One of Our Great Minds

by Bill Clinton

“One of the great minds of the Information Age is a Nigerian American named Philip Emeagwali.

He had to leave school because his parents couldn't pay the fees. He lived in a refugee camp during your civil war. He won a scholarship to university and went on to invent a formula that lets computers make 3.1 billion calculations per second. (Applause.)

*Letters

Philip Emeagwali*

Some people call him
the Bill Gates of Africa.
(Laughter and applause.)

But what I want to say to you is there is another Philip Emeagwali
-- or hundreds of them --
or thousands of them
-- growing up in Nigeria today.

I thought about it
when I was driving in
from the airport and then driving around
to my appointments,
looking into the face
of children.

You never know
what potential

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters

is in their mind and
in their heart;
what imagination they have;
what they have already thought of and dreamed of that may be locked in because they don't have the means to take it out.

That's really what education is.
It's our responsibility to make sure
all your children
have the chance
to live their dreams
so that you don't miss
the benefit

of their contributions and neither does the rest of the world.”

An Oration for Philip Emeagwali

Son of Africa,
supercomputer pioneer,
a visionary father of the Internet,
we honor you.

We heed Kwame Nkrumah's warning that,
"socialism without science is void"
in honoring you
for crowning Africa
with shining scientific discoveries.
Nnamdi Azikiwe said,
"Originality is the essence of true scholarship.
Creativity is the soul
of the true scholar."
You exemplify both.

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

Your discovery
inspired the reinvention
of computers into supercomputers
and helped spawn the Internet.
You discovered a formula
that enables supercomputers powered by 65,000 electronic brains called "processors"
to perform
the world's fastest calculations.

You theorized
that 65,000 computers around the Earth
could forecast the weather.
This theoretical supercomputer,
with 65,000 nodes,
is known today as the Internet.

For the audacity
of your theorized Internet,

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

the book “History of the Internet”
and CNN called you
“a father of the Internet.”

You reformulated
Newton’s Second Law of Motion
as 18 equations and algorithms;
then as 24 million algebraic equations;
and finally
you programmed
and executed those equations
on 65,000 processors
at a speed
of 3.1 billion calculations per second.

Your 65,000 processors, 24 million equations
and 3.1 billion calculations were three world records
that garnered international headlines,

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

made mathematicians rejoice,
and caused your fellow Africans to beam with pride.

When you won
the 1989 Gordon Bell prize,
the “Nobel Prize of Supercomputing,”
then-president Bill Clinton called you,
“one of the great minds of the Information Age.”
The New African magazine readers ranked you as
history's greatest scientist
of African descent.

Mr. Chancellor,
for his groundbreaking discoveries
and for the sheer force of his mind,
I ask you
to confer
the degree of Doctor of Science,

Education. Same was etc cashed pending your instruction on the issue.

Azitive Emeagwali touched home during this Xmas and we were very happy. He reached here and I had a lengthy discussion with him, your address and passport photo was given to him, and am of the strong opinion he will communicate

Hi,

My name is Alex Eisenmann. I did a report on you and your discoveries a month or so ago. I showed my mom what you did, because I had to make a model. My mom and I are really interested. We would like to know more about what you did with the super computer and the 3.1 billion calculations per second and using the 65,000 processors to out perform every super computer.

"nna ayi"

Quote from the glossary of Chinua Achebe's
"Things Fall Apart."

I am in my last week of my second year at the Corcoran College of Art in Washington DC, USA. I have read bits and pieces of this book and so far has been very inspirational and my assignment is to work on an illustration of a scene or cover book design for "Things Fall Apart" with quotes. I had decided to do a little bit of both. What I will be doing is a silk screen of a scene or design with quotes. I happened to look for images that I wanted to look at for inspiration of Nigeria and I had not known too much but myth and word of mouth about Nigeria from other diplomats (or sons or relatives of diplomats). After I had looked at the more respective outlook of Nigeria (in some small degree). I was able to achieve a little more understanding with the help of your site. I admit that your site has excellent content and a great resource for educative purposes, you have a great variety of images that you had put together.

Dear Professor Emeagwali

About Me:

My nationality is Peruvian-American, I was born in the states although my blood is deep with Peru and Afro-peruvian Culture.

Note: I had understand in the census of 1820 that 70 percent of Lima's Population was mostly African or quote: "of dark complexion" (this note is excluding the indigineous civilization population that had been almost wiped out in Lima. Although many had of the royal population fled to the Amazon (now Brazil) and some managed to stay in the towns of the Andien region which the Spaniards needed to be kept occupied for gold and silver mining and farming.

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

In the 1700's there had been revolts guided by my ancestors who had achieved to assist. Later another historical figure came out who was Alfanzo Ugarte who had married once in Lima and later fled. Alfanzo who I believed what my father described was the hero who took the flag of Peru from Chile and sunk down to the sea with his horse. I heard he had married someone of darker complexion. Some of my ancestor's roots from her side is shown in small bits of my generation of my family which I am proud of and most welcomed and not resentful of what so ever. Even though I may be of very light complexion and more westerner look I have features that I can be proud of one of them is the reprocusians of rythm. Well you get the picture now.

Take care of your website and I hope to see it grow with evolution of inspirations.

From: Yemi Adeleke, 2 May 2001

Dear Philip

I have just gone through some articles on your website which I downloaded sometime ago. Your life is an unbelievable manifestation of the innate potentials in man no matter his geographical origin.

It is almost unbelievable that you grew up in a remote corner of our own Onitsha! I read your article on Information age and how Nigeria can solve the socio-economic problems facing the nation. How I wish we have thinkers in our Government?

So many talents are rotting away in the streets of Nigeria. Personally, it's been a frustrating experience for me in this richly blessed country. I left secondary in 1988 with 5 distinctions and 3 credits; A1 in Maths & Chemistry [that was before exams start leaking in the 90s]. I got to the University [won a Chevron Scholarship] but having meals twice daily is always a big battle for me talk less of buying the needed books for my Mechanical Engineering course. I ended up with a Third class and a badly deflated ego!

After NYSC daily survival became the number one cross. I managed to raise some money and went for roadside training in Computer Hardware installations and maintenance [I learnt Computer operation in Unilag], from there I move here and there and had training in Networking and I'm presently struggling towards my MCSE exams.

I might have a great story to tell, but lots of others, though very brilliant, couldn't survive the University for one reason or the other centered on financial incapability. Thousands of super brains couldn't go beyond primary 6.

Dear Philip, the people in government prefer to maintain the status quo. There are so many graduates farming in the countryside today to survive. I believe you can start a foundation purposely for the Super brains who are financially incapacitated in Nigeria. God has a reason for planting you in Nigeria in the first instance, you are a role model for us here but speeches will not rectify the situation in Nigeria but practical action.

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters

Start a foundation and make the beneficiaries are selected strictly on merit.

A first-class brain should not graduate with a pass, a first-class brain should not drop out of school, a first-class brain should not roam the streets of Lagos and Abuja.

Cheers

Patrick A. A.

Interesting Work

From Dinah, 15 May 2001

I found your article "Decoding the Silent Lyrics of Rain Forests" fascinating, and was impressed at how you achieved brilliance through nature. I became more and more of a fan as you quoted some of my favorite people, but plummeted when I read about how your research aids the oil industry.

As a society dependent on a resource that is limited, help me to gain confidence in you and your appreciation for nature. I know a person has to love it in order to study it as you have obviously done. Can you suggest articles that will rekindle my admiration for your intelligence?

I am a landscaper, attempting to replace all that is torn down from technology. I am aware that our salvation is in preservation, because we cannot put back what it has taken eons to establish.

Thanks for listening.

To Dinah:

I answered your question in an earlier speech titled: "The Party's Over: The End of Oil" in which I observed that:

We are merely one leg of a long inter-generational relay race. The custodianship of the oilfield and natural resources is a baton that has been passed to us. The challenge for us is to pass it on, and certainly not to drop it. Our job is not to get to the finish line. It is to pass the baton to the next generation.

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

For an Olympic relay runner, the most deflating moment is to stumble and drop the baton when the world record is in sight. Do we want to be remembered as the generation that blew it?

The natural resources that we are depleting are our children's heritage. They have been in existence for one million years. Our generation has squandered half of the oil deposits and we will soon drop the baton when we bequeath a dried oil field to our children.

Computer designer welcomed

GUESTS MINGLED as they waited for the arrival of the Super-Computer Pioneer Designer Dr. Philip Emeagwali and his wife Dale at the US Charge d'Affaires, ad interim, Richard Smyth's Jacks Hill residence.

On Dr. Emeagwali's arrival guests went forward to welcome him to the island. He was visiting the island for the first time on invitation from the Jamaica Medical Foundation, of which his host Lloyd Vermont is a trustee.

The Nigerian national was introduced to Nigerian High Commissioner, Florentina Ukonga at the function.

Dr. Emeagwali told The Gleaner that in 1989 he received the Gordon Bell Prize (which is like the Nobel Prize for computing) for his pioneering efforts in using 65,000 processors to perform the world's fastest computation of 3.1 billion calculations per second.

Super computers existed before then, but none as fast and as powerful as the one he created.

He explained to The Gleaner that with the cost of each computer ranging from US$30 to US$120 million, only a small number was available and were used for large operations. Dr. Emeagwali said he used one as an X-ray to work out the quantity of oil underground.

By using the super computer will play an important role in a country's advancement, he said.

"The building of a nation will be determined by intellectual capacity... there should be investment in national education for Jamaicans," he continued.

During Dr. Emeagwali's two-week stay in Jamaica, he is scheduled to meet Philip Paulwell, the Minister of Industry, Commerce and Technology and discuss the matter of information technology with students, parents, teachers and government workers.

Among those present at the reception were: Dr. Errol Morrison, Dr. John Minty, Wyvolyn Gager, Oliver Jones, Frank Rosheuvel, Peju Wilson and Cheryl McDonald-Sloley.

Professor Dale Emeagwali's achievements

Renowned microbiologist, Professor Dale Emeagwali (a-MAG-wali) accompanied her husband, Dr Phillip Emeagwali, to Jamaica, where he was guest speaker at the Jamaica Medical Foundation fund-raising banquet at Hilton Kingston Hotel, last night.

Professor Dale Emeagwali

Professor Emeagwali, whose husband was described by former US President Bill Clinton, as "one of the great minds of the information age," has achieved in her own right.

Professor Emeagwali has contributed to the field of microbiology, molecular biology and biochemistry. Her greatest scientific accomplishments include the discovery of isoenzymes of kynurenine formamidase. The knowledge of this particular enzyme could lead to a better understanding of what causes cancer found in the blood, like leukemia.

She received the USA National Technical Associations 1996 Scientist of the Year award in the field of cancer research.

Dr Emeagwali is in the listing of Who's Who in the World, the World's Who's Who of Women, Who's Who in American Education, International Who's Who in Medicine, American Men and Women of Science, Who's Who in Science and Engineering and Who's Who in Technology.

With the sentiment that science is boring which has particularly permeated the minds of young black children, Professor Emeagwali organises and conducts science workshops for 4th to 12th grade inner-city youths as her personal service.

Dr Emeagwali, who says that black people are told, "You can't do maths, are taught inadvertently and sometimes directly that we couldn't do that." She is working to reverse the fallacy that science is reserved for geniuses, and says everyone has the ability to master the craft. All that is needed is a spark of interest.

The wife of the award winning scientist, is a native of Baltimore and they have one child.

I want to specially recognise your achievements and to thank you for being their as a role model. There is, in my mind, a TRADEGY in our midst that not even our EDUCATED PEOPLE AND THOSE WHO RUN OUR EDUCATIONAL SYSTEMS ARE RECOGNISING. This tradegy is that our children are lead to believe that the world's store house of knowledge was, and is still being created only by Caucasians and that Peoples of colour are just consumers of this knowledge (because they are incapable of producing anything worthwhile)Your acievement, and that of many other Inventors/Designers/Acievers is giving the lie to this organised attempt to rob Black People of Philip Emeagwali sentou na sala de estar da família e acionou o cronômetro. Estava furioso: seus amigos jogavam futebol e ele tinha de ficar ali, pelas próximas três horas.

"Está pronto?", perguntou o pai. Philip sabia que tinha apenas 36 segundos para resolver cada uma das 300 questões. Não havia tempo suficiente para anotá-las, de modo que teria de fazer tudo de cabeça.

Seu pai disparou: 'Mohammed teve acerto de 88 por cento em três testes de matemática. No primeiro, acertou 92 por cento. No segundo, 84 por cento. Que porcentagem obteve no terceiro teste? Philip não titubeou, a resposta estava na ponta da língua. Vieram novas e mais difíceis perguntas. Philip não errou uma. James Emeagwali sorriu com uma ponta de orgulho. Ele sabia que o filho de 8 anos não era um menino comum e que, a despeito de sua pobreza, se tornaria uma celebridade.

Acertou. Hoje, o vaidoso Philip Emeagwali, é doutor em computação pela Universidade de Michigan e coleciona prêmios, entre os quais o Gordon Bell, conferido somente a gênios da tecnologia. O ex-presidente Bill Clinton prestou-lhe homenagem pública e chamou-o de Bill Gates da África.

Philip cresceu na cidade de Onitsha, no sudeste nigeriano. Era tão brilhante na escola primária que seus professores só o chamavam de Calculus. "Quase ninguém sabia meu nome verdadeiro", ele conta.

Mas havia vezes em que seu talento natural trabalhava contra ele. Em 1965, aos 10 anos de idade, foi acusado de colar nas provas para o Saint Georges Grammar School e sua admissão ao ginásio foi negada. O motivo? Ele acabou o exame, programado para 1 hora de duração, em apenas cinco minutos, com 100 por cento de aproveitamento. A escola não acreditou que o garoto mirrado e pobre pudesse realizar a façanha.

O que tornou os feitos de Philip mais extraordinários é que ele e a família viveram os horrores da guerra civil. "Dormíamos em campos de refugiados, edifícios abandonados e casas bombardeadas. Ficávamos em longas filas para receber comida de organizações de caridade", ele lembra. O sofrimento valeu. Fez dele um jovem psicologicamente forte e equipou-o com grande senso de determinação e visão.

Aos 17 anos, autodidata, ganhou uma bolsa de estudos para a Universidade de Oregon, onde estudou matemática. Depois, foi para a Universidade George Washington. Lá, conseguiu dois graus de mestre: um na área de engenharia civil e ambiental e outro na de engenharia costeira e oceânica.

Mais tarde, iria trabalhar na construção civil, projetando auto-estradas em Maryland, e operando represas em Wyoming. Hoje, é consultor em computação, Internet e tecnologia da informação. Por trás de seu sucesso, está um novo e radical computador que ele batizou de Máquina da Conexão, capaz de fazer 3,1 bilhões de cálculos por segundo.

Ele teve a idéia observando uma colméia. "Nenhuma outra criatura trabalha com mais eficiência do que as abelhas. Por que não programar um computador para que ele se sirva de outros milhares? Sua rapidez e desempenho não seriam fantásticos?", ele pensou.

E fez: através, da Internet, pôs 65.000 micros em conexão, um supercérebro digital que solucionou um dos 20 mais complexos quebra-cabeças industriais: entender como o petróleo flui debaixo da terra, de modo que se pudesse extraí-lo em grandes quantidades, a baixo custo. A descoberta rendeu bilhões de dólares para os Estados Unidos. Agora, a

Emeagwali, de 10 anos. Gosta de futebol, de nadar e jogar tênis. Tem uma bela casa nos arredores de Washington e é dono de uma fortuna pessoal de 300 milhões de dólares, parte da qual ele destina a famílias nigerianas carentes. Por e-mail, concedeu essa entrevista à Maga.Zine

Maga.Zine - Fale um pouco de seu passado, de sua vida na Nigéria.

Por volta de 1550, a escravatura forçou meus ancestrais a migrarem de Benin para Onitsha (Oh-nih-chaah), cidade em que nasci. Onitsha (Oh-nih-chaah) é corruptela de Orisha (Oh-rih-chaah), a religião africana. Os portugueses mandaram para o Brasil milhares de escravos orishas. Os britânicos e espanhóis também os exportaram para ilhas do Caribe, principalmente para Cuba e Trinidad. A influência dos orishas é vista hoje nos ritos, música e crenças de brasileiros e povos de língua espanhola. A minha infância na Nigéria não foi das piores. Eu fazia parte do coral de uma Igreja Católica e fui coroinha de padres irlandeses. Até que veio a guerra civil (1967-1970), fui forçado a sair da escola e ir para um campo de refugiados.

Como era a vida nesses campos?

Terrível. Éramos cinco milhões a fugir do exército nigeriano, com muito medo, pois eles não faziam prisioneiros, matavam sem piedade - só em Onitsha trucidaram 2.000 homens. As mulheres eram estupradas. Por cinco vezes escapamos deles. Até que Onitsha foi capturada. Os que tiveram sorte, como eu, conseguiram se esconder em escolas abandonadas. Eu passava os dias pescando no Rio Niger e apanhando cocos para comer. A fome era assustadora. Devorávamos até cachorros, quando eles apareciam.

A Nigéria não está bem na comunidade internacional. O que o senhor pensa a respeito?

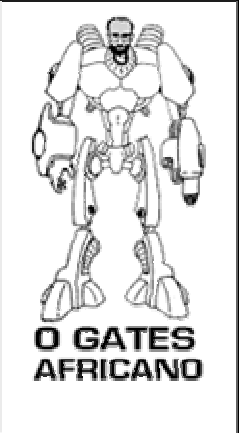

Não dá para discutir todos os problemas da Nigéria num só dia. Acredito que a situação só será resolvida quando se der educação aos jovens.

Infelizmente, o governo não olha para esse aspecto. O dinheiro que deveria ser investido em educação foi esbanjado em projetos megalomaniacos, como o complexo de aço de Ajaokuta, e com o exército. Gana despende 27% de seu orçamento em educação, enquanto que a Nigéria, o nono maior produtor de petróleo do mundo, gasta apenas 10 %. Como resultado, Gana tem uma renda per capita duas vezes maior do que a da Nigéria.

O senhor é famoso e o mundo inteiro chama-o de Bill Gates da África. Como vê essa comparação?

Os africanos ficaram ofendidos quando o presidente Bill Clinton descreveu-me como o Bill Gates da África. Eles disseram: "Bill Gates é que é o Philip Emeagwali da América". Bill Gates e eu somos experts em tecnologia da informação. Ele é um empresário e eu sou um cientista. Bill Gates se aproveita do conhecimento e das idéias de pessoas como eu, que criaram computadores e a Internet.

A que o senhor atribui seu sucesso?

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters

Eu trabalho duro e acredito no ditado que diz:

"Sair cedo da cama para fazer a colheita, torna os homens saudáveis, ricos e sábios". E sempre falo para mim mesmo que se as coisas não dão certo da primeira vez, deve-se tentar de novo.

O que a tecnologia pode fazer pela África?

A tecnologia gera riqueza e desenvolvimento. E como disse Kwame Nkrumah (líder de Gana, propôs a criação de uma África unificada), socialismo sem ciência é inútil. Então, o que a África precisa é de bons cientistas para se tornar um continente rico e desenvolvido.

Quem o influenciou em seu trabalho?

O matemático africano Euclides. Ele nunca pôs os pés fora da África e viveu numa cidade predominantemente negra, ao lado de uns poucos imigrantes judeus e gregos. Ele é lembrado como o mais importante matemático de todos os tempos e seu livro Os Elementos só perde em tiragens para a Bíblia.

Como o senhor chegou à Máquina da Conexão.

O computador moderno é produto de uma série de invenções, desde que, há dois mil anos, na China, surgiu o ábaco, que era um engenho de calcular. Em cada geração, cientistas o reiventam. Eu sou um deles. Fui o primeiro a demonstrar que muitos computadores interligados são mais rápidos do que um só, com um superprocessador. Se duas cabeças pensam melhor do que uma, o que dizer então de 65 mil cabeças. Por essa razão, programei um computador para trabalhar com milhares de outros. Em 1988, compartilhei 65 mil processadores que conseguiram realizar 3,1 bilhões de cálculos por segundo. Agora a Apple e a IBM estão se valendo da minha criação.

Desde quando o senhor acessa a Internet e para quê?

Desde 1974. Em 1970, era apenas uma rede internacional de computadores, freqüentada por

Dear Professor Emeagwali

poucos acadêmicos que se comunicavam imprimindo palavras em teletipos. Não havia fotos, música, vídeos, voz. Os domínios eram raros. Mas também não precisávamos de nenhum pontocom ou pontoedu para enviar nossos e-mails. Em 1987, eu ficava 14 horas por dia, pendurado na NSFnet (National Science Foundation), a predecessora da Internet. Eu usava o Telnet (acesso remoto) e o FTP (protocolo de transferência de arquivos) para me conectar com uma dúzia de centros de computação, como o Laboratório Nacional de Los Alamos, na Califórnia. No livro 'A História da Internet', de Christos J. P. Moschovitis, há muita coisa a meu respeito. Atualmente, dedico-me a distribuir meus artigos para jornais e revistas online e impressos.

De que forma Internet beneficia inventores como o senhor?

Pessoalmente, não tenho outra escolha a não ser estar sempre online. Os supercomputadores que eu programei estão a quilômetros de distância e só posso alcançá-los via Internet. Além disso, conquistei novas audiências. Em dias normais, recebo e-mails de uma pequena cidade africana pedindo-me ajuda ou de um inventor à cata de orientação. Para mim, a Internet é boa e má. É boa porque me permite trocar idéias férteis com pessoas que nunca vi na vida. É má porque fragmenta meu tempo, me torna ansioso e me força a responder e-mails de dúvidas e mais dúvidas sobre como obter sucesso profissional. Por causa disso, minha mulher me apelidou de 'Dear Abby' (coluna de grande sucesso popular, publicada por centenas de jornais norte-americanos e assinada por Pauline e Jeanne Phillips, mãe e filha, respectivamente).

Quais são os seus sites favoritos?

Adoro sites de jornais estrangeiros. Dá a impressão de que estou viajando por esse mundo afora. Tenho um pouco de dificuldade de ler em português, mas assim mesmo acessei o portal do Estadão que me pareceu bem dinâmico.

interviewed and I read your articles. It is a Year 2000 paper. When I first saw it that is in year 2000, I couldn't make much out of it. The only thing I knew then was that a Nigerian genius who solved 3 billion questions in one second has emerged . Then I was 17. Now it inspires me I am from Anambra state in Nigeria. Right now everything is tough in the country . I can't go to university because there are not enough universities and there is a lot of corruption in the exams and it leads to gross admission of cultists while those who read stay at home.

Hello sir, I hope you are fine. Your wife is a very beautiful woman. I hope to be like you someday. I am good in mathematics and my aunt says I am very creative. I aspire to be a creative artist/computer engineer someday. Though the road is tough, I will make it.

So many years ago when I was a schoolboy I discovered that my dad who was then a civil servant had more friends among his Igbo colleagues from Onitsha than those from other parts of Igbo land. I had to ask my father why this was so, he told me this was so because people from our town [Onicha Olona] and the people of Onitsha has common ancestry.

A few years later my dad travelled home and he brought a pamphlet titled Umu Eze Chima, which he encouraged me to read. This type written pamphlet, which I believe was the effort of a local publisher presented the first opportunity to me to avail myself of necessary information about my people and my root. Since my first contact with this literature, I made it a point of duty to always read all relevant literature and materials that I may come across

While I can not lay claim to much knowledge on this subject matter, however I can say with out fear of contradictions that any effort in establishing DNA link between the Onitshans, the Binis, and the Yoruba will prove positive due to my personal observations which I believe will lend credence to this line of thought

One very important angle to this discourse is the emergence of the people called the Ado Akure in

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters

Akure, this phrase in Yoruba translate to half Bini, half Akure. In other word it means that this people are a hybrid people sort of. They can be found in a particular quarter in Akure. The Binis calls them Edo Ne Kure. On enquiry I was told by an old man that in precolonial times virtually all the Kings in Benin then, carried out expansionist policy which invariably made their immediate neighbours of which Akure was numbered scape goats. So the people of Akure and the Binis were at war for a very long time. Eventually diplomacy was employed by both kings in settling their differences and an alliance that guaranteed peace became a source of assurance that Akure will not be attacked by their ambitious neighbour [ the Binis].

To cement this alliance the Oba of Akure gave his daughter in marriage to a Bini Prince, their descendants are the Ado Akures or the Edo Ne kures, they are of mixed blood Yoruba and Edo, they can be found in a particular quarter in Akure.

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

Seven years ago I could remember speaking to an old woman in Akure who told me she was an Ado Akure and she was about visiting their family house in Benin.

We know that it was common trend that if anybody should fall out of favour with the monarch in Benin the most reasonable thing to do is to run towards the Niger and possibly cross the Niger to Onitsha which was a safe haven for those who cherish their freedom. And not a few crossed from Benin to Onitsha in order to escape slave traders who were eager to convert them to human wares and cargo. History even has it that princes who were independently minded even fell victim, those who were regarded as rascals and headstrong suffered similar fate. Are we saying: non of the Ado Akures or Edo Ne kures who has Yoruba blood in them made it to Onitsha.

History also, has it that at a time in Ile Ife an Ife prince Oranmiyan who was one of the sons of the seven sons of Oduduwa has a spiritual instruction to go and get some water from a big river around Benin to help cure his father of an eye problem that was almost ruining his sight. Custodian of oral tradition both in Benin and Ile Ife agrees on this story.

In the course of his journey to Benin he founded many settlements and also had children from women given to him by locales as his journey progresses. Orunmila which is a deity native to the Ile Ife, I will want to believe was one of the export of Oranmiyan to Benin in terms of religion, This more than anything suggest that he stayed long enough in Benin. Though the river Oranmiyan visited around Benin was not Specified I will want to believe that it is the river Niger. However the fact that Oranmiyan had children in Benin kingdom shows that there are Yorubas in the Kingdom and once there are such elements in Benin it is not unlikely that some will find their way to Onitsha for some reasons

All stories I have read are not unanimous in their account of the origin of Eze Chima but I know it, as a matter fact that some of the communities in Aniocha part of Delta state within Onitsha axis speaks olukwumu a lost Yoruba dialect, though convoluted but an average Yoruba speaker will understand some sentences in a statement and will ultimately comprehend what the speaker is trying to say with some effort. Ebu speaks Olukwumu and still has a Yoruba egungun cult and masqurade called igunnu ko which is not even easy to come by in most Yoruba communties now. Ukwunzu is just about forty kilometres to Onitsha which is a walkable distance for our fore fathers. So those who are putting up argument to debunk our claim of DNA link between the Binis, the Yoruba and the Onitshans should do a rethink.

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

The foregoing notwithstanding I beg to disagree with the erudite one, Emeagwali on his view that as many as one out every four Igbo may be the descendant of those who migrated from Benin kingdom. I do not share your view in this regard. Though those who made up the bulk of inhabitants of Onitsha are immigrants from Benin Kingdom I do not think it was possible for them to move out of that enclave as war among clans was still wide spread, human sacrifice was in practice, from what we read in the Chinua Achebes book Things Fall Apart the igbos of old treat strangers with suspicion, they lived in clans which are not possible for strangers to penetrate without questions from titled chiefs ruling such clans. At best the alien may end up in the Osu caste if they are permitted to stay, which invariably will have amounted to another kind of threat to their lives and liberty. No man will run that far, from one form of slavery and decide to put himself in shackles again for whatever reason

If one out of every four Igbo are descendant of the migrant from Benin, it will have been very difficult for the Ighos to retain their art form as depicted by works from Igho Ukwu the only thing common to the art of both people is the lost wax form which artisans from both communities used in fashioning moulds for their works but this was not even exclusive to the Igbos and the Binis, the Ile Ife and Igala artisans employed same in processing their work of art.

In history if a community was captured and taken into captivity the chances are high that after they must have arrived their new place in exile, they start practising the religion they knew before their present fate befell them. In some cases where their captors decrees that they must only practice the religion of their host is where you

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

find immigrant forsaking their gods or religion for another. If it were true that one out of every four igbo was a descendant of the migrant from Benin kingdom then deities that are being served by the people of Benin Kingdom like Orunmila, Olokun, and ogun will have long found their way to igbo land. This was the case in Brazil and Cuba

You will agree with me that music and dance is very important to every African, so one will expect those immigrants to fashion out musical instruments that are similar to those in use in their place of origin in Benin in their new home in Igbo land. That is not the case here, the musical instrument used by both people are different and distinct. I do not think it is possible for a community to acquire about seventy percent of her population from another community without tell tale signs on the host community in their culture and tradition. Your statement holds true for the Onitshans and Onitsha but not for entire Igboland

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters

One of the most well researched materials I have read on Umu Ezechima was written by one Godwin Ijediogor in an issue of The Guardian Newspaper on Sunday, it was published between March and July 2002

In conclusion, Mr Philip Emeagwali let me say here that I am pleasantly disappointed that an African in Diaspora who has been away for thirty years and a scientist whom most people believe will hardly have time for any thing outside his field could still devoted time and energy to discuss his history and provoke debates that will shed more light on our root for the benefit of all and posterity. Need I say here that you are a blessing to Umu Eze Chima, the Igbo ethic group, Nigerians and the world in general.

Incredible to say the least, with so much emphasis on movie stars and athletes who contribute nothing towards the advancement of our society; our national and international consciencelessness seems to miss the mark on our true heroes. Especially when one is black and a native African. We American-Africans have been marginalized, manipulated and divided to the point where our identity as a people is only by our own weak definition. Know language of our own, know general cultural practices that are uniquely ours; we have become a race of mimics and followers of others agenda and beliefs. Most African Americans have never been to the continent of Africa but we call ourselves African Americans. We don't support the diaspora in any significant way that express a kinship to our ancestry. The power of a negative collective thought should not be underestimated, look what it has done to the African in America. I am very proud to be of African ancestry and I know, we as a people are know less than any other. I am very very very proud of you Dr. Emeagwali. It would be an honour if you were to speak at the U.S. Geological Survey's Black History Month presentation.

Today, we are at home for the umpteenth time.

Reason: The NLC has called out a nationwide strike.

Would our President listen to the likes of you who hold positions of great esteem internationally?

Because, we have shouted ourselves hoarse but we could as well have been talking to a drunken bull in a china shop.

Questions to ask him: Why is no refinery performing at optimum 5 years after he came to power? It was so five years ago.

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

US$739m was spent on TAM at the refineries?
For what purpose exactly? Who is/are the contractors? Why can't they be held accountable?
Did somebody up there corner the sum - in whole or part?

Who are the directors/shareholders of the refinery (ies) from where petroleum products are imported? Are top placed Nigerians involved?

Is it possible for you to call the President to tell him that government can reduce the affliction of the ordinary Nigerian if effort is made in that direction. Afterall, petroluem importing nations are seeking ways of reducing the financial hurt the increase in international prices are causing.

Stay blesed.

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters

The truth is: Every human if given the right background and encouragement, heaven is the limit to which he or she could aspire.

Unfortunately many Emeagwalis and most Nigerians spread world-wide who left the country resulting from the lack of opportunities to achieve personal dreams and aspirations cannot effectively and directly contribute to the country's much-needed further development due to poor governance, sectionalism and nepotism.

I think it's time to realise that Nigeria as a country, has a survival chance in the 21st century only when we realise our worth and that we have all potentials within and outside the country...we must only start the search to bring these brains together for a common goal.

Nigerian should be allowed to redefine the process of their corporate existence through a sovereign national conference. That way, Nigeria will be a more stable society, paving the way for foreign direct investment and reparation of individual fund abroad which will create the required level of employment that will take Nigeria out of the vicious circle of poverty.

Hello, a few days ago I found your "Can Nigeria Leapfrog into the Information Age?"

It was good. Meanwhile is some time gone and some of the problems too.

I am a German, married with a woman from Uromi.
My experience with Nigeria:

Use the TV for making school lessons for the children, and for the cardrivers. 2 hours every day!

It costs nothing and is better than the normal
rubbish in the TV.

Dear Professor Emeagwali

Then tell the people, they should learn to do everything so good as even possible. For them self! It will have later a good effect.

And the government should tell the people the truth: Print Niara Notes in 1000, 5000 and 10000 Naira. Carrying a carton full of money after selling a car is like a lie to yourself.

In the text you struggle with the electriacal power situation. There are new things on the market, that Nigeria must no longer wait for NEPA (No Electrical Power Again). I know how but who will hear this without cheating me?

It's great to be associated with the intellectual enigma, Prof. Emeagwali. His, is a typical example: "success is of many parentage, and failure, an orphan"

Here the greatest American president of our time, Clinton, describing him "Nigerian American." He went further to stress, "many Emeagwalis abound on the streets of Biafra."

Emeagwali, iga adi!

My efforts to do this in one of the Nigerian universities have been frustrated by my inability to pay the exorbitant fees charged. Also the few Universities that offer this course do not have adequate facilities to for detailed practical instruction.

To this end I'd like to seek ur assistance in getting overseas scholarship that can help me fulfil my ambition.

Phillip, I have discovered that there are only three things that really matter in the world: life, health

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

and truth - three nebulous concepts of philosophical and esoteric enquiries as old as man. Truth is the promoter and enhancer of life and health. It becomes so as wisdom (which has been described as 'correct application of knowledge'). I have also discovered that there is physical life, spent in time, as biological life; and spiritual life which essentially is spent in eternity. Truth is key to both types of life, particularly in QUALITATIVE terms.

I wouldn't know your opinions on these things (and you don't need to share them with me. I have not written to be intimidated with them).

I have written to say that the Good Book claims that Jesus Christ is the Embodiment of Life, Truth and Wisdom and that belonging to Him by personal choice is of primal importance. You may already be in Him. But just in case you are yet to be, please do so now for 'what will it profit a man if he gains the whole world and loose his soul'. I am not talking of religion or psychic/occult experience

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

but a relationship, an intimacy with The Lord Jesus Christ. Phillip, I no lie, The Man loves you. I love you too.

May God continue to increase your knowledege for human advancement.

Thanks for your time.

Buki

This is an evidence of the uncomparable long-rooted african humility and perseverance, besides, this is a knock-out to the racist notion that africans are not for maths-science-based human endeavours.

The truth is: Every human if given the right background and encouragement, heaven is the limit to which he or she could aspire and rise.

It does not matter if you are black or white, the best assurance for the progress of any society is dependent upon the level and quality of education and awareness impacted on its people and not on the number of children the people in the society can produce.

As a journalist, my campaign in Western Europe has always been under the moto: "The West must finally realise that Africa is a Continent and not a COUNTRY."

When civil war breaks out in Liberia: The whole Africa is at war! If religious fanatics takes control of Kano/Kaduna in Nigeria, the next evening news caption will run: "AFRICA IN CRISES AGAIN!"

The only news from Africa that is news-worthy must be embezzlement of funds, ebola virus, AIDS, catastrophe, hunger and starvation.

Finally within seconds a true son of the soil, has reversed this perjorative thesis. Within seconds you have shown the World that The Ibos, The Nigerians, The Africans, all over the World, deserve a better position that they have long been denied of through subjection to the Western whims and caprices characterised and championed through poor-researched, obnoxious and ignorant journalism.

I hope very soon to dedicate to you, a cover-story in our magazine. Brother, please keep this good work up...for you are to many an unprecedented source of an ever-pouring motivation.

Hi Phillip,

I wish to use this medium to thank GOD for using you to send a strong message to the rest of the world especially the west that Africa and indeed Nigeria is not about 419 and diseases..

I have lived here for 9 years and I feel proud every day I step out that I come from Africa especially with the breath-taking inventions you have recorded inspite of all the odds.

Your inventions were like tornadoes which could not be contained by shelters of the western news media who are only interested in promoting the obsolete scientific theories of Einstin and other failed western scientists dead and living. They were so mad to discover that you were not white at all to have had such an awesome thinking faculty.

I was so angry to hear Bill Clinton describe you as the Bill gate of Africa.

He shouldn't have tried to equate you with a high school drop-out who is a corporate opportunist.

The good thing is that majority of the global population have come to recognize you as the best scientist of the Millenium and nobody can deprive you of that well earned honor.

I wish Nigeria knows what to do with people like you especially at this critical time.

we the nigerian youth seek to learn knowlege not having an enabling environment.

we need those who will not just pay lip service to education in Nigeria but actually do somthing to aid us.

the difficulty we undergo in getting educated sharpens us and makes learning abroad easier for the Nigerian youth.

we need exchange programmes and exposure to produce better citizens for tommorrow who will have national and international interests at heart having been exposed to other cultures and learned policies of other nations,bring them back to Nigeria and modify them to suit us.we need you.

is it true that the American govt will not release you to us for the purpose?

Dear compatriot

It's gladdening to know that in the midst of the negative things people have to say about our country, Nigeria, you are being described as a NIGERIAN AMERICAN!

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

That means, first you are a Nigerian. It is your success or rather - your not accepting what life seemed to have offered at the onset - that we all are celebrating.

Here in Nigeria, there abound several millions distressed, depressed and displeased with what life has become.

I have followed unfolding events in our national and private experiences and come to one conclusion like many other people may have: People are poor due to three main reasons - lack information or lacking the will to appropriate available information or worse still lacking the will to seek the information that will make a difference.

I know you are addressing some of these in your native community but could you find some way of helping more Nigerians across the country to realise how much difference they can make for personal and by extension national progress and success?

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

Articles in the media, sponsorship of a TV program in Nigeria etc - using media that the ordinary Nigerian can have access to. You know what it is like here.

Hello,

I am happy there are still a few Nigerians like you doing the country/continent proud around the world. Unfortunately, the Nigerian system is rotten and does not appreciate legends like you and that is why a few brains like you end up thousands of kilometers away outside the shores of Nigeria. If only Nigerians can give people like you a chance to contribute your quota in the right places, the country will be a better place for all of us. But the self-imposing Nigerian leaders have sold their conscience! All they are concerned about is to loot and suck the country dry at the expense of the masses, compete with themselves with multimillion dollar houses, conglomerates which they built on ill-gotten wealth, worse-than-armed-robber leaders! Well, I pray God grant you devine health, wealth, and true relationship with Him. May you continue to soar high.

country that taps the best innate potential in man made you. God bless America. Through you and others like Professor Momoh of Howard University, Professors Chinua Achebe & Wole Soyinka, the young ones in this country have come to believe that the future to belong to us.

Always find time please, to let Nigerians just streaming into the US through the American Visa Lottery and let them know they cannot remain at the lower rung of the ladder for long, but work hard as a Nigerian is wont to do, take advantage of the American education and catapult themselves to the limelight by developing the great potential that the Almighty God has imbued in them.

I have a cousin in America who at 24 has graduated First Class Chemical Engineering and Distinction at Post-Graduate level from Howard and is presently doing her doctoral at Penn State University. I believe you and others should find time to bring these present breeds of intellectuals over there i think what this man has achieved is wonderful and i hope he is very rich from doing what he loves. to the nigerians who read this stop waiting for phil to come and librate u. phil is only a man; a genius but never the less still human. we here in nigeria r a nation and we can change this country for the better by doing our part in nation building. wake up each day determined to better yourself and ur neighbouhood; and each of us can be a phil in our own right by doing what is impotant to us--- making nigeria the great nation it should be. to the nigerian goverment i think u should award this man for using his brains to better himself intead of throwing away all our valuable awards on people who cant even spell their own names just because they have a big pocket and they r connected. to students everywhere like myself, go read your books and dont believe everything your lectures say. test it and confirm.if u r not sure ask phil and if u r still not sure ask GOD. he has all the answers. i cross my heart! he does proven to the world that given the opportunity the biafran state will today have been at the forefront of information revolution, it is most unfortunate that being a Nigeria has not only limited young biafras like me from exhibiting our God given talent and the will to succeed at anything we set our heart to do, but has also reduced us to self survival at the face of possible inept political and leadership extinction, which to a large extent is the bane of Nigeria underdevelopment. please permit me to urge you and our biafra leaders who are working and advocating for the actualization and liberation of the biafran state, to keep up with the good work as all the youths of biafra are solidly behind you guys. our future can not and will not be guaranteed in Nigeria, as Nigeria is presently like a Ship without a compass, which inevitably will head for a crash. we believe in what our leaders (biafras) are doing at the moment. Nigeria is blessed with some many Hoodlums who are currently occupying the position of Authority, and as such can only be concerned on plying their trade which looting and stealing of public funds. personally i keep praying to

Dear Philip,

It is indeed very exciting having you ranked as the world's best scientist. This is a global confirmation of your appellation as the "Father of the Internet". Your selection is an inspiration to the generation of young Nigerians who should see your world acclaimed brilliance as an example that should be emulated. May the Almighty God continue to guide and guard you in all your undertakings.

You are the epitome of the capability of the Blackman, especially the average Nigerian who has been so impoverished by the sadistic and poverty sustaining socio-economic policies of the G-8 nations with the United States of America, Britain, and France playing the lead role.

I implore you to establish a foundation to help ameliorate the ramshackled status of the mammoth indigent Nigerians that have been tagged criminal by Collin Powell for superficial reasons. And just this little favour---help to ensure the growth of info tech in Nigeria 'cos its the hope of a beautiful and well-informed future.

just want to let you know that we love you and the work you are doing out there.

My question and advise are these; is there any plan out there to ensure that those Nigerian children currently in economic refugee camp with enormous greater potential than THIS emeagwali have access to education by way of foundation or scholarship or whatever?

if not, I advise that you think along this line.

thank you and God be with you and Nigeria.

We are very proud of people like you over there, not to those that believe making it out there must be through a CROOK method which their called "short cut formula", but the "shortest possible cut formula had already been founded by you 'cos you worked for good towards that. Sir "The Father of The Internet", we also have the zealness to be like you and even do greater things than you've done to the glory of God to the whole world. However, how can we get this started? But I still work hard every now and then 'cos of my faith and dream to be actualised. I know I have a DREAM

This is what i read in BBC web site

(Last Updated: Wednesday, 31 December, 2003, 00:06 GMT ) Under the tile :

"Web's inventor gets a knighthood"

"Sir Tim says his invention was 'just another program'

The inventor of the world wide web, Tim Berners-Lee, has been awarded a knighthood for his pioneering work.

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

Dubbed the "Father of the Web", he came up with a system over 10 years ago to organise, link and browse net pages.

The famously modest man said he was "quite an ordinary person", and although it felt strange, he was "honoured".

Sir Tim was recently reunited with the machine he used to invent the web when he e-mailed 80 schools from the UN's summit on the information society.

Understanding web

The British scientist, who lives in the US, was told he was getting the unexpected Knight Commander of the Order of the British Empire in the New Year honours list a few days ago - by telephone, not by e-mail."

But we already knew who the Father is. And please give your comment .

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

God bless you !!!!!

Jeremy Rifkin:

The Internet (Net) is a computer network while the World Wide Web (Web) is a document network (i.e. system of interlinked documents).

Your email (or Word document) residing on your personal computer is a portion of your entire computer. Similarly, the Web (document network) is a portion of the Net (computer network).

The Internet is a complex machine and the Web is a complex document. The Web has many fathers and co-inventors such as Robert Cailliau.

As for those telling you to help Nigeria, please beware! Nigeria is fraud and anti-intellectualism and does not deserve people like you to die for. What you can do is to continue in speaking out against the mess in Nigeria and Black Africa in general. I think we basically need enlightenment(which you already) more than coming to be a minister like power greedy Okonjo-Iweala has done. People like Bath Nnaji probably have learnt their lessons about Nigeria. Anyway, Keep up your good work.

Am grateful to almighty God that you are nigerian. Eversince, i have been browng on the internet i have never come with your name or anything about you.

On Good friday, a friend of mine want to do an assignment on The concept of BRAIN DRAIN after searching all days , i came about your journal and i was so impressed about the write up,to my amese you are a nigerian , i look at this country and i find out that this is a God's own country not America. Sir you still have a lot to do for your country and Africa atlarge, We need you more than America.

Long live Emeagwali !!!!!!!!!!!!!

education & discuss your ideas about "african technology" with the minister, prof Fabian Osuji. If you can help review & restructure the core science curriculum of nigerian universities, your proverbial revolution would have succeeded.

The western hemisphere has largely succeeded. The only opportunity you may have to impact on the world further is in africa generally & nigeria in particular. A nigeria with oil & technology will inevitably be a superpower & any chance of such revolution rests squarely on the shoulders of prof Philip Emeagwali.

WARNING:

nothing lasts forever, not even diamonds. Since you may not endure forever, make haste while the sun shines. Do whatever you can for nigeria now; NOT LATER. CARPE DIEM.

Emeagwali, you are indeed an awesome brother. You are without a doubt symbolic of the essence of our people. I am a descendant of slaves living here in America. When I was born in Atlanta Ga it wasn't too much different from South Africa in its racial policies. I fought in the Civil Rights movement. I am a Veteran of the Vietnam war. I returned from Vietnam and entered Federal City College which is now the University of the District of Columbia. It was their in my Black Studies class that I learned of the Biafran War. I read with much interest your involvement with the Biafran war. I had to do a paper on the Biafran was. I never anticipated going to Nigeria. As one of African decent I never had problems with my identity as an African or Alkebulan. I visited Nigeria first in 1986. I didn't go through and cultural shock as many had expected. My visit to Nigeria to me was like that of a Hajj. It was their that the essence of my true self was realized. My experience in Nigeria lead me to drop two of my slave names and take names that represented me instead of the slavemaster that owned my people. I kept my father name out of respect for him. But its not certain that I will die with his last name. My brother my story is long but I wanted to share it with many. You keep up the good work and "Long Live Biafra!"

center of interlectual learning so as to impact a sense of communal altruistic believe in we the growing generations from this part of the world. u see it pains my heart when ever i hear over the mass media that this legend of us invloved him self with the project of re-building nigeria,thru the white elephant presidential elction that was held over the country one begins to wonder if this man has really lost his sense of hindsight which he was noted for.

as a lay man my self i saw the out come of the election six months b4 it even was held and to hear that a man of his caliber entangled him self with such macabre election really made my heart bleed. as far as am concerned the nigeria project has failed us all and it has turned us all against our blood brother's there by making us refugee's in our own country.u see sir i really love this country from the bottom of my heart.but is the governing system that i cant stomach is a country ruled by Illiterates who are only after money. Most of them parade with honorary doctorate degree and like to be called by names which they can't merit. For instance, 'Dr. Atiku Abubakar'. This is very funny. Obasanjo sees nothing good in education. According to him, 'HND is the same as BSC', because he managed to pass HND. I don't know whether Atiku passed elementary 4 not to talk of HND. The literate ones now drop their intellectual potential and pursue political positions where the loot money is their sole priority. Please Great Prof., help the Igbos in the actualisation of the state of biafra. Nigeria emebi go.

I am more than impressed with the chronicling of the events in and around Dr Emeagwali life during the period covered. He is a man of exceptional intellect and he is highly gifted. While we can extol the virtue of a man and the inspiration gained by so many from knowing of him, why on earth is black Africa and Nigeria still as it is in this day and age, totally scattered and on its hands and knees. Does it not make you ashamed and angry that clever people, heartless and ruderless as they continue to be are very stupid and are still in power?? It makes my blood boil with rage that the Likes Of Dr Emeagwali can have the resources offered to him to develop a brilliant career & life in another country, make great contribtuion to that host country and we pay homage to his achievements because he was born Nigeria. Yet our leaders continue to ruin Nigeria for whats it worth, making it wholly unattractive for the likes of Dr Emeagwali to wish to return home and make even more substantial contribution. And then even if he did come back to Nigeria, the spoilers and myopic fringe will point accusing fingers and ask why he is being paid in dollars? Nigeria does not inspire hope in its present format, it kills all good potential. Robs you of your everything and celebrates dishonesty, corruption and disruption. Our country is rotten to the core.

Hi there. As sad as this may sound, I recently found out that you existed in the last months of 2003. I haven't heard of from any other sources besides from the Internet. Why is that? I believe that everyone, regardless of race, should know that you exist, but it seems that you only promote yourself on the Internet. But I guess it just me. I have been living in Canada for 10 years (I'm 19 years old) so I guess because of my ignorance in my early years in this country, I totally missed

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

everything about you during those early years of your achievements. It's sad indeed, but like most people who have wrote to you, I'm inspired by your work. I'm a business student, but your inspiration has nonetheless given me an urge to learn more about computers and other technological equipments. Maybe in the future I too would be able to produce a master piece.

Oh yea, can you please sign my guestbook in my uncompleted website? It would be like an autograph that i can show off to my friends, hehehe.

You are great, you have shown to the world that Igbos are really from the east, the domain of scientific evaluations.

It is very clear as every Nigerian can see what is going on in NNEWI, THE BIAFRAN TECHNOLOGICAL CITY. CALLING TO MIND ALSO ABOUT THE INDIVIDUAL INNOVATIVES IN ENYIMBA CITY-ABA.

Sir, you have unchanged the reality of history that has been changed. The reality of creation cannot be unproved, for the creator sensors eyes are still available. Despite centuries of predatory by the powers of preponderance over the African race, your skill and tact has reincarnate the fact that from historiography to historicity, Africa is the centre of civilisation.

Your revolutionary breakthrough in scientific communication is consolidated as the turn around achievement not only for the nation of the proverbial Biblical Abia but also to those who would want to trail behind you when the walls of Jericho must have been broken down.

I am very proud of Brother Emeagwali's accomplishments, however I am not surprised. As an Afro-American I have learned that if you learn to base your beliefs, dreams, and endeavors on solid principles and not get caught in the beliefs and ideas of others you will experience the successes of people like Brother Emeagwali. Faith is the key to unleashing the truth about our existence as human beings and of our true heritage as seekers and revealers of the hidden truth placed in the earth realm, the place that we all call home. It took Abraham the Hebrew 75 years to learn how to profit from the source of life and wisdom, as the Spirit of God searched for a man who would trust and submit to his all knowing and panoramic view of the common man's condition. The common man was beaten, robbed and left for dead by vicious spiritual thugs who used their intellect to offer deceptive, chaotic and destructive solutions to those seeking an answer to their every day problems.

But the father of all spirits did not leave his children without hope, and he did not leave his children without truth nor did he leave those who would listen without the ability to obtain access to a superior type of intellect, an intellect that would lead and guide his children into all that is true and right and offer them protection, prosperity and peace for their body mind and spirit.

Some are born great, some achieve greatness, some have greatness thrust upon them. And also, great men are known for their works. Although, I am not an igbo i appreciate your success. In fact, i am really envying you and i hope i could come out with something like you did. I used to regret being a Nigerian sometimes but with an emeagwali i am relieved.

However, I haven't seen much of you and your works in your country. WHY. It is baffling. I think it is high time you think of how you and your talent could affect a lay man in Nigeria positively.

YOU ARE GOOD. YOU ARE GREAT. YOU ARE A NIGERIAN NOT AN IBO.

thought an "IGBO" would become somebody on earth after three years of fighting with bare hands to defend out mother/fatherland. after going through the genocide page in www.biafraland.com, i was very much concerned about the wickness of our enemies. you would have been of those massacred but "CHUKWU" God kept you knowing the better part of your life from the bigining. I am happy that you have not forgotten who and where you come from "BIAFRA". Our dream will only come to pass when we wake up, and now is the time to wake up. I am signing this guestbook for the second time and have recommended it to some many people outside my beloved nation "IGBO". Dr., the world is yet to see the best of you and "IGBOS" at large for God has chosen the foolish things of this world to the detriment of the wise. we fight for the independence of of NDI IGBO. Our lives we owe ourselves and the generation to come will extol our selfless effort. "Meche NA-ASI GI NDEEWO"

You are a beauty to behold and your intelligence cannot be overtaken. May your star never dim as you have made the black race proud. Please keep the flag flying and try to spread this intelligence amongst few blacks if not every one because a success without a continued successor is a failure. I am proud of you.

Hello Phillip,

You are a big brother and a source of inspiration.
You are the relic of what the phenomenon 'IGBO'
stood for prior to the Nigerian civil war.

Despite all the setbacks faced by Igbos, I want to remind you and all others that we should remain proud and humble because we haven't delivered our God-sent message to the world.

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters

Though it might be difficult but could be possible,
I long for the day I myself and millions of our youths will hear and act like you in the spirit of the propagation of Igbo culture to the outside world.
I thank you immensely for what you have done so far and urge millions of others to follow
EMEAGWALI'S footsteps/

Thank you/

person you begin to wonder if been a dark coloured person is a sin. My stay in this small quite country has made to ask myself who am i? why am i black? why is Africa or the black race unsettled? And so many whys??? It was these questions that made me go into reseaching some questions and answers you gave in the black history month. These same questions gave birth also to a book i co-authored with my friend Arthur Egbuniwe CRY OF THE UNWANTED LIVING IN AUSTRIA. Now i am working a book which i will not want to mention here but i will sent you a mail on a later date for permission to use some of your materials. rewarding as I've known one of the great minds of my generation, Mr. Philip Emeagwali. I not only admire your scientific mind sir, but your political side of you too! I just would like to remind you how much I was impacted greatly after reading your Black History month speech, it was extraordinary and wellspoken. Your speech was a great inspiration and an informative one, moreover, I learned from you that the greatest mathematician of all time Euclid was African! I am assuring you brother that our generation will be different this time, our Africa will not be like that of our ancestors were torture, persecution, poverty, slavery was explicit. There is high hope for Africans as you have demonstrated to us that we can be anything in the world, I know that Africa is in that deep state of trauma and depression; however, the night may be long but the day will certainly come, rock on African soldiers, or what somebody may call Black Nationalists, thanks once again for introducing things which were outside our realm.

Good Day

You have made my day. I have been quite ignorant to the thousands of achievement of Blacks, until this past February. I had the opportunity to work for a Black museum and you were apart of the exhibit. Boy was I inspired and motivated just reading about the Black inventors. I just wanted to know more about each of you. I just kept telling my familiy and friends about the dynamic Black inventors. So each day I would go out and find as much info as possible about the great men and Hello, I was extremely delighted to come across your site and most impressed. While I was searching for pictures of great African Americans I came across your site. I took the time to read it and I am glad I did. Because I have had alot of bad experiences with African men I am glad to have made the discovery of U. So that I will have some positive thoughts and images of a people I longed to meet throughtout my childhood. A people that I thought had all the answers to all the problems of African Americans. A people I struggle to understand so desparately. A people I can not reach due to insistant cultural differences. I wish that someone some African could please tell me is culture more important than global unity . . .?

Dear Prof, in a such a dearth time, our people feels nothing in the whole world to grip with pride, you opened your window for heaven to shed it's graces. First of all, you named your beloved Ijeoma; a name most of us can't see through it's benediction but crucifies our life with unembraced foreign names. Hi,

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters

Philip Emeagwali*

I don't even know how I ended up on this site but I'm glad I did. I'm a 21 years old South African and regardless of what is happening in Africa, I am proud to be African and I can't wait to finish (if that's ever gonna be possible) collecting knowledge from the world's continents and taking it home with me. :) I was motivated to achieve even more when I read the article that a South African Magazine "Drum" did on Prof Phillip.

Thank you for being an inspiration to Africans!!

Hello Mr. Philip,

I am a big fan of yours and I am very proud of your success especially bearing in mind that you are one of us Nigerians. This goes a long way to show that nigerians and allblacks in general have a very important role to play in the advancement of Information Technology in this present age. My name as earlier stated above is Jeremy Iyoha. I am currently studying Computer Engineering at the University of Benin in Edo State. My dream is to be a well read Computer Engineer in order to be able to contribute my own quota to the advancement of Information Technology, both in my home country, Nigeria and the world in general. My humble request is that you should with all due respect help me in achieving my goals as you have become my role model.

This help could be in the form of writing back to me highlighting what and what I need to do in order to excel in my chosen endeavour and also keeping me with an up to date information on happenings in the IT world.

Hope to hear from You soon and more power to your elbows.

Yours Faithfully,

Jeremy.

Mr. Emeagwali,
I just want to say "Thank You."

Thank you for your wonderful accomplishments where others have accomplished nothing.

Thank you for for being an example of what a great African American should be, instead of watching from the sidelines knowing what you could be.

Thank you, Me. Emeagwali, you have become my inspiration.

I am an Anniston High School student. I am in the 11th grade. I appreciate you and all that you do. In Anniston, AL, most believe that there is only so much they can do or so far they can go. I try to instill in my friends that they have the capabilities to go as far as their hearts desire. I use you as an example everyday. Soon I will be presenting my presentation to my class. You are the subject of my presentation and I hope that my fellow classmates will see and honor your name as I do now.

I have always since the day I got my first computer, I have wanted to do something as great as you did. You did so much for our youth, I am 15 and know this I believe that everyone is there own person and everyone has the ability to be what they want to be. Some people tell me that I can't be what I want to be that I will never succeed, Did anyone ever tell you that? It makes me feel unintelligent but I always get over it because I come back to our website and read over and over again. but anyway thank you for all that you have done.

I stumbled upon your website while browsing for information on African-american inventors...a link brought me here and I became quite intrigued and fascinated with what I read. Thank you for enlightening me on your past struggles and great achievements...may you continue to gain recognition for your accomplishments and your future endeavors be greater than the ones acknowledged thus far.

God bless you and your family.

A tribute to all minorities whom have contributed their intelligence and struggles for a better world!

It's a good thing Nigeria now has it's own satellite station, at least the Obasanjo regim can actually think of one good thing to do.

But then I've been trying to have a look at what it looks like i hope someone can help me out.

Hi Phillips, am not suprised at all by your outstanding achievements cos that's how it should be. Good enough to have at least some one from African Continent with comparable minds of other gone scientist like Sir Isaac Newton, Wright Brothers and John Nash!

It is an empherical prove that Africans can also perform and is expected to perform comparatively with other genuis which commonly exist in Europe, Asia and USA. This is an index to us Home based Scientists and Engineers that if you can go that far we can also get that far and beyond. Fire on

Life is all about understanding and discovering one safe. Its all about knowing whom you are. Life is all about loving people for who they are and not what they are. Above all trying as much as you can to understand others feelings. That way this world

When you see a successful man, you have to pause, look well, see if you can talk with the man then you ask how did you do all these? I put the same question forward today Sir,
I know I'll be greater than Emeagwali with time, My mentor Bishop David Oyedepo said Success is not a factor of accumulation but Service. The Father of Internet is a largely successful Man and I will be very proud to be associated with you. I'm the one to take the mantles when you give it up, so Sir, you'll have to create so other time for people like me who is ready to sacrifice his life for the betterment of this generation.....

A lot has been heard and said about you. I did not that you have a web site like this until a friend mail your web site to me.

Hardly in Nigeria of today can find a man of high profile like claiming such inheritance you have proved from all reason doubt that you from. Apart from international scene back home here many are ashamed disclosing their identity. There is still this norm in Igbo land which I do not really think it suppose to be that is the OUTCAST phenomemom that is so paramont in their culture. If I may ask is it suppose to like that, since we are coping western religion or should we copy 75% of their against 25% of ours?

Also, I will like to know the your effort in making a brighter future for upcoming children in the field of technology, going by what I read on your web site that "But what I want to say to you is there is another Philip Emeagwali -- or hundreds of them -- or thousands of them -- growing up in Nigeria today. I thought about it when I was driving in from the airport and then driving around to my appointments, looking into the face of children. You

Here is wishing you better days ahead in your quest to serve humanity. This message became necessary after I read one of your interviews from which I learnt of your temperamental love for solving problems that have threatened man's enjoyment of the resources supplied by nature even when you have to do it on charity ground.

Sir, I think it an honour, more than just a privilege, as a descendant of West Africans, how proud I am for that level of achievement. It inspires and gives a new resolve for many of us to move from "thorny bushes to greener pastures", not merely to attain success unto ourselves but to help mankind. I would like to correspond with you even with your extremely busy schedule. I would also like to discuss with you how developing countries could benefit from ICT development. This is a story I must relate to my son. Thanks again for making all Black people proud.

I must say that I'm truly intrigued with your level of intelligence, and success! I was researching African American Inventors, and came across this "extremely" important living inventor.

I was totally overwhelmed and had to tell many people about this "Father of the Internet" and he's a black Man!

My reason for contacting you today is to find out if there are any programs that you can recommend that will help other inventors as yourself.

I have an invention and I need some help please!!!

Its a pleasure to send you this message because if I live on earth without sending a message of love to you and your wife for your immense contribution to the ressurected belief in blacks in Africa and diaspora.I pray to come to limelight through the ardent use of my brains someday to the glory of God.I hope you do believe in the existence of God the Supreme Being because I was told that High level scientists like you find it difficult to hold God in belief.

Thanks so much for your motivation.

This is an amazing site, I came across it completely by accident! As an Ibo & a Nigerian I am ashamed of the fact that I had never heard of this great man.

You have just inspired a 28 year old woman at a cross-roads in her life to be better. Thank you Sir, and sincerely, God bless you.

I am truly proud of you. God enabled you to overcome the obstacle of tribal hatred, enthronement of mediocrity and preference for family affinity to merit to bring out in you what is endowed in most Igbos of our time. For those of us who are not lucky enough to evade the shackles of enslavement and backwardness called Nigeria, we thank God for you and we shall continue to pray for more success. Please remember to support our cause - the realization of Biafra. Thanks a million.

Hello,

I have never met you personally, but it's irrelevant here. I never got to know Achebe and Soyinka until recently. I got to know about you yesterday night while giving a lecture at a university in Muenster (Germany) and a Nigerian medical student challenged me that I didn't include you among our greats. I am sorry about that. Congratulations on all these achievements. These achievements go beyond Igbo, Nigeria or Africa. By any standard, this is a great service to Humanity and I would like you to see it that way without allowing people to limit it to any ethnic or national particularities. More grease to your elbow. yawn, because you command a name which rings a bell in all circles. Those who think that nothing good can come out of our Biafran 'Nazareth' can now bury their thoughts in shame, for a star that is as constant as that that rises from the East has arrived to illumine the world of science. The roll of the creators of worlds would read names like that of Newton and Einstein. But by God, you have joined the rolls of the creators of Universes. Emeagwali as a name will forever grace the lips and circles of all whose stock in trade is greatness. I bu nwa afo anyi. May the sun never set on your shore. You have taken a shot at immortality.

i know u're no psychologist,or phylosopher,but u,re a very successful man( that qualifies u)so how do u
help a young Nigerian Medical Doctor with a 'staggaring' goal:

to own the most magnificent hosp.complex in the whole world;to become a Consultant Radiologist servin in the Middle East;to rediscover my 'Other Self' so that i can 'awaken' the sleeping giant within me(this is my major concern pls.there's a sleeping 'dynamite' which i feel occasionally,and each time i do so,i 'become'harmonized with an unusual light that reveales to me my 'Other Self')to become President/Chairman.of The Board of the Medical Directors of chain of hospital compexes scatterd all over Nigeria? etc(don't want to bore u further)
so what must i do?

First of all, I would like to say that you are a great inspiration to me, Mister Emeagwali. The thing that bothers me is where I see people urging you to come back and "fix" Nigeria. The sad fact is that so many other well-meaning Nigerian intellectuals have tried to come back to help only to ultimately lose their life or at least their resources in Nigeria.

BECAUSE THIS IS THE ONLY WAY THE STATUS-QUO COULD BE ACHIEVED,RICH AFRICANS IN DIASPORA SHOULD HELP GIVE
LOTS OF DIASPORIC INTENDING AFRICANS A HELPING HAND SO THAT WE COULD REDUCE THE LEVEL OF BRAIN DRAIN THROUGH THE REDUCTION OF MIGRATION BY FRUSTRATION.

I WILL REALLY APRECIATE IF I COULD BE GIVEN A CHANCE TO SPEAK THE MIND OF LOTS OF AFRICA PROGRESS SEEKING YOUTH.

for a long time i looked for this page. today i have discovered you.

ever since i first landed at your site, i have preached emeagwalism to my friends. i tell them you site is addictive. they should not venture into
it. so much is contained here.

when my daughter is born, we are going to study together the way you did while growing up.

by the way, you seem to be quite shy on saying anything about african leaders.

a role model is absolutely needed here. our public is looking for a figure like yourself. but the nigeria
print media will bearly say something about you.

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

the sun newspapers like shouting headlines and will spend 4 full pages writing about mr brunell's book. ever since they came onto our daily desk i can remainber using just a half page to tell the emeagwali story that the nigeria public is wishing to hear.

dont come here. concentrate on your work. help humanity. nigeria will be free.

october 24th talk at elsah illinois shows your cutting-ageness and willingness to help humanity ala africa. yet it seems your aren't seeing a comprehensive picture of what is happening here.african people are not particularly the problem. you preach education. you talk human resources development. can this be acheived with an "elected / selected leader" rubbishing the nigeria labour congress-nlc.leadership constitutes the entire problem.all those nice and comely words from amiable bill clinton were thrown into the trashcan as he left the door steps of nass. courage and resillence is what you represent. someday the intensity of the light will shine here. we only have to be patient.

This your much-needed guestbook will help the Igbo people to know the role of ICTs in this 21st century .That with ICTs life will be better for men and women to achieve most of their life aims.

As you live in a knowlegde-based society (USA),May I remind you the need to always remeber home that NDIGBO are being neglected by the present and past government of this great nation -NIGERIA.

Dear Dr. Philip,

I am very much in awe of your great inventions. I am very proud to be an Igbo man I have this dream that one day I shall be free. Not only me but all the Ibos. I hope you will contribute to getting us freed. The price we have been paying so far is enormous. The burden is becoming unbearable. But as the Igbo adage says, "the darkest part of the night is that closest to day break. Do not forget how Albert Einstein used his talent to secure the Jews a state and a place in both the geography and map of the world. You the Albert Einstein of the Jews called "Ndi Igbo" in Nigeria. Please, we are always on our knees praying that GOD will use you and your connections to free Ndi Igbo.

I also do hope that you have a plan to help the deprived Igbo children to grow technology wise. I hope you have a plan to assist the down-trodden

Dear Professor Emeagwali

Igbo man rediscover his destiny. I hope you have plan to prevent future Igbo generation from suffering and passin through the same hardship that you passed through in life. You can help us, brother. You have beaten many odds. You can also beat this. Please, do something to help.

I will write you again before long.

Extend my deepest homely greetings to your beloved family, especially your wife who has stood by you all these years.

Thank you, sir.

Your in Igbo Spirit,
Emeka.

What a great achievement made by one man in his life time. This should be a source of inspiration for all of us.

If we keep faith to achieve we will definitely succeed. THIS IS OUR WORLD, WE HAVE TO LIVE IT. MAKE YOUR MARKS WHILE YOU ARE STILL ALIVE SO THAT THOSE UNBORN WILL LEARN ABOUT YOU WHEN THEY COME.

I first read about your article in one of Nigerian weekly Magazine on "Africa History lost, stolen ...." What an inspiring piece.

Initially the paper does not contain anything pointed to the fact that you are a Nigerian but the Last name and its spelling made me to probe further. Honestly it is worth all bit of the effort, it awe and quite inspiring, a Nigerian, not that it is actually impossible but we are nearly acknowledge in anything good.

You give hope to all and stand out as a role model. Reflecting on the article i read I could only agree with you that the value of our effort is in the perspective of those evaluating it.

May God bless you.

Sir,

Good day.I'm highly impressed that something good has come out of Nazareth (Nigeria).We are proud of you.I pray that God will also give me the grace to discover the hidden talent in me and use it for His own glory.

However,Sir,Please are you born again?If yes,Hold on to the Lord the more for His coming is very imminent and we have no time to waste.If no sir,the door of His mercy is wide open for you now.Hesitate not to accept Jesus Christ into your life through total repentance from all sins and asking for His blood to cleanse you.

It is my prayer that you will not only have a world wide recognition but that you will be celebrated in heaven at last.

Thanks and God bless you.

buckleys@emailaccount.com:

Dear Sir,

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

I would like to take a moment to introduce myself. I am the Reverend Peter Buckley from the parish of Llareggub in Wales.

One member of my parish, a Mrs. Hazel Hunt, contacted me recently. Her husband, Mike, runs a public house in the local village. Hazel has told me that because of a recent accident her husband cannot the Cock Well Inn any longer and they have recently sold it.

She tells me that they have no children and no other close relatives and that their monetary needs are relatively minor. They both have a small pension from the time that Hazel spent in the SAS and could both live quite comfortably on that.

They have asked me if I could investigate the possibility of starting a charitable trust, using the money from the sale of their pub. Mr. and Mrs. Hunt are both adamant that the money should not end up being spent on lawyers, trust officers and other 'middle men'. Rather, they would prefer to

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

have the money go directly to help the people most in need.

The area in which they wish the money to be best spent is Africa. Mr. and Mrs. Hunt spent some time travelling through Africa a number of years ago and came home shocked at the level of poverty that they had witnessed. It left a lasting impression on both of them.

The sum of money available is in the order of $725,000 (US dollars). I am under instructions not to contact the usual agencies because of the distrust that they both have for the larger organisations and their excessive overheads. I am far from being an expert in these matters - it is difficult to know where to start. Our church solicitor, A. Liddel Oldman suggested that the web may be the most direct route to those in need. To that end, I am contacting a number of sites such as yours to see if I can develop some contacts with people in the areas of most need.

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

If you know of any charitable group in your area who would benefit from a donation, of whatever size, I would be most grateful if you could pass on my details to them. If you do not, I humbly apologise for taking up your time. I am not sure if this approach is the best one, but at this stage, it is certainly the easiest for me.

With God's help I am sure that Mr. and Mrs. Hunt's money will be put to good use over the coming months.

May God belss you and your family.

Yours,

Re. Peter Buckley

This is a wonderful and refreshing site.
Thank you for enlightening me again.
Many of the pictures remind me of my lately departed father (1.012.2002) Album. It also helps to raise my identity which were not very nicely protrayed to us a school. As many of our parents/family members had shoes and wore white suits, when they came to Britain... Unlike the images which were protrayed (or reinforced/installed by the likes of Tarzan) or the school books. Thank you.

You are an inspiration to Nigeria and the whole of Africa as whole; your contribution the to global technology arena is a great push to let us all know we can go up there and give our best to the world as you have done.

The greatest fulfilment in life, I believe, is leaving it bit better than you met it. That's exactly what you've done and may God bless you for it.

My hat is down for a great contributor you've been.

With all my love.

Incredible to say the least, with so much emphasis on movie stars and athletes who contribute nothing towards the advancement of our society; our national and international consciencelessness seems to miss the mark on our true heroes. Especially when one is black and a native African. We American-Africans have been marginalized, manipulated and divided to the point where our identity as a people is only by our own weak definition. Know language of our own, know general cultural practices that are uniquely ours; we have become a race of mimics and followers of others agenda and beliefs. Most African Americans have never been to the continent of Africa but we call ourselves African Americans. We don't support the diaspora in any significant way that express a kinship to our ancestry. The power of a negative collective thought should not be underestimated, look what it has done to the African in America. I am very proud to be of African ancestry and I know, we as a people are know less than any other. I am very very very proud of you Dr. Emeagwali. It would be an honour if you were to speak at the U.S. Geological Survey's Black History Month presentation.

Getting the "other side" to acknowledge your contribution proves that you and indeed Africans can do even better.

May GOD continue to use and guide you towards more inventions and please don't get tired looking 'cause even as you look NOW, there's an invention waiting to be discovered.

God bless your family - The greatest contributor to your success must have been your wife.

When i came across this site, i was looking for information that would contribute to African success for a certain publication i am currently working on-that was the only reason.

But, it was so inspiring that i always come back because it made me so proud that a black man achieved all this.

Staggering to consider your achievements and in South African language, allow me to say BRAVO! This means well done.

What a leap from being called uncivilised beings to 'black geniuses'. Thank you! I'd appreciate any response from you, any ...even if it were a simple greeting.

Dear Sir,

I feel very great to write to you today.

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

Last week, I came across an old Nigerian Newspaper, The Guardian where you were interviewed and I read your articles. It is a Year 2000 paper. When I first saw it that is in year 2000, I couldn't make much out of it. The only thing I knew then was that a Nigerian genius who solved 3 billion questions in one second has emerged . Then I was 17. Now it inspires me I am from Anambra state in Nigeria. Right now everything is tough in the country . I can't go to university because there are not enough universities and there is a lot of corruption in the exams and it leads to gross admission of cultists while those who read stay at home.

Hello sir, I hope you are fine. Your wife is a very beautiful woman. I hope to be like you someday. I am good in mathematics and my aunt says I am very creative. I aspire to be a creative artist/computer engineer someday . Though the road is tough, I will make it

You were the best biology teacher I had at Morgan State University. I appreciate you working with me and helping me understand the complex subject of biology. A lot of the biology professors at Morgan don't care. They have the mentality of, "I have my degree, its up to you to get yours." You did not think like this. You worked with us and helped us. And I thank you. Without your knowledge and guidance, I would not have passed out of the class. Thank You so much.

You are an insiparation to Africa. Scientists and others now have some one to emulate. And to learn from that hardwork and determination can pull us out of our backward situation. Neither the slave trade nor colonialisim, nor even the Nigerian civil war and the military dictatorships could prevent you from achieving your dreams and persuing your goals. That you for walking in the footsteps of Imhotep and the other great scholars of khemet. You have done us Africans proud and challeged us to act.

Hi,

we communicated some 2yrs ago by email,do you remember? Well this is my 1st time visiting this web site and I am thoroughly impressed. While this is my 2nd visit to the US,I am yet to get over the "rude awakening" this indeed is the white man's land. When I am on an airplane all the blacks can be counted on my right hand, and when on the Greyhound all the whites can be counted on my left hand. Your advice, asking people(blacks) to "move on, leave the closed doors(for now)and inch in through the half closed ones" will save people from frustsrations. After awhile these closed doors will be flung open and then they can walk past them without giving them a glance if they choose to. Crime,Drugs,Gangs,Single Parenthood, Teenage pregnanccies and Violence I consider, misplaced aggression and Indulgence.If you survived all you went through and ended up successful, then racial discrimination is no excuse. Besides you and others have left so many doors wide open and others half closed for anyone to be hanging on the corridor! keep up the good work and God bless.

Yemi.

Dear Prof, Please perpend calls for you to come and save Nigeria, a mere harangue of nonsensical effusion from the unfortunately myopic and benighted. Postulating that the multiplicity of complexities confounding the Nigerian politics can be resolved by a single scientist bothers practically on a thinking inversely proportional to realism.

President, Philip Emeka Emeagwali

Sir,

I am very proud of you.

I personally think it is high time people like you come back home and take over the mantle of leadership from these old recycled leaders. We Nigerians are tired of HUNGER AND STARVATION. We are tired of false promises and no positive results.

I am making this passionate appeal to you on behalf of many Nigerians that believe in your ability. You have the capability and recognition.

May God bless you more for accepting this offer come 2007.

You know, someone once asked, "can anything good come out of Nigeria?". I was so stunned that most people underestimate the ability of Nigerians. You have made a mark in History for all Young and Old Nigerians to remember and aspire to achieve. Now I know that what God has decreed about someone must surely come to pass. Keep the flag flying! I am now determined more than ever to also be known worldwide for something as Highly Acclaimed as what you have done.

Dear Professor Phil, Arise and shine for your light has come! Truly, apostle Paul would write an epistle about you. You are a millenium gem-scientist born to impart generations of your race, tribe, and nation (Biafra of course), even the whole planet earth. In the time of war, (1966-1970) your kinsmen developed the "ogbunigwe". This time around, you, in the midst of your peers developed the fastest IT tool. Few years back, your kinsman, Dr Ezekiel Izuogu manufactured the "Z600" series of pleasure car with 98% local raw materials. But because of where you come from, your native country government has neither honoured nor appreciated you. Thank God for USA your host

If at all there is any time your motherland, Nigeria needs you, it is now. I think referring to you as the Bill Gates of Africa is not only defamatory but also derogatory. You should be referred to as the Phillip Emeagwali of Africa because you have created a name for yourself. So, you don't have to be under anyone's shadow. Your website remains the best I've ever visited. Once again you have proved to the world that it is wrong to refer to Africans as primitive savages and you've made me proud to be a Nigerian.

Also, I am in an African American Club that looks for different educated people to talk at different events. I want to know if it would be hard to get in touch with Mr. Phillip if we wanted him to talk at one of our events?

Thanks

I feel proud as an Igboman of your far-reaching achievements. While people as Chinua Achebe trode the roads of literal edification of igbo intellectualism, your tecnological exploits is another side side of the coin. It is unfortunate that the intellectual potentials of the average igbo is killed on the alter of political subjugation in Nigeria.

Habari!

In 1966 went to Uganda to teach at Mbarara High School. I remember writing a worksheet for the chemistry class which went something like this:

"By the Year 2000, an African will win the Nobel Prize for Chemistry. He will probably be a Nigerian"

I waited in hope for the millennium to fullfil my prophecy. It wasn't.

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from

So I am absolutely delighted by Eamagwali's achievements. He IS a Nigerian, and his achievements would rate a Nobel prize for IT if there was one.

So, boys of Ruharo, Kashaari and Ankole, I came closer than I had thought.

Just thought I should view your sight to remind myself that Nigeria's greatness is assured by God with people like you amongst us. We always thank Him, the Almighty, who gave you to us, Nigerians.

Stay Blessed.

I feel elated to be a Nigerian, but sad that the same problems you faced are being faced by millions of Nigerian students whose never-say-die spirit would have put Nigeria's name in the "internet book of records" if any. (And the government is still paying lipservice to the education of its citizens, imagine the ASUU strike now).

You are a megainspiration to me, one of my wildest dream is to enter into your shoes and I hope that one day, fate would bring us in contact.

Till then, keep the Nigerian flag flying and do remember "us" the underprivilege Nigerians who do not have the opportunity for scholarship to leave the shores of Nigeria.

God bless you.

Very intereresting and inspiring to read about you, Dr Emeagwali. I'll use a lot of the info in my primary school lessons.

Do you have any contacts for black scientists here in London who may be able to visit our inner-city school, with its largely Nigerian community?

Hi Philip,

I got to hear about you first from your brother Mr Nwakibie Emeka Emeagwali. He has a Baby boy named Prince Emeagwali with my mother-in-law. I became interested and further made efforts to know more about you. I now know how much pride you have brought to Nigeria and the Black race with you FASTEST COMPUTER PROGRAMME. I know that you love JESUS and he will make you achieve the purpose hidden in your heart.

I am here for a course from Nigeria. I will be finishing the course on 2 May 03 and going back

I am proud of your accomplishments and achievements!

As for me, all politics and policies are LOCAL! I take pride in the superachiever and overachievers that are of Nigerian and African origins.

Especially if they seek to bring the benefits of their immense knowledge to bear on Nigeria and Africa.

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters

If I may ask you a very personal question? When was the last time that you visited your hometown or any part of Nigeria?

Are you involved in Information Technology Development in Nigeria and Africa in any way?

I certainly admire your immense ability, it would be wonderful to use them to uplift Nigeria, Africa and Peoples of African descent.

I will be a great delight and pleasure to hear from you.

Best wishes.

You are truly an inspiration to me as well as to many others I'm sure!!

It's really amazing how one person can change the negative way one thinks of another because of his or her race, social status or their economic stability.

May God continually "Bless" you and your family in all you desire to do.

You are truly BLESSED!!!

Keep up the good work!!!

Philip,

I would like to suggest that you take the lead to revolutionalise the introduction of IT education in all Nigeria's Institutions of higher learning by firstly, mobilising resources through your colleagues in the diaspora, which I hope they will be glad to do given your interest, and secondly by encouraging our government to sustain whatever effort you will pioneer. As a genius, the present and future generations of nigerians are desirous of

This is the 1st time I'm visiting this site. I was searching the internet this night 30-03-2003 (GMT-00:02) "Scholarships for Nigerians studying in the UK" when I browsed and saw your site. To God be the Glory! We use you as a yard stick in setting standards for achievements all over the world, even in the UK. I heard of you for the 1st time during my undergraduate days, either in my 4th year or the 5th year at the University of Nigeria, Nsukka, when your achievement was published in the Nigerian Newspapers. I read PHARMACY and graduated in January, 2000, with just ONE distinction "only" in Pharmaceutics. I am on Overseas Postgraduate Scholarship from the Ebonyi State Govt for a Masters degree in the UK: Analytical & Pharmaceutical Sciences. To crown it all, I have been offered an admission letter for a PhD Research on DRUG DELIVERY of Cancer/Antibiotic Chemotherapeutic Agents, in the Dept of Pharmaceutical Sciences, University of Strathclyde in Glasgow, UK to start in Sept., 2003. So I am at the moment searching for sources of FUNDING/SCHOLARSHIP and that's

I finally got to meet you in person at the Eagle Award ceremony in London. What struck me most about you was how humble you are. Given all your laudable achievements , there was no trace of arrogance in you, you were always ready to listen to any body who wanted to talk to you. I thank you very much for giving me the opportunity to interview you for my TV show back home in Nigeria. I hope people who watch the interview back home will learn something from you.

Dear brother, I visit your website everyday ever since I came accross it few months ago.I have introduced it to so many Nigerians who enjoy the services of the internet but are unaware that an African,from our own country, Nigeria is a FATHER of the internet. Nigeria does not need people like you because you are from the wrong tribe.That is why our primary and secondary pupils and even undergraduates/graduates are ignorant about you and your contributions to mankind.Our children are instead being fed with Mungo Park story. The future of Nigeria is in the hands of evil people who at the ages seventy and above of are still stealing and milking her dry. Our rulers talk but do not hear. They are deaf. Do not waste your time talking to them. Talk to people of South Africa instead. Your scientific contributions to mankind makes me happy. There is something spiritual about them and each time I visit your website I feel uplifted. I am happy for you and your family. May the blessings be.

Dear Dr. Emeagwali, I just heard about your website although I've closely followed your achievements and those of other great Igbo (and indeed Nigerians) sons and daughters like you. Keep up the good work but pls. remember from whence you camen and realise that what the Igbos and indeed Nigeria as a country requires now, are not just grandiose schemes that are not in tune with the realities of our everyday experiences but realistic participation in the growth orientated aspects of our life if only for the sake of the next generation. I am pleased that an African , a Nigerian and a NWAFO-IGBO for that matter is making waves out there. Keep it up brother. You are indeed a motivator. I am an upcoming writer[poet] striving for the voice of my hands to be heard.I'd love to send my works for perusal and possibly publication. Still living in this society where maginalisation is the order of the day for a crime THEY claim our FATHERS committed,my works are portrayals of the injustices, deprivation and outright oppression

we face in this so-called free society. My question is 'What's the solution ? Though I never witnessed the Biafran war,I still witness the effect and aftermath. Please Dr Emeagwali I learnt that the war ended on a no victor , no vanquished note.Then why are we still treated as second class citizen ?

more appreciated abroad than at home. Nigeria, especially is losing a lot by not investing in the knowledge that world leaders seek to have like gold to improve their countries. I would enjoin those in government to re-think and believe that we can no longer afford to be part of third-world when we have Prof Emeagwali. May God continue to bless you and with more knowledge sir. --KK/

Sir Emeagwali, It is my greatest pleasure today to be signing your guest book. I was working on some articles to cover the achievements of Africans in various fields all over the world and someone just mentioned your name to me. After doing my researches on your person and all your achievements I felt so proud to say this is someone from Nigeria who has shown to the world that, "the body can be enslaved but not the spirit" All Africans or people of African origin that use the computer and browse through the internet or whatever purpose they use computer should be very proud that one of their own has proved to be the FATHER OF INTERNET. It is now wide open to the world that it is only when people of all races are given equal opportunities that we see people manifesting their true talents, skills and gifts. I have written a very extensive article on you and gotten it published for millions of Nigerian youths

to see and get motivated. It is also there for other youths of the world to follow and be motivated by. I'll want to enjoin you to continue to do your good works to make life better for all citizens of the world through what you know how to do best. Don't forget where you came from. The people of Igbo origin should feel your technological breakthrough positively. This is also to all other Nigerians in the Diaspora who are now very successful to always look back home to make Nigeria grow better and take it rightful place among the comity of nations. I have been greatly influenced by your achievements and may God continue to in part in you more knowledge and insight to do more inventions. Like we say in my part of Nigeria (north) "Sannu" and your people (east) will say "Da'lu" and the Yoruba (west) will say "eku ishe". Indeed you are a father of the Internet!

Congratulations and well done. I strongly believe that one day you will give us the AIDS vaccine (although this is not your field). Perhaps the combination of you and Prof. Dale Emeagwali and other prominent scientists will produce a think tank to help create the vaccine or get an AIDS cure. Short of addressing this very important priority, all of Africa's dreams will be shattered. I learnt today that in Kenya alone, up to 500 people die everyday from AIDS or AIDS related deaths. Africa runs a risk of accelerated depopulation that will more likely than not wipe out the entire continent. If you use your super computer, you will probably be able to tell the time that will happen. At the current rate it may not be more than 200 years. That is my gestimation. Rgds, Louis Kanijo

It took me over two years to complete the tour of your website, which involved opening several pages per day, and continually thrilled to a dose of scientific homily. During these period, I spent greater part of my leisure making copies of the pages of your website for presentation at several African cultural fora. I have emailed over 1000 pages of your website to friends accross racial divide. I take pride in spreading the gospel of your ingenious scientific breakthrough mainly to avoid a situation of someone else claiming the credit "as usual" in several years to come. I must say that your website is highly educative and more extensive than the website of most multinational corporations. Your biography is one of great source of inspiration. One that is no less rugged, playing from an uneven ground. From grass to grace, and from the obscurity of scientific laboratory to the pedestral of world prominence. It is my pleasure to identify with you and your family, while praying that God Almighty will elect your offspring "Ijeoma" as yet another upcoming wonder in modern science, relying on the Ibo adage of "like for like" "a snake does not avoid giving birth to a long object" What can I say about your wife Dale, she remains a towering pillar in world of modern scientific discovery. I guess you must have shouted "euraka" when you found Dale as your life partner. What a match. It is my pleasure to declare the Emeagwali family- a household of modern scientists. Please do not loose your bible.

Friends, beautiful African music is nutrition for the soul. Why do we actually exist at all in this universe? Were we created by hidden gods, magic matter which is everywhere anyway or invented by a hidden alien civilization from deep space? Human beings and lives on planet Earth could be some kind of experimental development. Our minds as such could in fact be a projection from a hidden constellation. Please, read more at the site:

Phillip, You have created and added value in a way that salvages the black race. We only now need to focus on how an Emeagwali can germinate in the US but hardly in Africa. You are the biblical good seed that fell on good soil, but then is Africa really an infertile soil? I recently discovered my story "Educating the Ignorant" linked on your webpage and have sent an email thanking you. I had no idea it was there. You helped inspired me to write the story because there are a lot of people out there who still believe negative stereotypes about blacks. People need to know black people have achieved so much in this world. I wish you continued success. Thanks once again.

The good book says, a prophet is not honored in his own land, but far more than that, how can the type of intellectual nitwits and ninnies we have been having from the north as leaders, appreciate intellectual giants like you coming especially from the south. I thank God Nigeria did not succeed in wasting you and your intellectual resources as it has done to thousands if not millions who are not as lucky as you are to escape from the human bondage called Nigeria. My appeal to you Brother Phillip, is that please use all what God has given you, your intellect, connections, wealth and whatever to help free your people especially the south from the bondage of the Hausa/Fulani fuedal system. Hello Dr. and Prof Emeagwali. I have been a constant visitor to this website for some time now.

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

This is my first time of writing in. I am studying Electrical Engineering at the Univ. of Minnesota. I really am happy that I now know so much about you. I had heard of you in the past but couldn't even remember your name and this bothered me so I finally got a chance to really find out more about you. I am really impressed, proud and happy for you but I am not surprised. The hardships you went through to succeed has been a source of inspiration to me. Each time dwell on my own suffering here I think of how you would have handled yours. Mine is nothing compared to yours so I use that as a standard of what my threshold for suffering should be. There are some things that I need to clear up. We as black people should stop trying to prove anything or impress the white people. We should not do our work based on the hope of receiving their awards. We should cultivate pride and distinctions in our own established awards and We should impress and prove ourselves to ourselves and our people first. If we do not respect our own people, other people will never respect us. I believe that we as black

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

people have been brainwashed so much to believe that we are inferior in the sense that when a black person such as yourself comes up, we have doubts until we wait for the white man to certify their efforts as genuine. We should not feel bad when our achievements are not appreciated or recognized by white people, rather we should be more concerned about our own people's perception of us. We all know (at least the informed ones know) that there are more smart black people than white people. The only thing is that their media blows their trumpets and blows their own people out of proportion while blocking out their obvious shortcomings. I believe it is an insult for you to be called the Bill Gates of Africa because He is not, was not, and will never be a mathematical genius. He was basically an opportunist who took people's ideas and used them for his own gain. That is nowhere near the definition of a scientist. In Africa, he would just be a trader who intimidated the business competition. If you had been a white man, you probably would have been the richest man in the world and your company

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

would be in Fortune500. Every single person on this planet would have known who you were in a few days after the media does it's thing. We as a race should never allow anyone to define us or validate us but ourselves. We should not be awed by any particular races' achievements to the point of assumed superiority or inferiority because God who created this existence knew exactly what each individual from each race is capable of doing and has given each and everyone tons of skills to use. It is now up to the individual to harness those gifts. If that individual allows a fellow "mere" human to limit his or her imagination or potential, he or she is then lost. For in this life, the people that seek to please someone whom they have no obligation to will never reach their full potential and will never be truly happy. Human beings are the most dangerous things to try to please. For a smart black person, you are usually hated more by your peers(like in Nigeria). In the case of being here, you are hated for being black and hated even more for being smarter(for crushing the stereotype of Africans and Afro-Americans). We

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from

as a race should develop ourselves and our race in view of the bigger picture. Once we start supporting and respecting our own people in all progressive professions and emulating them on a large scale, only then can we be free of having to be forced to journey to someone else's land to develop their society while they look down on us (because they know that our own people don't respect us). Once Africa and black people as a whole everywhere start uplifting black people, only then can we say yes, that if we are insulted, that we have a home (where we are respected) which we can go back to. Thanks again for the chance to really learn more about your work and the work of other great black Scientists and technologists. I also recommended your site to the NSBE (National Society of Black Engineers) members in my school.

Characteristics of Paul C. Jong's series! 1. Faith-filled messages bearing witness to the truth, which enables us to receive the indwelling of the Spirit. 2. Soul-winning books which clearly show the way of being born again of the water and of the Spirit (John 3:5). 3. You can receive this service absolutely free of charge. No further obligation.

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

After reviewing the e-books, you may ask the printed version (paper books) of the titles to our organization. We'll send you them for free, too. May God bless you richly with Paul C. Jong's Christian Book Series! John Shin General Secretary The New Life Mission

I'm a very big fan of yours and I visit your site frequently. During one of those visits, I came across Ahiara Declaration. You don't know how thrilled I was because I have been looking for a copy of this historic speech by Ojukwu. I have recommended your site to a lot of my friends. Your site is very informative and educational.

Congratulations! you've actually proved to the world that anyone, despite your ethnicity can achieve great works. You're really wonderful. You've kindled the light of success in so many. We are proud of you. I am from Onitsha in Anambra State of Nigeria currently studying computer engineering, in the above university. I believe we need your help down here in Nigeria because the approach we are getting towards the course is not encouraging at all. I want a situation where we will start designing and not only repairing & replacing already designed parts by other countries. I'm

Phil, you've made us proud with this great feat. But, please know that there are still millions in Africa who may be like you if they are offered ample opportunities and conducive environment, and would need leverage to discover themselves and achieve great things, now, even particularly in the area of Information Technology. Phil, we cannot say that the state of things in Nigeria is hopeless ? Alas !, we need rise up and try for the sake of posterity and for mankind, at least that we did our very best in our time for our own people and race. We are all proud of Africa, and starting from Nigeria we can begin to shake up from technological and scientific slumper that is pervalent among our people. Phil, you've unknowingly become an icon and a mentor to many people of colour who have identified dearly with this achievement of yours. God bless you and you family. I pray that God would give you the vision and the energy to touch the world and the very part you came out from. Peace.

Phil, you've made us proud with this geat feat. But, please know that there are still millions in Africa who may be like you if they are offered ample opportunities and in conducive environment, and that they may be helped to discover themselves and achieve great things, now even particularly in the area of Information Technology. Phil, can we say state of things in Nigeria is hopeless ? No, we need rise up and try for the sake of posterity and for mankind that we did our very best in our time for our own people and race. We are all proud of Africa, and starting from Nigeria we can begin to shake up from technological and scientific slumper that had so pervasive among our people. Phil, you've unknowingly become an icon and a mentor to many people of colour who have identified dearly with this achievement of yours. God bless you and you family. I pray that God we give you the vision and the energy to touch the world and the very part you came out from. Peace.

A BIG KUDOS, RESPECT AND MORE BLESSING AND WISDOM TO YOU EMEAGWALI. YOU ARE INDEED ONE OF THOSE PEOPLE WE NEED IN THE LEADERSHIP OF OUR PEOPLE TODAY. Hi everybody, My good people, good job... God have seen our and heard us this long. But one more step ahead of the millenium with patience will NOT hurt us a dime. Let's continue to pray for all surfing people around the world. My message is very

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

simple, and i promise not to go much far in explaining myself: I don't care how rich you are, if you cannot take care of people around you, esp. your immediate and extended family members, YOU AIN'T NOTHING, BUT NOTHING. Please let us remember to take care of our elderly people back home, don't wait till they pass away before you do that; you know what I'm talkin' 'bout; if you have the money please do whatz right beacuse god will surely reward you. Some people spend thousands and even millions on funnerals, but their old people sufered till death. That ain't good. I wonder why we spend a lot on crying that the government is NOT doing enough while we have people in the enterprise world making more money that the president of the united states. I remember one of my professors at City College of NY earns close to $200, 000 USD a year, many people earns even better,...still will be part of the general saying that the 'govt. ain't doin' too good'; if everyone gets involved in the campaign against poverty, we'll all be alright someday by beating down on the sky rocketting rate of 'being poor.'

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

Don't wait till you become the 'big(II) gates' till you do something. When one of my 'rich uncles' became a governor of a 'rich state' (if not the richest) in Nigeria, everybody was all over him for something (if not evrything)... WHY SHOULD THAT BE,...DO YOU GET THE MESSAGE? And thatz how the country is always being looted. WE MANUFACTURE OUR OWN TROUBLE... someone is in a political position, everybody comes to him for money, contracts, funds...whatever,...In that case, we are all responsible for the calamity of Nigeria because the ONLY mesage we convene to them is..."if you get there loot and take care of us"... 'EAT & RUN' political game. Money that is meant for ebrybody the narrows down to the few powerful (it's all good). Well, IT'S TIME FOR A CHANGE. This is the reason for a newly formed organization that brings all people together as one big happy family without pointing an accussing finger to nobody whatsoever, if someone is wrong, we all do. Criticism of the past will only do us good if we all admit to our failure, and then move forward without wasting time. We all see how good

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from
Philip Emeagwali*

things have gone past us in the last decade, but we can surely RISE again if we believe and ACT NOW. This org. intends to bring all of us together; ENOUGH OF THE OLD TACTICS OF POLITICKING ON BEHALF OF PEOPLE WHILE DOING IT ACTUALLY ON BEHALF OF OUR BIG BELLY POCKETED MOUTH OF EMBEZZLEMENT. The org. is in two folds for now 1. REALITY CHECK MOVEMENT OF NIGERIA: which will scrutinize where exactly we went wrong, cause, effect, and remedies. This is NOT a political party, but an org. of the poeple, for the people, and, by the peole. It would involve everyone, regardless of age, ethnic background, level of education (anybody can have a message for all to enjoy), culture, religion, and many other inhibitors of progress. 2. ALLIANCE FOR A DEVELOPED NIGERIA: At this very juncture, we are ready to 'rock & roll' in the world of Information Technologies. No doubt, we have enough intelect to bring us to today's level of high-tech. We shall do everything to call back Nigerians that are being paid abroad to be useful for other countries; we'll work out ways they can be useful

Dear Professor Emeagwali

*Letters
to and from

to us on a good deal. If they get better treatment back home, they won't be otu there anyways. Although there are some professionals with high demands, still, we'll do something that would not jeopardize their career, the national security of their residence country, nor our own national interest, especially those that have already naturalized somewhere accross the globe. THANKS EVERYBODY,...GOD BLESS. more to come soon at afrloinks.org ---under construction for this purpose.

One of my self-assigned responsibilities is to demonstrate to young Black Children that they too can become Outstanding Mathematicians, Scientists, Computer Technologists and Financiers and Entrepreneurs. I want to specially recognise your achievements and to thank you for being their as a role model. There is, in my mind, a TRADEGY in our midst that not even our EDUCATED PEOPLE AND THOSE WHO RUN OUR EDUCATIONAL SYSTEMS ARE RECOGNISING. This tradegy is that our children are lead to believe that the world's store house of knowledge was, and is still being created only by Cauacasians and that Peoples of colour are just consumers of this knowledge (because they are incapable of producing anything worthwhile)Your acievement, and that of many other Inventors/Designers/Acievers is giving the lie to this organised attempt to rob Black People of their intellectual heritage and capacity. May we find ten more Emeagwali's over the next ten years. Lloyd P.S Looking forward to seeing you here in Jamaica in March 2001.

"A rough sea breeds a good sailor". You are a good sailor, with focus, vision and a rich heritage. An Impressive site and an even more impressive personality. Truly an inspiration to me and many other intelligent Nigerians who wonder what life can hold for them when the odds are "stacked" against them. While going through your page i found out "i believe i can fly" isn't just a song. In my flight someday, i know i'll come to share ideas with you. That is ONE of my goals in life. GOD BLESS U AND ALL URS, D

How special the feeling that welled within me once I realized you were real and the information decimated across the web of you and your achievements legitimate. How humbled I was to discover you found a lifetime of joy with an American woman of African descent. Sir I wish to thank you for the example you and your wife set for transplanted Africans across the globe. How special you are to us who appreciate you, I am sure this feeling in your case transcends Race. Much respect, honor, and love.

Dear Dr Emeagwali, I have been browsing your website for a while now and never tired of constantly going back to look for something new. Shall I congratulate you in the first place for your unparalleled achievements. You stand as painfull truth to the rest of the world that the black race is as capable as any other race. Our black skin may irritate some people, but we can show that we have something superior to offer, and you have already proved that. You can be sure of this, Governments and their agents are listening. I was particularly impressed by your speech, "Can Nigeria Vault into the Iformation Age". I think that speech should be serialised in Nigerian newspapers. Our politicians must be made to read it. All Nigerians must red it. Please keep up the good work. Finally I hope you are vigorously pursuing your research, because if you do, the world will be forced to recognise. God bless.

May the Lord our God in Heaven continue to bless and keep you. I truly appreciate you going all around to the numerous schools and talking to the students about life and how education is the key to everything. I'm doing a term paper on you and your contributions to the internet. Thanks a bunch for being such a good role model! JESUS is LORD:)For without HIM nothing is possible.... But with HIM the sky is limit.

I truly am empowered to know that you exist as it validates and supports Dr. Diop's work; and those of us who are now re-educating ourselves on our true history. However, of greater importance to me is what actions, if any, do you see yourself taking towards using your genius in the continuation of the works yet to be completed left by Dr. Diop?

Are you sure this page was not put up for reference during Black History month? How come some of these claims are traced back to other inventors? I thought Al Gore invented the internet?

Webmaster responds:

No, this is not a "Black History" Web site. It is a "History of Science" Web site. In a section entitled "The Bill Gates of Africa," the book HISTORY OF THE INTERNET describes Philip Emeagwali as one of the visionaries and pioneers of the Internet. (Then) Senator Al Gore sponsored the legislation to build the Internet. He did not invent the Internet.

Brother Emeagwali: Thank you for your most inspiring webpage. I found you through a women's collective Sistrum5. For an Internet beginner as myself, this is one of my best finds. I am inviting you to visit the Village of Harlem in New York City. I am originally from Washington, D.C. and moved to Harlem in 1969. The place in Harlem where you would find "a home away from home" is on Fifth Avenue between 125th and 126th Streets. It is the spot where my energies have been for the last 30 years of my life. There you will find a monument, a edifice that glorifies the people of African descent for all to see and experience. This building was built in 1990 and is owned by the National Black Theatre, Inc. a non-profit community based institution and organization founded in 1968 by Dr. Barbara Ann Teer. On the exterior and interior of this building is relief art commissioned by NBT and endorsed by the Nigerian Government thru releasing traditional and contemporary artists from Oshogbo, Nigeria to come to America and install this art on the premises with tools and skills that were seven generations old. It is a work in progress. We regularly visit Nigeria and it is our second home. I invite you, actually implore you to bring your family to see this magnificent display of the largest exhibit of Yoruba "new sacred art" in the North American continent! I can be reached at (212)926-1049. I anxiously await your response through either e-mail or phone. Thanks for your consideration. Peace and Love!

Dear Dr. Emeagwali I would like to take this opportunity to thank you for all I've been learning from your website .Ever since I discover your site in late 1997 , I've been more encouraged to face the difficulties black men face in this country with greater hope and refusal to give up. Now I know that I'm a winner and never will I give in to the detractors any longer .Once again thanks for all I've learned from your website . Your fellow nigerian

Hi Mr. Emeagwali! I just surfed to your site and was astonished. So much interesting science and a lot of personal things I saw. You are very truthful. The thing I loved most was that you did not forget your roots, because too many people do it. Your site is also a sign for people that all can be possible. I also love maths and computer but use them just to do my diplomed engineer of manufactuting. They are very useful and effective on many things. Think in germany people are afraid about computers. They are afraid of new things. I got to say at the end, that in my last 5 years in the internet your site is the most interesting one I ever saw. Respect Michael

My major of electrical engineering and my prerequisites for this major have given me some great ideas for SOLAR ENERGY. What do you think about solar energy for Africa and "low income" areas? What are some of the obstacles we must Overcome to implement such power? I personally feel that this may be a way to ease the economic strangle-hold imposed on our people by the Hostile trade policies of Europe and some Eastern countries. It may even help to circumvent the corruption among our own leaders as far as technology is concerned. I look forward to your

Your story confirms what we Africans have known all along: that the human spirit is indominatable, that the only things in life that matter are the fundamental truths, and that God's will superceeds all. Nothing else lasts for ever, except the will of God. We know we can, now they know we can if they will only give us the chance! I must say it is enouraging to young Nigerians like myself that technological inventions and/or innovations is not a matter of skin colour. Philip Emeagwali is a role model for all blacks in general and Nigerians in particular. Unfortunately it is disheartening to know that to achieve such great heights one must leave Nigeria.

Fabulous work! How can we work together to uplift the lives of women and children in Africa? I recently completed a Master in Public Administration at Harvard and speak the four main European languages that are also spoken in Africa-- Portuguese, French, English and Spanish. I am a mid-career professional who has travelled the world and started an NGO in Brussels in 1993. As a self-starter, I believe my added-value to African people is the knowledge I can give you in entrepreneurship and strategic communication skills. Can we work together?

I am really impressed by the Emeagwali's work on their web sites, including Ijeoma. As a 15 year old Nigerin girl, I have never found any Nigerian develop such an outstanding web site for Americans to see and educate themselves. By the way, I wrote a biography on Dr. Dale Emeagwali for our physics report on Black History month. We had to write about either an inventor, scientist, or an engineer. Truly, I was more than happy to hear about Philip Emeagwali. I am an Igbo girl, who came here in Jan. 1996. I am currently a sophomore in Newark. My town in Nigeria is Amadiehi Ubulu in Oru Local Government Area, Imo State. I just have to say to Scientist Philip Emeagwali that (jide ka iji) I will love to hear from you. :-) You guys really inspired me!! Thanks alot!!! Love, Ozioma.
