The great horned owl is prepared to be released.

Great horned owl released after being nursed back to health

Story and photos by CPL. KIM BUCKNER

A great horned owl, injured Feb. 25 near the Sneads Ferry gate, was released March 25 after several weeks of recuperation at the Outer Banks Wildlife Shelter in Morehead City.

The male owl suffered from a fractured wishbone, said shelter employee, Lessie Davis. He was most likely hit by a car because owls tend to look for small rodents near highways where the grass is cut and animals are easier to see.

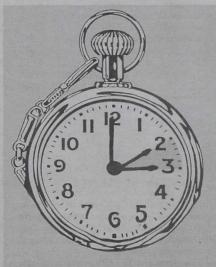

"We were fortunate the owl was in good condition when it arrived at the shelter," Davis said. "Because a bird's bones are hollow, they tend to begin healing within three days and are completely healed within two weeks. If a bird isn't received before the bone begins healing, it may be too late."

The great horned owl is one of the largest in our area. It stands about two-feet high and has a wingspan of six feet. Its name comes from the two horn-like tufts of feathers on the owl's head.

Once the injured owl's fracture healed, it spent the next couple of weeks in a flight enclosure exercising the muscles that had been immobile while the bone healed.

The owl was brought back to Camp Lejeune and carefully released in the same area it was found. This is important because it probably had already estab-

OUR ENVIRONMENT

BY CPL. F.E. CHARLES

Sneezing, stuffed nose, watery and itchy eyes, shallow breathing — simple allergy, or symptoms of air pollution?

In North Carolina, we're lucky, if air pollution is just nature's own - the green dust (longleaf pine pollen) that's recently coated everything from cars outside to furniture inside.

But, invisibly mixed with nature's own, is man's own as well.

Consider man-made air pollution. What if all our air pollution was as visibly noticeable as pine pollen?

To find out what that would be like, let's visit Mexico City, where a yellow cloud of noxious smog envelops the city almost daily. It is one of the most polluted cities on earth.

In Mexico City, children don't leave for school until after rush hour, to avoid breathing noxious fumes, The National Geographic Society reported recently. Even birds - robins and cedar waxwings - have fallen dead from the poisoned sky.

The city is also quite tired of claiming the "most polluted" reputation. Two weeks ago, Mexican officials shut down the city's largest air polluter, an oil refinery. It will be relocated outside of the the 7,000-foot-high valley Mexico City occupies. Only this time, it will be modernized to meet stringent environmental standards.

This is part of a $2.5 billion assault on some the world's worst air pollution, fueled by three million vehicles and 35,000 factories, reported National Geographic Air pollution, by its very nature, is quite rightly a "global" problem. What is strangling Mexico City today, could very well choke us tomorrow.

But this shouldn't come as a surprise to anyone today. While air pollution has some environmentalists stirred into an almost paranoid frenzy, most people don't give it a second thought.

That is, unless they're stuck in traffic and breathing the noxious fumes from the auto in front of them.

Find it difficult to breath that hazardous mixture of gases?

Some people have allergic reactions to what's floating around in the air they breathe. More serious, are those who suffer from asthma. Air pollution can worsen their chronic respiratory condition.

In this country, however, most of us, quite literally, suck up air pollution every day without giving it much thought.

It's not until traffic backs up, or cloud cover keeps smoke stack emissions low in the atmosphere, that people begin sputtering about

Then point a guilty finger at industry. In the same breath, they accuse government for not doing enough to solve the air pollution dilemma.

While they're blaming everyone else, they may as well blame themselves too.

Each day people use a variety of personal products, which release potentially harmful chemicals into the air. These range from hair spray and deodorants to household cleaners. Many of the products still contain chloroflurocarbons (CFCs), which are potentially harmful to the earth's ozone

Because of this, they have unwittingly become contributors to the global problem of air pollution.

Therein, the solution to this is with everyone. It's as easy as reading product labels, asking questions, and keeping the family car in tune

As people are the source of their own problem, as one environmental group summed up, "they are also the genesis of its solution.'

Taxpayers reminded of 1990 change

Staff report

As the 1990 tax period comes to a close, taxpayers are reminded to take notice of the new changes that apply when filing tax returns.

In previous years the standard deduction has risen and 1990 was not forgotten. The deduction amounts for the 1990 tax returns are as follows: Married, filing jointly, or qualifying widow or widower, $5,450; Head of Household, $4,750; single, $3,250; and Married, filing corrections. ing separately, $2,725.
Additional standard deduction amounts are added to these amounts if a spouse or the taxpayer is 65 years old or older, or blind.

Students who are 24 years old or older by the end of 1990 and who have a gross income of $2,050 or more may not be claimed as dependents by their parents.

The personal exemption for 1990 is $2,050 for each individual, the individual's spouse and each dependent.

Also, if the taxpayer is eligible for the Earned Income

Credit, the maximum credit is $953 and the income limitation amount is increased to $20,264.

In addition, due to Desert Shield/Storm, military ser-vicemembers are reminded that they have 180 days after their return to file their tax returns.

However, for anyone who may need assistance will filing their tax returns, the Volunteer Income Assistance Program provides free help to people w basic tax returns. After completing IRS training, VI volunteers provide free help to those with special ne including people with disabilities, non-English speak and elderly taxpayers.

Moreover, taxpayers must not forget that it to about eight weeks for a return to be processed and refund check to be mailed to the taxpayer.

But the automated refund system has been set up people wanting to check the status of their returns. It at least eight weeks after filing before calling the free number (800-829-4477) for an update. By doing the IRS can track down the return using the taxpa full name, Social Security number, filing status and act amount of expected refund.

The IRS offers many other free services to help payers with their federal returns. Tax publicat telephone services, volunteer and education prog and general information are some of the service

Finally, taxpayers are reminded income tax re checks need to be cashed within one year of the on the check. After that, the check is invalid an IRS will have to issue a new check.

Base black bears undergo 4-year study

BY CPL. F.E. CHARLES

Generations of school kids have grown up knowing that bears hibernate. Sadly, they've been misinformed by misinformed recoile.

Bears don't really hibernate. They just get fat and lazy and sleep a lot during the winter months. In scientific jargon it's called "carniveron lethargy."

Bears are amazing creatures, yet little is understood about them. Their unique survival mechanism of extreme lethargy opens questions to wildlife biologists and physiologists alike. Why doesn't the bear suffer disabling deseases during months of inactivity from lack of nutrition and exercise?

More importantly, why is the animal, which is uniquely adaptable to many habitats, and able to easily coexist with man, in serious decline here at Camp Leigune?

Three years ago, the latter question faced MCB officials. Wildlife biologists with the Environmental Management Department here recorded a decline in the black bear population. While bear hunting was banned immediately, it wasn't the principal cause of the bears' decline.

Base officials launched an extensive fouryear research project on the black bears to find the answers. Michael Pelton, Ph.D, fish and wildlife biology and management, and David Brandenburg, graduate research assistant, University of Tennessee, found valuable clues almost immediately.

Roadside dumpsters and traffic became primary factors in the attrition of the population, along with poaching, bears falling from trees and starvation, according to Brandenburg.

As a result, dumpsters, which offer "fast food" to black bears, were moved away from major roads on base. But bear fatalities from traffic still remain a problem. Since the study began, eight adults and one cub have been killed, according to Brandenburg.

Curiously, the survivors have adapted to the traffic on base. The bears established buffer zones a safe distance away from the road, according to Brandenburg. Then, moving to a specific crossing corridor sometime after 8 a.m. the bear(s) make their preplanned move across the roadway.

Brandenburg learned this by tracking the black bears here, using radio telemetry. In August 1990, he captured and fitted 12 bears with transmitter collars. The information he gathers will be included in a larger data base on black bear behavior patterns.

His efforts not only document when a bear actually crosses the road, but it's habitat, the travel corridors it uses and food it eats

"They actually move to a staging area and plan to move across the road long before they actually do," he said. "... We want to determine mortality rates and the dangers the bears suffer here, and how they coexist with the Marines."

Knowing this may lead to man-made corridors at the bear's natural crossing point at the highway. This will protect bears from becoming statistics.

But the intelligence level of the black bear is remarkable, according to Pelton. "They have color vision, a long memory retention and recognize sizes and shapes, " he said. "They've even been known to undo the latched doors in the fenced-in bear shelters along the Appalachian Trail in the Smokey Mountains."

As this and other studies Pelton is directing on the black bear progress, he hopes to come closer to unlocking a few mysteries about the black bear, which could prove beneficial to humans.

For example, physiologists, according to Pelton, want to know why, during the bear's winter lethargy, it isn't susceptible to osteoporosis, a bone deteriorating disease in humans caused by calcium loss? Or, why after months of inactivity, muscle in bears doesn't diminish, or become "atrophic." In humans, muscle atrophy easily occurs due to poor nutrition and lack of exercise.

"The bears here have no problems with muscle diseases," Pelton said. "The bears here are more healthy than those found in the Smokey Mountains."

The bears, according to Pelton, who is the leading black bear researcher on the East Coast, have the potential to help medical researchers also find solutions to other disorders, such as anorexia nervosa.

The eating disorder found in some young women is an obsession with weight loss and self-induced starvation. "Physiologically and metabolically what is happening to the bear during it's lethargic stage is identical to anorexia nervosa," Pelton said.

ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT DEPATMENT

At about 150 pounds, this bear is almost too much for David Brandenburg, sadual research assistant, University of Tennessee, to manhandle. He is conduct gife research on the black bear population here. The four year study hope to fix solutions to stabilize a bear population which has been declining in received

The human disorder is apparently normal physiological behavior in bears — part of their survival mechanism. If physiologists can understand how this affects the bear, perhaps they'll find the key to preventing this disorder in humans.

Another key point in the survival of bears, is the breakdown of only find the system during this lethargy stage: If blace bears relied upon proteins for urvin they'd never make it," Pelton set

Black bears rely on fat reserve they stored the previous fall for they double their weight before to ving doors for the winter, according Brandenburg.

During the lethargy stage, digestive system shut down compately, cording to Pelton. Yet, they still 1rn 25 to 4,000 calories a day to remain alive.

However, this radical metabote pro isn't completely understood by phisiologand wildlife biologists like Peltu.

But these mysteries won't be swied in Camp Lejeune study alone.

Meanwhile, Pelton and Bridenth continue to concentrate on the lack be coexistence with man. Along this way, it may find some valuable clues about bear's potential benefits to mai

Once she was holding him securely, the bird's bright yellow eyes absorbed the familiar surroundings. Even as Davis turned the owl's body, his head and eyes remained looking in the same direction. She lifted him up and let go. He flew to a nearby tree and sat on a limb.

SCAMP

Unseen sentries track enemy movement in dele

BY CPL. C.M. ABERCROMBIE

I MEF correspondent

SAUDI ARABIA — A pair of Kuwaiti A-4 "Skyhawks" scream over an Iraqi camp at Ali Al Salem airfield in northern Kuwait, as Iraqi soldiers dive for cover from the hail of falling bombs.

After two passes the jets disappear through the thick smoke created by hundreds of burning oil wells, the helpless victims of Iraq's scorched earth tactics.

When the air raid subsides, rattled soldiers emerge from their cubby holes to assess the fresh damage inflicted by the continuing barrage of coalition bombings.

Within the rubble, four 1½ foot-long sand-colored tentacles rise from the scorched sand.

CPL. J. KINCHEN-SCHNEIDE

Above, an Air-Delivered Seismic Intrusion Device is dropped from a CH-46 helicopter. Left, this collage of wires and plates are actually a group of sensors. The bewildered soldiers regroup and begin to move southward. The long column of Soviet-made tanks and a mishmash of trucks and personnel carriers head toward the Kuwait-Saudi Arabia border for the expected "Mother of all Battles" with coalition forces.

As the column moves out the unnoticed antennas bend slightly in the breeze created by the passing vehicles. Fifteen feet below the antennas, buried deep in the sand a transmitter, the size of a soda can, begins counting vehicles as they head into the night.

One hundred and fifty miles away on the Saudi border a larger antenna, taped to an empty water tower, picks up the transmitter signals. A relay, buried in the ground near the water tower receives the signal and immediately sends it along a predetermined frequency.

At 1st and 2nd MarDiv, and I MEF surveillance and reconnaissance centers, Marines monitoring the frequency quickly prepare a report of enemy movement along sensor string M114A.

The report is taken to the commands' operation centers and the columns speed, directions and approximate size is plotted on the area of operations map.

"We put out 108 sensors in Kuwait and along the Saudi border," said CWO-4 D. Colvin, CO, Sensor Control and Management Plt.

The sensors, air delivered into Kuwait and hand deployed by SCAMP Marines along the border, served as unseen sentries to track enemy movement during Operation Desert Storm.

The SCAMP Marines received their first signal of enemy movement on Feb. 19. After that until the cease fire was called for, they processed 134 signal reports of movement.

Using four types of sensors, seismic, infrared, magnetic and audio, the SCAMP Marines kept the major Marine Corps commands apprised of virtually all major enemy troop movement in the area of operations.

With the information provided by SCAMP, Marine compile the information to begin making analysis.

"The Battle Assessment Team grew out of the existing lessons learned system. I think what they found out was that the system was a passive one that required the units to input their lessons. The war represented a once-in-ageneration opportunity to review our equipment, organizations and doctrine in the light of actual combat experience. The Warfighting Center wanted to take maximum advantage of this opportunity, and this project is the result."

The initial plan called for Marines of the team to be married up with combat units during the war and gather information while it was still being generated. However the advanced party arrived shortly before the war started, and the main party not until after it was over.

"But because we have the eyes of so many people who were involved in battle we'll be able to get the information from them," Stanley said.

"We're trying to catch those people while they're still in theater. We've gone directly to units to interview people and even have teams stationed at the airport handing out questionnaires.

"We're trying to discover where we've made mistakes, and where we've done well. What's worked and what hasn't," Stanley said.

The colonel pointed out that it's not a witch hunt to blame people for mistakes.

"This is not a contest where we're saying 1st Battalion did better than 2nd Battalion. The purpose isn't to evaluate how one person or one unit did, but to try to help the Marine Corps in the future."

The team is investigating every facet of the ment from how efficient LVS's were, to how worked on different targeting systems. Not use mpt from scrutiny.

"The war was a test case," Stanley said. "I the time a lot of things have been used while do ye such a large scale. NEO gurus flex muscle during training exercise

24th MEU (SOC) correspondent

ABOARD THE USS GUADAL-CANAL — The 24th MEU tested its special operations capability recently on the island of Corsica by conducting an amphibious exercise and the evacuation of citizens.

The main thrust of the three-day operation was a Non-combatant Evacuation Operation, ensuring the safe passage of Americans, French and third-country citizens from a lawless country. With the Navy ships offshore acting as a safe haven, this exercise realistically simulated situations the 24th MEU (SOC) could likely encounter while in the Mediterranean.

"In response to Operation Desert Storm, the threat to U.S. citizens has increased dramatically," according to Maj. Rick Raftery, intelligence officer for 24th MEU (SOC).

"The safe evacuation of American citizens away from these hot spots is our most likely mission."

This exercise tested the Marines' ability to protect lives as well as property, he said.

"Our evacuation procedures received a thorough testing on unfamiliar terrain including handling evacuees, some with injuries, who did not speak English."

After securing main transportation routes from rebel forces and the American Embassy from hostile action, the MSSG-24 Evacuation Control Team

(the NEO gurus) was inserted by helicopter to the extraction site.

After the French Embassy had closed during this simulated exercise, the American Embassy controlled the safety of about 60 U.S. and French citizens waiting for evacuation.

Fundamentalists protests and riots severed the loyalty of host National Guards. Many refused to participate in crowd control because of religious beliefs. Others deserted their posts outside the embassies.

Two Marine infantry companies, Golf and Hotel, were flown in to ensure the safety of all Americans and those foreign nationals wishing to leave. Fox Co., after riding ashore in the belly of Amtracs, was ready to assist in the evacuation process. Hotel Battery Marines flew in with their 105mm howitzers for artillery missions in support of the NEO.

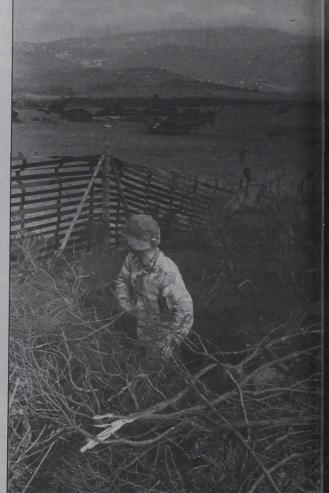

Marine Medium Helicopter Squadron 264, from MCAS, New River, ferried hundreds of Marines over ominous mountain ranges and through treacherous windy conditions to strategic locations inland. When the call came to evacuate, aircraft after aircraft safely shuttled evacuees to the USS Guadalcanal.

"The U.S. military presence had a stabilizing effect," Raftery said, "and allowed the host nation military and political apparatus to regroup and quell the rebellion."

The French Foreign Legionnaires, who had probed and attacked various Marine positions the night before during the combined exercise, provided the French evacuees.

One Legionnaire summed up the MEU's visit to Corsica.

"The MEU can attack quickly with many assets. It's scary — and impressive," said Tommy, a native of upstate New York who didn't offer a last name.

Trauma to teeth is a common occurrence in children. These injuries can be as simple as a chip or result in complete loss of a tooth. Most traumatic injuries are to the front teeth. Studies show that over half of all children will sustain a traumatic dental injury before completing high school. Boys and girls are equally prone to dental trauma until about age nine. From age 10 on, boys are twice as likely to injure their front teeth. Interestingly, one in four children treated for dental trauma repeat the injury to the

Fractures can involve both the root and crown, complicating treatment and recovery. Other injuries require only "tincture of time" to heal. Some treatment is relatively easy, requiring only one appointment for a tooth-colored restoration. Other injuries may require multiple appointments for splinting and root canal therapy

Even a tooth that has been completely knocked out can be reimplanted successfully. The sooner a tooth is replaced in its socket, the greater its chances of being retained. Teeth reimplanted within 30 minutes have the best chance for success. Teeth reimplanted after on hour have a very poor prognosis.

Once a tooth is knocked out, the best course of action is to rinse it off with water or milk while holding it by the crown. Do not handle, scrape or scrub the root in any way. If the delicate peridontal ligament fibers on the root surface are damaged, the tooth will not reattach.

Holding the tooth by the crown, place it back into the socket. The tooth should fit in easily and conform to the other teeth. Replacing it quickly will probably cause no additional discomfort. The sooner the tooth is returned to its socket, the quicker the peridontal ligament fibers on the root will begin to be nourished. After reimplanting the tooth, see your dentist at once for a thorough exam and X-ray. The tooth may need to be stabilized (splinted) or adjusted to improve its prognosis.

If you are too squeamish to replace the tooth in the socket then make sure the tooth and the patient get to a dentist within 30 minutes. If not in the socket, the next best method of transportation is to place the tooth under the patients tongue However. if there is the liklihood that a small child or uncooperative patient might swallow the tooth, the next best alternative is to transport the tooth in a cup of milk. Chlorine in tap water tends to kill the delicate fibers attached to the root, and should be avoided. Remember, do not handle the tooth by the root.

If a knocked out tooth was in the dirt before being reimplanted, the dentist may request a tetanus consultation with the patient's physician. After reimplantation, the tooth should begin to attach itself to the bony socket and surrounding gums. Depending on the length of time the tooth was out of the socket, the conditions it wass jected to, the damage to the socket site: the degree of root development, yourd tist will give to you the best treatm tions and a prognosis for success. If ther has not fully matured, the pulp often: vives and no further treatment should required. The tooth must be re-exan over time to assess its progress. If the has fully matured, the pulp will not rem vital and a root canal will usually be itiated within seven to fourteen d Generally, reimplanting baby teeth is advised because the procedure may dam the developing permanent successor.

If a reimplanted tooth is eventually treatment alternatives include implants, ed bridges and removable partial dent These "false teeth" vary in cost and in amount of time and effort required for t fabrication. Primary concerns for a tients are comfort, function and appera of these prosthetic teeth. The best ti ment, however, is good prevention, suc wearing mouth guards during athletic c

In order to help establish financial security for military and civilian personnel, Headquarters Marine Corps has designated April as Savings Bonds Month.

The intent of the month is to educate Marines and civilians about purchasing and the benefits of savings bonds," said 1stLt. Joseph M. Bartolome, base disburs-

United States Savings Bonds are offered to military and civilian personnel as a convenient way to save

The time it takes for a bond to mature depends on the interest it has been earning. The interest that U.S. savings bonds earn changes every six months, in May and November. Bonds held less than five years earn a fixed interest of six percent annually or the rate which was effective at the time of the purchase, whichever is greater. Bonds held beyond five years earn a market based rate which is 85 percent of the market average of Treasury securities. Therefore, the higher the market, the higher the interest the bond earns.

Another benefit of savings bonds is that all or a pol tion of the interest income from savings bonds can b exempt from federal tax if used for education.

Unit representatives are available during the month long drive to give Camp Lejeune personnel a chance to buy through an allotment for the military person or a payroll savings plan for civilians

The following is a list of savings bond representative to call for more information:

A Marine corporal wrote home Dec. 22, 1990, saying, "I know oil has a lot to do with why we are here ... (but) Saddam has raped them (trapped Kuwaitis) and is no better than Hitler. And I know that the families that can't get out tell their children at night not to worry, that those Americans are close and will not forsake us ... If I get zapped here, I am going to be thinking that I got killed for those little kids that can't do anything for themselves, instead of for oil.

The timing is perfect for people to catch "Spring Fever," especially as Marines return from Saudi Arabia.

Families and friends are continuously decorating and planning welcome home parties, dinners, vacations, and special nights for those who won't be able to take a vaca-

One neighbor, Yolanda Allison, drew eleven ribbons on cardboard squares and painted them yellow. She then printed the names of the husbands of her neighbors on each one. The cardboard ribs were then stapled to a big tree in front of Vicky Baker's house where they could be readily seen by passersby.

Allison and Baker's husbands deployed a few days before Christmas

'They weren't here for Christmas and they won't be back in time for Easter, but we're going to have a huge barbecue for all the husbands on this court when they return," Baker said. "We'll celebrate everything they missed."

Also, Donna Meredith, whose husband didn't deploy to the Gulf, willingly showed her support by allowing the neighbors to erect a huge replica of the American Flag in her vard

The flag was drawn on a white sheet by Allison and the words, "The few, the proud, the Marines" and "welcome home," in bold black letters are written on the flag's white stripes.

The recent show of support didn't start with the end of the war. There is also a huge star hanging in one of the yards that has been there since Christmas.

Baker said the star would hang until all the Marines

We want everyone to know that we are proud of our Marines, as is most of the community," said Julie Weldon, whose husband, Sgt. William Weldon, H&S Co., HQ Bn., 2nd MarDiv., deployed in December. "We're going to party!"

Yellow ribbons with the names of deployed Marines have been placed on a tree in Tarawa Terrace II

RBE keeps replacement gear ship-shape

Story and photos by CPL. KIM BUCKNER

Massive amounts of equipment were shipped to Saudi Arabia to support Desert Storm; however, much of the Corps' assets were left behind because the equipment was obsolete, not working, or just not needed. That's where Remain Behind Equipment Companies went into action.

There is an RBE Co. for each of the major commands — the 2nd MarDiv., 2nd MAW and 2nd FSSG. The companies were designed to be a sustainment force for battle losses, said Maj. Roy R. Schleiden, CO, RBE Co., 2nd MarDiv. Instead of letting the equipment sit around and get rusty, the company collected items ranging from canteens to howitzers, began repairing them and kept them ready to replace gear that could have been destroyed during the war.

could have been destroyed during the war.

"We're cleaning house," said Capt. J. G.
Martinez, XO of the company. "We started
Feb. 1 collecting all the gear from division units except what was needed for training.
We began the maintenance process for equipment that needed repairs, and the rest was set aside to be used in Saudi if the need

The company has a regiment's worth of equipment with less than 180 active and reserve Marines available to repair inoperable gear. When the gear was collected in February, only 27 percent was working, Schleiden said. After less than two months, almost 75 percent is in operating condition.

The different types of gear includes more than 1,200 pieces of communications gear, several HMMWVs, more than 100 5-ton trucks, 300 engineering pieces ranging from bulldozers to forklifts, 350 small arms and about three battalion's worth of howitzers, just to name a bit.

Not only was equipment cleaned from the shelves but spare parts were also. About $3 million worth were found. Before ordering any parts the mechanics used what they had collected, which saved time and money.

Several items like motorcycles, HMMWVs and Comm. equipment was already sent to Saudi. Some of the gear has been temporarily loaned to units like the School of Infantry, Combat Replacement Companies, and UNITAS.

Although repairing the gear is a major task, about 50 percent of the company's job is paperwork. Transferring all of the equipment from different unit's accounts to the RBE Co. account, filling out equipment repair orders and ordering parts is a task That must be accomplished in an orderly way to prevent confusion. Since February, the company has opened more than 3,500 equipment repair orders. The Field Supply Maintenance Analysis Office has provided technical guidance in supply and maintenance.

Engineers, Cpl. Russell Kelso, 2nd CEB and LCpl. David Anderson, a reservist assigned to 2nd CEB, repair a forklift's hydra

The motor transport section, which has taken over 2nd Tank's maintenance facility, works till 9 p.m., three nights a week.

"I guess it's pride," said SSgt. Edward Flynn, the maintenance chief. "We would like to drive everything back to the units instead of dragging it, which is how we got it here."

As units continue to return to Camp Lejeune, the inoperable equipment they bring with them can be replaced with the assets of the RBE Companies.

Motor transport, which is short of manpower, is responsible for the repair of hundreds of 2nd Mar-Div.'s vehicles.

Above, motor transport Marine, LCpl. Anthony Leach, a reservision Tampa, Fla., repairs a high pressure lube unit in the RBE Contransport section. Left, 50 percent of the company's responsible paperwork. GySgt. Walter Coleman, HQ Btry., 10th Marine works in the RBE Co. filling out equipment repair orders.

Support Group continues to meet Thursdays at 11:30 a.m. for waiting families and friends of reservists, combat replacement troops, and those whose sponsors are deployed from other installations. Anyone needing support is welcome at the FSC

The support group for men whose wives are deployed continues to meet Fridays at 11:30 a.m. at the FSC. Any men who would like to be in touch with others coping with separation are welcome to participate.

Families returning from other parts of the country to Leieune to reunite with spouses can be cheered by utility company policies on deposits. For those whose accounts closed in good standing, Jones/Onslow Electric, Carolina Power and Light and Carolina Telephone will not require new deposits to open new accounts. Check with companies for more information.

Banners are flying. Flags and ribbons ap pear at more and more homes on and off base Waiting cars are lined up again at lunchtime at the mainside traffic circle. It's great to have the troops returning. It can't happen fast enough to please us. It's an exciting time for families and parents, friends and acquaintances, merchants and people watchers.

Each returning Marine and sailor is look ing for the signs of welcome meant specifically for him or her when the ships, planes, and buses pull in. No matter what your family's resources are, find a way to let your service member know you are eager for the reunion.

Signs don't have to be elaborate. Plans for a special welcome shouldn't be expensive if the budget can't take it. But recall the things your family member mentions having missed the most. Concentrate on how you can build a family reunion party around those elements.

Most likely what he or she missed most were loved ones. Husbands and wives missed spouses. Fathers and mothers missed their children, parents missed sons and daughters, brothers and sisters missed each other, everyone missed friends. All those people will want to be included in your celebrations. Will they all come to meet the buses? Will they all stay at your house to wait those final days? Do you want them with you? Does your returning Marine or sailor have preferences about whom to include?

Sometimes in all the excitement, we begin to feel things are out of control. We listen to everyone plan, and each new thing we hear sounds attractive so we are tempted to include it in our own plans. Relax! Have fun planning your own reunion, based on what you want to do, what you can afford, and what will please your returning hero.

In the joy of reunion with your spouses your thoughts and deeds will rightfully be centered around them. As units return at different times many of you will experience the joy of reunion sooner than others. Friendships you have developed over the last months are still special and important. Remember your friends who haven't been reunited with their spouse yet. Maintain that friendship and special relationship you shared.

In addition, there will be many single Marines and sailors who may not be able to go home on leave right away. Don't clutter your reunion with extra people, but when the time is right for you, reach out and show concern for the single, Marines who were your spouses' friends and brothers-in-arms.

VCU dominates Intercollegiate Golf tourney

Elon takes 2nd

Y LCPL. ANDREW B. YURASEK

Camp Lejeune played host to the Oth Annual Intercollegiate Golf Tourament March 28-31, and Virginia 'ommonwealth University Rams took harge of the tournament by scoring a otal of 876 led by Mike Grant's low of

A twist in the tournament's program night have caused havoc to competitors ke last years champions, Elon College. The Paradise Point Golf Course had to se both its Scarlet and Gold Courses or the first time in the event just so ney could accommodate the 28 schools nd more than 140 competitors who nowed up.

The first day of play started March 9 with the collegians splitting up and laying on the par-72 Gold and par-70 carlet.

The VCU Rams floated to the top of ne pool of teams with Grant and teamnate Jerry Wood leading the pack. Frant's one under par wasn't the best core but it was enough to hold the

CPL. DAVE HIGGINS

UNCW's Scott Crocker chips one up to the green.

On the second day of intercollegiate play, Grant, again lead the golfers with a six-under-par 66 helping his team go into the finals with a comfortable lead.

The University of North Carolina at Wilmington rose to the occasion, moving up from fourth place to come within seven strokes of VCU and take second place with a two day total of 579.

Defending champion Elon, led by Brad Burnside's 67 on the Scarlet, shot a 282 and fell into third place for the final day of action.

The tournament's top 15 teams met on the Gold course to do battle for the championship.

The Rams started and ended strong, taking, what seemed to be an easy victory after several years of no-shows in the tournament.

The Elon Fighting Christians weren't able to jump ahead to take the lead and repeat as champions, but they were able to leapfrog UNCW to take second with 888 as their total.

The UNCW Seahawks were only five strokes behind Elon, but the team had a good showing with a three day total of 893.

Some may have blamed the windy weather, others, the change of the tournament format for their losses, but it may very well be the return of VCU's high level of play that sparked their victory.

FSSG 'W' rattles cage: Comptrollers hold on to 1st place

tory and photos by CPL. ANDREW B. YURASEK

How can a team of women put such scare into a league made up of mostly nen?

If you saw the FSSG "W" team step n MCSSS's ego by beating them two of rree sets March 20 and knocking them ut of first place, you would nderstand.

The Comptrollers, who were tied for rst after MCSSS's loss, had to fend off SSG "W" to maintain their standings, nd did so by outlasting them two of rree, in Intramural Volleyball action farch 27.

FSSG "W" is not in the race for umber one, they're not even in the ace for two or three, but they still nanage to test the nerves of their opopents.

"Our ball control is getting better. 'hey're getting more comfortable with ach other out there, and teams are starng to worry about them," said GySgt. Dick Knuth, the FSSG "W" coach.

All the nervousness was set aside after stLt. Bryan Areman put the ball over ne net for Comptrollers' first score. everal bullets followed and Comptroller oon took a remarkable lead.

Compt. held FSSG's score to four, hile they went ahead to take the first

The Comptrollers were confident they ould take the match after their first ictory, but they were in for a surprise. FSSG's LCpl. Stacey Lanning stepped p to serve and put an ace in Comptroller's face, to show they meant business.

Their lead may have seemed tentative, but LCpl. Ruth Walker added more proof with a spike on the following Comptroller return.

FSSG was able to score three points before the Comptrollers could get one.

Comptroller was able to come even with FSSG "W" with two nice spikes by Maj. Doug Herrington, but then the women turned on the afterburners to pull away.

Kathy Mattes took the lead back when her serve found a soft spot in the Comptroller's defense. Two more of her serves were good for points and one more was earned with Lanning's deceptive dink, upping their lead, 7-3.

FSSG "W" not only turned up their offense, they turned up their defense as well, only allowing Comptroller to score six points in the second match while Mattes topped the game off with her game-winning ace.

The Rally-Point Match was up, and the Comptrollers seemed unsure of themselves. The women again started the game with a scoring serve and maintained the lead until the scoreboard was knotted at nine.

Comptroller was able to play off FSSG's mishandles and take the lead and the match, giving them the win.

Team's like Comptroller may be ahead of FSSG "W" in the standings, but the women will no doubt continue to strike fear into their opponents for the duration of the season.

Supply Bn. holds on to top biller

Chokes 8th Comm. 15-5

Last year they came close — this year Supply Bn. "B" plans on dominating the league.

If the game they played March 26 is an indication, they will. Supply Bn. cut 8th Comm.'s lines down, 15-5 in Intramural Softball action.

They've taken the lead in the Gold League by winning their first three outings and to prove they mean business, Supply has won its games by doubling or tripling their opponent's scores.

Supply started its lead early. At the top of the first Comm.'s PFC. Mike Aldrich was pitching to Supply Bn.'s Cpl. Paul King and SSgt. Tyron Belo who loaded up first and second with shots to center field.

Teammate LCpl. Tony Hawkins took the opportunity to score by driving a ball out to the fence in far left field, pushing in King and Belo for the early Supply lead.

Hawkins' RBI double started a chain reaction. Six more shots to center field enabled Supply to jump ahead and take an 8-0 lead on its first at bats.

Supply's offense wasn't doing all of the work. The defense stopped 8th Comm. cold. Supply didn't give up a score until the bottom of the third.

Comm's pride wouldn't allow a shutout; they were ready to cash in some runs.

With one out and LCpl. Lance Wilcox on first, PFC. John Hancock was up to bat. Hancock took King's third pitch into deep-center field and Supply Bn.'s LCpl. Ismael Diaz eagerly awaits a throw to third so he can tag out 8th Comm.'s LCpl. Lance Wilcox drove Wilcox home. Hancock tried to follow Wilcox, but after rounding third, a fireball from Supply's Cpl. Jay Savoie, left center field, to King, to home, produced an out at the plate.

Before 8th Comm. could score again, King was able to stop any chance of a comeback by scooping a hopper by Cpl. Rob Barton and making a quick flick to first, retiring the side.

Comm. didn't want a repeat of Supply's scoring spree and decided to turn on the vaccum.

"We're the black hole, me and the shortstop," said LCpl. Ronald Roman, Comm.'s third baseman. "Anything hit our way gets sucked up into our gloves like a vaccum."

Leading 14-1 at the top of the fourth, Supply Bn. was up to bat and sitting pretty, but Comm. shut them down.

Comm. was anxious to close the gap and with the bases loaded, Aldrich and LCpl. Rob Luck were able to bring in runs with their base hits. They turned in two more runs before turning the bats over to Supply.

In the top of the fifth, Supply had nine-point lead and were ready for rebut could only cross the plate once

Tennis

LHS puts bite on WRH

They're not Boris Beckers or John McEnroes. They're high school boys playing a game that builds character and develops sportsmanship.

"It's a real building block for them," said William Holt, the Lejuene High School Boys Tennis Coach.

The Devilpups walked away winning all of the matches in their meeting with the Wallace/Rose Hill Bulldogs, March 28.

The contest consisted of six singles games and two doubles using a no-add scoring system, The 'Pups won all but one in straight sets.

No-add scoring puts the judgment of the game in the hands of the players and that's one of things Holt likes about high school tennis.

"It's one of the good positive aspects of tennis; it promotes integrity," he said.

Top seeded Gary Mattes started the Devilpup's streak with intensity, winning his matches, 6-0, 6-1.

The rest of the team followed, except second seeded Hector Reyes. He took two of his three, 3-6, 6-0 and 7-5.

In doubles action, Chris Thompson and Marc Elkonich teamed up and took over, winning 9-7. The weather canceled the number one and two doubles, but the Devilpups had the win in the bag, 7-0, extending them to a 3-5 record.

Lejeune is probably one of the smallest schools when it comes to tennis teams, but according to Holt, they leave the courts bigger men.

Ford and Lincoln-Mercury Salute the U.S. Armed Forces.

Announcing the Ford Military Appreciation Purchase Program.

As our way of saying thanks, Ford Motor Company, Ford and Lincoln-Mercury dealers and the United Auto Workers would like to offer United States active-duty military personnel or their spouses a special purchase plan.

Now, you can get substantial savings off the Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price on any new 1990, 1991 or 1992 Ford, Mercury, or Lincoln car or any Ford light truck through F-350 series pickups and the Econoline van.

To be eligible, just prove your active-duty status as of March 1, 1991. You must take delivery of your new vehicle on or before December 31, 1991. And only one vehicle can be purchased per household.

FOR THE MILITARY AND THEIR FAMILIES.

To help you keep in touch.

Having an AT&T Military Calling Card with you makes things much easier.

With your card, you'll be able to call from most anywhere in the world the military takes you. No other calling card can be used from as many locations, or can connect you with as many places.

From most countries you can also use AT&T USADirect® Service, which connects you directly to an English-speaking AT&T Operator who will complete your call for you.

Using the card is the least expensive way to make calls next to direct dialing with AT&T.* You don't pay a fee to have the card. And you don't need to have a credit card or phone of your own to get the AT&T Military Calling Card.

So you can get your card faster, we have simplified the process for members of the military. And we're taking applications by phone.

From the U.S., call us toll-free at 1 800 525-7955, Ext. 320. From overseas, you can call us collect at 816 654-6004.

Call anytime, 24 hours a day. We're here to help.

NEW NAVY NAVCARE CENTER

PROVIDES WALK-IN MEDICAL CARE

NAVCARE Walk-In centers are a new approach to providing military beneficiaries access to primary health care. NAVCARE Jacksonville (North Carolina) will be open 365 days each year—from 0700 to 2000 weekdays and from 0700 to 1600 weekends and holidays.

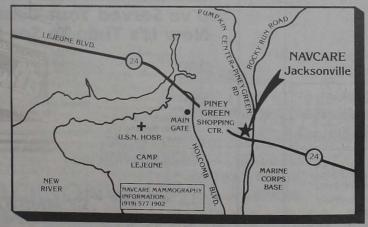

No appointment is necessary and there is no cost to patients for treatment and medication.

All military beneficiaries, including family members, entitled to care at military treatment facilities and enrolled in the DEERS are eligible for care. Basic laboratory and X-ray services are provided on site. Licensed and credentialed physicians and staff provide medical care.

Critically ill or seriously injured patients should go to a hospital emergency room.
