Executive summary

Smiling Mind, Australia's leading digital-led mental health not-for-profit supporting children and families, is calling for a transformation in how we promote children's mental wellbeing – and more broadly to the way children's needs and rights are prioritised nationally.

The current crisis and impact of mental ill-health in Australia is considerable

Australian children's mental health and wellbeing is deteriorating at alarming rates. We know Australia is experiencing a mental health crisis, but prevention and early intervention presents an opportunity to turn the tide around.

 70% of the most common presentations to paediatricians in Australia are for mental health, yet more than half of children experiencing mental health challenges are not currently receiving professional help.¹

 Between 2020-2022 the Australian Psychological Society noted that among kids aged 6-12, the experience of Social Anxiety Disorder had increased by 45%, peer relationship difficulties increased by 39% and educational and learning concerns had risen by 35% over the past two years².

 50% of all adult mental health issues emerge before the age of 14³, and evidence shows that early intervention during childhood and adolescence can prevent between 25-50% of adult mental ill health⁴.

Transforming the approach to children's mental health through 5 key actions

Supported by National Children's Commissioner, Anne Hollonds, Smiling Mind launched the 'Our Kids Count' campaign to champion the mental health and wellbeing of Australian children and call for 5 key actions:

- 1 Appoint a Minister for Children to advocate for the specific needs of children across policy areas federally.
- 2 Raise government investment in the primary prevention of mental illness to 5% of all mental health expenditure to promote mental wellbeing.
- 3 Prioritise children's mental health and wellbeing with the funded implementation of The National Children's Mental Health and Wellbeing Strategy.
- 4 Deliver a regular, nation-wide survey of Australian children's mental health to support effective decision making and service design and delivery.
- 5 Launch a National Children's Mental Health Day as part of Australia's Mental Health Awareness Month, to raise awareness of children's mental health nationally.

The petition calling for a federal Minister for Children amassed more than 10,000 signatures. The Our Kids Count campaign has received extensive national coverage across print, broadcast TV, radio and digital media with an estimated audience reach of approximately 180,650,000.

Australia's mental ill-health crisis and its impact

The evidence supporting the need for a proactive, preventative approach to mental health is staggering, but a solution is in sight.

There are over 4.1 million Australian children under the age of 12—making up just over 16% of the Australian population (March 2021). Mental health concerns are a key health challenge for Australian families, with younger kids experiencing sharply rising rates of mental ill health.

Without significant change many will require crisis and clinical intervention from an already overburdened system. But while the negative impacts of mental ill-health are potentially far reaching, they are not inevitable if we take a proactive and coordinated approach.

“ We have a closing window to act before problems become ingrained and harder to treat in adolescence and adulthood. Without the right support, we risk a lost generation of Australians unable to live to their fullest potential. ”

Catriona Davis McCabe
President of the Australian Psychological Society

Evidence summary:

The latest data released in October 2023 from the Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS) reinforces that Australian youth mental health is rapidly declining, with nearly 40% of young Australians aged 16 to 24—more than 1 million people—experiencing a mental health disorder in the previous year, up from 26% in 2007⁵.

Between 2020-2022 the Australian Psychological Society noted that among kids aged 6-12, the experience of Social Anxiety Disorder had increased by 45%, peer relationship difficulties increased by 39% and educational and learning concerns had risen by 35% over the past two years⁶.

While formal diagnoses multiply, systemic shortage and limitations around specialists indicate a significant portion of the 4.1 million children in Australia under 12 are falling through the cracks. 70% of the most common presentations to paediatricians in Australia are for mental health, yet more than half of children experiencing mental health challenges are not currently receiving professional help⁷. Wait lists for children's mental health clinical services are also at an all-time high⁸.

The Productivity Commission estimates the cost of mental ill-health to be between $43-$51 billion per year⁹.

Broader impacts of mental illness

The impact of mental illness and poor mental health outcomes are far-reaching and the potential to positively impact a range of priority areas by improving children's mental health is significant. A key area where poor mental health adversely impacts Australians is educational outcomes and skills development, which carries a range of flow on impacts.

Educational outcomes and skills development

The impact of mental illness on children's academic performance and engagement with learning is profound and debilitating. The negative effects that mental ill-health have on children's schooling is further compounded by socio-economic factors. Supporting child mental health and wellbeing will strengthen educational outcomes nationally.

- Children with mental illness score lower than students with no mental illness in all NAPLAN test domains and year levels. Children experiencing mental-ill health during their younger years are found to be up to 2.8 years behind their peers in academic outcomes by the time they reach the final year 9 NAPLAN test¹⁰.
- Poor connectedness and poor engagement with school are more common in children with mental illness, as well as in children who had self-harmed or had suicidal thoughts or behaviours¹⁰.
- Mental illness is more common in children living in families experiencing various forms of socio-economic disadvantage including low household income, parental unemployment and family breakup¹⁰.
- The impact of both socio-economic factors and mental illness compound. In general, children with mental illness and in lower socio-economic situations score the lowest NAPLAN results¹⁰.

The time for generational change is now

The increasing rates of mental ill health in this age group demands urgent investment and focus from all sides of government—the absence of which will likely have dire consequences for Australian youth and young adult mental wellbeing in the future.

There is an opportunity for Australia to be world-leading in taking action to address the critical needs of children aged 5-12 and to ensure adequate attention, funding and intervention is made available for Australian children. The statistics are alarming and the evidence is clear: mental ill-health is beginning in childhood and persisting throughout life. Intervening early in life has the potential to drastically drive down the rates of mental illness and increase life-long mental wellbeing.

- Mental wellbeing is an asset for life, and the foundation for good mental health begins in childhood—we need to increase our focus on promoting and protecting children's mental wellbeing. If we do so, we'll see the benefits as children grow into adolescence and adulthood.
- A National Children's Mental Health and Wellbeing Strategy was delivered in October 2021 with the understanding that a national approach to mental health and suicide prevention could not be achieved without ensuring the mental health and wellbeing needs of our children. Formalised funding and implementation of this plan is urgently needed as a national priority.
- While both Early Childhood Education and Youth are represented within the Federal Government, 5-12 year old Australian children are not explicitly represented. Consensus is building amongst government, sector stakeholders and supporters to appoint a federal Minister for Children to champion the urgent need to address the crisis in children's mental health.

Transforming children's mental health through 5 key actions

It has become clear among families and schools and across the mental health sector—children's health and wellbeing is not a national priority. There is no direct government accountability for cross-portfolio leadership and coordination to ensure the unique and specific needs of Australian children are elevated. As a result, our youngest and most vulnerable are falling through the cracks.

Supported by National Children's Commissioner, Anne Hollonds, Smiling Mind launched the Our Kids Count campaign to champion the mental health and wellbeing of Australian children and call for five key actions:

- 1 Appoint a federal Minister for Children to advocate for the specific need of children across policy areas federally. Success requires a whole of Government, coordinated approach.
- 2 Raise government investment in the primary prevention of mental illness to 5% of all mental health expenditure to promote mental wellbeing. Less than 1% of Federal Government expenditure on mental health goes towards preventing the onset of conditions and keeping people mentally healthy. We need to urgently rebalance this.
- 3 Prioritise children's mental health and wellbeing with the funded implementation of The National Children's Mental Health and Wellbeing Strategy. The Strategy was developed after extensive consultation and has broad support—it's time to put this into action.
- 4 Deliver a regular, nation-wide survey of Australian children's mental health to support effective decision making and service design and delivery.
- 5 Launch a National Children's Mental Health Day as part of Australia's Mental Health Awareness Month, to raise awareness of children's mental health nationally.

It's time for the Federal Government to take action

Australian kids 5-12 sit in a legislative blind spot. The Our Kids Count campaign is backed by 10,300+ individuals from across the country, Australians are calling for a federal Minister for Children to ensure adequate attention, funding and intervention is made available to address the crisis in this generation's mental health.

Petition for Minister for Children signed by more than 10,000 people

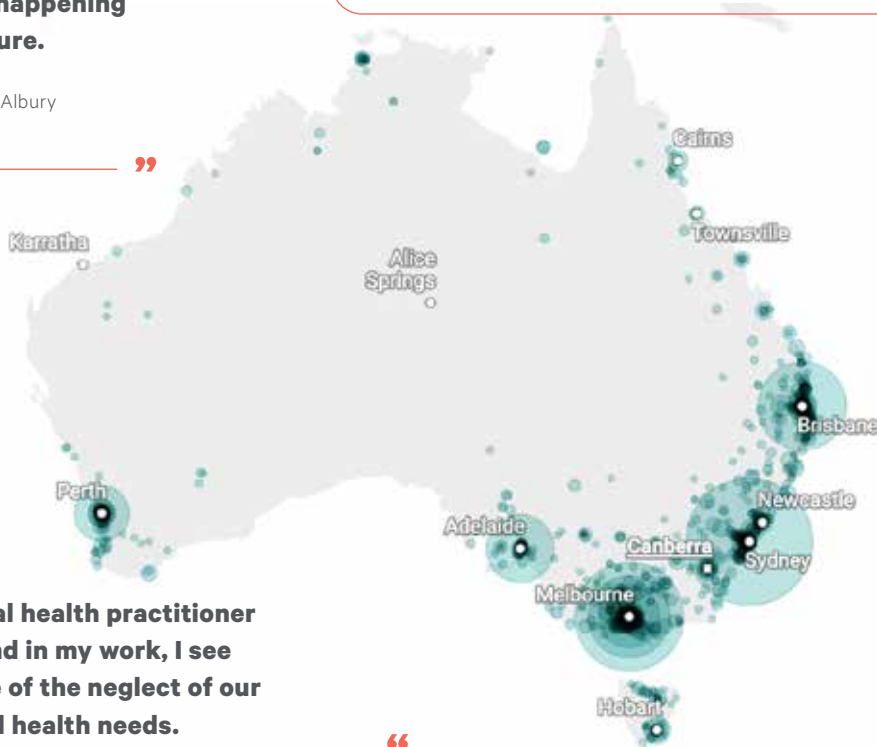

The call for cross-portfolio leadership and coordination to elevate the unique and specific needs of Australian children and ensure there is adequate focus and funding to address the growing crisis in our kids' mental health and wellbeing has been supported by thousands of Australians across the nation.

My kids were heavily disadvantaged due to government pandemic policies. Hopefully this will prevent such awful discrimination happening again in the future.

Emma Smithenbecker, Albury

There is no better return on an investment than one made in children. What isn't invested now will only cost greater in the future, and not just in monetary terms. Adequate funding and support for children's mental health should be viewed as a mitigating risk factor that sets in place the strategies to give our future decision makers and influencers, the best possible mechanisms for coping.

Anna McFarlane, Bradfield

The difficulty in finding a paediatrician and/or child psychologist appointment is staggering in a country like Australia. It is an issue that needs to be urgently addressed. As for schools, they have no clue how to address these problems and are more part of the problem rather than the solution.

“ The research is clear. Early intervention will have ripple effects for the health of all Australians.
Amy Deutscher, Eastwood ”

“ My daughter and I have experienced mental illness over years. The ones with the power need to focus on young school age children that have a big chance of suffering and struggling with mental illness.
Tracy Naughton, Nhulunbuy ”

“ The importance of early education and early healthcare are not taken seriously enough in this country and it needs to be the primary remit of a dedicated minister.
Kendal Cross, Maribyrnong ”

“ Early knowledge and support for mental health is critical to our kids, families and society.
Verity Lloyd, Bannellong ”

“ I have worked in the child protection field since the 70's. As young children do not have a voice, they need well-meaning adults to advocate on their behalf. Our standing as a fair and compassionate country is dependent upon how we care for its most vulnerable members, which in present day includes children.
Christopher Harkness, Perth ”

“ I’m a child who has depression.
Chloe Eccles, Barmedman ”

“ If I'd had the right support as a child I would be a successful 50 yr old human now instead of a chronically mentally ill one.
Tracey Boyden, Franklin ”

“ The ages between 5-12 are such an important part of kids’ development and when they are attending school. It is important for them to have a minister to represent and support them.
Amanda Harris, Melbourne ”

“ I believe starting work with young people at the source when they’re at their prime of forming is critical!
Macey O’Keefe, Footscray ”

“ Our children are our future; in other words, they need to be nurtured and properly educated so that one day they will be good enough and strong enough to help and support our older generation. After all, we reap what we sow. ”

Steven Gosch, Coffs Harbour

“ I believe that all children deserve the best we can give them. ”

Maria Cooper, Surfers Paradise

“ I’m a mum and a NICU nurse. Our children count and Australia can do better. ”

Elise Fitzsimmons, Lara

“ I have 2 children in that age gap and feel that is such an important age and our children need more support especially with increasing numbers of mental illness and learning disorders. ”

Annemarie Fazari, Cowan

“ Get with the times!! Our kids deserve it!! ”

Toni Schloss, Fadden

“ I have 7 grandchildren between the ages of 5 and 12. ”

Barb Campbell, Scullin

“ I care deeply about children's mental health and wellbeing. Being there and advocating for the next generation will change the world. ”

Matthew Simmons, Fraser

“ Give them a voice and protect their future. ”

Anne Kyritsis, Menzies

“ I am caring for children with mental health issues & concerns. I know that a solid childhood foundation of good health in every aspect can facilitate healthy & contributing adults. ”

Wendy Neagle, Emerald

“ Our children are the future and prioritising them should be everyone's priority, particularly in today's society. ”

Laura Walton, Macquarie

“ Kids minds matter. ”

Julie McPhail, Macnamara

“ I am a parent of small children and this is important for our little ones! ”

Anna Little, Melbourne

“ It's ridiculous that this isn't already a thing... ”

Adele Calafiore, Menzies

“ I have a 7 year old son who needs his voice to be heard and his needs to be met. ”

Sarah Buckley, Mount Martha

“ I have a 5 and 12 year old, and coach many others. This time of their life sets them up for their teen years! ”

Megan Barnes, Keilor Park

“ Mental health is an issue for all ages and kids need to have someone advocating on their behalf. They are our future. ”

Shelly Hogg, Canberra

“ The mental health of our future leaders is crucial for them to be successful in life and have the skills to be resilient and confident. ”

Danielle Butcher, Kingston

“ Prioritising our children's mental health and well being promotes a better future society. ”

Maria Kirby, Berwick

“ My children's mental health is one of the most important things to me. ”

Rebecca Vessey, Menzies

“ Our kids are our future. We need to care for them and have a dedicated minister who makes this their priority. ”

Frances Pratt, Chisholm

“ Great mental health is everything a child needs to work towards happiness and have a strong foundation in their life. ”

Nicole Jordan, Corangamite

“ This is such an important age group and needs the focus, these kids are the future! ”

Emily Sedgwick-Downey, Ballarat

“ Too many young people are being neglected and abused- at home, school, in sport, and by members of their communities. Too many to count are not safe and too many commit suicide because they feel unsupported and abandoned. Youth crime is on the rise precisely because of these reasons. A Minister for Children may address such issues. This is well overdue. ”

Roslyn Boreham, Brisbane

“ Our kids are missing out. ”

Carol Tait, Gold Coast

“ It's super important, lay a healthy foundation for them. ”

Jackie Gith, Forde

“ Children are literally the future so they should at the very least have a minister. ”

Laura Brindle, Erskineville

“ I'm concerned about the mental health of Australian children, as well as more broadly their access to opportunities and support. ”

Anna Larsen, Sunshine

“ I believe every person, no matter their age has a right to mental health programs. ”

Bobbie Brown, Forrest

“ Our children need someone to speak up on their behalf. ”

Karen Lucas, Perth

“ Our children need us all to stand up and advocate for their mental health and overall well-being. Our children are bombarded by social media and need strong, positive, healthy minds to safely navigate the world of today and tomorrow. ”

Valerie Ashton, Beauty Point

“ The Australian government doesn't give a crap about the children of Australia. It's been proven for centuries. ”

Kia Nothere, Cairns

“ Australia needs this! ”

Fiona Doyle, Cowper

“ Mental health is really important for everyone, particularly our children, particularly with the effects of the pandemic. ”

Sue O'Neill, St Albans

“ Children are the future and we must do whatever is needed to ensure they have the best and brightest opportunities moving forward. ”

Dylan Turner-Williams, Hughes

“ Mental health will be the pandemic of the century and we need to address it urgently. ”

Kate Nguyen, Grayndler

“ This important part of our society usually has no one to advocate for them..It's vital that children are protected. ”

Lesley Adamson, Sydney
