 ing ther to play in the U.S. Open and to act as a delegate for the state of Washington at the USCF's annual meeting. I'll have a report on the meeting in the September issue. There will also be a report on the NW players in the Denker and Polgar tournaments as well as in the U.S. Open.Keep on sending me material! And photographers, please remember to identify the people and places in your pictures.

Also, I've heard from some subscribers who would like to see chess cartoons. Are there any budding cartoonists out there?

Stephen Christopher

I was deeply saddened to learn of the passing of Stephen Christopher.

I first met Mr. Christopher, as I knew him then, in 1969 in the Bothell High School library. The Bothell High School chess team he coached was hosting the Redmond High School team I played for. I remember noticing that he had far more chess equipment than his team could ever use. Curiosity got the better of me, and I asked him why he had so much equipment. I don't remember his exact words, but the answer boiled down to: because someone might need it.

Not too long after that chess match, I got a call from Mr . Christopher. Did I want to play in a chess tournament in Seattle that weekend? He said he'd be happy to pick me up and give me a ride if I did.

That's how my life in tournament chess started. Early in the morning of January 1, 1970, a nice man who barely knew me drove many miles out of his way through the back roads east of Redmond to give me and another student a ride to our first chess tournament.

That first trip and the other rides he gave me don't explain the fond memories I have of him, however. I think the fond memories come from a lot of little things I observed over the years: generosity that never seemed to be accompanied by an expectation of getting something in return.

That kind of generosity is rare. It makes those who receive it feel special. It makes them feel like it's natural to help others and expect nothing in return.

It's how you treat family, and I think that's how Stephen viewed the chess community.

Tom Rowan

GM＇s Dominate Dake Memorial GM Golod and GM Anka score 7½ out of 9

by NM Clark Harmon

The 2004 Arthur Dake Memorial IM Tournament was played June 5－13 at US Fiberglass，Inc．offices in McMinnville，Oregon．The ten－player event brought together five foreign and five USA players in what was the strongest tourna－ ment ever in Oregon．Two GMs，one IM and four FMs competed in the round robin event honoring Oregon＇s only GM，Arthur Dake，who passed away in 2000 at the age of 90 ．GM Vitali Golod from Israel led most of the way when Hungarian GM Emil Anka was held to an early draw by FM David Roper．However，Roper＇s draw against Golod in the eighth round put the race in a dead heat．The last round saw Anka and Golod，each having seven points，face off for the win．However，a decisive result was not to be and a hard－fought draw resulted．

In third place，with five points，was Seattle FM Dave Roper．Fourth and fifth place went to＇drawing＇master，IM Nikolai Andrianov of Russia and Portland＇s Nick Raptis，each with $41 / 2$ points．The pre－tournament favorite to score $61 / 2$ points and thereby gain an IM norm，California FM Dmitry Zilberstein，scored only four points to tie with bottom－ranked Mike Stanford of Victoria，BC．

Rounding out the field，British Columbia＇s FM Jon Berry finished 8th with $31 / 2$ points，McMinnville＇s Clark Harmon 9th with $21 / 2$ points，and FM Lester Van Meter of Indianapolis finished with 2 points．

There were several surprises in the tournament．Probably the biggest was Zilberstein＇s poor showing．The young FM was fourth ranked with a rating near 2400，and looked a probable IM norm qualifier．In the end，it was Roper who was going for the norm，but late round losses to Raptis and Berry KO＇d his hopes．The big ratings loser was IM Andrianov，who drew every game．GM Anka，while chas－ ing GM Golod for first place，compiled the biggest rating point gain with Mike Stanford not far behind．

The Arthur Dake Memorial IM，a ten－player round robin，is FIDE rated and sponsored and funded by US Fiberglass，Inc．，and owners Clark and Sherry Harmon． Participation is determined by rating，title，and foreign status and is invitational． There must be six title holders and $40 \%$ foreigners to be classed as an International Tournament．Grisha Alpernas directed．It is planned to be a regular event．

Apropos Invitational #1  Something a little different from your friends at Apropos!

Here's how it works:
The first 20 players to register for the tournament via e-mail, plus four alternates, are in! There's no entry fee! The only requirement is that you not break your commitment to play. If you do, you will not be eligible to play again in an Apropos invitational for three tournaments. The top five finishers from the first four events will meet in the fifth event to declare the Season One champion and winner of the Apropos Cup!

There's a generous prize fund of $$ 500.00$, especially when you consider there's no entry fee!
Registration is easy, simply e-mail kent@aproposretail.com. You'll receive a confirmation e-mail asking for your FIRM COMMITMENT to play, and upon receiving your confirmation you're in!
Alternates: If you are not one of the first 20 whose registration is accepted, you will be asked if you would like to be an alternate. The first four to accept an alternate's spot will have the same playing commitment as those in the tournament. More information will be provided to alternates.

Broken Castling

by Matthew Fleury

$\bigcirc$astling，as a rule，is normally per－ formed when the pawns that form the shield are intact，i．e．， undoubled，unisolated，and，in most cases， unmoved．There are situations（excus－ ing，of course，the kingside fianchetto） when this＂rule＂can be violated．And when it is，the reason is usually a strong counterattack．A very famous example is．

John．S．DeWitt continues as Editor．R．R．Merk was the circulation head with Ken W．Mulford as Publisher．Con－ tributors：John N．Nourse（＂Nourse AdNauseam＂），Fred H． Weaver（＂From Chess Life＂），Viktor Pupols（＂Vox Pupoli＂）， Stephen Falk（＂Chess Bits＂），Dan E．Wade（feature writer）， Ollie W．LaFreniere（feature writer）．The Washington Open tournament announcement again filled about $1 / 2$ a page．The event was set for Labor Day Weekend at the Seattle Chess Club．The 1954 Washington Junior had been rescheduled for Sept．18－19 in Yakima．

The six－round Seafair Open，won by Ivars Dahlbergs （4．5－1．5）of Portland on tiebreaks over Ted（Eugene）Warner of Seattle，was the subject of $31 / 2$－page report which included the 20 －player crosstable．The only name in the crosstable still around playing chess that I know is James McCormick． Roseburg won the Seattle City Championship that was con－ ducted concurrently with the Seafair．Charles Joachim，who scored four，was the tournament director and story writer．

As reported in the July issue，Ken Mulford of Seattle won the Woodpusher tournament over eight other players． R．M．Collins of Tacoma was $2^{\text {nd }}$ ．A full crosstable was given this issue．

In＂From Chess Life，＂we learn that Larry Evans and Arturo Pomar scored 9．5－2．5 and tied for $1^{31}$ place in US Open held in New Orleans，Louisiana．Each won $$ 700$ and Evans took the title on tiebreaks．Mrs．Gisela Gresser won the Woman＇s title in New Orleans．George Krauss won the 49－ player Southern Open．C．C．Bates won a 28 －player Ala－ bama event．Gene Shapiro topped 24 others in New Mexico．

Washington won the annual international match with British Columbia 22－8 in the A section and 9－6 in B Section． Elmars Zemgalis lost on board one to W．Jursevakis．They used to play each other in Latvia before World War II．Zemgalis usually won those games．Other players who might read this article that took part were James McCormick and Norman Abramson．The playing site was Seven Cedars Pavilion in Mount Vernon．The Mt．Vernon Chess Club was the host． All the Yakima players－Nelson，Edberg，Hoge，Falk and LaFreniere－won their games．This was Charles Joachim＇s eighth WA－BC match and he has not lost a game，scoring five wins and three draws．In total， 58 Washington players turned out，while 43 came from BC．This was the smallest BC turn－ out in several years．This was the $9^{\text {th }}$ WA－BC match．

The rest of World Championship match games between Botvinnik and Smyslov were given．The match ended 12－12， with both winning seven games，but Botvinnik kept the title． The article says that 2,000 spectators watched the final game．

57 names were listed on the Postal Chess Rating List． Tops was Greene．Twenty－six pages in this fine issue of the Washington Chess Letter．

by Donald Emigh

If there had been leaves, if there had been leaves, I say, they would have been brown and yellow and hectic red, as it was a beautiful fall day. But there were no leaves, for the new ten-acre shopping mall now stood on this formerly wooded land north of the city. On this, the opening day of the mall, the mall's vast parking lot was filled with bandstands, carnival rides, booths, concession stands, and several thousand happy people in a festive mood. They had come to celebrate the mall's opening day and its promotional Performing Arts Festival.

The general theme of the festival, communicated by the mall's financial backers, was 'Civic Unity Through Comradeship and Purchasing.' Participating artists had to show at least some respect for this theme if they were to be eligible for a thousand dollar prize. The mayor himself was to select the winner, or winners, and present the check. That afternoon. The mayor. There would be pictures in the papers.

At ten o'clock on this eventful morning, Peachcroft and Lenny, each carrying a card table and a pillow case full of chess equipment, exited the mall's main entrance and struggled out onto the parking lot. Lenny, in addition, was straining under the added burden of two battered folding chairs. They made their way to the organizer's table, set down in an open space several feet from the end of the building. The table was a sheet of plywood stretched across two sawhorses. A man cradling a cell phone at his ear was bent over a computer, staring at the screen. He was shuffling papers with one hand, while with the other he was reaching for a coffee cup.

Peachcroft rested his card table on the asphalt. Addressing the man behind the table, he said, "Where shall we set this up, my good man?"

The man continued at his work. He did not look up. He said, "Set up what?"
"That which we have here, sir," Peachcroft responded. "These material things that you see before you, the equipment and the accoutrements for an art and a science carried forward from ten centuries ago. Today, I myself will provide the intellect and knowledge necessary to breathe life into these symbols from the past, these husks."

At this, the man quickly straightened. Looking at Peachcroft, he cleared his throat and said, "That may be, mister, but what's your registration number? You've got to have a number to set up anything out there."
"We don't have a number," Lenny whimpered Peachcroft hastily cut in. "My friend means to say that the S _ Chess Club is perhaps the premier civic organization in the city. The Club and its members are welcome everywhere, at any function. Indeed, the citizenry expect our presence. Here is my card, as you may wish to verify what I have said." Peachcroft had taken his club membership card from his wallet. He offered the bent and soiled card to the man across the table. The man did not look at it.
"You don't have a number," the man barked. "You're not part of the festival and you can't be out there. You're not registered." He stared at the two, taking in the tall, sharp-featured Peachcroft and the shorter, considerably rounder Lenny. He began to smile. Finally, he said, "Tell you what I'm going to do, gents. This is your lucky day. Go ahead with your stuff out there behind the food concessions. You can have some of the space that nobody wanted. I guess a couple of card tables can't hurt anything." He abruptly bent once more over the computer and began punching a number into his cell phone. He entirely dismissed from his mind the two men standing before him.
"It will be as I told you, Lenny. No matter that the pompous bureaucrat inside would not allow us to work with him. We will do much better out here, mingling with the citizens, in the pavilions at the very heart of the festival."

The card tables had been placed side by side a few feet from the dumpster behind the Burrito Palace. The chessmen had been set up, the clocks wound and the folding chairs placed invitingly in front. It was Peachcroft's intention to play all comers, on both boards simultaneously if the occasion arose, for a dollar a game if he won and fifty cents if he lost. He was doing this for the Club. The money he collected would go into the Club's treasury.

Basil Penbrooke, President of the Mall Association, had given the S $\qquad$ Chess Club permission to set up four tables inside the mall. Penbrooke, an amateur player himself, thought that a tasteful line of tables graced with beautiful chessmen would give a touch of intellectual 'class' to the book and computer area. "Let's do it!" he had told Freestable over the phone. Freestable was the Club President. "That's a blah area over there, with books and batteries and computer what-not. A little show in the aisle out front might be just what we need. Go ahead, and charge a fee if you want to, just make sure your visitors understand that it's all non-profit, that it is all for the benefit of the S $\qquad$ Chess Club."
Peachcroft had become aware of this project only the night before. This moming, standing before the tables in the mall, he had been astounded to learn from Freestable that he had not been selected as one of the players. In addition, the equipment that he and Lenny had carried in was, in no way, needed or wanted.

But that was an hour ago. Peachcroft and Lenny had found a spot in the parking lot, as above narrated, and now were in business. Peachcroft stood tall and imposing, one hand resting lightly on a chess clock. Master now of his own tables, his grey eyes swept the vista before him.
"Let Freestable smirk and preen, Lenny. By day's end, we shall know whether it is better to labor here, in the field, or to wait, like spiders, in the mall. A player or two at our tables, and our reputation will be, post haste, broadcast throughout the festival. Ah, if I am not mistaken, here comes our first lad now."

A young man of eight or nine years came up to the tables and, with no word or ceremony, immediately sat down in one of the chairs. A man and a woman were a step or two behind him. The boy laid a burrito, carelessly wrapped in a napkin, on the table in front of him. He wiped his mouth on his sleeve and said, over his shoulder, "See, Dad, just like I told you. I saw this old guy with the chess sets."
"And right you were, son," agreed the man. To Peachcroft he said, "My boy has recently learned the game. At school. Would you mind if he played a few games with you?"
"Sir, it will be my pleasure," replied Peachcroft. "I shall be more than happy to instruct the youngster in some of the subtleties of the game. I must ask as recompense the small sum of one dollar per game. Not for myself, of course, but for the benefit of the S $\qquad$ Chess Club."
Lenny added, "Only fifty cents if he wins." Peachcroft shrugged and turned his hands out, palms up.

The man said, "Oh. Well, son, go ahead and play a few games. Your mother and I will cheer you on." He laughed and laid a hamlike hand on his son's shoulder and gave Peachcroft a wink.

The boy was an incredibly fast player, and, as Peachcroft soon discovered, incredibly accurate as well. Peachcroft lost three games. At the end of the third game, the boy stood up and said, "Let's go, Dad. I've got to find Jamie and tell him about this old guy. He's really a pushover. Let's go find Jamie. I think he's over by the ferris wheel."
"Jamie's learning chess, too," said the man. He put a dollar bill and two quarters on the table and gave Peachcroft a wink. "Billy's been teaching him." He and the woman took off after Billy, who had disappeared into the crowd out beyond the Burrito Palace.

As Peachcroft had foreseen, the happy existence of his chess tables soon spread throughout the grounds. Children and their parents converged on the site. By three in the afternoon, the area was in chaos. Children milled about, shouting and screaming. Fights broke out over whose turn it was to play. Parents mobbed the tables, hooting and jeering and occasionally trying to reach across and make moves themselves.

Above it all ranged Peachcroft, confident, unruffled, stooped slightly over the boards, turning with the move from table to table. It was his maddeningly calm demeanor, and the running comments he made as he played, that seemed to excite the wild enthusiasm of the juvenile players. Occasionally, the raucous proceedings brought people from around the corner of the Burrito Palace to stand staring, purchased food forgotten in their hands.

At the height of this magnificent confusion, a small group of men dressed in suits was seen arrowing in on the Burrito Palace itself. They came swiftly on; a round, red-faced man at the fore, stepping quickly along as the obvious leader of the troupe. He pulled up at the counter. Before he could say anything, a panting cohort bumped forward and said to the clerk, "This is the mayor here, son. He needs two burritos."

A little irritably, the mayor said, "You know, John, I think I could have handled that myself. But okay. Bring 'em around to the side. I'll be out there. I want to see what all the ruckus is about."

The mayor, a lively little man, was distinguished only by his suit in that milling mob of children. He waded in. He fought his way to the tables and, pushing between two parents, stood watching Peachcroft's performance. He was much impressed by Peachcroft's comportment and by his apparent interest in the education of his opponents. When Peachcroft, with much dignity, shook the hand of the small winner of a game, the mayor made up his mind. The mayor was tired of the festival's wailing singers and discordant bands and he had always hated mimes. This man before him knew how to bring people together and how to build enthusiasm - agreeable qualities in one who would represent the community. It was settled. He was the judge. This man before him would receive the one thousand dollar prize.

So we arrive at the following day - the following evening at the Club, to be exact. At the general meeting before the evening's play began, Freestable anounced that his three players had collected a total of $\$ 148$ from the games they had played at the mall. Then it was Peachcroft's turn. Peachcroft,standing on the podium at full height, handed Freestable the check he had received from the mayor. Speaking in a slow, resonant voice, he said, "You will see, Mr. Freestable, that this one thousand dollar check has been constructed in the name of our own S $\qquad$ Chess Club. Today's newspapers show its presentation by the mayor of our fair city. Take it from these hands, sir, as from the hands of the mayor." There was loud and sustained applause.

Freestable did not know what to say. He finally managed to mumble, "Thanks," and then stood there trying to smile.
"One thing more," said Peachcroft. He motioned to Lenny, who came to the front and climbed onto the stage carrying a box of receipts from the day before. "Go ahead, Lenny." Lenny cleared his throat. He said, "We have here an additional sixtytwo dollars as our winnings from yesterday's games. This, too, we present to the Club." There was applause.

Molewier, halfway back in the room, had a question. He rose to his feet and said, "Well, Peachcroft, Lenny calls that money 'winnings.' That may be partly true, I suppose. No doubt you did manage to win a game or two yesterday?" He sat down. A ripple of rude laughter spread through the room.

Peachcroft took a step forward and put his hands behind his back and, after a moment, said, "My friend, the games that I played yesterday were priceless victories, every one. With those games, my abilities have attained, at last, a tempering which will ensure against future defeat - and that is a victory beyond measure."

The meeting broke up. Molewier immediately challenged Peachcroft to a game.

Prototype for a Personalized Chess Book

by NM Tom Rowan

[This is the latest in a series of articles on improving your chess by NM Tom Rowan. Earlier articles in this series are available for viewing at Tom's chess website, www.tomrowan.com. Send your questions, comments, and suggestions for future articles to Tom at chess@tomrowan.com.]

Alarge chess library can sometimes be more of a hindrance than a help. With such an embarrassment of riches, you'll probably find yourself hopping from one book to the next without getting full value from any one of them. On the other hand, if you had only one book, getting full value from it would be easier, but you'd miss out on what the other books can offer.

What I want is a single chess book that meets nearly all my study needs. It'd be the book I'd pull from my shelf if I had a whole month to study or just 15 minutes. Sounds good so far, but the specifications are a teensy bit vague. Let's try to pin down those specifications by examining how books published today fall short.

Opening books based on annotated illustrative games are the type many chess players find the most useful. Let's start there.
Strong points:
The games cover an opening I play.
The games are complete; so I get to see how the opening, middlegame, and endgame fit together as an integrated whole.
The games are carefully selected to illustrate the key ideas of the opening.
The games are annotated to help me understand the reasons behind the moves.
Variations to the game continuation are illustrated by partial or complete games.
Weak points:
Parts of the book are out of date. By the time the book is in my hands, some of those main lines may have become historical footnotes, and the obscure subvariations may have become the new main lines.
Variations and sub-variations are hard to follow on a real board. I often have to back up all the way to the beginning of the game just to make sure I'm resetting the board correctly.
The book focuses on games and variations the author thinks are important and not on the games and variations I think are important.
The book completely overlooks the games I've played in this opening, including the games from just last month. How am I supposed to improve my repertoire, if the book doesn't remind me what I've been playing?

Clearly these weaknesses are not the author's fault. He's constrained by the realities of the publishing world. You, however, are not operating under these constraints. If you have a PC, you can correct these weaknesses and author your own personalized chess book that corrects these weaknesses.

The chess database programs Scid (free), ChessBase (commercial), and Chess Assistant (commercial) have all the authoring software you need. The key is to use the "merge" function (called "join" in Chess Assistant). When you're annotating a game in your database, the merge function allows you to include one or more games as variations, automatically inserted where they diverge from the main game.

Many chess authors make heavy use of this merge function when they're writing a book. The book is essentially a printout of that part of the database that the author has selected to be the illustrative games. His annotations to the games become the text of the book, and all the merged games become the variations.

Since you'll want to keep your personalized chess book up to date, don't bother printing it out. Just leave it as a set of games in your database. Note that because you'll be "reading" your book by viewing the games and annotations in your database program, navigating through variations and sub-variations can also be handled with the database program.

Just deciding to maintain your personalized chess book in electronic form as a collection of annotated games in a database has automatically fixed two of the weaknesses: how to keep the book up to date and how to navigate variations.

Now the trickier question. How do you to select the illustrative games and the merged games that will become the variations? Don't you have the same problem other authors have? Won't you periodically have to update the book by replacing illustrative games that no longer reflect the main line you care about?

I chose a solution that doesn't require any replacement of illustrative games. I chose to make the games I've played be the illustrative games. When I play a new game, I add it as an illustrative game. I merge in appropriate GM games as well as previous games I've played in that line to serve as variations.

In principle, I could periodically update my older illustrative games. That sounds like a lot of work, though, which means I wouldn't keep doing it for long. It's probably not worth the effort anyway, since I'll be focusing my study effort on my latest games, not the older ones.

To get started creating your personalized chess book, copy all of your annotated games to a new database that will serve as your book of illustrative games and variations. I call mine "rowan_book."

When I play a tournament game，I add it to my＂rowan＂ database and annotate it．Then I copy it to＂rowan＿book＂to serve as my latest illustrative game．

Next I look for key games in that line that I might want to include as variations for the illustrative game．To find these ＂variation＂candidate games I look through：
My earlier games played in this line．－This helps me review what I＇ve played before．
My books about this opening．－The author typically selects important and instructive games．Nearly all of these games are in one or more of my databases， so I don＇t have to re－enter the moves．
My databases of annotated games．－The Chess Infor－ mant and Chesspublishing．com collections are good resources if you have them．
My databases of unannotated games．The Week in Chess collection，updated weekly，is an excellent free re－ source．
I use ECO opening codes and tree searches to help me find candidate＂variation＂games．

Most of my illustrative games include 10 or more games as variations．Here＇s an example with just 2 variation games so you can get an idea how the result would look if you printed out your illustrative game book－style．Remember that，in prac－ tice，you＇ll probably want to forego the printing and just keep your book of illustrative games in electronic form to facilitate updating and to make navigating variations easier．

Fuzzy thinking．A one－move threat，with possible later ideas of playing ．．．e6－e5．However，it＇s soon apparent that ．．．e6－ e5 isn＇t practical．I have to worry about White attacking my King and playing d4－d5．White is developing normally and quickly，while I＇m defending and untangling．

$37 \ldots$ ฐ $g 8$ is better，but，at this point，I have less than a minute to make move 40.

Nothing fancy or difficult to create．Just my usual per－ sonal annotations with a couple of other games merged in as variations．In one convenient place，I can review my play in the game and branch down a couple of variations to see what others have played．

Is this more work than simply annotating your games？ Unfortunately，yes．

However，the good news is that the act of searching for these variation games to be merged in is educational in itself． You＇re forced to study some games played by strong players to see which ones best serve your purpose．After you＇ve made your selection and merged them into your illustrative game， you have a small piece of your personalized chess book fin－ ished and ready to use．

You＇ll learn quite a bit just by searching for the games to merge into your personalized chess book．You＇ll learn even more by browsing through it as it grows．Replay through your own games，branching off occasionally to see how strong play－ ers played differently in the variation games．When you learn something new，add it to your annotations．

You may not have the chess insights of famous chess au－ thors，but you have many advantages they don＇t．You don＇t have to＂freeze＂the book for publication．You can also direct the focus right where it should be－on you．

WCF Board Meeting  6/24/04

Present Pres.-Kent McNall, V.P.-Duane Polich. Sec-Gary Dorfner. Treas .-Robert Allen, T.C.-Carol Kleist. NWC Rep -absent, S, D -absent; Bus. Mgr NWC-Eric Holcomb

The meeting was called to order at 7:02 pm. The minutes were read, amended & approved.
Officers Reports:
Pres.: The Retreat is set for Sun. Aug. $15^{\text {th }}$ in tynnwood. Kent will host it at his office.
V.P.: Will be working on more projects through out the year
T.C. The WA Class Championship may be held at the same site were the WA Open was held. This will be decided later. Carol said she wants to look at other potential sites first. The lady vendor who was selling children's books has yet to pay her fee. There were 220 players in all. 150 in the WA Open. 50 in the Scholastic & 20 in the Novice.
Sec. No report.

| WA Open | $$ 1716$ profit |
| :--- | ---: |
| WA Blitz | 70 profit |
| Scholastic | 570 profit |
| Total profit | $$ 2356$ |

No report on money made on bulletins. Discussed ways \& means of improving tournament accounting procedures. Motion to approve the financial report was made by Mr. Dorfner \& $2^{\text {nd }}$ by Mr. Polich passed.
NWC Report The WA Open brought the memberships back up to about 450 to 460 members. NWC is about $$ 1000$ in the red. Kent is putting together a marketing kit to be used at tournaments to promote membership.
Scholastic Director. No report, absent.
Old Business:
Discussed Ethics Violations. Info has been sent to the USCF Ethics Committee, but there has been no response from them so far. The WCF board may or may not take further action, but will wait & see what the USCF does first. WCF letter of reprimand has not been sent to the players in question Discussed the WA Jr Open. The Jr Open still has not been USCF rated. The Treas, said that he still has not received a financial accounting for this tournament.
Discussed the Denker \& Polgar tournaments. Need to choose representatives \& decide how much money to give them. The WA Scholastic Association is to give $\$ 1000.00$ to the Denker Rep. A motion was made by Mr. Polich \& $2^{\text {nd }}$ by Mr. Dorfner to give the Susan Polgar rep $\$ 200.00$, passed.
Discussed holding the US Jr. Open & the US Open. In 2005 or 2006.
A motion was made by Mr. Polich to table this item of business until the retreat meeting \& at that time decide what action to take if a bid can be made for 2005 \& if not then a bid would be submitted for 2006. $2^{\text {nd }} \mathrm{Mr}$. Holcomb, passed. The New Tacoma Convention Center was suggested as a possible site.
It was felt that a committee should be formed to study \& research these 2 tournaments. A motion was made by Mr. Polich to do so, $2^{\text {no }}$ by Mr. Dorfner, passed. Chairman, Duane, committee members

Gary. Tony, Carol. The Pres outlined the following list of things the committee needs to look into, What bid package should look like. Financial commitment of WCF if any, talk to another national organizer time commitment to organize, man hours & number of people. Role WCF will play vs USCF, amount of site deposit, budget.

New Business:

Discussed the WA-OR match proposal submitted by Harley Greninger. This match would be held in Hoquiam in 2005. Carol to follow up on it.
Discussed America's Foundation for Chess's proposal for a Internet Tournament of State Champions. Carol to follow up on it.
Discussed the WA-BC match. It will be held in Bellingham in Oct. Duane to follow up on it Discussed the WA Sr. Adult Championship. Gary has it set for the weekend of Aug. 7-8 at the University Place Library. A motion was made by Mr. Dorfner that the WCF sponsor & guarantee it. 2nd Mrs. Kleist, passed.
Discussed the WA Woman's Championship. It was decided to table this item of business until the Retreat Meeting.
The Pres. laid out his plan on how he wants to organize & run the board meetings.

1. Take action on ideas that the board chooses to take action on.
2. To be effective as a body
3. That the board knows what they decide to take action on & they know what they can expect from it
4. Appointing committees & chairmen.
5. Committees would not be limited to board members. They would also include outside volunteers at the discretion of the committee chairman.
6. Be able to appoint a committee to do such & such a thing & to then report to the board by a certain date.
7. Goals & controls.

8 Motion based consideration. That is what is the board going to talk about & what will the board decide on, what to make a motion on.
9. Set dates for board meetings & decide how often board should meet.
10. Also e-mail the minutes to all board members after the meeting A.S.A.P & e-mail an agenda to all board members a week before the next meeting so that board members can add any items to it that they may. The Pres, will then create an agenda. Items not on the agenda can be considered. but will be considered after items on the agenda.
Discussed the WA Challenger's Cup. Date- Dec. $11^{\text {th }} \& 12^{\mathrm{m}}$. Deadline for CL . Aug. $10^{\text {m }}$. Kent will donate $\$ 250.00$ toward prize fund. Prize fund will be guaranteed. Site-University Place Library. A motion was made by Mr. Polich \& $2^{\text {nd }}$ by Mr. Dorfner to create a committee to work out the details \& set up the format \& budget \& e-mail them to the board members by Aug. $1^{\text {st }}$. passed, Carol was appointed chairman. Gary, Bob \& Fred are committee members. CL ad needs to be e-mailed in by Aug. $10^{\text {min }}$.
Discussed the Business Manager of NWC being on the WCF Board. Business Manager is not currently on the board. Gary to research the archives to find out why business manager & other positions were removed from the board.

Discussed the mail ballot for the constitution to be put in the Sept issue of NWC. Mail ballot will be sent to the Sec Discussed the membership graph Mr. Dorfner made up. Page 1 is a zip code map showing how many members are in each location. Page 2 shows how membership has been going up & down over the last few months. Gary was asked to include USCF membership, too.
The Pres suggested holding the WA Open in Spokane in 2006. Board needs to get the word out early to Eastern Wash. first Mr. Dorfner said that he is strongly against it. It was decided that the board study this issue further. This item of business was then tabled until the planning meeting on Aug. $15^{\text {th }}$ Gary to research the Eastern Wash. tournaments from 2000 to 2004 to see how many players played in each one. The Columbia Cup will also be included.
Discussed future meetings. It was suggested that the board meet every 2 months. Pres, to e-mail proposed dates to board members. Next meeting will be in Tacoma.
Discussed the WA Class. It was decided to form a committee to work out the details \& set up a format \& budget \& then e-mail them out to the board members. Kent said he wants to donate $\$ 1000.00$ for guaranteed sponsorship \& \$1000.00 for under writing sponsorship. Kent will be the Chairman \& Carol, Gary, Bob \& Fred will be committee members. A motion was made by Mr. Dorfner \& $2^{\text {nd }}$ by Mrs. Kleist to do this. passed
The Pres. asked that if board members have any ideas for the Retreat meeting to e-mail them to him. Retreat meeting will be open to volunteers & friends of the board.
The board needs to build a network of volunteers who will serve on committees, etc. Bob suggested having a TD work shop at the Wash. Class Championship or WA. Open.
Meeting adjourned at 9.58 pm
Gary J, Dorfner Sec.

Each player's peak official rating through out the year determines the class competes. A player starts with the latest official rating: for most, this will come from the annual list published at the beginning of December, but for those with a period of inactivity, the rating will be older. I then review the ratings from each supplement (they come out in even-numbered months) to see if a new high is reached. The current standings above are based on changes from all supplements up to and including the August supplement.

As a result of the peak rating method, players will never move down a class during a GP year, but many will move up. Often the most active players are also the most likely to be increasing their ratings. Many of the leaders in this month's report have just moved up a class. This may or may not enhance their chances of winning a class prize, depending on who is already in that class. A case in point is Morgan Griffiths, who just moved into the Master class. He remained at fourth place in his class, but since the Oregon master class includes overall leader Nick Raptis, Griffiths is about 40 points further behind the class leader. On the other hand, Geoffrey Gale (WA), Blake Salisbury (OR), and Patrick Kirlin (WA) each moved up a class, but remained in first place in their respective classes.

These moves help those left behind, too. Elston Cloy, Michael Akopov and William Gagnon have assumed first place in their classes due to the upward movement of players they used to trail. In Washington's Class D and Below there are three new players on the leader board due to the movement of three of last month's leaders into class C (Kirlin, Igor Ummel and Gene Milener). Other players who have moved up a class yet remain on the leader board include Keegan Knutson, David Rosenbaum and Daniel and Patrick Gay.

Congratulations to all the upwardlymobile players. That is often a reward of being an active tournament player, along with a shot at Christopher Memorial Northwest Grand Prix cash prizes. If only I could find the time to get more active myself . . . Well, there still is a lot of opportunity to gain points (both GP and rating varieties) before the year is over, and many races are very close. (I suspect the Oregon Open should help to juggle the Oregon standings substantially. Perhaps I should make plans to go to Eugene. You should too.)

Friday Night Upsets

by Gene Milener

Without occasional upsets there would be less reason to play chess，or any other competi－ tion．By definition upsets are infrequent， which can also make them more interest－ ing．Below are some recent upsets in rated games taken from Friday night play at the Seattle Chess Club．
Each Friday night at the SCC is for one round of rated games．Everyone who at－ tends gets a game，because directors Fred or Carol Kleist join in if there is an odd number of players．I like playing Friday nights because there is no time to kill be－ tween games，and because I do not work the next day．

The winners of the games below are relative new－comers to the SCC．With wins like these，each has quickly become part of club scene．Both Rick Lund and Erin Roach have gotten back into chess after not playing much since their youth． To those who lost these games，it is the high level of chess skill you usually de－ feat us with that made these victories spe－ cial for the winners．

This is the first chess article I have written．Annotating chess games for an audience is trickier than I expected．First， most scoresheets are nearly unreadable， and all I read had errors（approx every $10-15$ moves）．I now have even more respect for the $N W C$ editor who each months deciphers these scrawls．Second， Fritz 8 is a lopsided analyzing tool in that it gives out only＇？＇，never＇！＇．A＇？＇is gen－ erated when a player creates a big weak－ ness in his position，or when he fails to exploit a big weakness in his opponent＇s position．It is hard to suppress the truth when Fritz bluntly displays the flaws．So I fear being thought a scrooge for show－ ing too many＇？＇．My lame excuse could be Fritz made me show them．

Eocosic）as

Editor＇s note：In this article，positive numbers mean that Fritz believes White is better，while negative numbers indicate that FRITz thinks Black is better
