a quarterback sack.

Other defensive standouts were seniors Terry Carty, junior Darron Bell and

GPHA Pee Wee AA Bulldogs take first place in Kalamazoo tourney

The Grosse Pointe Hockey Association Pee Wee AA Bulldogs got the season off to a good start by winning the championship at the KOHO Early Bird tournament in Kalamazoo.

Since the team was formed at the Mite travel level, it has reached the finals of 75 percent of the tournaments it has competed in.

It was no easy task to come in first at Kalamazoo.

The Bulldogs and Chicago Flames were tied 1-1 after regulation and two overtime periods in the championship game, but Grosse Pointe outscored the Flames 2-1 in the shootout round to win the title.

Despite being outshot, Chicago beat the Bulldogs 1-0 in the opening game of the tournament.

Grosse Pointe bounced back from that defeat to roll past the Battle Creek Bruins 7-0. The Bulldogs jumped ahead early with three first-period goals.

The Bulldogs picked up their second victory by beating Sault Ste. Marie 7-0. In both of its 7-0 wins, Grosse Pointe won every period, which qualified it for the semifinal round against the Orland Park Vikings.

The Bulldogs' goalie turned away some early opportunities by the Vikings and Grosse Pointe came alive and posted a 9-2 victory. After the slow start, the Bulldogs outshot the Vikings 46-5.

The semifinal victory set up the rematch with the Flames, who won the tournament the last two seasons. The Bulldogs took a 1-0 lead midway through the first period but Chicago scored late in the second period on a disputed tally from a goalmouth scramble.

Grosse Pointe goalies Evan Breen and Michael Jarboe combined for a 1.00 goals-against average. Each goalie made several outstanding saves, especially in the games with the Flames.

The Bulldogs' scoring attack was paced by forwards Steven Smith, Gerald Freismuth and Taylor Flaska with strong support from Andrew Osborn, Ryan Abraham, Steve Coates, Robert Ireland, Steven Rozelle and Matt Sukarukoff.

Every Grosse Pointe forward collected points in the tournament and provided strong two-way play.

The Bulldogs' defensemen contributed airtight coverage in their zone and also made significant offensive contributions. Members of the defense corps were Josh Grey, Brett Haugh, Danny Kowalski, Matt Miller, Lance Walker and Erik Wilson.

State champion knocks out Knights in soccer semifinal

By Chuck Klonke

Sports Editor
University Liggett School's soccer teams usually follow coach David Backhurst's halftime instructions to the letter.

Unfortunately for the Knights, it didn't happen that way in the second half of their Division IV state semifinal game with Southfield Christian at Auburn Hills Avondale.

But the Eagles' speed had a lot to do with that.

Southfield Christian broke a 1-1 tie only 34 seconds into the second half and the Eagles added two more goals in the first 10 minutes of the half on the way to a 6-1 victory and a berth in the state championship game. Southfield Christian defeated Muskegon Western Michigan Christian 2-1 in the title contest.

"We talked about coming out strong in the second half," Backhurst said. "We felt good about being tied at halftime but they moved so fast in the attacking zone. Their forwards are so quick. They're the fastest team we've played all year. Our fastest defenders couldn't keep up with them."

Senior midfielder Cory Giannola, who scored Christian's only goal in the first half, broke the tie with a high shot that sailed just under the crossbar. It was an identical shot to the one he scored on to give the Eagles a 1-0 lead with 20:24 left in the first half.

Less than five minutes later, Christian's Kevin Smith was knocked down in the penalty area and the Eagles were awarded a penalty kick. Iain Bryant took the shot and scored into the lower left corner of the net. ULS goalkeeper Calvin Ford, who stopped four penalty shots in the Knights' shootout victory against Oakland Christian in the regional final, got a hand on the ball but was unable to make the save.

"The penalty kick was the turning point in the game," Backhurst said. "After that we had to gamble by bringing people up and the floodgates opened."

Brad Marshall boosted Southfield Christian's lead to 4-1 with 30:25 remaining. The Eagles got their final two goals from John Frith and Jeremy Atkins in the last 7:12.

Ford made some excellent saves in the first half as Southfield Christian controlled play most of the time. After Giannola's first goal gave the Eagles a 1-0 lead, Ted Ottaway tied the game for the Knights with 16:13 remaining in the first half.

It was a fine individual effort by Ottaway, who weaved through two defenders to get a shot on goalie Josh Johnson, who had never played soccer before this season. Johnson made the initial save, but Ottaway got his own rebound and buried it in the back of the net.

The loss left ULS with a 9-9-2 overall record.

"I'm happy we got this far," Backhurst said. "Earlier in the year I didn't know if we'd make it past the districts."

After ULS lost 1-0 to Southfield, the Knights were 3-6 and Backhurst made some adjustments in his lineup.

"The biggest change was moving Patrick Schafer from forward to sweeper," Backhurst said. "That helped solidify our defense. He did a nice job back there. I remember sitting in the faculty lounge grimacing before the season started, wondering who was going to step up for us — and a lot of people did — Schafer, Ford, (Todd) Callahan, (Chris) MacGriff. And Ottaway came in as a transfer and helped us."

It's a young Knights squad. The only seniors are Ford and Coughlin. The team's two leading scorers, Callahan and MacGriff, are coming back along with most of the defense and mid-field corps.

Backhurst's main task next year is to find help for Callahan and MacGriff.

"Southfield Christian played them pretty tight," Backhurst said. "We just have to find a way to develop some more scoring. Todd and Chris accounted for something like 70 percent of our scoring this season."

"We had a JV team that went 5-4 this year so that should help us. And we'll be getting Owen Daar back."

Daar played as a freshman a year ago but attended school in Europe this year in an exchange program.

"I'm looking forward to next year," Backhurst said. "We should be pretty good. We'll have to beef up the non-league schedule again."

senior George Perry, plus sophomores Robert Cornelius and D'Angelo Lumpkin.

The Bishop Gallagher football team improved to 10-2 overall.

Coming up for the Lancers is a state semifinal game at 1 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 17, against Mendon (9-2) at Haslett High School.

The Lancers lost to Mendon 29-13 in a semifinal two years ago at DeWitt High.

"Mendon is a very good football team," Sahadi said. "They play hard-nosed football and we have to play our best to beat them."

Mendon traveled to Redford Bishop Borgess in its Region 3 title game, pummeling the Spartans 51-0.

The winner of the game faces the winner of the Iron Mountain North Dickinson (12-0)/Beal City (11-1) semifinal.

North Dickinson beat Gaylord St. Mary 33-7 and Beal City defeated Fowler 14-0.

Playoff preview

Mendon is making its 17th appearance in the state playoffs since they began in 1975, which is sixth in all-time appearances among all 503 high schools in Michigan.

The Hornets won the 1999 Division 8 state championship, beating Gaylord St. Mary, plus they beat Lake Linden-Hubbell in the 1995, '91 and '89 state title game in Class DD and Class D.

Mendon also won the state title in '82 and '93, beating Rudyard and McBain, plus it lost the '83 championship game to St. Ignace.

For Gallagher, this is the third time in four years and fourth time in its history that it will compete in a state semifinal contest.

The Lancers are 2-1 in the previous three games.

Mendon's conference foes in the Saint Joseph Valley League — Bronson, Centerville, Colon, Constantine, Schoolcraft and White Pigeon — offered a stiff challenge, as did its non-league combatants Battle Creek Pennfield and Battle Creek St. Phillip.

The Hornets have won their three playoff games 41-8 over St. Joseph Lake Michigan Catholic, 35-0 over Covert and the 51-0 thumping of Bishop Borgess, while Gallagher has won its three playoff contests by a combined score of 170-73.

Offensively, both squads have a ton of weapons, which makes this a wash, but it looks as if the Hornets have posted the better defensive numbers, which gives them the edge.

However, the Lancers haven't played their best defensive game, which might come against Mendon.

The special teams play might be one of the biggest keys to the outcome as extra points and two-point conversions will loom large.

Field position will also be a huge factor to the eventual winner.

Coaching is a wash as both squads bring a wealth of experience to the table.

This will be one of the best semifinals in the state, regardless of division.

One thing the Lancers have in their favor is revenge as the taste of the 1999 semifinal loss is still in the back of the minds of the seniors and juniors who played in that game as underclassmen.

Mendon is the slight favorite, but Bishop Gallagher wins the game in the final minute, 27-26.

Basketball

The Bishop Gallagher girls basketball team completed its regular season last week, splitting its games.

The Lancers opened with a home 43-31 win over Warren Fitzgerald.

"The girls weren't into the game and it showed by our lackluster performance on the court," head coach Ron Biotti said.

The Lancers trailed

Fitzgerald, which scored only four points in a game a couple of weeks ago, 10-7 after the first quarter.

"I couldn't believe we were behind, but we were," Biotti said. "Fitzgerald came out ready to play and they took it right at us."

Gallagher trailed 12-10 before using a 10-4 run to end the half up 20-16.

Seniors Bridget Carpenter and Helen Pettway each scored a half-dozen points in the third period as the Lancers pulled away, grabbing a 35-22 advantage.

Junior Katie Masserang's two long jumpers gave the Lancers a 20-point lead and they cruised in the final four minutes of the game.

Carpenter scored 16 points, followed by senior Jena Jump with 14. Pettway added eight and Masserang finished with four to lead the Lancers.

"If we play this way against dePorres, we will lose by 40 points," Biotti said.

Biotti's crew played with more emotion, but it still wasn't enough to prevent a 43-36 loss.

"We played much better, but we still came up a little short," Biotti said. "We had to stop their fast break in the second half, which we did, but it still wasn't good enough."

Pettway scored 12 points, 16 rebounds, two blocked shots, one steal and four assists against a team that should win a district title before getting destroyed by Benedictine or Inkster in the regionals.

Carpenter added nine points and 13 rebounds, while senior Katesha Lee had eight points and five rebounds, and Jump had seven points and three rebounds.

The Bishop Gallagher basketball team finished the regular season 11-8 overall.

Next for the Lancers is a possible trip to a Class D district final tonight, Thursday, Nov. 15, against either Detroit Holy Redeemer or Lutheran East.

South adds MAC Red conference crown to dual meet title

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

A good start is always important. That's what Grosse Pointe South's girls swimming team had last week in the Macomb Area Conference Red Division meet at Utica Eisenhower.

The Blue Devils won the 200-yard medley relay — the first event of the meet — with the team of Marianna Anderle, Maria Dzul, Amber Rodin and Lindsay Rodin and went on to finish with 383 points for a 42-point margin over runner-up Grosse Pointe North.

"The medley relay was a swing event for us," said South coach Jim Bellanca. "We loaded it up and the girls came through for us."

"We knew we had to win one of the three relays if we were going to win the meet. We decided to go for the medley relay because it was the first event and if we won it would get us off to a good start."

South's medley relay team had a winning time of 1:58.01 while North was second in 2:00.40.

Another key event for the Blue Devils was the 100 butterfly, which comes after the long break for the diving competition.

North's Kristin Shelden won the fly in 1:02.18 but South's Wenk sisters, Ashley and Greta, took the next two spots, while North's Melissa Cleary, Margaret Eugenio and Jennifer Metes took fourth through sixth place.

That's North's strongest event and for us to take second and third was huge," Bellanca said. "Ashley is one of our most well-rounded swimmers. She swims everything and her versatility has been invaluable for us. Greta is just a freshman but she's one of our best butterfly swimmers."

Ashley Wenk was second in 1:06.46, a half-second ahead of her sister.

South had a comfortable lead going into the second day of competition but Bellanca wasn't taking anything for granted.

"You never know what's going to happen in the finals," he said. "It's good to go in with an advantage but you don't know what kind of swings it's going to take."

That's why Bellanca and assistant coaches Bill Thompson, Jamie Mertz and Tom Mulhern stressed the importance of doing well in Friday's preliminaries.

"Each team can enter four swimmers in each of the individual events and every girl we entered made it back for the second day," Bellanca said. "That meant that a third of the swimmers who qualified for the finals were from South."

"Saturday is the day you pick up the most points, but you can't win those points without getting through on Friday."

South's only individual victory came from freshman Samantha John, who won the 100 backstroke in 1:06.35. She edged Fraser's Stacie Gryzenia, who was second in 1:06.52.

The Blue Devils took three of the first six places in the 200 individual medley with juniors Ashley Wenk, Dzul and Anderle. Another strong event for South was the 500 freestyle where seniors Lindsay Rodin, Allison Clark and Jennifer Richardson-Rossbach were second, fifth and sixth, respectively. Sophomore Tina Jasin was seventh in the 500.

Sophomore Alex Doherty won the consolation finals in both the 50 and 100 freestyle events and freshman Katie Stieler earned points in the same two races.

South's other winners in the consolation finals were Richardson-Rossbach in the 200 freestyle and Andrea Fikany in the 100 backstroke. Earning valuable points in the diving for South were Katrina Laney and Laura Vandelinder.

North won both freestyle relays and the Norsemen took five of the individual first places.

Melissa Jamerino took firsts in the 50 freestyle (25.21) and the 100 freestyle (54.86).

Following are the winners of each event and the North and South swimmers who finished in the top 12:

ed. We just didn't finish." The championship game matched the top two teams in the MAC White Division. The two teams split their two regular-season meetings. North finished 13-1 in league play, while Fraser was a game behind.

"When we lost back-to-back games to North and Sterling Heights during homecoming week we figured our chances of winning the (division) championship were over so we set our sights on the tournament," said Ramblers coach Dave Kuppe.

"This has been our goal since the middle of the season."

It wasn't an easy goal to achieve. The Ramblers had to beat Red Division champion Utica Ford II 64-46 in the semifinals to get another chance at North, which beat Sterling Heights Stevenson 45-40 in overtime.

The title game was just what would be expected from two of the top teams in the league.

Fraser jumped out to a 6-0 lead on three straight inside buckets by Jackie Sorgi but North answered with a 10-0 run to take the lead early in the second quarter.

After that, neither team led by more than four points. Fraser held a 15-14 halftime lead. The Norsemen started the second half with a three-point basket by Beth Bigham, only to have Angie McGinnis respond with a triple of her own on the Ramblers' next possession.

The game was tied at 28-28 after North's Jill Bramos made two free throws with 2:46 remaining. Fraser's Kristi Pieper, who scored all nine of her points in the second half, broke the tie with 1:46 to go. Pieper then hit a jumper from inside the paint with just under a minute left to make it 32-28.

North had some opportunities down the stretch, including several layups, but managed only one basket in the last five minutes.

"I think it might have been different if we could have gotten the lead toward the end of the game," Bennett said. "We're pretty good at protecting the lead."

Kuppe said that the plan was to get the ball inside to Sorgi and Pieper and the two of them combined for 19 points, with Sorgi collecting a team-high 10.

"We wanted to get the ball into our forwards because they're so good under the basket," said Kuppe, who coached the boys and girls basketball teams at Lutheran East in the early 1990s. "But North's pressure took us in and out of that. We didn't always take good care of the basketball. They play tremendous defense."

Bramos led North with 10 points and Meredith Farmer finished with nine.

Fraser paid special attention to Farmer.

"She hurt us in both of the first two games we played against North so we wanted to make sure we focused on her," Kuppe said. "We looked at the films and concentrated on her tendencies."

Pieper led Fraser, which takes an 18-2 record into the state tournament, with eight rebounds and Katie Price had seven. Farmer pulled down eight rebounds for North and Bramos had six. Bigham played another outstanding defensive game for the Norsemen, who finished the regular season with a 17-3 mark.

It took a major comeback from North in its semifinal to get into the championship game.

Stevenson led by six points with about 6 1/2 minutes left but the Norsemen turned up the defensive heat and quickly tied the game.

"Within 15 seconds we had tied the score," Bennett said. "It was the best 15 seconds I've seen in 19 years of coaching."

North's defense came up with seven steals in eight Stevenson possessions in the fourth quarter.

Bramos tied the game on a steal and an end-to-end layup with 1:03 remaining. Shelby Simmon hit a pair of free throws to give North the lead but the Titans tied the game again on a pair of foul shots with 33 seconds to play.

The Norsemen grabbed the early lead in the overtime on a putback by Bramos and stayed ahead the rest of the way.

"From the fourth quarter on we really played well and it carried over into (Friday's) game," Bennett said. "We broke out of the slump we've been in."

Bramos led North with 14 points and 12 rebounds. Farmer added 11 points and seven rebounds and Bigham finished with eight points.

Holly Meier led Stevenson with 18 points.

South sweeps MAC crossovers

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe South's girls basketball team ended its regular season on a positive note by sweeping the three crossover games against the Macomb Area Conference White Division.

"We needed those to give us some confidence going into the state tournament," said South coach Peggy Van Eckoute.

The two most recent victories in the crossovers, which were for teams that didn't qualify for the league tournament, came against East Detroit (57-39) and Roseville (39-23).

In both of those games, the Blue Devils won with strong second-half efforts.

South led 16-13 at halftime against Roseville but outscored the Panthers 18-1 in the third quarter. Roseville didn't get its first second-half point until there were 47 seconds left in the third quarter.

"Our second halves have been much better lately," Van Eckoute said. "We hadn't played good second halves most of the season."

Senior guard Stephanie Shepard provided the spark for South early in the second half. She scored six of South's first seven points in the half and also keyed the defensive effort with a couple of steals.

"When she's been healthy, she's been a spark for us," Van Eckoute said of Shepard, who finished with eight points, six rebounds, two steals and two assists. "She seems to be able to get the whole team going."

Unfortunately, Shepard missed several MAC Red contests with a variety of injuries, including a broken finger.

Lauren Harrington had six points and four rebounds; Liz Laciura collected five points, six rebounds and two assists; Beth Mumaw had three points and five steals; and Stacey Pepler finished with five rebounds and two assists.

Kim Brynn led Roseville with eight points, including six in the fourth quarter. Kassie Monick had five points and 11 rebounds.

In its game with East Detroit, South led all the way but the Blue Devils only had a 26-20 advantage at halftime. South pulled away in the fourth quarter when it outscored the Shamrocks 18-10.

Pepler and Laciura each had outstanding games for the Blue Devils. Pepler collected 13 points, five rebounds, five steals and two assists, while Laciura had 13 points, three rebounds, five steals and an assist.

Lawren Morawski finished with seven points, five rebounds and three steals and Liz Halpin had seven points. Liz Ridgway had five points, five rebounds, two assists and three blocked shots.

Stephanie Shepard provided a second-half spark for Grosse Pointe South's girls basketball team in last week's victory over Roseville.

Tournament preview show airs on TV-5

Grosse Pointe TV-5 will air the Midwest Open Tennis Tournament preview show for the fourth consecutive year on the "Pointers with Prost" program.

Tournament chairman James Pattee and Grosse Pointe Hunt Club director of tennis Brian DiVirgilio will discuss this year's event with host John Prost.

Five-time titlist Ed Nagel will return to defend his title with Anne Miller. Grosse Pointer Susan Mascarin-Keane, a former top 30 women's tour player, will team with Detroit's Steve Campbell. Campbell recently played on the men's tour and was ranked 78th nationally.

Saddlelites defeat Cass Tech in finale

By Bob St. John
Staff writer

Regina completed its regular season last week, beating Detroit Cass Tech 57-45 in the Operation Friendship consolation game at U-D Jesuit.

"Cass Tech is a good team and the game will help us as we prepare for the districts," head coach Diane Laffey said.

Senior Rachel Cortis scored 16 points to lead the Saddlelites.

In the championship game, No. 1-ranked Detroit Martin Luther King defeated No. 10-ranked Birmingham Marian 63-52.

"I wish it was us playing King, but we had to settle for the consolation game," Laffey said.

Earlier in the week, Regina visited Pontiac Notre Dame Prep, winning 65-36.

"We had 14 girls score in a game we controlled from the opening tip," Laffey said.

"The game gave us some confidence after losing the tough championship game to Marian."

Cortis scored 13 points to lead the Saddlelites, which led by 18 at the half.

The Regina basketball team had its best regular season since the late 1990s, finishing 14-6 overall.

Of the six defeats, two came by one point, one was by four points and two were by eight points.

Coming up for the Saddlelites is a possible spot in a Class A district championship game at 7 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 16, at Grosse Pointe South.

"Our goal is to win a district championship," Laffey said. "The girls have the drive to win, but it won't be easy."

feated North.

"We're due for a big win against North or South," Laffey added.

Swimming

Head coach Frank Bruneel knew his Regina swim team would be in a battle for third place in last weekend's Catholic League swimming and diving championship meet at Royal Oak Dondero.

Farmington Hills Mercy easily won the meet with 507 points, followed by Birmingham Marian with 391.

In the next slot, Bruneel figured his Saddlelites would be neck-and-neck with Pontiac Notre Dame Prep.

He was right, but his Saddlelites finished fourth with 101 points, while Prep was able to score 146 and take third.

Livonia Ladywood was fifth with 79 points, followed by Royal Oak Shrine with 76 and Madison Heights Bishop Foley with 47.

"The girls swam well and we had our moments in a tough meet," Bruneel said.

Katie Monahan had a personal 2:27.91 (ninth) in the 200-individual medley, while the 200-medley relay earned a fourth place.

Jackie Sheridan (28.48) had a personal best in the 50-free, while in the 100-butterfly Nicki Bruneel had a 1:10.15 for 10th.

For seniors Jackie Babich (first in diving), Sarah Bechill, Blair, Bruneel (captain), Michelle Cybulski, Kristen Davis, Lauren Feldman, Krystyna Iwanski

Striding for South

Red Barons varsity finishes with a win

After finishing the season with a convincing 35-7 victory over the Warren Jets, Grosse Pointe Red Barons varsity coach Bret Kurily didn't hesitate when asked about the best way to characterize his team and its season.

"We had 16 'ironmen' — players who didn't miss one practice," Kurily said. "We had six 'tin men' (one missed practice) and three 'aluminum' (two practices missed). That's more than 50 percent of our kids.

"That shows me that there is tremendous commitment and it tells a lot about the character of this team."

Kurily's team didn't match last year's 8-1 record as it finished 3-5, but it impressed the coach with hard work throughout the season.

"We played hard," Kurily said. "We were in almost every game. A couple plays and we could have been 5-3 instead of 3-5."

The Barons won their final game at Grosse Pointe South with a punishing ground attack led by Billy Matouk, Brad Herman, Nick Vlahantones and Willie Bryant.

Bryant scored on a 59-yard run, Vlahantones scored on a 40-yard run and Herman ran the ball in from 24 yards out. Jamie Sheppard and Tim Deters scored the other touchdowns on runs of four and one yard, respectively. Alex Symonds kicked a pair of two-point conversions.

"We executed well on running the ball," Kurily said. "The offensive line did a great job."

Among the standouts were Joe Conway, Danny Burkhart, Mike Rau and center J.P. Gallagher, who did an outstanding job all season on long snaps.

The defense had one of its best games. Linebacker Nick Durham had an interception and made tackles all over the field. Lineman Mike Lacura played his best game of the season. Danny Dempsey played well in the defensive backfield and Matouk had several hard hits.

"Billy Matouk, I can't say enough about this kid," Kurily said. "He always gave it everything he had all season."

JUNIOR VARSITY: Doug Luttenberger's junior varsity squad improved with each game and finished with a 6-2 record after beating Warren 34-13 with a diversified offense and excellent defense.

The speedy Mike D'Agnesse scored three touchdowns. He caught a 10-yard pass from Mark Riashi, scored on a 60-yard interception return and also ran 10 yards for a touchdown. D'Agnesse nearly had a fourth touchdown but he was tripped up at the 10-yard line after making his second interception of the game late in the first half.

The JV offense kept Warren off-balance with the passing of Riashi and the running of Danny Walsh, D'Agnesse, Geoffrey Osgood, Brandon Brown and Stephen Reaume.

Reaume, a punishing fullback, had his best game as he gained many important yards. Osgood and Brown ran for the other two touchdowns.

The defense was stifling as Frank Ferretti, Joey Kurily, Jimmy Saros and Chris Reno made several big plays. Jeff Regan pressured the Warren quarterback with a strong rush throughout the game.

FRESHMEN: Coach Tony Cimmarrusti's team ended its season with a hard-fought 21-20 victory over Warren.

"It was a wonderful season," he said. "We finished 5-3 and the games we lost were by seven points or less."

"It was an outstanding group of kids and the coaches were terrific with the kids. It was special."

Cimmarrusti praised the dedication of assistant coaches Mark Fragel, Scott Kudialis, Steve Maiuri, Mitch Shirar and Jeff Simon.

The offensive line of Peter Hamann, Tom Halpin, Nicholas Hinz, Anthony Riashi, Alex Allor and John Bolton was strong. Centers Patrick Deters and Zack Schrode didn't miss a snap all season while working out of the shotgun.

"On offense, Simon, Guest and Reid Fragel really carried the team with their running," Cimmarrusti said. "Bobby Peltz was a great utility player. And our end, Kevin Ginnebaugh, really improved."

The defense was led by linebackers Mike Cimmarrusti, Joshua Cok and Clayton Carter and cornerbacks Guest and Roger Vanderbussche.

"Billy Matouk, I can't say enough about this kid," Kurily said. "He always gave it everything he had all season."

JUNIOR VARSITY: Doug Luttenberger's junior varsity squad improved with each game and finished with a 6-2 record after beating Warren 34-13 with a diversified offense and excellent defense.

The speedy Mike D'Agnesse scored three touchdowns. He caught a 10-yard pass from Mark Riashi, scored on a 60-yard interception return and also ran 10 yards for a touchdown. D'Agnesse nearly had a fourth touchdown but he was tripped up at the 10-yard line after making his second interception of the game late in the first half.

North sets sights on another title

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

"The bar is high." That's a favorite saying of Lions coach Marty Mornhinweg.

Unfortunately, this year's team hasn't come close to approaching the standards that Mornhinweg has set for his squad.

The bar is also high for the Grosse Pointe North hockey team. And unlike the Lions, it's likely to achieve its lofty goals.

"We're looking forward to opening the season and defending our title," said coach Scott Lock, who guided the Norsemen to the state Division II championship last winter.

"The kids got a taste of what it was like last year and they want to keep it."

Although the Norsemen lost several key players through graduation, they'll have 16 returning players, including goalies Collin Chase and Dan Vasquez and defenseman Trevor Mallon, Jonathon Thomas, Eric Touhey and Andy Carter.

"I don't think there's a better goaltending tandem in the state — high school or Midget Triple-A — than those two," Lock said. "And we have two solid, experienced defense pairings."

There's a strong forward line that includes Roger Horrie, Chris Barger and David Neveux. Neal Gram also figures to provide some experience and scoring punch up front.

Two newcomers who are being counted on heavily are Eric Dloski and Robbie Floyd. Dloski and Floyd played on the Bantam Tier II national champion Great Lakes Panthers last season.

"We'd always like to have enough young guys to develop," Lock said. "Their roles increase as they get older. They might be an extra forward or defenseman as freshmen and sophomores. As juniors, they'll play on the third and fourth lines and by the time they're seniors they'll be on the first and second units."

North scrimmaged against one of the top Midget AAA teams in the area last week and Lock was pleased with what he saw from his squad.

"Almost everybody played well," he said. "It took a little while for us to get our legs but I felt that we dominated after the first eight minutes."

North had a tough schedule last year and it has been heaped up even more.

The Norsemen have non-league contests scheduled against the Culver (Ind.) Academy A team; New Trier, the Illinois state champion; and Park Tudor of Indianapolis, the Indiana state champ. North also plays St. Edward, a private school from the Cleveland area.

"Our league is going to be tough again, too," Lock said of the Michigan Interscholastic Hockey League. "Three of us (North, Redford Catholic Central and Cranbrook Kingswood) won state championships and Port Huron Northern lost in the (Division I) championship game."

Birmingham Brother Rice rounds out the league. The teams in the league will also play four common opponents, which will count in the league standings. Those teams include Livonia Churchill and Stevenson, Trenton and Clarkston.

North has moved from the St. Clair Shores Civic Arena to the Mount Clemens Ice Arena, which is located on Groesbeck, north of Cass Avenue.

"It's a fast ice surface, which will suit our team better," Lock said.

North starts the regular season on Friday, Nov. 23 at Port Huron Northern. Most of the Norsemen's early schedule is on the road. Their first home game is Dec. 16 against New Trier.

Pioneers let lead slip away in loss

By Bob St. John
Staff writer

The Harper Woods girls basketball team headed into the state playoffs on a down note.

The Pioneers lost two of their last 10 games, including last week's 47-46 setback to Warren Zoe Christian.

"We had our chances to win this game, but let them slip away," head coach Mike

Rowinski said. "The girls made some shaky decisions in the fourth quarter."

The host Pioneers led 14-10 after the first quarter and 25-21 at the half.

They were still in control early in the fourth quarter, leading 39-33.

Zoe Christian made its move, using a 13-4 run to take a 46-43 advantage. Senior Sarah Mazzone's three-pointer tied the game at 46, but Zoe Christian's Jeni Carlson (27 points) hit one of two free throws in the final seconds for the win.

Mazzone scored 14 points, while sophomore Ashley Marshall had nine. Freshman Maria Mahon and sophomore Meaghan Huot each scored eight points.

The next night, Harper Woods beat Livonia Clarenceville to finish the regular season 6-12 overall.

South coasts in district

By Chuck Klonke

Grosse Pointe South coaches Peggy Van Eckhout and Ian Stephan didn't have to give away any strategy to Grosse Pointe North in its Class A state district girls basketball opener on Monday.

With North's coaching staff watching from the stands, South easily rolled past Detroit Finney 55-10 to set up Wednesday's district semifinal against the Norsemen.

The championship game will be Friday at 7 p.m. at South with the winner of the North-South game playing the Regina-Detroit Denby semifinal winner.

Regina also had an easy first-round victory, crushing Detroit Southeastern 71-18.

"I thought we did some good things in the game," Van Eckhout said. "It's difficult to continue to play hard when you're so far ahead, but they did. And they did the things we wanted them to work on."

"They did a good job of staying focused and playing the game the right way in the second half."

South led 13-0 after the first quarter and before the second quarter had reached the halfway mark, the Blue Devils had a 26-0 lead.

Stephanie Shepard, who led all scorers with 14 points, scored the final eight in South's 13-0 spurt at the beginning of the second quarter.

Finney got its first basket with 3:32 remaining in the first half and the half ended with South ahead 33-4.

Shepard also collected five steals and had two assists. Lauren Harrington had eight points and 10 rebounds. Beth Mumaw finished with seven points and four assists and Stacey Peppler wound up with six points, two rebounds and three steals.

Regina also had an easy first-round victory, crushing Detroit Southeastern 71-18.

"I thought we did some good things in the game," Van Eckhout said. "It's difficult to continue to play hard when you're so far ahead, but they did. And they did the things we wanted them to work on."

wore as down in the final period," head coach Carl Gerds said. "Liggett has had our number, but each of the games has been close until the end."

Sophomore Ashley Schult had 14 points to pace the Eagles.

Later in the week, East lost 44-30 to Bloomfield Hills Roper.

Eating like a bird?

In order to maintain a high body temperature of 101 to 112 degrees, a bird must eat much more rapidly than we humans do. This process of sustaining high internal body temperatures through the production of metabolic heat is called endothermy.

Some of the examples of food that is quickly processed is truly amazing — a thrush that was fed elderberries passed them 30 minutes later and a barred owl digested two sparrows in 1 1/2 hours!

The feeder birds that we enjoy so much in our yards have a digestive system that is quite different than our own. As an adaptation to lighten their weight for flight, birds do not have teeth. Birds swallow their food without chewing and grinding. Species of birds that feed primarily on seeds have well-developed salivary glands to assist them in eating these dry foods. A bird's saliva contains the enzyme ptyalin, which starts the process of carbohydrate digestion. Woodpeckers take this even one step further by having saliva that is sticky — the better to capture insects with!

From the oral cavity, the food is moved into the esophagus where it is processed with powerful contractions and secretions from mucous glands. In many birds, part of the esophagus has evolved into a compartment for storage called the crop. This structure is unique to birds and is a special adaptation for birds that need to eat a large quantity in a hurry.

For example, hawks can be observed with bulging crops as they fly over, evidence that they have recently eaten a good meal. The capacity of the crop may be very large as has been evidenced by hunters who have discovered a pound of grain in the crop of turkeys. Have you noticed your birds will gorge themselves on seeds at the end of the day, especially in the winter months? They are storing food in the crop to help maintain their body temperature through the night. An extremely interesting adaptation of the crop in some species, such as pigeons and doves, is that it can produce crop milk which is used to nourish the young of those species.

The birds' food next travels to the two-chambered stomach, the glandular portion of which is called the proventriculus, and then onto the grinding portion which is called the gizzard. Different species of birds may have either of these chambers more prominent than the other depending upon their diet. Softer foods eaten by fruit-eating species of birds require a more well-developed proventriculus, whereas birds with a diet of harder foods such as seeds have a larger gizzard. The gizzard is lined with a multi-ridged layer of tissue made of keratin, the same strong tissue that is found in claws. This muscular organ is capable of processing unshelled nuts consumed by turkeys! The gizzard is where birds will store grit or small stones which act as internal teeth to aid them in the processing of foods. Once through this system of two stomachs, the food is sent to the intestine for absorption of nutrients.

The duodenum is the part of the intestine that connects to the stomach, the liver and the pancreas. It is here that the liver and pancreas secrete bile, which allows birds to metabolize the high fats found in the seeds they consume. The pancreas also secretes enzymes which allow for further digestion. The liver in a bird functions differently than in other mammals and is proportionately larger, storing carbohydrates for birds in order to provide the quick energy needed for flying.

All birds excrete waste that is solid or liquid through the cloaca, appropriately named from the Latin word for sewer.

One very different aspect of bird digestion is the casting up of pellets. When fur, feather, bones and claws cannot be digested, they form into a pellet in the gizzard. The pellet then passes back into the proventriculus until the bird ejects it with retching motions, leaning forward as it drops the pellet out of its mouth onto the ground. Additional meals cannot be taken in until the pellet is ejected. Pellets are most common in birds of prey.

You'll probably take a slightly different look at the birds in your yard as they eat at your feeders.

The best dishes are obtained from vintage recipes.

A couple of weeks before I got married, in October 1978, I found and clipped several old, famous, out-of-print recipes specially reprinted in one of the popular women's magazines — I believe it was Women's Day magazine. The recipes were given at one time, years ago, on the labels of leading brand-name products.

Sensing back then that I stumbled upon a gold mine has proved true — I've been cooking up several of these recipes throughout the years and have been asked many times to share them.

Good thing my mother has a copy of my carefully kept Hershey's recipe that's listed below. Imagine my astonishment, a moment ago, when I went to look for that recipe and it was gone, disappeared!

The following recipes are the greatest:

The ingredients listed on the recipe below cannot be found on the Creamettes label today because some proportions have changed — believe me, it makes a big difference!

By Diane Morelli

Creamettes Cheese Bake

2 cups uncooked Creamettes Macaroni
 1/2 cup butter or margarine
 2 tablespoons flour
 1 1/2 cups milk
 1 teaspoon salt
 1/4 teaspoon pepper
 1 cup grated process Cheddar cheese
 Paprika
 Prepare Creamettes according to general directions on package, drain. Melt butter, add flour and cook, stirring constantly, for two minutes — do not brown.
 Stir in milk, salt and pepper.

Cook until smooth and thickened. Combine macaroni with white sauce. Pour into an 11- by 7-inch casserole. Top with cheese. Sprinkle with paprika. Bake in 350 degree oven for 25 to 30 minutes. Place under broiler for a few minutes if a browner crust is wanted. Serves six.

Hershey's Disappearing Cake

To frost this cake I use the white frosting recipe found on the label of Dominos powdered sugar.

1/4 cup butter
 1/4 cup shortening
 2 cups sugar
 1 teaspoon vanilla
 2 eggs
 3/4 cup Hershey's Cocoa
 1 3/4 cup unsifted all-purpose flour
 3/4 teaspoon baking powder
 3/4 teaspoon baking soda
 1/8 teaspoon salt
 1 3/4 cup milk
 Generously grease and flour two 9-inch round cake pans. Cream butter, shortening, sugar and vanilla until fluffy. Blend in eggs. Combine cocoa, flour, baking powder, baking soda, and salt in bowl. Add alternately with milk to batter. Blend well. Pour into pans. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes, or until cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean. Cool 10 minutes, remove from pans and use cocoa in your favorite frosting recipe too.

Dash paprika

Coat chicken with flour. Arrange chicken in single layer with skins down in melted butter in 13- by 9- by 2-inch baking dish. Bake uncovered in hot oven (425 degrees) for 30 minutes. Turn chicken, bake until brown, 15 to 20 minutes longer or until tender. Remove from oven and reduce temperature to 325 degrees. Pour off excess fat. Combine Carnation, soup, cheese, salt and pepper. Add onions and mushrooms to chicken. Pour Carnation mixture over chicken. Sprinkle with paprika. Cover dish with foil. Return to oven; bake 15 to 20 minutes.

Brownies

Featured on this recipe I clipped back in 1978 is written, "For brownie lovers, Baker's classic brownies recipe is tops. It has been highlighted on the unsweetened Chocolate package for more than 30 years."

Makes about 20 brownies.
 2 squares Baker's Unsweetened Chocolate
 1/3 cup soft butter or other shortening
 2/3 cup all-purpose flour
 1/2 teaspoon Calumet Baking Powder
 1/4 teaspoon salt
 2 eggs
 1 cup sugar
 1 teaspoon vanilla
 1/2 cup chopped nuts

Melt chocolate with butter over low heat. Mix flour with baking powder and salt. Beat eggs well; then gradually beat in sugar. Blend in chocolate mixture and vanilla. Add flour mixture and mix well. Stir in nuts. Spread in greased 8-inch square pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 minutes (for moist chewy brownies) or about 30 minutes, or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean (for cake-like brownies). Cool in pan; then cut into squares.

Note: Recipe may be doubled; bake in greased 13- by 9-inch pan at 350 degrees for 25 or 30 minutes, as directed. Makes about 40.

Besides offering great taste, famous vintage recipes go down as "comfort food" — something we blessed Americans are craving.

Baked Chicken that Makes Its Own Gravy

On the back of my recipe card is a clipping that reads, "this recipe qualifies as one of Carnation's 'classics of the past.' This savory dish was first introduced on Carnation's Evaporated Milk label in 1964, and if you're a gravy nut, you'll love it."

Makes six servings.
 3 to 3 1/2 pounds frying chicken pieces
 1/4 cup flour
 1/4 cup melted butter
 2/3 cup undiluted Carnation Evaporated Milk
 1 1/4 cups (10 1/2 ounce can) cream of mushroom soup
 1 cup (4 ounces) grated process American cheese
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 1/8 teaspoon pepper
 2 cups (1 pound can) drained whole onions
 1/4 pound sliced mushrooms

Covering the central A/C compressor can be damaging

We, at Gilbert's Pro Hardware, are in a dilemma regarding central air-conditioning covers. Customers want to cover their air-conditioning compressors for the winter and we do not want to sell them! Are we crazy?

First, I want to clarify what unit is being discussed: The central air compressor unit, not a window air conditioner, is first in my discussion. The compressor is on a pad, connected to the house and furnace with copper tubing and electrical lines. It is designed to be water-proof, not moisture proof.

Condensation forms when the compressor is enclosed with an airtight cover. Corrosion begins when water droplets form inside the cabinet, the fan and the relay. Do not cover the unit unless your compressor manual or the manufacturer recommends doing so. Let it breathe, good air in, moist air out. After all, it is designed to be in the weather all year.

Our suggestion is to put a flat cover over the top of the unit and leave the sides open. If you do have

Mr.
Hardware

*By Blair Gilbert
Gilbert's Pro Hardware*

a cover, do not pull it all the way down to the base of the unit. Tie or tape it so the bottom four inches or more are exposed.

If you have any questions or doubts, call your service person and follow their instructions.

We might not sell many covers, but we hope to get you back in the spring for coil cleaner and hose nozzles. The better air flows through the radiator (the coils) the more efficient the unit will perform. Window air conditioners, on the other hand, should be covered to prevent drafts into the house.

If the window air conditioner cannot be covered or sealed from the outside, seal the unit on the inside.

An inside cover can be fabricated with reusable storm window tracking and 2-mil plastic sheeting. Install the track on the wall around the window and the air conditioner. Use the small "spline" track to snap the plastic sheet in place. Start at the top keeping the plastic as straight as possible. Then do the bottom stretching the plastic evenly. Finish with the sides and you have just sealed the window and the air conditioner from the winter's drafts.

The tracking is two-piece plastic, self-adhesive, and comes in white, beige and brown. The 2-mil sheeting is flexible like kitchen plastic wrap, only thicker.

Come spring, remove the plastic sheeting and leave the track on the wall for next winter. The tracks are reusable for many years to come.

One advantage to this system is the plastic is inside the house, tight as a drum, while the wind and weather beat on the window and air conditioner outside.

Local agency offers services that can help with energy savings

Many households across the nation are feeling an unanticipated tightening of the purse strings these days. Due to the effects of an economic slowdown and drastic changes in the job market, many families will find themselves struggling to meet the demands of growing utility costs.

Especially during the cold winter months when energy bills can soar, weatherizing a home can mean a significant decrease in energy savings. It can also go a long way to ensure that families don't have to make the unimaginable choice of "eating" or "heating" their homes.

Wayne-Metropolitan Community Action Agency's Weatherization Program is a free program funded through the Department of Energy and can provide the following energy saving assistance to income-eligible households in Highland Park, Hamtramck, the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods:

- Attic, wall or floor insulation
- Storm windows
- Weather stripping

- Ceiling, wall and roof repairs
- Steel replacement doors
- Set-back (smart) thermostats
- Furnace cleaning, repair and testing

"The Weatherization Program makes a lot of sense and it works," says Perry Jones, Wayne-Metro executive. "It has been proven time and time again, and the savings on energy bills means money for other needs and peace of mind as well."

Wayne-Metropolitan Community Action Agency's Weatherization Program employs a licensed builder who works with clients individually to identify and better meet their needs. Wayne-Metropolitan Community Action Agency provides a range of comprehensive services to low- to moderate-income persons which promote positive change for Wayne County communities, individuals and families empowering them to become self-sufficient. For more information, call Bill Carlson, lead home repair and energy inspector at (313) 843-2550.

For the Birds

The cardinals are swallowing sunflower seeds whole, the hawks have a bulging crop after dining on the excess sparrow at your feeder, the downy woodpecker uses its sticky saliva to extricate the insects from your trees, and if you are lucky enough to have a visiting pheasant, you can imagine the workout his gizzard is getting after he consumes the whole corn you offer.

I hope that you will have a new-found appreciation for the birds' need of a full feeder at the end of the day in the colder months ahead.

The year 2001 White House Christmas ornament depicts President Andrew Johnson with his children and grandchildren returning to the White House from an afternoon carriage ride, his favorite form of relaxation.

Andrew Johnson, the 17th president of the United States (1865-69), took office after the assassination of Abraham Lincoln. With the political turmoil surrounding his rise to the presidency, Reconstruction, the threat of impeachment, and the illness of his wife, Johnson's life at the White House might have been unbearable had it not been for the love of his close-knit family. The president often took afternoon carriage rides with his children and grandchildren and picnicked in the surrounding countryside.

"My favorite memory is of the presidential carriage coming back to the White House filled with children." — William H. Crook, White House guard.

This ornament captures the joyous spirit of those family outings.

This commemorative ornament, the 21st in the series started by the White House Historical Association in 1981, is a three-dimensional replica of the type of carriage Johnson once used. Beautifully crafted, it has a 24kt. gold finish and eight enameled colors. It is displayed within packag-

Controlling the pest that damages indoor plants

Q. I brought my tropical house plants indoors and now I am noticing some kind of insect on them and the leaves are turning yellow. What can I do? From Bugged in St. Clair Shores.

A. Most plants have some insects on them and this is normal. It is only when the population of the pest grows to the level that the insects start to do damage that we need to control the pest. When your plants were outdoors the cooler weather kept the population down. Now that the plant is in your warm house the insects are multiplying.

First it is always best to identify which type of insect is doing the damage. The best way is to bring a sample of the plant and insect to your local garden center for help in identification. This way the best control solution can be found.

The five most common indoor insects are aphids, white flies, spider mites, scale and mealy bugs. All of these insects suck the plant's juices causing the plant to discolor, wilt and possibly die. Aphids and white flies are usually found on the underside of the leaves. Naturally the white flies are white but the aphids may be black, green or brown. Spider mites are almost invisible. Mites will make the leaf look tarnished, turn yellow or brown, and then fall off. Hold a piece of white paper under the branch and then shake the branch. If your plant has red spider mites you will see very small red spots move on the paper. Scale is an insect that will form a shell over it. What you see is small white or brown bumps on the plant. Mealy bugs are very common pests to your house plants. They look like a cottony substance and can usually be found on the trunk or at the base of the leaf stem.

There are many pest control products on the market. Some are more consumer friendly than others. Applying pest control indoors requires a little extra precaution since you will be breathing the same air. Insect spray may be necessary when infestation is severe. The best way to apply even the very low toxic plant sprays is to spray the plant in the garage and then return the plant to the house after it has dried.

Pyrethins is an insecticide made from daisy plants and is used to control a wide range of insects safely. Insecticidal soap is another option in control. This type of soap covers and suffocates the insect. Remember, before you use any product always read the label. There are other choices for controlling insects on your plants, but these are some of the safest choices for indoors. Also you may consider other nonchemical management controls such as a sharp spray of water, sponging the leaves with soapy water or brushing off the insects with a cotton swab of rubbing alcohol.

Plants normally are fertilized when they are actively growing. Most plants that are indoors all year will not need much fertilizer during the winter. The few outdoor plants that will be actively growing indoors such as hibiscus could benefit from a slow-release plant food such as Osmocote or Espoma. You could use some organic fertilizer like bone meal.

Salt's the secret solution to tender turkey

ARA — "Tough, tasteless and dry." Three words you don't want to hear your family and guests use to describe the turkey at the center of the holiday dinner table. Yet, according to turkey industry experts, those words are often used to address the state-of-the-bird.

"The biggest complaint people have about turkey is that it's tough and dry," says Lynn Lauve, marketing manager of Honeysuckle White Turkeys, Springdale, Ark. "People want their holiday turkey to be moist and flavorful."

Avoiding a parched bird doesn't have to take hours of preparation, constant consideration or endless lamentation. All it takes is salt and water.

Brining

Simply soaking your turkey in a salt brine the night before the big day could very well save your holiday turkey from a dry and flavorless fate.

"Brining results in a turkey that is flavorful and juicy," says Michele Anna Jordan, chef, syndicated food writer and author of the cookbook "Salt and Pepper." "Salt's natural ability to draw out a food's true flavors and juices will ensure that your bird will retain its moisture during roasting."

The right stuff

Brining requires a fresh turkey. The majority of frozen turkeys at the supermarket have been pre-basted with turkey broth, fats or flavorings. This is done to eliminate the chore of basting a turkey during the roasting process. A fresh turkey is just that: fresh and free of any ingredient except turkey. A fresh turkey lets you use any method you choose to boost the flavor and moisture content of the bird.

Salt comes in several forms. The right salt will enhance the natural flavor of a fresh turkey and help it remain juicy. One option is regular granulated table salt, which consists of small, hard cubes that dissolve slowly. Another option is kosher salt, which has crystals that are light and fluffy, much like snowflakes. Kosher dissolves easily, and if you use a kosher salt that does not contain the iodine often found in table salt, its taste is clean and pure.

"You can use basically brine with any salt you wish," says Jordan, "but I recommend using a good kosher salt, like Diamond Crystal brand kosher. I like its unique flakes that dissolve quickly. It has no anti-caking agents or additives — just pure salt. Diamond Crystal's flakes taste fresh and light: perfect qualities for creating a good brine."

The simple solution

For maximum flavor, brining a turkey should begin the evening before it is roasted. A large stockpot should have enough space to brine a bird. The general "recipe" for brining is one cup of kosher salt to one gallon of cold water. Fill the stockpot with the cold water, add the kosher salt and stir until the salt has completely dissolved. Once dissolved, the salt and water mix will stay suspended.

Leave the turkey's legs in the "lock" and remove the neck and giblets from the body and neck cavities. Next, place the turkey in the pot and cover it with a lid, towel or plastic wrap and place the pot in the refrigerator (if necessary, remove a shelf to accommodate the size of pot). There is no need to stir the solution or shift the turkey unless the brine doesn't completely cover it. If that's the case, turn the turkey every few hours to make sure each part is submerged at some point.

Roasting

When it's time to roast the bird, remove it from the brining pot, pat it dry with paper towels, add stuffing and place in a shallow roasting pan with the breast side up. Average roasting temperature for a

Stop mildew before it starts

(WMS) It's not unusual to find mildew in bathrooms, closets, laundry rooms, basements and other humid areas of the home.

Mildew is a fungus that grows best in warm humid areas where air is stagnant. It's ugly, unhealthy and often difficult to keep under control — no matter how often you clean. But, there are ways to keep the growth of interior mildew at bay.

The following are helpful tips from the experts at William Zinsser & Co.:

- Install exhaust fans and replace solid doors with louvered doors to improve ventilation in mildew-prone areas. This alone can significantly impede the growth of interior mildew.

- Wipe down bathroom shower walls with a dry towel after each use. This will reduce the amount of moisture in the air and retard mildew growth.

- Kill existing mildew by cleaning surfaces thoroughly with a solution of two cups bleach to one gallon of water, followed by a clean-water rinse.

Prevent the growth of mildew on painted surfaces by applying two coats of a mildew-proof paint like Zinsser's Perma-White Mildew-Proof Bathroom Paint. Perma-White is available in a bright white formula that can be tinted to a variety of pastel colors. It protects itself against unsightly mildew as it brightens and beautifies bathrooms, basements, laundry rooms, closets and other interior areas. Its low-odor formula is so durable and dependable at preventing mildew on the paint film, Zinsser backs it with a five-year money-back guarantee.

Turkey

turkey is 325 degrees. Cooking time will depend on the bird's size and whether or not it's stuffed, but ranges from 13 to 25 minutes per pound. Check the turkey's package recommendations for proper cooking time. When the bird is done roasting, test it with a meat thermometer to ensure it is fully cooked. The thermometer should register 185 degrees in the thighs and 170 degrees in the breast.

Unfortunately, that's easier said than done. White meat cooks faster than dark meat so, chances are, when the dark, thigh meat finally reaches its optimal temperature of 185 degrees, the breast meat is also at least that hot, usually resulting in dry white meat. That's why brining, which keeps the breast meat moist, is so important.

"Brining ensures the breast meat stays succulent while the dark meat cooks," says Jordan. "The salt pulls out the turkey's natural juices and the added water essentially steams the turkey breast."

Added touches

Although brining should prevent a dry bird, Jordan goes one step further to guarantee a tender turkey. "I soak a tea or flour-sack towel in melted butter and place it over the breast of the turkey while it roasts," says Jordan. "I also take the bird out thirty minutes before its scheduled finish time. I tent the pan with tin foil and leave the turkey on the counter to let the juices settle."

Brining is a simple solution for a stress-free holiday turkey.

Jewel Quest

By Miss Bijoux

Q. I know what the precious stones are — diamond, ruby, emerald and sapphire — but what about semiprecious stones? Which are the most valuable? — J.K., Chicago.

A. Somewhere during the '80s, precious and semiprecious lost their moorings. Miss Bijoux contends that the terms are passe. While the "Big Four" (diamond, ruby, emerald and sapphire) are still the Big Four, some less commonly known stones are actually more expensive, depending on the size of the stone in question.

For example, a type of garnet called a demantoid is a beautiful green stone that is a viable alternative to emerald. A demantoid may be cleaner and a better green than a similar emerald. As a garnet, a demantoid is always harder and more brilliant (has a higher refractive index) than an emerald. And a demantoid garnet is rare, especially in sizes over 2 carats.

That garnet is going to cost more per carat than the commercial-quality emeralds on the market, and it certainly can cost more than the equivalent-size sapphire. So, the term semiprecious, formerly used with all garnets, does not apply accurately to demantoid garnets.

The same is true of Alexandrites, a variety of chrysoberyl that appears dark green in daylight and deep red under artificial light. Again, rarity is key, and the cost of a genuine Alexandrite, if you can find one, can be very high.

Today it is the size and quality of the individual stone that determines the value, given that the stone is rare. There is no hierarchy of values in gemstones beyond the Big Four, but it is a misnomer to call a stone that can sell for more than a good-size diamond a semiprecious gem.

Q. Why am I seeing so much platinum? Is it that much better than yellow or white gold? — S.B., Birmingham, Ala.

A. Platinum is the rarest of the precious metals — and the hardest. Of the eight precious metals, platinum is fashioned into jewelry in the purest state: 95 percent being platinum, with small percentages of one or more related metals added for hardness. Gold alloys have higher percentages of added metals.

The advertising campaign for platinum since the mid-'90s has been nothing short of a triumph. All but banned from the popular conscience since World War II, when platinum was conscripted exclusively for military use, its resurgence has been in response to popular demand, but the demand was created by a bravura orchestration of information, publicity and hype.

All this said, certain gemstones look better in a white metal like platinum (think a high-color diamond); others, in yellow metal (think citrine, which is typically a yellow quartz). Some skin types are complemented by white metal (skin without a yellow undertone); others, by yellow metal.

Yellow gold is coming back very strong this year. There is definitely a role for both white and yellow metals in jewelry, but beware of wearing several pieces of each at the same time to the extent of resembling a Christmas tree.

November 23, 2001

Grosse Pointe Lions Club proudly presents the fourth annual Jingle Bell Walk-Run at 9:00 a.m. Friday, November 23rd, prior to the Grosse Pointe Village Association Santa Claus Parade.

The Jingle Bell Walk-Run has become the Grosse Pointe Lions Club major fund raising project, proceeds of which help us support many charities. These are listed on page 8.

The Grosse Pointe Lions Club has been serving the Grosse Pointe communities for over seventy years. Our club is only one of 41,000 clubs in Lions International, the worlds largest service organization, with members in 168 countries.

Please join us on November 23rd for our Jingle Bell Run, fun for all.

The Grosse Pointe Lions have been loyal supporters of Seedlings Braille Books for Children for 15 years, helping it's founder and director Debra Bonde to bring the gift of literacy to blind children everywhere.

Bonde began Seedlings, a tax-exempt, nonprofit organization in 1984 because braille materials were scarce and expensive. Her goals were to increase the availability and lower the cost of braille books for children in order to promote their literacy skills and their love of reading. In 1985, the first year of book production, Seedlings produced just 221 books in Bonde's basement office; a far cry from the 16,000 that will make their way to blind children all over the United States and Canada in 2001. Bonde, along with a small staff and many dedicated volunteers has produced over 125,000 braille children's books and articles since 1984.

Many of those books have been given away to blind children in the Detroit area and around Michigan through holiday gift programs, summer reading programs and library projects. Seedlings' goal is to help raise the literacy rate among children who are blind. At this time, less than 20% of the 50,000 blind children in the United States are proficient in braille. All too often, the written word has been inaccessible to them, and this is what we are hoping to change. "The ability to read is the basic building block to all education!" declares Bonde. Seedlings' mission, to increase the opportunity for braille literacy by providing access to quality literature for blind children impacts the children we serve by providing the tools for literacy. By providing the tools (braille books) to blind children we are giving them a foundation for literacy and the essential skills to succeed and become lifelong learners.

Seedlings print-and-braille books help families read together!

Lions clubs, dedicated to serving the visually impaired, have been key contributors to Seedlings' mission, and the Grosse Pointe Lions Club has been unwavering in their commitment to Seedlings since 1987. Their donations subsidize production costs, helping Seedlings to get books into kids' hands! Photos of our braille readers are available in jpeg format. Please contact me with an e-mail address if you would like a photo sent electronically. The photos are production quality.

Seedlings Mission
Seedlings Braille Books for Children is a nonprofit, tax-exempt organization dedicated to increasing the opportunity for literacy by providing high quality, low cost braille books for children.

Seedlings History
In 1984 when Debra Bonde founded Seedlings, braille materials were scarce and expensive. Her goals were to increase the availability and lower the cost of braille books for children in order to promote their literacy skills and the love of reading. In 1985, the first year of book publication, Debra made 221 books in her basement office. By 1990, Seedlings was producing 5,000 books per year, which precipitated its move out of Bonde's basement and into the Bentley Center in Livonia, Michigan, and eventually to our present location. During the produced 14,854 braille books and articles, with a current grand total of over 125,000 books since 1984. Seedlings' new and improved website was also launched in the year 2000 with accessibility for the visually impaired and online ordering and donations!

In 1994, Seedlings added The Rose Project, which provides encyclopedia articles in braille for students' projects and reports. The Rose Project has become a very popular resource for students eager to work independently. We anticipate requests for 800 articles in 2001. This service is entirely free to visually impaired students in grades 1-12. The original bequest that funded The Rose Project has been exhausted and Seedlings recently received a grant from the UPS Foundation to provide the next 650 articles!

Seedlings Funding
As a nonprofit organization, Seedlings sells its books for considerably less than it costs to make them. Support is very broad based and comes from individuals, philanthropic groups, corporations and private foundations, receiving no government or United Way funds. Lions Clubs, dedicated to serving the visually impaired, have been key contributors to Seedlings' mission. Thanks to hundreds of generous donors and dedicated, hard working volunteers, the price of Seedlings' books remains far below actual production costs, averaging only $10 per book.

Leader Dogs for the Blind has been providing independence and mobility to the visually impaired community for over 60 years. Through the help of 112 employees, some 400 volunteers and our numerous friends and donors, Leader Dog has been offering the best in training, quality of dogs and comfortable accommodations to its students. Beginning with the dream of three Lions, four blind individuals were offered new found freedom. Today, Leader Dog graduates approximately 300 persons per year.

In 1939, Lions Nutting, Schurr and Dodge were frustrated over the wait required to obtain a dog guide. To imagine someone having to be on a list to receive independence - something most of us take for granted each day. They recognized the urgency and quickly began to research ways to remedy the situation. After some struggles, they had a class, an instructor, and a 14-acre parcel of land on which to build what would become a life altering facility for nearly 12,000 people.

Sixty-two years later, Leader Dog still enjoys the support of Lions clubs internationally, graduates from all corners of the globe and the most noteworthy staff available. It is clear the founding fathers would be proud. To add to the many accomplishments of the school, Leader Dogs for the Blind is in the process of erecting a new Residence and Training Center, scheduled to break ground in the summer of 2001. The new structure will allow individual rooms, bath and "park" areas for students and their dogs. The offering of private space will provide an environment more conducive to quick bonding between the student and their new guide. The time saved by having individual park areas will allow for additional training time - over an hour each day. These are a few of the immediate and obvious benefits of the new construction.

Leader Dogs for the Blind provides its services for no charge to the visually impaired. The cost of producing a team is approximately $25,000. The funding for its operating budget of nearly $8 million is provided through Lions Clubs, an endowment fund, and the generosity of private donors, corporations and foundations. It is only through the benevolent support of others that Leader Dog is able to continue its mission and provide uninhibited travel to the visually impaired community.
