Vigna marina (Burm.) Merr. Interpr. Herb. Amboin. 285. 1917; Phaseolus marinus Burm., Ind. Alt. Herb. Amboin. 18. 1768.

Vigna retusa (E. Mey.) Walp., Linnaea 13: 534. 1839

Distribution: Native to Cuba, Puerto Rico, Panama, Brazil, Africa, Asia, Malesia, Australia, and Pacific Region.

References: 3, 32, 72, 158, 417.

Note: Phaseolus marinus was originally published by Burman and typified by an illustration in one of Rumphius's works (Index Alt. Herb. Amboin. 5: 391, tab. 141 fig. 2, 1750). However, this illustration represents the species that today bears the name Vigna luteola. Because the name V. marina has priority over V. luteola, V. marina should replace it. Nevertheless, the name V. luteola could be maintained if the name V. marina was conserved with a different type, so as to preserve the traditional use of both names. In this treatment we use the traditional nomenclature in anticipation of a proposal to conserve the name V. marina with a different type; considered exotic and invasive in Cuba by CeNBIO.

DOUBTFUL NAMES

Bunchosia glandulosa (Cav.) DC. f. obovata Nied., Ark. Bot. 22A(17): 21. 1929.

Distribution: Described from Hispaniola.

References: 149, 308

Note: Unknown application.

Stigmaphyllon palmatum (Cav.) A. Juss. Ann. Sci. Nat. Bot., sér. 2, 13: 288. 1840.

Stigmaphyllon sagittata Cav., Diss. 9: 430. t. 257. 1790.

Note: The type of these two names are supposedly from Hispaniola, but according to Anderson (90) S. palmatum occurs only in French Guiana and Pará, Brazil.

Note: In treating Malpighia we take a cautiously conservative approach by following Vivaldi's (511) instead of Meyer's (78) treatment. It seems odd that while they both examined in great part the same collections, Meyer ended up recognizing many new additional taxa. Since Meyer's concepts are too contrasting from the traditional taxonomy of Malpighia, we feel that his system needs further testing before it can be accepted.

Note: The taxonomy of Hibiscus tiliaceus sensu lato is unsatisfactory as it appears to be a highly variable taxon. The Neotropical material of this complex is recognized here as H. tiliaceus var. pernambucensis and the Paleotropical material as H. tiliaceus var. tiliaceus. The latter also includes introductions into the New World in cultivation especially as street trees.

Note: Kosteletzkyia is perhaps better included in a broadly circumscribed Hibiscus (603). Linnaeus capitalized the epithet "pentacarpos," thereby indicating that it is to be treated as a generic noun in apposition. It is thus correct to retain the original Greek masculine ending (Blanchard, Novon 18: 7. 2008).

DOUBTFUL NAMES &amp; EXCLUDED SPECIES

Corchorus bifurcatus Mill., Gard. Dict., ed. 8. 1768 [as bifurcatis].
Note: The identity of this name has not been resolved and awaits examination of type material [Jamaica, Dr. Wm. Houstoun].

Grewia cubensis Turcz., Bull. Soc. Imp. Naturalistes Moscou 31(1): 232. 1858.

Note: According to Liogier (613), this name is a synonym of the African Grewia bicolor Juss. and the type locality was mistakenly thought to be Cuba.

Hibiscus bahamensis Mill., Gard. Dict., ed. 8. 1768, non Britton, 1906.

Distribution: Bahamas, but type locality not explicitly stated in the protologue.

References: 152, 449.

Note: The application of this name is unresolved; see T.H. Kearney, Leaflet. W. Bot. 7(5): 121. 1954, Ibid., 7(11): 281. 1955.

Hibiscus physaloides Guill. & Perr. var. genuinus Hochr., Annuaire Conserv. Jard. Bot. Genève 4: 162. 1900.

Note: Nomenclaturally this name is synonymous with Hibiscus physaloides Guill. & Perr., which is known from Africa and Madagascar. Hochreutiner, however, cited a Poiteau specimen from St. Domingue (i.e. Dominican Republic) and without reexamining this specimen its identity cannot be determined.

Malvella leprosa (Ortega) Krapov., Bonplandia (Corrientes) 3: 59. 1970; Malva leprosa Ortega, Nov. Rar. Pl. Descr. Dec. 95. 1798; Sida leprosa (Ortega) K. Schum. in Engler & Prantl, Nat. Pflanzenfam. 3(6): 43. 1890.

References: 350, 601.

Note: Although the protologue states “habitat in Insula Cuba,” this species does not occur in the Caribbean. The type was grown in Madrid from seed, the provenance of which evidently was confused.

Pavonia pseudotyphalaea Planch. & Linden ex Triana & Planch., Ann. Sci. Nat., Bot., sér. 4, 17: 160. 1862.

Note: Reported from Jamaica by Adams (2), but restricted to South America by Fryxell (93).

Sida purpurea Bello, Anales Soc. Esp. Hist. Nat. 10: 239. 1881=
Kosteletzkyia sp.?

References: 61, 606.

Note: Known only from the type description from Puerto Rico. Baker f. (J. Bot. 30: 330. 1892) speculated that the name applies to a species of Kosteletzkyia.

Triumfetta x brachypetala Urb. & Ekman, Ark. Bot. 23A(5): 80. 1930, nom. illeg., non Turcz., 1858.

Distribution: Endemic to Hispaniola (Haiti).

References: 7, 149, 445, 448

Note: This taxon is stated to be a hybrid between T. lappula L. and T. semitriloba Jacq. If recognized, it requires a new name as the nothospecies name is a latter homonym. Liogier (445) miscited the nothospecies epithet as “brachysepala.”

Urena inominata M. Gómez, Anales Soc. Esp. Hist. Nat. 19: 220. 1890, nom. nud. = Malachra sp.?

Note: The identity of this nomen nudem is uncertain. M. Gómez (1890) cited species number 197 in Sauvalle’s Flora Cubana (350), which is an unidentified species of Malachra.

Urena texana M. Gómez, Anales Soc. Esp. Hist. Nat. 19: 220. 1890, nom. nud. = Malachra sp.?

Distribution: Hispaniola.

Note: The identity of this name is uncertain. M. Gómez (1890) cited Malachra texana A. Gray, nom. nud., which has not been traced (but see Howard, R.A. 1961. J. Arnold Arbor. 52: 115-143).

- EXCLUDED SPECIES
- Miconia lanata* (DC.) Triana, Trans. Linn. Soc. London 28: 113. 1871; Clidemia lanata DC., Prodr. 3: 162. 1828.
Distribution: Doubtful in Cuba, Puerto Rico, Lesser Antilles, and South America.

Common Names: Cordobán, Cordobán peludo (Cuba).

Reference: 151.

Note: Cogniaux reported this species for the Antilles based on a Bertero specimen from Puerto Rico and de la Ossa from Cuba, both of which have not been located. Furthermore, this species has not been treated for the region by modern botanists. The species is otherwise known only from Brazil.

NOTES

Leandra has been shown to be polyphyletic (Martin et al., 2008: 626), and none of the Antillean taxa belong in Leandra sensu stricto, a group restricted to eastern Brazil. Even though the generic limits within tribe Miconieae have not been worked out, it is clear that none of the West Indian taxa will remain in Leandra. Therefore, we are treating them within the genus Ossaea.

NOTE

The use of binomials has been applied to Musa cultivars, giving the wrong impression for them to be real species. In this treatment, we follow Simmonds (571) by using a system that employs groups of letters to describe the genome of these sterile diploid or triploid cultivars. The name Musa acuminata Colla applies to both sterile diploid and triploid groups.
