Environment paramount says Government after BOP fault on oil platform

FOLLOWING a mechanical equipment problem with oil rig Eirik Raude's Blow Out Preventer (BOP) last week, the Falklands Government has assured that offshore safety and environmental protection is paramount.

And in a week of ups and downs for the Falklands oil industry Falkland Oil and Gas (FOGL) announced a "robust" financial position.

BOP problem

Last Friday FOGL revealed that a problem had been detected with the BOP while work was being undertaken in the Isobel Deep area.

The well was temporarily suspended and the BOP brought to the surface for inspection and repairs.

At the time it was anticipated that the repairs would take 10-14 days.

The Argentine Foreign Minister immediately expressed concerns about the potential effect of the oil industry on the environment of the Falkland Islands and said the incident with the Eirik Raude platform was not the first and referred to mechanical problems that occurred last year in South Africa and in 2005 in the Arctic.

The Falkland Islands Government in turn released a statement reassuring that offshore safety and environmental protection was a matter of utmost importance to the Falkland Islands Government, "who maintain strong regulatory oversight on all oil and gas operations carried out within the Falkland Islands."

It was emphasised that FIG bases its offshore safety regime on the North Sea's, "well-proven safety case regulatory structure, recognised as one of the highest standards in the world."

The statement noted that the Government worked closely with licensees, rig owners, and FIG's own contracted offshore safety advisers.

It said regulatory intervention included oversight of well designs and thorough review of the installation's Safety Case, backed up by planned offshore safety inspections on all drilling platforms operating within the Falkland Islands designated area.

"Recent regulatory announcements by companies drilling offshore Falkland Islands highlight that this regime is effective and delivers a strong focus on achieving offshore safety," it was stated.

Director of Mineral Resources Stephen Luxton said: "Through the continuous equipment monitoring process employed as part of the high standard of safety required, Ocean Rig identified a fault with the blow-out preventer which meant that some of the built-in redundancy within the control systems became degraded.

"Such safety systems contain multiple levels of redundancy, and at no point did the equipment enter an unsafe or inoperative condition which would have prevented satisfactory operation in the event of an emergency event."

Finance

Announcing its year end results FOGL noted a robust financial position, a cash balance of US$95.5 million at year end and a fully funded 2015 drilling programme.

Lawsuit

Responding to Argentina lodging a domestic lawsuit against five companies, including FOGL, exploring for oil in the waters surrounding the Falklands, FOGL said the Hydrocarbons Law enacted did not apply to the Falklands or its surrounding waters, and was therefore unlawful.

The company added it had not received any written notification or legal documents from the Argentine government with respect to any intention to take legal action.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

JUST over a year ago I was sat with a decent glass of wine happily viewing a potentially winning hand at a social gathering of poker enthusiasts when all of a sudden a fight broke out.

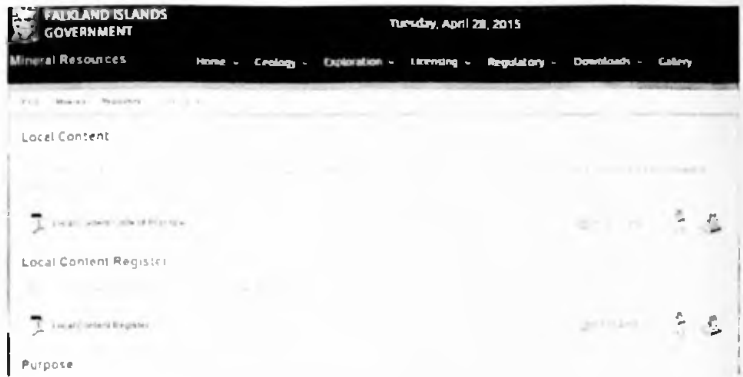

Not the kind of fight you might have seen based around a poker table in a good old Western movie you understand. There was no upturned table, whipping out of six guns or bartenders diving beneath the bar - not even the sound of Johnny Cash suggesting knowing 'when to hold 'em'. No, instead two intelligent but rather red-faced chaps puffed their chests at each other down the baize covered table and proceeded to noisily debate whether or not local fishing companies were really fulfilling all the small print requirements of the Individual Transferable Quota system. Not half as exciting as a shoot-out or whisky bottles exploding over heads, but still quite intriguing.

On the one hand a loud-voiced but genial chap, not of the fisheries private sector, rather controversially claimed some companies were scooping the dosh without adding value to the catch. Why should they when they can drive around in expensive vehicles without working too hard he intimated. Their lack of action he suggested, was not at all the point of the ITQ system which had handed out long term property rights to Falklands companies.

His fisheries private sector opponent gave a calmer and valiant response pointing out the various risks involved and how different companies had different approaches to the future development of the sector, and other perfectly good arguments I'm sure, but that I've now forgotten due to my impatience that they shush up and allow me to flourish my pair of Kings.

That said, the conversation stuck with me, and when it was announced that a review of the ITQ system had been made public it seemed like a good opportunity to have a closer look and finally understand what on earth the Cab-Sav fuelled pair were banging on about.

The conclusions are certainly interesting and the review does give off a mild air of criticism, noting that diversification into value added activities such as processing and marketing has been limited. It acknowledges too however, that investments have been made, and in our piece on the review of the ITQ (see centre pages) two company executives outline an impressive list of increased operations. To some extent the review supports parts of the arguments of both of the duelling poker players and I'd recommend a read (well I would, I wrote it). It may not sound like the most exciting subject in the world but it might help, if while you peruse, you imagine it all being shouted by two inebriated professionals - worked for me

Get your business spotted by the oil and gas industry

IF you are eager for the oil and gas sector to recognise your company as local and therefore the first port of call for the service you offer then it is time to join the 'Local content register'.

Oil and Gas Programme Manager Mike Brough told Penguin News this week that it, "follows on from the publication in December of the Local Content Code of Practice that set out what would be a 'local' company and how we expect the oil and gas sector to be proactive in sourcing goods and services from the Falkland Islands."

If you want to apply to be on the register then you are now able to do so as the Falkland Islands Government has now set up the process, "and how we will verify the information we receive in order to approve companies on to the register," said Mr Brough.

The Local Content Board, which will oversee the process is made up of General Manager Falkland Islands Development Company (Chair) the Director Mineral Resources (Vice Chair) the Registrar General, the Head of Policy and Mr Brough, and it recently considered the first application through the system, that of Invenio FI Ltd.

The Health and safety and training company was formally accepted onto the register on April 7.

Alongside this, FIDC has launched the South Atlantic Registry of Oil Suppliers (SAROS) website which is their procurement portal where oil and gas companies will advertise their contracts and tenders and where businesses both local and others can submit their bids for work.

Any company that is on the Local Content Register will be clearly identified within SAROS so that the oil and gas sector know whether they are dealing with a local company or not. This all ties together to promote local opportunities to local business explained Mr Brough.

Premier Oil's Country Manager Tim Martin said: "The Local Content register and SAROS are welcome developments which complement the Local Content Code of Practice."

"Premier has already received excellent support from the local business community which we are keen to develop further."

"The introduction of the Local Content Register and SAROS gives Premier and our contractors the ability to more easily identify and engage with local suppliers as we continue to work to enhance the involvement of Falkland business in our operations, in accordance with the Code of Practice."

The form for the Application to Join Local Content Register can be found on www.falklands-oil.com/ under the 'Regulatory' and then 'Local Content' headings.

Inquest closed into death on MPA road

HER Majesty's Coroner Clare Faulds recorded a verdict of accidental death at the inquest of Argentine national Gustavo Carlos Antelo on Friday (53).

Mr Antelo's death was caused by chest injuries sustained in a road traffic accident that took place on the MPA road on March 13, last year.

Mr Antelo was part of a group of 12 visitors from Argentina, including five 1982 veterans, and had been a passenger in one of three cars heading from Stanley to San Carlos.

One witness to the accident described the vehicle Mr Antelo was in as rolling twice and that he had seen two people thrown from it.

Evidence indicated that none of the occupants of the vehicle were wearing seat belts and that Mr Antelo had been ejected from the vehicle through the sun roof.

Mrs Faulds said however that speed was not a factor in the accident because the evidence from several witnesses to the accident that the car was being driven at between 40 and 45 miles per hour.

Although several of the witnesses referred in their statements to the weather conditions that morning, the Met Office report said that the weather was "benign" for the Falkland Islands in March. The wind was no more than fresh to strong, there was no rain and there was good visibility.

The Home Office pathologist said in his report that Mr Antelo could not have been saved by earlier medical intervention.

In her verdict, Mrs Faulds said that the evidence was that, for reasons that were not entirely clear, the driver of the car had driven slightly off the carriageway and had then over-corrected, veering across the road and then off it. It was an "unexplained driver error," she said.

In their statements Mr Antelo's companions had referred to the condition of the road as being dangerous, narrow and with steep sides, adding that they had discussed the state of the road every day of their visit.

They were also complimentary about the care they were all afforded by the emergency services and members of the public at the site of the accident and mentioned how they had been driven back to Stanley by volunteer drivers from the fire department.

Fisherman lost at sea in the FICZ

TWO fishermen were reported as being lost overboard on the night of April 24. One fisherman from Hsiang Hao 6, and the second fisherman from Fong Hai 11.

Both vessels were fishing for Illex well out in the FICZ to the west of Weddell.

Director of Natural Resources John Barton said there was no suggestion that they had jumped and the vessels were not near land.

The vessels searched the immediate area but unfortunately without success.

Mr Barton said that if he were to speculate it would be his guess that they were probably working out on the jigger arms where they periodically go to sort out tangles.

"It is an area where additional safety measures need to be taken," he added.

There was aerial coverage of the area by the C130 Hercules aircraft from BFAI in daylight but nothing was seen. The vessels from which the fishermen were lost conducted searches when they realised they had a member of crew missing but again without success.

Mr Barton said that realistically in view of the incident being at night the best prospect for any recovery would have been from the vessel they were lost from, and if action could have been taken at the time of the man overboard incident.

The exact time elapsed between the man overboard and being reported missing is unknown but could have been as long as two to three hours.

Crewman dies at sea

A sudden death at sea was reported to the Royal Falkland Islands Police (RFIP) on Sunday April 26. The jigger Ansheng had been operating in Falklands waters, and arrived in Stanley harbour on Monday afternoon for RFIP to attend the vessel. The case has been passed on to HM Coroner to establish the exact cause of death of the man believed to be Edwin Garcia Valiente

Tabbing for charity

RAISING money for the charity Combat Stress, a tri-service admin team led by Cpl Farai Gono tabbed (weighted march) from Mount Pleasant to Hillside Camp on Saturday.

Cpl Farai told Penguin News: "The 40 mile tab was a test of our endurance. We chose combat stress because mental health until recently did not get much publicity. It is easy to see the struggle of a person with a physical injury while those that need psychological support hide away. The hope was to provide a bit of publicity so that those that need support know where to find it."

The nine-strong group comprised two members from the Navy, Lwtr Mackenzie and Macleod, two from the RAF, Cpl Dalziel and SAC Mackenzie-Williams, and five from the army, WO1 Grove, Sgts Limbu, Kamwendo, Forrester and Cpl Gono.

The target was to complete the challenge within 10-12 hours and the fastest finished the challenge in 8 hrs 45 minutes with everybody at Hillside after 11 hours.

Blisters and muscle ache haunted the team for days after and the worst part of the walk was from the cattle grid after the quarry to Sapper Hill: "That stretch was never ending. The lifts we were being offered as the tab progressed were getting harder and harder to resist," said CPL Gono.

So far they have raised £280 with more funds trickling in.

FI Status awarded
FALKLAND Islands status was awarded by Executive Council to Stephen Pointing and Julio Ubeda Hernandez. Assembly Members extended their congratulations to them both.

Baby Scarlett

THE inquest into the death of baby Scarlett Louise Berntsen was resumed on Thursday morning and was ongoing at the time of Penguin News going to print.

Baby Scarlett, the daughter of Harley Dee Berntsen was born on December 25, 2012 and passed away in Santiago on June 21 2013, following a medical evacuation from the Falklands.

Her Majesty's Coroner Clare Faulds said the inquest was an investigation to establish facts. It was not about what could or should have happened, but what had happened, said Mrs Faulds.

Firearm checks

THE Royal Falkland Islands Police (RFIP) are carrying out a complete check of all firearms held in the Islands and are sending out letters to all firearms license holders, to be completed and returned before June 30, 2015.

In addition, any firearms owned that are either no longer functioning or no longer wanted may be handed in for destruction. If the firearms hold particular sentimental or historical value they may also be considered for deactivation. The RFIP reserves the right to destroy any firearms which are classified as prohibited weapons or that are deemed to be in a dangerous condition.

Any queries should be addressed to PC Matt Jenkins at: MJenkins@police.gov.fk.

MPC diesel leak

BRITISH Forces South Atlantic Islands confirmed there had been a diesel fuel leak within the Mare Harbour Naval Port area of the Mount Pleasant Complex this week. They said it was contained, being recovered and, "localised to the vicinity of the leak."

The leak is limited to the land and there is no marine pollution. They are currently investigating the source and cause. The Falkland Islands Government has been informed and MPA will work closely with them, including the environmental team.

Alastair Biggs

ACTING on concerns of friends and neighbours, Royal Falkland Islands Police officers attended 50 John Street on April 28, where they found the body of Alastair Gordon Biggs. An inquest is to be opened on a date yet to be confirmed.

No SAAB sale

SAAB has ruled out selling 24 Gripen E/F combat aircraft to Argentina, as such a deal would face opposition from Britain, a senior company representative stated on Monday. Media reports have claimed Argentina is sourcing Gripen as replacement for its aging Dassault Mirage jets.

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

I'VE discovered that I'm not alone among colleagues in being irritated by a new piece of jargon creeping into official briefings when things are referred to as happening 'on island' or 'off island'. The first time I heard it my first thought was, on which island? After several repetitions I realised it referred to something happening in the Islands or overseas.

I AM afraid the editorial mention of things taking a long time was unduly kind and conservative. The first swimming pool foundation stone, I believe near the site of the bank, was a bit of wishful thinking installed in the early 1900s when the entire budget for the Islands would have been, at most, a low six figure sum.

That is less than it would be likely to cost to build a pool with the kind of facilities we have today. We have been reviewing immigration almost non-stop since I was first elected in 1997. We thought we were there with a points system a few years later. The theory was that it would be designed to be flexible in that points could be rejigged to match skills needs. However it clearly did not have that flexibility and it appears that we were unable to keep up with changing needs, hence the fact that work continues. This has been demonstrated again as we wait for the formal presentation of the training needs analysis commenced in the latter half of last year.

WE have another day this week working on the budget which we will complete in the first week in June because various members will be away during May and we need six here in order for the Assembly to meet. Other than a briefing we are doing for some military representatives I have just routine meetings this week. I am then heading off on a two week break during which I will try to resist the temptation to check my FIG e-mail account more than once daily. I've asked my colleague Gavin to cover the diary so you will see another viewpoint, when he is not busy tweeting.

Road to Lighthouse inches closer to construction stage

ANOTHER step towards a road being built to the Cape Pembroke Lighthouse was taken this week when Executive Council approved regulations under the Stanley Common Ordinance which will now have to be ratified by the June 2, Legislative Assembly.

The track/road will be constructed from crushed material with small culverts in the small natural ditches along the route, to sustain the flow of water down the slope.

Funding for the project was approved in the 2014/15 budget and planning permission was given to the Public Works Department (PWD) in December last year.

The proposed track will be 2.93 km long stretching from the east end of Stanley Airport and ending in a car park which will hold up to 20 vehicles adjacent to the fence at the Cape Pembroke Lighthouse. The road is to be three metres wide with nine passing places and follows the contour and the existing off-road track along the north coast of Cape Pembroke.

Executive Council agreed to the construction of an all-weather track in June 2014 after the Friends of Cape Pembroke Group put a paper to the Government in February that year, outlining the need to reduce driving pressure in the area.

The northern route (as indicated on the map) will also allow access to the north coast beaches and provide access for future demining works. The remaining two mined areas are almost immediately adjacent to the proposed road

Cape Pembroke is the only place on East Falkland recognised as an Important Plant Area (IPA) and holds sizeable populations of globally rare species, including Spider flower and Pale Yellow Orchid. Cape Pembroke is also home to 66 native plants, six of which are protected, four endemics and 21 habitat types which support a diverse range of 28 breeding bird species.

Tourist Board in Rotterdam

TWO senior members of the Falkland Islands Tourist Board attended the International Association of Antarctica Tour Operators (IAATO) annual conference in Rotterdam (Netherlands) this week.

International Marketing manager Tony Mason and Interim Chief Executive Officer Stephanie Middleton travelled to the event which spanned four days and concludes today.

Mr Mason said being a member of IAATO and attending the conference each year was very important because it ensured the Falkland Islands was abreast of what is going on in the region.

"The networking opportunities at this event build relationships that will ensure communication channels are always open, said Mr Mason."

Samantha Marsh of Sullivan Shipping was also at the event as were private operators Juliette Hennequin for the Hans Hansson and Marilou Deligniers for Dunbar.

IAATO is a membership organisation founded in 1991 to advocate, promote and practice safe and environmentally responsible private-sector travel to the Antarctic.

FIG aid for healthy snacks

THE cost of providing a daily healthy school snack for children who live in low-income households is to be subsidised by Government.

Around 60 Falklands children (not all of school age) live in low-income homes which are households where the income is 60 per cent of the Falklands median income £17,500, that is, £10,500. However they cannot be identified as census information is confidential it was noted in an Executive Council paper from the Director of Education Annie Tempest.

As such, another useful result of this subsidy will be that it will create a means for the Education Department to identify and track, "this group of potentially vulnerable children to ensure their best outcomes," said Ms Tempest in her report.

In line with health of the nation objectives, the school provides a daily healthy snack for all children. Parents currently pay for this provision. It costs £2 per week per child. Local suppliers help by providing snack items at cost. The school believes that this is not only convenient and offers value for money for parents, but most importantly it ensures that children receive a healthy school snack as opposed to the alternative of none or a sugary, unhealthy snack.

£30,000 write-off

EXECUTIVE Council approved the write-off from an accounting perspective of just under £30,000 of bad debts owed to FIG as they were no longer deemed recoverable.

The debts were a combination between the Executive Management department and the Taxation department.

MLA Michael Poole said the written off costs in Executive Management related to a contract that had been issued where there was a dispute over a charge FIG had imposed and it was now believed to be irrecoverable from an accounting perspective.

"In terms of the small number of individual tax cases that were discussed, the difficulty is that tax assessments were only done on these individuals after they had left the Islands, so at the time they departed there was no tax due," he told Penguin News.

MLA Poole also said that discussion had taken place on whether it would be possible for the Government to ensure all debts were settled prior to someone departing the Islands. "This poses practical difficulties, but it is to be looked into by the civil service," he added.

Your questions answered

HOW is it that despite being over time and over budget, the swimming pool seems less fit for purpose than before? The shallow end smells rotten – like a bad drain – the visibility is so poor that it gives serious doubt as to the water quality, and the cleaning regime is poor with rubbish left in changing rooms for several days, lack of toilet paper unless requested at times etc. There is mould growing in the showers, the interface between skirtings and tiles in the changing rooms is also mouldy.

Stanley Leisure Centre manager Abbie Heathman provided the following response...

Stanley Leisure Centre takes cleanliness and safety very seriously. There are water checks carried out every two hours to ensure that water quality meets strict standards – the slight cloudiness that swimmers will notice sometimes is actually from chlorine being circulated into the pool. If any user is concerned about the chemical levels in the pool at a specific time, we would be grateful if they could let staff know and we will complete a full set of water tests to ensure that everything is as it should be.

There is also a defined cleaning and restocking regime for the changing rooms and other parts of the leisure centre; however at very busy times the staff have to prioritise life-guarding duties and also take breaks to maintain their alertness. If users notice that there are specific items that need addressing (such as a lack of toilet paper) we are grateful if this is pointed out to a member of staff.

Since the re-opening of the pool we have been working through several issues relating to the project design and management of the refurbishment. We have taken advice on the mould in the changing rooms and will be fitting plastic skirting boards and are looking at other measures to remedy the situation. We are also planning to carry out some inspections during the winter on the pool liner and surrounding tiles.

Why did the new refurbishment not contain a system for the showers that would allow for a consistent warm temperature, as opposed to days where it is scalding and dangerous, to days when only cold or luke-warm water is available?

The shower temperatures are set in accordance with health and safety guidelines and are monitored to maintain appropriate temperatures.

What happened to the inquiry into expenditure on the swimming pool renovation by the Public Accounts Committee?
PAC Chair Andrea Clausen confirmed that this was on the work programme for 2015/16.

THIS is the story of a group of Welsh Guards thrown into the unknown and the untold tales from Two Company's advance on the mainland towards Stanley. This story recounts the tragedies on board the Sir Galahad and at Stanley airfield and the end of the conflict, when 500 Argentinian soldiers were taken back to the mainland on a cross channel ferry, both sides singing Freddie Mercury classics to pass the time.

This book, which includes a foreword by Simon Weston OBE, is produced by Towerprint, a Welsh company which employs ex-servicemen. A percentage of the proceeds are being donated to Combat Stress and SAMA Wales. Available on line.

"The author, Will Kevans, is an ex Welsh Guardsman and now a comic cartoonist. Using his unique style, he has successfully navigated the irksome task of describing in visceral detail the bloody combat with the gritty banter and dark humour that is required of every guardsman. Beautiful illustrations pour off every page leaving you with a new take on the war which took place on an obscure island on the other side of the world."

Premier Oil seeks proposals from parties who are able to supply high quality, high resolution photographs suitable for use in corporate publications.

Premier seeks two categories of photographs:

1. Photographs of the current oil and gas operations on the EirikRaude rig, off/from helicopters and supply vessels and relevant onshore facilities, and
2. Wildlife, landscape and community photographs of the Falkland Islands.

Photographs should be shot in raw format and be of 20 megapixel resolution. Approximately 50 photographs in each category are sought, however proposals for other amounts may be considered.

Proposals should include all costs and details of photographic experience, including, for proposals in relation to category 1, of oil and gas operations. Applicants should be able to provide a portfolio of work upon request.

The successful applicant in relation to category 1 will be required to travel offshore to the EirikRaude rig and should therefore have current BOSIET and CA-EBS certification. Details must be provided in the proposal. Premier Oil will provide helicopter transportation to/from the rig.

In relation to category 2, proposals utilising existing photographs and/or proposals to take new photographs specifically for Premier Oil will be considered.

Costs quoted should be on the basis of Premier Oil receiving an exclusive unrestricted licence to use the images for five years after which Premier will retain a non-exclusive unrestricted licence. Consideration will be given to competitively priced alternative licence arrangements.

Proposals should be sent to Premier Oil, Argos House, Stanley, Falkland Islands FIQQ 1ZZ, no later than 15th May 2015, marked for the attention of Mrs Pippa Christie.

PRESS RELEASE FALKLAND ISLANDS QUEEN'S CERTIFICATE AND BADGE OF HONOUR

Nominations are requested for the 2015 Queen's Certificate and Badge of Honour.

The purpose of such awards is to allow the Falkland Islands Government to recognise persons having connections with the Falkland Islands who have, by their loyalty and meritorious conduct, provided services of exceptional benefit to the people of the Falkland Islands, outside of their normal employment.

The Queen's Certificate and its accompanying Badge of Honour will be awarded by HE the Governor acting on the advice of Executive Council on or around Falkland Day (14 August). The number of recipients will normally be restricted to three a year and the names of Queen's Certificate recipients will be published in the Official Gazette.

It is open for anybody to nominate a person for the Honour and nomination forms are available on request from Gilbert House. Nominations should be submitted before Tuesday 16 June to the Clerk to Executive Council at Gilbert House Tel 27451 or by email to assembly@sec.gov.fk allowing time for consideration.

The Queen's Certificate carries with it the right to wear a Badge to be worn on the breast on official occasions when full-sized medals are worn. This award does not replace, but is in addition to the award of other Honours such as the OBE and MBE, as part of the Diplomatic and Overseas List. These are awarded by HM The Queen on the recommendation of the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs.

Earth Day tussac planting

FIFTY volunteers and Watch Group children spent Saturday morning planting tussac, swordgrass and bluegrass at Hookers Point, all in the name of Earth Day. The event was organised by Falklands Conservation in conjunction with FIG, and 24 bags of tussac, gathered from Kidney Island, weighing around 20kg each were planted on eroded areas. An FC Spokesperson said it was a great success, despite the bad weather.

MLA Michael Poole thanked everyone involved in organising the day and who took part. "The hope is that marking Earth Day in the Falklands will become an annual event and we welcome people's ideas on what we may do next year. Whilst such global initiatives are important in raising awareness and bringing focus to environmental matters, we should not forget the excellent environmental stewardship that goes on in the Falklands year-round. Whether it is Falklands Conservation's work, robust fisheries management or sustainable stock rotation by farmers; we have a lot to be proud of. Earth Day provides us an opportunity to join with like-minded people around the world and raise awareness of our work."

Please can we have a safe road

THE recent quite dangerous condition of the Stanley to MPA road is causing considerable consternation to drivers who are regularly required to use the road.

However, this concern could probably have been avoided if MLAs had heeded the pleas of a vast majority of vehicle owners who, some 8-10 years ago, urged the Government to embark upon a programme of laying around two miles of asphalt (Tarmac) each year. This would not have affected the budget in any major form.

By now approximately 20 miles of road would be surfaced which added to the 11.8 miles (I've measured it all) of Tarmac sections which still exist, would leave just 1.2 miles to be completed this next summer.

The excellent eight-tenths of a mile of asphalt between the By-Pass turn-off and the back of Sapper Hill, which the unheralded Black Top Gang laid two years ago took just over two months to complete from start to finish, and was constructed under the supervision of Roads Engineer Simon Catton. It was laid to a depth of 160mm in three layers in order to compliment the PWD asphalt plant. This is the normal depth of UK roads, I am reliably told.

The Black-Top gang have shown that they have the capability to undertake important projects as the roads within the Sapper Hill housing site, Brandon Road, Home Builder car park etc testifies. In the past two months they have put down no less than 2,450 tonnes of asphalt road.

I believe that some visiting dignitaries were very scathing about the condition of the MPA road, and surely our MLAs must be highly embarrassed when escorting these influential people from our International Airport to the capital.

Also let's not forget the sad and unfortunate fatalities that have occurred, mostly on the gravel sections.

It was an inexplicable decision that many years ago permitted several miles of good asphalt to be ripped up, as one former MLA was believed to have asserted that the tarmac sections were more dangerous to drivers than the gravel areas!

The 4.2 miles of asphalt road which runs from just east of the Van Tan to the bottom of Fitzroy Ridge is almost as good now as it was when it was laid 30 years ago.

I have been heartened by the advice of MLA Short who informed me that money has initially been budgeted to start work on putting down a few miles of asphalt this next summer linking the Sapper Hill area to the asphalt section opposite the area known as 'Browning's Farm'. Mr Catton and his team are well capable of undertaking this phase of asphaltting.

Please MLAs, let the project continue on a yearly basis until we have a safe and secure road.

FXB Post Office

THE article about the renovation of the Fox Bay Post Office (March 20) was most interesting. Many a time I spent visiting Charlie and May Maddocks when he was wireless operator and Postmaster during the 13 years I spent working for Packe Bros. A fact that was missing from the article was that between the departure of Billy Miles in March 1951 and the arrival of Charlie Maddocks in January 1956, the post was held by Steve and Bessie Smith and family.

Bessie will probably be better known for her morning programme on the Falkland Island Broadcasting.

Watch Group explore the JR Kelly

THE Falklands Conservation Watch Group have had the privilege to learn about both a local shipwreck as well as the marine life of the inshore waters of the Falklands.

The Hans Hansson, skippered by Dion Poncet, anchored close to the wreck of the JR Kelly in Port William and Watch Group members were taken out in groups of 10 to join the vessel and get a glimpse of the life on the sea-floor and of the wreck itself.

Each group had three hours on board, during which they found out about the wreck, the animals that now live on it and the technology used to explore the underwater world of the Falklands.

The JR Kelly was a wooden three masted sailing vessel that was wrecked in 1899 with a mixed cargo. The ship was wrecked after a storm caused her to drag her anchor from the outer harbour of Stanley, where she was in for repairs. Buoys were placed at the ends of the wreck, so the extent was visible from the surface and to help divers find the right place to dive.

While each group was on board, divers from the Shallow Marine Survey Group, were deployed to photograph the wreck and the animals living on it and to collect some animals for the groups to examine in more detail. At the same time, Paul Ellis (Martech Ltd) was diving with his head camera, which was viewed in real time on a big screen on board. Paul was also able to talk to the enthralled audience who could direct him to film or collect different animals.

After each dive, the divers returned with a "goody bag" of animals for the Watch Group to identify and study under the microscope. The animals included starfish, sea urchins, crabs, hermit crabs, whelks, barnacles and worms. The highlight was probably a large octopus, caught by Joost Pompert, which weighed around 2kgs.

A few brave members of the group were also persuaded to taste some of the animals. Dion Poncet opened up some of the urchins and cut out the roe (or gonad) for the less faint-hearted.

The urchin roe has the texture of scrambled egg, with a tangy, salty flavour, which was not to everyone's taste.

FC's Community Engagement Manager Lizzie Milston thanked Dion and Juliette on the Hans Hansson for their hospitality, Paul Ellis (Martech), Martin Collins for his generous donation, and the Shallow Marine Survey Group divers for making it all happen.

IN order for Falkland Islands fishing companies to maintain, "a viable presence" in their own fishery and capture a significant share of the lucrative fisheries turnover, in 2005 The Falkland Islands Government introduced the Individual Transferable Quota System or ITQ.

But what is it and has it worked? Penguin News examines the system that replaced competitive bidding for licences with the much longer term 'transferable property rights'.

What was the point of it all?

A simple response might be that it's generally the modern way in fisheries management. But to be more specific, security and certainty is something every company desires and to some extent ITQ offers just that. If a company only has a fishing licence for a short amount of time the owners might worry about investing lots of money in vessels or other infrastructure, when all the while the possibility exists that their licence might be withdrawn in the next round.

The allocation of ITQ represents a guaranteed share in a fishery for the duration of the ITQ or until the company chooses to sell up and transfer the ITQ to another company. So the company owner, can confidently invest in ships or processing or marketing knowing the money can be recouped over the longer term.

So if a company gets a quota - what exactly is it a quota of?

For example Argos has 18.75 per cent of the Falklands Calamari fishery.

The fishery can be specified in terms of Total Allowable Catch (TAC) or Total Allowable Effort (TAE). TAC is obvious it could be 50,000 tonnes for example. Most of our fisheries are TAE which translates into X vessels of Y size for Z days/months. TAE just works better for most of our fisheries although there is often an underlying TAC. Toothfish is TAC for example.

Director of Fisheries John Barton told Penguin News that both are reviewed each season as appropriate and the actual figures revised as necessary to meet conservation objectives: "So if we change the TAE in the Falkland Calamari fishery for example, Argos would still have 18.75 per cent of it but it could amount to more or less fishing days depending on whether the TAE went up or down."

What actually happened for the Falklands to decide to change the system back in 2005?

According to a recent review of the ITQ system the need for the reform was driven by a number of limitations in the old licensing policy. One of these was that in the short term the local companies would find it difficult to generate the cash flows and capital required to be a workable part of the fishery. There was also the worry that in the medium term the local economy would remain incapable of capturing a significant share of the total turnover of fisheries, which at the time was estimated to be worth around £200 million per year - not to be sniffed at.

Fisheries quota system demystified

Ten year on since the ITQ system was introduced - who gets what and has it worked?

If government revenues from fishing declined as income from the sale of licences where would the money come from for health and education for example?

Which fisheries and what companies are part of the ITQ system?

Loligo and Toothfish fisheries entered the ITQ system during 2006, with other finfish fisheries entering the ITQ system in 2008. The Illex fishery is not part of the system.

Companies in the system are Argos, Beauchene, Bold Ventures, Byron Fishing, Consolidated Fisheries Ltd, FIG, Fortuna, J.K. (Marine), Pioneer Seafoods, RBC, Seafish, Seaview, Southern Cross, and Sulivan Shipping

But what sort of differences does this longer period 'allocation' make?

For Consolidated Fisheries Limited Marketing Manager Janet Robertson it's been a big deal: "the principle advantage of ITQ has been the capability to plan ahead for 25 years - to have the confidence to invest in long-term projects, such as SAAS and the Fish Farming project, in a new and modern vessel and in science development which will help us protect the resource into the future."

She said the sense of ownership that ITQ gives provides a real incentive to both protect and develop the resource. "I think it's made for a much closer and mutually understood relationship between the industry and the Fisheries Department and ultimately a better protected fishery: we would never have invested in MSC certification if it hadn't been for ITQ."

How else have Falklands fishing companies benefited?

As we've mentioned above it has really helped with giving security to companies; they can take a longer-term view.

Also Falkland Islanders are properly and actively involved in management decisions, and not just rubber stamping decisions made by a partner.

So it's all perfect?

Not entirely, evidence of how the companies' rights are used (effective control) is a bit more mixed, specifically in the case of joint venture arrangements.

Tests of these controls and of the economic efficiency of companies do exist and the companies have to comply with them; the recent review recommends these tests need to be better developed.

The ITQ system gives Falkland Island fishing companies the leading role in the fishery, ITQ can only be held by companies whose shareholders have Falklands status and who are ordinarily resident - FIG Director of Natural Resources John Barton

The sense of ownership that ITQ gives provides a real incentive to both protect and develop the resource - Consolidated Fisheries Ltd. Marketing Manager Janet Robertson

The move to the ITQ licensing system appears to have been beneficial for the Islands and for the industry, but it is still quite early in its term to make a conclusive assessment - Member of Legislative Assembly Michael Poole

Before the ITQ system was introduced the Falklands fishery was like a tent in strong wind, likely to be blown away, with the ITQ system we are building a substantial Falklands building - Fortuna Fishing Company Managing Director Stuart Wallace

Has the ITQ lead to the Falklands 'adding value' to the fishery?

There has actually been quite limited diversification into value added activities such as processing and marketing.

Where it has occurred, investment has been made in both the Falkland Islands and overseas. Investment into other fishing related assets has been minimal due to logistics, distance to market, lack of infrastructure and, according to some fishing companies, a lack of confidence in FIG political decision making.

ITQ has enabled some companies to diversify into other fishing and non-fishing related activities. In some cases ITQ has not necessarily been the reason development has occurred, but has been a catalyst to increased activity.

Because the diversification has been so limited it means that FIG is still heavily reliant on fishing licence/quota access revenues. Money from a broader range of seafood and related economic activity have not materialised to the extent originally anticipated.

Director of natural Resources John Barton thinks the review: "Confirms that the aspirations set out for the ITQ system are being realised, but the pace of change and development might be a bit slower than anticipated."

Where can we see these 'developments' that have occurred?

Security of tenure which provided collateral with banks greatly strengthened Fortuna Fishing Company's position leading to increased operations in virtually all areas of the business," Managing Director of Fortuna Stuart Wallace told us.

They have significantly increased their ownership in five trawlers and purchased major shares of two longliner vessels fishing in South Georgia and Ross Sea, as well as establishing from scratch a sales and distribution company in Europe

They have also:

- Established with partners a contract processing venture in Europe
- Taken responsibility for sales of certain products world wide
- Purchased and developed the trout farm project, now with sea cages and a specialist boat at Fitzroy

- Purchased an EU Standard fish processing plant to be established at Gordon Lines (currently en route to Falklands)

- Invested in improving access and facilities at the Camber, with more investment to follow shortly
- Are contributing to scientific work to support the Fishery

Mr Wallace said: "We have other developments in the pipeline, but as you can see our investments are in the fishing sector, of course this exposes us to great risk if anything happens to the stock and we depend upon access to the various fisheries for our future. The result of all of this has been also a very significant economic contribution via tax and many direct costs to our economy."

What other benefits has the ITQ brought?

Among others there has been more cooperation and collaboration between industry members as competition for licences has been removed. Some companies share vessels. Also because everyone has a share in the fishery there are reports of an increase in environmental stewardship.

What is the downside of an ITQ system?

Mr Barton told Penguin News that there are no major negative aspects that have come to light but there is, "perhaps some loss of ability to influence the fisheries sector in the short term, whilst that might be negative from a government perception it is probably seen as a plus from the industry viewpoint."

He explained that in short duration licensing systems it is relatively easy to exert influence or apply direction. Licences used to be allocated according to an allocation policy which included a points system. So for example if Falklands registered fishing vessels was viewed as a policy objective it was simple to give more points in the scheme to applications involving FI flagged vessels than any other vessel. That option is not available in the ITQ system. The counter argument to that is that such objectives might not make for economic efficiency.

Mr Barton believes there is, "perhaps a wider debate in that if ITQ are allocated for 25 years does the fishery become a 'closed shop'? It is difficult to gain access unless you have deep pockets and a willing seller. In practice that might not be so different to some licensing systems where the players often remain unchanged. It was an issue which was considered at first allocation of ITQ. It is not so different to other types of property rights: land and suchlike"

We asked the Falkland Islands Fishing Companies Association 'Are the aims of the ITQ system being achieved - are fishing companies really benefitting in actual economic terms?'

Chair Cheryl Roberts replied as follows: The ITQ system was welcomed by industry.

Previously companies applied for licences annually. Providing ITQ for 25 years, allows companies the longer term security to invest into the fishery.

These investments to name a few include research, overseas marketing, aquaculture and vessel replacement.

The latter has been estimated to cost the industry approximately £400 million (excludes the Illex fishery). Whilst the ITQ review took some considerable time to be compiled and can be seen as an informative document, it should be noted that there are wide differences on how companies are run, which include different levels of share-holding, exploitation of ITQ and catch entitlement agreements. Industry will continue to work with the Fisheries Department to ensure that the recommendations are carried through.

The report clearly indicates that the direct costs have risen considerably. This is mainly in the form of crew labour, fuel and quota access fees. The increase has affected the gross margin and profits, as the global price for fish exports have not increased at the same rate.

The Independent Resource Rent Review that analysed Falkland Island access fees, highlighted that "Fee revenue ignores costs. The more relevant measure is to look at what percentage of gross and net profits the government take is. The consultants concluded this to be 67 per cent and 50 per cent of gross profits in the case of Loligo and finfish respectively but after fixed costs and FIG taxation are taken into account the figure rises to over 80 per cent of net profits for the Loligo fishery."

FIFCA hopes that this is taken into consideration when setting future access fees and ITQ renewal.

What kind of recommendations have come out of the review of the system?

There are twelve recommendations for areas that need to be developed further to ensure that ITQ is maximising the benefit to the Islands generally and is being robustly overseen," said MLA Michael Poole.

He said: "Much of this work sits within FIG in terms of developing the policy behind the tests of effective control, active involvement and economic efficiency.

"However some of the actions also require a direct and joint approach with the industry in terms of assessing whether the Illex and Grenadier fisheries can be added to ITQ and taking a view on what role FIG may have in helping to promote our fisheries internationally."

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146 675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147 125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147 225 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of East Falkland and repeats Mount Alice Repeater, which covers most of the south of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Mount Alice: Frequency: 147 825 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of West Falklands and links to Stanley via Pleasant Peak and Sapper Hill.

Mount Caroline: Frequency: 147 725 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north of West Falklands, including the cross sound ferry main operational area and links to Stanley via Mount Kent and Sapper Hill.

Marine Band: 156.800...Channel 16 (Stanley area) 2.182 MHz 11F In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFLP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is however unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland.

Did you know...

The average hummingbird's heart rate is more than 1,200 beats per minute

The Dancing Plague was a case of dancing mania that occurred in Strasbourg, Germany in 1518. Around 400 people took to dancing for days without rest, and, over the period of about one month, some of those affected died of heart attack, stroke, or exhaustion.

Falkland Islands Development Corporation
Oil & Gas Training & Certification Grant Scheme

FIDC is proud to announce a revamp of its Oil and Gas Certification Grant Scheme. The scheme will now include training, as well as certification, as part of its criteria. The aim of the scheme is to provide grant funding to local companies to acquire internationally recognised training or certification which will improve their chances of securing contracts in the oil and gas industry. The approved scheme provides grant funding of 50% or up to £15,000 (whichever is lowest) for the cost of acquiring certification to successful applicants.

If you would like to receive more information about the scheme or wish to request an application form please contact Michael Betts - Phone: 27211 or E-mail: mbetts@fidc.co.fk.

Football news: A Stanley victory in terrible weather

ON a windy and wet Saturday the Stanley team travelled to Mount Pleasant to play one of their final warm-up matches before they head to Jersey.

The team was slightly depleted with injuries, so Saul Zuvic, Glen Colledge and veteran player Wayne Clement travelled to assist with numbers. The Football Club's President was in attendance with Patrick Watts watching on from the sidelines.

The pattern of the match was heavily influenced by the weather conditions and with the wind behind them, the Sprockets took the game to Stanley. Stanley defended well and managed to break forward on a few occasions and in the 14th minute a fantastic through ball by Aiden Morris sent Wayne Clement one-on-one with the military keeper. Clement finished fantastically by hitting the ball over the keeper and into the roof of the net.

The Sprockets responded well and started to take the initiative. Shortly after the Stanley goal the Sprockets had a chance to equalize as Brown was put through but he lobbed the ball over Stanley goalkeeper Colledge and the crossbar. Despite this miss, the Sprockets equalised in the 24th minute with a lob from McGarry that squirmed through Colledge's hands and into the net.

Sprockets then took the lead in the 30th minute with an excellent long-range strike that gave the Stanley keeper very little chance. 2-1 to the Sprockets.

This seemed to wake Stanley up and they increased the tempo and urgency. In the 35th minute Michael Betts sent a ball in behind the military defence. The Sprocket defender beat Morris to the ball but sent a wayward back-pass past his own keeper. Morris had the pace and the composure to turn the ball into the unguarded net.

With the wind now behind the local side, Stanley decided to press high up the field. This tactic proved to be very effective as Stanley attacked the military side for the entire second half and the Sprockets only managed one attack. Wayne Clement moved into central midfield and controlled the match with his clever footwork and astute passing.

Stanley took the lead again in the 55th minute when Player/Manager George Elbakidze volleyed in a Betts' corner at the far post. Stanley kept attacking and in the 65th minute good interplay between impressive youngster Sam Toolan and Betts sets up a good opportunity for Wayne Clement which was saved by the military goalkeeper at the expense of a corner.

Stanley's fourth goal came as a result of a poor goal-kick which was picked up by Stevie Aldridge who passed inside for substitute Saul Zuvic to score from close range with an incisive finish. Such was the relentlessness of Stanley's attack, defenders Kyle Biggs and George Elbakidze and goalkeeper Glen Colledge had to do sprints just to keep warm in the cold conditions.

The match ended 4-2 with Stanley winning with a very strong second-half showing.

There were notable performances from Aiden Morris, Stevie Aldridge, Wayne Clement and Paul Zeller who all worked tirelessly in the terrible weather conditions.

London and Boston for Islands' marathon runners

SON of Islanders Geoff and Bernadette Pring, Geoffrey (left) completed the London Marathon on the weekend in 3 hrs 56' 43". Geoff was raising funds for the Torbay Holiday Helpers Network and raised more than £2,000.

Meanwhile on the other side of the Atlantic Islander Richard Short completed the Boston Marathon in 3 hr 08' 14" and came in 180th out of 2,058 in his age group (50-54).

As a matter of interest MLA Mike Summers completed the third London Marathon in 1983 in 3 hrs 0' 48" seconds and still claims the record for the fastest Falklands-born marathon time.

Farewell from Hillside PTI Chris

A FAMILIAR face to Stanley residents who use Hillside Gym, Sgt (SI) Forrester RAPTCL, also known as Jez or Chris, has reached the end of his tour in the Falklands and is keen to say goodbye not only to the Hillside Gym members but to all the locals with whom he has become good friends over the last four months.

Sgt (SI) Forrester was posted to Stanley at the Joint Service Adventure Training Centre (H) as the Royal Army Physical Corps Training Instructor to deliver adventure Training to BFSAL personnel as well as managing the Hillside Gym.

He told Penguin News he has made the most of his tour viewing wildlife at Bleaker Island, Kidney Island, Bertha's Beach and has spent a fair few hours up in the mountains around Stanley.

Sgt (SI) Forrester

He said, "even though I am looking forward to returning home to my family and friends, my time in the Falkland Islands will always be in my memories."

The Media Trust is a voluntary organisation responsible for setting the overall strategic direction of the Radio Station and Penguin News, and they are seeking a number of new members.
 Being a Media Trust member is an interesting and responsible role, at times can be challenging while at the same time rewarding. They meet approximately once every two months but in between deal with suggestions, or occasional complaints, from members of the public. The aim of the Trust is to ensure the independence of the media as well as approving strategies and budgets and it regularly assesses the performance of the Penguin News and the Radio Station in order to ensure that both are informative, educational and entertaining for the general consumption of the Falkland Islands.
 The Media Trust has a vital role in the community and Chair Janet Robertson would be delighted to hear from you by May 31. If you are interested please email janet.marketing@cfi.co.fk Phone: 51782 during the day, 21782 evenings.

MPA Road: Import manpower for early start says MLA Short BRINGING contract workers in to ensure enough staff to maintain roads ready for the start of the season in the spring, if not earlier, is MLA Gavin Short's wish, he told Penguin News this week. He said the subject had recently been raised with the Chief Executive as the lack of staff was not just a Public Works Department (PWD) problem, although it was the worst effected.

MLA Short said there were some bridges to be crossed with regard to where to recruit from and where to accommodate once here, "but we cannot stagger on any longer, we have to act."

MLA Short acknowledged that the MPA Road had deteriorated badly, but he said grading had been ongoing for a fortnight and capping for the past week. "But this work is not going to be pretty," he added.

"Views on the road will always vary, just as sections of it will vary and the necessary balance between grading on other parts of the network and the MPA Road, particularly when there are resource issues, means that calls have to be made as to where to place those resources.

"Overall the aimed for level of grading has been achieved for the most part and the staff involved will continue to use best endeavours to keep the MPA Road in as good a condition as is practical," said MLA Short.

However some users say that the road is in a worse condition than previous years and there are concerns that it has deteriorated further much earlier in the winter.

"To be honest the actual condition is not necessarily worse than previous years, but the big concern is, if it has gotten this bad, this early in the winter, then I think we will be in for a far worse road surface for a much longer period this year," said transport company owner Andrea Clausen. FITT transport passengers and freight to and from the airport.

"Sadly, every year we have this conversation and there is never any change – it is very disheartening. Interestingly, I understand all the road plant is in tip-top condition but there are just no people to do the work. Sadly this filters down to recruitment and immigration which is all in our Members' hands," she said.

Goose Green manager Keith Alazia (along with Mrs Clausen) is feeling the impact of the road on his pocket as the road takes its toll on vehicles.

He said the Goose Green vehicle spares bill was the highest since they began haulage, "solely due to the state of the road." He described his driver as, "one of the most careful going," adding that he was also partially responsible for the maintenance of vehicles, so he knew it was not a case of bad driving.

Mr Alazia said he did not necessarily agree that the MPA Road should be completely resurfaced, "regular maintenance would be sufficient," but he appreciated that the Government was too stretched. He wondered if a better option would be to privatise the maintenance?

Mr Alazia reported that the MPA to Darwin section of road, one that has been heralded as the best in the Falklands, was also starting to deteriorate. "It hasn't been graded in a very long time," he said, adding that recent haulage of heavy loads to New Haven was not helping. Continued page 3

Falklands woollen gifts for Princess

ON the occasion of the birth of Princess Charlotte to Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, a letter of congratulations and a gift has been sent from the Falkland Islands Government on behalf of the people of the Falklands. The Government PR and Media Office confirmed yesterday that Member of Legislative Assembly Ian Hansen sent the letter of congratulations along with a Woolmore sheepskin (which Prince George also received) and a pair of sheepskin booties handmade by Alison Howe. Princess Charlotte Elizabeth Diana, fourth in line to the throne was born on May 2 at St Mary's in Paddington, London.

MAY 12, is International Nurses Day and the chance for everyone to recognise and pay tribute to those working in the vital service of nursing.

Dr Mukhtar Uqaili from the King Edward VII Memorial Hospital told Penguin News that a card to thank our nurses at KEMH is available at reception on May 12, for everyone to sign if they wish. Turn to page 4 for a written tribute to the KEMH nursing staff by Dr Uqaili.

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

It probably seems to some that all we ever do is complain about the state of the roads in the Falklands. Well, possibly it is a bit of a national pastime, but I have to admit it has reached new and arguably justified levels of late.

People are now genuinely concerned about their own safety when driving on 'that' road, the safety of others and the safety of their vehicles. Some have just lost confidence and choose not to drive on it. Is this fair? And the winter hasn't even set in yet. A few frosts and let's see what happens to the capping being so hastily and belatedly laid.

Even for those who live here and love the Islands, you only have to be away for a couple of weeks to feel dismay on return and have to rattle and splash your way back to town. I shudder to think of the impression on new arrivals and would not be surprised if the next FIG high flyer to skin out ahead of time cited the MPA Road instead of 'personal reasons'.

I know it's a big deal to sort it out and yes, sacrifices will have to be made in some areas to finance it. MLAs, as you complete the budget process please don't suggest that the cost of properly maintaining the road will mean other vital projects (such as facilities for the elderly) will have to be dropped. That's emotional blackmail. Also don't for a minute think that binning the vehicle/road tax will appease - it won't.

It's been a long time coming and we've tightened our belts through the real hard times, when even then development projects like New Haven and Port Howard docks, the container yard and others were driven ahead as forward planning. All of which are of little value without a fit for purpose spine road.

The condition of the road hasn't only just sneaked up on anyone and nor has the lack of resources - we need to look after what we already have as well as develop.

Meantime the lack of proper maintenance has had a financial impact on users and the extra work/funds it will take to get it back to an acceptable standard will again impact on those same tax payers.

My final word would be to not give the plant operators out there trying to slap crappy material on to a sloppy road a hard time. They can only work with what they are given when they are told to. It's not their timing or skills that are lacking that's for sure, so buy them a beer and direct your frustrations at those who are paid handsomely to ensure that such vital parts of the infrastructure are kept up and running.

Lively debate before traffic calming and crossing plans refused

FOUR options involving pedestrian crossings and realignment of the road to provide easier turning at the bottom of Philomel Street created some lively debate at Wednesday's meeting of the Planning and Building Committee.

The Committee recommended to Executive Council that all of the options be refused on the grounds that they did not comply with development control in terms of health and safety or traffic, nor with safeguarding listed buildings (El Town Plan policies). MLA Michael Poole noted that this would also prevent further applications which would impact on historic buildings in the area.

The applications submitted by Director of Public Works Manfred Keenleyside for the Government were he said designed to provide some control to traffic in the area adjacent to the Jetty Centre where cruise passengers disembark as well as provide a clear way for pedestrians by narrowing down crossing points. Part of the project would take in the corner of the garden of Jubilee Villas to provide an easier turn for vehicles from Ross Road onto Philomel Street.

FIG do not have to consult or apply for permission to carry out road works, although the wall of the Jubilee Villas garden was part of a listed property and as such would require planning permission. Mr Keenleyside said that the purpose of making the applications had been to have the subject debated.

Three members of the public voiced their objections at the invitation of the committee arguing that there was no need to physically change the area with raised crossings or a widened road. It was pointed out that pedestrian crossings near to the car park would slow down vehicular operations so as to be unmanageable; that the days large numbers of tourists were in Stanley were few; that it was not in line with the Development Plan to spoil historic areas and that the area could be closed to through traffic on particularly busy days.

Committee members agreed the turning could be improved but did not wish to see it happen to the detriment of the wall or other parts of the area which were considered to be of historic value.

May Planning update

AN extension to Studio 52 (formerly known as the Old Telephone Exchange) on Ross Road was approved at Wednesday's meeting of the Planning and Building Committee with the conditions that it be finished in a style in keeping with the surrounding area.

Less fortunate however was an application from Juanita Brock to change the use from dwelling to children's nursery at 20 Drury Street. The committee recognised that such an establishment in an already traffic congested area could only exacerbate the situation.

Julie Clarke also had her application to site a Portakabin as a dwelling on land at 11 Racecourse Road refused on the grounds development took up 31 per cent of the plot (25 per cent is maximum). It was also noted that the Portakabin had been sold by FIG on the condition it was not used for accommodation.

Mr and Mrs John Maskell-Bott made an unusual outline application for three options for dwellings to the rear of their property at 34 John Street, although they opted not to inform the Head of Planning which was their preferred option. The plan for a two storey building to provide four single bedroom dwellings was rejected, but those for a two-storey single dwelling or a two dwelling building were approved.

Ian and Sue Goss were granted a further two-year permission for Mama Sue's Pizza Delivery although the request for it to become permanent was refused.

Lookout Lodge plans deferred
An application from Caroline Cotter to change the layout of 14 rooms at Lookout Lodge to 7 single bed flats was deferred for more information to be obtained.

It was noted that it was intended to have the proposed flats available for long-term leases (six months plus) as opposed to standard hotel accommodation. The area on VPC Road is designated for commercial use within the adopted Stanley Town Plan and therefore the hostelry element of the Lookout Lodge is an appropriate use, but the proposed residential element was not. It was recognised that the proposal could provide another welcome first step on the housing ladder for young people, however the Head of Planning commented that making it a residential operation would, "sterilise the area for industrial use."

Cemetery location

Noting that the current cemetery should have enough space for a further 29 years, the committee agreed that a suitable area of Common land should be safeguarded for a new cemetery within the Town Plan.

Good sweep for Nepal fund

THE Darwin Harbour Spots Association (DHSA) is to donate £800 to the Nepal fund out of the associations profit from this year's sweepstake. Goose Green has a close link with the Gurkha Rifles; soldiers from the regiment built the current grand stand at the Goose Green race course in 1983.

The DHSA enjoyed a lucrative sweep draw last weekend with 8,700 books of tickets sold, which accumulated £2,175 for club funds. Sweepstake secretary Bobby Short said that according to DHSA records it was the most ever sold. He thought it might also be the most sold in any sweepstake in the Islands. Mr Short thanked Sheila Harvey for all her assistance with ensuring tickets were distributed and collected and also everyone who had contributed by buying tickets. More about Nepal fund raising on page 5.

Import manpower

MLA Short said an engineering survey was to take place this coming financial year which would provide "the magic number" of what it would cost to resurface the road. But, he doubted his colleagues would be willing to part with £40 to £60 million (his guess) to do the road in one or two seasons as there was not the spare cash in the capital budget.

He said: "I suspect they may not be too keen on raiding our reserves until we are sure that we see income from hydrocarbon exploitation, as at the moment we depend quite a lot on the income from the investment of those reserves and I for one don't want to be the owner of a shiny new road whilst we are slashing recurrent and capital expenditure and maybe looking at either cutting back on services and/or raising tax rates etc to pay for the functioning of the Falklands."

However MLA Short said he believed, "that we could have been chipping away at the road, doing a few kilometres a year."

He said he could not comment on the outcome of the budget round before the June session, but he said that a proposal had been put in to do a two kilometre section of road out to the area known as Brownings Gap, "and it is to be hoped that the cash remains in the capital budget when it is passed."

Drink driving

MOUNT Pleasant man Julian Jason Leach (47) was fined £370 for drink driving and banned from driving for a year on Tuesday. He also had his licence endorsed and was ordered to pay £150 as a contribution towards prosecution costs.

Mr Leach who was almost twice over the legal limit when he provided a breath sample some three hours after police were alerted to his condition, said he had consumed one, "large glass of wine," his lawyer Simon Crowder told the court.

Mr Leach was apprehended by Police at Mount Pleasant after witnesses had noticed that he was unsteady on his feet while cleaning his vehicle at the wash-down area near the Police Station. He had driven off while they were in the Police Station relaying their concerns.

He apologised to the court for his stupidity and explained that he had also been taking a lot of medication to deal with pain.

Justice of the Peace Janet Pompert-Robertson reminded him that he had chosen to drive with a high level of alcohol in his system which had put himself and others at risk.

Speeding fine

Also from Mount Pleasant, Michael Aaron Clark (44) was fined £220 for speeding on the MPA Road near Mullet Creek. Mr Clark was recorded travelling at 55mph in the 40mph zone on April 7. He had his licence endorsed and was ordered to pay £85 prosecution costs.

Noble Energy fourth quarter

NOBLE Energy this week announced a fourth quarter 2014 net income of $402 million, or $1.05 per diluted share.

Total sales volumes for the quarter averaged a record 315 thousand barrels of oil equivalent per day. This represents an increase of eight percent compared to the fourth quarter of 2013, or 14 percent after adjusting for divested assets.

Compared to the final quarter of last year, total sales volumes were up.

Noble Energy's onshore horizontal production was 50 percent higher in the fourth quarter of 2014 versus the same period in 2013.

Chief Justice

SIMON Bryan QC has been appointed as Chief Justice of the Falkland Islands and will be sworn in at Government House today. Mr Bryan has been a Barrister at the Commercial Bar for more than 25 years. Specialist areas of practice include shipping, civil fraud, insurance and reinsurance, professional negligence, energy and utilities and information technology.

Youth Parliamentarians gain gift for FICS

FICS students Darby Newman, Gemma Webb, Max Rowlands, Tegan Francis, Avineesh Suppiah, Amanda McGhie, Megan Harris and Jessica Whalley King

EIGHT Falkland Islands Community School (FICS) students who conducted a debate within a Youth Parliament on Commonwealth Day were rewarded for their efforts by 'Young People's Champion' MLA Dr Barry Elsby with the gift to the school of The Times Concise Atlas of the World.

MLA Elsby presented the atlas at Monday's FICS assembly.

While working towards the debate entitled 'This house believes the age of voting should be reduced to sixteen years', the group gained support and guidance from English teacher, Miss Zoe Gill and Speaker of the House Keith Biles.

Miss Gill said the students from Years 8 and 9 were presented with individual gifts at the time of the Parliament, but MLA Elsby also wished to give the Atlas to the school as a gift and an acknowledgement of the work they did, and to encourage other students to become involved in future debates.

She said a number of students were also currently involved in writing essays and poetry for the Commonwealth Day competition.

FICS Head Teacher Martin Windward said: "The atlas is a timely addition to new resources arriving for geography and related subjects for the start of the new academic year."

MLA Gavin Short shares a glimpse into his working week

AS Jan has headed North, I have been let loose with the column for a couple of weeks but fear ye not, normal service will resume soon. Although Jan doesn't share my enthusiasm for tweeting I believe it is important to keep getting our message out and going after the spreaders of untruths wherever and whenever we can. When I was growing up we Falkland Islanders sat meekly by as Argentina did and said what they wanted. If I have my way this will never happen again.

The news from Nepal, a country that we have a firm link to via the Gurkhas was truly appalling and it is heartening to see the Falklands communities both civil and military rallying around doing their bit to raise money for a people to whom we owe a debt.

Assembly life seems to centre ever more around budgetary issues as the deadline looms. This could be quite a good budget if it remains intact, however it is not set in stone until the budget meeting in June. Not so happy is the heat and light being generated by the MPA road but I believe PN is covering this in depth so enough said here.

They say "never volunteer for anything" and I now realise why, having happily agreed to take on Jan's Lands and Planning & Building Committee commitments in her absence, only to find out that on the agenda this month is zebra crossings!

The neighbours across the way seem to descend ever deeper into the realms of galloping lunacy and the latest manifestation of this is that on Tuesday the Congress of Deputies in Salta (that's the same place as that guitar twanging Deputy Emanuel Sierra, who graced us with his presence in January, came from) are considering making it obligatory that the "marcha de malvinas" is sung at all public events – if it's that manky thing that I and other Falkland Islanders had to endure whilst we were under the control of the foreign invaders, I do feel truly sorry for them.

Ahh yes, I do believe there may have been a general election somewhere as well. All the major players have already given their support to our rights to self determination.

A tribute to our nurses

In this piece Dr Uqaili from the King Edward VII Memorial Hospital pays tribute to nurses.

Hippocrates said, "The goal of medicine is: to cure sometimes, to relieve often and to comfort always." This is an amazing example we learn through our nurses.

Nursing is a calling, a way of life. From the moment a new life begins, to saying goodbye to a loved one and at all the stages in between, nurses make a difference to people's lives, whether in hospitals, clinics or patients' home.

Nurses have a key role to play in bringing redemption to the suffering communities of the world. They play a vital and important role in health services. Nursing staff are on the frontline of patient care, and of compassion provided to every patient.

This is a profession where joy and sadness come in equal measure, where inspiration is met by frustration, and where courage must outweigh fear.

Nurses are influencing service change in a wide variety of care settings. They are working closely with their patients and other clinicians to deliver the very best care for their patients, whilst identifying ways for continually improving the care.

Most widely known for pro-

We want to thank our nurses for all their efforts, hard work and dedication to deliver the very best of care for each and every patient; work which is patient centred, safe and effective and at the heart of everything we do and puts 'patients first always' viding care to the poor, sick and wounded, nurses have also been the influential leaders in health care reform, political activism, civic mindedness and humanitarian efforts. Since the days of emptying bed pans, caring for hundreds of patients at one time and serving in times of crisis and need, nurses have come into their own. Today's nurse helps to reshape health care delivery and has earned a new respect, not only as caregiver, but also as educator, researcher, critical thinker, inventor and leader.

International Nurses Day is a great opportunity to recognise the contribution all our nurses make and to recognise all the good work and care provided to our patients and their families by them.

'Penguin News Aloud' readers needed

DO you enjoy reading aloud, keeping up with local news, and helping to provide a service to the community?

PenguinNews-Aloud, an all volunteer local 'talking newspaper' is looking for readers.

The service provides a weekly audio edition of the Penguin News for anyone who has difficulty reading a regular copy of the paper for any reason.

Volunteers generally read about three weeks out of every 3-6 months.

Call Margo Smallwood on 21031 for details.

PenguinNews-Aloud welcomes new clients at any time. Also give Margo a call if you, or someone you know, might benefit from an audio edition of the Penguin News.

Be a Blue Bus driver

THE Blue Bus, a vital service to elderly people and others unable to get to the shops is now in its 26th year. John Birmingham is co-ordinator and currently the sole driver. If anyone would like to help out with driving give him a call on 52834.

Baby Scarlett inquest closed

HER Majesty's Coroner Clare Faulds recorded a verdict of death by unascertained natural causes at the conclusion of the inquest of baby Scarlett Louise Berntsen who was just six months old when she died in the Clinica Alemana, Santiago, Chile on June 21, 2013.

Three forensic pathologists examined Scarlett and none of them were able to identify the cause of her death. Mrs Faulds said this was not because they were incompetent. "It is because it is not always possible to establish why a person dies suddenly, especially a young child, even in this age of advanced medicine and investigation techniques."

"I consider it significant that none of the examinations has disclosed any indication of a non-natural cause for Scarlett's death."

Having recorded statements from more than 20 people which covered the events leading up to Scarlett's second medical evacuation to Chile after she had stopped breathing.

Mrs Faulds said that words were of little comfort but nevertheless offered her sympathy and condolences to Scarlett's mother Harley and her family and friends. "The death of a baby is a great tragedy and heart-breaking," concluded Mrs Faulds.

Inquests opened

THE inquest into the death of Alastair Gordon Biggs (63) was opened and adjourned until August 4, on Monday.

HM Coroner's officer PC Chris Butler said he had attended Mr Biggs' home at 50 John Street on April 28, where he found him dead.

HM Coroner Clare Faulds adjourned for further enquiries including a post mortem to be conducted.

The inquest into the death of Philippines national Edwin Garcia Valiente (27) was also opened and adjourned until August 4. Mr Valiente was a crew member of the jigger An Sheng which visited Stanley on April 27 to report the death.

Youth detained

A SEVENTEEN year-old youth was remanded in detention on Friday after he admitted two further charges of burglary.

Senior Magistrate Clare Faulds said the young man should be held in custody given the short time since he was last before the court. He will reappear on May 15 at 10am.

Licence restored

MACAULEY John Davis had his driving licence reinstated as from July 1, after he made an application on Friday. Mr Davis was banned from driving for two years in January 2014.

FIG and residents dig deep for Gurkha fund

THE Government has agreed to match funds raised locally for the Nepal Appeal Fund.

MLA Ian Hansen, said: "Islanders have a closeness to Nepal through our affinity with the Gurkha regiments, and the earthquake's epicentre was in Gorkha, where the Gurkhas originate from. We are in a position to help, and are pleased to say that FIG intends to match pound-for-pound the money that has been raised by the community. We hope that any money raised will help Nepal to recover after such a catastrophic event."

Locally funds are being raised with a variety of events and auctions and on Tuesday afternoon more than £7,000 was already nestling in the account set up at Standard Chartered Bank.

Norman Clark kick-started the appeal and has been busy organising events which will be ongoing for the next three months, after which the account will close.

Funds will then be sent to the UK Red Cross for onward transfer to the Nepal Earthquake Fund.

To date cake sales have been held in Stanley and at Mount Pleasant and on Saturday a Gurkha curry night will take place at the Parish Hall and Mr Clark reported that orders had already been placed for more than 100 servings at £6 Seafish Chandlery, the Falkland Islands Company Ltd and the Meat Company have kindly supplied the ingredients for this event.

Mr Clark said he would like to hear from anyone who has fund-raising ideas or who would like to get involved in anyway.

A hand-crafted Singapore Ball turned by Keith Grimmer (below) has been put up for auction creating a unique opportunity to own a handmade craft which incorporates four pieces of wood from local shipwrecks. The sphere is made from yellow pine from the St Mary (1889), the spikes are made from cedar which is part of the cargo from the Bertha (1862) and the stand's top and bottom is made from American white oak from the Charles Cooper (1856) and the stem from mahogany from the Jhelum 1849. A brief history of the shipwrecks is also included in the form of bookmarks.

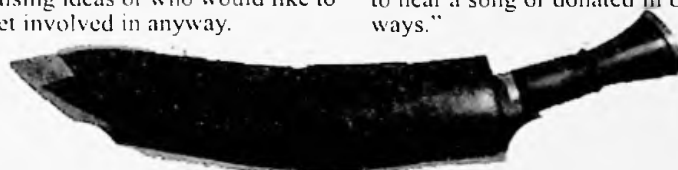

Bids will close at 2.30pm on May 21 and the highest bid will be announced on FIRS on May 22.

Marilyn and Peter Finlayson are also auctioning a Kukri (below) which had attracted bids over £550 by Wednesday (bidding closes today) and Leon Mitchell has a painting of the Atlantic Conveyor up for grabs.

FIRS raised a massive £1,086 on Monday with a pay to play day when the Falklands population dug as deep as ever in their pockets to raise funds for the Gurkhas.

Station Manager Corina Ashbridge said she was delighted that so much money had been raised. "Once again, people in the Islands have shown just how generous they are. The staff here all worked hard throughout the day and as usual when fund-raising we had a really enjoyable time. Thank you to everyone who pledged money to hear a song or donated in other ways."

MPA a higher priority

I READ with interest Patrick Watts letter in last weeks Penguin News and I believe most would not disagree with what he said. It was also interesting to read in the same publication that plans are well advanced to build a road to Cape Pembroke Lighthouse. Whilst I would also agree that there is a requirement to improve access to the lighthouse surely the higher priority must be to resurface the road to Mount Pleasant Airport. Please, please MLAs let us bring this road up to an acceptable standard before spending our funds on a far less important project like the road to the lighthouse.

1. What is the best piece of advice you have ever been given? Don't eat yellow snow

2. If you had a motto, what would it be? Don't ask someone to do something that you are not prepared to do yourself

3. Who would you make Governor of the Falklands? Quentin Tarrantino

4. What is your nickname and why? When I was a boy I liked sausages, so my dad called me 'Banger'. My little brother was called 'Baby Banger', because he also liked sausages

5. What is your favourite TV programme? Game of Thrones. Anyone who has seen it will know why I like it

6. What song makes you feel happy when you hear it? Anything by Creedence Clearwater Revival. My parents had all their albums on vinyl, and once I first played them, I couldn't stop

7. What would people be surprised to learn about you? I was born in Singapore. My Dad was in the Royal Navy at the time, serving on HMS Forth, which was on deployment in the region

8. What is the one, single food that you would never give up? Cornish pasties - if someone was to start up a franchise down here with say, The Cornish Bakeshop, I would be their first and best customer

9. What is your happiest childhood memory? I had to pick a topic for PE when I was 14, and I went for the national Cricket team and sent a letter to the Marylebone Cricket Club. I received an invite to meet the team at the Marylebone Cricket Club in St John's Wood. My Dad was more excited than I was. He even got to carry Mike Gatting's kit bag

Chris moved to the Falklands last year from the UK, to join the RFIP, accompanied by his wife Zena, and their two children, Ezme and Jared. "For nearly seven years, I commuted daily to London by train, a journey that took at least six hours every working day. Now I live just up the road from my place of work, and I am so thankful to the Falkland Islands for allowing us to come to live in such a beautiful place."

Election showcases our electoral deficit

I AM writing this on Monday morning. On Thursday of this week, I will – like some 45 million other Brits – make a rare visit to a local junior school, which has been temporarily transformed into a focal point of democracy. There, with the smell of wax crayons and powder paint reminding me that what I am about to do is for the good of younger generations (God help them) rather than my own good, I will enter a booth, pull a curtain closed behind me and put a single mark on a ballot paper.

I should probably stop short of telling you which candidate I will vote for (in the very flawed first-past-the-post voting system that exists here, I can only vote for one person), but the following suggests whom I will not be choosing.

For as long as I have lived in central London, my MP has been the Conservative Sir Malcolm Rifkind, but he was recently disgraced when he fell for a newspaper sting and offered to sell his parliamentary influence to a Chinese company. That left a sour Tory taste in my mouth. On top of this, I am quite disgusted by the Conservative government's steady removal of financial support for disabled and disadvantaged people, while reducing the tax burden on the super-rich. Corruption and lack of compassion therefore remove at least one party from my short list, but apart from that I'm still among the large minority who are undecided.

By the time you read this, we should know the result of the election – or rather we should know who the new batch of MPs are. But we will most probably not know the shape and colour of the new government before the middle of next week. If the pundits and the multiple opinion polls are anything like correct – and there seem to be several polls every day, as well as the "polls-of-polls" which average out the results – neither Labour nor Conservatives will obtain the 326 seats needed to give them a majority. Without that, the business of government would be stultifying slow and ineffective. As a result, we may well see a reprise of 2010 when the best part of a week passed before David Cameron was able to cobble together a coalition with the Liberal Democrats, something none of us voted for.

While some people are saying that this proves that coalition government can work in the UK, most of us would rather see the party we voted for in power and working efficiently, or accept graciously that we lost and another party has the right to govern.

Add the unsatisfactory oddity of coalition to the iniquity of the first-past-the-post system, which allows candidates to take seats in parliament even though they do not have majority support in their constituencies, and I believe that by the end of next week we will have been delivered a double whammy democratic deficit.

The differences between first-past-the-post and the only other real election system, alternative-vote, are not that easy to explain (at least not in a column where I'm counting the words), but bear with me while I try.

Under first-past-the-post, candidates can get into power with a minority of the votes cast. Consider a constituency of 80,000 voters: the winning candidate might take only 20,000 of the 60,000 votes cast, with the rest of the votes being distributed in various amounts between the other candidates, but he or she wins the seat because he or she has more votes than any other candidate. This is not at all a rare occurrence. In the 2010 election two thirds of MPs were elected with less than 50 per cent of the constituency votes.

Especially now, when we are

Bound Ungagged

facing the likelihood of a coalition that no one really wants, we should be very concerned about the democratic weakness of first-past-the-post, and thinking seriously about 'alternative vote' which is used perfectly well in many parts of the world. AV requires a voter to choose their favourite candidate and their second, third, fourth favourite choices and so on. If a candidate obtains more than 50 per cent of the votes cast, then he or she wins the election. But if no candidate achieves 50 per cent, then the alternative votes are taken into consideration. Lowest numbers of votes are discounted progressively until one candidate has more than 50 per cent of the vote.

Alternative-vote counting is obviously protracted, and it would deny us the fast-paced spectator sport that we enjoy on election night. But if we had AV in place now, we would be spared the iniquity of a coalition government that no one really wants being decided next week by a parliament crowded with MPs who did not win the majority of the votes in their constituencies.

But enough of the arcane issue of voting systems. What might the poll on Thursday mean for the Falklands? The glib answer would be "not a lot," but I would urge a little concern. Elections are never won or lost on foreign policy, but the reality is that the new British government, whether coalition or single-party, will be almost immediately preoccupied with international issues that threaten stability, peace, cordial relations and trade. Cue the over-eager new junior ministers in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the fast-streamed young diplomats who want to make their mark, and the shadowy special advisors who just want to get problems out of the way, regardless of principles that must be trampled.

There are precedents for such Machiavellian behaviour. In 2002, junior minister Peter Hain tried to shaft the people of Gibraltar by proposing joint British-Spanish sovereignty of the Rock. The Gibraltarians scuppered this by calling their own flash plebiscite and proving their overwhelming desire to remain British (similar to that which was held in the Falklands recently). But the fact remains that an influential minister (Hain and Prime Minister Blair were close) backed by officials was able to get considerable traction with an idea that was almost heretical.

The case of the Falklands is different, but not entirely so. The Argentines are tenacious with an argument for talks, and their siren song could be attractive to the aforementioned greenhorn politicians and Civil Service/special advisor flunkies. I wouldn't lose any sleep over this risk, but neither would I bet my bottom dollar against it.

Meanwhile, I'm looking forward to the spectacle of democracy – however flawed it might be – in action in just a few days time.

FIC donates £1,000 to Guides International camp fund

GIRL Guides were presented with the generous donation of £1,000 from the Falkland Islands Company on Monday evening. The money is intended to assist eight girls and two leaders attend International Camps in the UK in July/August. The group will attend the Discovery15 Camp at Fox Lease, Hampshire and the Isle of Man Centenary Camp, along with sightseeing activities. The girls and parents have been fundraising for the last two years with cupcake and bake sales, community service at Government House for the Queen's Birthday Parade, dances and flyaway raffles. They have also received donations from other companies (more information on that in a future article).

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

JUST as you might expect, when not tied to school meal times and there is a window for some useful time in the garden, the weather becomes too foul to do so.

All those little hands to help remove the potatoes from the soil and what are we are faced with? Mud, glorious mud! Not only is it unpleasant to be out, it is also very hard to see the potatoes and getting them dry is going to be well nigh impossible unless they are cleaned and washed off first.

A long and cool job which can also (if you have small helpers) become a very dirty job. Still, needs must and, digging must continue, for digging potatoes in the spring is just not an option.

I am very tempted though, to plant potatoes in the plots which have been cleared of greens and other vegetables and get ahead of ourselves and (maybe) have a little more time for all those other jobs demanding attention at the beginning of the growing season. All self-set potatoes come up without chitting, or any other help, once the ground warms up anyway.

I have also suggested we should put a young pig in the potato area to clear it up and remove all missed potatoes, and I'm only half joking too, for I have always been very fond of those animals. It is such a shame to think of pigs as dirty, for given a chance and a clean bed they really are pretty fussy about their hygiene. It's because I admire them so much that the family don't think it's a good idea, after all, what do you do with them when they are no longer piglets? Still, it's a thought, perhaps fostering is the answer?

My little helpers have been working quite hard helping to peel potatoes. I used to use the attachment on the Kenwood mixer to peel any small young potatoes, (it was great for carrots too) but that decided to split its lid after many years of use and we have not been able to get a replacement for it. I really have a stingy side to me and the very idea of throwing away food does not sit happily with me at all, so this year, with my many helpers, we sort the potatoes by size and bring the smaller ones, that is, those approximately the size of a ping-pong ball, into the house. A lot of fun is had washing them (and all surroundings). They are then boiled for about 10 minutes and left to cool. My helpers then happily peel the skins off them: we bag them and put them in the freezer for use when required. Another incentive to peel these potatoes, particularly for Jasmine, is a particular fondness for Spanish tortilla (potato omelette) and these little spuds are great for the job.

Granddaughter Jasmine takes a break in a tropical part of the garden before it is back to work grading potatoes

Older potatoes do not freeze well at all, the best way with them is to mash them and pack away in suitable amounts, or use the mash to make croquettes or Duchesse potatoes or just plain potato cakes.

A friend dropped in a couple of roots of rhubarb the other day. These are large enough roots to break up into a few plants which will form another row without having to break my own youngish roots this year. I will also keep a piece to place in soil in a large box under cover and put a box or bucket over it to force it, as it makes for much earlier and very tender young rhubarb this way.

Thrushes are playing havoc with many small plants again, and these winds have sadly knocked a few rather well formed nests down off the trees. One can only hope that the residents have long since moved on. Their nesting places might have to be formed rather lower down in years to come as I see that many of the large Macrocarpas around Stanley are being cut down, and much as I hate to see this happen I am glad they are being cut down for everyone's safety. These trees whilst making superb (if regularly trimmed) hedges, are increasingly dangerous if they grow up as a tree. They do not root deeply enough to cope in this way, especially as they are usually planted much too close together anyway and, during winds, should a long branch break off they are liable to cause a lot of damage to people and property as they are very heavy.

And talking of trees all the poplars, willows and other deciduous trees have lost most of their leaves: they all look rather forlorn just now.

Looking around the flower beds, I see the hellebores are starting to flower already. The large sedums with their deep pink flowers are quite eye catching, the pansies continue to give their all as do many pinks. The roses are still flowering; they, and most other flowers out there, would not stand close scrutiny and would definitely not make bouquets but the overall picture is still quite colourful, even the weeds give some colour.

Indoors the nerines and some oxalis are flowering and many of the pelargoniums also, some of the so-called Christmas cactus are also starting to flower.

Many seeds are planted and sitting outside, covered with mesh, to overwinter in peace, hopefully the spring will bring a fresh crop of seedlings up to get a new season under way.

Roll on!

Arthur's Jess is dog trial champion 2015

GUESTS from near and far were welcomed to North Arm on May 1-2 for their annual two nighter.

On Friday friends caught up over drinks, and danced to music expertly provided by Mel Lloyd. The following morning marked the finals of the 2015 championship dog trials, the culmination of two qualifying heats held on the East and West in previous weeks.

The competitors enjoyed sunny but cool conditions and found themselves well supported by a large number of spectators.

Amongst the spectators was the new Commander of British Forces South Atlantic Islands, Commodore Darren Bone along with his wife, who were dropped off by helicopter early that morning.

Both were experiencing their first dog trials since arriving and were enthralled from the beginning, learning about what the judges were looking for from both dog and handler.

All finalists acquitted themselves very well, despite some very stubborn and belligerent sheep who seemed determined to scatter at every opportunity

Susan Hirtle was the first to pen all five sheep, a feat which only Arthur Turner managed to match throughout the final. The results were as follows:

- 1st - Arthur Turner with Jess
- 2nd - Susan Hirtle with Toto
- 3rd - Critta Lee with Duke
- 4th - Hew Grierson with Cop

After the dog trials, people were treated to a wonderful asado before the DHSA sweepstake was drawn and prizes awarded, with a small group of lucky winners scooping the top prize of £1,250. A full list of all the winners can be found on the DHSA facebook page.

The rest of the evening was filled with laughter and fun from all, marking the end of yet another successful two nighter.

Penguin News asked Tony how it all began?

PN: When were you first inspired to create the characters?

TE: When Louise, my wife, wanted to move back to the Falklands and let me tag along, I had quite a lot of spare time on my hands when the family were out at work so I thought it best to do something positive and get back into drawing. I had doodled the sheep and horse on a bit of paper when testing out a new pen and Mandy (McLeod) commented they would look good in a comic strip. There was no intention to create a series initially, but once I completed the first one, the others just kept coming.

PN: Are they based on actual animals?

TE: The original sheep was based on Mandy's pet sheep Mumble, the horse was based on Common, owned by Ben Berntsen at EBF and the cows were from Donna Minnell's Murray Greys. The chickens were added in from Mandy's chicken 'collection' and the penguins were an obvious decision.

PN: Where did you get your ideas from

The front cover of Tony's book

TE: Most of the jokes came from the random conversations we usually had on evenings when the McLeods, the Eccles, Ben (Berntsen) and Donna (Minnell), who would appear at the week-ends, had finished their meals and we would settle back with a glass of wine or a cozy coffee or three and put the world to rights.

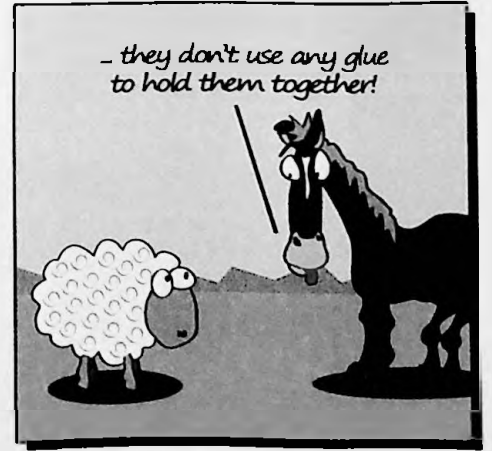

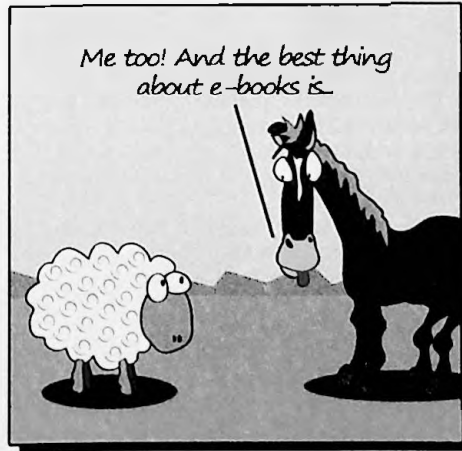

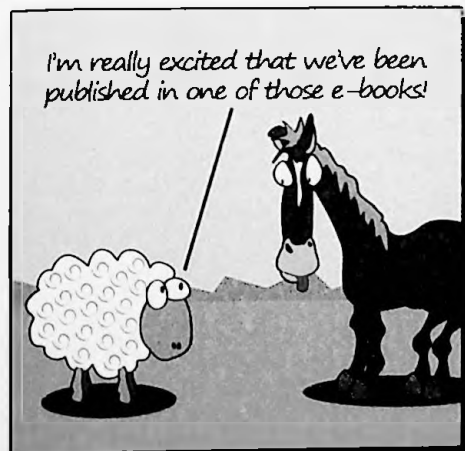

A good example would be the sheep selling the landmine field to the penguin, which came about after the deminers were heading back; or the penguin hitting oil after being inspired by Rockhopper. I like to play on words and situations and turn them on their head a little.

PN: What sort of feedback did you get when the cartoons were in Penguin News?

TE: It was really pleasing, I had no expectations with any of it as I was enjoying making them (and still do) and I was really pleased to get them printed in the paper. A lot of people liked the jokes, which is the important bit, and many others like the quirky side of the characters, like the horse always being a bit daft and the sheep being cynical.

I try to keep the jokes as relative to the Falklands as I can, sometimes it's a bit wide of the mark, but I like that I can use a little satire to raise a smile or two and so far, I don't think I've insulted anyone (apart from the neighbours).

Mud encrusted climax to motocross season

Lachlan and Regan make a splash at the Ponds Track. Below: A muddy line-up of experts

THE last race of the season was cold, wet, dull and windy, with 50mm of clay gloop and craters big enough to swallow an infant - and that was just the MPA road. The Ponds track was in far better condition, which was horrific in itself.

It was decided on popular vote that the season's summer grass and clay tracks were to be combined for something a little different. Not surprisingly, the grass track was not graced with much grass and had transformed itself into a slimy, black peaty mess. The circuit was set to be extremely challenging.

The full loop was deemed a little too much for the Juniors and we confined them to the clay track.

Starting the day with everything to play for, Regan Newman and Jack Alazia tied on points for second, only a handful behind championship leader Travis Jaffray.

Off the start it was Regan Newman who emerged in the lead, which she managed to hold for a lap. Jack proved too strong, took over and checked out.

Battles raged in the morass. Travis came home in second with Lachlan Crowie taking third. All the Juniors did outstandingly well in such arduous conditions; parents should be rightly proud of them.

The second race proved to be even more dramatic. Jack tried to get away to give himself the best chance for the title. Unfortunately he suffered mechanical gremlins and Travis was right there to capitalise.

Two laps later, with Jack's issue resolved he was back on the track and eating ground fast. Travis had ridden the perfect race with his smooth, tidy approach, taking the win and with it the 2014/15 Junior Championship.

Jack raced back to 4th position which was enough to take second for the season. Chico Thomas picked up a fantastic second in the last race and Kia Alazia fought home for a well deserved third place.

Clubman
Although the Clubman riders would have loved to take over from the Junior's on just the clay track, it was now time to get rotavating. The machines to carry out this task ranged dramatically throughout three decades of motorcycle evolution. The riders also range through even more decades, although, by the end of lap one everyone looked the same, coated in Fitzroy's finest gloop.

As we have witnessed all season, James Tyrrell took an early and commanding lead in the first race. A brief close encounter with earth goo in the second race, set James the challenge of hunting down his first number one spot. Before the end of the race this was achieved and James completed a perfect season with not a race lost.

Richard Cowan demonstrated a smooth and confident racing technique, which landed his newly purchased KTM 200 into second position. Ryan Perry battled the elements, forcing his body and his 450 power plant, into third place for both races.

The remaining field swapped positions more times than a teenagers pimple. The old man of motocross, Jimmy Moffatt, put in another consistent performance, which secured his number two plate for the 2014/15 season.

Mr Zuvic suffered from engine bogging when landing huge airs, but soon learned to compensate by 'keeping it pinned'.

Shaun Kendrick demonstrated stunning speeds on the straights as he brought home his new KTM 250 XC. Ryan Watson kept on the pipe and put in a great performance on a 94 Honda CR 250.

Karl Barnes made his debut ride which will hopefully be the first of many to come.

The love affair of the 99° TM 300 motocrosser and Ben Hoyles appears to be on the wane, as both rider and machine seemed to be at odds with each other. Maybe the addition of an Austrian 'K' to the brand name will be the solution for the next season.

Experts
The much anticipated experts race took to the track next. Jay Moffatt who had dominated all season took an early lead, followed by Sean Moffatt, Scott Roberts and Adrian Simm. As the bikes took on terra firma, Sean's powerful 350 proved to be the perfect weapon to cover his brother Jay with a three inch coating of potato patch poo. He transformed this technique into a new art form as he weaved his back wheel across the track taking full advantage of caking his brother, till all you could see was a pair of eyes poking out of a black encrusted blob.

With Sean taking the first race, Jay taking the second Adrian taking third overall it ended an exciting race to watch. Scott Roberts who had a DNF in the first race, definitely had the most airtime on his new YZF 250.

Beer leg

Riders were reluctant to have one more blast but couldn't resist battling out the final beer leg of the season, reaching its mud-encrusted climax. Adam Glanville made his come back after being released from his letters, sentenced to a lifetime ban of motocross over a decade ago, now being offered parole. The massive grin on his face as he charged around the track, spoke volumes.

Sean Moffatt demonstrated the progress he had made this season by taking the win, defeating his brother and the rest of the riders, now weighing considerably more with the layers of clay and peat bonding to skin, nylon, plastic, metal and bits we shan't mention.

A big thank you goes to the Bristol crew who supplied a full compliment of rider, marshal, photographer and medic. Many thanks to Carlton Real and Ian France for the medical cover, all the marshals, lap counters and helpers, Andrew Newman for standing in as the Chief Marshal and E.T James and Sons for sponsoring the event. We look forward to see everyone at the prize giving in mid May.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:
Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.
Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147.225 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of East Falkland and repeats Mount Alice Repeater, which covers most of the south of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.
Mount Alice: Frequency: 147.825 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of West Falklands and links to Stanley via Pleasant Peak and Sapper Hill.
Mount Caroline: Frequency: 147.725 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north of West Falklands, including the cross sound ferry main operational area and links to Stanley via Mount Kent and Sapper Hill.
Marine Band: 156.800 Channel 16 (Stanley area) 2.182 MHz HF In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFI may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is however unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland.

FALKLAND ISLANDS DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

Falkland Islands Development Corporation

The Falkland Islands Development Corporation is looking for individuals with an entrepreneurial background to join the new Falkland Islands Development Board.

This is an exciting time to become more involved in shaping the Islands' economy, as FIDC moves to a more independent operating status. The Corporation has a new team in place, a clear mission, and a real commitment to develop the Falkland Islands economy through a period of significant opportunity.

At this stage of the process we are looking for individuals for the positions of Chair, Vice-Chair and one appointed member of the FIDC Board.

You can learn more about the Corporation by visiting the website www.fidc.co.uk. Anyone interested in finding out more about the opportunities detailed above is encouraged to contact FIDC's General Manager, for an informal chat and details regarding the application process.

Expressions of interest should be received by no later than Wednesday 20th May 2015.

Addressed to:
 General Manager
 Falkland Islands Development Corporation
 Shackleton House

Oil & Gas Training & Certification Grant Scheme

FIDC is proud to announce a revamp of its Oil and Gas Certification Grant Scheme. The scheme will now include training, as well as certification, as part of its criteria. The aim of the scheme is to provide grant funding to local companies to acquire internationally recognised training or certification which will improve their chances of securing contracts in the oil and gas industry. The approved scheme provides grant funding of 50% or up to £15,000 (whichever is lowest) for the cost of acquiring certification to successful applicants.

If you would like to receive more information about the scheme or wish to request an application form please contact Michael Betts - Phone: 27211 or E-mail: mbetts@fidc.co.fk

Recipes for the Falklands

Slow cooked shoulder with Chinese spices

This can be served with Chinese pancakes, cucumber, and spring onion strips as a lunch or starter – or with creamy mash and steamed vegetables as a main. It will work equally well with a mutton shoulder if cooked for longer, although the meat may be less tender and more suited to serving with vegetables as a main course.

Ingredients

- 1 lamb shoulder on the bone
- 2.5 cm root ginger, peeled and grated
- 3 cloves garlic, squashed
- 2 tsp Chinese 5 Spice
- 2 tbsp maple syrup (If you don't have maple syrup use honey and golden syrup)
- 300 ml pineapple juice or lamb stock
- 3 star anise

Method

- Score the shoulder deeply in crisscross pattern and rub with ginger, garlic, five spice and maple syrup.
- Take a large sheet of foil and make a double thickness wrap the roast will fit in. Place the joint in the foil fat side up and sit inside a roast pan.
- Add the pineapple juice or stock and add star anise (optional).
- Seal foil at the top so the joint is wrapped loosely.
- Cook for two hours, or until the meat is tender and soft and can be pulled from the bone.
- Unwrap the and foil drizzle with a little maple syrup and replace in the oven for 30 minutes to crisp off.
- Serve drizzled with cooking juices

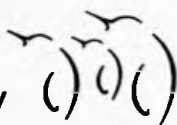

Preheat oven to 180°C/gas mark 4.

Decor Services competition marks start of winter medals

THE Decor Services May Medal is the first competition of the 2105/16 golf season. The May Medal also signifies the start of the winter medals and tee-off time was moved to 0945 in case of frost and the format changed to stableford to keep up the pace of play.

The weather lived up to the winter billing with a stiff south westerly wind making conditions tough and keeping the temperature low. The winning score of 34 points is testament to the difficult conditions, emphasised even more by the next best score being only 31 points. It was Gordon Lennie, playing very well, who took victory by three shots from Martyn Gilson-Clarke in second place.

During prize giving the Club Captain thanked Decor Services for their continued sponsorship of the Monthly Medals for another season. In addition to the day's prizes, presentations were made to 2014-15 season League winner Kevin Clapp and Ecclectic winner Adam Glanville. The Matchplay trophy was also presented to first time winner Troyd Bowles.

The next scheduled competition is the Decor Services June Medal on Sunday June 7, sign-in by 9.30am for a 9.45am tee-off. The medal will be followed by the Annual General Meeting at 2pm in the Golf Clubhouse. All members are urged to attend the AGM. The form for potential committee members is on the clubhouse notice board as well as items for the agenda. Anyone with items for the agenda can send them direct to any committee member.

The golf team for this year's Island Games in Jersey are making their final travel arrangements and looking forward to the challenge. This year the team will be Troyd Bowles (handicap 5), Kevin Clapp (handicap 6), Ian Stewart (handicap 6) and Eugene Hurley (handicap 9).

The golf competition in Jersey will be played on two championship courses, Le Moye (which will be hosting a European Seniors Tour event just before the Island Games) and Royal Jersey.

Both courses are traditional links and are significantly longer than the Stanley Golf Course with Le Moye playing at 6,747yds and Royal Jersey 6,120yds compared to Stanley's 4,655yds.

Further updates on the teams preparations will follow in the coming weeks. T Bowles

Understanding soils – an interactive short course – Stanley, May 2015

Soil health is fundamental to the functioning of Falkland land environments and the services, such as agriculture and water storage, that they provide. This is an exciting opportunity to learn more about the soils of the Falkland Islands and gain the skills necessary for describing, recording and interpreting soil information. The proposed course will be tailored to the Falkland Islands, provided free of charge and run by an extremely experienced soil surveyor, Rodney Burton. Rodney has over 30 years of experience working for the Soil Survey of England and Wales and Cranfield University; he has delivered a similar course multiple times over a 10 year period and it has attracted a range of participants including the Environment Agency, Defra, Thames Water, LEAF Soil Care, land agents, agronomists and environmentalists.

Dates:

May 21-22 – open to all (class-based) – will cover theory intended for beginners in understanding basic soil information and soil survey techniques, or as a refresher course for those with some experience.

May 25-29 – limited places (field-based) - describing a range of soil profiles in the field (from exposed sections, purpose-dug trial pits or from the auger) following the Soil Survey Field Handbook. At least two days in the second week of the course will be spent in simple soil mapping exercises with an auger and exploring the position of soil types within the landscape.

June 1st – summary morning for those that attended the field course

As explained the class-based part of the course is open to all, however places remaining for the entire course will be allocated on a first come, first served basis. Please email Rebecca Upson at R.Upson@kew.org to book your place and for further course details.

Pool problems investigated

ALMOST a year after the Leisure Centre swimming pool reopened problems are still being experienced with the operation, construction and management.

New Director of Central Services Matt Bassford said there were potential issues with the way the pool was put together, "but we are in the process of trying to understand what those are and to then work out how to fix it."

Small areas of the pool have been identified where the fibreglass lining is beginning to come away from the tiles behind it. "Being honest, that is a concern in the longer term, but we don't really understand why it has happened," said Mr Bassford.

Advice had been taken from PWD and others who had assured there was no risk of anything catastrophic happening, but over time it could potentially cause a bigger problem, Mr Bassford told Penguin News this week.

The pool was reopened on June 16, 2014 after a year long closure for renovations and suffered many setbacks throughout. Leisure Centre renovations have cost £422,000 to date. The cost is to be examined by the Public Accounts Committee.

A fibreglass liner was installed over the tiled pool, but then had to be partially removed after pipe problems were detected beneath the pool.

Mr Bassford stressed that water safety was a priority and was unequivocal that the quality of water and level of chlorine was correct. He said this was monitored along recognised guidelines and the pool was closed if either the PH or chlorine levels were not correct.

Likewise he said safety was paramount with life guards who worked the correct shifts to ensure they were alert and ready to deal with any situation at all times.

"Paradoxically the irregular temperature of showers is partly due to safety as well," said Mr Bassford.

The temperature has to be increased to ensure there are no water borne diseases growing in the system, but sometimes runs very hot and at other times would run cold. "To be honest we don't know exactly how to make sure the water is an ambient temperature all the time."

Mr Bassford inherited the ongoing swimming pool saga from the previous director Simon Fletcher who was overseer of the renovations.

"There are some strange design features of the way the pool and the facilities were renovated that make it sometimes hard to fix... and because all the folk who were involved are no longer around, it takes a bit of detective work to figure what the symptoms are and how to fix it," he said.

"It's maybe OK to make mistakes once, but to do them again and again would be bad."

Other faults within the facility are wooden skirting boards which PWD are to replace with plastic ones and the showers are to be resurfaced with mermaid board in the new year. The current fibreglass cover is not considered suitable and cleaning has been really difficult

"Leisure Centre manager Abbie Heathman's staff spend half their time on duty cleaning the showers, the boarding will be easier to clean and be more durable than what we have at the moment," Mr Bassford explained.

The mystery smell at the shallow end of the pool continues to be investigated.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

NOT having a very efficient short term memory does have its advantages in this job. Not so much when it comes to being an editor or a manager, but specifically in the role of columnist.

When part of your job comprises an obligation to provoke debate (oh OK, be a bit irritating) the ability to entirely dismiss from your mind what you've written in an editorial by the time publication day comes around, can be immensely helpful. In particular when you find yourself at a social occasion forced to hover next to the very person you may have described in the column in less than complimentary terms. There have been the odd occasions when I've blithely chatted away to individuals all the while wondering why they were gripping their wine glass with such sweaty enthusiasm - only to remember later I'd published 350 words that day telling them precisely how to do their job.

As it happens most of the Falklands establishment - those often the brunt of criticism - are pretty tolerant. Even when they'd probably far prefer to be using my head as a football, more often than not they'll put the issue to one side and chat away regardless.

Not everyone has the same philosophy of course; oddly enough it is more often the man in the street (as it were) who will inform me 'you can't say that', or become perfectly apoplectic when I dare to even mildly question his or her populist opinion.

A funny old assessment really when you bear in mind that the editorial is meant to entertain - and let's face it - a reluctance to debate the status quo, or just being nice all the time isn't the slightest bit diverting. (Just take my Dad for example - someone once criticised Margaret Thatcher to him during a debate, and he threatened to throw a peat bucket at them - that was really entertaining).

And on the subject of bothersome behaviour, past weeks of being a bit annoying certainly added to the Deputy Editor's work on Wednesday. Barely had she returned - muddy boot clad - from an appointment with the Roads Engineer on the MPA road on Wednesday, her ears ringing with phrases like 'petrologic' and 'capping material' (as opposed to her description of it as 'crappy' material) then off she scampered to an audience with the Director of Central Services, on the subject of the ongoing problems the Leisure Centre faces. I think it's safe to say that both articles are informative and educational - two more Penguin News obligations - and both resulting from the Deputy Editor being an absolute pain in the butt. (Maybe that came out wrong?)

Days of brown peaty water

WATER problems experienced by householders over the weekend arose from high demand from the temporary dock and from FIPASS confirmed Director of Public Works Manfred Keenleyside.

Water in households was very dark in colour, contained sediment and in some cases they had no water at all.

Mr Keenleyside explained that the demand from the structures caused a requirement to prioritise supply to the low level system which feeds those from the tanks at Murray Heights.

In turn this led to the, "level in the Sapper Hill tanks lowering to a point where water going into those tanks stirred up sediment in the bottom of the tanks which then carried through into the mains."

He said the sediment was sterile, "but obviously not what normally comes out of your tap and in some cases there was a lot of it."

Mr Keenleyside said the town mains were gravity fed from the two different locations, "in order not to have too much pressure in the lower parts of Stanley, nor too little at the upper parts, and although some balancing between these can be done, both in terms of where the water is fed from and the amount of water being pumped to each storage site, when there is heavy demand on one or the other this basically has to be met by pumping most or all of the water to replenish the affected tanks."

Colin Summers and Norman Mitchell from the Public Works Department and the Water Section team worked all Saturday afternoon on identifying the problem and staff also worked to clear the water mains containing sediment over part of Sunday, he added.

The problem was solved by a combination of a request that the rate of draw-down to the docks be reduced, "and then by progressively flushing out the mains, together with operating the treatment works overnight on successive days to bring stored water levels back up."

The level of demand can normally be met by operating the treatment plant over a 16 to 18 hour daily period and the volume of the storage tanks is normally sufficient to adequately buffer high demand periods.

There has been discussion with the dock operators since and it is not expected that there will be a repeat of this level of demand, assured Mr Keenleyside.

Swimming pool problems ongoing

"The problem is that it is not constant," Miss Heathman explained.

Occasionally a strong drain-like smell is noticeable and on these occasions PWD is contacted to see if the source can be identified. "It's a process of elimination and PWD is actively seeking the source," she said.

Mr Bassford agreed that it was a case of looking at the drawings and trying to eliminate things. "We cannot just rip things up to find the problem," he said, adding that it would be easier to solve if it was a constant.

Adding to the ongoing problems an unfortunate accident occurred on Friday when a member of staff happened to put their foot through the ceiling while upstairs in the storeroom. This meant that the men's changing room had to be closed.

While it was inconvenient it was considered better to make the ladies changing unisex and keep the pool open.

Users were informed through signage in the building, via the mailing list and regular users were personally telephoned said Miss Heathman, "however some chose not to use the pool with the unisex arrangements in place."

Improvements have been carried out in the changing room while repairs were carried out; the ceiling repainted and a window replaced.

Not all gloom

But it is not all doom and gloom as the new cardio equipment has arrived to replace the aging equipment currently in use in the old squash court.

"We are waiting for bids from potential contractors on how we can increase the floor space by putting a mezzanine floor in to give more floor space to house the cardiac equipment," said Mr Bassford, while Miss Heathman said advice was being sought from the PTIs at Hillside regarding how to make best use of the space and equipment.

The Saturday roller discos are proving popular and recently introduced circuits on Friday are hugely successful, said Miss Heathman.

Bars, clubs and shops OK to sell alcohol

THE Summary Court had a long day on Tuesday when 44 on and off-licences were presented for annual renewal.

All were approved, however Narrows Bar licensee Claudia Rosas was told that she had to be more careful how part of the business was run and that she, "must be seen to be complying with the licensing laws."

The comments were made after Sgt Gary Webb relayed a report from a patrol officer who had entered the Narrows Bar at 12.15am on May 10. He said there had been 9-10 adults near the bar and another 5-6 behind the bar. They appeared to be drinking and there was loud music playing. Sgt Webb told the Justices of the Peace (JP). Ms Rosas had said they were workers and she had served them drinks, he said. Sgt Webb said it was not the first time there had been reason to enter the bar and reminded the court that similar comments had been made at the Christmas licensing round.

He said he was not suggesting the licence be revoked as Ms Rosas run a good business, however having to ask what drinking up times were, needed to be noted on file as there was a limited amount of times such actions could be permitted.

Representing Ms Rosas, Simon Crowder noted that the information provided by Sgt Webb was not a formal objection as these had to be lodged in writing prior to April 30. He said that all those in the bar had been staff apart from three who lived in the adjoining flat and were waiting for a taxi to go to another venue. He said the drinks on the bar were dead, that is collected from the function room and outside.

Mr Crowder said it had not been noted by police that the floor was wet from being cleaned and the doors were open to allow it to dry – nobody had been served and the staff was drinking soft drinks, he said, adding that Ms Rosas denied making comment about having served drinks after hours.

JP Keith Biles noted that 13 was a lot of staff to be cleaning up and told Ms Rosas that having that amount of people around after hours could be misconstrued. "Take care how that aspect of the business is managed," he said.

Loud music at the Globe Tavern was the only other ongoing issue with a public house to be commented on, with Sgt Webb saying that the comments had been passed to him by a Fitzroy Road resident to be noted at the licensing round. He said it was more of an issue for the police to discuss with the licensee and he would do that.

JP Keith Biles said the comments would be noted on file.

Airport emerges from rock and peat bog

30th Anniversary of opening of Mount Pleasant Airport

"THE Falklands airport emerges from rock and peatbog," said The Times in its May 11 edition, the day before the official opening of Mount Pleasant Airport in 1985, thirty years ago this week.

Two years before that Defence Minister of the time Michael Heseltine announced in the House of Commons on June 27 that the decision had been taken to construct the airport at Mount Pleasant instead of Stanley, because even allowing for the cost of the road between the airport and Stanley it would be less expensive. The original decision to build an airport in the Falklands had been made in June 1982 in the aftermath of the Falklands war.

The contract was for works to the value of £190 million, not including the cost of the road which comprised a separate MoD contract for communications and navigational aids, making a total of £215 million.

Details of the new British Government Defence budget released on July 6, 1983 announced an allowance of £624 million for the defence of the Falklands and territories. This was in addition to the price of the new airport and represented four per cent of Britain's projected total defence budget.

Penguin News reported in March 1984 that work by PSA Ltd (design and planning) and LMA Ltd (the building) was progressing well and there was confidence that a basic runway would be operational by April 1985.

In November 1984 Penguin News reporter Rob McBride travelled to MPA and was told by PSA's Regional Director that progress was good considering the only materials available to them locally was stone and water; everything else had to be shipped from the UK.

By this stage a quarter of a million tons of supplies had been hauled across the decks of the Merchant Providence berthed at East Cove and the new jetty head.

RAF aircraft at Mount Pleasant

The speed at which the runway and complex grew was partly due to a shift system that kept LMA workers busy around the clock. An ordinary labourer could expect to take home a tax-free £10,000 in his pay packet at the end of a year with £155 bonus on top of that.

On May 12 HRH Prince Andrew who was already in the Islands as a Royal Naval Officer performed the opening ceremony unveiling a commemorative plaque in the main hangar and received a relief map of the Islands crafted in silver.

In his speech the Prince described the 2,590 metre runway and hangar as, "imaginative and meticulous planned with the heroic efforts of dedication of a British workforce."

The sense of security that the Mount Pleasant complex and runway offered then to the people of the Falklands has not diminished today, in its valuable link with the UK and its representation of a huge commitment from the British Government.

Added to that the complex and its occupants contribute in various ways to the economy of the Islands, along with the complex offering much appreciated leisure opportunities including access to the cinema and bowling alley.

Chile support for Argentina

THE Chilean government has renewed its 'explicit' support for Argentina's sovereignty claims over the Falklands Islands, according to Daniel Filmus, the Argentine official head of the special department for affairs relative to the Falklands, who is currently in a political tour in Santiago.

Both the Chilean foreign minister Hernando Muñoz, as the presidents from the Lower House and the Senate have openly expressed their historic solidarity position towards Argentina on the issue he claimed on Monday after visiting Congress together with Argentine ambassador in Santiago, Ginés González García.

Isobel Deep drilling

FALKLAND Oil and Gas and Rockhopper resumed normal drilling work on Monday at the Isobel Deep well in the Falkland Islands following the repair of a blow-out preventer control system, the companies said.

The oil explorers had suspended work on the first well of their 2015 drilling campaign on April 24 after the technical issue.

While the problem was being fixed, the drilling rig undertook work at the adjacent Chatham and Jayne East wells, the two companies said on Tuesday. Both wells were suspended when the rig was ready to return to the Isobel Deep location.

"The Isobel Deep well is expected to take approximately 15 days to complete," said a spokesperson for Falkland Oil and Gas.

SG albatross decline

EARLY indications are that South Georgia's outlying wandering albatross populations are down approximately 15 per cent from a survey in 2004. That survey showed a 30 per cent decline since the survey in 1984.

A major component of the population decline is likely to be due to mortality associated with fisheries. Although in the last decade, no wandering albatross have been killed by vessels licensed to fish in South Georgia waters, the wide foraging range of this species means it is vulnerable to fisheries operating elsewhere in the South Atlantic and beyond.

Shares up

PREMIER Oil produced less oil and gas in the first quarter of the year, but its output of 60,200 barrels of oil equivalent per day (boepd) was above guidance, sending its shares higher on Wednesday.

Meet our Island Games 2015 teams

MLA Gavin Short shares a glimpse into his working week

ELECTIONS are funny old things and the UK General Election certainly lived up to that. I am not sure if anyone, including the winning political party, was quite expecting the result that came in.

From what I have seen of the cabinet and junior ministers appointments it will be very much business as usual for us here in the Falklands. It really mattered not which party was elected as all the main blocks were steadfast in their insistence that the Falklands and indeed all other Overseas Territories, have the right to self-determination.

I was rather amused by a very forlorn headline in the Argentine press after the election saying that the UK wouldn't be changing their policies on the Falklands. What planet do they live on one wonders?

We currently have three members away at the moment and for the next month or two it will be a case of musical chairs with some members heading away and others returning.

A long overdue meeting of the TAC will be taking place this week and I expect that weight restriction will be one item on the agenda. Given the way the roads were built it is important that these are adhered to as one or two transgressions can ruin the roads for all users. Exemptions can be applied for so if you do have any concerns or queries please call our roads engineer on 27387.

The water section, like most of our utilities like to remain unnoticed by the public as that means that everything is functioning as it should be but this week has been a pretty torrid time for them with the East end of town suffering from water problems which were due to a couple of problems at the same time. We apologise for the extreme inconvenience that has been caused but we are doing our level best to restore, "normal service."

After the heat and light regarding the MPA road last week, efforts have continued to "tame it" and I would like to thank PN for reiterating that our plant operators are doing what they are told with what they are given.

LR Teslyn Barkman, Tim Drew and Caroline Drew

HUSBAND and wife team Tim Drew (39) Caroline Drew (30) plus Islander Teslyn Barkman (27) are the athletes to represent the Falkland Islands at the Nat-West Island Games in Jersey next month.

Experienced marathon runner Tim won the Falklands standard Chartered Bank marathon in both 2014 and 2015 and is the current track record holder. Tim will run in the half marathon in Jersey and also hopes to run in the 10,000m track event.

He told Penguin News he hopes to achieve 1 hour 10 minutes in the half marathon (perhaps quicker) but the 10,000 metres is something of an unknown quantity to him.

He said training had gone well so far. "High mileage, a mix of training sessions, I appear to be getting fitter; at least that is what I keep telling myself."

Asked what got him into running he said: "not sure, as I have always loved it - maybe watching the London marathon when I was young - back when Britain was good at distance running."

Caroline will also compete in the half marathon. She has been running for two years and ran her first half marathon in 2014 in the Falklands in 1 hour 46 minutes and in 2015 she finished in 1 hour 36 minutes. Caroline said she was happy with her training for the Games apart from a few twinges. She said her biggest achievement in athletics, "has been setting up a successful Junior Running Club and ladies C25K [supporting 19 ladies to run 5k in 12 weeks]."

Asked what inspired her to distance running she said it was the Falklands and her husband Tim: "Whenever I feel down about my training I always think of his dedication and support and that keeps me going. Support of your loved ones will keep you inspired," adding "My C25K ladies have inspired me throughout my Island Games Training and will always play a major part in my running career."

Caroline said she felt, "so privileged to be representing your wonderful Islands."

Teslyn was the women's 2010 and 2014 half marathon and marathon winner in the Falklands and also won the 2014 Stanley Triathlon.

She will run the half marathon in Jersey and is aiming for the 1 hour 30 minutes mark.

"I've only ever run half marathons cross country and against the Falklands weather so I'm hoping to shave time off my fastest recorded time [1:35:25]"

She said training was going well, "with a big focus on strength and flexibility. I suffered a hip strain injury while training for the 2015 marathon, which had me out of long-distance action for a few months but the muscle memory doesn't seem to have faded much and I'm enjoying training for a fast half time instead of the endless miles of marathon training."

She is a bit concerned about adapting from Falklands winter cold to Jersey in mid summer.

Teslyn has been running since she was about 13 years old and years later, "in South Africa I went running most days to explore the game reserve I was living on. It was a great way to shift pounds accrued through the good life of biltong and beer too. When I returned home I kept running to keep fit and used the time to think through the day and listen to music. I found myself running further and faster and eventually set myself a goal to run my first half marathon in 2010.

Quarries, material quality and road maintenance

DID you know that the March Ridge quarry material is hard to get out and then is so susceptible to frost that it breaks down to mush in a relatively short time?

This was just one of many facts shared by Roads Engineer Simon Catton and Ponies Pass Quarry Manager Marc Short (pictured above) when Penguin News went out for a look this week at how material was sourced and applied to the road.

March Ridge and the MPA Quarry are often heralded as providing top quality material, however Mr Catton assured that the latter is also a poor road building material. Initially hard to extract and crush once exposed to the elements for any length of time it becomes weak and crumbles. "If you doubt me go and check out the little rocks which have been at the side of the quarry for some time, you can grind them to dust under your foot," he said.

Meanwhile material from the Frying Pan quarry was used on Cameron Hill last year and would not compact as no fines were produced. This meant it rutted dangerously and was therefore removed.

Capping of the Mount Pleasant road was recently underway after a full season of work with a depleted gang in other areas on both East and West Falklands and happened to coincide with a particularly wet spell of weather.

The initial capping material applied in the Bluff Cove area was from the sides of extensive stockpiles which had become wet and was applied to a wet road leading to a poor capping material, but this will be rectified once the material has time to dry out. The stockpiles had been processed and accumulated over the season ready for the job and Mr Catton explained that inevitably larger rocks slip down in the pile which if not mixed well again, gives a poor quality material.

He vigorously disputed it was "crappy material" as suggested in last week's editorial column, but conceded that it had been applied to a sloppy road. "It had been raining for days," he said.

At the Port Harriet quarry there is some 12,000 tonnes of material stockpiled with further blasting and crushing ongoing. There would have been more, but the quarry was having to shut down so staff could work on road maintenance elsewhere, said Mr Catton.

The work is taking place at the lower level of the quarry where the material with the least clay is sourced for winter road works.

Petrologic and rock mechanical tests show that the Port Harriet material can reach a type one grade which is a similar specification to that used on the original Goose Green road - or as near as is achievable with the current crushing plant, said Mr Short.

That the work on the MPA road is late starting and weather-wise not the best time of year to be carried out was unavoidable, said Mr Catton, noting that staff problems had been getting worse each year for the past four to five years.

"Plant operators like building roads, but are less keen on the maintenance."

When road building the gangs are all found, the pay is good and they are putting money in their pockets even if they are away from home on occasion.

Current wages are similar to a low grade office worker with no bonus or incentive programmes unlike the private sector.

"You can slap them on the back, be as motivational and morale boosting as you like, but at the end of the day it is not as effective as cash in the pocket," said Mr Short.

15 years ago Highways was the sought after department to work for. Nothing has changed within its structure, but unfortunately that includes the wages, was his concerned observation.

Driving down the road past the notoriously pot holed section at the Crash Barriers, Mr Catton explained the need for a good shape on the road to provide drainage - the ditches also need to be kept clear as when water builds up it means soft/wet patches will form in the road base. "But then I get slammed for wasting resources when we dig the ditches out," he said, noting that they do not need to be excessively deep, but do need to carry the water away.

At the Barriers work has been restricted because of the adjacent minefields, but once they are cleared the barriers could be removed, culverts replaced and the road realigned, capped and shaped. "Until then we just have to keep on fire-fighting."

Referring to MLA Gavin Short's comment that plans to asphalt two kilometres from Sapper Hill to Brownings Farm were in the pipe-line, both men agreed that with current resources that would be the maximum achievable. Investment in additional plant and staff would be needed to extend the programme.

Work will be ongoing on the MPA road throughout the winter months as weather permits and drivers will have noticed additional signage in work areas. There have been two near misses with drivers failing to reduce speed and be aware of workers recently and Mr Catton has real concerns that the road will have to be closed for work to be carried out if this continues. The Police would not apprehend reported drivers noting a lack of basic signage, however significant investment has been made to rectify the problem, "so we do ask for drivers to be careful," he said. However the road would be closed if necessary as the safety of the road gang was paramount, he concluded.

How old is your Electrical Wiring?
When was your Electrical Protection and Electrical Earthing installed or upgraded?

If you have answered "Don't Know" or "over 10 years" then it is advised to get your electrics on your property checked.

A Domestic Electricity Improvement Grant is available from FIDC.

This Grant is designed to help anyone living in a domestic property anywhere across the whole of the Falkland Islands have an electrically safe home.

The Grant will cover an electrical safety check, 75% (up to a maximum of £750) of the cost of any materials (wire, sockets, plugs and fusebox) and 25% (up to a maximum of £200) for the cost of labour from a competent person to get your property up to the current Electrical Regulations.

If you would like to learn more about the assistance we can offer under this scheme and request an application form please call 27211, email develop@fidc.co.fk or visit www.fidc.co.fk/grants/electrical

Is your home cold and draughty?
Do you feel like you are heating your home but it never feels warm?

A property correctly insulated and draught proofed can reduce your annual heating bill by around 20% compared to a non-insulated property.

A Household Insulation Grant is available from FIDC.

This Grant is designed to help owners of private domestic properties across the whole of the Falkland Islands to save energy and money by having a more thermally efficient home.

The Grant will cover 50% (up to a maximum of £500) of the cost of insulation and draught proofing materials. Approved materials must be used. Installation can be carried out by you or by a contractor but the Grant does not cover any labour costs.

If you would like to learn more about the assistance we can offer under this scheme and request an application form please call 27211, email develop@fidc.co.fk or visit www.fidc.co.fk/grants/household

PRESS RELEASE
FALKLAND ISLANDS QUEEN'S CERTIFICATE AND BADGE OF HONOUR

Nominations are requested for the 2015 Queen's Certificate and Badge of Honour.

The purpose of such awards is to allow the Falkland Islands Government to recognise persons having connections with the Falkland Islands who have, by their loyalty and meritorious conduct, provided services of exceptional benefit to the people of the Falkland Islands, outside of their normal employment.

The Queen's Certificate and its accompanying Badge of Honour will be awarded by HE the Governor acting on the advice of Executive Council on or around Falkland Day (14 August). The number of recipients will normally be restricted to three a year and the names of Queen's Certificate recipients will be published in the Official Gazette.

It is open for anybody to nominate a person for the Honour and nomination forms are available on request from Gilbert House. Nominations should be submitted before Tuesday 16 June to the Clerk to Executive Council at Gilbert House Tel 27451 or by email to assembly@sec.gov.fk allowing time for consideration.

The Queen's Certificate carries with it the right to wear a Badge to be worn on the breast on official occasions when full-sized medals are worn. This award does not replace, but is in addition to the award of other Honours such as the OBE and MBE, as part of the Diplomatic and Overseas List. These are awarded by HM The Queen on the recommendation of the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs.

Agricultural Advisory Committee

A vacancy exists for a member of the farming community to represent farmers for a period of two years on the Agricultural Advisory Committee. This is a key role in ensuring that the views of farmers continue to be represented on the committee and in the business of the committee.

The membership of the Agricultural Advisory Committee includes two representatives for the farming community. One of these representatives is to represent the views of the Rural Business Association and the RBA will run the process to select their representative. The vacancy being advertised here is seeking expressions of interest for a second representative of the farming community.

Terms of reference and details about the nature and frequency of meetings can be obtained by contacting Katrina Stephenson, the secretary, in the first instance on telephone 27355 or email kstephenson@doa.gov.fk.

Expressions of interest for the position should be with Katrina by Friday 29th May.

Folly of Cape Pembroke road

IT was with dismay I saw the current folly of Falklands design on page 4 Penguin News Friday May 1, 2015. 'Inches closer to construction' when we already have yards of hard track in place?

Saying the new road will provide access for future demining of the two mine fields on the coast does not hold substance. The statement almost implies roads will be constructed to mine fields in remote inaccessible places; like the soft peat around Mount Longdon?

Did the perpetrators of the north route not know there was already over 700 yards of substantial hard track on the south side that only requires a capping. It makes more sense to continue from the end along the old track to the lighthouse; doing so would be the cheapest option and a boon to those tending horses grazing in Christina Bay or the mushroom pickers. The substantial track already laid only requires capping (not with clay please) and rolling to give a good surface. To begin another along the north coast is ludicrous when it would become obsolete should FIGAS need to extend the runway to the east.

The proposed route first crosses soft peaty ground, then over clay past the ponds, onto rock and clay before the long stretch of barren dry peat, to arrive at the soft swampy flat which would require tons of material. Time for reappraisal - abandon the planned track, follow the popular track. Or, we find ourselves on the path of wasteful extravagance by not completing a job started. Seemingly content to start afresh from another point, will we ever get it right?

While still on the topical subject of roads, I can't resist being part of the MPA road debate; the longest saga in the Islands. The road of notoriety; recently the retiring CBFSAI Air Commodore Russ Le Forte, after giving many accolades ended by saying he would not miss the MPA road.

Granted the operators generally do a good job with the machinery but their work is undermined by the junk material supplied for capping.

In late April the sub contractors abandoned capping work as the heavy rain reduced the clay muck they were spreading to slurry soon after being tipped. I have said many times through your pages that the mud stone from Port Harriet quarry is a waste of resources. For the hours spent on wages, fuel and machinery wear, the improvement is only short term if it is done in dry weather. Let's face the facts, the whole scenario of capping with mudstone is false economy.

Time after time effort is wasted doing a quick fix. Why don't we learn by our mistakes and cap with a more durable material like black tillite.

The MPA/Darwin road was the best in the Falklands until PWD used a scarifier on it and disturbed the base then capped with quartzite and in one place, mud stone? When this road was under construction by PSAI the South African foreman explained to me the virtues of building and capping with black tillite from the Canada Ronda quarry. This rock breaks down by the road roller and continues to do so in weathering, particularly by frost action. In the breakdown the finer particles infiltrate down rendering the surface more dense. The continued percolation adds strength to the road.

Some good examples of the superior quality of black tillite are apparent on the Mount Kent to Port Louis road where problem places were repaired with tillite. I see the MPA contractors make much use of this material from the quarry at the junction into the Darwin road. They must recognise the quality this stone has.

The moral is to come back to earth: finish the job started on the road to lighthouse and no more shortcuts repairing MPA road surface. Use the best material available.

Islanders and WWII

THE Islanders Contribution to The Second World War.

Whilst attending the ceremony and the lighting of the Beacon at Surf Bay to commemorate the Victory of Europe day, which was great to see so well attended, I thought it would be of interest to at least those readers, who may not have been aware of the Falklands efforts, towards the final victory in the Second World War to quote the following facts.

Following the Governor's Proclamation after the outbreak of the War a grand total of 275 men were conscripted into the Falkland Islands Defence Force.

The Government and people of the Islands made gifts totalling £71,656 to the UK as a war contribution. Ten Spitfires were bought with £50,000 of this total and these aircraft flew into action bearing the name Falkland Islands.

Over one hundred and fifty men and women left the Islands during the war years to serve overseas. Given the eligibility of these volunteers together with the size of the population, some 2,500 at that time, this must surely have been an extremely high percentage.

Sadly though 24 of this number did not return home having paid the ultimate sacrifice.

Shaun and Eugene are poker top guns

EXPERIENCED poker player Shaun Jaffray was at the top of his game on Saturday night claiming first place in the Gun Club's Texas Holdem night held in the Town Hall refreshment room.

Following a good seven hours of playing, Shaun and Eugene Hurley faced each other in the final but ultimately decided to split the prize, taking £450 each.

Flying the flag for the women players (one of only four in a room of 40 male players) Michelle King had a great night claiming third place and Neil Clifton in fourth place generously gave his winnings back to the Gun Club.

With eight paid places Jimmy Curtis, John Didlick, George Elbakidze and Lisa Watson also went home with some cash in their pockets, but more importantly and like all of the other competitors, having enjoyed a very professionally organised evening of poker.

The Gun Club's Steve Dent, said the total takings were £1,850 with the Gun Club taking a straight £580 to cover hall hire and as a fund-raiser. He asked that their thanks be passed to everyone who came along, "to make it such a fantastic night."

The Gun Club is planning a further session in early to mid June.

Paid places:
 1st: £425 Shaun Jaffray
 2nd: £425 Eugene Hurley
 3rd: £220 Michelle King

4th: £60 Neil Clifton (Donated to the Gun Club)
 5th: £50 Jimmy Curtis
 6th: £40 John Didlick
 7th: £30 George Elbakidze
 8th: £20 Lisa Watson

Thousands raised for Nepal fund in Gurkha curry night

THE Gurkha curry night in aid of the Nepal Appeal Fund raised an impressive £2,576.41

Norman Besley Clarke told Penguin News he was amazed by the degree of support and approximately 351 meals were sold in two and a quarter hours on Saturday night

Included in money raised by the sale of the curries were additional donations that added up to £488.96

Mr Besley-Clarke said none of it would have been possible without the assistance of Cpl Dave Wright and SAC Dan Webster of Hillside Camp who allowed the use of their facilities, in the preparation of the curry.

The meals were created by a Gurkha Team led by Sgt Subas Tembej, the chef Munoz Gurung and his helpers, Sandeep and Ramesh.

For the donation of ingredients he thanked Seafish Chandlery, FIC Ltd, FIMCo, Stanley Growers, Falkland Farmers and June Besley-Clark.

The Gurkha team that created the hundreds of curries to raise money for the Nepal Appeal with FIC PR Manager Eva Jaffray who presented an additional cheque of £1000 on behalf of the company and Canon David Roper and the Church Council for the use of the Parish Hall

The next fund-raiser will be held at Bitter Sweet and will include music and potentially some dancers.

A cheque for £1,000 was also donated by the FIC Ltd PR Manager Eva Jaffray said: "The Falkland Islands Company Limited were very pleased to donate £1,000 towards this very worthy cause, given the Islands connection with the Gurkhas and the sacrifices they made for us. We hope that this donation goes somehow toward establishing normality in the lives of the people of Nepal". The balance of the fund at Standard Chartered Bank now stands at £12,772.82

The new JPs were sworn in at Government House on Friday after the swearing in of Mr Bryan.

HE the Governor Colin Roberts said he was pleased to have such a distinguished lawyer and judge to take on the role of Chief Justice of the Falkland Islands. He said: "This will help ensure the Courts in the Falkland Islands are ready to deal with challenges in the future development of the country."

Weather for April

APRIL was colder than the long-term average in terms of maximum temperatures, whereas minimum temperatures were generally average for this time of year.

There were 37.5 hours less sunshine compared to the average, so it can be assumed that the month was cloudier and duller than usual, and also wetter as the total rainfall was about a third greater than the average monthly total.

The mean winds were slightly higher for the time of year, but there were an average number of gale days, and slightly more days with gusts over 33 KT.

Temperature

The mean maximum temperature was 9.1 Celsius, which is slightly lower than the long-term April average of 10.0 Celsius. The highest maximum temperature was 14.8 Celsius on the 11th, while the lowest maximum was 5.3 on the 20th.

The mean minimum temperature was 3.9 Celsius, which is ever so slightly higher than the long-term April average of 3.8 Celsius.

The lowest minimum was -0.9 on the 24th and the highest minimum temperature was 9.5 Celsius on the 23rd.

King Edward VII Memorial Hospital celebrating 100 years of service

On January 16, 1911 a Public Meeting was held in the Assembly Rooms when it was unanimously voted that a Memorial to the late King Edward VII should be erected in the Colony

After various suggestions the following resolution was carried:

"That a public subscription be raised to erect as a memorial to His Late Most Gracious Majesty King Edward VII, a building in connection with the Victoria Cottage Home for both medical and surgical use and to equip the same with the necessary furniture and appliances required in such a building."

It was further agreed that an appropriate 'tablet' be placed somewhere in the building showing the purpose for which it was erected and that if possible a suitable bust of King Edward VII be placed in the building.

A suggestion that all the names of subscribers be placed on record was agreed and a representative committee was appointed to carry out the scheme on the above lines.

It was thought that as His Majesty had very much at heart at all times the relief of human suffering, the hospital would be a fitting Memorial. That the proposal met with approval from the 'Home Government' is verified in a despatch received from the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies (L Harcourt), by His Excellency the Governor Al-lardyce.

In 1912 the ground for the memorial hospital was being prepared at the chosen site behind the Government Offices. The FI Magazine and Church Paper of January, noted that the paddock had been given most generously by Mr George Bonner. The erection of the building was to take place as soon as the necessary materials arrived.

The following month (February 1912) the news that the Governor on behalf of the Government had made a generous donation to the King Edward's Memorial Fund was afforded some excitement.

The offer was that if the Committee decided on a plan for the hospital, "without delay," the Government would make a grant of £250.

This funding would be devoted to the payment of carpenters, passage money and wages, likewise to supply gratis the labour for the foundations, to build the chimneys, to lay on water from the Government Paddock, to lay down the hot water system and to make a road to the hospital from the Government Offices.

H W Townson, the Secretary of the Committee said. "It will be seen that the Governor's offer is a great help in every way to the undertaking, for now the Committee will be able to use the money which would of necessity have been spent on the erection of the building for other purposes, to the advantage of the Hospital and public alike."

It was further decided to heat the wards with a hot water system and to make provision to lay on hot and cold water throughout the building.

By May 1912, more than £1,230 had been subscribed by residents and the frame of the building erected.

But by August 1912 funds had been exhausted and a meeting of subscribers was held in the Parish Room on the 29th, but it was described as being poorly attended with only 27 present including his Excellency the Governor.

Chairman of the Committee

Rev Dean Seymour, explained that the real object of the meeting was to render an account of the Committee's stewardship, to confess that the available funds were exhausted and to ask for suggestions as to the best means of obtaining further subscriptions.

It was well known that the hospital was well on the way to completion as far as the actual building was concerned, but that there remained much to do in the way of drainage, heating, lighting and furniture. He estimated that a further £800 would be needed to complete the scheme.

A memorandum drawn up by the Governor which listed items needed to finish the project also stated that although it would probably be found advisable to restrict the accommodation in the hospital to the lowest possible, he did not see how it could be handed over as a worthy memorial to the late King without an expenditure of at least £600.

The Governor is reported to have spoken most enthusiastically of what had been done, and optimistically of what remained to be accomplished. He thought the Chairman had overestimated how much would be needed to complete the work and prophesied that £500 would prove ample.

He was of the opinion that when people saw and realised what had already been done and what an excellent prospect there was of having a well-equipped hospital in Stanley complete with a maternity ward, there would be little or no difficulty in raising the necessary funds. "Some money could undoubtedly be collected in the Colony, and there were those living in England who owed much to the Falklands and it was unthinkable they would not gladly come forward and help on the good work," he said.

It was agreed that subscription lists be sent out again and that collection boxes be placed in prominent places so those not able to give large sums could give amounts they could afford.

The Acting Treasurer Mr Girling said that there had been criticism of the committee on the grounds that they had embarked upon a too ambitious scheme and they would have been better to have consulted the wishes of the subscribers had they been content with a more modest building which could have been completed with available funds. He confessed to agreeing with that criticism.

Governor Allardyce however thought the committee were, "unnecessarily eating humble pie," and moved a vote of confidence in them.

"If the hospital was somewhat larger than originally intended, they knew that the Colony was growing in importance," he said.

One benefactor who signed himself 'A Well Wisher' said he was willing to make a contribution of £50 if nine others would also contribute the same amount by the end of February.

It was estimated that the running costs of amalgamating the Victoria Cottage and the new hospital would cost the Government no more than an additional £150 per annum.

While we do not have any exact record of what other misfortunes befell the organisation, it is known that among the first patients and prior to the completion of the hospital, were casualties from the great sea battle off the Falklands on December 8, 1914.

Staff-Surgeon Wernet of the Canopus received 'an urgent order from the Senior Naval Officer to provide additional accommodation for the reception and treatment of wounded as a large number of casualties were expected from both sides'. With Governor Allardyce's consent, the School and the old hospital, the 'Victoria Cottage Nursing Home', were made available. Beds and bedding were borrowed from local residents, additional medical stores were sent from Canopus and 'arrangements were made with the local baker whose establishment was close to the 'School' hospital, for the loan of his kitchen and he would do all the cooking for the sick. Additional water and lighting arrangements were laid on and by evening we were ready to receive in all three hospitals 100 patients'.

The hospital was formally opened in May 1915.

There was apparently an interesting period between 1920 and 1935 when 248 appendectomies were carried out in the hospital which equated to 9.5 per cent of doctor at a well attended function and the activity was promptly discontinued.

Improvements to the hospital were made possible in 1932 by a financial gift from the somewhat eccentric John Hamilton, owner of Weddell Island which was spent on furniture and some small bits of equipment and in 1935 a new, and at that time up to date X-Ray apparatus was installed.

In December 1939 the hospital was full to capacity with wounded men from HMS Exeter, Ajax, and Achilles when they returned to Stanley after the Battle of the River Plate with the German battleship Graf Spee.

64 were killed in the battle, with 45 wounded. Exeter had suffered particularly and while she was being repaired her crew were billeted with families in Stanley. Camp residents also rallied to help, sending eggs, meat and other supplies to Stanley - including 96 packets of cigarettes for the sailors.

nos Aires who unselfishly gave up their jobs at a moments notice to come to our assistance." Capt Bell said that when they had arrived on December 16, battered and weary, nothing was too much trouble for the people. "Our sick and wounded were taken in and cared for, homes were thrown open to us and everybody, forgetting self, went out of their way to aid and welcome us."

In the 1952/3 Colonial Report it is noted that on May 23, 1953 the Churchill Wing of the KEM Hospital was opened by the Governor Sir Geoffrey Miles Clifford, KBE, CMG, ED.

"The new wing contains 17 beds and has a well equipped theatre, X-Ray department, out-patients department and dental surgery besides the usual hospital offices."

The staff at this time comprised the Senior Medical Officer, two medical officers, (one being on West Falkland) one Tuberculosis officer who was engaged on a tuberculosis survey of the Islands, one dentist in Stanley and one who toured the Camp. The nursing staff consisted of one matron, three nursing sisters, three nurses and a district nurse.

During 1953, 104 (120 in 1952) patients were admitted to hospital and 3,558 (4,394) visits were paid to the out-patients department; 42 (81) operations were performed (24 (19) major and 18 (62) minor); Six (11) patients died in hospital; 46 (55) babies were delivered with no maternal deaths in either year.

An air ambulance was available for medical cases from the Camp and should bad weather make the flying impossible, the MV Philomel, which was fitted to carry patients, was available.

The wards were named after personalities and ships in the Falklands-related battles of 1914 and 1939: Canopus, Good Hope, Sturdee, Craddock, Exeter, Ajax, Achilles and Harwood.

Just the day before the opening Terence McPhee being a little hasty in his arrival missed the glory of being the first arrival in the new wing. Five days later on May 27, the late Terence William Aldridge (fondly known as Woo) was born to Olive and Tom Aldridge of Hill Cove. There will be many children in the years to follow who will remember entering the maternity ward through the window to view a new addition to the family. Rules prevented children visiting the maternity ward so with a conveniently placed step, a family member would either hold a child aloft to grasp the window sill and meet the new baby at the open window, or if the weather was too cold there would be the fearful trip across the ward to the cot, all the while hoping that fearful creature referred to as matron would not make an appearance.

own flat and staff dining room within the hospital and the nurses lived in Admiralty Cottage across the road under the watchful eye of one of the nursing sisters; all visitors including boyfriends had to be out by 10pm.

Tuberculosis

Part of the old hospital was dedicated to a tuberculosis wing and there were several wooden chalets built outside. They were mounted on turntables so that during daytime hours patients could be placed to face the best weather.

The chalets were fitted with special glass to prevent the sun's rays from affecting the health of the patients. Gerald Check recalled that when they were removed later the late Abby Alazia who had also been a gardener at the hospital put one in his own garden and tried to grow tomatoes etc, but because of this special glass, nothing would grow.

On April 21, 1951, the senior medical officer wrote a report on tuberculosis in the Falkland Islands; addressed to the Governor.

"Examination of the register of deaths shows that there have been cases of tuberculosis in the Falkland Islands for the past 70 years at least. The annual death rate of almost two per thousand from tuberculosis is far above the average. Although there are, on an average, only four deaths a year, that constitutes a high percentage of the total deaths in the colony.

"Of the 39 TB deaths in the past 10 years, 35 were due to pulmonary tuberculosis, three to tuberculosis meningitis and one to TB peritonitis; the last four also suffered from pulmonary tuberculosis.

Excluding one case of tuberculosis meningitis in an infant aged seven months, the average age at death was 33."

While historically we have often viewed this era as being a bit of an epidemic of TB, it had in fact been prevalent from the mid 1800s.

In 1929 a report had emphasised the high incidence when there were 14 TB-cases in Stanley compared with only two in camp. The higher rate in Stanley was attributed to bad housing, overcrowding, malnutrition and the lack of drains and roads. The same report revealed that a considerable number of cows in Stanley were infected with tuberculosis. In addition the high incidence of bone, glandular and intestinal infection made it nearly certain that the main source of TB was Tuberculosis milk.

In 1932 there was also a report of an outbreak of tuberculous mastitis in cattle at Darwin.

In 1982 it served as a joint hospital for civilians and British military forces under very cramped conditions, but still maintaining a high degree of efficiency.

The fire

However just two years after the 1982 war on April 10, all of the original King Edward Memorial hospital was destroyed and extensive damage caused to the Churchill Wing.

Eight people died and two were seriously injured.

It was the most shocking experience since the war and the grief across the Islands was profound.

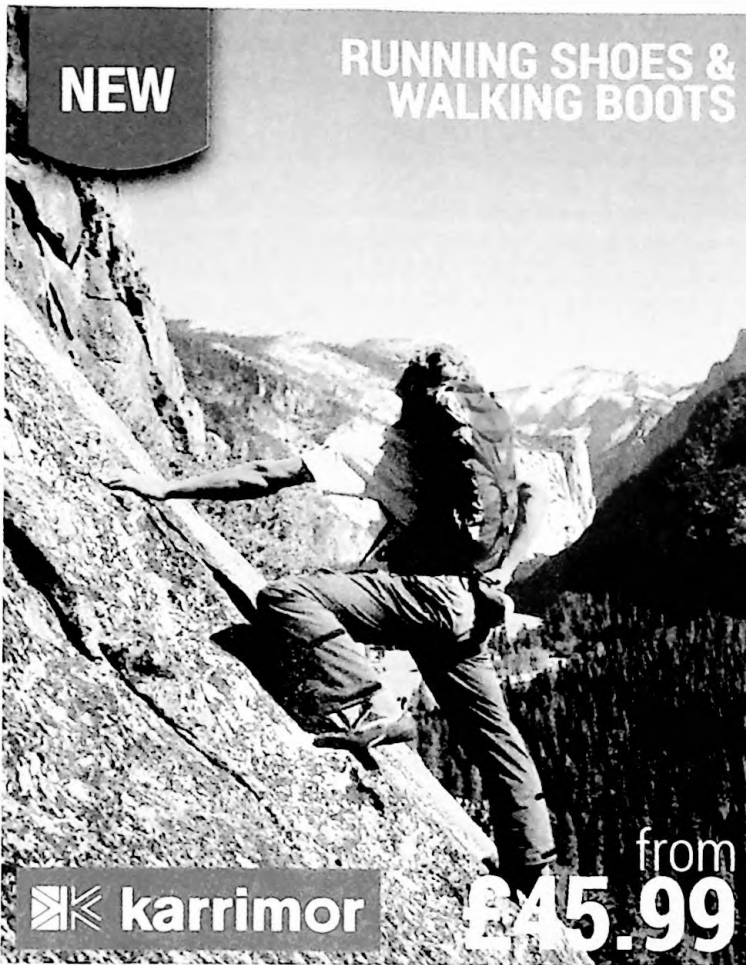

The King Edward Memorial and British Military Hospital were effectively one and the same, the two being linked together and sharing many facilities. The military section which consisted of a 23 bed pre-fab unit was fixed to the east end of the 1914 vintage main building just two months previously.

Stanley Growers 27 years on TIM Miller began as a Management Trainee with FIDC (original owners) 27 yrs ago at the end of April 1988 in the first season of production. Then Stanley Growers had just one greenhouse, some store sheds and a 20ft portacabin that was both packhouse, produce store and staff room; there were no trees, and today's fields were whitegrass and diddledee. Today there are 2 heated hydroponic greenhouses and some 46 polytunnels ranging up to 30ft x 250ft in size, approx 10 acres under cultivation and bulk coolstores. Since 2000 we have been using Waste Fuels and Oils for heating and today 6 waste oil burners provide the heating for both greenhouses.

Where next?

With Climate Change now biting they are planning another two very large field polytunnels in 2017 – to give control over the crop growing conditions. Weather extremes and general drying up of summers have meant it no longer makes economic sense to try and grow field maincrop potatoes to store. In the last eight years they have lost money each year and frequently crop no more and occasionally achieve less weight of potatoes than they have planted as seed. As such they are now moving the fields 'inside' and will concentrate in future on just 'earlies' and other higher value vegetables. It is now cheaper to import potatoes from UK than it is to produce them locally on a field scale.

Stanley Nurseries & Garden Centre (started as ManyBranch Nurseries & Garden Centre in 1985 at Port Howard) moved from its original portacabins up by the racecourse in 1992 to its current site by the main greenhouse. Both businesses are owned and operated by Tim and Jan and a dedicated hard working staff team. Some of its earlier projects included the creation of the flower beds and shrubs of Arch Green, KEMH Gardens, the tree planting around the married accommodation at MPA, around the Leisure Centre and others.

As well as the Stanley Growers 'Farm Shop' Stanley Garden centre has now in stock:

Hedge Cutters and Tree Pruners – Electric and Petrol - Strimmers- Cultivators- Chainsaws - All machinery comes with 12 month Warranty. Garden Sheds – Timber and Metal – Greenhouses 8ft x 6ft – Garden Polytunnels (new stock due in June) – Windnetting – Timber Fencing and Panels. Polyunnel chafe tape- repair tape – polytunnel covers.

LIME in 25kg and 3kg – NOW IS THE TIME TO LIME – most acidic Falklands garden soils need regular lime application. Lots of pet Aids and Accessories, Pet Bedding and Pet Foods and Treats. Flags - UK - Falklands - Chile - Wales –Scotland.

Opening hours: Saturday, Sunday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday 2.00 - 4.30pm Closed Monday and Thursdays

STANLEY RUNNING CLUB: Meets Sunday mornings 9.15am at the Leisure Centre car park. Any queries please call Rex on 53906.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147.225 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of East Falkland and repeats Mount Alice Repeater, which covers most of the south of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Mount Alice: Frequency: 147.825 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of West Falklands and links to Stanley via Pleasant Peak and Sapper Hill.

Mount Caroline: Frequency: 147.725 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north of West Falklands, including the cross sound ferry main operational area and links to Stanley via Mount Kent and Sapper Hill.

Marine Band: 156.800...Channel 16 (Stanley area) 2.182 MHz HF In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is however unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland

Fault Reporting - Users are encouraged to report any faults with the system:
Telephone: 28100, E-mail: inspector@police.gov.fk or fax: 28110

cluded that there was strong evidence that fire precautions in the building were wholly inadequate. The fire hoses fixed to the walls of the building were not connected to a water supply but, even if they had been, the water pressure through those hoses would have been inadequate to deal with the spread of the fire. The wiring throughout the building was described as woefully inadequate. Attention had previously been drawn to the poor state of the wiring in the hospital, and the context was that of an Island where at least four electrical fires every year are caused by defective wiring.

Lack of fire doors was perhaps the principal cause of the rapid spread of the fire, which was the reason why so many lives were lost. There had been reports in the 1970s of the inadequate fire precautions in the building and in 1982, the fire officer, the civilian doctor and the military authorities together demanded the urgent installation of fire doors in the hospital - a wooden building - as the only way of stopping a fire should one break out. By the date of the fire, those doors had not even been ordered. As a result, whatever the cause of the fire - perhaps inevitably, the report was unclear about the exact cause - it spread rapidly and uncontrollably, and the deaths that occurred were to a large extent inevitable. Had fire doors been in situ, the deaths might have been avoided.

Following another investigation in the UK self-confessed arsonist soldier Clive Shorters (in the hospital at the time of the fire) was acquitted at a trial for setting fire to the hospital. Previous convictions were kept from the jury. Clive Shorters was held in a mental hospital.

After a complete rebuild, the new modern wing incorporating the totally refurbished Churchill Wing was opened, the foundation plaque being unveiled in 1985 by HRH Prince Andrew, who was serving with the Royal Navy in the Falklands.

The dispensary in the 1950s was a simple set up

When completed the new hospital was opened in December 1987 by Timothy Eggar MP, Parliamentary Under Secretary for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs.

Sheltered Accommodation

The much needed social asset of sheltered accommodation was provided by funds donated by the late Sir Jack Hayward who donated £1million and the people of Guernsey who donated £100,000. Sir Jack Hayward and the Bailiff of Guernsey, Sir Charles and Lady Frossard were present at the opening ceremony in December 1987.

The hospital is now a modern facility with general practice, dentist and casualty service as well as a well equipped operating theatre.

The hospital does not have specialist consultants but hosts visits from a wide range of consultants from gynaecology to an oral surgeon and an optician on an annual basis.

A resident surgeon has a full team to carry out surgery while emergency cases which can not be dealt with in the Islands can be medically evacuated by aircraft at very short notice.

Less urgent cases requiring care not available at the hospital are sent to either the UK or Chile for treatment.

In recent years managing the Medical Treatment Overseas (MTO) and the associated logistics has become a large part of the administration of the hospital.

Fascinating facts ...about cats

Every year, nearly four million cats are eaten in Asia

The technical term for a cat's hairball is a "bezoar"

A group of cats is called a "clowder"

Cats make about 100 different sounds. Dogs make only about 10

Approximately 24 cat skins can make a coat

A cat can travel at a top speed of approximately 31 mph (49 km) over a short distance

A cat can jump up to five times its own height in a single bound

Most cats give birth to a litter of between one and nine kittens. The largest known litter ever produced was 19 kittens, of which 15 survived

The costliest cat ever is named Little Nicky, who cost his owner $50,000. He is a clone of an older cat

Recipes for the Falklands

Marmalade chicken with squished squash

Sticky chicken best eaten with the fingers, indoor barbecue style. Serve with corn on the cob and/or baked potato, or simply with a dollop of natural yoghurt. A finger-licking good way to warm up a winter evening

Ingredients

- 800 g butternut squash
- 2 tsp coriander seeds
- ½ tsp dried chilli
- 2 tbsp chicken stock (or water)
- Salt
- Pepper
- Extra virgin olive oil
- 100 g muscovado sugar
- 4 chicken legs, skin on
- 2 tbsp thick-cut marmalade
- 1 tbsp ketchup
- 2 tsp sunflower oil
- 2 garlic cloves
- Oven 200°C/ gas mark 7

Method

Peel the butternut squash and cut into even-sized slices roughly the thickness of a pound coin, and place them in a roasting tray with the coriander seeds, dried chilli, chicken stock, a hefty pinch of salt and pepper, a glug of olive oil and a sprinkle of the sugar. In a separate roasting tray, rub the chicken legs with the rest of the sugar and the marmalade, ketchup and sunflower oil. Bash the garlic cloves with the flat of your knife, remove the skin and fold through the sticky chicken mixture along with a pinch of salt and pepper, combining everything well. Place both roasting trays in the oven. Glaze the chicken every ten minutes or so. After thirty to forty minutes, remove the chicken, cover it with foil and leave it to rest on the side while the butternut squash finishes cooking for another five minutes.

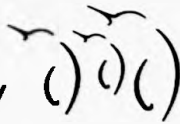

Once the squash is cooked through and caramelised, scoop a third of it into a bowl, add a splash of olive oil and use a fork to squish the squash. Fold this back through the caramelised pieces. Spoon portions of the butternut squash onto plates, topping each with a sticky chicken leg and a spoonful of yoghurt and/or vegetables.

Natural yoghurt to serve or vegetables of your choice

Frantic and nervy 5-1 win for Stanley football team

SPROCKETS were the Falkland Islands Football team's opponents once again, when the local team headed for Mount Pleasant for a match on May 9.

The Falklands' team was a bit depleted due to some Island games players tied up with work and injuries, so Spurs Henry, Aaron 'Shorty' Thomas and Saul Zuvic were invited to play and all had a good impact on the game.

The starting line-up for the Stanley team comprised goal-keeper Ben Hoyles, full-backs Stevie Aldridge and Luke Clarke. Captain Kyle Biggs with Shupi Chipunza were the two centre backs and the wingers were Shorty Thomas and Sam Toolan. Central midfielders comprised Aiden Smith, Lucas Biggs and Spurs Henry with Rafa Sotomayor the lone striker. Georgie Elbak-idze and Saul Zuvic started on the bench.

The match began frantic and nervy as is normally the case and Stanley took an early lead through a goal from Sam Toolan hitting hard and low into the corner. This was set up by Aiden Morris in what has become a normal typically calm finish from the young winger.

It wasn't too long after the goal that the Sprockets, putting Stanley under a bit of pressure, played the ball hard into the box and with a clearance from the Stanley defence going straight up into the air. Keeper Ben Hoyles came out to catch it but with a number of Sprocket players jumping and challenging for the ball it slipped through Ben's hands and bounced into the net. There were strong shouts for a foul on the keeper but nothing was given.

The score was 1 - 1. The first half remained the same with neither team really threatening the other.

The second half saw a slight re-shuffle and both Lucas Biggs and Spurs Henry departing to be replaced by Georgie and Saul to play in central midfield.

With Georgie's attacking threat on display the Stanley team looked a bit more composed in the second half and started to put some real pressure on the Sprockets. Kyle Biggs had the best of Stanley's chances early on in the second half when he came up for a corner and rattled the cross bar with a header but then couldn't get the ball in the net on the rebound.

With full-backs Luke and Stevie managing to get forward more in the second half Stanley looked much more likely to score and at about 75 minutes Stanley benefited from an own goal from a Sprockets defender that any striker would have been proud of.

This seemed to give Stanley more confidence and with a great cross from Rafa Sotomayor, Georgie added to this with a neat finish.

Very shortly after, Georgie was back in the box and headed in a controlled header into the bottom left corner of the Sprockets goal.

Stanley carried on with the pressure, the boys looking very fit and showing that the many hours hard training was paying off!

There was just enough time before the end of the game for Sam Toolan to sneak in unmarked on the edge of the box and coolly take it around the keeper and finish a fine move with another low strike.

In what is always a high tempo, hard-fought game Stanley won 5-1. But the score line didn't really reflect the game itself as Stanley scored four of those goals in the last 15 minutes.

The Falkland Islands Football league would like to take this opportunity to say a massive thank you to Dave Thomas and his team the Sprocket Rockets.

Without them to play against on a regular basis the football team would be going away a lot less prepared than they are.

The team is due to play another game against the Sprockets this Saturday kick-off time 2.30pm.

'We're not a colony' speech falls on deaf ears at C24

ASSURANCES made to a United Nations C24 seminar in Nicaragua that the Falklands can no longer be defined as a colony, fell on deaf ears this week.

Constitutional reform has stripped away all aspects of, "so-called colonial status." Member of Legislative Assembly Phyl Rendell told the seminar.

But most members of the committee, "continue to have their views firmly fixed on decolonisation and not self-determination for small countries and do not listen to the facts," she told Penguin News yesterday.

MLA Rendell said her speech was received politely by the Chair and she was given the right to reply to the comments made by Argentina, El Salvador and Venezuela in particular.

The Caribbean Regional Seminar precedes the late June main meeting of the UN Special Committee on Decolonisation, when MLA Rendell will be accompanied by MLA Mike Summers.

MLA Rendell gave an explanation why the Falklands had not attained independence and then outlined how, despite that, the Falklands had, via the crafting of two new constitutions since 1982, taken itself along the path of, "political autonomy."

She said the Falklands, as Chile, Argentina and Brazil (former colonies) had done, had travelled along a road of political development, but the reason the Islands had not become independent as those countries had, were for many good reasons.

These included the Islands population being tiny and existing on a, "small geographical area," but in particular, "because of the threat under which we live daily from our neighbour, Argentina, who makes no secret of wanting to control our territory against our wishes."

MLA Rendell said: "Instead we have chosen the internationally-recognised status of a British Overseas Territory: a modern self-governing relationship with the United Kingdom."

She noted that as with other British Overseas Territories, the Falklands had its own system of Government and local laws. She said: "This is quite different from the definition of a colony."

She finished up saying: "We are not a colony and have a status that we are content with. The status of a British Overseas Territory was unanimously endorsed by an internationally monitored Referendum held in March 2013 when, of 92 per cent of the electorate voted by 99.8 per cent to remain a British Overseas Territory." Continued on page 2

Facts about the C24

●THE C24 or UN Special Committee on Decolonisation was created in 1961 by the General Assembly of the United Nations with the purpose of monitoring implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and to make recommendations on its application

●THERE are still 17 territories on the UN list of non-self governing territories: American Samoa (USA), Anguilla (UK), Bermuda (UK), British Virgin Islands (UK), Cayman Islands (UK), Falkland Islands (UK), French Polynesia (FRA), Gibraltar (UK), Guam (USA), Montserrat (UK), New Caledonia (FRA), Pitcairn (UK), Saint Helena (UK), Tokelau (NZ), Turks and Caicos Islands (UK), United States Virgin Islands (USA), Western Sahara (MOROCCO)

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

In a speech to the C24 seminar in Nicaragua this week MLA Phyl Rendell reflected how as a child the label 'colony' may well have applied to aspects of the Islands's status, but "all this has changed over the last 30+ years."

(Much as I hate to admit it) I too was born in an era when 'colony' was still the correct description, so it's interesting that when viewing old documents and newspapers relating to the Islands I can't help a small shiver of discomfort at the word with all of its unfortunate connotations.

An odd reaction perhaps, because after all while days gone by were often far from perfect for the average Falkland Islander, unlike other colonies this wasn't one where a native population was suppressed and mistreated by a conquering British empire.

And as years went by it's not as if development was frowned upon or people were backward. Glancing through Colonial Reports from the fifties I was amazed at the speed of development. A foundation stone for the Infant School, the building of a new wing of the hospital, Ajax Bay starting up, a new aircraft for the Air Service, the introduction of a pension scheme, just a few things that occurred over only two years.

But despite all of that I think most of us are more comfortable with our newer status 'Overseas Territory', still part of the British family, but a grown up, more independent version. A title more reflective of our, "modern self-governing relationship with the UK," as MLA Rendell termed it.

And, despite Argentine claims to the contrary, there is no lip-service in that definition. The upcoming Budget, before which elected members will make a host of tricky decisions in relation to the Islands economy, is proof in itself of the degree of that self-government.

Still there will always be those propogandists who will endeavour to convince others (particularly via the use of the emotive 'de-colonisation' label) that we are a rabble of implanted Brits, an empirical whim of the UK government.

However as long as we continue in pursuit of a constantly modernising political system and constitution, economy and society, then their already fragile arguments can only weaken further in the eyes of those with commonsense and objectivity.

Politicians like Daniel Filmus in his role as Minister for the 'Malvinas' will of course, always quack about his so-called achievements garnering support from other countries (as he claimed in relation to Chile last week) but I have to entirely concur with MLA Mike Summers in the opinion he expressed to me on Wednesday, on Dr Filmus performance so far (incidentally the Argentine Minister the Telegraph described as 'the ultimate minister without portfolio).

"When you think about it, what has he actually achieved? Eh?
... A BIG FAT duck egg."

Isobel drilling tactics

ROCKHOPPER Exploration PLC and Falkland Oil and Gas Ltd (FOGL) said on Tuesday that a sand interval with suspected elevated formation pressure and oil shows had been penetrated in the Isobel deep well started by Premier Oil PLC in early April, and Premier has decided to set a cement plug over this interval and run an additional casing string before drilling ahead through the main reservoir target to total depth.

The two companies announced the scenario to run a contingent casing string in the shale section above the sand interval that has now been hit was expected and the additional casing required was already on the rig. They said the additional work will add about 10 to 15 days to the schedule and final results were now expected in early June.

"The presence of oil shows is not necessarily indicative of net pay and conclusive results for the well will not be available until drilling operations have been completed and logging data collected." Rockhopper said in its statement.

Falkland Oil and Gas said the additional work will have no financial impact because it is fully carried through the costs of the Isobel Deep well by Premier Oil and Rockhopper Exploration.

Premier Oil operates the Isobel Deep well of the Falklands with a 36 per cent stake, while Falkland Oil and Gas Ltd holds a 40 per cent stake and Rockhopper Exploration holds the balance.

Late last month, the companies encountered a problem with the blowout preventer which led to the well being temporarily suspended so it could be inspected, repaired and drilling restarted earlier this month.

MLA Rendell also outlined in detail the Falklands economic growth and took the opportunity to refer to: "The responsible exploration and preparations for potential exploitation of hydrocarbons," which had been, "ongoing since the late 1990s when the first offshore wells were drilled."

She said the Islands had, "legislation in place that sets criteria for companies applying for licences to work here that requires them to operate to high international standards."

Regulations regarding the activities of oil companies had been prepared with input from the UK, Norway, Canada and other countries with good track records for managing the oil industry, she told the Seminar attendees."

She added: "We have every intention of strictly controlling offshore activities in our EEZ to safeguard the environment and to minimise social impact on a small population."

This, "he said, was contrary to the outrageous statements that have come from representatives of the Argentine Government recently about the likelihood of drilling activities polluting the coast of Patagonia.

"Again, we have our own Falkland Islands legislation to regulate the oil industry and we have been able to take the best examples globally to fit our South Atlantic environment," said MLA Rendell.

Your questions answered

Q WHAT did Government pay for the buildings/land at 14 and 16 St Mary's Walk and what are they intending to do with the buildings/lands?

A provided by the Falkland Islands Government.

The purchase price of 12 St Mary's Walk in July 2014 was £155,000. 14 St Mary's Walk in May 2015 was £130,000.

In the short term they are being used for housing, however in the longer term the sites are to be used for Health Service expansion.

Skua studies on New Island

BETWEEN 2004 and 2009 a sharp population decline was noticed amongst Falkland skuas (Stercorarius antarctica antarctica) on New Island, with chronically low breeding success. It was hypothesised that the causes were related to a concurrent increase of the Johnny rook population, which might act as competitors or nest predators. But with little previous study the explanations remained speculative.

Tatiana de Mendonça spent four months on New Island during the summer of 2014/2015 investigating the skuas' recent fate on New Island. Tatiana is a student part of the Portuguese research team coordinated by Paulo Catry that has been conducting long-term research on seabirds on the Island, with FIG support, for the past 13 years.

Tatiana hoped to establish a connection between Johnny rook predation and the survival rates of the chicks. Automatic cameras were set-up by skua nests, but this year Falkland skuas experienced a high breeding success on the selected study areas and the Johnny rook "gangs" were mostly elsewhere, and no cases of predation were filmed.

Using ringed skuas, studies of different aspects of breeding, foraging behaviour and diet were also carried out. GPS tags were attached to 21 individual skuas to track the details of their movements.

This is the first time that Falkland skuas were systematically tracked during the nesting season. The data is still being analysed. Initial results show that some spent the whole time on land, while others did make a few foraging trips up to 20 km from the island. "Not that adventurous, if one considers that research on New Island previously showed that these skuas spend the winter over deep seas, sometimes thousands of kilometres from land, and never resting ashore," Mr Catry commented.

He said the skuas forage at all the penguin, albatross and cormorant rookeries as well as the prion nesting areas. "Everywhere they take eggs, chicks, scraps and leftovers, and even adult prions."

More will be learned as the data is analysed in more detail and as a longer-term dataset is built. "We intend to keep an eye on those skuas for a few years to come," said Mr Catry.

'Gozome' funds

Tanya Jaffray and her son Troy receive the funds from Cpl Nick Clark and the JSPSU Team outside the terminal at MPA

THE Joint Service Police & Security Unit (JSPSU) at Mount Pleasant raised £1,328 for the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund from donations for a 'Gozome Stamp' from airbridge passengers heading north.

This impressive sum was collected from passengers travelling back to the United Kingdom through the air terminal at MPA. Those going home had their passports stamped with the 'Gozome Stamp' for a small donation.

On receiving the donation Tanya Jaffray said: "We highly appreciate the money raised for this charity, it is regularly used in the Islands, and the money will be put to good use."

Cpl Nick Clark said: "It is great to be able to give something back to the community, through such a worthwhile cause and hopefully help ease the burden on those having to make such a stressful journey back to the UK to see their loved ones."

The fund was established in 1993 and helps pay for flights and accommodation to accompany family members having medical treatment overseas. The charity has provided more than £200,000 worth of assistance to date. The past five years, has seen a huge increase in demand with over £30,000 being paid out annually. No Rishon Kamoto trial after change of plea

ON Tuesday, the day scheduled for a trial Rishon Kamoto (30) pleaded guilty to the theft of diesel along with an earlier conviction of taking a vehicle without consent.

Crown Prosecutor Simon Rowe said that the public interest had been satisfied with both guilty pleas and the third charge of attempting to obtain pecuniary advantage, would not be pursued to trial, but would be dealt with after sentencing.

The court heard that Mr Kamoto was employed by Energise as a refrigeration technician and as such had the use of a company vehicle, solely for work purposes. However on January 3, after carrying out work tasks he had filled the Land Rover with £21.38 value of diesel and travelled to Darwin, Goose Green and Race Point returning on the North Camp track, with a female friend.

His wife and brother had become concerned about his whereabouts and alerted the Police to his absence.

Investigation on his return around midnight, revealed that he was not authorised to use the vehicle.

Mr Rowe said the theft was a breach of the trust of his employer despite the fact the money had since been paid back.

He made an application for £1,800 in prosecution costs because of being "trial ready" at the time of the latest guilty plea.

Defence lawyer Simon Crowder said it had not been a case of Mr Kamoto "hanging fire," with his plea, but that further statements had been delivered which changed his position just the night before.

He said at the time of putting the fuel in the vehicle no offence had been intended and Mr Kamoto who was still with his employer had promptly repaid it.

Justices of the Peace indicated they were looking at a low community order and adjourned the case for sentence on June 10, to allow a meeting with the Probation Officer.

BFBS nightly shutdowns

THE statutory testing of electrical equipment at Mount Pleasant means a nightly shut down of BFBS transmitters from June 5 until June 7.

Media Operations at Mount Pleasant report that this work occurs every five years and will affect both BFBS and Falkland Island Radio where they use BFBS and KTV antennae, including BFBS Falklands Radio and FIRS channels on BFBS television.

The shut down will be between 11pm and 6am local, and services affected will be:

- BFBS Television channels at MPC only.
- BFBS Falklands Radio; all affected frequencies will fallback to the BFBS UK network.
- Falkland Radio Services will lose all local programmes except 88.3FM.

This will not affect BFBS TV transmitted from Sapper Hill to Stanley and BFBS TV received by satellite elsewhere on the Islands. BFBS apologises for any inconvenience caused by this essential maintenance.

Deanos darts for Nepal

DEANOS Bar is to hold a charity darts knockout competition on Sunday May 31 in aid of the Nepal Appeal Fund.

It will be £3 to enter and all proceeds will go to the appeal set up following the earthquake in Nepal. There will be prizes for winners and karaoke and music will follow the darts.

Food will be available all afternoon from midday to 9.30pm. Don't forget to register your name by 6.30pm Friday May 29. Owner Kevin Connelly said: "Come along for a fun time and it's all for a good cause."

Byron fuel leak

BRITISH Forces South Atlantic Islands (BFSAI) has confirmed that there was a small diesel fuel leak at Byron Heights on West Falkland. The leak occurred at the start of pumping operations and was witnessed by personnel on the ground. Pumping was stopped immediately. The leak has been sealed and systems put in place to contain and recover the spilled diesel. The landowners have been informed, as has FIG. "We are working closely with all parties and further updates will be issued as the situation develops," said a military spokesperson.

Tandem flags

ON Thursday to commemorate the long-standing friendship between St Helena and the Falkland Islands, their flags were flown in tandem on Victory Green.

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

SATURDAY started well with a beautiful sunrise over the Andes as we flew South. It continued well until we were minutes away from landing and already over West Falkland when we did an about turn and returned to Punta Arenas having been informed by the Captain that we could not land at Mount Pleasant Airport because of excessive 'turbulence'. All looked good the next morning until we were turned back from the runway to the gate while a leak was fixed. Full marks to LAN for looking after us well throughout, question mark to whoever made the decision to turn them away on what appears to have been a calm afternoon.

Watching the election while in the UK was fascinating. There was a lot of talk of strategic voting, supporting a candidate with a chance of winning rather than voting on principle for a no hoper. This was well illustrated in Edinburgh South where the only Labour MP left in Scotland undoubtedly won with the help of lifelong supporters of other parties who did not want to see a nationalist elected. By chance he happens to be one of our more recent UK parliamentary visitors.

Pollsters had a bad time as almost without exception their predictions, including that of a hung parliament, proved wrong. The only thing they seem to have predicted reasonably accurately is the decimation of the Lib Dems. The sole survivor in Scotland, representing Orkney and Shetland, has also visited the Falklands. Fortunately we have good cross party support and many good friends of the Islands have been re-elected though there have been some casualties.

Not only the polls came in for criticism with several parties accusing the BBC of bias, which suggests they may have got the balance almost right. Their exit poll was also accurate. Some of the other press coverage was dire, as it mainly dwelt on trivia rather than important policies, partly a reflection of attempts to keep pace with the frenetic and shallow social media coverage. In spite of all that I found the whole process engrossing and an informative political study.

Making a charitable legacy

THERE are a number of reasons why somebody decides to have a new Will written. Maybe they have never made a Will and feel that the time is right to do so. Maybe there have been significant changes in their life, such as marriage, divorce, moving countries, or the death of loved ones.

When thinking about a new Will, many of us want to make sure that our money and property is distributed fairly amongst family members.

Another reason may be to leave a gift (known as a legacy) to a charity or other organisation that is close to your heart.

A legacy to a charity in a Will is a way for you to contribute money or the equivalent to a charitable cause you support.

There are a number of benefits in leaving a legacy in your Will:

it is a way to ensure that your memory lives on; it allows you to contribute to a cause that may have been close to your heart; it demonstrates your ongoing active support for a particular organisation.

Although many people say that they would be happy to leave a legacy to their chosen charity, few people tend to do so. Many charities and organisations rely heavily on legacy donations as they contribute significantly to their annual income. Deciding to leave a legacy in your Will can make a real difference to these charities.

Choosing a charity to leave a legacy is your decision. However, it is important that your Will makes clear the name of the charity, its registered charity number and its address. This ensures that there is no confusion over similarly named charities when your Will is read.

Alison Inglis (above) and Emma Brown of Pinsent Masons advise on the best way to go about leaving a gift to your favourite charity

In addition to deciding on the charity, you should also decide on what type of gift you want to leave as a legacy, and in the case of money how much. Most charitable legacies are a lump sum payment to the chosen organisation.

If you decide to leave a legacy to charity, you can leave this subject to an 'expression of wish.' This means that you wish for your legacy to be used for a particular purpose. The recipient will have a moral obligation to comply with your wishes, however it is important to note that this is not a legal obligation.

A legacy can also be left subject to 'binding obligations'. This means that the legacy must be used for that particular purpose. When leaving a legacy subject to binding obligations, it is important to make sure that the recipient will be able to comply with these obligations otherwise they will be unable to benefit from the gift.

How to leave a Legacy

If you already have a Will, it is very simple to add in a legacy if you wish to do so. You can ask your solicitor to write up a codicil (a legal document) which will contain the relevant amendments to your Will.

If you do not have a Will, your estate will be 'intestate'. This means that your estate will be divided amongst your relatives according to set principles of law. If you wish to leave a legacy, you will have to prepare a Will in order to make this clear when your Will is read.

In both cases, it may be sensible to establish the size and value of your estate, and the needs of any family members who you would want to provide financial support to, before making a decision about how much you want to leave as a legacy.

Justice Judy steps down

WHILE the Summary Court welcomed four new Justices of the Peace (JP) into the fold last week, the longest ever serving one stepped down from the bench on Friday after a busy afternoon dealing with road traffic offences.

Judy Summers served more than 26 years as a JP and while thanking her for her time and dedication, Head of Courts Aimee Meadows quipped, "you get less for murder."

Mrs Summers had embodied the judicial oath with her approach to the position. She did not mind if people did not like her decisions and stood by them, said Miss Meadows, adding that it had been clear from her arrival in the Islands last year that Mrs Summers had the respect of her colleagues on the bench, and she was the one to get on side.

Attorney General Peter Judge paid tribute to Mrs Summers' contribution to a part of the justice system which dates back 600 years. JPs were local people who represent and understand how the community works and are able to be just, he said.

"The people of the Falkland Islands owe you a great debt. You have brought fairness, good character and understanding of the people," he said, adding, "You have stood up to the absolute value of the judicial oath."

Mrs Summers thanked her colleagues in the Summary Court who had been a fantastic team.

She noted that there had been many changes for the better since the days when the Islands were without a Senior Magistrate or lawyers and that it was good to see all in place with more improvements to come.

Mrs Summers especially thanked Miss Meadows for her assistance since taking up the new post of Head of Courts saying the last few months had probably been more interesting than the previous 25 years.

Traffic offenders fined in Summary Court

FIVE speeding offences were dealt with in the Summary Court on Friday as well as two other road traffic offences.

Mount Kent worker Paulo Cesar Daste Harbin had his case adjourned for a pre-sentence report to be prepared after he admitted driving while disqualified and without insurance.

Mr Harbin was banned for a year after a drink driving conviction in May 2014, and the recent offence took place 10 months into the ban on March 21.

He was stopped after an off-duty police officer recognised Mr Harbin driving on the By-Pass Road. He said he knew he should not be driving and was not insured, but had driven in to Stanley from Mount Kent to get fuel for the vehicle he shared with a friend who was returning from holiday.

Representing Mr Harbin, Simon Crowder said it should be noted that his client had been unlawfully arrested and detained. Driving without a licence was not an arrestable offence, he said and advised that there would be a civil claim forthcoming.

He reminded the court that the latest offence did not carry a mandatory ban from driving and that Mr Harbin had had his licence returned to him on May 4.

JP Judy Summers said Mr Harbin could continue to drive until sentenced, but reminded that it was a serious offence. While custody would be excluded, the court was looking at a community service order, she said and released him on unconditional bail to reappear on June 10.

Stanley man Nigel Bishop was fined £140 plus £85 prosecution costs after he admitted using a mobile phone while driving in the Town Hall Car Park on February 25. He said he did not recall the incident because of the length of time since, but apologised to the court. Mr Bishop and the following five speeding offences all entered pleas by post and had their licenses endorsed.

Christopher Hawksworth was fined £225 plus £85 costs for travelling at 38mph (25mph zone) on Ross Road on April 3, with a passenger in his taxi.

Mr Hawksworth said the passenger was not fare paying, however Mrs Summers said whether or not the person was paying, he was still carrying a passenger in poor conditions.

Jane Clement was fined £150 plus £85 costs for driving at 51mph on the Airport Road (40mph zone) on April 7. Ms Clement apologised to the court and said that as a former driving instructor she did understand the limits, adding that it had been a momentary lapse.

Russell John Allen Morrison was fined £200 plus £85 costs for travelling at 35mph on the FIPASS Road (25mph zone) on April 8.

Raymond John Poole was fined £225 plus £85 costs for driving at 52mph on the Airport Road near the Megabid entrance on April 17. He said he had been going to pick up someone whose vehicle had broken down and had not checked his speed.

Paul Christopher Jonas was fined £125 plus £85 costs for driving at 50mph on the Airport Road near the Seafish Chandlery at 6.23am on April 22. He told police he was late for a meeting. Mrs Summers gave him credit for his early guilty plea but added, "being late for a meeting is not in our box of mitigating circumstances."

Youth Court

Two 17 year-old males were fined £160 plus £85 prosecution costs each after they entered guilty pleas by post for speeding in Stanley.

The first was recorded travelling at 43mph on Ross Road West on April 9, and the second at 39mph on Ross Road on May 2. Both apologised to the court for their actions and had their licenses endorsed.

The Tabernacle congregation raised a massive £1,000 on the weekend with their Soupa Saturday in aid of the Nepal Earthquake Appeal. Carol Eynon said they would like to thank everyone who went along and gave so generously. Picture I Bainbridge

Transport Advisory Committee

New Representative for the Transport Advisory Committee
The Transport Advisory committee is looking for a new lay member to represent Stanley.

The appointed representative would be expected to consult with other TAC members and the public on transport related matters in order to provide the committee with balanced views.

The appointment will run for two years. Persons who believe they have the time and are interested in the future of internal transportation in the Islands should put their names forward indicating what they feel they can contribute to the committee to MLA Gavin Short, Chairman of the TAC, no later than 29th May 2015.

Copies of the terms of reference for the committee can be obtained from the PWD main office or via email from admin@pwd.gov.fk
Papers and minutes can be found at <http://www.fig.gov.fk/assembly/index.php/committees/transport-advisory-committee>

Agricultural Advisory Committee

A vacancy exists for a member of the farming community to represent farmers for a period of two years on the Agricultural Advisory Committee. This is a key role in ensuring that the views of farmers continue to be represented on the committee and in the business of the committee.

The membership of the Agricultural Advisory Committee includes two representatives for the farming community. One of these representatives is to represent the views of the Rural Business Association and the RBA will run the process to select their representative. The vacancy being advertised here is seeking expressions of interest for a second representative of the farming community.

Terms of reference and details about the nature and frequency of meetings can be obtained by contacting Katrina Stephenson, the secretary, in the first instance on telephone 27355 or email kstephenson@doa.gov.fk. Expressions of interest for the position should be with Katrina by Friday 29th May. John Barton, Director of Natural Resources

Museum can stand with best in the world

AS Chairman of the Friends of the Falkland Islands Museum and the Jane Cameron National Archives ("FIMA Friends") I had the privilege of attending in London, with a couple of colleagues from the Committee, the Museums and Heritage Awards.

Leona Roberts and some members of the team were there having been shortlisted for an award. We did not win. But the Falkland Islands received positive references throughout the evening, so your team did the Islands proud: it is truly an extraordinary achievement for the Historic Dockyard Museum to be nominated in the company of the most famous museums in the UK and abroad, and by their peers in the museum and heritage business.

Falkland Islanders can be very proud of what the Museum and National Trust have achieved. And I know that many businesses in the Islands have contributed to the construction and development of a Museum that can stand comparison with the best in the world. So the Historic Dockyard Museum is truly something that belongs to all Islanders.

Thanks to the generosity of a donor and Mensun Bound's initiative in getting funding for his recent search channelled through FIMA Friends, we now have a chance to lend meaningful support to the Museum, the National Archives and more widely, in the cause of conserving and projecting the Islands' history and heritage.

We would welcome applications for membership from Islanders: Leona will be happy to point you in the right direction. But I thought it worthwhile to congratulate you all on this most recent manifestation of Islanders' ambition and ability to deliver

Undemocratic solution

AS a recent arrival to Stanley from UK I am moved to write in reply to Graham Bound's curiously unbalanced column 'Election showcases our electoral deficit' in your last edition. The General Elections in the UK have proven his and many other's predictions of a second coalition government without a popular mandate unfounded.

I echo his general sentiment about the unpopularity of a coalition but am not sure how a move to a system of Alternative Vote polling would improve the situation.

To impose a form of voting resoundingly rejected in a national referendum in 2011 by British voters in the name of addressing a democratic deficit seems a strangely undemocratic solution.

Finally, (and without wishing to make as overt a political statement as Mr Bound's column) I would remind readers of Ed Miliband's refusal in Prime Ministers Question in 2013 to distance himself or his party from the views of their candidate for the Eastleigh by-election (and sometime comedian) John O'Farrell that he wished Argentina had been the victors in 1982. In contrast the Conservative Party's manifesto contained a commitment that "We [they] will uphold the democratic right of the Falkland Islands to remain British, for as long as they wish, and protect our Overseas Territories".

The victory of the Conservative Party in the early hours of May 8, is of a more tangible benefit to the Falkland Islanders and to their democracy than Mr Bound suggests that the UK election result means, "not a lot" to this beautiful Country.

In what is my first letter to the excellent Penguin News I should like to thank the community for making my family and I so welcome in Stanley and in our forays to camp.

Your questions answered

What chemicals are added to the tap water in the Falkland Islands?

A Response provided by Director of Public Works Manfred Keenleyside.

IN relation to chemicals added, the only chemical added once the water has been processed to remove colour and raise the pH is calcium hypochlorite (which contains chlorine) as a sterilising agent, which is done at a low level so that there is only a very small amount left when used, about 0.5 parts per million.

Rather than just list the chemicals, I will try to simply set out the water treatment process and reasons.

The untreated water is typical surface run-off peaty water, acidic, highly coloured and containing high levels of aluminium and iron. When it leaves the treatment works the colour, pH and levels of both of these metals are well below the World Health Organisation guidelines that we seek to meet.

Much of the colour is in solution, as opposed to suspended particles, so the first stage is to bring that dissolved material out of solution and then remove the resultant suspended particles by use of flocculants and then sand filters.

Sodium carbonate (soda ash) is first added to raise the pH and make the following stages more effective, then aluminium sulphate and sodium aluminate are added which are coagulants. The water then enters the bottom of tall tanks called clarifiers in which a filter blanket of the coagulants floats and rises up through this, which strains out the majority of particles, with polyelectrolyte - another coagulant - being added in this tank to assist that flocculation/cleaning process. The water coming off the top within this tank is then directed via pipework into the top of a filter which is partly filled with graded sand, and passes down through the sand which removes most of the remaining particles.

Chlorination is done just before the water leaves the final tank in the plant, using a solution formed using the calcium hypochlorite.

The levels of chemicals used varies depending upon the characteristics of the water coming into the works, which can vary from lightly coloured if there has been a prolonged dry spell to extremely highly coloured when there has been more rain, either in sudden bursts or for more prolonged periods. The colour change can be quite sudden and staff are constantly monitoring what is coming in, the various stages in the process and what is leaving the works and make adjustments accordingly.

Medical matters from the KEM Hospital - shingles vaccinations

SHINGLES is a common viral infection in which there is painful, burning and uncomfortable skin rash. Some people are left with pain lasting for years after the initial rash has healed.

Shingles can develop at any time following a chickenpox infection and can occur in individuals of any age. However, the risk and severity of shingles increases with age. The purpose of the vaccination is to reduce both the incidence and severity of shingles disease in adults aged 70 years and above, this is the age group who experience a severe form of the disease often resulting in secondary complications.

All those who have already had shingles or those who haven't ever suffered from chicken pox can still have the shingles vaccine. However, in all cases the aim of vaccination is to boost the immunity and to prevent the development of shingles in later years, significantly reducing the incidence of complications. A person can still have shingles after receiving the vaccination but the disease may be milder and the illness shorter.

Shingles vaccine is injected into the upper arm. The most commonly reported adverse reactions affecting one in 10 of those receiving the vaccine include redness, pain, swelling and itching at the injection site. These symptoms would resolve gradually. Applying ice at injection site and taking paracetamol would be helpful if required.

KEMH has arranged shingles vaccination for those adults who were born between 1-6-1935 & and 1-6-1945. All such adults are invited to attend on one of the following days as follows:

Tuesday May 26, 2015 or Tuesday June 2, 2015

0830-1130 - KEMH Day Centre

1330-1530 - Primary Care - please take a seat in KEMH Reception.

Adults living in Camp who are eligible will be asked if they wish to attend the next Camp visit to their settlement to have this done.

There may be some individuals for whom this vaccine may not be suitable. The health care worker will inform those when they attend for vaccination.

Talking Island-wide transport

AT the first meeting of the Transport Advisory Committee (TAC) since November a wide range of issues were discussed.

Ferry ports

Safety issues at the Port Howard jetty was one the first subjects in the spotlight with holes in the surface from fines washing away and lack of lighting.

Roads Engineer Simon Catton suggested replacing the problem areas with primary rock which would not wash out while Director of Public Works Manfred Keenleyside said low power LED lighting hooked up to the Concordia Bay could be a practical solution for Port Howard as well as New Haven where a similar problem exists.

Airstrips

A less rigid set of guidelines has been adopted for Camp airstrips whereby FIGAS (Falkland Islands Government Air Service) can assess each strip and ensure that it is fit for purpose. Director of Civil Aviation and Head of Regulatory Services Bruce Wilks told the committee.

He said that FIGAS does not require licensed aerodromes, but if the necessary standards were not met, then the aircraft would not fly into that strip.

The season had started with good responses, said Mr Wilks, while MLA Gavin Short described it as a, "more common-sense and pragmatic approach."

FIGAS manager Morgan Goss, explained that insurance was still valid as it was issued on the premise that airstrips were fit for operations.

Roads to non-agricultural destinations

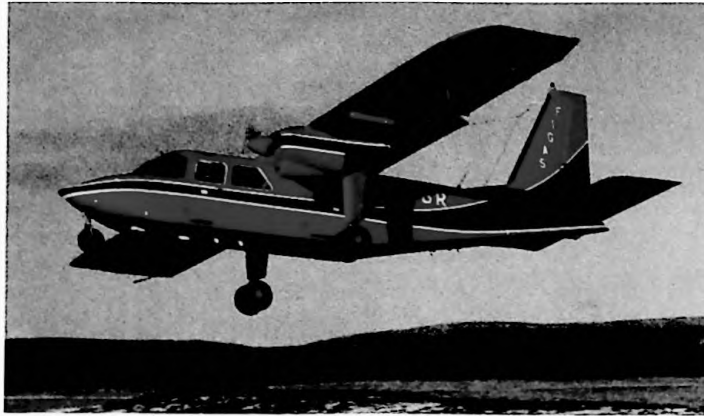

MLA Phyl Rendell asked that a decision be made on whether a road could be built to Philomel Farm on West Falklands. Gavin and Deirdre Marsh had requested that consideration be given to at least track improvements, said MLA Rendell, adding that while current policy was only for roads to inhabited farms, things change in the Camp. She asked, "Where do we go from here?"

Mr Keenleyside suggested it could fall under the Roads to Non-Agricultural Destinations scheme as there was funding available. He noted that the title was a bit of a misnomer.

Ad-hoc improvements as had been applied to the Mullet Creek road would be of assistance to the Marshes, said MLA Rendell, however Mr Keenleyside said in his opinion partial improvements channelled traffic to those areas which in turn become problematic.

If the family lived on the farm then a road would happen, as had with Westley, he said. "Any sort of policy shift would require a pot of money."

"Move out to the farm until the road is built and then move away again," was one committee members advice to the Marshes.

Below: Road maintenance on East Falkland

MLA Gavin Short asked that sufficient information be brought to the next TAC, "to put this one to bed."

Winter road restrictions

Voicing the frustrations of many road users on West Falklands, Keith Knight addressed the issue of military and private contractors not adhering to Road Traffic Legislation which requires exemption for vehicles exceeding 15 tonnes to use certain Camp roads from the beginning of May through to end of September.

Presently there is very little common sense being used with 20+tonne recovery trucks being sent across on the ferry during winter months to retrieve broken down Land Rovers, he said.

This was very frustrating for those who must use the roads all year round and with the current capping programme only allowing for works to the main spine road between Fox Bay and Port Howard any damage to other roads could take up to five years to be repaired.

"These roads are a lifeline for residents in those areas for access, getting stock to FIMCO, wool transportation and tourism, all of which rely on safe reliable roads," he said.

Mr Catton said he had refused exemptions and had worked through the logistics with the parties involved.

He stressed that weight was restricted to 15 tonnes and said the current work was a one-off project and it would be a "long time before anything of similar proportion would take place."

Ferry and Coastal Shipping Surveys

In April, external consultants were appointed to conduct a review of the ferry and coastal shipping service. Fieldwork will be carried out during June and they will deliver a report at the end of July.

Updating the committee Director of Central Services Matt Bassford said the results would inform a decision about the future provision of ferry services beyond the end of the current Workboat Services contract in July 2016.

Mr Bassford said the combination of data on utilisation and the recent surveys conducted mean that there is a relatively good evidence base in terms of actual and potential demand for ferry and coastal shipping. "However, much less work has been done in terms of the supply side," which is what the review will focus on.

He said he was particularly keen that the group of experts who will consult on both East and West Falklands, "get the importance of the link between ferry and the road network."

Mr Bassford said it was hoped that the findings would be reported to the next TAC meeting along with the previous work conducted by the RDS Group and some additional assessment work conducted by Central Services.

The TAC

The Transport Advisory Committee is one of the largest within FIG, made up of Stanley and Camp representatives as well as government officials and those involved with all forms of transport around the Islands.

Gus Reid was welcomed to this meeting as the new Stanley representative.

Team Falklands kitted out by Sure

THIS week Sure presented the Falkland Islands Overseas Games Association with a cheque for £28,000. The company paid for the entire Falklands team kit, for the NatWest Island Games in Jersey in June. This consisted of a tracksuit, polo shirts and hooded top for every competitor and official, along with playing kit for the individual teams, golf, badminton, archery, athletics and shooting, totalling £18,000. Another £10,000, took their total donation to FIOGA over the last six years to more than £73,000. CEO of Sure in the Falklands, Justin McPhee said: "We are really pleased to have five Sure employees representing the Falkland Islands in this year's Natwest Island Games in Jersey, and wish them and the rest of the team the very best of luck."

An intrepid trek by fund-raising West walkers

"BRILLIANT weather, well mostly," accompanied three walkers on a 93 mile trek from Port Stephens to Port Howard on West Falklands last week.

Organiser Diane Towersey said she, Tex Alazia and Jacqui Jennings, set off from her home on the far West of the Falklands at 8am on May 14 and walked 24 miles to Lake Hammond before staying the night at Tex's home at Fox Bay then 26.5 miles, almost to Harps Farm, the following day. The last leg of 16.5 miles brought them to Port Howard where they were accompanied into the settlement by a group of walkers who arrived to greet them.

"The Hill Cove walkers also kept us company for 5 kilometres," said Diane. The money they raised went towards that being raised by the Diane, Jacqui and Tex.

Tex, Jacqui and Diane on the road

The three walked at an average speed of 3.3mph and completed the 93 miles in a total of 31 hours. While they were blessed with good weather for most of the walk they did experience a four hour downpour on the third day, when unfortunately it was discovered Tex's waterproofs had been left behind. He wasn't deterred but was pretty soggy by the time they were delivered along the road by Kev Marsh and Lisa Newman.

The worst part? For Jacqui it was her decision to change boots past Fox Bay where the road was uncapped.

Unfortunately it resulted in some nasty blisters, an affliction also suffered by Diane, "but Tex had no blisters, he must have pretty tough feet," said Diane.

The group asked that their thanks be passed not only to their accompanying drivers, Rhian Alazia, Lesley Woodward and Helen Marsh, but their hosts for the nights, Justin Knight, Helen and Leon Marsh, Kevin and Lisa and also Tex and Rhian. "The Port Howard crew also provided a great welcome and cakes in the club." Funds raised for the Cancer Support and Awareness Trust and a Breast Cancer research charity will be announced once it has been collected.

THE Fitzroy Pink walk in aid of cancer charities attracted a field of 66 on Sunday accompanied by 24 very happy dogs.

Organiser Pauline Sackett said: "We all walked from the turn-off on the MPA Road to the Fitzroy Community Hall where there was a lovely spread of food courtesy of Marj Hayward, Darlene Buckland, Alva Keane and Malvina House Hotel, waiting for us.

She said Lisa and Adrian Lowe very kindly drove some of Stanley's older residents out as a support team to greet the walkers on their arrival at the hall.

Ms Sackett added: "The sun shone for us and the wind held off until we had finished. Rachel and Katrice Berntsen were kept busy with registration and Christian was our safety driver. The Berntsen clan, Megan Tierney and David Blockley stayed behind after everyone else had left, and helped clean the hall and funnily enough they left me with all the dishes."

She said it was a great day out, with a lovely crowd of walkers.

"Thank you to everyone who joined in the fun and helped raise money for the Cancer Research Trust. Looking forward to 2016."

A CHEERY pink crowd of 196, registered to walk, run, jog or bicycle 5 kilometres on Sunday in aid of two cancer charities

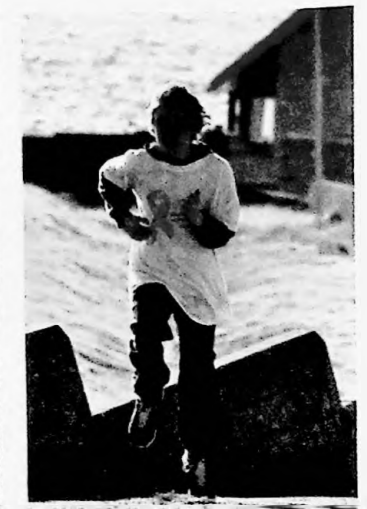

Dean Ellis was first placed runner (and first boy) taking only 23 minutes and 40 seconds (closely followed by Malachi Budd in 24 minutes 50 seconds.) Kirsty Lewis of Mount Pleasant was the first lady in 26 minutes 9 seconds and Marvis Chipunza the first girl in 27 minutes and 59 seconds.

Andrew Newman was first man in 29 minutes 45 seconds, and Cheryl March was the speediest walker completing the course in an impressively rapid 30 minutes. Connor Betts and Luke Gilbert were home ahead of everyone on their bicycles.

Organiser Sally Ellis said earlier in the week: "We are already very pleased with the turnout and people's generosity," but those figures would increase once they added in monies raised from other events.

Mrs Ellis said the cake stall raised £598 and raffle and donations £1,160 so £1,758 would go to the Cancer Support & Awareness Trust. Run registration fees totalled £1,960 and t-shirt sales £380, and as a result £2,340 would be sent to Cancer Research UK.

Mrs Ellis said: "Thank you to everyone for taking part in the event, baking and buying cakes, donating raffle prizes, selling raffles tickets, marshalling and anyone who helped or participated in any way."

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24-hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147.225 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of East Falkland and repeats Mount Alice Repeater, which covers most of the south of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Mount Alice: Frequency: 147.825 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of West Falklands and links to Stanley via Pleasant Peak and Sapper Hill.

Mount Caroline: Frequency: 147.725 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north of West Falklands, including the cross sound ferry main operational area and links to Stanley via Mount Kent and Sapper Hill.

Marine Band: 156.800... Channel 16 (Stanley area) 2.182 MHz 1HF In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is however unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland

Meet our NatWest Island Games 2015 teams

THE Falkland Islands Football Team heading for the NatWest Island Games in Jersey next month have been concentrating on their defensive line, explained player Manager Michael Betts to Penguin News this week.

It was made clear from the very beginning what would be expected of the team: "When the squad was announced in February, the players were given a presentation of how the team was going to play in Jersey," said Michael.

Iran versus Argentina, a World Cup Group match, was a case study and clips of the match were shown to the players.

He said: "The idea was to get every player on board from the beginning by explaining what was expected from them and what we aimed to do. It was agreed, that the Falklands football team would play defensively, with a deep defensive line and men behind the ball. Our aim is to frustrate the opposition by making the pitch smaller."

With that in mind, they have trained to work on their defensive line, "the team's shape in various scenarios and set pieces."

There has also been strong emphasis on fitness, "as the tactics we are employing will mean we will be chasing the ball for 70 per cent of our matches in Jersey. We have also employed our defensive tactic in periods of matches against the military. The tactic invited pressure, but the military were short of ideas on how to score, which is encouraging. However, the opposition in Jersey will be much, much better."

The football team trains twice a week and usually with either a match or a third training session on the weekend.

Also, during the summer the local 7-a-side league meant players were playing football at least four times a week.

Many of the players have also taken it upon themselves to train alone, with players either road running or in the gym.

The team has tried to hold a fund-raiser once a month said Michael. "The events have been hugely successful in raising money, but they have also helped with integrating new players and creating a team spirit, which will be vital when playing against stronger teams."

The team has welcomed a number of new faces with a total of eight players making their Island Games football debut.

"All of the eight bring their qualities to the team, from Ross Peters challenging goalkeeper Ben Hoyles to youngster Sam Toolan winning every sprint training drill."

He said: "We are all incredibly proud to represent the Falkland Islands and we aim to show how hard the football team has worked for over 12 months to prepare for Jersey 2015."

Noble Energy Falklands Limited is pleased to announce the start of a public consultation on the Environmental Impact Assessment for their Rhea-1 Exploration Well.

Hard copies of the main document and Non-Technical Summary are available to view in the Public Library. Electronic copies of both the full document and the non-technical summary are available on request from the Department of Mineral Resources or from the Noble office, where hard copies will also be made available on request.

As part of the consultation process, Noble will be holding a public presentation to outline the project activities and key findings of the study, and to provide an opportunity for the community to ask questions directly.

Arrangements for these presentations will be announced in due course. Comments should be submitted to the Department of Mineral Resources by Friday 19th June 2015.

The Media Trust is a voluntary organisation responsible for setting the overall strategic direction of the Radio Station and Penguin News, and they are seeking a number of new members.

Being a Media Trust member is an interesting and responsible role, at times can be challenging while at the same time rewarding. They meet approximately once every two months but in between deal with suggestions, or occasional complaints, from members of the public.

The aim of the Trust is to ensure the independence of the media as well as approving strategies and budgets and it regularly assesses the performance of the Penguin News and the Radio Station in order to ensure that both are informative, educational and entertaining for the general consumption of the Falkland Islands.

The Media Trust has a vital role in the community and Chair Janet Robertson would be delighted to hear from you. If you are interested please email janet.marketing@cfi.co.fk or phone 51782 by May 31, 2015.

Jetty project not embarrassing assures Director Public Works

THE public jetty project that began with a survey in early 2012 and is still incomplete due to problems with piling is, "not a national embarrassment," Director of Public Works Manfred Keenleyside told Penguin News yesterday.

The project was termed as such by an individual at Monday's Public Meeting.

Mr Keenleyside emphasised that, the information available from both the survey undertaken with locally available resources, and the survey done when the jetty was originally built, "indicated that the piling as designed and using the method proposed, was appropriate."

Physical works began on the public jetty in September 2012 but were suspended in May 2013 when a pile sank to a greater depth than expected. A decision to review works designs was taken.

Works on the piling began again in January this year.

The project was originally allocated £1.3 million but additional funding was quickly allocated taking it to £1.49 million in July 2013 with a 33 per cent contingency.

Further funding of £491,060 was approved in September 2013 to complete the project.

A further £150,000 was also approved for a drilling rig to conduct surveys in the area the same month.

Speaking of funding Mr Keenleyside said however: "Additional costs were incurred for the survey work done following the difficulties encountered with the first two piles."

West side of public jetty

However he added that this was undertaken on an, "opportunistic basis," and therefore had cost significantly less than if would have done, "if a barge and coring rig had been brought out specifically to survey the jetty area prior to the design being developed and costed and work commencing."

He said there were additional costs identified for increased pile length after the later survey, but had the additional survey information been available at the outset, then that additional pile length would still have been needed.

Opportunity was also taken to, "utilise the piling barge and rig which were brought in to do work on the TDF (temporary dock facility) which simplified the piling works and has de-risked that part of the project," he said.

Mr Keenleyside said had the survey barge and equipment been brought in before the design was undertaken, "the cost for survey would have been rather higher and the current design would, I believe, still have been selected as the appropriate one, and the end cost for construction then very similar to the current estimate."

He said this would though have meant a higher overall cost for the project due to higher costs for the survey which would have been incurred. "In short there would have been less surprises over the length of the project, but the end cost would have been higher," said Mr Keenleyside.

Asked how far over the original budget the project now was he said: "The project is not over the original budget for the steel and concrete design to date. The projected cost is as per the revised total which was approved by SFC once the additional survey information was gained."

The project

The entire project comprises the replacement and renovation of part of the timber section, the provision of more effective wave control, and additional space at the shore end.

There is also to be a structure that will allow for the small cruise ship berthing jetty (envisaged within the approved Waterfront Development plan) to be built as an extension to the western part, without impacting on the use of the eastern part, either during construction or when in use.

The tee-head is also to be removed.

The latest

Mr Keenleyside explained that the first phase of the bank seat has been completed and the subcontractor has been working on cutting the piles to the correct length. Once this is complete then works will then begin on the installation of the new jetty.

An inquiry?

Penguin News asked if the project was likely to go to Public Accounts Committee.

Mr Keenleyside replied: "Others can probably better answer this, but any project of this size and during which changes have been made and costs risen would seem a probable one to review."

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

THERE is an unusual sense of calm across the Islands as we go into budget week, which has to be a good thing really, but in a typically perverse way I am missing the sheer adrenaline and anticipation of what might be thrown at us.

Fortunately we are in a reasonably sound financial position on the back of two lucrative fishing and tourism seasons and of course the additional income from continued hydrocarbon exploration means that we should not have to suffer any serious hardship.

As MLA Ian Hansen glibly announced at the Public Meeting on Monday, "there won't be any surprises." I think we can expect the usual increases on duty for tobacco and alcohol, and general fees across Government departments (ie registry, immigration, aviation, Government rents etc) and no doubt we will be warned about increasing our expectations in all areas.

Personally I think that after reducing the change for registration of ownership of vehicles last year it may as well be ditched now, along with vehicle tax. (The former would certainly save the husband a few quid as well as boot leather).

On the other hand I doubt we can expect another raise in the income tax personal allowance, although that WOULD be a lovely surprise if the Assembly just happened to feel the electorate deserved a little treat.

Now, if I could slip a few minor suggestions in at the last minute they may run along the lines of don't increase the price for meals on wheels, but do create a suitable garden for the prisoners to grow vegetables for the entire hospital and themselves to reduce costs overall; freeze the passenger landing fee until such time as they have a completed public jetty to land on; and possibly make the international departure tax charge a payment to the departee for having endured the road to the airport and install a 5x £1 coin dispenser at Sapper Hill for onward journey to the jet wash.

On a more serious note and as a firm supporter and practitioner of living within our means which will of course be advocated again this year, I wonder if this could be passed on to those designing, costing and being consulted on development projects within the Islands? £442,000 for a two classroom temporary building, nearly half a million on the public jetty so far, and almost the same on the swimming pool? It would almost be funny if it wasn't for the fact that as a result many of those who have paid taxes all their lives to fund such follies will probably end their days in a hospital ward rather than the purpose built elderly care residence they rightly deserve when home is no longer an option.

FISAC dive team both surveyed the wreck of HMS Antelope and replaced the ensign.

Antelope's ensign replaced

SIX divers from the Mount Pleasant Falkland Islands Sub Aqua Club recently replaced the ensign located on the front gun of HMS Antelope which lies in San Carlos water. She sank on May 24, 1982 and a member of the ship's crew and a bomb disposal expert died on the vessel.

The team, lead by Captain Stu

Bailes conducted a total of 17 dives over a weekend in order to survey the ship and to change the ensign which has been in place since 2013.

When the old ensign was located instead of recovering it, as previously planned they laid it gently on the wreck to preserve the sea life on it.

Guilty of assault

CLAUDIO Javier Ross Ampeuro (34) pleaded guilty in the Summary Court on Tuesday morning to assault by beating, and was released on unconditional bail for a pre-sentence report to be prepared.

Justice of the Peace Anton Livermore said they were looking at a high end community order for the offence.

JPs decided a Newton Hearing was not needed after it became evident that there was a difference in accounts of what had happened on April 24, however it was stressed that Mr Ross must be sentenced on the defence version of events.

Crown Prosecutor Simon Rowe told the court that Mr Ross had verbally abused his estranged wife, grabbed her by the hair and knocked her to the ground, while defence lawyer Simon Crowder said his client had admitted he was angry, but had pushed her aside and she had fallen. Mr Crowder said the differences between the versions of events, was not significant when it come to sentencing.

Mr Ross will reappear in court on July 2 for sentencing.

Olga's on a hat mission

We didn't influence oil flight price say MLAs

THE decision that oil company charter flights should be made available to the public at the same price as the air bridge was not influenced in any way by Assembly Members, they assured at Monday's Public Meeting.

MLA Mike Summers said it had been the intention of Noble Energy and Premier Oil to sell seats at the same price and this had been agreed with the Ministry of Defence, although he said he was unsure why any agreement was necessary. It was probably a matter of being courteous, he added.

Isobel Deep is oil discovery

PREMIER Oil and partners announced yesterday that the Isobel Deep exploration well had been declared an oil discovery.

Isobel Deep is the second well of a six-well campaign planned to take place in Falkland Islands waters through 2015.

Director of Mineral Resources Stephen Luxton commented: "Further work is required to give a complete understanding of the Isobel Deep results, but early signs are very positive, and prove a working hydrocarbons system exists in this part of the basin. Both the prospect and the wider area will require further appraisal, but this result potentially opens up a new development area some 30 kilometres to the south of the Sea Lion field."

Following completion of near-term operations at the Isobel Deep well, the Eirik Raude drilling rig will commence work for Noble Energy on the Humpback-1 exploration well to the south-east of the Islands.

The first flight departs the UK on June 9, with the north bound flight departing on June 10 at a cost of £792 to London, Gatwick, and a cost of £882 from London to Falklands for resident adult passengers.

The flights run fortnightly thereafter.

MLA Summers thanked Noble and Premier for their generous donation of seats to the Falkland Islands Overseas Games Association which had made a huge difference to getting the team to Jersey next month.

Trough two appeal against firearm licence restrictions

BONO John McKay and Arthur Leonard Pitaluga Turner appealed against a decision by the Chief of Police to revoke and restrict their firearm licences on Thursday morning.

No decision was made by the Senior Magistrate Clare Faulds due to the hearing running into another listed case.

The court will hear from their defence lawyer Simon Crowder on Friday afternoon when Mrs Faulds will give her verdict.

Mr McKay had his licence revoked following his convictions for assault and battery in relation to the Trough case and Mr Turner had his restricted to the use of a humane killer for animal welfare reasons on his farm at Rincon Grande.

Superintendent Len McGill said both men had demonstrated through their convictions that they were of, "intemperate habits," and that public order, public safety and peace may be endangered, all of which were conditions of the Falklands' firearm licence.

Mr McKay has shot competitively for the Islands overseas while Mr Turner said he needed his full licence for a number of animal husbandry issues that the bolt action killer was not suitable for.

24-hour PO access

A SWIPE-CARD access system will mean that from June 1, Post Office customers will have 24 hours a day access to their mail boxes.

The Falklands Post Services Ltd (FPS) and the Falkland Islands Government (FIG) released the news this week that the new access system comes alongside other key service improvements by FPS in recent weeks, including changes to the Post Office building itself (to allow for safe and secure access for all customers) and the arrival of a significant number of new mailboxes.

Director of FPS Dr Andrea Clausen said: "We are delighted to have installed the 24 hour access project as well as an extra 144 post boxes for our customers before the first anniversary of managing the post service on behalf of FIG. We would like to thank the public for their patience and we look forward to seeing an enthusiastic uptake of this new facility."

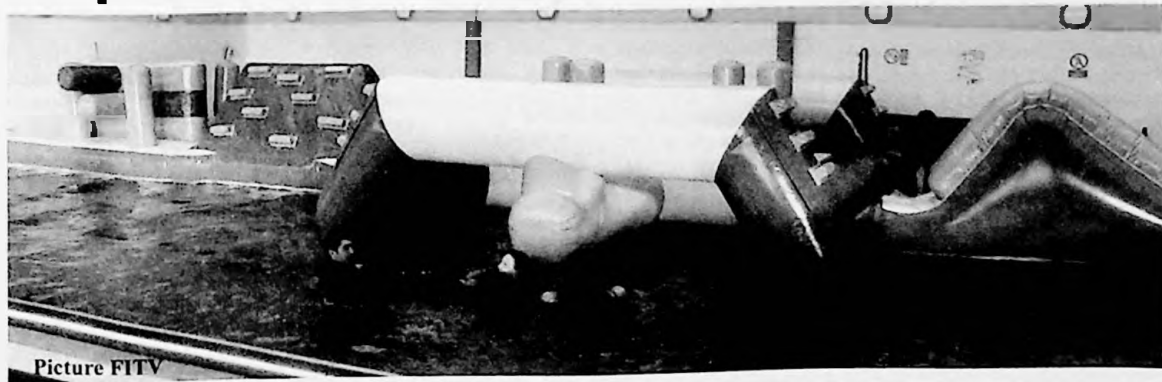

Shooters form an association

A NEW association is being formed to represent the interests of firearms owners in the Falkland Islands. A diverse group met earlier this week to discuss issues of common interest and concern, and agreed to form an Association. Nominally named the Falkland Islands Shooters Association, the first General Meeting is to be held on Tuesday 2 June at 7.30pm at the Falkland Islands Chamber of Commerce.

The intention of the Association will be to collate the views and concerns of all categories of firearms users including farmers, target shooters, collectors, and dealers, and represent these to the authorities charged with regulating firearms ownership and use in the Falkland Islands. All firearms licence holders with an interest in the matter are warmly invited to attend.

Picture FITV

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

AFTER I met the deadline for the diary last week MLAs were given a presentation on the recent weather problems which have caused a number of flights to be delayed or cancelled. The same presentation may be held in public at some time in the future and could throw some light on what anecdotally appear to be more frequent closures of the airport in recent months.

It would be interesting to look at weather records since the opening of the airport to see whether perceptions match reality. An alternative would be for me to announce in advance when I will be flying so people can avoid being on the same flight, although I have occasionally managed two consecutive flights without a delay! I can only recall two of the twenty or so delays I've experienced over the years being caused by airport closure.

LAST week we had our regular quarterly meeting with the Chamber of Commerce Board, always a good opportunity for discussion. This week we have had mainly routine meetings with next week being taken up with the various parts of the budget session ending with the Legislative Assembly on Friday by which time the 2015/16 budget will be finalised. All members should be here for this important session, with MLA Phyl Rendell already back after delivering an excellent address at the C24 Seminar. MLA Elsby will have returned from a few weeks on a part private and part CPA trip and MLA Poole from a short holiday. June and July will see various members off for a number of official events including the UN C24.

THE public meeting was quite an interesting one for those who came out on a cold evening. I have to protest totally not guilty to the accusation of halving the depth of tarmac laid on the MPA road some years ago. While the perception that councillors might have been consulted on such technical matters is an interesting one, I can safely say that it did not happen. As in most areas requiring technical expertise we have to put some trust in the professionals.

A stroll down Memory Land with a difference

SURVEY work was carried out to the east and west of the jetty by driving a steel tube into the seabed at various points using a drop hammer until refusal was reached.

The depth at which refusal was reached reasonably matched the depth at which rock was shown on the section drawings produced for the public jetty when it was originally built, said Director of Public Works (DPW), Manfred Keenleyside.

MLA Mike Summers said that similar methods were used at New Haven and Port Howard ferry terminals and could be considered good practice if more sophisticated equipment was not available.

September 2012

The physical works on Public Jetty commenced with the placement of mass fill and then rock armouring on the first section, which was to extend over the same length as the existing masonry section was under way.

It was planned that that phase of work would be completed prior to the arrival of the first major cruise vessel of the season.

That would allow the fill to settle and stabilise before the next phase of work took place, which was planned for April 2013 after the last major cruise vessel of the season had visited.

The final design...

Arch Henderson produced the final design for a concrete topped stone infill to the equivalent distance of the existing jetty, with steel piles with a concrete deck forming the outer length.

The refurbishment of an equivalent length of the original timber section was also to be carried out.

The pre-cast concrete deck sections were made locally, and the steel piles and components fabricated in UK prior to shipping so as to facilitate simple and rapid on-site construction.

The new section of jetty was described as fitting in with the model envisaged in the Waterfront Development master plan and would look similar in style to the existing structure.

It would include a substantial 'wave wall' to protect the pontoons moored on the eastern side.

The existing (failed) tee head would be removed and the existing timber section upgraded if possible to a similar length to the new structure, or renewed if not.

The completed project would then provide additional onshore space - twice that currently provided by the existing jetty - and allow for the future development of the Public Jetty into a small cruise vessel berth as envisaged in the Waterfront master plan should that be necessary.

May 2013

Work was suspended when the first pile sank to a greater depth than expected.

The DPW assured that the piles would not need to be replaced, but that they could be used in a different sequence and possibly extended in some cases.

It was anticipated that there would not be any delay and any additional tubing should be obtained within the allocated £1.3 million budget.

Morrison (Falklands) Ltd's regional manager Mike Butler confirmed that there had been difficulties in maintaining the vertical alignment of the first pile.

"The position and alignment of the piles are key to structural stability of the new jetty which has been designed so that it can be extended when the Waterfront Development takes place," he said.

With any civil engineering works unforeseen ground conditions can have an impact on the construction sequence and the decision to stop work and review temporary works design with their engineers in the UK, he told Penguin News.

July 2013

Additional funding was earmarked taking the proposed cost of the project up to £1.49 million (including a 33 per cent contingency).

September 2013

Further funding of £491,060 was approved on September 25, to complete the project which MLA Roger Edwards, Chair of Standing Finance Committee described as, "an eyesore" and "an embarrassment."

He said he had no knowledge of the additional funding in July being approved and described some of the charges to date such as £10,000 each for demobilising and remobilisation of the site each time work was halted as, "disturbing."

A further £150,000 was also approved for a drilling rig to conduct surveys in the jetty area and possibly dockyard area for future reference and to be dispensed with the agreement of the Financial Secretary and the Director of Public Works.

Work was due to recommence in February.

October 2013

MLA Mike Summers defended the project in the lead up to the election saying he felt it was worthy of the funding.

"The Public jetty is essential to the tourism industry; letting it fall into further disrepair, putting the safe operation of one of our key industries at risk is not a sensible option.

"The current design maintains safe tourist operations, creates a more sheltered haven for tenders and the possibility for more passenger exchanges."

He reminded of the economic activity tourism created for many and that with the right investment at the right time it would be a sustainable industry, "long after the oil has gone."

October 17 2014

MLA Michael Poole who held the Tourism portfolio said work on the Public Jetty replacement was due to re-commence in November when the piling equipment that was currently being utilised on the Noble TDF become available.

"It is hoped that this will improve the efficiency and quality of the build so it has been deemed worth delaying the work until that is available," he said.

Director of Public Works Manfred Keenleyside said it was not expected that anything other than the piling would be progressed on the Jetty itself before the end of the cruise season.

"The piling work will be fitted around cruise vessel visits once the barge becomes available and the timing for that looks likely to be November."

He said work had been carried out on the piles which were then stacked on the infill section ready for use.

Other work to the jetty would not commence until after that cruise ship season, concluded Mr Keenleyside.

The piling works got underway at the end of January early February this year using equipment in the Falkland Islands for the construction of the Noble temporary dock.

FIC gift to sheltered housing residents

Thelma Ferguson with FIC PR Manager Eva Jaffray

FIC Ltd has donated £5,000 worth of gift vouchers to the residents of the sheltered accommodation. The vouchers will be divided equally between them.

FIC PR Manager Eva Jaffray said: "We are very happy to be giving this donation and hope that it may assist the residents over the coming winter months."

One happy resident, Ian Gleadell, thanked the FIC for the vouchers and said he would be spending his £185 on electricity cards and food.

Wheelchair help at the Museum

A LIGHTWEIGHT wheelchair is now available for use by the public visiting the Historic Dockyard Museum and at the Jetty Visitors Centre, thanks to the support of the Maud Sollis Fund.

Maud Sollis, formerly Duffin, was born in the Falklands in 1916. She served for years as a nurse at the King Edward VII Memorial Hospital, including the difficult time when the hospital was overcrowded with sailors wounded during the Battle of the River Plate. Maud married 'Jack' Denis Sollis, a local seaman who is remembered for his intimate knowledge of the Islands coastline. They had no children. Maud died in 2005.

Mrs Sollis was known as a strong and kind character who worked with a number of charitable organisations including the Red Cross, the Women's Corona Society and the Cemetery Committee. This kindness was continued with the bequest of a considerable amount of money into a fund to be used to benefit the elderly in the Islands - main purchases so far have included the current red bus, upgraded mattresses for the elderly care end of the hospital and many for use in private homes as needed, nebulisers for home use, the new red framed wheelchairs for the hospital ward, and the very latest project, financed the labour charge to create the new path into the Seaman's Mission. Paul Bonner Haulage most generously did not invoice for the concrete used.

"We are very grateful indeed to the Maud Sollis Fund for this terrific donation," said Museum Manager Leona Roberts.

"The new museum is pretty large and it takes a fair time to look around; we installed a lift to make it as accessible as possible, but I have to admit that we didn't think of a wheelchair. It will be fantastic to be able to offer this to our visitors - I hope that it will mean that the elderly, or anyone who is struggling to get around, will be able to enjoy the exhibitions even more!"

Just leave Arch Green alone

SO now it's just move or push back the flower beds a metre, carefully lifting plants, caring for them and replanting?

That makes it sounds like small new plants that you can pop into a 4" or 5" pot for a few months.

The reality is that many of the 20+ years established plants will have root systems measured in feet, well entwined under and around the rockery.

Most of these will inevitably suffer severe root damage in the process and die, despite many hours of costly labour being spent on them.

No mention of the several hundreds of dwarf and miniature daffodil bulbs now well established. These are irreplaceable as they are now listed as rare species, and fresh bulbs are unavailable commercially.

These bulbs (many are the size of your little finger nail) could only be preserved by many hours of careful expensive hand labour lifting at the correct time of year using small hand forks etc and then careful storage.

25 years ago when established, the flower beds had a wind net fence inside the rails for several years until plants became established. Today they receive critical protection from the worst of the Northerly gales by being low down just above road level and behind the wind-breaking timber rails.

This combination supplies the vital protection for the colourful annual bedding plant displays also put there.

The plan is to replant all of this on top of an open 18" high wall (open to all that nature can throw at it from the north) coupled with being regularly trampled on by folks hopping up onto the wall to get onto Arch Green rather than using the central pathway. Sorry Committee, I remember the problems of getting plants established there behind the fence from these people.

What is certain though is that despite the fancy pictures on the plans, this high visibility tourist area will at best be a straggly border of wind and boot battered plants with little colour and attraction. And for what?

For an extra metre of pavement that we all know will hardly be used by large ship tourists as:

a. they tend to walk up the road anyway regardless of the raised bump crossings, and,

b. unless you have a very fancy expensive camera lens you do NOT take a picture of Arch Green and the Cathedral from the pavement; you need to be in the middle of the road or even across in the Capstan Car Park.

Why oh why this determination to destroy what we have (and is enjoyed by many tourists) in order to solve a problem we do not have anyway?

One of the historic and quaint attractions of Ross Road on a big tourist day is how tourists and traffic get on with each other, and drivers respect the tourists who think our streets are sidewalks. Drivers who do not need to be on Ross Road go a different route, or go very slow. How many tourists have made formal complaints?

If it really is such a safety factor then the simple cheapest and best solution is to close Ross Road on these big ship days to non-essential traffic (tourist related or deliveries to Ross Road addresses) between Philomel Hill and east of Villiers Street.

Please can you just drop the silly ideas from the tourism development plans and get on with major ones like the public jetty area for example and leave Arch Green flower beds to continue to be photographed each summer by many, many tourists. And if it is felt they look a bit tired at times, perhaps increase the frequency of the maintenance.

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

ACRONYMS pop up all over the place and cover many things, most of which I find hard to decipher let alone remember (unless it is G&T) But, the weather, while very changeable and occasionally very pleasant, has brought days when cooking was called for as getting outside meant disappearing under a mound of clothes and hats, and that was just to reach the tunnels. These are the days when I produce an acronym of my own: FADS (Fresh Air Deprivation Syndrome). I don't think that particular combination is in use yet but if it is, my apologies.

It's been a good time to continue freezing and putting away vegetables, swedes are very hardy and can be kept in the soil but, being a little idle I like to lift and freeze a few for those bad days in which I might find it hard to find them, let alone dig them out. As the flavours have already been enhanced by a couple of good frosts, both the swedes and the parsnips can be lifted if so wished. The parsnips are also hard to find and dig out later. I find dicing both veg in about inch squares, microwaving a pound or so at a time for three or four minutes, cooled quickly under running cold water, drained and frozen in suitably sized bags or containers, works for us.

The celery has also done very well this year and so I am saving some of that in the same way. It will no longer be nice and crisp once frozen and so not all of it will be treated this way, but we will at least keep some for cooking during the winter. That way at least the flavour remains good too. The brussel sprouts are producing well enough that I have already put some in the freezer, and there are still more to come.

The potato lifting continues but, without my helpers now. The plot I am working on now is one that I didn't get around to paying any attention to at the beginning of the season. By the time I was ready to clean and feed the plot the self sets were already quite sizeable plants in it. I just let them grow on and the potatoes they are producing are medium sized which without food and attention, is really quite surprising. They are not fantastic but they are not to be sniffed at either. When that plot is cleared it will be a good time to put some lime on it, as it is best put on before winter.

Speaking of winter, all the hoses need reeling up and put under cover as watering is not really on the agenda any more, and the water outside will be turned off too. Bill lagged all the pipes a couple of years ago but, why take any chances with frosts and snow around? Any plants in large pots which cannot be brought under cover and have to be left outside for the winter, also need attention both by lagging them to give the roots frost protection and by sitting them on bricks or stones to allow water and snow to run out and stop them becoming water-logged.

When time and weather permit, there are a couple of shrubs which need shifting and this is a good time to do this. In fact any plant not in the 'right' place might well find itself shifted. The roses also require some attention. They have given their all and I am reluctant to cut them down while most are still flowering. Some though, have grown quite long stems and if I don't cut those down to a reasonable level the wind might well damage them or even lift some of the roots.

The strawberry plants have finished and I've been trying to tidy them up and remove all the runners that are not required for next year. I like cutting the parent plant back also, as the leaves tend to harbour bugs and diseases over winter.

Once again, speaking bugs and diseases overwintering; it is time to wash what again seems like a mountain of plant pots and trays. All glass needs to be cleaned also to allow maximum light in too. The last of the tomato plants have been cut down and we have masses of green tomatoes once more on every window sill, though some are now in paper bags with a banana inside to help ripen them.

In the flower borders, the Myosotidiums (Chatham Island forget-me-nots) with their bright, shiny, and rather corrugated leave are holding the fort, while the Libertias continue to flower, together with various pinks and pansies, hardy geraniums and surprisingly, some red hot poker too.

I'm running a little late on my garlic planting again this year, so will just plant some cloves in one of the tunnels. Most foods are enhanced by the use of a small amount of garlic and I use it most days, but not in large amounts.

I do, for example love a steak cooked with garlic, but do not like to have it served with garlic butter on it. However I love garlic bread and garlic mushrooms. I am also very fond of spaghetti tossed in warm oil in which a garlic clove has been crushed, it seldom happens though as I am the only devotee of such snacks.

I have lately discovered Lazy Garlic. What a boon that is, but there are some things for which only fresh, fat juicy garlic clove will do, so hey-ho off I go to pop some cloves in. About four inches apart and just the neck on show, they should grow well.

Ferry & Coastal Shipping Contract Review

Camp Meetings - 4th & 5th June 2015

As part of the contract review of the ferry and coastal shipping service, the Falkland Islands Government have appointed external consultants to conduct an assessment of the current and potential future service. This will be used as part of the Government decision making process. This follows on from the survey carried out by the RDS in November/December 2014.

Two of the consultants – Peter Iles and Phillip Cowman – will be visiting the Falkland Islands in early June.

During this visit a number of workshops will be held on West Falkland and it is hoped that as many people as possible will be able to attend to provide valuable input into the process.

The camp meetings will be held at the following times and locations and everyone is welcome to attend:

Thursday 4th June 2015
7.30pm in the Port Howard Social Club

Friday 5th June 2015
10am in the Hill Cove Social Club
2pm in the Fox Bay Social Club

All times are given in Stanley time.

For further information, call the RDS Coordinator on 27211 or email rdsproject@fidc.co.fk

If you cannot make any of the meetings and would still like to provide feedback, you can do so in writing to Karen Minto, PA to Director of Central Services, Secretariat, Stanley or by emailing kminto@sec.gov.fk

How it's working out for full time Members of Legislative Assembly

Has the change been of value? It seems all MLAs view the change as largely positive but with some downsides.

Among other helpful results the requirement for all MLAs to be available during the week means more informal meetings between the group, "more time together between members ... therefore we are better able to share information," said MLA Summers.

Their working week includes a variety of meetings relating to their portfolios, plus one on Monday afternoon (just Members) one on Tuesday morning with the Governor and one on Tuesday afternoon with the Chief Executive. MLA Summers described them as, "all face time, getting in touch with each other and what is going on in other parts of the Government."

MLA Short applauded the change; he personally would not have been able to undertake another four years of political commitments and the shift work required of his former job he said, adding, "being full time has allowed me to finally get out and around nearly all of our road networks plus be able to participate in the MLA sessions in the Camp, something that was almost impossible when we were part time."

MLA Phyl Rendell said as a newly elected MLA she had only experienced the job in a full time capacity, "and I really cannot envisage it working any other way. My understanding is that previous MLAs were working equivalent hours anyway. In addition to the fixed ExCo, SFC and MLA meetings the structure currently makes it clear when meetings can be arranged with MLAs and provides a bit of flex to follow up on portfolio responsibilities which is useful. But there never seems to be enough time for everything you want to do."

Required reading of large amounts of paperwork is part of the job. So does the extra time mean they are now experts when it comes to their portfolios?

According to MLA Summers: "Actually it's still a struggle. I think we all read all of the essential papers, but you often find yourself in the position of thinking I wish I'd had time to research that, or read that or just a bit of lazy time to go and look for things that you might not otherwise have found."

MLA Hansen said it did free up a lot more time, "to read up on things." He said he is now much more aware of his portfolio responsibilities, "and what goes on within them than I was in the previous 10 years."

MLA Elsby felt it had enabled

MEMBERS of the Legislative Assembly elected at the 2013 General Election were the first to undertake the role in a full-time capacity, working from Monday lunchtime until Thursday evening for a salary of £40,000 per annum. Reasons for the change from part time to full time Members were cited as an increased workload, and in order to attract younger people to a career in Falklands politics.

But as they near the half-way point in their term how is it working out? Penguin News spoke to two MLAs, one from the Camp, Ian Hansen and one from Stanley, Mike Summers and invited comments from the remainder on the subject.

him to work more closely with directors and senior people and MLA Michael Poole said there were large and complex issues that had already arisen during their short time in office, "for example the Children's Ordinance and Oil EIAs. Items such as these require a lot of reading, thought and discussion..."

MLA Cheek thought that as a result of having more time to read up on policy and legislation, "more study, thought and discussion should produce better decisions. It has been very satisfying to see some very important legislation through, in particular that relating to the safety and welfare of children."

We hear grumbles from some MLAs that having more time has meant invitations to more meetings, and that doesn't necessarily translate into practical achievements.

"Yes we have to be careful of that," said MLA Hansen but added that in turn they also had to be wary of not taking up Directors' valuable time just because an MLA had a bit of spare time and fancied a meeting. "You have to be careful not to get too involved," he said.

MLA Summers believed there was clear evidence of more meetings, "just because members are more available, and although we have not done any formal analysis of that, there is a perception at least that members of the public service are inclined to either call meetings or invite Members to meetings because they are more confident that they should be available."

Is that the best use of people's time, he wondered? "Well I think that's to be judged from meeting to meeting. People still need to manage their own time and make sure that they are not confusing activity for achievement."

MLA Edwards said: "We are certainly available to discuss with our Portfolio Directors in far greater detail than ever before although I do think there is a little bit of 'work expanding to fill the time available'. We are not forced to make decisions so tend to revisit them more often, but this is not the norm."

Camp representatives are now understandably required to be in Stanley for most of the week, but that means they are away from their constituency. According to some Camp MLAs that wasn't a particular problem.

"In fact I probably see more of my constituents now I'm full time," said MLA Hansen. When he was part time, "when you were home you were home, working on the farm," but now he regularly sees constituents on ferry trips back and forth from East Falklands. They are practically, "constituency meetings," he said. Not only that but, "when you go home and you don't have to go shearing sheep or whatever, if there's a social event then you can actually go to it and chat to people."

Being full time has not changed MLA Edwards' life too much, "as living on the West made it very difficult to get to and from Stanley. For example, if I had meetings on Tuesday and Thursday morning I would have gone in on the Monday and not have been able to get home on Wednesday so it would be Friday before I got home. Then I would have been paid for two half days travel and two half days for meetings; now we are salaried. I now travel in on Monday mornings and home on Fridays, very often in the afternoon."

Some Camp members might be seeing their constituents more but Stanley Members were divided on whether the same was the case in town.

"Has it given members more time to interact with constituents? In theory it might have done but in practice it hasn't," thought MLA Summers. "I don't see any evidence of it. The profile of consultations and of public meetings is much the same as it was before. Does that matter? I'm not sure."

MLA Poole said: "Inevitably, and quite rightly, constituents expect to see more from their MLAs now that we are full time and very well paid. We recently discussed this with Directors, and there are undoubtedly some elements we can improve on in terms of our communications and priority-setting."

MLA Cheek said members of the public can access members throughout the week simply by phoning Gilbert house to find a time: "I have had regular meetings with industry representatives which allow a helpful exchange of information and concerns."

Possibly as a result of the position being salaried and more secure more young people stood for election in 2013. However, they were all from Stanley; no young people stood for Camp. MLAs were keen to comment on this aspect.

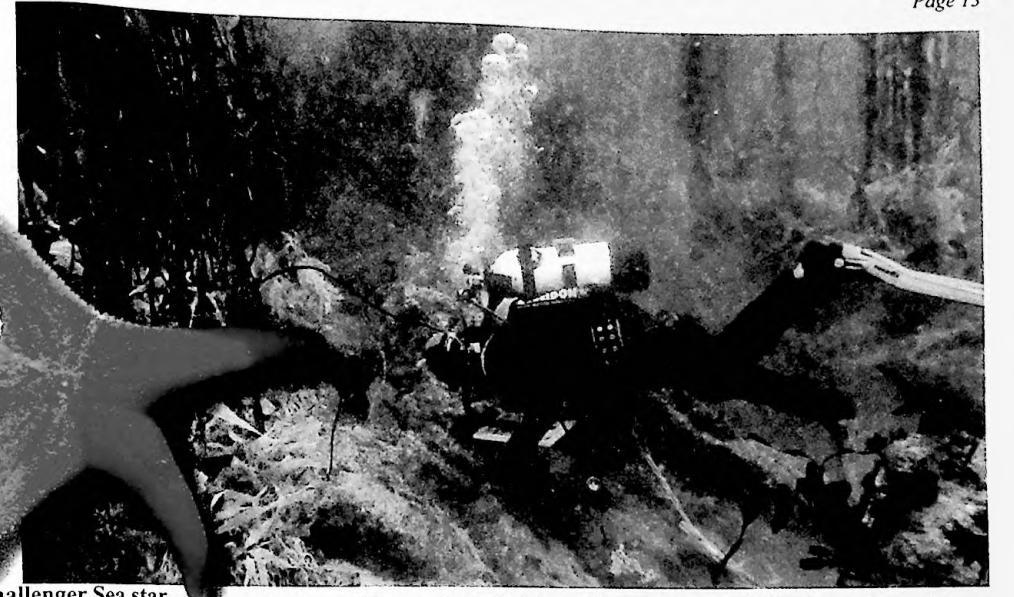

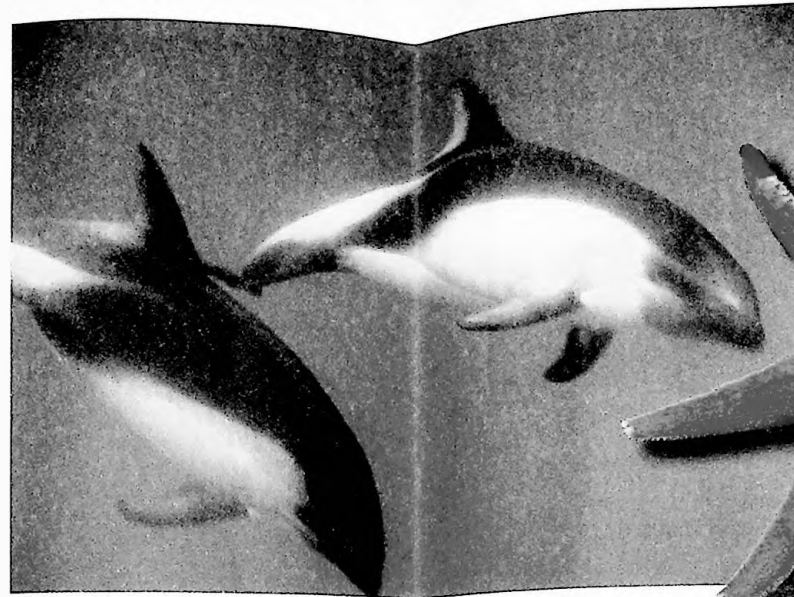

It's not looking good from a Camp point of view indicated MLA Hansen: "It was meant to encourage more people to stand, and in the Stanley constituency I think that will work well. I'm not convinced it's going to work in Camp because of the amount of time you are going to be away and only home on weekends. So to get someone who is younger and running a farm in Camp, even though they could pay someone to do something on the farm, being away from home that much I think it will be difficult."

He thought better communications in the Camp with access to video conferencing might help.

MLA Edwards was also concerned: "I do believe that the requirement for full time attendance in Stanley will put off a youngster who is just starting out in business from standing for election. Camp life demands your presence to look after the power, the water, the sewerage, the animals and a million and one other things.... Hiring in someone to stand in for you does not solve the problem and costs you half your salary."

MLA Elsby believed it was the only way to attract ordinary people to stand, "that is, not only those who were retired or financially independent.

"We saw a number of people put themselves forward at the last election who perhaps would not have considered it if it were not salaried. I believe we will see even more at the next election now they can see how it works."

Take a dive beneath Falklands waters

Jeremy Pierce arrived in the Falkland Islands at the end of October 2013, toting his dive gear and eager to explore seabeds new. He soon discovered that recreational scuba diving here wasn't going to be easy to pursue as the local BSAC Club no longer existed, there was no dive charter company and even shore diving was hampered to some degree with a need to master off-road driving and in some areas, minefields. Undeterred he followed several other lines of enquiry and eventually caught up with the current Falklands divers who make up the Shallow Marine Survey Group working out of the SAERI offices (South Atlantic Environmental Research Institute). Here he shares a glimpse of the surprising colour and variety of sea life lurking beneath the wintery Falklands waters....

HAVING located fellow divers I entered the water after just three weeks in the Islands and since then have managed to log 55 dives to date, at locations all around the Islands.

Getting so far around the Islands was made possible by taking a 10 day trip aboard the Golden Fleece with skipper Jerome Poncet. That was an awesome time involving not only diving but excursions ashore to see the wildlife.

Having gotten under the waves

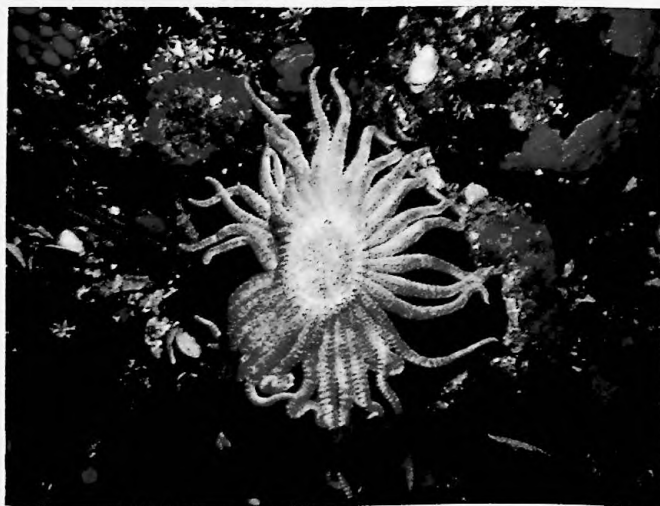

I discovered that the marine life lived up to my expectations with the added bonuses of visits from sea lions, dolphins and penguins.

As you 'glide' over a reef you soon realise that the rocks and boulders are covered in various forms of life. Sponges, sea squirts, encrusting algae, bryozoans, tube worms, anemones, soft corals, hydroids and barnacles.

Then roaming on top of all that you see shrimps (the Painted Shrimp is my favourite here), numerous types of crabs including

Sun Star

Spotted nudibranch

Painted shrimp

Hermit, Snow and Spider crabs. Then the limpets, chitons, snails and 'nudibranchs' (sea slugs) of all shapes, colour and sizes roam slowly over the surface of the other life, grazing on them in their place in the food chain.

Scallops, mussels and clams live either attached to the reef or in the sandy bottom. The odd Southern Red Octopus makes an appearance, but they are masters of camouflage and it is hard to see them.

Moving around the reefs feeding are also many different types of Sea Stars; Starfish to you and I! They come in all shapes, sizes and colours, but I think again my favourite is the Sunstar which can have up to 50 arms.

The list of sea life goes on with the sea urchins and sea cucumbers.

The water temperature ranged from 12 degrees or so in the summer down to five degrees in the winter; thank goodness for Dry-suits.

The visibility, in my opinion was magnificent, on some occasions, extending beyond 20 metres.

As you can see from the photographs there is an abundance of life and colour on the reefs and in the kelp forests; although the kelp looks like an impenetrable mass, under the sea the Giant Kelp grows up from its base in 'columns' and swimming through becomes the same as walking through a wood.

When the sun is shining it makes a fantastic view as you look up at the surface and see the rays of light piercing the water between the kelp.

Without wanting to bore anyone, the colours are there but without the flash of the camera or an external lamp/torch to illuminate them, to the eye they look far more bland. This is because as you go deeper the natural sunlight does not get through and after about 10 metres you lose red, then as you go deeper orange, yellow and violet fade away and at 30 metres you are left with green and blue. Eventually at about 70 meters all that's left is blue. Of course at greater depths it just gets dark, as the sunlight cannot penetrate. All of the pictures were taken in less than 20 metre depth, and more often than not, less than 10 metres. In theory making this wonderful underwater world accessible to snorkelers/free divers, with the right equipment of course.

Having dived around the UK, The Shetland Islands, Norway, Russia (under the ice), Egypt, The Maldives and Mauritius, diving here holds its own against these other locations. I can't thank enough the people who have helped get me 'wet' here and may I continue to do so; until the end of our Falkland Island experience.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:
Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.
Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147.225 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of East Falkland and repeats Mount Alice Repeater, which covers most of the south of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.
Mount Alice: Frequency: 147.825 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of West Falklands and links to Stanley via Pleasant Peak and Sapper Hill.
Mount Caroline: Frequency: 147.725 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north of West Falklands, including the cross sound ferry main operational area and links to Stanley via Mount Kent and Sapper Hill.
Marine Band: 156.800...Channel 16 (Stanley area) 2.182 MHz HF in the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is however unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland.

Fault Reporting - Users are encouraged to report any faults with the system.

Meet our NatWest Island Games 2015 teams

"If we come in the top ten I'll be happy, if we come in the top six or seven I'll be delighted, if we come home with a medal I'll just be absolutely over the moon." The words of Mark Lewis chatting to Penguin News this week about the archery team's hopes for the NatWest Island Games in Jersey next month.

He and Jo Lazo both won indoor medals in the Guernsey Archery competition two years ago but accept that the Island Games is going to produce tougher opponents.

In the lead up to the games, Jo and Mark along with Javier Lazo, Steve Cartwright, and Michelle King are shooting four times a week. It's not easy though with outside shooting very much weather dependent. "we try to make the best of the nice days," said Jo.

The preparation has been, "lots and lots of practice, so lots of arrows," Mark explained. Indoors they shoot 18 metres and outdoors they attempt to replicate the task they will face in Jersey on the first day of the competition. For the ladies that will be shooting 144 arrows over 70 metres, then 60, 50 then 30 metres. The men will also have 144 arrows and shoot over distances of 90, 70, 50 and 30 metres.

It's not easy, "due to the wind and not having a proper range but we just do what we can," he accepted.

The Archery Team

Mark Lewis, Michelle King, Jay Lazo, Jo Lazo and Steve Cartwright.

Jo and Michelle in training

The team will have almost two weeks training time in the UK prior to the games. A number of them will practice at the Nonsuch Bowmen range (the Falklands Archery Club has built up a relationship with the Surrey Club) and then with Sagittarii Archery Club in Poole, Dorset. Shooting in good weather is something they are, "looking forward to," said Jo, bearing in mind the poor weather conditions for their practice in the Falklands. Mark will spend his training time in Devon shooting with his two home clubs.

Training has also included getting their bow settings correct. This sounds like it might be simple said Mark, but, "for a modern competition bow there's quite a lot to get right on it."

This comprises adjustments to the tension on the limbs as well as getting the bracing right (the distance between the string and the handle) and the button (a little shock absorber) has to be properly tuned to take the bend out of the arrows.

"If a bow is properly tuned it will pick up points for you," they assured, "it will help you shoot more accurately. So we've all been fiddling with our bows to make sure they are as spot on as we can get them," said Mark.

The competition itself is over four days. The first day (FITA) is as mentioned previously, and a medal can be won as a result of team performance. Out of that day's shooting the judges will take the best two male scores and the best two female scores from each team and whoever is highest will be in the medal placings.

Day two comprises the 720 round; six dozen arrows at 70 metres (a ranking competition) and the following day is an individual head to head knockout, the ranking having been used to draw one competitor against another.

Day four is a team knockout with two men and one woman per team. Again it is, "pretty brutal," said Mark.

So what are their hopes? It is a very young club (just under four years old) and the team is relatively inexperienced. Jo and Jay have been shooting since the club was set up, Mark for eight years, Steve for two years and Michelle for about a year.

They know they have a tough job ahead (most needing to up their game by about 50 points to have a chance of doing well) but they are far from downhearted. As the most inexperienced team at the games, but still with a few medals under their belts, they all accept that it is a good a place as any to start.

Stanley Running Club

The next Running Club event is on Sunday 31st May. It's a 10km run, starting and finishing at the Narrows Bar entrance. This is a club points race. £5 adults, £3 juniors. Everyone very welcome.

Darts snippet

AT Monday night's dart match, the third of the season, five family members, spanning three generations stepped up to the oche in Deanos to play their matches.

Hazel Minnell as the matriarch still claims some sneaky matches setting the standard for children Adrian 'Bean' Minnell and on this occasion 'birthday girl' Ella Crowie. Meanwhile grandchildren Chris Poole and Jo Minnell also play and have some class acts to emulate.

PRESS RELEASE
FALKLAND ISLANDS QUEEN'S CERTIFICATE AND BADGE OF HONOUR

Nominations are requested for the 2015 Queen's Certificate and Badge of Honour. The purpose of such awards is to allow the Falkland Islands Government to recognise persons having connections with the Falkland Islands who have, by their loyalty and meritorious conduct, provided services of exceptional benefit to the people of the Falkland Islands, outside of their normal employment. The Queen's Certificate and its accompanying Badge of Honour will be awarded by HE the Governor acting on the advice of Executive Council on or around Falkland Day (14 August). The number of recipients will normally be restricted to three a year and the names of Queen's Certificate recipients will be published in the Official Gazette. It is open for anybody to nominate a person for the Honour and nomination forms are available on request from Gilbert House. Nominations should be submitted before Tuesday 16 June to the Clerk to Executive Council at Gilbert House Tel 27451 or by email to assembly@sec.gov.fk allowing time for consideration. The Queen's Certificate carries with it the right to wear a Badge to be worn on the breast on official occasions when full-sized medals are worn. This award does not replace, but is in addition to the award of other Honours such as the OBE and MBE, as part of the Diplomatic and Overseas List. These are awarded by HM The Queen on the recommendation of the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs. Government House Stanley 27 April 2015

2015 - Falkland Islands Journal
 Honours, Awards and Decorations in the Falkland Islands - Update

We should like to update the list of people honoured with decorations in the Falkland Islands in the forthcoming 2015 edition. If anyone is aware of any additions or corrections to this list prepared by Stephen Palmer for the 2014 Journal, please could they contact Jim McAdam, Editor, by email (jim.mcadam@albi.gov.uk) or Alison Barton locally, with details of the award, date and what the citation was. (This list does not include decorations and honours from 1982 War as they were listed in the London Gazette Supplement of October 1982). We would be grateful to have these by the end of June. Anyone requiring copy of the list prepared by Stephen Palmer, for review, please contact Alison Barton (ajbarton@horizon.co.fk tel. 34775) who can supply you with a list.

Pause for Prayer is a monthly interdenominational prayer meeting aimed with women in mind. We meet once a month on the first Wednesday of each month, we informally discuss women of the Bible followed by a time of prayer. All women are welcome, we start at 4.45pm and aim to finish at 6pm, and our next meeting will be on Wednesday June 3rd at 9 Anderson Drive. Take time out of a busy life to Pause for Prayer, everyone is welcome from whatever church background. For more details contact Alison on 21851

Economy 'strong' but Government will only spend what it can afford

THE Falkland Islands Government will only spend to a level it can afford. "and is sustainable over the Medium Term financial Plan (MTFP)" it was emphasised in the Budget Highlights.

The Budget is subject to presentation to Legislative Assembly today.

Within a Falklands economy described by the Financial Secretary Nicola Granger as generally "strong," higher revenues from Illex this year have "bolstered," the Government's financial position and enabled Mrs Granger to present a sustainable budget.

Quality of life

Under the budget principle, "To seek to improve the quality of life in the Falkland Islands" Mrs Granger announced a 6.5 per cent increase in minimum wage to £5.38 per hour, and a 2 per cent civil service cost of living increase and the reintroduction of incremental salary progression.

There will be a 1.5 per cent increase in welfare, fostering and attendance allowances, and child allowance will be increased to £68 per week.

Pensions will be increased by 4 per cent (standard retirement pension £147/week)

There will be an extension of the contribution credits scheme and an increase in the earnings threshold for the Retirement Pension Scheme. The requirement to pay in excess of 2,200 contributions will be removed as will be interest charges on voluntary Retirement Pension contributions.

Economic Development

There is to be an additional £3.1M direct spending in support of economic development and there will also be additional support for local investments of up to £10M to be managed through

FIDC loans policy.

There is to be an extension of depreciation allowances for businesses, and capital allowances will be made available to the self-employed for the purposes of MST from January 1, next year.

Infrastructure

The capital investment strategy includes net investments of £53.2M.

£1.5M will go towards the beginning of the surfacing of the MPA road with a further £1.5M a year for the term of the MTFP.

Existing schemes will progress such as the development of older people's service, housing and infrastructure development.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

IT'S difficult to come up with anything terribly exciting to say about a budget that I can only describe as cautious with top notes of optimism and a mild whiff of humouring.

The caution speaks for itself: if FIG was a parent she (or he) would be freezing the left overs, buying sensible shoes "that'll last" and turning down offers of store cards. It's all about what's affordable and sustainable.

At the same time there's no sense of belt tightening; in fact it emphasises support for some of the most vulnerable members of the community (minimum wage increase, welfare, fostering, child allowance, pensions, development of older peoples services) but where there's additional cash, it invests in the economic future of the Falklands. The latter a nod to the private sector, that, despite a large degree of uncertainty in relation to a future oil and gas industry in the Falklands, this is more than just a 'holding' budget. Not much more, but a little more.

As a Falkland Islander I can't find too much to rebel against in this budget, but as a Penguin News editor I'll admit to that making me a little glum.

But never fear, there's always something to get testy about. After all while I'm quite certain there will be a degree of satisfaction that some funding has resulted for MPA Road Tarmacing, I still can't help feeling such a paltry amount screams of a half hearted attempt to shut up the grumbling masses. £1.5 million worth of Tarmac barely offers the opportunity to change up a gear before bouncing back into the pot holes.

Either offer up an amount to the value of a decent stretch of road, or, as one reader pointed out in a letter some time back, borrow the money and do the job properly. I realise government has a fear of borrowing, but that doesn't actually mean it's not a perfectly sensible course of action if you can afford the repayments.

In her column this week, MLA Cheek touches on the issues faced by the children's nurseries in Stanley.

The potential loss of nurseries due to financial difficulties, lack of staff or training or even over-regulation could be disastrous for the Falklands economy in terms of a hefty depletion of the work force. In the near future we at Penguin News will be chatting with people within that sector with the intention of providing readers with a comprehensive piece outlining the serious challenges faced by nurseries and what they feel can be done to help.

Good year for the nation

HE the Acting Governor's speech to Legislative Assembly

POSITIVE developments in all of the Falklands key industries were outlined by the Acting Governor Sandra Haywood in her speech to the Legislative Assembly Budget session this week.

She noted a good year for agriculture, increasing numbers in tourism and the growth of the hydrocarbons industry, "despite Argentine efforts to disrupt activity and threaten legal action against participants."

Referring to the latter she said: "These efforts have proven ineffective, and the Government of the United Kingdom continues to be resolute in defending the rights and wishes of the Falkland Islanders to develop their own natural resources and ensure that legitimate economic activity in Falkland Islands' waters continues unhindered."

On the subject of the Falklands fishery she commented: "2014 was a record year for the Illex squid fishery. However, the 2015 Illex season has now surpassed even that with a new record at 353,000 tonnes."

Mrs Haywood emphasised the Falklands good management of its fishery but added that "the number of deaths and serious accidents amongst fishermen, particularly in the jigging fleet, remains unacceptable."

She said: "Work is ongoing to put procedures and protocols in place to reduce such incidents and improve the welfare and protection of fishermen."

She added that: "Work also continues on modernising the fishing licence regime," with reference to the review of the ITQ system.

Speaking of the Budget itself she noted developments in health care and that an agreed process had been, "established to progress Older People's services to deliver a Falklands preferred model."

She said: "This will not just deliver a building, but also a range of community support services to ensure that people's independence in their own homes can be maximised and that more expensive, institutional forms of care do not become necessary too early due to lack of a preventive approach."

On Social Services she said that encompassed, "children's services, adult services and the probation service. Demands for all branches have increased markedly and staff manage referrals and necessary development work within their available resources. The action plan arising from the original Lucy Faithfull review has been substantially completed and we invited the same organisation to re-inspect to gain an objective view on progress and other related issues. This second review took place in March 2015 and it is reassuring to see that their view is that the vital provision of cross agency safeguarding for children has been largely achieved with credit going to all staff concerned in achieving a major transformation."

The review is to be made public.

She went on to caution that the Islands would continue to face difficult challenges in the immediate and longer terms. She said: "The population is essentially static and ageing yet the number of children in the Islands increasing. The availability of workers is a concern, at a time when the employment market is under pressure from economic growth and new industries. There will also be potential care issues for the future. FIG must prepare to respond to these demographic changes in the coming years."

In the face of this, "it is vital that our strong economy is maintained," said Mrs Haywood.

She explained that the Economic Development Strategy produced in partnership with local businesses, was designed as a road map to help in developing the economy.

The strategy includes measures to develop existing industries such as fisheries, agriculture and tourism but also options for diversification into new sectors and for improving the general economic environment said Mrs Haywood.

Since it is some time since the Strategy was originally developed, it will be reviewed in the coming year once the new Head of Policy is in post, to ensure it remains relevant and fit for purpose, she noted.

Mrs Haywood commented that the challenges are all, "compounded by having to deal with continued attempts by the Government of Argentina to stifle our economy and block our economic development. However, we are confident that these attempts will continue to fail as we have the full backing of the UK Government and international law. Such attempts are inconvenient and frustrating but our focus must remain on our own objectives and we should not be diverted by baseless attempts to derail us. We will continue to concentrate on our own development agenda, in all areas."

In the remainder of her speech she outlined the priority aims of a number of Government Departments.

Alana Arculus

NEW manager of Stanley Kids Zone mum of three Alana Arculus is, "keen to share," her knowledge and experience in the Falklands having led an 'Outstanding' rated nursery in the UK

She told Penguin News this week "I think the Falkland Islands is an amazing place. There are huge opportunities in Early Years with your closely knit community and there are a lot of people focused on making a difference."

Stanley Kids Zone will be holding an Open Day this Saturday and Mrs Arculus urged, "Come along to see what the children have been up to, learn more about the exciting activities coming up, or just to browse its garage sale and let your kids burn off energy on the bouncy castle."

"The team have worked very hard to create a programme of activities that is fun for the children but also helps their development in all the key areas."

She explained that children need consistency, "and we are working with the school and parents to ensure we give them that. IJS tells us that they need us to work on communication skills and independence so that is what we are doing."

"From babies to infant school, young kids need to play and have fun but we teach key skills in doing so."

She said at Stanley Kids Zone they are, "very lucky to benefit from a great deal of community support. We hope people will come along and see for themselves what we do."

Stanley Kids Zone will be open on Saturday from 10- 12pm. Please come along and support this local asset said Mrs Arculus.

SA Medal on Liberation Day

MLA Ian Hansen will receive the South Atlantic Medal on behalf of Falkland Islanders at midday on Liberation Day at the public reception in the Town Hall. The Governor will present the medal which is in recognition of Islanders who assisted British Forces during the liberation of the Islands in 1982.

A mix of music for Falklands culture

The audience show their appreciation - more pictures next week

A MIX of music and national dress created a colourful scene at Government House on Wednesday night as the first of several events celebrating Falklands culture took place.

Hosted by Deputy Governor Sandra Haywood and organised by local musician David Ashbridge the event included music from Chilean and Filipino residents as well as songs written by Falklands residents over the years. Singer-song writer and now Falklands farmer Andy Neate brought the event to a close with songs from her Scottish home-land and others she has written in the Falklands.

Trough two go to jail but McKay gets out on appeal

THREE men were sentenced to six months in prison in the Senior Magistrates Court on Wednesday, but only two of them were escorted across the road to the jail.

Bono John McKay (22), Arthur Leonard Pitaluga Turner (48) and Dylan Stephenson (21) were each sentenced to six months in jail with four months suspended, and ordered to pay compensation and court costs amounting to a total of £4,474.28 for the joint enterprise offence of assault occasioning actual bodily harm.

The offences took place against George Toolan at the Trough almost a year ago.

However Bono McKay's lawyer Andrew Teate who was brought to the Islands to represent him separately during the eight day trial in mid April, appealed against the sentence via a Skype link to the court. Mr McKay was granted bail pending the appeal.

Mr McKay was also sentenced to one month each in prison for two convictions of battery and Mr Stephenson to one month for the same charge. These were to run concurrently and would not increase the time spent in prison.

The fourth person involved in the incident, Lauren Joyce McKay (20) was given a probation order for one year and ordered to pay £185 costs for using threatening words and behaviour also towards Mr Toolan.

Senior Magistrate Clare Faulds said the probation order was a restriction of liberty as Miss McKay would have to work with the Probation Officer, adding, "I hope it will enable you to move forward and also protect the public from your behaviour bubbling up at will."

Mrs Faulds told Mr McKay that she was concerned with his attitude that if someone did not do what he said, he could use violence and that he felt there was, "some normality in that." It was an illegal and not socially acceptable characteristic he needed to reflect on, she said, adding that it was a, "form of bullying."

She noted that in the pre-sentence report he had not been able to accept that he was guilty.

Mr Stephenson should have been aware of the consequences of becoming embroiled in something that was not his problem having been convicted of assaulting a police officer just a year before, said Mrs Faulds.

Mr Turner was, "in the same boat," she said, adding however that his previous offences were no longer relevant and were not taken into account, "but you are old enough to know better, old enough to have guided them," she told him.

The compensation to Mr Toolan was to cover damage to clothing, losses from time off work, overtime, and on call fire fighter allowance and both physical and mental injury.

THE 33rd anniversary of the liberation of Goose Green by British Forces was commemorated on May 29 with a remembrance service at the memorial overlooking the settlement, at which wreaths were laid in memory of those who lost their lives. Picture: MPC Photo Section

Firearms Assoc is formed

THE Inaugural General Meeting of the newly formed Falkland Firearms Association was held on Tuesday with 26 interested persons attending the meeting and a new committee formed.

Stephen Luxton was appointed as Chair with representatives appointed to the General Committee from the farming community, the Rifle Association, the Gun club and the wider shooting community. It is hoped that the new Association will become a 'voice' for all those involved in the ownership, use and/or sale of firearms. The 'Mission Statement' of the Association is in draft at present.

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

BUDGET week may be a little less busy than some in previous years when we have been scraping around for every pound. While no-one is complacent, we are close to reaching some sensible conclusions. I will be surprised if one or more members outvoted on earlier decisions do not want to revisit some of them, nothing is final until the end of the Assembly on Friday. It is a lesson in democracy and we will all have some disappointments but I just move on, if I've been unable to convince colleagues it is pointless dragging out the argument.

Nursery and child care provision was one of the subjects raised at the last public meeting. There are several points of view ranging from the quaintly old fashioned idea that all women should stay home and mind the children to the other extreme of mothers who are back at work within a few weeks. Most children are lucky enough to have two parents on the scene who can share some of the load but it must not be forgotten that there are many lone parents doing their best for their children. While some mothers have the luxury of choice whether they go out to work and increase family income, for some it is a financial necessity. What parents can pay for child care has to a great extent dictated what nurseries can pay their staff; hence problems, for example staff retention is difficult, as is managing safe staff child ratios.

I have actively supported the suggestion that FIG and businesses should give some support to nurseries because if one working parent from each family withdrew from work the economy would come to a standstill. One or two businesses have given assistance to nurseries over the years. It would also assist nurseries in applying best practice. More years ago than I care to remember I suggested the provision of nursery vouchers to be used for child care establishments that maintained acceptable standards. I still remember one of the arguments used against the idea was the assertion that children's bad behaviour was caused by having working mothers.

Budget highlights

There will be a £2M per year investment in the Camp road network plus £1M per year for the maintenance of FIPASS.

Additional funding for high priority schemes will include power supply improvements, medical equipment and hospital facilities, quarry plant and facilities, infrastructure for additional mobile homes, investment in parks and playgrounds and a fire training facility.

Public Services

With the aim of funding "efficient and effective public services," there will be additional funding for Health (£2.5M), Education (£2.5M) and Public Diplomacy (£1M) over five years.

There will be an increase in fees for government services towards cost recovery, "where appropriate," but no changes to tax bands or rates.

Sustainable pension arrangements

The two FIG pension funds will receive £10.3M over the five years in transfers to seek to reduce the deficits.

The Retirement pension contribution rate will increase by 50p to £29.50 from January 1, 2016.

Also in her budget outline Mrs Granger noted that it did not require any public sector borrowing and FIG would maintain "2.5 times departmental spend in uncommitted reserves for the term of the MTFP."

Deferred sentence for youth to 'show what he's made of'

A 17 year old Stanley youth was given a deferred sentence on Friday after he had admitted two further offences of burglary.

The youth had originally been given a suspended sentence and supervision order for eight burglaries on February 18, but admitted a further two offences for which he was sentenced to a two month detention and supervision order on April 9.

However it came to the attention of the Police that there had been a further two incidences and that the youth while in jail had tried to contact a friend to dispose of the underwear he had stolen from two separate homes and concealed outside.

Crown Prosecutor Simon Rowe said that true to form for the young man, he had made full confessions that he had committed the burglaries after his release from custody.

Senior Magistrate Clare Faulds said she had considered medical reports carefully adding that she was pleased that he had taken part in a series of tests, which had assisted her decision.

She said he had made progress to date and it was the right thing to give him a chance to, "show what you can do, what you are made of"

She reminded that the offences were serious, but said she believed her decision was in the interest of justice and had been made in light of the professional reports received.

Case adjourned for point of law

STANLEY man Steven Geoffrey Miller awaits the outcome of his application to have his driving licence restored after a point of law was raised on Thursday.

Mr Miller was disqualified from driving for two years in December 2014 when he was jailed for 18 months for sexual offences, on the grounds that the sexual activity had taken place whilst he was out 'spinning' with the victim.

He said he needed his licence back for work reasons and to help in family life.

Crown Prosecutor Simon Rowe brought to the Magistrates attention that the wording of the Traffic Ordinance and the Criminal and Justice Ordinance may mean that the Senior Magistrate could not lift the licence suspension.

After studying the ordinance, it was decided that clarification from the Attorney General was needed on what powers the Senior Magistrate had in the matter.

The case was adjourned with a date not yet fixed for Mr Miller to reappear in court.

IJS auction art for earthquake appeal

LSA Sarah Cooper with her penguin made from re-cycled Penguin News

FUND raising for the Nepal Earthquake Appeal took an artistic turn this week when children and staff of the Infant and Junior School unveiled framed works for auction.

A total of 41 pictures using a range of mediums are on display in the reception area at the school and also on Facebook page 'IJS and Camp Education Nepal Art Auction' where bids can be placed.

The art work display which is the brain child of Samantha Chapman can be viewed during school hours. Jeanette Hartley and Karen Armstrong-Ford have also been instrumental in getting the exhibition set up.

Bids can be placed in the comments section under the relevant photo, or may be placed anonymously by contacting the IJS office or one of the admin members.

Bidding will close at midnight on June 17.

After just a few hours bidding on Tuesday night more than £1,000 had been raised Norman Clark also reported this week that £22,233 had made its way to the Standard Chartered Bank account so far. The Government have pledged to match funds raised by the community.

£4,201 for West walkers

THE marathon Pink Walk carried out from Port Stephens to Port Howard last month has raised a massive £4,201 to be split between two charities.

Diane Towersey, Jacqui Jennings and Tex Alazia undertook the 93 mile trek which they completed in four days from May 14-17.

The Falklands Cancer Support and Awareness Trust and Breast Cancer Support UK, which Diane has been supporting since her treatment are to benefit.

They held some competitions along the way and the winners of guess the steps at 181,645 was Lisa Pole-Evans. Second was Terri and Chris Biggs and third Graham Forrester.

Prizes are stays at Port Stephens, Port Edgar and Black Shanty.

Kenneth and Josie McKay bid £270 for a stay at The Nest on

Pebble Island donated by Susie Hansen.

Tex Alazia who was in Stanley this week once again carrying out charitable work at the Stanley House Open Day thanked everyone for all their help and support. "and of course everyone who donated such a huge amount of money."

Tristan Guidicelli

1. What is your most prized possession?

Ableton live and all my music projects.

2. Who would you most like to have a cup of tea/tot with?

I don't drink tea, however I would like to have a drink with Jackie Chan the drunken master

3. If you had a motto what would it be?

The sweet is never as sweet without the sour

4. If you could set up a business in the Falklands what would it be?

A decent nightclub that plays decent music and has a licence to stay open till 4am

5. What in your everyday life drives you crazy?

People with no manners, or people who take up the entire pavement and then walk really slowly

6. Who would you make Governor of the Falklands?

Arnold Shwarzenegger

7. What is your nickname and why?

Trissy G. I guess because my boy smashed it

8. What song makes you feel happy when you hear it?

At the moment it would have to be Klaves - People. Or, The Boys Doin It (Carl Craig remix) very powerful tune

9. What would people be surprised to learn about you?

My music has been on radio 1

10. What is the one, single food you would never give up?

Brains

Tristan has been a waiter at the Waterfront Cafe for the past six months after being away for 10 years, (his mother Dominique worked as the Environmental Planning Officer). He will be returning to Brighton in June, just in time for the sun and parties.

He is a keen and experienced music producer which has led to several releases and opportunities to DJ in some "cool places."

"I have enjoyed my stay in the Falklands and would love to return as it has charm and most people I have met have been so kind and helpful."

ANNIVERSARY OF LIBERATION DAY 2015

To mark the anniversary of the liberation of the Falkland Islands from Argentinean occupation in 1982, the following programme has been arranged for Sunday 14 June 2015.

A Thanksgiving Service will be held in Christ Church Cathedral commencing at 9.45 am. His Excellency the Governor, Members of the Legislative Assembly together with the Commander British Forces will attend the service. The marching troops will consist of the Royal Navy, Falkland Islands Defence Force, Army, and Royal Air Force. The Royal British Legion and Associations and Youth Groups will be in attendance. Veterans from 1982 will also be present.

At 11.00 am a ceremony will be held at the Liberation Monument in front of the Secretariat building. After prayers His Excellency the Governor will lay a wreath. Wreaths will also be laid by a Member of the Legislative Assembly, the Commander British Forces, Veteran associations, and by relatives and others wishing to do so.

Members of the community wishing to attend are asked to arrive no later than 10.45 a.m. Attention is drawn to the fact that Ross Road between Barrack St and Reservoir Road will be closed to traffic to enable the ceremony at the Monument to take place.

It is appropriate for medals and decorations to be worn on this occasion.

A public reception hosted by the Falkland Islands Government, will be held in the Town Hall from 1130 hrs to 1330 hrs. At 1200 noon His Excellency the Governor Colin Roberts will present the South Atlantic Medal to MLA Ian Hansen on behalf of all Islanders. The Medal has been awarded by Her Majesty the Queen to the Falkland Islands in recognition of the Islanders who assisted the Forces of the United Kingdom during the Liberation of the Falkland Islands in 1982. During the presentation of the medal the door and bar will be closed. All residents and members of the Armed Services are cordially invited to attend.

Mentorship Programme

FIDC's Youth Entrepreneurship Scheme is pleased to unveil its Business mentorship programme. The purpose of this is for established entrepreneurs to give feedback and guidance to people with less experience of running their own business. Several business mentors have already been recruited, however if you are interested in taking part either in order to be mentored or in order to impart your business knowledge then please get in touch with Development intern Joseph Birmingham via the contact details listed below.

Work Experience Scheme

FIDC is also pleased to unveil its work experience Scheme aimed at 16-25 year olds that have considered starting their own business. The aim of the scheme is to give those taking part the opportunity to witness what is involved in running your own business on a day to day basis in order to increase awareness of what must be undertaken to do this. If you are interested in taking part in the work experience scheme or have questions then please contact Joseph Birmingham at Microsoft Windows 10. Friend or foe?

ON July 29th 2015, Microsoft are releasing Windows 10 to the general public worldwide, and the good news - it's free to all Windows 7 and Windows 8.1 users. Take a look at your Notification Area in the task bar and you should find a Windows icon that, when clicked, reveals a shiny new Windows 10 upgrade panel. If it isn't there yet it soon will be. This panel, when clicked, allows you to reserve your copy of the released version of Windows 10, which over time will download 3gb of data on to your machine ready for install on or after July 29th.

Initial reports on the beta versions are that it is head and shoulders better than Windows 8 already so you may be tempted to reserve your copy now, but read on Falkland Islanders in particular need to be aware of some important factors. a) you have no control over when Microsoft will start or finish the 3gb download b) any extra changes to the final release on July 29 will also be downloaded c) current Windows 7 home, home basic or home premium users along with Windows 8.1 users not on the Pro version will permanently lose the ability to stop automatic upgrades by upgrading to Windows 10.

The ability to control when you download Microsoft security patches means that you can keep your machines fully up to date and secure using the free bandwidth available through Sure after midnight. Lose this ability and you may get large downloads when you least expect it, day or night, without any option to stop it.

Andy Trish is a 1982 veteran, Owner and Managing Director of NCI Technologies, a UK based Microsoft worldwide award winning computer support company. Here he shares how Microsoft's Windows 10 will affect users in the Falklands

There is currently no information released by Microsoft on whether an in-place downgrade is available should you not like Windows 10 so ensure if you do upgrade, that you have a complete working backup of your current operating system and data.

Some of the features available in the upcoming release will be country specific or require special hardware to run but for the average user, if it runs windows 7 it should run windows 10. For those who love the game 'Hearts' steer well away from Windows 10, they are stripping it out only to replace it with the highly addictive "Candy Crush"

Arch Green needs TLC not disfiguring

I SHOULD like to echo Tim Miller's comments in last week's letters, regarding Arch Green. If we really have money to throw at it, perhaps it should be spent on resurfacing the tatty paths and steps with Fox Bay stone, and replacing the very ugly green wheelie bin and utilitarian bench with the same attractive blue bins sporting the Falklands coat-of-arms, as seen elsewhere in town, along with some more attractive seating.

The arch itself was beautifully restored by Tim Carr over twenty years ago, and now needs further attention if it is to survive for future generations. A recent suggestion on Facebook was to replace the existing fencing with picket fencing. Whilst the latter is more expensive, it is more traditional, and there is not a great deal of it, so perhaps a new picket fence is called for, with matching gate. (The existing one is broken.) Those hard-won flower gardens should be left undisturbed and not sullied with ugly concrete, which no tourist will thank you for.

A bit more money set aside for some extra attention to the gardens, and cutting back of the macrocarpa branches now hanging low over the path. (I walk through there most days), and Arch Green should be perfect for the summer, for the enjoyment of Falklands residents, as well as tourists.

Arch Green is an elegant old lady in need of a small makeover - not drastic plastic surgery. She should be treated with the respect she deserves.

Ginge says it how he sees it

OPEN letter to MLA Jan Cheek: Reference last week's comment in your weekly column, I was not trying to accuse you at the time (when I was working on the roads, around about 1989) that this was going on. [MLA Cheek commented in her column that at the public meeting she was accused with other councillors that they ordered the halving of the depth of tarmac on the MPA Road some years ago].

At the time I went to Councillor Mike Summers and reported my concerns about the immediate superior to the road engineer who was coming down nearly every day using the same expression, 'cut back, cut back, cut back' pertaining to the amount of tarmac which we were laying down.

I had to go to a funeral in UK but when I returned I saw Councillor Summers a second time and I spoke about the same thing.

His remark, which shocked me, was that, "it's alright now, we got rid of the road engineer." It was not his fault; he was told by his superior to cut back to 1 1/2 inches from 4 inches.

At this point I said, "you sacked the wrong man."

For you to question my veracity ma'am I think is ironic, as when you were on the council years ago, you and others stated quite emphatically in your manifestos that you would not negotiate with Argentina unless they dropped the claim on sovereignty, and within a year you and others negotiated and allowed Argentinean citizens to come here to the Islands with Argentinean passports.

I don't think you should question my veracity, but I can certainly question yours and others.

On the subject of being consulted on technical matters I do understand at the time councillors were amateur politicians, but now they are recipients of money from the public purse; they should by now be more focused as they are now professionals. It's not a subject that is very technical and anybody should understand it.

As an aside I've recently heard that the Maud Sallis Trust Fund has stopped the red bus from using the MPA road due to dangerous road conditions.

Regarding the recent problems with Argentines defacing British war memorials, putting up graffiti and waving their repugnant flag about, I put the blame fairly and squarely at the feet of those councillors who allowed them to come in the first place.

If people cannot stand by their manifestos but renege on their principles, how can the electorate trust their elected members?

I've spoken to a number of youngsters and asked them to come along to public meetings when they would like to have a problem solved: they've all said, "what's the point, nothing ever gets done."

I must admit, most of the meetings I've been to have been full of rhetorical platitudes.

In the words of William Tecumseh Sherman: Vox populi, vox humbug.

Falklands Fred is Deputy Mayor of Bromyard and Winslow Council

Fred Clark

HAVING spent much of his life in the Islands Fred Clark (above) found himself in the quiet market town of Bromyard in the rural County of Hereford, UK. Was he a man to sit still and do nothing? No chance.

In the few short years Fred has been amongst us he has become something of an iconic figure joining this and that organisation, local bee-keeper and general all-round community stalwart. He is also well known on the lecture circuit giving talks all over the county on the Falklands wildlife and his experiences during the 1982 War.

Well I am now pleased to report that Fred's commitment to the community has been recognised for he has been elected Deputy Mayor of Bromyard and Winslow Town Council, a position he has accepted with his usual gusto.

The term of office is for one year during which he will be standing in for the Mayor at various events and functions throughout the county, an ambassador for our small yet thriving market town.

Well done Bromyards own 'Falklands Fred'.

Peder Nielsen, M.A.H.G.T.C.

Tugboat that has earned a place in our maritime heritage
 THANKS to my increasingly sentimental nature, which has now become almost worryingly acute, I am still lamenting the fate that befell the little Stanley tugboat Lively last week.

The 40-something foot-long boat was probably the oldest vessel afloat in the harbour, and almost certainly the oldest vessel still doing a job of work, even if (as befits an old lady showing her years) she had recently been spending most of her time moored comfortably in the Canache.

It was there last week that, for reasons unknown to me, she began to slip lower and lower into the water and eventually disappeared almost completely. The photos that I saw on Facebook a day after her sinking showed just the top of her wheelhouse and a little of her fan-tail stem above water.

I know that the owner and others were working hard to stop Lively disappearing completely and get her back on an even keel. By the time you read this, we will know whether the salvors have been successful. In any case they have my most sincere best wishes for success.

Stanley Harbour was once home to one of the most important concentrations of historic ships in the world, if not the most important. Over the last few decades, almost all Stanley's windjammer hulks have given in to the ravages of weather, with little or nothing being done to slow their loss. At about the same time, we began to lose the last of the little inter-island ketches and schooners, the craft that made settlement of the outer islands and the development of a sheep farming economy possible. In a few cases, sailing craft, such as Penelope and Ilen, were rescued by overseas enthusiasts and taken away for conservation, but others were just lost or abandoned.

Lively, built in Punta Arenas in the early 1940s for the Falkland Islands Company, cannot be counted among the inter-island vessels or, of course, among the big ocean-going ships that ended their days in Stanley. But over the course of some 75 years pulling oil barges around the harbour and plying to and from the Camber, she has earned a place in our maritime heritage. She may be Port Stanley's last precious boat, and I therefore hope fervently that efforts to save her are successful.

The best way to keep any boat or ship alive is to keep her working, but I fear that is a forlorn hope for Lively. Even if she is salvaged successfully, her working days may well be over. If that is so, then I hope she will be cared for in perpetuity. She deserves it because she worked through 75 years of history and because - and here's that sentimentality of mine again - she is simply a lovely little ship.

Plucked from the Street for a career in modelling

Have I told you about the small dog who has changed my life? Apologies if I have, but I can't talk enough about Booboo, the four-year-old poodle-spaniel mix who is full of mischief, intelligence and affection. The joy that he brings not only me but every stranger with whom he comes into contact is remarkable.

Bound Ungagged

Graham Bound is the founding editor of Penguin News

Everyone loves Booboo because he loves everyone. So he and I are accustomed to making slow progress on our walks around West London, as people - often tourists missing their own pets - approach us, beaming at Booboo and looking for a lick and paw.

Nevertheless, I was surprised a week or so ago when a young woman - a typical PR type: Jackie Onassis shades pushed back over immaculate hair that framed an extravagantly made-up but pretty face - dashed purposefully out of a posh shop in the Portobello area and ran up to us. Trust me, that doesn't happen to me that often these days, so when she said, "Excuse me but could you help us?" I responded positively.

"We're looking for a model," she said. "Would..."

"Of course," I said. "Happy to help. I haven't done any modelling for some time but I expect it's like riding a bike."

"No, not you," said the PR girl. "Your dog."

So it was that Booboo got his first modelling gig and I was left in his shadow. Kate Moss was spotted on the street, and now it was happening to Booboo. The spinning dollar signs more than made up for my humiliation.

It turned out that this posh shop called Meli Melo was promoting a new range of matching leather handbags, doggy leads and collars (up to £500 for a bag, somewhat less for the canine gear). Booboo was placed on a satin-covered sofa and took his directions perfectly. First one side of his furry face, then the other. A little bit of tongue out and some panting... "That's it! Absolutely fabulous, darling!"

The dog is a pro. We left with a free leopard-skin effect collar and a few days later a set of photos arrived by email with a link to the shop's website. If you'd like to check Booboo out and maybe consider a £500 bag, click your way to the Meli Melo website. <http://www.melimelo.com/blogs/news/26933892-the-las-and-tails>.

I'm not promoting their posh products, but I am promoting the perfect little pooch. After all, with his new found modelling skills, he could become a major contributor to my retirement fund.

All hands on deck for Stanley House open day

THE Stanley House open afternoon raised a massive £1,432.11 on Saturday with a range of stalls and games which attracted a huge crowd throughout the afternoon.

Senior House Parent Julie Courtney said the funds are used for extra curricular activities and also their Reward System for students who perform well both in school and around Stanley House.

The students worked hard after the event with packing everything away and it was great to see them, staff, parents and others all pulling together. "They are a great bunch of kids," said Mrs Courtney.

She thanked everyone who came along on the day and who donated to the raffle and stalls, "your support is very much appreciated."

May Ball 2015

OPHELIA Ellick, looking stunning in a shimmering pink gown with a sparkling sequined strapless bodice, was crowned May Queen for 2015 at last Friday's annual May Ball held in the Town Hall.

At a very enjoyable and lively evening during which almost £3,000 was raised for the general running costs of the Scouts who organise the event, Daniel Clarke was crowned next to Ophelia, as Prince Charming. Daniel is well known for his enthusiasm for amateur dramatics, presenting on local radio and a popular winner.

Two others to be rewarded for their appearance, personality and dance skills were Fñon Smith (May Princess) beautiful in a brilliant red gown and smartly dressed Ashley Reeves (Runner Up Prince Charming).

The May Queen received a sash created by Nikki Buxton and both ladies were given tiaras, flowers (by Jan Miller) and a gift. The gentlemen were also given a gift. All of the above were presented by the Acting Governor Sandra Haywood.

The young men and women who entered the 'competition' part of the May Ball, were a credit to the family and friends who accompanied them, having made enormous efforts in terms of their appearance on the night, and dance practice prior to the ball.

The May Ball has been a traditional event for many years; the original focus, Queen Victoria's birthday or Empire Day, May 24, and it has barely decreased in popularity over the years. In fact this year was something of a triumph with a far bigger turn-out than usual. The youngsters' excellent knowledge of the traditional dance steps (music by Mel Lloyd) is largely thanks to Lisa and Lee Martin who give dance lessons in the Parish Hall in the weeks leading up to the Ball.

The Ball is organised by Admiral Sturdee's Own Scout Group and this year kindly sponsored by Sure.

Another equally popular 'family dance' was held on Saturday night.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:
Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.
Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147.225 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of East Falkland and repeats Mount Alice Repeater, which covers most of the south of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.
Mount Alice: Frequency: 147.825 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of West Falklands and links to Stanley via Pleasant Peak and Sapper Hill.
Mount Caroline: Frequency: 147.725 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north of West Falklands, including the cross sound ferry main operational area and links to Stanley via Mount Kent and Sapper Hill.
Marine Band: 156.800, Channel 16 (Stanley area) 2.182 MHz HF In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFI may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is however unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland.

Fault Reporting - Users are encouraged to report any faults with the system:
Telephone: 28100, E-mail: inspector@police.gov.fk or fax: 28110

Confidential, secure and safe. Got a question, need info or help?

AFTER spending 15 years together, 10 of which they have lived in the Falklands, Dyola Henry and Merrill Legg tied the knot with a civil ceremony at the FIDF Hall on Saturday afternoon.

The hall looked resplendent decorated throughout with a purple, silver and white colour scheme which was continued throughout the bridal party.

Merrill who works for Morrison (Falklands) Ltd in Stanley was supported by Charles Dickson of Brookfield Farm as his best man while young Carl Knipe had the huge responsibility of being ring bearer.

Dyola who is well known as the cheerful face of the Chandlery was given away by Bobby Crowie and was accompanied by bridesmaids Beverley Reid and Marika Joshua along with flower girls Chelsea Glanville and Keysha and Genna Crowie.

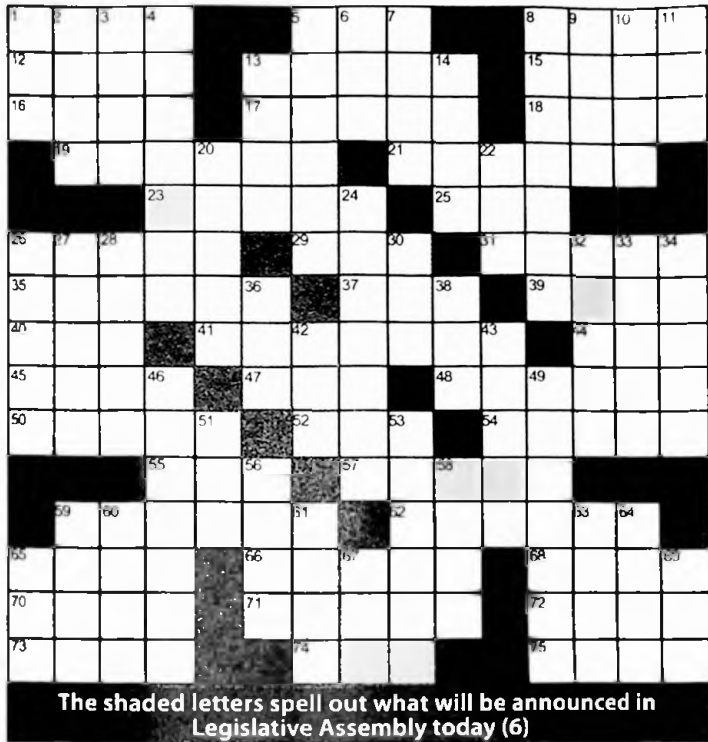

As is traditional in St Helena family and friends enjoyed a dinner they had all prepared. At 7pm the crowd increased as the reception food was laid out and soon the hall was rocking to a mixture of music provided by Dave 'Jockey' Crowie which kept the crowd on the go until the early hours of the morning.

Did you know...

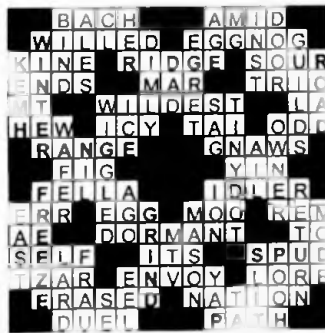

At the peak of the Roman Empire, there were over 400,000 km of roads connecting the provinces to Rome. A fifth of all of the roads were paved in stone.

The oldest street in the world is in Egypt, it is a road to Giza. This is the oldest paved road over 4,600 years old, and its width is approximately two meters

July 9th Street in Buenos Aires, is the widest street in the world. It has six lanes in both directions and takes up an entire block in width.

Pan-American Highway is the longest highway in the world. The length of the highway is approximately 48,000 km, and connects the cities of North and South America, crossing the United States, Canada, Mexico, Peru, Argentina and El Salvador.

Recipes for the Falklands

Four chocolate trifle

A rich dessert which can be served in a family size bowl or more elegantly for a dinner party in individual bowls or glasses. A healthy dash of your favourite tippie makes it a very grown up treat.

Ingredients

- About 300g chocolate brownie chunks
- About 100ml whisky, sherry, rum or coconut liqueur, for drizzling (optional)
- 500g 40% milk chocolate, broken into pieces
- 450 ml double cream
- ½ tsp sea salt
- 50g light muscovado sugar
- 300g white chocolate
- 400g whipping cream
- 50g golden caster sugar
- 150g dark chocolate, broken into pieces
- Chocolate, for grating

Method

For the first layer of trifle, place generous-sized chunks of brownie in the bottom of your trifle bowl, and drizzle over your favourite liqueur

To make the second layer, gently melt the milk chocolate in a bain-marie, mixing until smooth. Slowly warm the cream, salt and sugar in a pan until lukewarm but not hot. Pour the warm cream into the milk chocolate and whisk together. Pour over the brownie chunks and place in the fridge to set.

To make the third layer of the trifle, gently melt the white chocolate in a bain-marie. Semi-whip the cream until soft but not too stiff. Quickly fold the melted chocolate into the cream and pour on to the set milk-chocolate layer of the trifle.

For the final layer, bring 75ml water and the sugar to a simmer in a pan, then pour on to the dark chocolate, mixing well. Allow the sauce to cool, then pour it over the white chocolate mousse layer. Place the trifle in the fridge for 30 minutes to set.

In terms of decoration, a simple decoration of finely chopped chocolate (perhaps a mix of dark, milk and white) can be enough to bring the dessert

Meet our NatWest Island Games 2015 teams

THE aim of the Falklands Badminton team at the NatWest Island Games is, "to compete to the very best of our ability and ensure that we do the Falklands proud," team captain Doug Clark told Penguin News.

"Medals are an unrealistic aim," said Doug, "as the Jersey team are mostly ex-England players and other teams are stronger than ours, however each player will have their own goals and ambitions for the competition and I am sure that they will all do themselves proud."

Doug, Duane March, Allan Steen, Tobi Adeoye, Cheryl March, Anastasia Markina and Louise Williams will represent the Islands this month. Others who played for the Falklands at the Commonwealth Games could not be involved this time due to work commitments or injuries. Doug said, however: "The Falklands Badminton team still retain good strength in depth with the players who are involved in this year's Island Games and there are two debutantes in Tobi Adeoye and Allan Steen."

The team's new international team coach, Richie Eaton, was appointed in October 2014 and led a training camp in early February in Newcastle attended by Anastasia, Tobi and Doug over a two week period. This was gratefully received by the players, "who felt it was very beneficial," said Doug. Richie's partner, Christina Finlay, has been appointed by FIOGA as one of the two physiotherapists accompanying the Falklands Team.

Leading up to the Jersey Island Games five of the players will be attending a training camp in Copenhagen, Denmark under head coach Michael Kjeldsen. The Commonwealth Games badminton team did the same in 2014, "and it was such a fantastic, beneficial and well received experience that it was decided that we would attend again this year," said Doug.

He said the training comprises four to five hours per day five days per week training against a variety of players, including some of the Danish International players and top league/regional players.

Doug noted that the training camps have only been possible thanks to the funding from Consolidated Fisheries Ltd, who kindly sponsored Stanley Badminton Club £25K over a five year period to compete in international competitions."

Talking to Penguin News, Duane who has also been coaching some of the players with guidance from Doug and Richie, said he personally felt more ready than in the past, "more fit," and more developed in terms of skills and movement. "We have been working more on foot work and moving around the court with more efficiency."

He and wife Cheryl will represent the Islands for the third time in international competitions and Cheryl too feels, "fit and ready," for the task ahead.

Duane added that nerves were a major problem at the events, "because we don't play at a high level every weekend against different people... but if we can overcome that I think our game will be a lot better - we need to relax into it."

Alan came back to badminton after 23 years out and has been playing for about two and a half years at club level and for the last six months with Duane and Cheryl. He says he has lost over a stone as a result and is looking forward to his first official games for the Falklands.

It's Louise's third time representing the Islands: "I think we are all ready, I'm excited, it's a good team and it's going to be good fun," she said.

Running Club - Richard wins 10k

THIS month's Club Points Run had a good turnout of 14 participants.

Veteran local runner Richard Short set a blistering pace (in the cold conditions) from the outset and led the field home in a time of 38.46. He was followed by Conservation's Stuart Smith (39.28), and then Jamie Pearce from MPA in a time of (41.22). Then came first woman runner and Island Games representative Caroline Drew (41.54). Zoran Zuvic (45.33) was the next to finish, rounding up the top five. Second senior female was Odille Carpe in 52.28 and third was Suzanna Karlsson in 54.16.

There were only two juniors in the field this month; first Junior Boy and first junior over all was Dean Ellis in 53.55. First junior girl and second junior overall, Olivia Drew, was home in 62.22.

It was great to see five runners down to support us from MPA. We hope to see you again for the 10 mile road race at the end of this month.

Finally a big thanks to our band of helpers who work behind the scenes to make these runs possible (Fran and Peter Biggs, Emma Carrasco, Roz Cheek and for this week, Island Games Representative Tim Drew). It was also good to see parents who turn out in support of junior runners.

Don't forget the Stanley Running Club is always looking for new members. Our regular weekly run is on a Sunday, leaving from the Leisure Centre car park at 9.20 am. We endeavour to cater for all abilities, and distances you wish to run.

'Considerable improvement' to child safeguarding says report

CHILD safeguarding is considerably improved in the Falklands, and community attitudes to sexual abuse have, "shifted substantially," according to a very positive, independent child safeguarding review undertaken this year.

The report confirms that recommendations from the previous review undertaken in 2013 have been, "enacted in full and without reservation."

Earlier this year Michael Sheath and Adrian Todd for The Lucy Faithfull Foundation visited in order to follow up on the 2013 review conducted as an emergency measure, due to acute concerns about the fitness of the safeguarding systems operating in the Islands, particularly in relation to sexual abuse and the management of identified offenders.

The reviewers said they were very content that 12 of the 15 recommendations have, or are, being followed and enacted.

Remaining concerns included the state of the Falkland Islands nursery system where they say, "simply put, the Islands' economy rests on the fact of poorly paid and supported persons caring for other people's children."

In relation to the attitudes to sexual abuse in the Islands the report says attitudes have shifted substantially, "in terms of there being a general acceptance that sexual abuse exists in the Falklands in the same way it exists in all other societies."

"This acceptance had been assisted by the efficiency of the police in securing convictions in the criminal courts and bringing to light some matters that were previously taboo. All of the agencies and institutions with a role in safeguarding appeared to take that role seriously, and the Reviewers considered the lack of denial about the matter was refreshing, and the appetite for challenging any problems and resisting any residual complacency were substantial."

The review also praises offender management, describing it as, "particularly strong," as well as, "active and sophisticated," with an experienced probation officer at its heart.

They said the police had developed an appetite for investigations, "and that they pursued lines of enquiry assiduously, with rigour. Their attitudes in respect to incidence were measured and realistic."

On legislation relating to child protection they felt: "Significant efforts have been made, with significant results already in evidence."

Overall, they comment: "Child safeguarding is considerably improved, "from institutional, regulatory, and community based perspectives."

In relation to child safety the lengthy document examines in great detail the state of the social services, the police, offender management, education, health and multi-agency work. It makes numerous references to positive developments in all areas since, but goes on to make 17 further recommendations for improvements and change.

Nursery system

A primary recommendation relates to the nurseries. The reviewers are surprised that the investment in higher education for Falklands children, "contrasts quite starkly with the absence of financial expenditure and thereby investment in pre-schools and nurseries."

They had nothing but praise and admiration for the nursery staff they met, but noted that the problem of low staffing ratios, and the lack of training for staff, together with the high turnover of staff mean that children were not getting as much attention as they needed.

The report states: "This has an impact upon their ability to form relationships, to attach, and to socialise, but it also has an impact upon their capacity to learn..."

There were concerns about the safety of the nursery environments, and the hazardous mixing of primary school children and toddlers and babies.

"It struck the Reviewers that the nursery sector was stuck in a low fee, low wage, low training, high staff turnover cycle that was becoming increasingly fraught."

Other recommendations

Some but not all other recommendations include:

- Another Social Worker with experience in family trauma and parenting difficulties.
- A domestic abuse campaign which could be linked to a alcohol public awareness strategy
- A younger driver and passenger education programme to increase awareness of the consequences of dangerous driving.
- Thought given to recruiting a Reserve Police Officer on the West.
- Child Safeguarding Board should undertake 'table top' exercises to practice and embed skills in dealing with child death, managing complex cases, and in managing information sharing across agencies.

YEAR 11 students gathered in the Community School street to receive awards and advice for the future on Wednesday evening before a large crowd of family and friends.

Currently completing their GCSE exams, this group of young people will have their results in less than three months and will be starting a new chapter in their lives which for some will include college in the UK.

Teacher Louise Taylor bid the students a sad but fond farewell while inspirational speaker Krysteen Ormond reminded them that the career and life choices they make must be for themselves.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

IT was unfortunately impossible in the pages of Penguin News this week to do complete justice to the length of vital detail in the recently released 2015 children's Safeguarding review by the Lucy Faithfull Foundation. However I hope we have provided a reasonable summary of a report that enormously reassures, but also offers practical recommendations to further develop the Islands' systems for protecting our children.

There are far too many points in the review to comment on in these column inches, but I will note that it assisted me greatly in a fuller understanding of the work of the police, prison system and probation officer in relation to offender management.

There were many encouraging comments in the report but a few that struck me as particularly heartening, included the description of the FICS students to whom they spoke as an 'articulate and ambitious cohort', the praise of Stanley House, "as safe and well protected as they might be in their own families," and how the Infant and Junior School children were, "spontaneous in their descriptions as to who they would go to if they were worried about something."

The full report is available to the public from Gilbert House on the www.fig.gov.fk website.

WERE it the case that more Islanders used Twitter no doubt #thefalklandsfactor *would be a firm favourite. Nothing to do with the X Factor you understand, but a phrase that describes the peculiar problems that go with living on a far flung Island. However, bearing in mind how worked up we seem to get over the (arguably) little stuff then the widely popular #first-worldproblems is probably pretty representative of our society on occasion.

Don't get me wrong I don't think that caring about the small things is a crime, as long as we remind ourselves to keep them in perspective.

After all like many others I've been following the debate about Arch Green with an interest that seems oddly out of proportion to the issue itself - moving a flower bed back one metre. And put like that I'm questioning my own sanity in terms of why on earth I even give the tiniest damn (and admittedly it's a relatively small one).

But putting aside for the moment Tim Miller's perfectly valid concerns about whether the plants will re-establish, perhaps a fair bit of the irritation stems (no pun intended) from it all feeling a bit futile. A project that will cost some money and require man power to change something that very few considered to be a problem #firstworld or any other, in the first place.

Then again perhaps it's a plot - if we're busy grumbling about flower beds we'll be distracted from the really expensive problems.

SKZ nursery showcase changes

MUMS and Dads had the chance to see what their little ones get up to during the day when they attended the Stanley Kids Zone Open Morning on June 6.

It was also aimed at displaying some of the changes that have been made in the nursery recently.

As well as showcasing their work the children enjoyed a bouncy castle and were treated to rides in the fire engine. Normal drawing and painting activities were also available.

Parents were treated to cupcakes baked by the children as well as other delicious food baked by parents, staff and directors.

The manager, staff, directors and children of SKZ would like to say a huge thank you to Gene, James and Jock for giving up their morning to help out, to Michelle for the loan of the bouncy castle, to everyone who baked and those who came along to support," said Nina Aldridge.

Shed added "£115 was also donated on the day so thank you everyone."

If you missed the Open Morning and would like to go along and see the SKZ, how the nursery is divided and what the children get up to you can call the manager, Alana on 21954 or email skz@horizon.co.fk

Arch Green application deferred

WHAT had become a controversial planning application to widen the footway adjacent to Arch Green was deferred until after a public meeting in relation to Waterfront Development which will be held on Wednesday June 17.

At the Planning and Building Committee meeting on June 10 Michael Betts for the Falkland Islands Development Corporation gave a brief outline of reasons in favour of the application, while Tim Miller spoke against.

Arch Green is an area of historic value, but not designated public green space. Cruise ship tourists tend to gather in the area to photograph Whale Bone Arch and the Cathedral and there are pedestrian/vehicle safety concerns. It is planned that the flower beds be moved back one metre to allow for the widening of the footway. A number of official objections have been received, and comments on social networking sites have tended to be very much against the planned change.

A discussion about the use of FaceBook in relation to Planning and Building applications took place. It was felt that while comments made on public pages in relation to applications would not be deemed official objections, there was no reason why FB direct messaging should not be adopted as an official means of communication for that purpose.

Also at the meeting an application from Caroline Cotter to change the layout of 14 rooms to single bed flats at Lookout Lodge was approved. It was noted that the site is within an area designated for commercial use within the Stanley Town Plan. As such the proposal was in broad accordance with the Development Plan.

An outline application for the siting of a mobile home and provision of off street parking at 3 Capricorn Road for Neil Finlayson was deferred.

The committee approved an application from Stanley Services for the change of use from warehouse to service station at 2 Bill Roberts Way. It is also in an area designated for commercial use.

In relation to the Canache Management Plan it was decided that it required a light-touch update and be readopted as a Planning Guidance Note.

Older people's services a work in progress

FOLLOWING a public meeting in April there are now several strands of work that are progressing the design of a range of services to support, enable and care for older people and other vulnerable adults. Director of Health and Social Services, Ian Bainbridge told Penguin News this week. "We are making good progress in several directions at once," he said.

The first step involves analysing past and present needs in order to obtain an objective estimate of future demands.

Work is also ongoing developing good practice models of care that will be used to inform the selection of a preferred model for the Falklands.

Thirdly, said Mr Bainbridge, "we are adopting a thorough project management approach to handle resources and risks and give us a grip on what is needed for a timescale to our plans. And finally we have now started a series of meetings with a reference group that can represent a wide range of views and experience from the community."

"There will be a series of discussions, designed to tackle key questions and to dig a bit deeper than the answers that might first come to mind. We hope that the issues raised in the group will gain wider interest and debate as the weeks go by. I will give regular media updates and welcome comments from anyone (preferably by email)."

The first reference group addressed the question of the sort of needs for which services would be designed. Mr Bainbridge said: "We realised that it would be 'cart before horse' to start planning the 'How' we will do it, before we had clarified 'What' needed doing. The group approached this by thinking about 'What will I need when I am in advanced years?' or 'If I developed a serious condition? We also thought about the barriers to change and the arguments that might paralyse progress."

"We are pressing on with the work as swiftly as we can, using a thorough planning process to get to that preferred Falklands model."

New HoP for FIG

THE Government has announced the appointment of John Shea as the new Head of Policy. Mr Shea comes from the United States, where he has served as President and CEO of the Sino-American Business Consortium, LLC. Prior to his work with SABC, he spent over 20 years undertaking various roles with the New England Governor's Conference, Inc., covering issues such as conservation, the environment, energy and policy-making.

Court news

STANLEY man Rishon Kamoto (33) was given a 12 month conditional discharge in the Summary Court on Wednesday.

Mr Kamoto had entered guilty pleas to taking a vehicle without consent and theft of fuel to the value of £21.28 from his employer on January 3.

Justice of the Peace Derek Clarke said the decision to impose a conditional discharge had been taken because Mr Kamoto was deemed to be at low risk of re-offending and a community order would be difficult to facilitate given the long and varied hours he worked. He added that Mr Kamoto's financial situation had also limited sentencing.

Mr Kamoto provides for his two children in Zimbabwe and until recently had also been paying for medical treatment for his late father.

He was ordered to pay a contribution of £85 towards prosecution costs and warned of the consequences should any further offences be committed within the year.

Crown Prosecutor Simon Rowe said he offered no evidence on a further matter of obtaining pecuniary advantage in view of the guilty pleas on the other charges.

RTO penalties

Mount Kent resident Paulo Cesar Daste Harbin (41) was fined £460 for driving while disqualified and £275 for not having insurance on Wednesday in the Summary Court.

He was also banned from driving for six months and had his licence endorsed.

Mr Harbin was observed driving on March 21, when he was 10 months into a 12 month ban for drink driving. He had also been fined for driving without a licence and without insurance for the May 5, 2014 incident.

Defence lawyer Simon Crowder apologised for his client and pointed out that there had been a form of punishment imposed already as Mr Harbin had been held unlawfully for some two hours and 40 minutes when Police arrested him on January 3. There is no power to arrest on suspicion of driving without a licence under Falklands law.

Mr Crowder said his client intended to return to Santiago, Chile as soon as the case was concluded as his work permit expired in August.

Cases coming up

Claudio Javier Ross Ampeuro was re-bailed until July 2 for sentencing pending a pre-sentence report and a trial date of July 17 was set for Scott Henry Roberts who denies failing to stop following an accident or report it. The trial is expected to be straight forward and not last more than half a day.

Magistrates Court

In the Magistrates Court, Senior Magistrate Clare Faulds turned down Steven Geoffrey Miller's application to have his licence restored saying she had no power to remove the ban because it had not been imposed under the Traffic Ordinance.

PM defends Falklands from Argentine claim

The Prime Minister ordered Mr Timerman to stop "threatening" residents and businesses, in the Falklands and said

Argentina must "respect" the referendum in which Falkland Islanders overwhelmingly voted to be a British Overseas Territory.

Argentine officials travelling with Mr Timerman confirmed there had been an "incident" during one of the summit's working sessions involving national leaders and ministers, but gave no further details.

Argentine president Cristina Kirchner did not attend the summit.

A report in the Argentine news-

Argentina must respect Falklands referendum, says PM David Cameron paper La Nacion said Timerman had reiterated his government's claim to the Islands, to which David Cameron replied that his comments were "threatening."

A Downing Street spokesperson said that Mr Cameron had said that the waters around the Falklands were territorial waters and it was unacceptable of Argentina to threaten investors seeking to operate there.

The exchange occurred on the day Argentina marked the "Day of affirmation of the Argentine Rights over the Malvinas," marking the anniversary of the country establishing a military command over the Islands in 1829.

A statement issued by the Argentinian embassy in London attacked the, "anachronistic colonial situation," and said the, "peaceful recovery," of the Islands was, "an unrelinquished objective of the Argentine people."

Exam process examined

AFTER a few minor adjustments the Falkland Islands Community School recently passed an unannounced inspection of its exam processes and procedures by an inspector from the JCQ (Joint Council for Qualifications) agency.

It was noted at yesterday's Education Board meeting in a report from the Director of Education: "The inspector examined our exam processes and procedures, our exam policy and looked at our storeroom and safe for exam purposes to see if it was fit for purpose."

She said during the inspection he also looked at disabled access to the exam room and processes for supporting special needs children during exams.

She reported: "We had a few minor things to put in place such as posters regarding mobile phone use and clearing some resources out of the exam storeroom, so it is purely for the purpose of storing exam papers. These minor adjustments were quickly rectified and we successfully passed all aspects of the inspection."

Teacher recruitment

FALKLANDS schools are negotiating with the education organisation LEAD based in the UK in relation to recruiting staff in the future. This might mean that teachers in the recruitment stage could be observed in the classroom. It was noted yesterday at the Education Board meeting that LEAD offices are near the College of School Leadership and could accommodate the teachers at a low cost. Seeing the teachers teach is an important part of the recruitment process said IJS/CE Headteacher Karen Steen.

Good year for FIH and FIC

FALKLAND Islands Holdings, which has interests in the Islands' shops, property, shipping, tourism and more, published pre-tax profits up 14.4 per cent to £3.9 million for the year to the end of March on revenues only fractionally higher than the previous year at £38.6 million. However shareholders were denied a dividend because the company wants to reinvest its cash.

Christingle celebrated in the austral mid-winter

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

THE budget completed, focus is now concentrated on every day matters with a few of us attending overseas meetings and events in the next few weeks. We have meetings of Minerals Committee, Planning and Building and Lands this week, including an extraordinary P and B meeting to discuss development plan matters. People who submitted written comments will have a chance to speak on some of them.

After the Assembly meeting I promised the Honourable Ian Hansen that I would correct my mistaken assumption that the 530 medium wave frequency transmitter was broken again. In fact FIG had switched off power to it while other works were being undertaken. I had not heard the relevant announcement as at that point I'd not returned to another band. It may be back on early this week. When there are problems with radio, whatever the cause, we realise what an important source of information it is. Not everyone sits in front of a computer all day, some never do, but I do not know anyone without a radio. Said it many times before but information only put out electronically will not necessarily reach everyone it should.

Next week I will attend a regular Stanley Services management meeting in London. By fortunate coincidence it is the day after the FIG reception at Lincolns Inn so I will have a good opportunity to speak with many of our friends and supporters. I've only attended a few of these, the most memorable was in 1982, June 17 if I remember correctly. In those days there was no government office and the reception was organised by the Falklands Association. When the date was set there was no inkling that it would be a wonderful opportunity to celebrate the liberation of the Islands. At the same time people's euphoria was tempered by knowledge of the tragic loss of life and anticipation of the tremendous task ahead to repair war damage and return to normality.

As always this weekend as we enjoy our freedom and all the opportunities it has brought, we must never forget the heavy human cost.

THIS year Messy Church and the Cathedral Sunday Club are joining forces to hold a joint Christingle event, on Sunday June 21, to celebrate Christ the Light of the World.

Christingle is a non-denominational Christian festival, which originated in the Moravian Church in Germany in the early nineteenth century. In Europe it is traditionally held at mid-winter in December. Here in the Falkland Islands we have been celebrating Christingle on the Sunday in June closest to the austral mid-winter for almost 20 years.

The Christingle is a candle in an orange adorned with ribbon and festooned with dried fruits and candies. It is used to demonstrate what Christ means to the world, with each separate item forming part of the Christingle having its own symbolism. Afterwards, participants enjoy eating the fruit and sweets.

Messy Church will be meeting in the Parish Hall at 4pm on Sunday 21st June for an hour of crafts and activities, including decorating Christingle biscuits, colouring 'Light of the World' wooden crosses and fridge magnets, making 'this little light of mine' foam and glitter candles, and creating darkness and light paintings. Messy Church is open to everybody, the only stipulation is that anybody below secondary school age who wants to attend brings an adult with them.

At 5pm the annual Christingle service will be held in the Cathedral. This is a non-denominational candlelit service suitable for all ages. This year, each family or individual will make their own Christingle during the service to take home. Messy Church has provided a giant orange which will be assembled in church to demonstrate how Christingles are made and to explain their significance. During the service a collection will be taken for the work of the Children's Society.

After the service it will be party time in the Parish Hall, when everybody attending the service is warmly invited to bring along a plate of party food to share.

Christingle is open to everybody of all ages, and it doesn't matter if you do not have the time or the inclination to attend both Messy Church and the Christingle service, whichever part of the celebration you join, you will be made very welcome. A church background or prior knowledge of Christingle is absolutely not required. For more information, please contact Kathy Biles (52212) or Alison Inglis (55817).

Joint post at training centre

A JOINT post of Examinations and administration officer has been established between the Community School and the training centre. Christine Ramoutar has been appointed in this role.

The Education Board heard on Thursday that some restructuring of roles was required to enable the training centre to create a Vocational Coordinator post.

It was proposed that funding be found by utilising the wages from the unfilled posts of Tutor/carpenter and part-time Tutor/Trainer.

The Vocational Coordinator's role will include tutoring for essential/basic skills and 'work ready' programmes, supporting vocational provision for the 14-16 students, support people with additional needs in the workplace and provide coaching and mentoring services and courses for all.

The post would work shadow the Apprentice Scheme Coordinator to ensure continuity and vice versa. This aims to safeguard against loss of corporate knowledge as experienced in the past.

Martyn Barlow has been appointed as the Apprentice Scheme Coordinator and is due to start on June 22.

Kelly Fiddes has been appointed as the new part-time clerk.

Scouts thank Ball supporters

ON behalf of 1st Falkland Islands (Admiral Sturdee's Own) Scout Group I would like to thank everyone for their tremendous support of this year's May Ball weekend.

The young ladies and gents looked amazing in their beautiful dresses and smart suits and were really at home on the dance floor, thanks to the expert tuition by Lisa and Lee Martin and Jeremy Clarke, and the music by Mel and Val Lloyd.

We would also like to thank Andrew Newman our compere, Chris Locke and Adrian Arthur Almond for organising the sound and lighting, and Richard Fogerty and his team of volunteers who manned the bar. Norman Clark for photography and June Besley-Clark who created the bouquets of flowers. Nikki Buxton for the beautiful sash and our three judges. Also our main sponsors Sure, especially Sarah Clarke who helped tremendously with posters, programmes and ticket printing.

Thanks to all the Companies who helped lend items or who donated prizes: Globe Tavern, Decor Services, Stanley Garden Centre, Stanley Services, Beauchene Fishing Co Limited, Falkland Island Tours and Travel Ltd, Seafish Chandlery Limited. We really appreciate their great support.

Our Mini May Ball was such a success. (Thanks to Lisa and Mel volunteering to come along and join in) with the Rainbows, Brownies, Beavers, Cubs, their brothers, sisters, mums, dads and even grannies and granddads. During the afternoon, we ran a Children's Tombola at 20p a go and raised £101.50 for the Nepal Earthquake appeal.

Finally a big thank you to all who supported some, or all of the events.

Correction

READERS should note that there was a typo within the budget papers supplied to Penguin News last week regarding Child Allowance.

It was in fact increased by 80p to £68 per month, not per week as reported on the front page.

THE budget of 1987 was full of good news with pensions and family allowance increased, R/T (radio telephone) charges and death duties abolished, no increase in tobacco or alcohol duties, £4 million in the development fund and plans for a new senior school in the pipeline.

The only bad news is that Government house rents are on the up by six per cent.

THE Governor Gordon Jewkes says the budget may come to be ranked as the one of the most important budgetary sessions of the Legislative Council in the history of the colony.

The previous year's budget dealt with a figure of £7 million, but this year's was dealing with one of £29 million.

Reviewing the estimates Financial Secretary Harold Rowlands says that a surplus of £2,900 had been anticipated, but was now expected to be around £8.2 million. "Revenue accruing to the Government from the issue of fishing licences is responsible for this most admired disorder," he says.

Nearly ten days after a blaze first erupts at Mary Hill Quarry, causing loud explosions which shook houses in Stanley, the site is still smouldering and the public is warned to avoid the area which is hazardous. The chief fire officer advises that the explosions were most likely gas cylinders, but says, "the fire certainly did not start on its own."

Under the auspices of the Falkland Islands Tourist Board and the guidance of Chair, Debbie Summers, winners of the Beautiful Falklands Awards are presented with engraved plaques at Government House.

Amongst many winners are the Cape Pembroke Lighthouse restoration; Andrez Shorts's new shed as the most attractive new build in traditional Falklands style; The Pink Shop as most attractive business premises; Salvador and Shallow harbour as best maintained settlements; Dennis Middleton's dry stone wall at Dolphin Cottage earned an award as a special contribution to the man-made beauty of the Islands and the most dramatic transformation since the previous awards went to the Parish Hall (Cathedral Restoration Fund).

Provisional approval is given by Executive Council for the finalisation and promulgation of the Standards in Public Life paper.

The guide lines for people in public office covers ethics, conflicts of interest, standards of behaviour and confidentiality of information and is described by Governor Richard Ralph as a response to "changing circumstances, and a palpable increase in public concern." The paper deals with the expression, "grey area" which has caused concern when used by public figures. The expression is described in the document as a, "rationalisation of morally dubious behaviour," and condemns the use of it. "There is a sharp distinction between right and wrong so far as behaviour in public life is concerned," said the Governor.

A series of special events to mark the 25th anniversary of the Liberation of the Falklands officially begins with the arrival of HRH the Earl of Wessex who is greeted by school children.

The visit to the Islands of 200 Falklands veterans later in the year is greatly assisted by £404,000 in lottery funding. The grant to mental welfare society Combat Stress will go a long way to helping the veterans make their pilgrimage to the Islands in November.

Chief Inspector Paul Elliott is to be the new Chief Police Officer.

ANNIVERSARY OF LIBERATION DAY 2015

To mark the anniversary of the liberation of the Falkland Islands from Argentinean occupation in 1982, the following programme has been arranged for Sunday 14 June 2015.

A Thanksgiving Service will be held in Christ Church Cathedral commencing at 9.45 am. His Excellency the Governor, Members of the Legislative Assembly together with the Commander British Forces will attend the service. The marching troops will consist of the Royal Navy, Falkland Islands Defence Force, Army, and Royal Air Force. The Royal British Legion and Associations and Youth Groups will be in attendance. Veterans from 1982 will also be present.

At 11.00 am a ceremony will be held at the Liberation Monument in front of the Secretariat building. After prayers His Excellency the Governor will lay a wreath. Wreaths will also be laid by a Member of the Legislative Assembly, the Commander British Forces, Veteran associations, and by relatives and others wishing to do so.

Members of the community wishing to attend are asked to arrive no later than 10.45 a.m. Attention is drawn to the fact that Ross Road between Barrack St and Reservoir Road will be closed to traffic to enable the ceremony at the Monument to take place.

It is appropriate for medals and decorations to be worn on this occasion.

A public reception hosted by the Falkland Islands Government, will be held in the Town Hall from 1130 hrs to 1330 hrs. At 1200 noon His Excellency the Governor Colin Roberts will present the South Atlantic Medal to MLA Ian Hansen on behalf of all Islanders. The Medal has been awarded by Her Majesty the Queen to the Falkland Islands in recognition of the Islanders who assisted the Forces of the United Kingdom during the Liberation of the Falkland Islands in 1982. During the presentation of the medal the door and bar will be closed. All residents and members of the Armed Services are cordially invited to attend.

GIBRALTAR
AS A BUSINESSMAN
DATE OF BIRTH: 24/03/1967

In accordance with Section 359 of the Insolvency Act 2011, I, Mark Mordejay Benady of Benady Cohen & Co, 21 Engineer Lane, Gibraltar, give notice that I was appointed Trustee in Bankruptcy by Court Order dated 18 May 2015.

All persons having in their possession any of the effects of the Bankrupt must deliver them to me, and all debts due to the Bankrupt must be paid to me. Creditors who have not yet proved their debts must forward their proofs of debt to me.

Notice is given that a meeting of creditors has been summoned by the Trustee under Section 366 of the Insolvency Act 2011 to be held at the office of Benady Cohen & Co, 21 Engineer Lane, Gibraltar on 29 June 2015 at 11:00 am for the purposes of considering whether a creditors' committee should be formed. In the event that a creditors' committee is not formed, pursuant to Section 466(2) it is proposed that the basis of the Trustee's remuneration be fixed by reference to the time properly given by the Trustee and his staff in attending to matters arising in the Bankruptcy to be drawn on account during the course of the Bankruptcy.

Please note that further to Section 366(3) a creditors meeting may be requisitioned in accordance with the Rules by 25 per cent in value of the creditors of the bankrupt.

A form of proxy, available from the offices of Benady Cohen & Co must be lodged with me not later than 12 noon on the business day immediately preceding the meeting to entitle you to vote by proxy, together with a completed proof of debt form, if you have not already lodged one.

Disappointed at Cape Pembroke Road

I AM writing to express my concern and disappointment that the road to Cape Pembroke has been approved. I feel it is going to reduce the environmental quality of the area due to the proposed road layout following the North coast. A road has already been started down the middle track which is where most of the erosion is, yet we are told that the road will be built along the largely pristine Northern area of the Cape. It seems ludicrous to carve a new road into the landscape to 'conserve' the area when in fact you are damaging the sections which are actually in good condition.

Cape Pembroke is a secluded, beautiful spot we as locals can enjoy, particularly some of the small beached areas on the northern shore.

Once the road is built there will be tour operators busing tourists in by the coach load which downgrades the quality of the area significantly. I believe one of the reasons the proposed layout will follow the north shore, instead of carrying on down the middle track, is that there will be some rare plants at risk. Is that a good enough reason to build a road a totally different route which is visually much more damaging?

If the Friends of Cape Pembroke are really worried about erosion caused by some vehicles and a couple of bikes you only have to take a trip down to the area of York Point where large sand dunes, with vegetation and all, are being removed for building material on an industrial scale. This puts the issues of Stanley Common into perspective, where this area is suffering much more degradation and erosion than vehicles could produce on the Cape in years. This, combined with the amount of spoil being dumped there makes me feel there are other priorities if we wish to improve the environmental quality of Stanley Common.

My final point is the financial cost which I'm sure many will agree with even if they aren't regular visitors to Cape Pembroke. It is likely that hundreds of thousands of pounds will be allocated to this project and it's money that could be spent on essential works for the MPA or indeed other capital projects such as the expanding schools.

The road to Cape Pembroke just isn't necessary and if it is to be built, the route should be reconsidered to avoid ruining a beautiful part of our amenity space. What next, roads to all the battlefield sights to avoid cutting the peat and to improve access?

'Seditious' idea

AT the Legislative Assembly Budget Meeting on Friday May 5, MLA Gavin Short, said he, "would like to fly a kite," by suggesting the Governors' annual address to the Assembly is probably a hang on from the old 'Colonial Days.' He asked for public response to end this outmoded practice. His seditious thought spurs me to release the Cassins Falcon in me, on MLA Short's kite.

My answer is if Legislative Assembly Budget Session is considered the most influential meeting of Falkland Islands Government in the Islands, then by denying the Governor the podium it is a backward step playing into the hands of the despicable politicians across the sea to the west.

The concept belies the decisive Referendum of 10/11 March, 2013. Shame on you to attempt to remove HE from Legislative Assembly. I recall you as a strong voice behind the Referendum, so why the turn-around? It may bring some to believe you were one of the three defaulters? In a previous council one advocate of doing away with the Governor's uniform and feathers failed re-election.

More deplorable is the idea to bar the Governor the opportunity to address the nation once a year. After all he or she is our Queen's representative. On no account can I entertain your disloyal attitude and I do hope you have no support from fellow members of the house. Or this will likely seal their fate in re-election should they wish to continue as Members of the House.

In shedding the cloak of Colonialism to become a British Overseas Territory the Governor as President of the Legislative Council was removed when the name was changed to Assembly. He was replaced by a Speaker of the House. This in fact cut out his tongue and hid him from the public eye. He was no longer present for official business on finance, or in passing laws. To keep our identity we must protect our traditions and not make change to appease outside organisations.

I hope my comments will stimulate others to speak out on this issue.

Eric M Goss
Stanley

MLA Short's reply

I VERY much welcome Mr Goss' reply to the question I posed in Legco and hopefully this will be the start of a debate on the subject.

I think though that Mr Goss is getting confused with the statements that he makes regarding the referendum. The referendum was aimed at telling the world whether we were content at that moment in time with our present political relationship with the United Kingdom or whether we wished "something else" be it becoming an Argentine colony or full independence etc. It was never meant to stop any internal changes in its tracks. To follow the logic espoused by Mr Goss we can now never have any further versions of our constitution, which clearly cannot be the case as constitutions have to change to reflect the world in which we live.

In the 'good old days' section heads passed on their reports to the Governor who actually composed the speech and delivered it. Nowadays the report, apart from foreign policy is written by the Chief Executive with input from ourselves and delivered by the governor, so there has already been change.

The process of us Falkland Islanders taking on more responsibility for ourselves has to continue and we cannot stand still. In my mind we presently have what was referred to as 'devo max' but we should be looking to gradually move towards what perhaps could be called 'devo max plus'.

We are often (at times rightly) castigated for not asking the public for their opinions and if the good gentleman listens carefully to what I said in the Assembly, I was not saying it must change. I was merely asking the people of the Falklands what they thought of it? Whether perhaps it has come to the end of its days in its present form or if people like things the way they are then I am comfortable with that, it's what the people want, not yours truly but these sorts of questions have to be asked in order that we carry on evolving politically.

The responses that I have had so far do seem to be along the lines that it may be time for a change and these responses are from Falkland Islanders some of whom are Mr Goss' age.

Finally, I am not eyeing up HE's feathers. I actually quite like them and so do the tourists.

MLA Gavin Short

Chamber and schools liaison

THE Chamber of Commerce Board met in April with MLA Barry Elsby and MLA Roger Edwards to discuss the Senior School improvement plan together with Karen Steen and Martin Winward the head teachers.

The Chamber Board were keen to hear what steps were being taken to build on the improvement seen in both schools in last year's Ofsted type inspection report.

This was due to concerns within the Chamber that if improvements were not undertaken our students would not be positioned to take maximum advantage of the opportunities offered with oil development as qualifications will be required. There is also the issue that people resident in the Islands with children entering the senior school would leave the islands if the education system failed to reach the standards available elsewhere. This would cause issues for employers with staff retention.

It was a very productive meeting with a wide range of education related issues discussed. The Chamber of Commerce Board were very supportive of the changes that are currently being taken, especially in the Community School, and view them as being very positive.

The inspection report recommended FICS work with external partners, as well as receive support from the Infant & Junior School, in order to achieve some of the goals needed to improve the overall learning experience for students at FICS. In the United Kingdom, Schools Improvement Partners support schools by visiting for a day or two a month over a set period of time, to assist the leadership teams and teaching staff as they work towards the recommendations of inspection reports. As this model would not work effectively in the Falkland Islands, the Chamber welcomes the fact that Ursula Norbert, (an experienced school improvement partner) has travelled to the Islands for twelve weeks of continuous work with staff and students at FICS. We would urge the whole community to get behind this drive by the Head and staff at FICS to improve our education system and through it allow our young people to fulfil their full potential.

Board

Apprentices

FOR many years dating back as far as 1900, many Falkland Islands' tradesmen were indentured to their employer for five years. This method proved successful in nearly all cases.

An indenture is an agreement in duplicate signed by parties and a parent, guardian or witness as well. At the end of the indentured period the then qualified apprentice receives his indenture usually endorsed by the employer or the chairman of the apprenticeship board stating any comments applying to the success of the time served. It has been proved for over a century that this system is still best for school-leavers who want to be qualified in a particular trade.

City and Guilds is the ultimate achievement provided the youngsters have the necessary knowledge to thoroughly grasp the paper work criteria. This is fine so long as the craft skills are there as well. It only comes to the students who have the ability to master both.

So let's give our young people the chance of a good career in a trade of their choice. A probation period of 3-6 months is about long enough for an employer to decide if the indenture can be.

In conclusion those pupils who choose a blue collar career on leaving school should know that the best guarantee for advancement is the City and Guilds Certificate; and to obtain this qualification they should first complete a full apprenticeship.

Beautiful and valuable experience say volunteer teaching assistants

TWO volunteer teachers, faces familiar to children at both Stanley schools, will be heading home to Chile next month. They take with them a host of good memories and a year's worth of English speaking practice to put to good use in their future studies and careers.

Qualified PE teacher Areli Toro and student of English teaching Orlando Orellano came to the Islands as part of the Chilean University, Universidad Adventista de Chile's volunteer service project.

The project sends 'missionaries' around the world to undertake a variety of volunteer work and in the case of Areli and Orlando this has given them the opportunity, "to know the Falklands and also to share a bit of what we know here," said Orlando.

He said they chose the Falklands because, "of all the different places this one was closer to us, but at the same time very different [culturally]."

It also helped that Seventh-day Adventist missionaries Leonard and Linda Westemeyer already reside in the Islands. Areli and Orlando replaced two other young people who had previously been in the Falklands undertaking volunteer work.

Areli has been contributing

Missionaries Areli and Orlando soon to be heading home to Chile four hours a week assisting the FICS PE teacher and has also dedicated 12 hours a week to giving Spanish lessons.

His contribution is invaluable particularly when it comes to helping the students with the correct pronunciation of the Spanish words, he explained.

Orlando has been working as a teaching assistant at the Infant/Junior School in classes FS1, FS2 and Year 1. He is known to many of the children as 'Mr Orlando' and has particularly enjoyed playing his guitar to the little ones and "helping them with their tasks."

But how will the experience help them? Why work for nothing? Areli said: "If you work in a British school you can get a better resume. I have also learned to speak much better English; I barely knew any when I arrived."

He is about to embark on a Masters in Education but noted: "I can now teach in schools that ask for basic English so that is very good for me."

Orlando, who is in his third year now at university, was equally enthusiastic about the value of his experience. "This helps me in my studies with the pronunciation of words.

"I've had lots of practice and also experienced a bit of the culture. It has been extra helpful for me and when I return I hope to be much better in them."

He added: "It has been a very beautiful experience for me. I have had the love of the children and the appreciation of the families and teachers and parents; that has been my favourite part. They always say thank you and always appreciate what you try to do. I have learned so much here. I had never taught anyone before so it was a very intense learning time; I learned so much from the teachers."

Childrens safeguarding review to be published

THE 2015 Children's Safeguarding Review produced by the Lucy Faithfull Foundation was received by Executive Council on June 1.

At the meeting it was agreed that the report should be published in full, and that the Safeguarding Board should review the report in detail and provide a set of recommendations and a work programme to Exco in July 2015.

Hamish is new FIDC Chair

THE new Chair of the Falkland Islands Development Corporation is to be Hamish Wylie, the Vice-Chairman Steve Dent and Neil Judd a Board Member. The Governor was advised to appoint the new Board of FIDC in accordance with the FIDC Ordinance.

The Board will now co-opt further Board members representing the key industry sectors.

Winter white wedding for Owen and Rogie

PRETTY in white satin, Rogie McLaren was married to Owen Lee in a civil ceremony at Malvina House Hotel on May 16.

The couple were joined in matrimony by Attorney General Peter Judge under an apple green archway decorated in white.

Rogie, who has worked for the FIC for five years now, looked elegant in her satin dress with a ruffled shoulder strap. She carried handmade satin flowers and a diamond style tiara complemented her dark hair.

Rogie was given away by her son Alvin Nivek Jethrow McLaren and was accompanied by her cousins Jack and Jill Baring as bridesmaids.

FIG worker Owen wore a metallic grey Robson suit and was supported by Best Man James Lang. Owen has known James since they worked together for the Crown Agents company in the 1980s.

Little ring bearer Alvin wore a smart suit sponsored by Ralyn Dickson.

The reception included food by Malvina House Hotel and two dishes of Filipino food courtesy of Nolie Pantaleon. Rogie and Owen described it as, "a lovely day."

Falklands cultures gather at Government House

LAST Wednesday some 70 guests and musicians were welcomed to Government House by Acting Governor Sandra Tyler-Haywood and MLA Elsby who has portfolio responsibility for culture.

MLA Elsby said it was hoped that further low cost events would be held and thanked Mrs Haywood for the generous hospitality afforded the inaugural event.

Chilean, St Helenian and Falkland dishes were served along with liquid refreshments.

David Ashbridge who organised the music side of the evening opened the entertainment and was followed by a Chilean group, Sharon Jaffray, Dae Peck, Glenda McLeod and Noel Igao and bringing the evening to a close was Andi Neate.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147.225 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of East Falkland and repeats Mount Alice Repeater, which covers most of the south of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Mount Alice: Frequency: 147.825 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of West Falklands and links to Stanley via Pleasant Peak and Sapper Hill.

Mount Caroline: Frequency: 147.725 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north of West Falklands, including the cross sound ferry main operational area and links to Stanley via Mount Kent and Sapper Hill.

Marine Band: 156.800 - Channel 16 (Stanley area) 2.182 MHz HF In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex +1.6). It is however unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

WE are very fortunate to be still enjoying our fresh tomatoes, which are ripening on various window sills in the hope of catching any available sunshine and warmth. And so we have had quite a lot of fresh tomato salad with some of the chives, which are still growing in the flower border, and some of the celery which must be used soon, or be frozen for later use.

A lot is often said about using basil with tomatoes. I must admit that it is not one of my favourite flavours. It sits with the other herbs that I find too strong and not at all to my liking. Herbs which although I have tried at various times to incorporate in various recipes, simply do nothing for any of us. They include aniseed, star anise, cloves (in all but minute amounts) Caraway seeds and probably, many more.

I must get out there (though not in the snow - wow it's been wild out there) and test the soil. Kits are available and take the guesswork out of it all. If the ground is deficient in lime, it is a good time to put some on, following instructions on the container. It is not advisable though to use too much on ground destined to grow potatoes this coming season. They prefer slightly acidic soil.

Check that all plants are well staked and tie those that look a bit spindly before the frosts begin trying to lift them out of the ground, leaving them to flop about in the wind.

The flower beds are horribly wet and impossible to walk on even if I wanted to do some weeding, not that I would want to in this weather. Grass is growing very well, but only in the flower beds. Ironic really, as the flower borders only grew in size because the grass would not grow in that area!

It's a wonderful time to plant seeds though, all hardy perennial flower seeds and those of most shrubs and trees benefit from being planted at this time and being left out in the winter weather, most will germinate in the spring. The rest should appear at some stage next season. I prefer to plant them in square pots as these are easier to fit into trays, labelled as I go and before I forget what I've planted. They are then covered, usually with vermiculite or sharp grit, before they go under some mesh to keep them safe from birds and cats. It is also a wonderful time to sow seeds of both hardy and indoor cyclamen. They just need soaking overnight, then pop the seeds into pots, label and cover lightly with some vermiculite or sharp grit, the indoor cyclamen need to be inside to germinate, to aid the germination of the outdoor ones put the pots outside to catch the frosts and snow.

As long as the ground is not frosty or too wet or simply covered in snow, it is still a good time to plant hedges or any other shrub, ensuring they are well staked and that they are not fed at this time. Any roses in pots can also go in and, of course, yet more cuttings of those lovely plants can go in at this time in pots with some covers and either in tunnels or cold-frames or any other available shelter.

If you want to get well ahead and have space under cover and, lots of toilet roll inserts or root trainers, this is a good time to plant sweet peas and even eating peas. I have found over the years though, that those planted in early spring seem to catch up very quickly. However, if sweet peas are to be grown on and to flower early under cover then it is worth planting seeds now.

I must now get around to pruning the grape vines. They just need all the shoots which have fruited to be cut back to one or two buds from the main stem. Some of the prunings will make good cuttings; and will be put in pots to root under cover.

I have cut down the last of the raspberry canes, that is, the dead looking brown ones, and also the blackberry. The tayberry I was given by a friend does not, as yet, need any pruning.

The currants and gooseberries did and they have been treated to just a 'short back and sides' though, as they really only needed a light pruning to keep the bushes open and also to make sure any shoots too close to the ground are removed as they might root.

The other wonderful thing which can be done at this time of year is to sit on a comfy chair with a stack of seed catalogues, a notebook and lots of pencils (have you noticed how they always go missing when you need them?) and drool while you plan and dream about what you will do in spring.

Guess what I am about to do? But I think I will fill the kettle first.

SAAS would like to advise all that we have not tendered to stage the World CUP in Stanley, we have not been in contact with FIFA and have not received any monies from FIFA representatives.

We are however going to Punta Arenas on the 14th of July
We are accepting bookings and orders for cargo.
Our vessel will be in Punta Arenas on the 17th of July.

We can accept bookings for full containers, dry cargo, chilled cargo, frozen cargo, live animals, small loads, large loads, machinery, virtually anything in fact.

Recipes for the Falklands

Reindeer stew
(or casserole if you're posh)

It's the time of year for warming stews and possibly a reminder that there are several packs of reindeer meat still lurking in the freezer. Wild game should be cooked on medium at the highest anything more than that will make it tough and leathery unless you slow cook it for hours on end. Don't overcook it.

Ingredients

- 2 lbs diced reindeer meat
- ½ pat of butter
- 2 cups beer (lager is fine)
- 2 small onions
- tray of mushrooms or a large can of button mushrooms, drained
- 1 ½ tsp salt
- 3 - 4 tbs flour
- 1 tspn black pepper

Method

Ensure reindeer is in smallish chunks. Melt the butter in a large saucepan, (add a little oil to stop it burning).

Add the meat and onions and cook until the meat is nicely browned

Season with salt and pepper and add the flour, stirring until well-incorporated. Then add the beer and mix well.

Cover and let simmer on low for one hour.

Serve with mashed potato and vegetables of your choice. Mashed swede goes particularly well

Various cuts of South Georgia reindeer in up to 20 kg boxes are still available on request. Email admin@gov.gs for details

Fast banana pud (microwave)

Ingredients

- 100g butter, softened,
- 2 ripe bananas
- 100g light muscovado sugar
- 100g self-raising flour
- 2 tsp ground cinnamon
- 2 eggs
- 2 tbs milk
- Toffee sauce and ice cream, to serve, if you like

Method

Put the butter in a 1 litre baking dish and microwave on high for 30 secs-1 min until melted. Add 1½ bananas, mash into the melted butter, then add the sugar, flour, cinnamon, eggs and milk. Mix together well.

Slice the remaining banana over the top, then return to the microwave and cook on high for 8 minutes until cooked through and risen.

Meet our NatWest Island Games 2015 teams

THE biggest hurdles the Falkland Islands Golf Team will face at the Island Games in Jersey this month will be the very different golf courses (compared to the Falklands) and a lack of practice time due to bad weather in the lead up to the Games.

For the majority of competitors, the Island Games golf competition comes mid-season and they are all well practiced and sharp. For the Falklands team the games are mid-winter and they are trying to make the best of any decent days to practice, but wearing four layers to stay warm.

The team has an interesting mix with Kevin playing in his twelfth games, while Ian and Troyd are playing in third and fourth games respectively.

Eugene is making his debut at an Island Games but has a good deal of experience playing the type of courses they will face. With handicaps ranging from 5 to 9, the team is solid and they hope to compete well with Alderney and St Helena for the golf certificate. The team has earned its places after an extensive qualifying campaign.

Throughout the season eight qualifying rounds were played with the best five counting towards qualification. Places were keenly competed for with at least ten players in with a decent chance. As well as qualifying the team members have had successful seasons.

Troyd won three of the four major competitions during the season including his third Stanley Open in a row (the first time either of these feats have ever been achieved) and the club match play for the first time.

Ian won the Standard Chartered Open which, like the Stanley Open, is played off scratch. Kevin finished the season really strong, with several wins taking him to victory in the season-long league competition. Eugene also won several times including the two day SAAS Nett Open which is always very hotly contested.

The golf competitions in Jersey will be individual and team, running together, with the best three individual scores in each round counting towards the team score. The golf competition is a scratch tournament meaning handicaps are not taken into account. The standard will be very high with the bigger islands mostly being represented by golfers with 0 handicaps or even better. When the draw is made the Falklands team will have a good idea of where they can aim to finish.

Generally an individual finishing in the top 40 will have done very well. In the team event their best result previously was in the Isle of Wight in 2011 when they finished twelfth with the much bigger islands of Rhodes and the Faroes behind them and were also only five shots off finishing inside the top ten.

There is little doubt that 2011 was the best games for the golf team so far with the team winning a silver certificate and Troyd taking individual silver certificate, while Glenn Ross took the bronze certificate.

At the last games in Bermuda the team again won the silver certificate and Glenn won the individual silver certificate.

On each occasion Alderney won the gold certificate and Peter Cunningham from Alderney won the individual gold certificate. A repeat of the 2011 performance will see the Falkland team push Alderney very close as there was only two shots in it for the team prize and Peter only beat Troyd by 3 in the individual.

All of the team will be getting as much practice as possible in the UK prior to Jersey and adjusting to the different style of courses and playing conditions. The two courses hosting the golf tournament are championship standard links courses. Le Moye will host the first and third rounds and is a par 72 of 6747 yards.

It is known to be a difficult and challenging layout and is host to an event on the European Seniors Tours this week.

Royal Jersey will host the second and final rounds and is a par 70 of 6120 yards. Royal Jersey has a great history having been home to Harry Vardon who won six Open Championships and two US Opens and in more recent years, Tony Jacklin who was the most successful British golfer of his generation and is the most successful Ryder Cup Captain ever.

The golf team heads to the games knowing that medals are not a possibility, but a good team performance could well bring success in the certificate competition.

Alderney will be favourites and St Helena could well push them all the way, but an elusive gold certificate has to be the aim. With a fair (or preferably strong) wind and a bit of luck along the way, they have a chance.

The golf club members would like to thank all of the people who make their attendance at the Island Games possible especially FIOGA for all of the work they do putting everything together.

Thanks also to all the sponsors who give so much to the sports teams, Premier Oil and Noble Energy who kindly donated seats on the oil flight for all Island Games competitors, and Sure who are not only sponsoring the Falklands; team kit, but are also sponsoring the golf team's shirts.

PRESS RELEASE
FALKLAND ISLANDS QUEEN'S CERTIFICATE AND BADGE OF HONOUR

Nominations are requested for the 2015 Queen's Certificate and Badge of Honour. The purpose of such awards is to allow the Falkland Islands Government to recognise persons having connections with the Falkland Islands who have, by their loyalty and meritorious conduct, provided services of exceptional benefit to the people of the Falkland Islands, outside of their normal employment. The Queen's Certificate and its accompanying Badge of Honour will be awarded by HE the Governor acting on the advice of Executive Council on or around Falkland Day (14 August). The number of recipients will normally be restricted to three a year and the names of Queen's Certificate recipients will be published in the Official Gazette. It is open for anybody to nominate a person for the Honour and nomination forms are available on request from Gilbert House. Nominations should be submitted before Tuesday 16 June to the Clerk to Executive Council at Gilbert House Tel 27451 or by email to assembly@sec.gov.fk allowing time for consideration. The Queen's Certificate carries with it the right to wear a Badge to be worn on the breast on official occasions when full-sized medals are worn. This award does not replace, but is in addition to the award of other Honours such as the OBE and MBE, as part of the Diplomatic and Overseas List. These are awarded by HM The Queen on the recommendation of the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs. Government House, Stanley

A new reporting system is now in place for listeners experiencing any issues with the FM radio network or the Medium Wave service. For listeners experiencing any issues when receiving a radio station, and who would like to make a report, the first point of contact will be Falklands Radio, who will then direct your comments to KTV, who will then investigate the report and follow up with you directly. Ideally, reports should be made by telephone to 27277, or emailed to adverts@firs.co.fk. In-fill repeaters have yet to be installed at Fox Bay and North Arm and a number of smaller, individual farm repeaters will also be installed where reception is known to be problematic, but that solution is still to be tested. The Mt Kent repeater has now been installed for listeners in the North Camp; the frequencies for this repeater are: 100.4 MHz for BFBS 2; 101.0 MHz for FIRS and BBC World Service and 101.6 MHz for BFBS Falklands.

Morrison Construction

Regional Manager: Morrison (Falklands) Ltd Location: Stanley, Falkland Islands

Morrison Construction is seeking a Regional Manager for their business unit in the Falkland Islands.

Reporting to the UK Operations Director, this position offers the opportunity to manage a small autonomous building and civil engineering business on the Islands with the following key responsibilities:

- Full responsibility for the safe and profitable operation of the business.
- Development of relationships with the Falkland Islands Government, Private Clients and the local community, in order to grow the business.
- Liaising with the UK Support Team.
- Representing the Company on all issues in the Falkland Islands.
- Managing the business, adhering to the requirements of BS1 9001, 14001 and 1800.
- Position the Company to win work associated with the rapidly developing Falkland Islands oil industry.

The successful candidate will be able to communicate effectively at all levels, with a broad understanding of construction techniques supported by a working knowledge of accounts and budgetary control systems. He or she will have a minimum of 10 years' experience of working in the construction industry together with the health, safety and environmental requirements of a major construction organisation.

In return we can offer a real opportunity to broaden your horizons, along with an attractive package, and a competitive salary.

Interested applicants should apply with a detailed CV to: Lisa Jaffray, Morrison (Falklands) Ltd, 5 Crozier Place, STANLEY, Falkland Islands FIQQ 1ZZ. Direct tel. no: 00500 22253 or alternatively email to: mfl@morrison.co.fk

Islanders' 1982 war efforts recognised

At a packed Town Hall on Sunday following the services at Christ Church Cathedral and the 1982 Liberation Monument an historic moment was recorded as the people of the Falkland Islands were officially presented with the South Atlantic medal.

While Governor Colin Roberts was on hand to present the medal on behalf of her Majesty the Queen it was Secretary of Defence Michael Fallon who addressed the people with a recorded message.

He apologised for not attending in person to, "present a brave and loyal people with the South Atlantic Medal..."

He said the Falklands war remained one of the defining conflicts in modern British life.

"Whenever we look back we are reminded that if it had not been for the numerous individual acts of courage, if it had not been for the efforts of the Falkland Islanders themselves in supporting the task force, in guiding the convoys and steering the tractors and Land Rovers across hostile terrain, despite black outs and land mines and the fear of constant attack, we would not have secured that hard won victory."

He reminded Islanders of Margaret Thatcher famously saying: "The spirit of the South Atlantic was the spirit of Britain at her best."

Mr Fallon said, "in remaining true to your motto 'Desire the Right' and in displaying courage above and beyond the call of duty, you remain the best of British and an inspiration to all of us, wherever we are in the world."

The Secretary for Defence said he looked forward to visiting shortly to offer congratulations face to face and see the medal proudly on display.

Governor Roberts said the award carried the recognition and admiration for all that the people of the Islands had endured and achieved and he hoped it was, "a further source of pride for the future for this extraordinary community."

MLA Ian Hansen said the medal was to be housed in the Museum for all to see.

Serviceman injured in serious incident

A MEMBER of Her Majesty's Forces was struck by a motor vehicle and seriously injured in an incident that occurred at approximately 23.52 hours on Friday June 12.

The incident occurred at the junction of John Street and Dean Street.

Emergency services attended and the serviceman was treated at the King Edward VII Memorial Hospital in Stanley before being transferred overseas for further treatment.

The Royal Falkland Islands Police are continuing to conduct their investigation of this serious incident and the circumstances surrounding it.

All persons directly involved in the incident have been identified and have been interviewed. In a statement from the Falkland Islands Government PR and Media Office it was noted that: "Officers continue to contact witnesses and record statements."

"The Royal Falkland Islands Police ask that anyone who has information that may assist them in their investigation to contact them as soon as possible."

They said CCTV footage, telephone footage or any other recording of the incident itself, or the period immediately before or after it, would be of great value.

The Police also wish to speak to anyone who may have been in the area but who have not already been contacted by police, or who left just prior to the incident, or may have attended the scene after the incident.

The Ministry of Defence also confirmed the incident to Penguin News, noting that the next of kin had been informed and British Forces South Atlantic Islands were, "working closely with the Falkland Island authorities to support their investigation."

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

LIBERATION Day was blessed with some of the mildest weather I can recall and while it is never any hardship to withstand a mere half hour of even the harshest of Falklands weather while we remember those who gave us our freedom, it was still a welcome reprieve.

However even as we basked in wintery sunshine the shadow of an incident which had resulted in a service man being medi-vacced out the previous day, hung over most of the population.

The incident which according to eyewitness reports appears to have resulted from a scuffle remains under investigation and at the time of going to print nobody had been charged with any offence.

However what the future holds for the man who is alleged to have been pushed out of the crowd into the path of an oncoming vehicle and consequently run over, is also an unknown.

When anyone is severely injured it hits our small community hard, and on this occasion when it was one of the very service men we were preparing to show a very British welcome to on the most historically important day of our year, it was nothing short of shocking.

There is a chance the less discerning international media outlets will eventually give the incident an angle that casts a bad light on the Falklands. But then they don't know how it feels to be part of a small community who feel anxious at the sound of the SAR helicopter flying over town at night - knowing that it can only mean an accident has occurred, that someone and their family are suffering and the chances are it is someone we know.

We are still few in number, and we still care about each other and especially around Liberation we care about our extended family which includes the military personnel who join us to commemorate and celebrate.

A special part of Liberation Day was the official presentation of the South Atlantic medal to the people of the Falkland Islands in recognition of their support of British Forces to liberate us from Argentine invasion. Some of the stories are well known, some rarely voiced and others have passed on with those who took part in some brave and dangerous tasks. There were of course many who were not suitably placed to offer military assistance and could only support British troops with opening the doors of their homes to make them as comfortable as possible in the aftermath. All played their part and all should be proud that their efforts have been suitably recognised.

Older Peoples Services needs Falklands design

THE Reference Group working with Health and Social Services on developing older peoples services met again on Tuesday. Moving on from previous discussion about what they would want for themselves in later life, the group explored the issues that set the boundaries to their planning.

There were four particular areas that were discussed; the demographic and need of the ageing population; financial considerations; particular geography; and the capacity and capability that they have to move from theory into practical action.

Director of Health and Social Services Ian Bainbridge, said: "We need to be sure that whatever plans emerge are founded in a good understanding of how our circumstances in the Falklands shape the lives of older people. Only by doing this will future services best support people. The reference group and people who are talking with us about their ideas is a major part of how we make sure that the community is engaging with the vital questions about what needs to be done."

He said group members came up with insights about prevention, support and maximising personal independence. "We asked ourselves what gaps there were in our knowledge to enable good planning to take place, as well as how we would fill in those gaps."

The next session is planned for later in July and will begin to explore some of the options which could be included in the services development programme.

Mr Bainbridge said: "Not surprisingly, it has been difficult to have as strong a representation of Camp perspectives as was hoped for. So in the meantime MLA Hansen is continuing to get out from Stanley to meet and talk with people in Camp."

This weekend MLA Hansen will visit the west and looks forward to hearing from people as opportunities present.

If you would like to meet up in Fox Bay, Hill Cove or Port Howard please send your contact details as soon as possible to Julie on 28008

MELVYN Clifton was in the top spot on Friday in another great night of poker organised by the Falkland Islands Gun Club.

At a busy tournament held in the Chamber of Commerce on June 12 (a night largely characterised by light-hearted banter and 'bring your own' beer) the total prize pool of £660 was divided between nine paid places, Melvyn taking £295, Jimmy Curtis in second place with £165 and Jacob Riddell in third picking up £100.

The remainder of the top placed players got their initial buy-in of £20 back; so going home not too horribly out of pocket were Jonny Summers, John Didlick, Eugene Hurley, Shaun Jaffray, Conrad Francis and Richard Bonner.

Youth detained for nine months for 13 offences

A 17 year old Stanley youth was detained in a young offenders institute on Friday after he admitted two burglaries and one theft charge on June 11.

The offences had been committed while sentence was deferred on previous charges of a similar nature when he had entered unoccupied properties and stolen underwear.

Senior Magistrate Clare Faulds told the young man his offending had become serious and that detention was the only option. "You can't stay out any longer, it's not safe," she said.

Mrs Faulds said the youth had failed to make use of the opportunity afforded him through the deferred sentence and that it would now have to be served.

He was also sentenced for the June 11, offences and a previously suspended sentence of six months and one day was also activated.

The young man who now has 13 convictions will be detained for a total of nine months and one day.

FOGL well spudded

FALKLAND Oil and Gas Limited (FOGL) has announced that the 'Humpback' exploration well, was spudded on June 13, 2015.

The well is located on licence PL012 in which FOGL has a 52.5 per cent working interest and will target the Humpback prospect.

Humpback is located within a cluster of similar prospects, in the Fitzroy sub-basin, which has a total, combined, prospective resource of over one billion barrels of oil.

The well will test multiple stacked reservoirs within the Cretaceous Diomedea fan complex. The Humpback well is located in a water depth of approximately 1,260 metres and is expected to reach a total depth of 5,350 metres.

The well is anticipated to take approximately 65 days to drill. FOGL is partially carried through the costs of this well by Noble Energy (Licence Operator) and has a paying interest of 27.5 per cent.

Tim Bushell, CEO of FOGL, commented: "The Humpback well is the exciting first test of a new geological play concept within the South and East Falkland basins.

"In the event of encouraging results, we have identified, on 3D seismic, multiple follow-up prospects."

Driving offences

Drink driving and failure to provide a sample

STANLEY woman Alison Evans (43) pleaded guilty to driving while unfit through drink and failure to provide a breathalyser test in the Summary Court on Wednesday and was given an interim driving ban.

Crown Prosecutor Peter Judge said police had been alerted to Ms Evan's intention to drive from the Victory while under the influence of alcohol on the evening of May 14. They had arrived at her home on Scoresby Close to see Ms Evans park and get out of the car. She entered the house and slammed the door in the face of the police officer. Some minutes later she opened the door with a glass of wine and consumed some. Taken to the Police Station Ms Evans pretended to blow into the breathalyser and after five attempts had failed to provide a sample.

In interview she said she had driven her vehicle home and had consumed more wine on top of the five glasses she had in the pubs, with the intention of slowing down police proceedings.

Defence lawyer Alison Inglis said her client had been in the Islands since 2014 when she took up her position as teacher at the Community School. On the day in question she had experienced a particularly bad day at work, said Ms Inglis, adding that she also had a long standing problem with alcohol which she was trying to address.

She asked for leniency in the case, adding, "Ms Evans is a 43 year old professional with lots to offer the community."

Justice of the Peace Andy Brownlee adjourned the case until July 2, for a pre-sentence report to be prepared as a community order penalty was being considered for the drink driving offence. The interim driving ban was for six months or until sentencing and would count towards the final ban, said Mr Brownlee.

Careless driving and speeding- Stanley man Gonzalo Patricio Ibarra Espinoza (42) was fined £250 in the Summary Court after he admitted driving without due care and attention on FIPASS on April 15.

Crown Prosecutor Peter Judge said Mr Espinoza had been travelling at a speed between 25-30mph (10mph zone) when he had collided with a barrier after breaking.

Justice of the Peace Andy Brownlee said it had been noted that Mr Espinoza was going to attend a safety course and added that his licence would be endorsed and £105 prosecution costs were to be paid.

Also in court was Jordan Liam Phillips (21) who admitted travelling at 36mph on Ross Road (25mph zone) on May 19 and was fined £230 and had his licence endorsed. He was also ordered to pay £85 prosecution costs.

Close Ross Road an option for cruise days

AN experiment involving closing part of Ross Road to vehicles on busy cruise ship days might be an option for the coming cruise season, conceded Member of Legislative Assembly Michael Poole at Wednesday nights public meeting on the Waterfront Development Project.

A number of members of the public expressed anger at the idea of moving back the Arch Green flower beds in order to widen the adjacent walkway for cruise tourists.

They argued that tourists would always walk in the road to take photographs of the Cathedral or simply because of sheer numbers of visitors; and widening of the walkway would create a bottle neck at the corner of Dean Street and Ross Road.

At the lively meeting FIDC's Waterfront Project Co-ordinator Michael Betts gave a presentation outlining the strategy, its history, key decisions, the role of the working group, future plans for the waterfront and lessons learned.

The primary aim of the project, he explained, was to provide an amenity for residents and visitors alike that would provide Stanley with a vibrant urban centre for all ages, along with additional accommodation, activities and attractions.

He noted that in the first public consultation in 2012 six open sessions and a presentation were held with 72 people at the open session and 52 at the presentation. He said 42 people submitted responses to a consultation questionnaire.

In the second phase of the consultation 41 per cent were very strongly in favour of development of the waterfront and another 41 per cent were fairly strongly in favour.

Under 'lessons learned' he said in future there would be increased public consultation on all proposals and all working group meetings would be open to the public.

The final agenda of each meeting would be dedicated to questions from the public.

In the past the public have had the opportunity to express objections to developments to the Planning and Building Committee, however, MLA Poole said using Planning and Building was perhaps, "a bit of a blunt instrument."

Two members of the public suggested that all developments should not necessarily be viewed in a negative light and there were aspects in the plans and that should be investigated and taken further. One person suggested the public should be more pro-active in offering ideas for improvements to the water front area

FERNANDA Tapia and Matt Jenkins were joined in matrimony by Lewis Clifton at a civil ceremony at Bittersweet on Saturday. Fernanda looked elegant in her white chiffon gown purchased from Chile the last time the couple visited her country of birth. Protecting her from the elements was a hand felted stole crafted by Heather Norman. The couple thanked everyone who had made their day so special.

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

WHILE I hope it may have been dealt with by the time this is published I thought it worth getting people to think about the wanton destruction of green space as demonstrated by the thoughtless individuals who have been tearing up the long established green space South of Ross Road East, dragging mud into the road and regularly driving over the pavement. The evidence was there for all to see, written in muddy tyre marks. I had already noticed it before it was raised by several members of the public including with appropriate portfolio holders. I doubt if it is intentional vandalism but it is saddening to see what was a childhood playground when I was in Stanley, and that of my mother and her brothers before me, turned into a mire. It survived almost from the founding of Stanley and all the activity at B Slip following Liberation. As last week's editorial said, moving an Arch Green flower bed a short distance seems less dramatic, especially as it is hardly historic, many of us can remember when it was created to replace some sparse and neglected planting.

NEXT week I hope to have the pleasure of attending a graduation ceremony where one of my nieces will receive her degree, a first earned by lots of conscientious hard work. When we received the good news it set me thinking that our students are possibly earning rather more than the expected number, especially given that firsts are only awarded to a very small percentage of students even one most years would exceed that.

MY journey north was on time and relatively uneventful unless you count being sent on two wild goose chases around most of vast Madrid airport by airline staff who almost caused us to miss our flight by giving the wrong gate number and then added insult by putting hand luggage in the hold only giving me time to extract most valuable items. Patience exhausted I fumed all the way to London with nothing to read but the inflight magazine, self pity reigned for a couple of hours.

Falklands future bright despite bullying and harassment

THE Falklands' future is a bright one despite bullying from Argentina said Foreign Office Minister Hugo Swire, at the Falkland Islands Government reception at Lincoln's Inn on the weekend.

The Minister, a strong Falklands supporter, was the main speaker at the annual event attended by UK officials, MPs, diplomats, Falklands officials, and friends of the Falklands.

Mr Swire said: "I believe the future of the Islands is a bright one. But of course, a community's future is built on its past," adding, "sadly for the community, three decades on, and despite being clear beyond any doubt of their wish to remain a UK overseas territory, Argentina continues its program of bullying and harassment."

This treatment would only create a more determined, more defiant community, he added.

Mr Swire said: "And let me be clear: the British Government unequivocally supports the Islanders' right to self-determination and their right to develop their economy."

The Minister delivered his speech after a brief presentation from Legislative Assembly Mem-

Mr Swire commented that they continue to honour the sacrifice made by the 255 British Servicemen and their families, and the three Falkland Islanders that lost their lives in 1982, "and, of course, we also remember those young Argentine soldiers who died."

He also referred to the award of the South Atlantic medal in recognition of the Islanders who assisted the British Forces in liberating the Falkland Islands.

He said Falkland Islanders would, "rightly feel a great sense of pride."

Kevin Ironside to be new Deputy General Manager FIC

KEVIN Ironside has been named as the new Deputy General Manager of the Falkland Islands Company (FIC).

Managing Director of Falkland Islands Holdings (FIC's parent company) John Foster announced the formal appointment yesterday.

He said the promotion was with immediate effect and that he would be supporting Roger Spink across the business while retaining his responsibilities for all of retail, the warehouse and Falklands 4x4.

"Kevin has fitted in well with the FIC team since arriving last April and is now in the process of getting the necessary permissions to build his own house and put down real roots to live in the Falklands for the long term," said Mr Foster.

Mr Ironside said he was proud to have been appointed to the role, supporting Mr Spink, in a business that he was thoroughly enjoying being part of.

"There have been many changes in the time that I have been here.

"We have extra customers in our stores, living in our properties and driving vehicles from Falklands 4x4.

"New lines have been arriving in our stores that are as diverse as toys to perfumes - all at great prices sourced by our UK buyers. I hope our customers are all enjoying the fresh fruit and vegetables at competitive prices that are now being brought in on each SAAS sailing," he said.

The Falklands 4x4 business was expanding on all fronts and plans to expand sales business by introducing other makes to support the wide range of Land Rover models were ongoing, he said, adding, "We hope that this will make owning a new vehicle supplied by us affordable to many more people."

Kevin was brought up in Lerwick, Shetland Islands where his family owned a food wholesale business supplying local business, fishing vessels, The Sullom Voe oil terminal and offshore installations.

In addition they had a chain of butcher shops and supermarkets in Shetland and the Scottish mainland.

Falklands' politicians say support from USA

MEMBERS of Legislative Assembly Mike Summers OBE and Phyl Rendell MBE have completed a full public relations programme in Washington DC, assisted by Tiphonie May MSC and Farrah Peck.

It included visits to several senior US Administration staff from the State Department and NSC, and calls on Congress and think tank organisations.

Members said they had been very encouraged by the high levels of support in all areas for the Falkland Islands and Islanders' right to self determination.

They received assurances that US neutrality on the issue of sovereignty did not imply any support for the Argentine denial of the right to self-determination, or of its continued bad behaviour towards the people of the Falkland Islands.

A number of Congressmen expressed explicit support for Islanders rights they reported.

The delegation are in the second phase of their visit before the trip concludes in New York for the annual Special Committee on Decolonisation (C24).

First class degree and Jo's fashions hit the cat walk

ISLANDER Jo Igao has achieved a first class BA Honours degree in Fashion Design, and her designs, which were included in her university's end of year show, were selected for the prestigious Graduate Fashion Week show.

Jo, who is the daughter of Pauline and Noel Igao of Stanley, has been studying at University for the Creative Arts in Rochester and specialises in menswear.

Her designs shown at the Graduate Week Show were also nominated for the Karen Millen Fashion Portfolio award and originally inspired by Jack Kerouac's novel

On the road, in which Kerouac writes about his experiences with the mad characters he is so wildly drawn to.

She says it celebrates the importance of personality therefore each outfit is based on a character whether it be a poet or musician.

Jo hopes to eventually obtain a job in fashion design but such work is, "hard to come by," her mother Mrs Igao commented.

She has moved to London to be in the right place to seek work in the highly competitive industry and is currently supporting herself with bar work, said Mrs Igao.

Cubs pay tribute to Scots Guards

CUB Scouts headed off on their annual memorial hike on Saturday in memory of the Scots Guards who lost their lives on Mt Tumbledown.

This year they were accompanied by seven serving members of the British Forces from Mount Pleasant, two visiting veterans, Brian Martin and Dusty Miller, and many parents, said leader Jan Miller.

They were blessed with a glorious sunny day, though it was lethally icy underfoot on the rocks at the top said Mrs Miller.

As they reached the Memorial Cross two Typhoons flew over and circled around the group much to their delight.

The Cubs cleaned and polished all of the brass plaques, and then gathered around the cross for a short service. Ben Blyth read the Collect of the Scots Guards, Jake Summers read the names of the fallen, Peter Wilks laid the wreath, and James Gilding laid the Cub Cross. Nine Cubs then laid individual wooden crosses dedicated to each fallen soldier.

After the service the Mili-

Mrs Miller said: "The Cubs would like to thank everyone who took part in the event, especially the military, the veterans and 1435 Flt for making the day so special."

Give us two minutes...

Tom Busbridge

1. What is your most prized possession? My health.

2. What is the best (or worst) piece of advice you have ever been given? Jump!

3. Who would you most like to have a cup of tea/tot with? Kristen Wiig

4. If you had a motto, what would it be? Live life to the full

5. If you could set up a business in the Falklands what would it be? Something to improve the internet situation down here.

6. There's a "Falklands' has got talent" competition, how would you audition? I would probably have to show off the new scarf I made thanks to the wonderful ladies at the Guild of Spinners and Weavers (I don't think I'd win)

7. What in your everyday life drives you crazy? You mean besides the lousy internet? Probably something really superficial like not having my own vehicle here

8. Who would you make Governor of the Falklands?

I know he is elsewhere employed, but I'd say Boris Johnson, because he's brilliant 9. What is your nickname and why? Lately it seems to be Buzzer, an abbreviation of my surname Busbridge.

10. If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be? Antarctica please!

11. What would people be surprised to learn about you? I'm not actually that secretive, but perhaps that I grew up in Holland and speak Dutch.

12. What's the best movie you have watched recently? Having an awful taste in movies I'd probably say Frozen (it's my hangover movie)

13. Who would play you in a film about your life?

Uhm, probably Ryan Gosling.

14. What did you want to be when you were a child?

Probably a dolphin or killer whale

Tom (25) arrived in January on a 12-month contract with the Fisheries Department. He was born and raised in Holland but went to university in North Wales.

His biggest love is travelling and it is the main reason he applied for the job down here. He has seen a bit of Asia already and is looking forward to a trip to Venezuela soon. "Ideally, I'd like to work and travel for at least the next couple of years and to be able to associate countries with memories and make the world a bigger place again," he said.

How old is your Electrical Wiring?
When was your Electrical Protection and Electrical Earthing installed or upgraded?

If you have answered "Don't Know" or "over 10 years" then it is advised to get your electrics on your property checked.

A Domestic Electricity Improvement Grant is available from FIDC.

This Grant is designed to help anyone living in a domestic property anywhere across the whole of the Falkland Islands have an electrically safe home.

The Grant will cover an electrical safety check, 75% (up to a maximum of £750) of the cost of any materials (wire, sockets, plugs and fusebox) and 25% (up to a maximum of £200) for the cost of labour from a competent person to get your property up to the current Electrical Regulations.

If you would like to learn more about the assistance we can offer under this scheme and request an application form please call 27211, email develop@fidc.co.fk or visit www.fidc.co.fk/grants/electrical

Is your home cold and draughty?
Do you feel like you are heating your home but it never feels warm?

A Household Insulation Grant is available from FIDC.

This Grant is designed to help owners of private domestic properties across the whole of the Falkland Islands to save energy and money by having a more thermally efficient home.

The Grant will cover 50% (up to a maximum of £500) of the cost of insulation and draught proofing materials. Approved materials must be used. Installation can be carried out by you or by a contractor but the Grant does not cover any labour costs.

If you would like to learn more about the assistance we can offer under this scheme and request an application form please call 27211, email develop@fidc.co.fk or visit www.fidc.co.fk/grants/household

Return to

LAST winter Falklands residents Ken Passfield and Sally Poncet sailed from Stanley to New Zealand via Chile, French Polynesia and Niue in Ken's boat, a 31 foot steel cutter called Porvenir (named after the old Porvenir, the last schooner to work around the Falklands with no auxiliary engine). They laid the boat up in Whangarei, New Zealand over the summer and Ken returned to her in late April to resume the voyage.

The boat was in good order when I returned; Mike Hughes (who with his wife Kirsten started the Seaman's Centre in Stanley) lives nearby and had kindly been keeping an eye on her while we were away.

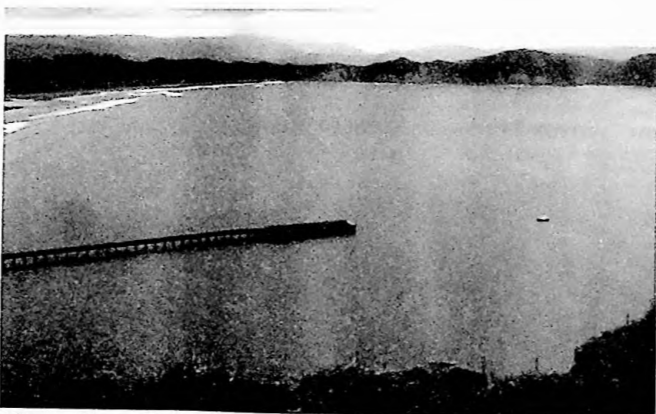

It was great to get sailing again and potter down the east coast of the North Island, as far as Tologa Bay, famous for having the longest wharf in the southern hemisphere, built in 1929, and superseded by road transport a mere 30 years later. It's quite some jetty, over 500 metres long and jutting out into a wide open bay that is completely exposed in easterly gales. Although the jetty has no commercial use any more and surveys showed it to be past economic repair, the locals didn't want to see their iconic landmark disappear, and they raised NZ$5million to refurbish it for now, rather than watch it crumble into the sea. Hmm, an inspiration for Bodie Creek bridge?

The main reason for heading south in winter when most other yachties were hotfooting it for the tropics was that I really wanted to visit the Chatham Islands. Sally came up with some lame excuse about being busy and having to go to Buckingham Palace or something, so I had to sail out on my own. It took me five days to get there, with a mixed bag of weather en route; I arrived just before a big blow so gratefully dropped anchor in Port Hutt. The islands lack any all-weather anchorages, but at least Port Hutt is OK in most wind directions and I spent the whole time at anchor there without any dramas. I was surprised on arrival to see another yacht - a guy from Auckland on his way home, it was nice to know I wasn't the only nutter sailing out there in the middle of winter. On first impressions it was just like the Canache but with trees. There are numerous wrecks of varying vintages scattered around the shore and a large shelterbelt of introduced Macrocarpas just inland. There's only half a dozen houses there at Port Hutt and a small fish factory. The island's capital Waitangi, population 200, is about 30km away by road.

The Chathams lie 400 miles east of the mainland and are pretty much New Zealand's equivalent of the Falkland Islands. 600 people live there and there are 10 islands in total (two inhabited) with a land area of about 1,000km². Like us, their economy is based on fishing, except they catch the fish themselves; small local boats fish for crayfish and blue cod and divers target paua (abalone).

Farming is fairly marginal by all accounts, with high freight costs eroding profits. However some of the farms I saw were model farms, with healthy sheep and cattle, well set up fences; hay made and fodder crops grown. Other farms were (how can we put this politely) a bit more rustic.

Their climate is as windy as ours, but being at 44 degrees south, it's that little bit warmer and also wetter, so is a much better grass-growing climate. Patches of lush native bush and trees grow anywhere that stock has been fenced out.

The human history is interesting and tragic. The islands were first settled by Polynesians around the 14th century. They evolved into the Moriori people, with a culture distinct from the Maori. European sealers turned up in the 1790s, but the biggest impact was 900 Maori settling in the islands in 1835. They killed and enslaved the Moriori and pinched their land.

After a few years a lot of these Maori went back to New Zealand and sold their land to European settlers. Today's Chatham Islanders are a mix of Moriori, Maori and European, proud to be Chatham Islanders first and foremost.

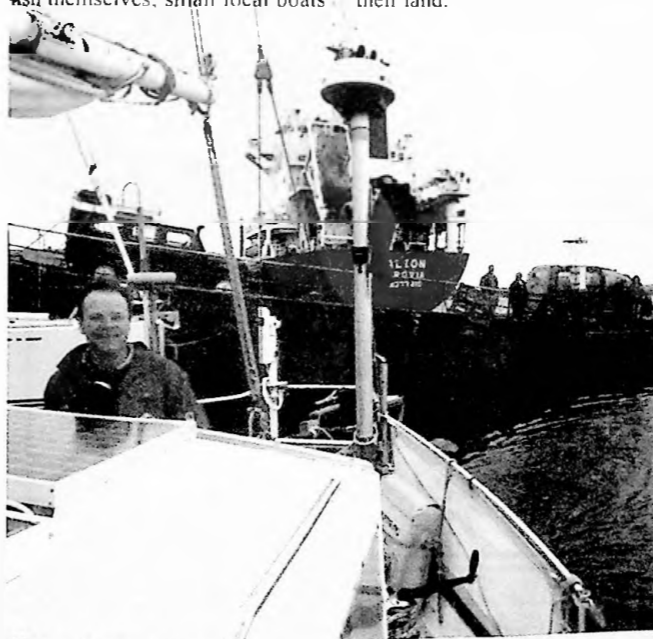

It's always interesting to go to other islands and see what they have and we don't. They have a ship about once a fortnight on average and flights to New Zealand (locals never call it the mainland) four days a week. Yet there's no mobile phones and I couldn't even find a payphone anywhere in town. Mind you their dump was a lot tidier than ours, with a container where people could leave items for re-use, now there's an idea we could copy.

In a short visit it's hard to really get into the place but everyone I met was very friendly and had time for a yarn and a gossip.

Overall life felt very familiar, with its good bits and bad bits. It would have been good to spend more time there. The next visit will have to be in summer, to be there for the Christmas Races, to meet more people and see more of the wildlife.

All too soon there was a perfect forecast for returning to New Zealand that I couldn't ignore, so I left reluctantly and headed for Lyttelton in the South Island. It took four day's sailing and I got there just in time to meet Sally off her flight. We'll have a couple more months in New Zealand then head north for some warmth and sunshine, over to Norfolk Island and Australia.

FIDC co-opted Board Members

FIDC's newly designated Chair, Hamish Wylie, would like to invite individuals to submit expressions of interest for co-opted Board Member positions on FIDC's newly structured Board. With most members recruited from the private sector, including the Chair and Vice-Chair, this is a concerted move to empower FIDC and give a new and meritocratic Development Board much greater autonomy.

The Falkland Islands Development Corporation is looking for individuals with an entrepreneurial background and a real interest in business and economic development in the Falkland Islands.

The Board will provide strategic direction to FIDC, helping to deliver the objectives set out in the Corporation's Business Plan.

Position	Term
Co-opted Member (1)	Two years
Co-opted Member (2)	Two years
Co-opted Member (3)	Four years
Co-opted Member (4)	Four years

You can learn more about the Corporation by visiting the website www.fidc.co.fk and anyone interested in finding out more about the opportunities detailed above is encouraged to contact FIDC's General Manager, telephone 27211 or email generalmanager@fidc.co.fk for an informal chat and details regarding the application process.

Expressions of interest should be received no later than 30th June 2015.

Meet our NatWest Island Games 2015 teams

THE young swimmers heading off to Jersey for the Island Games on June 24 have worked, "incredibly hard," to win their place on the team. Team Manager Janet Robertson told Penguin News this week.

Training began as soon as the pool opened last August and since the end of last year they have been training every morning at 6.30 am with an additional two hour session on Sundays introduced earlier this year. Some of them have had to do this while also studying hard for their GCSEs and mock exams.

In most other places in the world swimmers will train through a series of shorter term cycles, gearing up for regular, smaller events culminating in the most important competition, whatever that may be. These children, like all Falkland Island athletes, have not had that regular injection of adrenalin and competition to feed their motivation; instead they have slogged away for months with only the distant thought of Jersey to spur them on.

"When we go to the Island Games we would, of course, love to win," said Janet, "but we know the level of competition. Many of the swimmers there are going on to nationals, regional championships, or international events such as the Commonwealth Games or even the Olympics. These are swimmers from the Isle of Man, the Shetlands and Jersey who all have strong competitive swimming histories."

The Swimming Team

She said the Falklands are the only small island group that regularly send swimmers, "so we are at an immediate disadvantage but we know that when smaller islands such as Froya or St Helena put forward teams, we have an excellent chance of beating them. This year both these Islands are turning up so that will be one of our main aims; to beat them."

They also want to establish personal bests and Island records. Daniel will be looking to set some new records in freestyle and backstroke, some of which are standing since 1999; Sophie is aiming to beat the records in breaststroke and the IM that her sister set last time round; Emily and Nikita have a real chance of finally breaking through backstroke records set by Donna Triggs and Claire Kilmartin. As the two youngest swimmers at only 14 years old, Darby and Jessie will be aiming to set the standard for swimmers in that age group. Jessie has an added bonus that no-one else has ever swum the 800m freestyle so whatever she does, she can set a national record in this event and either she or Nikita will be doing the same for the 400m free, another event not swum before.

Janet said: "Whatever the outcome, and whether they manage to achieve everything they hope for, I think we can all be extremely impressed that they have shown the commitment and dedication to get to the level that they have. Jersey is a well-deserved prize for them and I hope that the whole community can let them know just how proud we are of them. We will run regular updates on the Stanley Swimming Club facebook page so please log in and help spur them on."

Thank you from the Football Team

THE Falkland Islands Football team would like to say a huge thank you to the following people and organisations.

Big thanks go to Stanley Services, Malvina House Hotel and Falkland Islands Holidays for always supporting football in the islands.

Also, thanks to Stacy Bragger and FIOGA for arranging everything so we can make the most of the games in Jersey. Pete Biggs at FIDF and Nigel Bishop of NCB Solutions have been a huge help. Also, the following guys for helping us with games when needed, Wayne Clement (who also gave a very generous donation) Saul Zovic, Javier Sotomayor and Dom Jaffray. We would also like to thank everyone who came to our fund raisers and who have supported us in other ways. Getting the football team to Jersey has been a real community effort and we appreciate every kind gesture.

Please like our Facebook page to get updates on the team before and during the Tournament. Search for 'Falkland Islands Football'

Commodore's thanks for Falklands' help

COMMANDER British Forces South Atlantic Islands Commodore Darren Bone has written via Penguin News to personally thank the Falklands, "for its tremendous response," to the hospital's emergency appeal for blood on June 17.

He said: "That urgent call was answered by many in Stanley, as well as by 41 of my own people at MPC."

Commodore Bone said: "Early that morning, a sailor of the Royal Fleet Auxiliary was taken very seriously ill while at sea. The ship's company provided immediate first aid before my own Search and Rescue helicopter and crew arrived. The patient was then airlifted to KEMH, where he received intensive care and supplies of blood. Critically, your donations of blood helped to replenish vital stocks. We later managed to evacuate the patient to a hospital overseas.

"Sadly however, the sailor died in hospital after a short illness. His next of kin have been informed and our thoughts and sympathies are with his family, friends and colleagues at this difficult time.

"Upsetting though this news is, I take comfort from the extraordinary efforts of everyone involved: those in the ship; the KEMH medical staff; my own team; and the overwhelming and generous response by all who volunteered to donate. Your selfless contribution made a real difference. The Royal Fleet Auxiliary has asked me to express its deep gratitude. Above all, this experience demonstrates to me that we live and work as part of a wider community where compassion abounds."

Team FI's hopes for NatWest Island Games

By Chris Eynon

"I HOPE to win a gold medal," and, "I hope to beat my personal best and achieve Falklands records in the races I am competing in," are just two of the sentiments of Falklands athletes preparing to participate in the 14th Island Games which begins tomorrow in Jersey.

Flights permitting (at time of going to print the aircraft taking many of the team to UK had been delayed until today) the squad will embark on a week of sporting endeavour in seven disciplines, archery, athletics, badminton, football, golf, shooting and swimming, and boast a complement of 58 athletes.

There is a diverse range of experience in the 2015 squad, with as many as 24 athletes about to have their first taste of overseas competition, while the two most experienced members of the team will be at their eleventh Island Games. Expectations will vary, from the wish to gain experience from taking part in an international competition, to aiming to smash personal bests and Falklands records and ultimately be in contention to bring home a medal.

The Archery Team which has not taken part in an Island Games as yet, did compete in an international competition in Guernsey in a Games Year in 2013, where individual and team medals were won. Cont. page 7

Decolonisation Committee lacks moral authority protest our politicians in New York

MEMBER of Legislative Assembly Mike Summers has once again berated the UN Special Committee Decolonisation for failing to support the Falklands, a Non Self Governing Territory, when it is precisely the committee's role to do so.

At the annual gathering yesterday also attended by MLA Phyl Rendell, which also allows speeches from an Argentine delegation protesting British 'colonisation' of the Falklands, he said the Committee lacked any, "moral authority in the UN family," due to its record over the years and its lack of proper direction.

The Committee rolled out the, "same tired old motion which contains not a single reference to self-determination and which does nothing to assist the development of our society, or to secure peace and prosperity in the South West Atlantic," he stated.

He pointed out: "Several countries on this Committee have a record of publicly supporting the Argentine claim to sovereignty of the Falkland Islands. Whatever the geo-political realities that bring you to this position, it is not a relevant consideration in the C24. This Committee has no mandate to discuss or judge the competing claims of Member States over our country."

He paid tribute to, "those members of the Committee who have stood firm in protecting the important principles entrusted to you."

On Argentina he said the country sought to, "colonise" the Falklands against the wishes of its people. He said the Committee should condemn such ambition.

MLA Summers refuted an Argentine version of the countries historical 'claim' to the Falklands.

Argentina claims Spanish sovereignty was settled over the Falklands saying Spain made an express reservation of its sovereignty in the Treaty of 22 January 1771. "It was not," said MLA Summers: "both Britain and Spain reserved their positions on sovereignty in that Treaty."

Argentina also claims that Britain expelled the Argentine population from the Falklands in 1833: "It did not," commented MLA Summers. Cont. page 4

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

'ARE Falklands men sexist?' is a question I've occasionally been asked by visiting journalists; usually the more astute kind, attempting to get to the nitty-gritty of Islands' life.

Oddly enough it's a question I quite like. As a reporter I'm not inclined to sugar coat answers when interviewed by a fellow journalist, but as an Islander its comforting to be obliged to admit we're less than perfect. However, answering that question offers me the opportunity to not only blether on about the male/female team-work of our Falklands' ancestors, but also explain how that characterises our modern society.

While I don't have room in this column to meander off on an historical tangent, I think it's safe to say that a few hundred pioneering years, including a bloody uncomfortable climate and vastly limited resources has, on the whole, created a society of men and women (and of course there are exceptions) who work together in quite an efficient and largely equal partnership. Let's face it if they didn't, this little nation would be in a whole lot of trouble.

Incidentally, I'm actually leading up to a point about working parents and nurseries, but to continue briefly on the subject of Falklands men; for the record I don't believe I encountered raw, face-to-face, unapologetic sexism (as opposed to a bit of bravado) until I left the Islands to attend university in the UK and encountered a Yorkshireman. Not even an old one, but a fellow student.

But on to nurseries and the crisis they face (see pages 8-9 for full details) it is a big, big deal and it has absolutely nothing to do with ridiculously outdated arguments about whether mums should work or not. Just as in the past, it's all about our community needing everyone, male or female, to be a cog in the wheel.

Because apart from the vital safe-guarding issues outlined by the Lucy Faithfull review, from an economic point of view, we are no longer a society where one or other parent can easily decide to stay at home. The majority can't afford it, and let's face it, our community can't afford it. It simply mustn't lose more people from the work-place. The Falklands is vastly lacking in human resources. When it comes to staffing it's not just nurseries and other businesses existing on a knife-edge it's government departments too.

This really isn't a time to say 'yes we must do something' and then throw nothing but paper-work at it - for the sake of the children and the economy the nurseries need some kind of financial support and they need it yesterday.

Betts no show at C24 - the truth comes out

At a time of year when Alexander Betts is normally paraded as a true 'Kelper' by his adopted country Argentina at the C24 in New York, there was no sign of him and no explanation from the Argentine government for his absence.

Argentine newspaper Clarin, this week said that despite repeated questions as to why he was not attending, no answer was forthcoming.

Last weekend, Argentine governor Fabiana Rios, invited Mr Betts to stand for election as a deputy for Parlasur, to represent Tierra del Fuego, where he went to vote with his new National Identity Document (NID) as the national constitution makes this the province which includes the Falklands.

Clarín also noted that this year a campaign had been launched from both London and the Falklands to expose some shady aspects of his life and this week the Falklands History Group also distributed a letter to Argentine Deputies and Senators, opinion formers the most important Argentine journalists, Argentine diplomats, and many others.

The letter described how ever since his arrival in Argentina after the Argentine defeat in 1982, Falkland Islander Alexander Betts had presented a, "smoke screen," of lies to the world to conceal his, "true and sordid motives."

It noted "He has presented himself as an upright and honourable gentleman motivated by the results of his historical studies and a new found patriotism. Nothing could be further from the truth."

But, the letter said, "lies don't get you very far." In June 2011 he told the newspaper Clarin that he had begun his history "studies" in 1976 and had concluded after two years that Argentina had a better right to the sovereignty of the Falklands. But two years from 1976 would have been 1978 and his lie was evident from a letter he had written in the Falklands newspaper Falkland Islands Times then. That letter criticised the British Government for being soft on Argentina over its naval installation on Thule, South Sandwich Islands. No Argentine supporter would have written such a letter; it was the letter of a stalwart British supporter noted the History Group letter.

It went on to say that in 2011, John Fowler, then Deputy Editor of Penguin News, wrote to the website El Malvinense to denounce Betts. Mr Fowler said that the motive for Betts' departure from the Falklands was not patriotic, but because he was having sex with Santana, and that he had abandoned his family in order to continue his relationship with her.

Mr Fowler also said that the only importance Betts had was as a, "compliant Islander" in the hands of those wanting to disseminate a distorted view of the Falklands.

The History Group letter stated that more recently the Daily Mail published statements from the woman who was his second wife, Rosa Betts and her daughter Magaly Betts accused him of having left the Islands not for political reasons, but to, "follow an Argentine lover". Magaly accused him of abandoning her mother when she was pregnant by him, and of not wanting anything more to do with them.

Betts did something else that is difficult to understand, said the letter, he had the address of a house in the Falklands, which belongs to someone else, written into the NID that Argentina gave him last year.

Clarín said it had sent emails to Mr Betts in order to talk to him about these matters, but he had not replied.

Horse owners create a club

HORSE owners have got together to form a Club in the hope that they can further encourage and promote equestrian activities around the Islands as well as enhance their own enjoyment of the hobby.

Chaired by Natasha Elbakidze who spends most of her spare time working with her own horses and ensuring her equally horse mad daughter Nia has quality time with her pony, she said among many aims it was hoped they could help maintain an awareness of cultural heritage, traditions and the importance of the horse in the settlement of the Islands.

The club wants to engage with the local community to raise awareness and promote horsemanship, but also recognises that there are far more people of all ages, especially children, who want to ride but do not have access to a suitable horse.

The days of numerous tame horses being available have long gone, but with suitable facilities and a common interest many feel that the current trail riding practices could be extended to include other aspects of horsemanship.

Several organised rides are to be arranged throughout the summer and to get the club established a western-themed barn dance is being organised for September 12. You can expect a good night out with a regular knees up, some novelty events and even a slap up feed – the sort of thing you might expect if you were sitting around a camp fire.

Not all horse owners are members and there is no intention to be exclusive although efforts will be made to liaise with sports associations and the Agriculture Department on any issues of interest to the club members.

Grant Munro as secretary, Sarah Crofts as treasurer along with Lisa Watson, Tina Hirtle, Farrah Peck, Emily Hancox, Amy Gilding and Doreen Davis make up the committee.

If you would like to find out more contact any of the above or email fhorscownersclub@gmail.com.

Museum and Conservation to develop old Dockyard

THE remainder of the land in the Historic Dockyard has been allocated for civic, cultural and community use.

This means that the area has now been allocated to the Museum and National Trust (M&NT) and Falklands Conservation (FC) to jointly develop it over the next five years.

Museum Trustee Richard Cockwell said it was good news and the trustees and staff were very pleased with the outcome.

It had been a long process, he said, ongoing since the move to the Dockyard commenced in 2012.

Mr Cockwell said they were happy to be working in conjunction with Falklands Conservation which also has an interest in the Islands' heritage.

While there was still the legal documents to finalise before any physical work could take place on the site, Mr Cockwell assured it would be an area of steeped in social and natural history which people could walk around and enjoy.

Executive Council approved the paper from the Development Corporation on the Waterfront Development which specifically asked permission for the allocation.

The decision was the result of an expressions of interest process run over recent months, where the joint proposal was deemed to be the most suitable for the area, said MLA Michael Poole.

The project coordinator at FIDC was also tasked with working with both the M&NT and FC to formalise the details and to assist in seeing this progress.

Penguin rehab landscaped

ADDING to their earlier work at the Oiled Seabird Rehabilitation Facility near the Fisheries Department the RIC have created a small wetland area which will contain native reeds and other marsh/wetland plants.

All run-off from the facility from the indoor penguin pen will end up being filtered through the reeds which will help to break down the bacteria in the penguin excrement and other contaminated run-off, whilst the nutrients will help to nourish the plants. Once the area is planted up with the reeds it will also act to improve the surrounding area (currently boggy-grassland with low aesthetic value) and create a new habitat and environment.

MLAs at work overseas

MLAs Mike Summers OBE and Phyl Rendell MBE have completed the second leg of their trip to the United States, visiting Seattle, where, in addition to young Islanders Tiphonie May and Farrah Peck, they were accompanied on the Seattle leg of their trip by Mike Rendell, Chairman of the FI Tourist Board.

The delegation visited the expedition companies based in Seattle which visit the Falklands, and heard of their ambitious plans for the future. They also discussed plans for future investment in the Falkland Islands and the development of the tourism development strategy.

The delegation also met with the major Carnival cruise companies, and agreed on a number of concrete initiatives and development plans.

The latter half of the week was spent in Houston, visiting oil companies and their suppliers and contractors. Positive meetings were also held with the Mayor's Office and the Greater Houston Partnership.

The delegation then moved on to New York for the annual Special Committee on Decolonisation (C24) held yesterday. See front page and page 4

Oil readiness assessed

THE 'Oil Readiness Checklist' was discussed at Wednesday's Executive Council with MLA Michael Poole saying that the Assembly was currently happy that the Government was properly staffed and funded in key relevant departments for the work that needed to be done.

Government Oil & Gas Programme Manager Mike Brough, presented the document which goes before Executive Council every six months or so, and acts as a tool to monitor progress across the range of issues that need to be completed in preparation for potential future oil development. The update was noted and will be published in full at a later date said MLA Poole.

Earwig control

THE release of two species of parasitoid fly for the purposes of biological control of earwigs will take place this summer.

Work on the project commenced in the last Government and permission was given by Executive Council this week via a majority of MLAs as MLA Roger Edwards expressed opposition.

The community will be kept informed as it progresses. Executive Council also noted its support for ensuring that long-term monitoring of the success of the biological control is put in place.

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

THE reception last week was busy but enjoyable. Those attending included many supporters, two ministers and two new SNP parliamentarians with an interest in the Falklands, one of whom had worked in the Islands briefly. With around 280 acceptances the real problem is that there is never enough time to talk to all those one wants to greet. The following day our London representative Sukey Cameron and I went to the meeting where the Falklands All Party Parliamentary group for this Parliament was set up. It was quite a challenge with a vote taking place in the Commons and members and peers popping in and out. Fortunately there were enough in the room at the same time for long enough to set up the group, with many of our old friends from previous parliaments among their number.

AN interesting story to hit the headlines last week concerned Ofsted dispensing with the services of about one in every four of its inspectors, seemingly because they were not up to scratch. It seems there is no end yet to their troubles which is a great pity because independent inspections are important to check, maintain and improve educational standards. They used to serve a very useful purpose in the individual feedback inspectors gave to those they inspected with a view to suggesting ways to improve. I know no teacher who does not believe they could do some things better with constructive help.

AS a little light relief at the weekend I attended the Royal Highland Show with family, it was great fun; the only problem being that you probably need two days to do it justice with so much to see. A surprise performance was a scavenging Falklands Johnny Rook (striated cara cara) who located meaty snacks hidden in 'kinder eggs', including retrieving them from a wheely bin. It appears that this bird is the offspring of one of the very few captive breeding pairs in the UK. How they got there raises some questions. I'm not aware of any legal exports in the recent or even fairly distant past. I'd be interested to hear if anyone has any knowledge of them.

Decolonisation Committee lacks moral authority protests MLA Summers in New York

He said "Britain removed an illegal military garrison, but persuaded a number of Argentine and Uruguayan civilians to stay."

He reminded that the Argentine inhabitants did not resist the British "invaders" but in fact sought assistance to escape the failed Vernet enterprise, and stayed in the Islands.

He added: "Regrettably they went on to murder a number of Vernet's employees. Amongst the murderers was the infamous Gaucho Rivero, now held up as a national hero by the current Argentine Government."

He refuted the Argentine story that Britain replaced the Argentine inhabitants with British subjects: "They did not, many of the Argentine civilians stayed on, and over many years were supplemented by new settlers from several other European and South American countries, including Chile, Argentina, Uruguay and the UK."

Among other points he also noted that despite Argentina claiming there had been no international agreement to confirm Britain's possession of the Falklands and that Argentina has never accepted Britain's possession of the Falklands, in fact there had been, "and they did; the Convention of Settlement of 1849, ratified by both Governments in 1850, confirmed there were no outstanding disputes between the two. Argentina accepted British sovereignty."

Argentina claims Falkland Islanders were a temporary British population. This was, "perhaps the greatest of all deceptions," said MLA Summers, "since we can now demonstrate nine generations of settlers from 61 different ethnic backgrounds."

The country also claimed that Britain's possession of the Falklands violated the territorial integrity of Argentina.

But it did not said MLA Summers: "the Falkland Islands have demonstrably never been part of Argentina, no matter how much Argentina wishes it was so, and its territorial integrity has clearly not been violated."

MLA Phyl Rendell

MLA Phyl Rendell also addressed the Committee, concentrating in particular on the good state of the Falklands economy despite Argentina's attempts to undermine it.

She described the Falklands fishery as the, "biggest contributor to our economy... This is in spite of the Argentine government making it illegal for Spanish companies working in Argentina to work in the Falklands' fisheries in partnership with our companies, and that government has also pressurised the Chinese jigger fleet not to fish in our waters."

She spoke of the growth of tourism in the Islands but reminded, "Tourism could grow even more if charter flights from Chile were not banned by the Argentine regime. Only a weekly flight from Punta Arenas, carrying fresh produce and passengers, is permitted when there is a demand for far more freight and people to be transported on this route, particularly in the summer months."

"This is denying a small community access to necessary goods and services. Furthermore, Argentina has turned a blind eye to violent action in Argentine ports against international cruise ships also visiting the Islands."

Speaking of the Falklands hydrocarbons industry she noted, "recent threats of punitive fines and imprisonment from the Argentine Government against international oil company workers and their contractors."

MLA Rendell also spoke of the financial autonomy of the Islands, "we receive no financial aid from the UK," how the Islands would not need British troops if it were not for the Argentine threat, and how culturally diverse the Falklands was.

She asked, "... how can this country I describe represent a colony under a colonial power? We are not a colony and have a status that we are content with."

She ended: "It is the duty of this Committee to assist NSGT's to reach a status that is satisfactory to the people of that territory and it is therefore your duty to acknowledge the rights of Falkland Islanders and not support those who covet our territory."

Shackleton cruise

THE Falklands will be included in Expedition cruise line Silversea Expeditions series of unique Shackleton Centenary Voyages to Antarctica in 2015 and 2016. Guests booking one of Silver Explorer's 18-day Shackleton Centenary Voyages, sailing round trip from Ushuaia, will enjoy explorations of the Falkland Islands, South Georgia, Elephant Island, and the Antarctic Peninsula.

MINI MEMORY LANE

A NEW Islander aircraft is delivered to the Islands by 61 year old Captain Janette Ferguson who undertook the 12 day delivery flight from the UK. Also within FIGAS Andy Alsop takes up the position of Chief Pilot replacing John Boyes. Andy introduced the first Islander in 1979 and worked for FIGAS again in 1983. He and fellow pilot Paul Robertson operate a five day a week service under the management of Peter Milner. Meanwhile Derek Clarke is undergoing training at the Oxford Air Training School in the UK and plans to return to the Islands in May 1990.

The FIGAS infrastructure is also being developed as Paul Chapman of Stanley Decorating Services is awarded a £160,000 contract to build auxiliary buildings for Fishops and FIGAS hangars, including workshops, stores, pilot debriefing centre and managerial offices.

About half of the houses in Stanley are wired up ready to be connected to the cable telephone network. The aim is to have all existing customers connected to the new system as a priority. In Camp most of the work is complete with mast bases in place and masts and aerials being erected for the microwave radio transmission network.

The Falklands wins its first ever gold medal at the NatWest Island games in Gotland, Sweden.

Policeman Graham Didlick picks up the gold in the Whitworth class 4 black powder musket event. Graham defeated Gotland's entry by four points, using a borrowed rifle while his team mate PED took eighth place. If that was not enough, he and PED went on to claim two silver medals in black powder team events during the week.

Ken Aldridge and Tim McCaullum also earned a bronze medal in the full bore 300 metre prone event with a combined score of 1086. The Falklands team was narrowly beaten by Gotland who took the gold medal and Jersey the silver.

Councillors Jan Cheek and Sharon Halford attend a round of exploratory discussions with members of the Argentine Government, and also meet informally with members of the Argentine opposition party. Gilbert House says the meeting was initiated by Councillors, "in the light of continuing improvement in relations," between Argentine and British Governments.

Falkland Islands Holidays promoted in London

MICHELLE Pepper and Jenny Luxton attended Experience Latin America (ELA) in London on behalf of Falkland Islands Holidays. Ms Luxton said it had been an excellent venue to promote awareness of the Falklands and what was on offer.

"There was a huge amount of interest and everyone we saw was very enthusiastic about adding the Falklands to their brochures and selling the Islands as a stand-alone destination, an add on to Southern South America or from Cruise Ships."

ELA is Europe's exclusive by-invitation only travel event, organised by the Latin American Travel Association (LATA) and is a trade event held in Canary Wharf bringing together key suppliers from Latin America with influential buyers from the UK and Europe.

The event was larger than last year, said Ms Luxton adding that during the three day event there were plenty of opportunities to meet and develop relationships with key UK and European Tour Operators and Travel Agents to grow business to Latin America.

"It's an invaluable opportunity for Falkland Island Holidays to build brand and destination awareness to a targeted audience. We felt it was worthwhile for us to attend and we are looking forward to reaping the benefit next season."

"We are always looking for new products to sell, so if you provide tourist services and have a new service or facility then let us know and we will promote and sell it for you."

Swimming out West

ON Saturday morning as the crowds were gathering at Surf Bay in Stanley a smaller but no less enthusiastic group were preparing to plunge into the harbour at Fox Bay Village.

The population of 'The Bay' had been boosted by West Falklands Sweep Draw attendees and some had risen to the challenge of a midwinter swim.

No less than 14 brave souls took on the cold waters of Fox Bay at 10am and it became 'A Swim for Cleo'. Cleo Jones had been very keen to partake in the swim to raise money for local charities, but unfortunately she could not attend the two-nighter this year - but will definitely be taking a dip next year.

A total of £534 was raised through generous donations from family and friends in Stanley and on the West.

Sammy Marsh who was the driving force behind the soggy event said a special thanks must go to Carli Sudder for her donation of one of her beautiful canvas prints which raised £70 through Facebook bids.

"A huge thank you to everyone who braved the icy cold water, and donated so generously," said Sammy.

The money raised will be split between the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund and Cancer Support and Awareness Trust.

Look after what we already have

I LISTENED to the recording of the Waterfront Working Group meeting with interest last week.

Ever since their establishment and the first proposals, I have been mainly in opposition as I believe Ross Road and Stanley in general appeals to tourists because it is unique and probably 'quaint' and I am loathe to see it transformed into some kind of typical, commercial area. The same applies to the Dock Yard which should be entirely given over to the Museum and National Trust to allow for their development and expansion.

The meeting brought up the cost of these proposals a number of times and what our visions are for the future. If there is money to be spent, can I suggest that it is spent on refurbishment of the Whale Bone Arch itself and then perhaps the Cathedral or there will be nothing there in years to come for tourists to stop and photograph at all – problem solved.

I am a hypocritical Christian but I do not wish to see the Cathedral fall into disrepair and a look around shows signs of this happening. It is an old building that needs maintenance if we are to carry on using it for our Christenings and burials and I very much doubt the size of the Cathedral congregation will be able to fund the work that will need doing before too much longer.

My vision for the future is to see the Cathedral and Arch Green still there for us all to enjoy in years to come and I hope it will still be there for my final journey.

Commonsense prevails at last

IT looks like commonsense has finally prevailed and we will trial closing part of Ross Road for a few hours a day when large cruise ships are in Stanley.

Philomel Street corner to Dean Street with no right turn off Villiers Street onto Ross Road has been suggested.

It could be done very simply: approved windscreen stickers given to the Waterfront for guests and residents of that area – then all other passes given to the Tourist Office to give out to those tourist vehicles who need to use Ross Road.

In practice most long-tour vehicles heading out to camp etc are away up Ross Road before the main bulk of tourists disembark.

Commonsense will surely prevail for the ordinary vehicles picking up/dropping off elderly folks from houses in that area of Ross Road if required.

For stock deliveries it's easy-do them early or late and avoid the closed period.

Most of those involved and who live there, normally avoid vehicle travel on those days anyway and the rest of us can keep well clear of central Stanley on those days anyway.

So simple it would seem - but I expect the powers that be will make it as complicated and cumbersome as possible – to try and prove us wrong!

The Archery Team's Jo Summers-Lazo, Cheryl March from the Badminton Team and athletes Teslyn Barkman, Tim and Caroline Drew

The Games are on

The competition is likely to be stiffer in Jersey however, but the team will still be looking to build on the experience from two years ago and will hope to be in the mix.

In athletics the Falklands will be represented in both the men's and women's half marathons early in the week, with all three competitors taking part at an Island Games for the first time.

Tim Drew will potentially double up later in the week with the 10,000 metres, depending on how he recovers from his half marathon exertions. All three athletes will have Falklands records in their sights which are currently in the possession of Hugh Marsden and Tracy Porter, and all set the last time the games were held in Jersey, in 1997.

The badminton team attending the games is relatively inexperienced this year, with several of the Glasgow Commonwealth Games squad missing.

Two representatives for the Falklands at Bermuda 2013, Duane and Cheryl March will return to squad however, after representing St Helena at the Commonwealth Games.

The draw for the team competition has not been favourable on the Falklands, pitting them against Jersey, (number one seeds) and Greenland. The Jersey team, which has won Team Gold on three previous occasions includes several ex-England internationals, while Greenland has produced many individual medalists in the past.

Once the team competition is completed it will be on to the singles and doubles individual rounds, where the team will be looking for the draw to be somewhat kinder.

Hitra provide the Falklands football team with their first opponents, so a quick start will be the aim for George Elbakidze's men. With the remaining group games against the Shetland Isles and Isle of Wight, the quality of the oppo-

FALKLAND Islander and Scotsman Christopher Eynon (with wife Gill right) has made the journey from his home in Glasgow to Jersey for the Island Games in order to report on Falklands teams for Penguin News. Chris has represented the Falkland Islands overseas as part of the badminton team, including at the last Commonwealth Games.

Penguin News would like to thank FIOGA for the financial assistance in sending Chris to Jersey.

All of the group matches are early evening kick offs which will be welcomed, however with three matches in three days, ensuring quick recovery will be high on the agenda. The management team will have to pay particular attention to squad rotation, in a bid to combat fatigue and injury.

In golf, we will have the experienced trio of Troyd Bowles, Kevin Clapp and Ian Stewart, while Eugene Hurley will be taking part in his first games.

The competition's four rounds are alternated over two different links-style courses, The Royal Jersey which is on the East coast of Jersey and La Moye which has previously been a venue for the PGA European Tour.

Both courses will provide a stern test, however Troyd's Falklands record of 319 will be on everyone's radar.

So often the most successful team of the Games squad, the shooters will look to uphold the long-standing tradition of success for Falklands competitors over previous games. Competing in full bore, small bore, pistol and clay target shooting, the team boasts a wealth of experience and will hope for another good showing in Jersey.

Finally, while the youngest members of the squad will make up the swimming team, four of its members will already be able to draw on experience they gained at the last games in Bermuda in 2013.

All six have quite punishing schedules, so will look to recover well from each event to be able to strive for the PBs and Falklands records in their chosen disciplines.

As well as medals on offer at the Island Games there continues to be the gold, silver and bronze certificates available to islanders with a population less than 10,000.

Having won several of these certificates in the past, many of the Falklands athletes will harbour ambitions to leave Jersey with one of these in their possession.

The team of athletes will be escorted by a number of officials who will be able to call on the Falkland's Chef de Mission for the Jersey Games, Stacy Bragger should any problems arise.

Stacy as the Secretary of the Falkland Island Games Association, has had a major input in the organisation of all things logistical, making sure everything is in place for the team to be able to compete to the best of their ability without any hindrance. Stacy commented: "A huge amount of training and commitment has been put in for the Island Games, and we appreciate the support we have received from a large number of businesses and individuals. Jersey will be a great opportunity to show the Falklands at our best and to make friends for life from a wide range of countries and territories."

The Falklands as always is expected to take along a support that belies the distance they have to travel to get to Jersey. In true Falklands style the supporters will be amongst the most vocal and energetic of all the competing nations and territories and if they were on offer, would no doubt be in line for a gold medal for the encouragement they show to all athletes, if previous games is anything to go by.

All in all it promises to be a fine week of competition, where the Falklands will be soundly represented by a determined squad of athletes, who will undoubtedly, represent themselves and their home with pride, passion and no shortage of sporting courage. Turn to sport page (15) to meet the Shooting Team.

Daniel, Darby, Sophie, Jess and Emily from the Swimming Team

"SIMPLY put, the Islands' economy rests on the fact of poorly paid and supported persons caring for other people's children," was the assessment of Falkland Islands' nurseries by the 2015 Children's Safeguarding Review by the Lucy Faithfull Foundation.

They described the physical environments of the nurseries as, "not ideal, or safe in some respects," and that staffing ratios, "seemed low."

However they emphasised, "praise and admiration for the nursery staff," and said the children "appeared happy and well cared for."

But why are our nurseries, "existing on a knife edge," with the "prospect of a collapse in provision appearing quite real."

Why are employers and parents relying upon a system that is, "lacking in direction, oversight and basic standards," and is this in fact the case?

In order to find out, Penguin News spoke to the owners and/or managers of all four Falklands nurseries including Linda McRae, Angely Sanchez, Alana Arculus, Atty Cofre, and Christine Hewitt, along with the Child Care Liaison Officer (Head of the Child Care Steering Group) Rhiannon Didlick-Smith, the Member of Legislative Assembly (MLA) with responsibility for the sector Barry Elsbey, FIC Managing Director Roger Spink (for the private sector) and parent of two children in nursery care Kristy Buckland.

If the children are considered happy and well cared for, what, we wondered, was the problem?

Well it seems while nobody is criticising the dedication of the core staff, there is a big problem with staff shortages, which in some cases means unacceptably high ratios of children to staff.

For the nursery to be viable the staff pay has to be relatively low (around £6.50 an hour) and in the Falklands that is a problem straight away because there is no unemployment.

"We struggle and struggle and struggle and people just leave at a moments notice when something better pops up," explained Linda from Happy Feet.

"People move from job to job, I've done it myself in the past," she said. "it's just the way it is in the Falklands."

The nurseries suffer less in winter, and in fact the managers are currently in a state of near-calm, but when the seasonal summer work starts things tend to get stressful.

"We don't look forward to the cruise ship season," said Christine from Rug Rats. Tourist driving is well paid and nursery staff, desperate to supplement their incomes, whether to put down a deposit on a house or simply support their family day to day, will request time off in order to benefit.

If ratios become too high, the children receive a lot less attention. Carers reduced to only having enough time to provide basic care don't have time to stimulate the minds of the, "little sponges," (as Linda referred to them) in their care.

Age 0-3 is a vital time for the development of a child's brain: "if you get it wrong at that point it will affect their capacity for learning for the rest of their school career," said Child Care Liaison Officer Rhiannon.

In fact the Infant/Junior School has reported that some children are joining pre-school FSI not "school-ready,"

"The children are not doing the basic things that are expected of them by our school standards, which means the teachers in this school have to work doubly hard (some children may arrive at that level and other children don't) just to get everybody to the same level."

The school is doing a great job ironing out the creases but it is not an ideal situation, and, "it is picked up on in Ofsted reports," said Rhiannon.

Constant staff changes are also unfortunate in terms of a lack of consistency for the children, "it's not fair on the children to have one person looking after them one day and then suddenly it's someone else," said Christine.

Angely from Mini Mi's indicated to Penguin News that it was mainly the quality of staff that she found hard to find. She expects her staff to be energetic, "always moving and stimulating the children," and not just sitting around.

The nurseries have managed to reduce, although not solve, the problem by sharing bank staff. This has come about as a result of the Nurseries Alliance. "They work together to try and iron out problems: sharing bank staff and passing on information," explained Rhiannon.

This is also, "incredibly good for morale because if a problem arises we find out we're all in the same boat and we can support each other," said Christine.

The Lucy Faithfull review described the buildings in less than complimentary terms, but is it right to compare us to the UK? Living on an island perhaps we sometimes have to make do with what we've got?

"You can make do but they just haven't progressed at all," said Rhiannon.

"The environments are mostly adapted buildings, and there is a lack of space, plus, "the girls are crying out for help with things like the basic outside play areas and safe fencing," she explained.

Alana from Stanley Kids Zone added: "You need a building that is fit for young children," and this, she said required investment, "because young children don't need converted houses or churches but resources to keep them safe, entertain them and even potty train them: nice bathrooms and sleeping areas."

None of the nurseries are like this she said, "all of the nurseries have got their problems and if the government invested in the nurseries it would set a level playing field, not for the nurseries themselves, but for the children, so wherever the children went they would be getting the same facilities."

The Kids Zone building is newer than the others and was provided by Government. This means they do not have the problem of paying rent, however it is a large building and, "running costs are high; probably as high as paying rent," said Alana.

Rent is of course another challenge and at least one of the businesses is expected to pay the maintenance costs; and for a very old building.

Lack of space also means it is difficult to separate out the different age groups. The rough and tumble play of older children that attend the nurseries at lunchtime or after school, could be a danger to little ones and some toys for older children are inappropriate for the little ones.

What about staff training – how much emphasis is put on that? The Lucy Faithfull report suggested there should be at least 'minimum training' standards.

Government is currently advertising a child care apprenticeship, but the downside is the training has to take place in the school (because the nurseries are unregulated) which creates a staffing issue for the nursery. Also, where young people have trained in the UK, on returning to the Islands, the nursery pay has not retained them. They are likely to take up work as a Learning Support Assistant with the school.

Rhiannon suggested a training team could be brought to the Falklands to help nurseries' develop staff, but added, "you can't just say that will solve all the problems because it won't."

Alana emphasised: "I think you can invest as much as you like in training but the staff will still go." She felt consistency was more important in terms of staff.

She did not believe every staff member needed an NVQ Level 3. "I think you need them to care about the children and be consistent for the children and help them be independent and to communicate well. That's what we try to achieve. The training is really, great... but if you just invest in that the staff are still going to keep leaving if they are not paid more."

So if you can't do the training at the nurseries because they're not regulated - why not regulate them?

Regulations have financial implications. According to the Lucy Faithfull Review, attempting to raise standards without the resources to do so, "will simply destroy the nursery sector, to no good outcome."

The report suggests there should be minimum standards but be introduced gradually and incrementally and that some form of state subsidy is necessary.

In fact, there was a move towards self-regulation by the nurseries in a bronze, silver and gold award which surrounded, "hitting all the basic safety points," said Rhiannon. The nurseries were putting staff through safeguarding training, "and all of the basics things you would get with a school," but due to staffing problems and lack of suitable environments they simply could not meet the requirements.

The conclusion from both the review authors and the nursery owners is that imposing regulations without investment from somewhere simply will not work.

What about putting up the nursery fees?

Now there's a sticky subject. Put up the fees enough to truly de the nursery sector?

Above: Kids Zone - A strong emphasis on child/carer ratios means higher staff costs. Above: Angely loves the work. "it's not about the money," but still had concerns over staffing and outside space develop nursery standards and many of the mums currently working to support their families, will do what they do in the UK, stop working. The drop in their income would mean they might as well be at home caring for their children themselves.

Economically this would be a disaster for the Falklands. Bearing in mind only eight mothers (based on families receiving child allowance) do not work, imagine a Falklands where many working mums or dads withdraw from the workplace. The knock-on effect might be that a nursery would close. With no where to place children even more mothers or fathers might be forced to stay home. "What we have currently got right," said Rhiannon, "is that child care is affordable."

Mess with that and the whole system falls apart.

"That is why other countries subsidise child care... because it's not a business where you can make a decent profit from, because it's 'giving care' and you can't really put a price on care."

So it's a catch 22 - you can't put up the fees because people won't be able to afford it, but without additional income to the nurseries you can't improve the environments, pay better wages or even improve ratios. Is there an answer?

In a May 2015 Executive Council accepted a paper from the Director of Education, Director of Health and Social Services and the Attorney General which recommend a joint-departmental tranche of work to investigate possibilities for the regulation of nurseries and child-minders in order to raise standards of child care to minimum safe standards.

That's all well and good but for this to happen investment will be required and who is going to invest. The government? The public sector?

According to Rhiannon there has been, "a very positive," move towards supporting child care, "especially since the Lucy Faithfull report: it has identified the problems and given it a real backbone, rather than just people saying 'we need to change it'."

She said a number of different models were being examined but emphasised there would need to be a custom-model created just for the Falklands: "and then it just depends on how much the FIG can afford to put into it."

Rhiannon believed a multi-faceted approach was required; investment in training as well as the facilities. She, and the nursery owners/managers saw the Mount Pleasant nursery as a shining example; an organisation though that has received a great deal of investment in the same way that schools are invested in.

MLAs should visit it, they said.

The nursery owners and managers, themselves, appear particularly concerned about the environments: the facilities and being able to afford good quality age appropriate toys

In pursuit of investment Rug Rats recently provided FIDC with a business plan and are currently waiting to see what might be on offer from that sector.

The dream

All of the nurseries agreed their dream would be a custom building, housing all of the nurseries (each business still run separately) but sharing kitchen facilities and outside play areas.

A parent's view

Working mum Kristy Buckland told us that as a parent of two her biggest concern was the financial problem of school holidays. "It costs up to £400 per child sometimes. Even those in reasonable paying jobs struggle financially with the impact. Parents in lower earning brackets are even worse off. I do not believe in hand-outs but do think they should find a way to help parents stay in work, and to deal with problems areas such as school holidays."

She said: "I do believe we have good nurseries but think it would be good if a nursery for older children could be started, as nurseries have to provide activities for the children, and think some of the older ones struggle with the lack of stimulation when attention is focused on younger children"

An employer's point of view

FIG Managing Director Roger Spink said the Falklands had invested in the education of young people and those same young people had aspirations to own their own house, and have careers, and it was, "important that we create the right conditions for our people to do this," as well as, "raise a family."

He pointed out that The UK Conservative Government in their latest manifesto recognised those aspirations in the UK and had stated: "We have already legislated to introduce tax-free childcare in the next Parliament - worth up to £2,000 per child per year - to help parents who want to work. We introduced 15 hours a week of free child care for all three and four-year olds and the most deprived two year-olds. And because working families with children under school age face particularly high child care costs, in the next Parliament we will give families where all parents are working an entitlement to 30 hours of free child care for their three and four year-olds."

He believed it was time Government considered support to that sector of the Islands' community.

Should the business sector invest in nurseries we wondered?

Mr Spink said at The Falkland Islands Company Ltd and at many other private sector employers, "we try to be as flexible as possible to accommodate employees with children, but the issue as in the UK is really an important social issue for the Government to address. We do not at present see nurseries as an area that we would invest in as a business venture, but we do already make donations to them from our funds earmarked for community support."

Member of Legislative Assembly Barry Elsby's view

"Our economy continues to grow but that is only possible if parents of preschool children can access suitable childcare, be that with family members or with one of the private nurseries," said M.L.A Elsby.

He said: "If one or more of our nurseries were to close their doors this would have a devastating effect on our economy as a parent would have to stay at home."

"High quality pre-school care has been shown in many countries to improve a child's performance when they enter formal education. Karen Steen, Head of IJS, has clear evidence that this also applies to the Falklands.

"All the nurseries in Stanley wish to improve; they have formed an Alliance to support each other as they receive training and raise standards.

"They do not object to the idea of legislation as that would clearly spell out the standards they must all achieve.

"If legislation were passed, it could only come into effect when the nurseries had had sufficient time to acquire the necessary skills and improve the standards of their buildings etc.

"I believe government has a pivotal role in helping train nursery staff and we must innovate ways to bring this about.

"At present, many nursery staff are paid not much above the minimum wage, certainly below the living wage we talked about during the budget.

"This leads to an increased turn over of staff as they find better paid jobs.

Many countries have schemes in place to support working parents with child care costs.

"I believe that if we are to see excellence in our nurseries then some form of financial support will be necessary, be that from Government, the private sector or both."

The last word from the Children's Safeguarding Review:

"Given the centrality of the nursery sector to the public and private employment sector, some governmental assistance with that will be necessary, as is the case in the UK, since the entire burden cannot be met by parents alone.

"Trite as it may sound, expenditure in this sector is an investment in children's safety and welfare, and is both a reasonable goal in terms of child protection and in terms of economic development and the peace of mind of the working population."

Midwinter splash raises cash for charities

ON a remarkably mild day on Saturday, 276 people dashed into the South-west Atlantic and were given a certificate to confirm their lunacy. Last year 228 swimmers took part.

With almost two thirds of those who took part being from Mount Pleasant one can safely assume that the equally large crowd of spectators were predominantly from Stanley.

Just before 11am a Search and Rescue (SAR) helicopter arrived overhead and winched down Sgt Dan Hewitt. He 'walked on water' and then appeared to ski over the breakers as the helicopter moved closer to the shore. After receiving a round of applause for his fine arrival Sgt Hewitt removed his survival suit, cut the ribbon to start the swim and took part in the event.

Event organiser Katrina Stephenson thanked everyone who turned up for the Midwinter swim, adding, "and what a turn out it was."

"Huge thanks to all who helped out in one way or another, and Hillside Camp for the soup and hot drinks."

The Nepal Appeal Fund, SAMA '82 and The Seamen's Mission will benefit from the £1,872 which will be split equally between them.

FIDC co-opted Board Members

FIDC's newly designated Chair, Hamish Wylie, would like to invite individuals to submit expressions of interest for co-opted Board Member positions on FIDC's newly structured Board. With most members recruited from the private sector, including the Chair and Vice-Chair, this is a concerted move to empower FIDC and give a new and meritocratic Development Board much greater autonomy.

The Falkland Islands Development Corporation is looking for individuals with an entrepreneurial background and a real interest in business and economic development in the Falkland Islands.

The Board will provide strategic direction to FIDC, helping to deliver the objectives set out in the Corporation's Business Plan.

Position	Term
Co-opted Member (1)	Two years
Co-opted Member (2)	Two years
Co-opted Member (3)	Four years
Co-opted Member (4)	Four years

You can learn more about the Corporation by visiting the website www.fidc.co.fk and anyone interested in finding out more about the opportunities detailed above is encouraged to contact FIDC's General Manager, telephone 27211 or email generalmanager@fidc.co.fk for an informal chat and details regarding the application process.

Expressions of interest should be received no later than 30th June 2015.

Meet our NatWest Island Games 2015 teams

MOST of the Falklands shooting team have one or two - in some cases many more - international competitions under their belts, but this year will be the first time the Falklands will be competing in the Female 10 metre Air Pistol event since 2010 when Caren Middleton represented the ladies in the Commonwealth Games in Delhi.

Charlotte Middleton and Sarah Clarke accept that a medal placing is unlikely for this competition but are both hoping to achieve personal bests and gain some valuable experience of a competition away from home. "I'm excited, but really nervous," said Sarah. "It's going to be so different shooting in front of and alongside lots of other people when up until now it's only been Charlotte and I practising at one time. I'm not sure if the pressure will work to our advantage or not, obviously we are hoping it will."

Gold medal winner (plus winner of numerous bronze and silver medals) Graham Didlick will represent the Islands for the eighth time; and in fact Jersey was the first place he won a medal.

He told Penguin News how he hoped to fare in this year's competition: "It would be nice to at least repeat, if not beat, my last achievements in Jersey but as someone reminded me the other day, that was some time ago and I'm not getting any younger. But I am going to do my best."

Jersey will be the fourth international competition for seasoned competitor Nevin Middleton who will shoot in air pistol competitions as well as practical pistol. "My hopes are for everyone to return with a medal of course, but I will be happy with everyone doing their very best and using the experience to learn and improve for the future," he said.

Hopes were also high for Jeremy Poncet and Michael Goss who had both represented the Islands overseas previously. Michael explained that training had been difficult with the lack of daylight hours but they were hopeful of achieving personal bests and did not rule out the chance of winning a medal.

Club Chairman and Shotgun competitor Steve Dent explained his hopes for the club and the shot-gunners in particular during their venture to Jersey. "Our shot-gunners have worked hard in preparation for the Jersey games, both locally and overseas. Gary (Clement) Shaun (Jaffray) and I have put in a large amount of range time and I feel that we are in our best possible position as the games rapidly approaches. Saul and Axel have been working with our shotgun Manager, Chris Dean, former Team England Commonwealth Medallist. Chris has been working with us since Glasgow and has worked with Saul before that. Axel achieved Sussex ABT Junior Champion just last weekend; this is the culmination of hard work and effort on his behalf.

"I am immensely proud, as Club Chair, of the dedication and hard work put in by our entire team. Unlike our European counterparts, we battle cold weather, short days and high winds in preparation for competition. Our competitors have worked hard in all of their preparations and I am hopeful of at least a finals place for some of shooters, and quietly hopeful of a medal for at least one or two."

Highly experienced shooters Ken Aldridge and Gareth Goodwin are the Falklands fullbore team. They will both compete in the Queens Individual and Pairs Events.

Ken won a bronze medal in the pairs event at the Gotland Island Games in 1999 and has also competed in two Commonwealth Games.

Gareth also achieved a bronze in the pairs event at the Guernsey Island Games in 2003 and has competed at three Commonwealth Games.

Falklands ice hockey team heads to Punta Arenas

IT'S barely five months since Grant Budd returned from playing ice hockey in Chile and considered it was possible to take a team to the annual winter tournament that is held in the Cool Centre, Zona Franca.

It was a tall order but it has paid off with, "weekly dedication from players to play with in-line skates to enable easier transition to the ice for those that have little or no experience."

Although a little frustrated that some promising individuals were unable to commit at such short notice, they have been offered services of Ryan Bahl who is travelling all the way from California, USA to be part of the team and is proud to wear their jersey.

They have also secured the services of Alejandro Traba, a forward who normally would play for the Nordics team in Punta Arenas

Grant said: "It was a shame to not be able to take our local net-minder or others in our association that were keen to attend, but they already had made commitments at this time.

"However, we were again saved by the bell with a guest request by Ruben Torres who had played in Punta in the past and had recently returned to the ice."

They leave on Saturday and will give information regarding chances to view the games online.

The team will play three games against Kotaix - Punta, Yetis Cero Grado - Santiago, and Dragones - Rio Grande, Argentina and if they do well, there is the final.

The Falklands Team consists of Jonathan Nicholson #69, Antoine Daille #7, Malachi #9 & Grant Budd #10, International Guests Ryan Bahl #19, Alejandro Traba #88 & Ruben Torres #1.

"We would like to thank our long standing past and new sponsors for their valued contribution which has enabled us to purchase protective equipment, our new team strip for the international stage and assistance with flights, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Morrison Construction (Falklands) Ltd, Fortuna Ltd, International Tours & Travel, Sure and Energise GROUP Limited, as without your support, this would not have been at all possible."
