

Chicken from China is a Public Health Threat

The constituents below contacted your office urging you to withdraw the rule allowing chicken imports from China. Your office should have received the language below or a similar message from each signer.

Dear USDA:

I am opposed to granting equivalency status for the poultry inspection system in the People's Republic of China and urge the USDA to reject this proposed rule (Docket # FSIS-2017- 0002-0002).

Giving China equivalency status says that China's food safety system for poultry is as strong as the U.S. system - but that could not be further from the truth. USDA food safety inspectors have repeatedly found major problems in China's food safety system.

China is responsible for contamination of dairy products, poultry processed with high levels of antibiotics, food processors recycling cooking oil recovered from street gutters, and reports of rampant antibiotic-resistant bacteria in Chinese poultry.

China has experienced numerous outbreaks with different strains of avian influenza over the past decade, with especially severe problems in the last year. Tens of thousands of birds have been euthanized because of the outbreaks, and nearly 300 humans have died from contact with sick birds. Even Chinese government officials said that the country's food safety system has "deep-seated problems."

This proposed rule is clearly a beef-for-chicken swap with China. China agreed to accept U.S. beef that's subjected to a rigorous food safety inspection system. In return, the USDA agreed to import China's poultry that has received scrutiny from a weak food safety system.

This deal puts U.S. consumers at risk. I urge you to withdraw this proposed rule.
