Foreword

Recently I submitted an article for publication in which I stated that Thomas Merton's early monastic poetry served as an "unparalleled" resource for observing Merton's transition to religious life. The reader assigned to evaluate this essay challenged this claim and suggested that Merton's journals and letters could provide an equally good, in fact a superior, window on this period. Had this occurred some months earlier, I would have had to spend hours going through the five volumes of Merton letters, the first two volumes of journal, even the 1986 Breit and Daggy comprehensive Bibliography, to justify my position. Instead, in a matter of minutes I was able to put together a detailed footnote pointing out there are only twenty-four published letters from the first five years Merton was in the monastery, that there is no extant journal material between April 1942 and October 1946, and for good measure, that Merton published no prose during the years 1942-1946 other than two translations from the French and a short note in a poetry anthology.

I was able to assemble this information quickly and easily because of the marvelous tool you are now holding, Patricia A. Burton's thorough yet concise compilation of biographical and bibliographical information, the Merton Vade Mecum. The title, a traditional one for a conveniently portable handbook, literally means "Go with me," and is thus particularly appropriate to this Timeline which is actually a lifeline, an invitation to accompany Thomas Merton year by year, month by month, even day by day as he produces the amazing quantity and even more impressive quality of public and private writing over the course of three decades of a life dedicated not primarily to writing but to God. Every publication, famous and obscure, finds its place in the list, as well as key events in the life itself, ranging from obvious inclusions like the date of Merton's ordination (28 May 1949) to significant yet easily overlooked incidents such as staking out the ground of what would finally become Merton's hermitage (3 October 1960), or the arrival on "permanent loan" of the Canon camera from John Howard Griffin (21 March 1968). Though not nearly as exhaustive, the Vade Mecum provides a resource analogous to Jay Leyda's Melville Log or Raymond Borst's Thoreau Log, an accessible synopsis of a significant author's life and work.

Patricia Burton's thorough and careful research skills have already benefited Merton scholars and others through her index to the Merton letters, but the sheer comprehensiveness of this new effort puts it in a class by itself. Not only can we trace Merton's productivity chronologically, from the earliest surviving letter of 20 January 1931 (to his parents' art teacher Percyval Tudor-Hart) up to the time of his death and beyond in the dozens of posthumous publications; we can also track the often labyrinthine histories of individual essays as they made their way from initial periodical publication through sometimes numerous revisions and reappearances, often under variant titles, to final inclusion in book form, as they are presented here in very clear and often fascinating detail in a series of extended Notes and in the volume contents listings in Appendix I. Even the contents of the banned Peace in the Post-Christian Era from 1962 are catalogued and aligned both with previous periodical publication and with subsequent appearance in book form. Particularly valuable is the inclusion of publication information on various uncollected pieces, frequently difficult to locate, which are given their place along with every other published work both in the Timeline and in the convenient alphabetical Publications List, which notes date and vehicle of publication.

Since more than a dozen years of continued Merton publication, highlighted by the final four volumes of letters and the seven volumes of complete journals, have passed since the comprehensive Merton bibliography was published by Breit and Daggy, the appearance of the Vade Mecum is both welcome and necessary. All Merton researchers are in Patricia Burton's debt for her industry and her accuracy, but even Merton readers with no scholarly proclivities will find much here to instruct and to delight.

Introduction to the Third Edition

Merton Vade Mecum is designed to provide a quick-reference guide to Thomas Merton's writing in the context of his life, in a format which I hope will be useful for both researchers and general readers.

A list of Abbreviations for names of books found in the "Volume" column is placed after the Introduction. Note that some abbreviations have a genre prefix: thus letters, for example are L1:HGL, which identifies the first volume of the Farrar Straus Giroux five-volume set. The Journals have a "J" prefix.

The Timeline lists publications, journal entries and letters, and life events. The reader may pick a particular time of Merton's life and examine all the available material associated with it. Some key events in Merton's life are also listed, particularly those affecting his writing, and the long struggle to discern whether he was meant to be a solitary.

- In the case of the Merton's Journals and Letters, volume and page references are given. Poems are located within The Collected Poems.
- For the other items, a Volume code directs the reader to the book in which an essay or chapter can be found. (See the Title Abbreviations list, page vii). Note that a volume code in brackets, i.e. [NVA], indicates that the item listed appeared in that volume in an edited or altered version.
- Events in Merton's life, including historical events and visits are interspersed, in a handwriting italic.
- Special attention has been paid to Merton's early published poetry in books, periodicals and anthologies in the years before The Seven Storey Mountain, after which the poet was rather swallowed up in the fame of the autobiographer. Anthology entries are not listed after 1948.

All of the Publications are in a single alphabetical list: it is not necessary to know whether an item was book, essay or poem in order to look it up (some pieces by Merton could be classified as all three). A poetry indicator ("p" in column 2) identifies poems, and the list contains some cross-referencing of names of people and places which appear in titles. The alpha list also gives a date (when available) that can be looked up in the Timeline.

- The most recent version of books is referenced, for example: for Thomas Merton on Peace (1971) see The Nonviolent Alternative (1980); for Introductions East and West (1981) see Honorable Reader (1991). The abbreviation REDR refers to the most recent version of A Thomas Merton Reader.
- Introductions are located under "I" rather than name of the book introduced. Similarly with Forewords, Prefaces, Reviews.

Notes are indicated in all lists by a starred number [i.e.: *22]. The intent is to identify the interconnections of various versions of Merton's works, and also to provide other bibliographic material which may be of interest. The notes have been reworked in this edition, so that they generally follow the Timeline: reading them sequentially gives a brief overview of Merton as writer.

A list of some sources of information is given at the end of the Notes section.

Appendices provide more detail for those who are interested. These include: "contexts," i.e. information about the provenance of the pieces in some of Merton's major essay collections (pp.193-200)

The details of publication of Merton's works in several important periodicals is noted:

Collectanea Cisterciensia and Cistercian Studies: the articles and many short "bulletins" and "chroniques" which Merton produced for (pp. 201-208).

The Merton Annual and The Merton Seasonal: publication of hitherto unpublished essays and fragments are also listed for the two dedicated journals.

The booklet is meant to be reasonably portable, so it does not include an exhaustive list of all the editions of Merton's works (particularly foreign ones), but concentrates on the part of his life covered in the published letters and journals. For more detail on each book or essay, see More Than Silence: A Bibliography of Thomas Merton.

New in the Third Edition

A better sequence of columns leads to: Volume> Page> Note

Recent double-sided correspondences are included:

Survival or Prophecy features the letters of Merton and Jean Leclercq,
Striving Towards Being that of Merton and Czeslaw Milosz,
A Meeting of Angels that of Merton with Edward Deming and Faith Andrews,
On the Banks of Monks Pond that of Merton and Jonathan Greene.
Letters between Merton and Ad Reinhardt, ed. Roger Lipsey, in The Merton Annual 18.
Ad Maiorem Dei Gloriam: The Letters of Thomas Merton and Victor and Carolyn Hammer, edited by F. Douglas Scutchfield, a forthcoming publication from the University Press of Kentucky. The letters are listed although the page numbers are not yet available.

Over the last twelve years, some books have appeared unexpectedly, all for one reason or another “never to be published,” yet now we have them:

The Inner Experience,
Peace in the Post-Christian Era, and Cold War Letters

Merton’s novitiate conferences and talks are now being systematically brought out by Cistercian Publications in diligently edited versions by Patrick O’Connell, and there are still more of those to come. The sixth in the series, The Life of the Vows, has recently appeared.

Welcome additions have been made to Merton studies:

Roger Lipsey’s Angelic Mistakes examines a selection of the drawings and finally devotes attention to an aspect of Merton’s creativity that has been neglected.
In the Dark Before Dawn, edited by Lynn Szabo, gives us a much-needed overview of the poetry and contributes materially to this listing because it has published almost all of the rest of the famous and elusive Eighteen Poems (see Note *104).

In the “Life” entries, listing of Visits: to get a better idea of how Merton was able so well to understand the world outside the monastery; also included are some return visits that he made to Louisville and Lexington KY and a few other local places.

Novitiate Talks: people who visited Gethsemani often gave talks to the Novices, and these were taped. The tape archive now resides at the Thomas Merton Center. These events are also listed in the Life category, as visitors to the monastery.

A full list is given at

<http://merton.org/Research/AV/novitiate.aspx#Visiting>

Update for the 3d edition: A full scale bibliography of Merton’s works now exists (More Than Silence). Details such as the editions of a particular work and other specifics on the various editions and translations are to be found there.

Last but not least: the Journal entries are now presented in full, so that Merton can be followed day by day as he wrote his journals, letters and many books and articles.

Feb 7, 1957	Note also: Letter to Dom Gabriel Sortais		L3:SCH , 99-102
	Referring to Silence in Heaven , Merton wrote: "in 1955, with the approval of both the censor and the monks of Pierre-Qui-Vire, I rewrote the book, now called The Silent Life ." [L2:SCH 100]. Thus although much enlarged, the essay is linked to:

	*21	Monastic Wisdom Series of Cistercian Publications:
	Merton's novitiate and other conferences are being edited and published as numbers in CP's larger Monastic Wisdom Series. The Merton volumes are subtitled "Initiation into the Monastic Tradition," and edited by Patrick O'Connell. Six have been published, and the series is ongoing. The books have numbers in the larger series (MS), and also numbers in the Merton series "Initiation" (INI)
	The sets of conferences are noted in the Timeline on the first date that the lectures were given, and the prospective audience for whom they were prepared:
Oct 1955		Cassian and the Fathers (INI 1): for the novitiate
Feb 1963		Pre-Benedictine Monasticism (INI 2): Sunday afternoon conferences for combined novitiate of choir monks and lay brothers
Mar 1961		Introduction to Christian Mysticism (INI 3), for the young priests in the order
Jun 1957		The Rule of St Benedict (INI 4): for the novitiate
Feb-Mar 1957		Monastic Observances (INI 5): for the novitiate
Oct 1956		The Life of the Vows (INI 6): for the novitiate

Jul 1956		Thoughts in an Airliner		Merton Seasonal 12 (1987) 2
Jul 1956	*24	The Neurotic Personality in the Monastic Life		unpublished ms
1991		appeared in:		Merton Annual 4 (1991)
	The essay was highly criticized by Gregory Zilboorg, and not published in TM's lifetime.
Nov 1955		Your Will and Your Vocation (unpubl. essay)		Merton Seasonal 34 (2009) 2
	The two pieces above may have been intended as parts of a book TM was planning in 1955. The book was never published. A third essay with this group is "Spiritual Direction" which wound up as an appendix to TM's Monastic Observances (Monastic Wisdom Series #25, Initiation into the Monastic Tradition 5, 253-277). For more details see Patrick O'Connell's introductory note in Merton Seasonal 34.2, and his introduction to Monastic Observances , li-liii.

	*35	The Collaboration of Thomas Merton and Victor Hammer (1955-1967)
Oct 24, 1955		Brother Giles had asked Victor Hammer to help him with placing of a new Stations of the Cross by sculptor Peter Watts. TM got involved and they began to correspond, with TM's first letter on Oct 24 1955
		New information about the Merton-Hammer letters, and their dates, are from an upcoming book, Ad Maiorem Dei Gloriam: The Correspondence of Thomas Merton and Victor and Carolyn Hammer , edited by F. Douglas Scutchfield, from the University Press of Kentucky, with my thanks for a preview look at the manuscript and permission to list the letters in Merton Vade Mecum . Page numbers will be supplied at a later date.
		They collaborated on the following series, Merton providing text, Victor Hammer the design and production on a hand press, of limited editions
1958		The Unquiet Conscience by Piero Bargellino, (transl. TM)		Stamperia del Santuccio
1958		Prometheus, A Meditation	also in BT, RU, REDR	Stamperia del Santuccio
1959	*	What Ought I to Do?		Stamperia del Santuccio
		became The Wisdom of the Desert (1960)		New Directions
Apr 13, 1960	*	The Solitary Life	see *20	Stamperia del Santuccio
Sep 1960		Ox Mountain Parable of Meng Tzu		Stamperia del Santuccio
May 12, 1961	=	Ox Mountain Parable of Meng Tzu [CP:TRA , 970]		Commonweal
		also: at end of chapter "Classic Chinese Thought"	MZM
1962	*	Hagia Sophia
Summer 1987	*	* The three starred items above are described in detail as a trilogy by David Cooper in "Victor Hammer and Thomas Merton: A Friendship Ad Maiorum Dei Gloriam "		The Kentucky Review VII.2 Summer 1987
		Collaboration with the Hammers also involved Carolyn Reading Hammer, who had been engaged in special hand printing in Lexington KY before Victor had arrived, and had printed on several presses, including the King Library Press of U of Kentucky:
1971		Merton's Early Poems , printed at a press with which Carolyn was associated		Anvil Press
1973		Pasternal/Merton: Six Letters		King Library Press
	*36	Herakleitos
Sep 1960		Herakleitos the Obscure	BT, REDR Jubilee
		The Legacy of Herakleitos	BT, CP:UNC
		In Behavior of Titans (94-95) a connecting paragraph indicates that "The Legacy of Herakleitos" is not a poem or translation, but TM's own reworking of some texts from the Fragments of Herakleitos (in the manner he later used for Chuang Tzu). His source for the original text was John Burnet's Early Greek Philosophy .
		The reworked "Fragments" were published in the "Uncollected" section of Collected Poems , without the connecting paragraph: thus the two pieces have been separated and the nature of "The Legacy of Herakleitos" obscured.

		The essay was enlarged again in 1965:
1965		The Climate of Monastic Prayer [58-page essay]		mimeograph 1965
		further enlarged and developed into a book:
1969		The Climate of Monastic Prayer	CPR	Cistercian Publications
		The book was also renamed and published as:
Sep 6, 1969	=	Contemplative Prayer	CPR	Herder & Herder

[TM re-used part of the unpubl. "Prayer as Worship and Experience." SEE Shannon, Thomas Merton's Dark Path, 164.]

The introductory essay in Contemplative Prayer is a shorter version of Douglas Steere's introduction to Climate

1965	*83	Final Integration Reza Arasteh published an essay "Final Integration in the Adult Personality" in The American Journal of Psychoanalysis XXV. Merton wrote a "Chronique" about the essay in Collectanea Cisterciensia , published in French.
	Note:	The review by Merton has been wrongly attributed to the American Journal of Psychoanalysis , where the original essay by Arasteh appeared. Merton's first review was in Collectanea .
1965		Arasteh developed his essay into a book, and Merton wrote an article about the book:
Oct 1968		Final Integration—Toward a "Monastic Therapy"	CWA, SUF	Monastic Studies
		In Merton and Sufism , Merton's Chroniques dealing with Sufism are translated back into English. Five of these were printed in Collectanea but three others have not been printed before. The notes in Sufism miss the fact that the chronique on "Final Integration" did in fact appear in Collectanea .
		Chroniques on Sufism from Collectanea are on: One Hundred Poems of Kabir , tr. Tagore and Underhill Three Muslim Sages by Seyyed Hossein Nasr "The Transformation of Man in Mystical Islam" by Fritz Meier in Man and Transformation A. Reza Arasteh, "Final Integration in the Adult Personality" an article in American Journal of Psychoanalysis XXV (1965)
		Note: Recent cataloguing of Merton manuscripts at the TMC has identified a copy of the original Chronique on this article, written by Merton not in French but in English. The translation "back into English" in SUF does not entirely match Merton's original manuscript.
		The correct English version of the Arasteh Chronique is quoted in full in "Final Integration of a Bibliographical Puzzle" by Patricia Burton		The Merton Seasonal 35.4 (Winter 2010): 30-36.
		Chroniques unpublished before Merton and Sufism , are on: Ibn 'Abbad de Ronda , by Paul Nwyia "Le Monachisme en Islam et Chrétienté" by Dom Jean Leclercq, in Images de Toumliline The Persian Sufis , by Cyprien Rice

The Merton Seasonal Bibliography

With each issue, four times a year, The Merton Seasonal has two bibliographies appended: works by Merton and works about him. These listings are an invaluable source of ongoing information without which this book would have been much more difficult to do.

Note: the graph is not meant to suggest that Peace in the Post-Christian Era (the published form of the mimeograph, Orbis, 2004) is not a well-thought-out and complete book. It is meant illustrate the progress of Merton's thought, and to lead the reader to the Chapter "The Christian in World Crisis" in Seeds of Destruction, written later, which adds to the detail by allowing Merton to comment on the papal encyclical Pacem in Terris, published after PPCE was written.

Collectanea Cisterciensia: Chronique de nos Abbayes

These are brief (page-long) reports of the various Cistercian abbeys containing news such as numbers of religious in a house, new foundations, and deaths. Merton has put his stamp on the ones he wrote, including some "local colour."

Collectanea Cisterciensia: Bulletins

These are (almost always) brief reviews or comments on books and articles, arranged by subject and numbered. They were generally translated into French by Charles Dumont, the editor of Collectanea. When Cistercian Studies started publication in the U.S., Merton's bulletins were printed both in English in CC and French in CS (see next pg). They are interesting in that they indicate how faithfully Merton kept up his purely monastic reading and writing throughout his life as a Cistercian.

Cistercian Studies "Book IV"

Modern Biographical Sketches of Cistercian Blessed and Saints

In the 1940s Merton wrote a set of biographies of "the greatest Cistercian Saints of the 12th and 13th centuries," which circulated in mimeograph among Cistercian houses. These are now being published in Cistercian Studies, edited with notes by Patrick Hart OCSO.
