First Indian American Sworn in as S.F. District Attorney

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO—Kamala Harris, a political novice and career prosecutor, is now San Francisco's chief law enforcer and California's first district attorney of Indian and black descent.

Harris, sworn in here by Chief Justice Ronald M. George on Jan. 8, shares many of the same philosophies as her defeated incumbent, Terence Hallinan. They both have pledged never to seek the death penalty, they favor medical marijuana and would not use the state's three-strikes law to impose a life sentence for a nonviolent offense.

In a 20-minute speech to hundreds of supporters, Harris said she would be a "compassionate and fair" prosecutor.

"It takes much more than building prisons and locking away prisoners to keep our city safe," said Harris. Still, violent criminals, she said, will meet "the most severe consequences."

A former Alameda County and San Francisco prosecutor under Hallinan, Harris was elected following a doomed prosecution of the city's top police brass. The 67-year-old Hallinan took on the city's police department in an ill-fated grand jury probe following a street brawl over steak fajitas and an alleged cover up.

Harris, 39, won 56 percent of the vote to Hallinan's 44 percent in last month's runoff election. She promised to smooth relations with the city's police department.

The district attorney comes from a diverse family of professionals. Her mother, Shyamala Gopalan, is Indian and a breast cancer specialist. Her father, Donald Harris, is a black Stanford University economics professor.

Hallinan campaigned as "the nation's most progressive D.A.," while Harris focused on Hallinan's record, including one of the lowest conviction rates in California. She criticized Hallinan's contentious relationship with police and repeatedly slammed him for being soft on crime.

Harris was a prosecutor in Alameda County for eight years. After that, she worked in San Francisco's city attorney's office.

San Francisco's district attorney earns $158,000 a year and oversees some 250 employees and a $31 million budget.

Hallinan said he would begin a private practice. ■

Battle Over Affirmative Action Heats Up in Michigan

By Associated Press and Pacific Citizen Staff

LANSING, Mich.—A battle is expected over a ballot initiative asking voters whether affirmative action should stay or go in university admissions and government hiring.

Supporters of the initiative say it's needed to eliminate preferences based on skin color and dispel the stereotype that minorities always need a helping hand.

Opponents say without affirmative action, equal access isn't a guarantee.

"Racial stereotypes have existed for 100 years and that's the very reason you need affirmative action," said state Rep. Tupac A. Hunter, a Detroit Democrat. "I'll support eliminating affirmative action on the day we eliminate racism."

In a recent poll, 63 percent said they would vote to ban the use of racial preferences at universities and other public agencies. Twenty-nine percent of the 600 likely voters polled said they would vote against a constitutional amendment prohibiting racial preferences; 8 percent were still undecided.

Those who want to ban racial preferences in Michigan began their effort to get the issue on this fall's ballot after the U.S. Supreme Court's decision last June that upheld a general affirmative action program at the University of Michigan law school, but struck down the undergraduate school's formula of awarding points based on race.

Last month the Board of State Canvassers approved petition forms for the Michigan Civil Rights Initiative to gather the 317, 757 signatures needed for the measure to appear on this November's ballot. They have until July 6 to get enough signatures. If the issue gets to the November ballot, voters will be asked whether they want to amend the state constitution to prohibit preferences based on race, sex, ethnicity or national origin by state universities, government and in contracting.

The petition drive and — if that's successful — the subsequent ballot measure are expected to draw rafts of opponents. Besides the expected rallies and public relations efforts, legal challenges also will be employed.

The ballot initiative is being led by the Michigan Civil Rights Initiative, with help from the Sacramento, Calif.-based American Civil Rights Coalition.

The California group is led by Ward Connerly, the University of California regent who successfully pushed that state's Proposition 209 banning the consideration of race and gender in public employment, education and contracting.

Luke Massie, national co-chair of the pro-affirmative action group BAMN, By Any Means Necessary, said his group filed a lawsuit against the petition. Massie said the petition is intentionally deceptive and an attack on civil rights.

If that's not successful and the measure makes it to the ballot, another suit will be filed, Massie said.

"This is an absurdity. What we have is a teaspoon of medicine for a problem that is as big as the Great Lakes. We need more affirmative action, we need more active policies," Massie said.

Republican state Rep. Leon Drolet from Macomb County's Clinton Township, one of several state lawmakers who support the ballot initiative, said the initiative isn't against affirmative action, but in favor of equality.

For example, supporters aren't opposed to looking at someone's socio-economic situation as a factor in university admissions, he said.

But "looking at somebody and saying, 'Your skin tone looks right, we're going to give you special preferences,'" isn't fair, Drolet said. "We think everybody should be treated equally under the law regardless of how they look." ■

Reporter Declines to Reveal Sources for Wen Ho Lee Stories

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON—An Associated Press reporter refused to disclose his sources Jan. 7 despite a federal judge's order to do so for a lawsuit against the government by Wen Ho Lee, a former nuclear weapons scientist once suspected of spying.

H. Josef Hebert was deposed for 2 1/2 hours by Lee's lawyers and repeatedly was asked to disclose sources for stories about Lee, according to Hebert's lawyer, Lee Levine. The deposition took place at the offices of Lee's attorneys.

Lee is suing the departments of Energy and Justice, alleging they provided private information on him to reporters and suggested he was a suspect in an investigation into possible theft of secrets from Los Alamos Laboratory in New Mexico. All but one of 59 counts against Lee eventually were dismissed and then-President Bill Clinton apologized for Lee's treatment.

Lee is seeking reporters' notes and other documents to argue his case against the government. The case is seen as a test of a reporter's right to protect sources.

Last month, New York Times reporters Jeff Gerth and James Risen also refused to reveal their sources.

Reporter Robert Drogin of the Los Angeles Times and former CNN reporter Pierre Thomas gave depositions Jan. 8. Both journalists protected their sources, according to their lawyers.

Thomas is represented by Charles Tobin. Drogin's lawyer is the same as Hebert's.

The reporters could face jail time if they are found in contempt of court for not revealing their sources. ■

MORI MEMO Moving Forward, Remaining Relevant

By FLOYD MORI
JACL Nat'l President

While in San Francisco recently to attend a national JACL board meeting, my wife and I ran into Marshall Sumida as we came out of Soko Hardware in Japantown.

Marshall is an old friend whom I met during the 1970s while I was serving in the California State Assembly. He was and continues to be an important JACL leader and member in San Francisco. Marshall, 82, remains actively involved in trying to make a better world for all of us, young and old alike. He attended the last national JACL convention in Las Vegas and has attended many JACL conventions over the years.

Marshall was wearing a "Go for Broke" cap and spoke of his dedication to veterans' causes. He said that they did not fight to "win the war" but rather to "win the peace." The people who fought in the war did not do it to become heroes; they were doing it for their families and posterity. During World War II, Marshall served in the counterintelligence area for the

Governor Appoints State's First AA Judge

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

MILWAUKEE—The state of Wisconsin's first Asian American judge has a lot of experiences under his belt, including experiencing racism.

Glenn Yamahiro recalls going to Wisconsin Dells with his father as a child and watching as he was told there were no rooms available in a hotel — when there clearly were.

"I understand that sometimes people of color face additional challenges," Yamahiro, 43, said.

Yamahiro recently became Gov. Jim Doyle's first appointment to the Milwaukee County bench, replacing Jacqueline Schellinger. He was sworn in Jan. 9.

Yamahiro, a Japanese American, also became Wisconsin's first AA judge, said Amanda Todd, a spokeswoman for the state Supreme Court.

To keep the seat, Yamahiro will have to be elected in April. He has already drawn an opponent, former Circuit Judge Robert Crawford, who gained notoriety for unusual sentencing habits, quirky rulings and battles with the chief judge.

Yamahiro was born in Milwaukee and graduated from Brown Deer High School. He graduated from the University of Wisconsin Law School in 1991. After four years with the public defender's office, he formed a law office with two other former public defenders.

Glenn H. Yamahiro is married to Attorney Deborah Vishny and has one child, Hana, age nine.

Yamahiro has worked for Wisconsin Correctional Service monitoring defendants before trial, worked with the mentally ill and taught emotionally disturbed children for Milwaukee Public Schools.

By 1999, Yamahiro was appointed as a Milwaukee court commissioner and presided over a new domestic violence court that got judges more involved after sentencing and sped up the resolution of cases.

He also spent time in small claims court, performing marriages and hearing evictions.

"I feel like I've worked with most of the major populations who come through the court-

Re: Very Truly Yours

There are many of us who have followed the informative column, "Very Truly Yours," for several years. Some time ago there was an article on John Nason and his contributions to the cause of the salvaging of many college-aged students from the internment camps. This past month, I had spoken before the Crossland Forum at Kennet Square, Penn., where John Nason spent the last decade of his distinguished life of public service. He died in 2001 at age 93. I spoke in remembrance of and in honor of his work on the original Student Relocation Council as current president of the NSRC Fund.

I was also fascinated with the latest column on the archival records at Rutgers University and the early students from Japan, together with the advent of the Meiji era. My great-great-grand-uncle, Matsumoto Matataro, was one of those who came to study in the United States. While he had completed his college education in Japan at the Imperial University, he completed his undergraduate, master's level and his Ph.D. at Yale University, arriving in the early 1890s. He then went to the University of Heidelberg in Germany for his post-doctorate training before returning back to Japan where he became professor at Tokyo Imperial University. Interestingly, he kept a journal of his student days (Yugaku Koro on Ki: Tokyo, 1939) and because of his journal, James Thomas Conte, in his doctoral thesis at Princeton in 1977 titled "Overseas Study in the Meiji Period: Japanese Students in America, 1867-1902," quotes liberally from the Matsumoto journal. (A copy of the dissertation may be obtained from Princeton University.)

While I found the thesis fascinating and thorough — the account of the role of Rutgers even citing William E. Griffis' "The Rutgers Graduates in Japan" published in Albany in 1886 — it was my mother who, visiting my daughter as a freshman at Yale in the old Quadrangle, told us "to think of Uncle Mataro walking along these paths" that we first found out about him (my mother's grandfather's younger brother). Since my daughter was in the class of 1982 it is clear that Yale allows one of our family to enter every 100 years!

Equally interesting is that living here in Rhode Island, we are about 20 minutes away from where Commodore Matthew Perry is buried in Newport and about 1.5 hours away from Fairhaven in Massachusetts where "John" Manjiro lived and later translated for the Japanese government when Perry arrived there in 1853.

Stopping the Downturn in Membership

I was shocked to learn of the dramatic downturn in JACL membership. Here are some thoughts that may help arrest the downturn.

First, demographics show that Japanese Americans (regardless of how defined) are becoming more like the general population. JACL actions, words and attitudes seem oriented toward "victims," a position with which JAs no longer identify.

Second, the JACL seems to have become a wholly owned subsidiary of the Democratic Party.

The recent JACL fawning over a group of "honored" JA legislators, who were all Democrats, was an eye-opener to Republican JAs, especially when Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, the only JA outside of Hawaii to be elected senator, was not even mentioned.

In summary, the JACL seems not to represent JAs' interest anymore.

Also, the partisanship shown by JACL cuts out the views of a large percent of JAs who are Republicans. So, the narrowing of the JACL's actions, words and attitudes is making the JACL irrelevant. There are many JAs who have wealth and position who should be the ones being honored ... with consequent financial and other types of support becoming available to the JACL. Need I say more??

Re: Gail Tanaka's Holiday Issue Piece

In the 2003 Holiday Issue of the Pacific Citizen I noticed a mast-head disclaimer that stated, "... news and opinions by columnists other than the national JACL president or national director do not necessarily reflect JACL policy." In one case I wish they did. I am referring to Ms. Gail Tanaka's article, "A Vision for JACL in the 21st Century." Tanaka's article should be heard as a wake-up call. Point by point, these are all issues demanding attention and resolution.

I began to ask myself questions about the JACL: does the JACL reflect my views? Why is membership falling? With decreasing membership and consequently shrinking financial resources, how much political influence can the JACL wield? As selfish as it may sound, does the JACL make my life better?

I would like to pose a general question to JACL leadership. Why, as a Japanese American, should I be a member of the JACL? Possibly complicating the issue, I am a Yonsei who is not ethnically 100 percent Japanese. I am also the grandson of JACL founder Dr. Thomas T. Yatabe.

JACL Commends Igasaki for His Service at EEOC

At its most recent board meeting, the JACL unanimously passed a resolution commending Paul M. Igasaki for his years of dedicated service at the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) and extended their deepest gratitude to him for his work on behalf of all Americans to combat discrimination in the workplace. The JACL further expressed sincere appreciation to Igasaki for his considerable contributions as an advocate for civil rights and role model for the Asian Pacific American community.

"Throughout his career and especially during his tenure at the EEOC, Mr. Igasaki epitomized the committed, competent and concerned public servant who worked with and for the Asian Pacific American and the broader civil rights communities," said JACL National President Floyd Mori. "Mr. Igasaki has always been a staunch advocate for our community, and we are deeply appreciative of his tireless efforts to promote and defend civil rights, civil liberties and equality before the law."

"Mr. Igasaki's leadership, compassion and insight about the inherent harm of discrimination made him an invaluable resource at the EEOC," said JACL Vice President for Public Affairs Ken Inouye. "Especially in the aftermath of the horrors of 9/11, he was instrumental in promoting an environment which allowed those affected by employment discrimination to report their cases. We thank him for his work on behalf of and his contributions to the civil rights community."

Igasaki served on the EEOC eight years from 1994 to 2002. He was initially nominated by President Clinton and confirmed by the U.S. Senate in 1994; served as acting chairman from January to October 1998; was confirmed for a second term as vice chair on Oct. 21, 1998, and was the first APA to serve in these positions. Although Igasaki was recommended for another term at the EEOC by Senate Democratic Leader Tom Daschle in May 2002, the White House declined to renominate Igasaki, and he left the EEOC at the end of 2002.

Earlier this year, with the recommendation of Daschle, the White House nominated and the Senate confirmed Stuart J. Ishimaru for the seat vacated by Igasaki. Ishimaru was sworn in on Nov. 17, 2003.

A reception to celebrate Igasaki for his years of dedication and service at the EEOC will be held in Washington, D.C., Jan. 30 at 6-8 p.m. at the Capital Hilton, 16th and K Streets. For information, e-mail to: dc@jac1.org. There is no cost to attend. ■

JACL Responds to Revelation Patriot Act Author Now Has Concerns

By Pacific Citizen Staff

The JACL is responding to recent reports that the author of the infamous Patriot Act now has concerns about various aspects of the anti-terrorism policy enacted shortly after 9/11.

Viet Dinh, a chief architect of the Patriot Act and a former top aide to Attorney General John Ashcroft, was recently reported to have concerns about parts of the act, especially the government's power to detain U.S. citizens as "enemy combatants." One particular case is that of Jose Padilla, who has been detained by the FBI for almost two years without access to a lawyer. Padilla, an ex-gang leader, is a suspect in a "dirty bomb" plot.

Several civil liberties groups, including the JACL, believe Padilla — an American citizen — is being denied his rights under the U.S. Constitution.

Dinh, who formerly led the Justice Department's Office of Legal Policy, in several speeches and media interviews has said he believes the government's detention of Padilla is flawed and will likely not survive a court review.

But Dinh has consistently defended the Justice Department's anti-terrorism measures and does not believe they have led to civil rights abuses. The Patriot Act does not specifically address the issue of enemy combatants but Dinh, currently a professor at Georgetown University Law Center, nevertheless notes that he has now come to the conclusion that the case against Padilla is "unsustainable."

In letters to House of Representatives Speaker Dennis Hastert and Bill Frist, majority leader of the U.S. Senate, John Tateishi, JACL executive director, outlines the organization's concerns.

"We are at a major crossroads in which the traditions of our democratic system of governance are being challenged by the Patriot Act and by policies enacted in the name of the war on terror," writes Tateishi. "Do not allow the exigencies of the times continue to undermine the principles of democracy that have made this nation so great and a beacon of hope to the rest of the world."

"... I urge you to reexamine those provisions of the Patriot Act which have so offended both conservatives and liberals as a threat to the civil liberties of American citizens. We call on your strong leadership to ensure that the basic principles of democracy are protected for future generations."

"A report by a federal commission to the Congress in 1982 noted that the forced removal and internment of the entire Japanese American population during WWII was, in part, a result of a lack of political leadership," continues Tateishi. "Caught up in the fervor of the attack at Pearl Harbor, the Congress and the president allowed one of the worst constitutional violations in the history of this nation. Passage of the Patriot Act was a similar result of the fervor of the moment in what was one of the worst tragedies experienced on American soil. However, the Congress now has the opportunity to re-examine the Patriot Act and reconsider those provisions which threaten the civil liberties of American citizens and the very foundations of democracy." ■

top priorities of the organization as we wait for financial conditions to recover. While the focus may be different from "tradition," the objective remains as always — the betterment of our country.

The national JACL board has prioritized its programs in 2004 as: membership, education/advocacy, and fundraising (please note that the Pacific Citizen was viewed as a separate program from the prioritization process).

The membership program will continue with the plan developed and implemented this past fiscal year by Lucy Kishiue, membership director, and myself as national vice president of membership.

The following programs were identified for the education & advocacy area: Scholarships, D.C. Leadership Conference, Masaoka Fellowships, APA Curriculum Guide, Teacher Training Workshops, Website and Youth Conference activities, and the development and sustaining of programs focusing on diversity, acceptance/tolerance, hate crimes, and community outreach.

The following programs were identified for the fundraising area: Planned Giving, Annual Giving, 75th Anniversary Celebration - Commemorative Book and National Convention, Foundations, and President's Council.

There are two major sentiments driving this temporary program prioritization for the coming year. First, we value the monetary contributions of our membership and look to act fiscally responsible — we must not run a budget deficit. Second, some members of the board and staff believe that cutting additional staff positions would hinder the prospects for growth in the future.

The aforementioned programs are geared toward forwarding the mission of the JACL while doing a good job on programs that should lead to further external funding. It is our sincere appreciation of the donations from our perpetual supporters that motivates us to aggressively seek alternate methods to fund the organization.

What we have witnessed in previous years is that focusing on too many things overwhelms us, and then we are unable to do an "excellent" job with most of our programs. The end result is that far too often we hurt the membership in two ways: 1) We needed to ask the membership for more money because we were unable to really concentrate on externally funded programs. 2) We were unable to complete programs and activities to a degree where it was clear to the general members that a benefit worth the dues was received (many times because we did not have enough resources to properly publicize our accomplishments).

The national board believes this plan is a necessary step in proceeding into 2004 responsibly. This is not to be used as an indicator of how we will operate in the long-term — it may or may not be similar to how programming is thought out in the future.

While the vast majority of our members do not like to get involved deeply in all of the details of the budget, it is important that the membership knows one thing. The JACL does not make nearly enough money from membership dues and donations to support the expenses related to the current staff and operations — even with the current staff being approximately half the size of what it is suppose to be, per the organizational chart.

With a membership base that has shown a declining trend over the past 15 years, this becomes a fundamental principle for the membership to understand. Therefore, for future reference a balanced budget means: cut expenses further, add new members for more revenue, or focus more on external grants and foundations. ■

During the recent three and a half years of economic depression, the JACL, similar to every other entity in our country, has struggled with slumping revenues. Businesses have lost money, people have lost jobs, and the government has slashed services. Amidst perhaps the worst economic situation since the Great Depression, the organization has fought to try and maintain its operations in pursuit of equality and justice. Through the cutting and reprioritization of some programs, the organization has been able to endure.

In order to facilitate communication between national JACL and its membership, the national board has nominated me to outline the

AA Attorneys Honor Marutani

Family and friends attended the banquet in honor of Judge Marutani including (l-r, standing): Vicki Marutani, Olivia Sailus, Marcia Holdren, Felicia Turner and Roy Turner; (l-r, sitting): Catherine Sommi, John Sommi, Dr. Benjamin Paradee and Shirley Paradee.

PHILADELPHIA—At the recent annual banquet of the Asian American Bar Association of the Delaware Valley (AABADV), the William M. Marutani Fellowship was announced. Approximately 190 people attended the banquet, including lawyers, judges, law students, law professors, members of the Marutani family and members of the JACL Philadelphia chapter.

The William M. Marutani Fellowship was established by AABADV and the Philadelphia Bar Foundation to provide a stipend for an AA law student to enable the student to take a summer internship position at various government agencies or at a nonprofit/public interest organization in the Greater Philadelphia area in the hopes of giving AA law students an opportunity to gain full-time employment in areas of the law in which AA attorneys are currently under-represented.

The fellowship is a tribute to Marutani, the first AA judge in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. He served as a judge on the Pennsylvania Court of Common Pleas for Philadelphia County from 1975 through 1986. As an attorney, Marutani participated in the civil rights drives in the South and helped organize the 1963 March on Washington for the JACL. From 1960 to 1970, he served as JACL's national legal counsel. In 1967, Marutani appeared on behalf of the JACL as an amicus before the U.S. Supreme Court to present oral argument in Loving v. Virginia, a seminal case that struck down anti-miscegenation laws in 17 states.

In 1981 Marutani was appointed to the Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians by President Jimmy Carter. Marutani himself served six months in an American internment camp during WWII and later served in the U.S. Military Intelligence Service.

Marutani was unable to attend the banquet due to health issues, but members of his family, including wife Vicky and daughters Marsha, Felicia and Olivia were on hand. In Marutani's absence, Olivia read a prepared statement in which he expressed his gratitude to his wife and family for allowing him to follow his passions in the law and civil rights to serve the community at large. ■

'Celebrating the Generations': NCWNP District Gala Celebrates JACL's 75th Anniversary

Hundreds of JACL members and supporters will be celebrating JACL's 75th anniversary March 27 at the NCWNP district's gala dinner in Danville located in the San Francisco Bay Area.

They will be recognizing the many "unsung heroes" who serve as the backbone of each JACL chapter and "Celebrating the Generations." The dinner will serve as a fund-raiser that will shore up the district's programs and regional office vital to JACL's continued effectiveness.

"The importance of the event lies in the recognition of the 75-year longevity of the organization, the nation's oldest and largest Asian Pacific American civil rights organization," said Larry Oda, chair of the District Fundraising Committee. "It is an acknowledgement of the sacrifices of our elder members to keep the organization thriving and effective. This dinner is a demonstration of a commitment to nurture and develop new leaders for our future."

Celebrity George Takei of "Star Trek" fame is the dinner's keynote speaker, and journalist and former host of TV's innovative "Evening Magazine" Jan Yanehiro will be the mistress of ceremonies.

The gala dinner will take place March 27 at 6 p.m. at the renowned Blackhawk Museum, an associate of the Smithsonian, at 3700 Blackhawk Plaza Circle in Danville. The Blackhawk Museum's Automotive Galleries house over 100 famous vintage cars such as the first patented auto, an 1894 Duryea; Clark Gable's Duesenberg; and a wedge-shaped 1971 Maserati SS Spyder.

The cost is $100 per person with an "early bird" special of $90 by Feb. 13. Optional dress code is a "black and white" theme, but not necessarily tuxes and gowns. People may contact Patty Wada, NCWNP regional director, at 415/345-1075 or e-mail jaclncwnp@msn.com for reservations. Full information is also available on the district website: <http://jaclncwnp.org>.

In addition to purchasing tickets, chapters can also contribute silent auction items, line up potential sponsors, or place an ad in the program booklet. Chapters can also sell and buy raffle tickets at $1 each or 12 for $10. Prizes include the $1,000 grand prize and many others.

The NCWNP District Fundraising Committee includes: Chairman Larry Oda, District Governor Mark Kobayashi, Regional Director Patty Wada, Edwin Endow, April Goral, Jeri Handa, John Handa, Debbi Hatanaka, Keith Kamisugi, Andy Noguchi, Diana Okamoto, Jeff Okamoto, Steve Okamoto, Fred Okimoto, Alan Teruya, Robbie Teruya, and many others. ■

house," Yamahiro said. "It put me in a better position to assess who is a danger to the community and who is not."

He said he is not hesitant to incarcerate those he thinks are a danger to public safety, such as repeat drunken drivers. He thinks others — such as drug possession offenders — should be steered from re-offending with a more comprehensive approach.

"Often there are underlying problems, such as substance abuse or economics," he said.

Lo Neng Kiatoukaysy, executive director of the Hmong-American Friendship Association, met Yamahiro through a domestic violence program designed to give court officials a better understanding of the Hmong culture.

"It's a plus for Asian Americans and the community at large" to have Yamahiro on the bench, she said. "It opens doors for Asian Americans."

Currently hearing general misdemeanor cases, he would like to see a "true" drug treatment court developed in the county, in which judges would be more involved after sentencing — and he wants to increase the voice of victims in the system.

"Most people in the criminal justice system have no self-esteem," Yamahiro said. "One of the things I try to do as a judge is help them believe they can do it. It's mostly about spending time with people and connecting them with the right resources."

MORI MEMO

U.S. Army in Japan.

Marshall continues to fight for peace and to insure civil rights for all. He noted a meeting he recently attended where hatred toward Japanese was displayed. The war against hatred and discrimination goes on, and we must be diligent in continuing to fight for freedom and just causes. That is a big reason to have JACL, and JACL will always be essential in this area.

Many Nisei leaders of JACL such as Marshall have given so much to JACL and to Japanese American causes. We are sorry to see them aging and are sad when they leave us, but we continue to appreciate their efforts. We owe them a debt of gratitude.

During these past years of extreme economic stress, the staff of JACL has been asked to do more and more while fewer personnel and less resources were available. John Tateishi has served admirably as executive director during these hard times. Clyde Izumi, Lucy Kishiue and Tomiko Ismail have been able to fulfill the functions formerly performed by a much larger staff. Kristine Minami has been able to see to our needs as our Wash., D.C., rep. Caroline Aoyagi, executive editor of the Pacific Citizen newspaper, and her staff of Brian Tanaka, Margot Brunswick and Eva Lau-Ting have worked many excess hours to make sure the P.C. is published.

A shift of national projects to the regional district staff has developed a wider geographical distribution of duties, but this has resulted in a staff that has had to focus on national programs and issues. Much of the local work has shifted to the chapters and districts. This should strengthen our network of local chapters by requiring volunteers to step up and to become more involved in leading and participating in the advocacy process. Bill Yoshino, Patty Wada and Karen Yoshitomi along with Carol Saito and Gerald Kato have had to broaden their abilities and talents in order to address membership and funding issues.

We are grateful for the work being done by the staff and for the sacrifices made by them and the districts to help JACL continue to function effectively. Hopefully, an economic recovery will be experienced soon which will allow us to reward these people who have given much to JACL.

I want to also say thank you to the national board members who serve JACL without financial remuneration and often donate their expenses along with their time to JACL. Thank you for your dedication to JACL and for all your effort in making JACL a viable organization into the future. National JACL officers, district governors, national committee members, district officers and chapter leaders and all other volunteers deserve our thanks. It has been a privilege for me to serve with these people.

Although our financial situation has improved somewhat due to successful efforts to increase membership and the successful Gala Dinner put on by the Pacific Southwest District in Los Angeles in September, the financial picture remains uncertain.

Your support of the Annual Giving Campaign for JACL has been greatly appreciated. Thanks to all those who have already donated and thanks to all those who continue to contribute. Don't feel that you can't give if you can't afford a big donation. If half our members donated just $5 or $10, the amounts would be hugely beneficial to JACL in helping to fund the organization and programs of JACL.

Please consider giving gift memberships to JACL. A JACL membership may help a family member or friend become involved in a great organization and provide an opportunity to make new friends. Every member is vital to JACL, and numbers are important in an organization such as JACL. Corporate memberships are also very helpful. If we can maintain and increase our membership it not only helps those who are members but may help JACL to have more influence in soliciting funds and moving the work forward.

Thank you for your support of JACL. Thank you to all those who faithfully renew each year, for the life members, and for new members who have recently joined. Thanks to our Thousand Club members who offer additional financial support to the organization, and to the student members who will become our leaders in the future. JACL is an important organization for all JAs, our posterity, and other interested persons. ■

JACL Nat'l Youth/Student Council Announces Min Yasui Oratorical Contest

The national JACL youth/student council is looking for youth speakers interested in competing in the Min Yasui Oratorical Contest to be held in conjunction with the 38th JACL national convention Aug. 10-14 in Honolulu.

The competition is conducted in two stages: first, students must compete in a district competition to qualify for the national competition. There will be seven district competitions throughout the United States. Winners of the district competitions will receive a travel stipend and two nights hotel accommodation in order to represent their district at the national competition in Honolulu.

High school members of the JACL age 16 or older, and undergraduate members are eligible to participate. In the past, winners at the national level have won laptop computers or a PDA.

All speeches must address the question: With the increasing number of reported hate crimes in the Asian Pacific American community, what is the challenge facing JACL youth in dealing with these kinds of vicious crimes?

The speeches must be restricted to 3 to 5 minutes in length. Competitors will be judged on: delivery and presentation; completeness and relevance to the topic; and analysis and logic.

For more information contact Maya Yamazaki (youthchair@jacl.org) or Joshua Mizutani Spry (youthrep@jacl.org). ■

Parade of Books About Nikkei: 1892-2003, With More Coming

THERE'S NO TELLING when the pace of new books about, for and by Japanese Americans will slow down. Looking at my books at home, the first scholarly classic is Yamato Ichihashi's "Japanese in the United States: a Critical Study of the Problems of the Japanese Immigrants and Their Children" (1932). My copy is a New York Times-Arno Press (1969) reprint.

There are earlier publications by and about JAs listed in Ichihashi's bibliography that predate his book. You'll find Joseph Heco and "The Narrative of a Japanese: What He Has Seen and the People He Has Met in the Course of the Last Forty Years" (1892), a two-volume set edited by James Murdock and published in Yokohama. Heco, of course, is Hikoza Hamada, the castaway who was brought to San Francisco in 1850 and the first Japanese Catholic in America, baptized Joseph in 1854. He was also the first naturalized American of Japanese ancestry, in 1858, and he served as a translator during the Civil War in 1863 aboard the USS Wyoming at the Straits of Shimonoseki viewing the Japanese civil war.

Heco's "Narrative" is missing from many selected bibliographies. Perhaps diaries don't count, as he began to write his memoirs and daily activities after learning English.

A recent reprint happens to be "Charlie Battery: 522 FABN 1943-45" (1991) when George Oiye of Los Altos, Calif., a 522nd Field Artillery veteran, was called to autograph the over-a-half-inch-thick book at the Japanese American National Museum in Los Angeles — a popular venue for book sales and readings today.

Oiye returned to Los Angeles to hear his wartime buddy Manabi Hirasaki chat about his book, "A Taste of Strawberry" (2003), ($16.95, JANM, 369 E. 1st St., Los Angeles, CA 90012), with biographer-author Naomi Hirahara at the museum. His father, Kiyoshi, in the 1930s was hailed in the Issei community as the "garlic king" in Gilroy. (We also recalled George Shima of Stockton, "the potato king"; Baron Kanaye Nagasawa of Fountain Grove, the "grape king"; and Yaemon Minami at Guadalupe, the "lettuce king" — to name a few.)

Through brief and easy-to-absorb chapters, Manabi relates his early life on the farm, going to war, then returning to be dubbed a "windshield" farmer and experimenting for years to grow long-stemmed, succulent strawberries harvested in November. Manabi faced an SRO crowd, who sampled his Driscoll strawberries and fresh raspberries Dec. 13.

Several weeks earlier at JANM, Daisy Uyeda Satoda from San Francisco (well-known to JACLers as Mas Satow's longtime administrative assistant) joined other ex-Topaz internees and chaired an afternoon with writers in "Blossoms in the Desert: Topaz High School Class of 1945" (2003) ($15, P.O. Box 31397, San Francisco, CA 94131), recounting what it was like being a high-schooler at Topaz. Of the 254 graduates in the class, 58 responded with oral histories. The yearbook portraits and lines showing their prewar and current residences are pluses. What has been remembered is precious.

The seed for "Blossoms in the Desert" was planted in 1970 when Glenn "Rosie" (Ryuzo, Americanized) Kumekawa of Rhode Island and Paul Bell of Pennsylvania (the Caucasian kid whose father was deputy director at Topaz) met at their first class reunion after 25 years. But some didn't want to remember for whatever reason, notes

UC Davis professor Darrell Hamamoto in his afterword.

Jeanne Wakatsuki Houston has published her first novel, "The Legend of Fire Horse Woman" (2003), (New York: Kensington Books, $23), which traces from the turn of the century to the end of World War II the world of Sayo, of Hana and Terri, in the similar surroundings of her first book, "Farewell to Manzanar" (1973), now in its 63rd printing by Bantam Books. She acknowledges the presence of Paiute Indians in Owens Valley, original inhabitants of eastern California. (Even Little Tokyo has noted the Gabrieleno Indians, who are related to the Paiutes.)

Grandmother Sayo is the hanayome from Hiroshima. Her daughter Hana, mother of three children, celebrates her 36th birthday in the summer of 1942 at Manzanar. Teruko, or Terri, 13, is the youngest, who stays with obaachan in the next apartment.

The chapters set in italics are critical backdrops to what makes the "Legend of the Fire Horse Woman" — an unusual vehicle in telling the story, I thought.

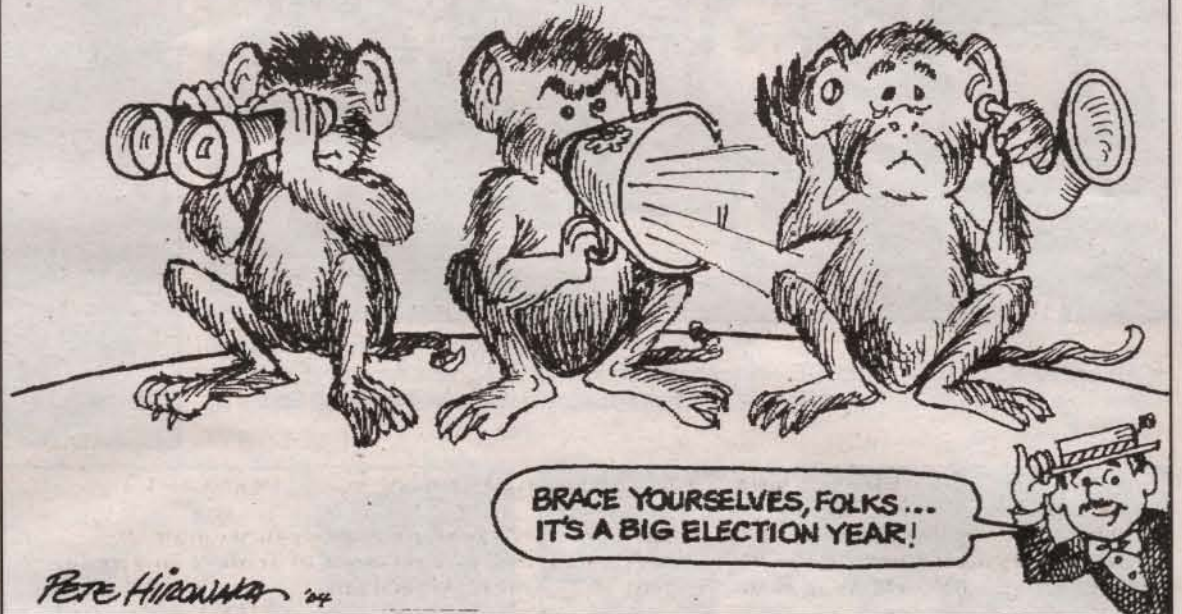

And next month, Joyce Hirohata, who found her grandfather Paul's collection of valedictory speeches providing a rare glimpse of Nisei hopes between the two wars, a little book, "Orations and Essays by Japanese Second Generation of America" (1932, 1935). It has been updated and expanded with a new title: "Nisei Voices: Japanese American Students of the 1930s — Then and Now" (2003). It's an elegant masterpiece. She tracked down 22 of the 49 valedictorians, interviewed them, and secured their pictures of then and now.

Many remember the late George Inagaki of JACL. His valedictory, "The Future of California," was delivered at Sacramento High in 1932. His son Chris in San Diego supplied many snapshots that I'm seeing for the first time. Other well-remembered JACLers and titles of their speeches include: Frank Chuman, "Persistent Idealism"; Kiyoshi Nobusada, "Education Ensures Peace" (1934); John Aiso, "Lincoln's Devotion to the Constitution" (1923); and Doris Fujisawa-Fujioka, "Influence of the Olympic Games on Greek Art" (1932). Forewords from Bill Hosokawa and David K. Yoo, Joyce's preface, and her grasp of the JA experience are refreshing. Let me add, Joyce is having a reading and book signing at JANM Feb. 1 at 1:30 p.m.

Expected soon will be the Japanese American Historical Society of Southern California's third annual publication, "Nanka Nikkei Voices," edited by Iku Kiriyaama of Gardena, featuring recollections, vignettes and scenes of Little Tokyo, past, present and future. The galaxy of writers includes people who've written in the Pacific Citizen. ■

Throughout her life, Mary was a devoted member of the Free Methodist Church in McAllen and was always a friend of the church and its parishioners. As Mary leaves us, she should be remembered as a thoughtful, optimistic person. She spent the last decade working as a volunteer teacher's aide in the Mission and La Joya schools. Her enthusiasm for teaching helped bring interest and happiness to the education of many children. Mary Narahara was always kind and compassionate. She was our friend and will be missed.
