ABSTRACT

The purpose of this publication is to make readily available to those interested in education in Eastern Europe a guide to selected reference materials on the subject published in English since a predecessor biblicoraphy was produced in 1966. It is a companion effort to "Education in the U.S.S.P.: An Annotated Bibliography of English-Language Materials, 1965-1973." The present compilation lists 192 titles from the period 1965 through 1976 indexed in 81 categories. The material is arranged by region and country, beginning with Eastern Europe (for publications concerning more than one country) and proceeding alphabetically through the eight Eastern European countries, which are placed in order by their popular rather than their official names. It is further divided within each ceographic section by subject category, beginning with "general" and proceeding alphabetically through the specific subjects included in that section. Categories include not only "general" and 76 specific subjects, but also "bibliographies," "periodicals," and "yearbooks." Subject and author indexes are included. (Author/IET)

NOTE

This publication was written under the auspices of the U.S. Office of Education but came off the press after the Office's staff, programs, and functions were transferred to the U.S. Department of Education upon its establishment May 4, 1980. Although originally prepared as a publication for the Office of Education, an Agency no longer in existence, it nonetheless contains valid information as a publication for the Department of Education, despite any seemingly current references in it to the Office of Education, its Bureaus, other organizational subdivisions, or activities.

FOREWORD

It is very clear that increasing understanding between the United States and the countries of Eastern Europe is in the mutual interests of East and West as well as of the world at large. Education has especially important contributions to make to this objective.

The U.S. Office of Education takes very seriously its professional responsibilities for helping expand and improve international understanding and cooperation with the countries of Eastern Europe and makes important contributions in a variety of ways. Continuing efforts include financial assistance to comprehensive Eastern European and Soviet Union language and area studies centers in several American colleges and universities, graduate student fellowships for research and training in Eastern European studies both in the United States and in the countries of Eastern Europe, faculty research grants for scholarly work in Eastern Europe, sponsorship of selected efforts to produce teaching materials and preparation of research monographs and bibliographies on various aspects of education in Eastern European countries, and leadership in sending delegations of American educational policymakers and State administrators to selected Eastern European countries for firsthand observations and the sharing of experience on problems of common concern.

Among the recent examples of basic instructional and reference materials produced or in process with financial assistance from USOE are the following:

East Central and Southeast Europe. A Handbook of Library and Archival Resources in North America (American Council of Learned Societies and Social Sciences Research Council Joint Committee on Eastern Europe Publication Series, No. 3)

Scholars' Guide to Washington, D.C. for Central and East European Studies (Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, Smithsonian Institution)

History of Southeastern Europe: A Regional Survey from 1699 to the Present (American Council of Learned Societies)

Eastern Europe: An Interdisciplinary Serges (American Association for the Advancement of Slavic Studies). Ten booklets for undergraduates.

A-Dynamic Inventory of Soviet and East European Studies in the United States (American Association for the Advancement of Slavic Studies)

, In addition, USOE has financially supported several projects for the development of language-teaching material for a variety of Eastern European languages, including Albanian, Bulgarian, Polish, and Slovene.

In the past few years USOE has also sponsored, funded, and published or is publishing descriptive studies of the education systems of Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Hungary, Poland, and Romania. The present publication, described below, is believed to be an especially useful contribution of USOE's comparative education program.

The purpose of this publication, Education in Eastern Europe: An Annotated Bibliography of English-Language Materials, 1965-1976, is to make readily available to all interested in education in Eastern Europe a guide to selected reference materials on the subject published in English since the predecessor bibliography was produced by the Office of Education in 1966. It is a companion effort to Education in the U.S.S.R. An Annotated Bibliography of English-Language Materials, 1965-1973, which was prepared by the same author and published by USOE in 1974.

The present compilation lists 192 titles from the period 1965 through 1976 indexed in 81 categories. The material is arranged by region and country, beginning with Eastern Europe (for publications concerning more than one country) and proceeding alphabetically through the eight Eastern European countries, which are placed in order by their popular rather than their official names (but with their official names also given): It is further divided within each geographic section by subject category, beginning with "general" and proceeding alphabetically through the specific subjects included in that section. Categories include not only "general" and 76 specific subjects, but also "bibliographies," "periodicals," and "yearbooks." The wide range of subjects covered and the assistance this bibliography can render to comparative study can quickly be seen by skimming the Subject Index, which begins on page 59. Each bibliographic entry is numbered consecutively. The entry numbers are used in the cross-references after individual entries and in both the subject and author indexes. *

This bibliography will be of special interest to many, covering as it does the period when Eastern Europe began to open more widely to Western contact in general and when in the United States ethnic heritage studies began to assume importance in American education.

While a wide range of views is expressed in the various entries, the inclusion of an item does not constitute any official acceptance or endorsement by the Office of Education of any position or recommendation therein or of any author. As in the earlier bibliography, material from Eastern European publications provides some information not found in other sources and yields unique insight into the educational philosophies of these countries and the Socialist conception of the relationship between the educational system and the state. The purpose of this publication is essentially to facilitate access to a sizable and complex body of literature on education in an important group of countries. While a careful, systematic effort was made to provide reasonably comprehensive coverage of useful materials, the resulting compilation does not purport to provide a critical review of the many and varied items included.

The author, Nellie Apanasewicz, is a research and program specialist on education in Eastern Europe. With the U.S. Office of Education from 1968 to 1977, she has previously authored several other USOE publications, most in collaboration with the senior specialist for Eastern Europe, Seymour, M. Rosen. These joint efforts include Soviet Education: A Bibliography of English-Language Materials (1964), Textbooks for Soviet Schools (1966), Final Examinations in the Russian Ten-Year School (1966), and The Educational System of Yugoslavia (1970). More recently, she was solely responsible for Education in the U.S.S.R.: An Annotated Bibliography of English-Language Materials, 1965-1973 (mentioned previously) and The Educational System of Poland (1976).

The present publication was Ms. Apanasewicz's final project on Eastern Europe before retirement in late 1977. Its attention to detail and thoroughness are characteristic of her work. The Office of Education has been fortunate in having her dedicated services over a significant span of years. She can be proud of the many contributions she has made in helping the American educational community better understand education in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

"Evidence of world-wide awareness of the social, educational and psychological implications of early childhood education emerged clearly from the work of the 33rd session of the International Conference on Education, held in Geneva in September 1971. Professor Okon's paper describes in detail the research phase of an innovation, the broad aim of which is to serve the best interest of Polish children of pre-school age. An investigation of these children's ability to cope with the school situation with which seven-year-olds are normally faced confirmed the hypothesis that certain children are in fact mature enough to enrol before the statutory age.
