

ASO VISUAL ABSTRACT

ASO Visual Abstract: Risk Factor Analysis of Lymph Node Metastasis for Rectal Neuroendocrine Tumor: Who Needs a Radical Resection for the Rectal Neuroendocrine Tumor 1–2 cm in Size?

Jin Sun Choi, MD¹, Min Jung Kim, MD, PhD^{2,3}, Rumi Shin, MD, PhD¹, Ji Won Park, MD, PhD^{2,3}, Seung Chul Heo, MD, PhD¹, Seung-Yong Jeong, MD, PhD^{2,3}, Kyu Joo Park, MD, PhD^{2,3}, and Seung-Bum Ryoo, MD, PhD^{2,3}

¹Department of Surgery, SMG-SNU Boramae Medical Center, Seoul, Republic of Korea; ²Department of Surgery, Seoul National University College of Medicine, Seoul, Republic of Korea; ³Cancer Research Institute, Seoul National University, Seoul, Republic of Korea

Tumor grade and size is an important predictive factor for lymph node (LN) metastasis. For neuroendocrine tumor (NETs) 2 cm in size, tumor grade also is important for LN metastasis, and radical resection should be considered (<https://doi.org/10.1245/s10434-023-14829-x>).

