Egypt Comes To Israel For Medical Attention

JERUSALEM: A 55-year-old Egyptian woman is recuperating in Hadassah Hospital after undergoing open heart surgery there.

Mrs. Padwa Kordiyeh came to Hadassah, accompanied by her son, a Cairo doctor, after hearing about the hospital over Israel Radio's Arabic program, "A Doctor Behind the Microphone." Her son apparently was one of the people that convinced her to make the journey to Jerusalem. She made contact with Hadassah Hospital through a married daughter who lives in the Gaza Strip and entered Israel via the Allenby Bridge from Jordan.

Mrs. Ilana Baizri, who runs the radio program, visited the Egyptian woman in the hospital and was told that the program was very popular in Egypt. Mrs. Baizri said she frequently receives letters from Arab countries asking specific medical questions to be answered

Two Killed In Bombing At Ben-Gurion Airport

JERUSALEM: Ben-Gurion International Airport was the scene of an explosion in a booby-trapped suitcase which killed two persons and wounded seven others recently. The terminal was showered with broken glass.

A few minutes later, as a soldier dragged another suspect suitcase to a security pit near the runway, it likewise exploded, but caused no injuries.

The explosion ripped through the high-ceilinged customs hall where incoming passengers pick up their luggage. The floor of the hall was covered with broken glass and blood. One witness described the scene as "a very big noise and great fire."

The incident was the worst at the airport since 1972, when a Japanese suicide squad opened fire in the customs hall with machine guns and hand grenades. That attack left 26 people dead and 72 wounded, most of them Roman Catholic pilgrims from Puerto Rico.

TIGHT SECURITY

The airport, which is normally under tight security, is a prime target for Palestinian terrorists since it serves as Israel's principle link with the outside world. Last July, the Palestinian movement in Beirut warned that it would attempt to attack the airport until it succeeded.

A few seconds after the first blast, a young woman rushed out of the front of the terminal with her hair ablaze, shrieking, "What's happening? What are you doing to me?" A police officer threw her to the ground and rolled on top of her to smother the flames.

A man, his head charred, stumbled out of the hall and was rushed to a hospital in a helicopter.

The booby-trapped luggage was apparently brought to Israel by a man flying aboard an Austrian Airlines flight from Vienna. The man was traveling with a passport that identified him as Hugo Miller, a Dutch tourist.

SPOTTED BY GUARD

According to airport officials, a security guard noted something suspicious about the man as he left the plane and directed him to security booth outside the customs hall. As he opened the small red suitcase he was carrying, the bomb exploded, killing both the guard and the passenger.

Several minutes later, officials spotted the second suitcase on the conveyor belt and rushed it to the security pit as it exploded. A third bag was examined but no further explosives were found.

The police stopped all outgoing flights to prevent accomplices any means of escaping. Three additional flights arrived while the wounded and debris were being removed. The incoming passengers were processed in a separate hall.

The airport was cordoned off by security forces and traffic jams developed around its perimeter. Army helicopters circled overhead looking for suspicious persons.

One witness, Ricky Rothberg, an employe of the Wourism Ministry who normally staffs a hotel information desk in the arrival hall, described the explosion later.

"I was on the phone when I heard a very big noise and then saw a great fire," she said. "I thought: What is this? Then I realized it could only be a bomb. Then, my instinct took over and I dived for cover behind the counter."

National Bible Contest Is Won By Joseph Davis

Joseph Davis, 15, son of Professor and Mrs. Philip Davis, was the first place winner in the intermediate division of the National Bible Contest conducted in New York City last Sunday. In addition to his prize of a $500 Israel Bond, Mr. Davis will receive an invitation to compete in the World Bible Contest which will be held in Jerusalem in 1977.

These contests are conducted under the auspices of the Department of Education and Culture of the World Zionist Organization and the World Jewish Bible Society.

On the local level, the project is promoted by the Bureau of Jewish Education of Rhode Island which sponsors school clubs for coaching in Bible study and conducts state-wide Bible contests which send their finalists to the national contest.

At the Bureau's annual meeting on Wednesday, June 2, at the Providence Jewish Community Center, recognition will be made of this year's team of finalists.

Mr. Davis, a graduate of the Providence Hebrew Day School, is now a sophomore at Classical High School where he has gained recognition for his excellence in mathematics. He is also a student in the advanced department of the Bureau High School and the Midrasha (Hebrew High School) of Temple Emanu-El.

Rabbi Saul Leeman serves as the instructor of the Bible classes and Mr. Elliot Schwartz, Bureau director, serves as regional chairman.

Decisive Confrontation Seen By Premier Rabin

BY DAVID LANDAU

JERUSALEM (JTA): Premier Yitzhak Rabin warned the Labor Party Knesset faction recently that Israel faces a decisive confrontation with the United States at the end of this election year no matter who the next American President is. The gloomy prognostication was made in the course of the Premier's explanation to the Labor MKs of the Cabinet's decision regarding the Gush Emunim squatters in Samaria and West Bank settlement policy. The warning of a serious divergence between Jerusalem and Washington was the second made publicly by Rabin in less than a week. In an Independence Day eve television interview the Premier predicted a clash of views with the U.S. soon over recognition of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Rabin told his party colleagues that history has shown that Israel and the U.S. are generally in agreement over interim settlement proposals but in disagreement on the nature of an overall Middle East peace settlement. He cited the 1970 cease-fire which ended the war of attrition with Egypt as an example of an interim step on which Israel and the U.S. were in concert. The "Rogers Plan," enunciated in 1969 by then U.S. Secretary of State William P. Rogers, was an example of American-Israeli disagreement over long-term measures, Rabin said. He indicated that the U.S. itself believes that step-by-step diplomacy has run its course and intends to move vigorously toward an overall peace settlement after the Presidential elections are held, one based on the Rogers formula calling for Israel's retreat to its pre-June 1967 borders with only minor boundary modifications. Knowledgeable Israeli observers appear to agree with the Premier's assessment. They believe that if the next "crisis" date is passed—renewal by Syria of the mandate of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force (UNDOF) which expires May 30—the U.S. will, in effect, allow the Middle East situation to lie fallow for the duration of the Presidential campaign. Afterwards, however the Rogers Plan could reappear in one guise or another as the driving force of U.S. diplomacy in the region. This view has been given credence by press reports attributed to State Department sources that middle-echelon American officials have been instructed to draw up position papers on all aspects of the Middle East conflict.

Although such scenarios have been anticipated here for some time, no great concern was expressed as long as it appeared that Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, of Minnesota, or Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington stood a fair chance of gaining the Democratic Presidential nomination. Many Israelis felt that if either of these two long-time friends of Israel reached the White House they could be relied upon not to push Israel too hard, although even with them there would be some tough bargaining and tough decisions for Israel. But Jackson's Presidential primary campaign collapsed after his defeat by Jimmy Carter in Pennsylvania and Humphrey has announced that he would not actively seek the nomination. Carter the current Democratic front-runner, is an unknown quantity of Israelis with respect to his possible Middle East policies if elected in November. The feeling now is that whether a Democrat or a Republican occupies the White House next year, Israeli policy-makers are likely to face a renewal of diplomatic activism by the U.S. within the next 8-9 months. They are convinced that the Rogers Plan, presumably shelved for seven years, has never been discarded. During his television interview early this month, Rabin offered a three-point program to gird Israel for an imminent confrontation with the U.S.: Israel should reduce its dependence on America by producing more and consuming less; public order must be maintained on the West Bank in the face of pro-Palestinian and terrorist activities; and Israel must fight to win world opinion to its cause, first and foremost in the U.S., and to make clear why terrorist organizations cannot be negotiating partners.

a daughter of the late Hyman and Fannie (Saliternik) Weintraub, she came to this country as a young girl and settled in Providence. Prior to moving to Florida several years ago, she had lived for two years in East Providence and 20 years in Cranston.

Mrs. Shatkin was noted for her volunteer work at the Jewish Home for the Aged in Providence, where she was a long-term member of the board of trustees, and currently an honorary board member.

She was a past president of both the Ladies' Association of the home and the Ladies' Hebrew Union Aid, and was one of the organizers of the former Ladies' Hebrew Free Loan Association. She was an active volunteer for the American Red Cross and was a Gray Lady during World War II. Her memberships included the Ladies' Association of The Miriam Hospital, the Pioneer Women and ORT.

Surviving are two sons, Perry Shatkin of Cranston, an attorney and counsel to the tax administrator of Rhode Island, and Albert B. Shatkin of Fort Lauderdale, Florida; one sister, Anna Prager of North Providence; one brother, Joseph Weintraub of Waterford, Connecticut; and four grandchildren.

FRESH APPROACHES TO THE STUDY OF ANCIENT JUDAISM

By JACOB NEUSNER

(In this series, in five parts, Professor Jacob Neusner describes some of the new approaches developed at Brown University in the study of ancient Judaism, particularly that form of Judaism represented by the Talmud and related compilations.)

PART III

I wish now to propose solutions to the five problems I have outlined. They begin in the decision radically to revise the agenda for inquiry into the history of earlier Rabbinic Judaism, including the history of its salient religious and legal conceptions which stand at the center of the system.

The first, and most important step is to select for close analysis only one major document, the one which comes first in time and generates much that followed, Mishnah-Tosefta, along with traditions cognate to Mishnah-Tosefta and contained in documents compiled only after the redaction of the fundamental corpus.

Now it may be self-evident that the work must start with Mishnah-Tosefta, for the reason just noted: it comes first in time and stands behind much else. Yet what is not so obvious is that, when we select that document, we come to the center of Rabbinic Judaism in its earliest phase. It is Mishnah that the earliest Amoraim deemed "Oral Torah." It is Mishnah that occupied their attention. It is, moreover, Mishnah that stands closest, in point of presumed redaction, to the earliest named authorities, from Yohanan ben Zakkai, Eliezer and Joshua, down to Rabbi himself. Mishnah stands within fifty years of the time of its predominant authorities, Yosef, Meir, Simeon, Judah and the other Ushans cited most often therein.

When, moreover, we compare stories and sayings first found in Mishnah-Tosefta with their parallels first found in later compilations, we find that those found in Mishnah-Tosefta exhibit traits generally associated with the primary and original version of a story or saying, while those found in Yerushalmi, Bavli, and the Amoraic Midrashic compilations, including Sifra, Sifre, and the Mekhiltas, generally exhibit those literary traits which indicate development of, and dependence upon, their parallels in Mishnah-Tosefta. Conclusions reached upon the basis of analysis of pericopae of Mishnah-Tosefta serve as a control and criterion for the use of evidence in later documents.

There are two approaches to Mishnah-Tosefta. From the first, we begin and work forward from the sayings attributed to the Tannaic masters reviewed in historical sequence, beginning to end.

From the second, we start with the end product and work backward, including unnamed traditions in Mishnah itself, with cognate sayings in Tosefta, the Tannaic Midrashim, and the Palestinian and Babylonian Talmuds.

The former approach is undertaken in my Rabbinic Traditions about the Pharisees before 70, in Development of a Legend: Studies on the Traditions Concerning Yohanan ben Zakkai, and in Eliezer ben Hyrcanus: The Tradition and the Man. It goes forward in dissertations on the masters of Yavneh. The latter approach begins in my History of the Mishnaic Law of Purities.

Each approach has its advantages and limitations. Starting with the sayings attributed to the earliest generations of Tannaic authorities, we are able progressively to describe the whole of a tradition attributed to a single man and to trace the outlines and growth of materials alleged by the sources to be very early. But we rely far too heavily upon the accuracy of dubious, or at least undemonstrated and undemonstrable, attributions to an early authority. And we are unable to raise larger questions of redaction of completed units of tradition.

Still more seriously, analysis of individual units of tradition inevitably tends toward a certain superficiality in the treatment of larger legal issues. Since we cover a wide range of legal topics, but consider, within that range, only the few points to which the master under study contributes, we are unable to locate the underlying legal con-

I am not an economist and not an economist's son. Whatever ails the economy of Israel is as foreign to me as the economy of the United States. But I read everything I can about the economic situation in Israel, the bad as well as the encouraging signs. It is about these encouraging signs I wish to write today. In the United Nations debates about Israel the African as well as the satellite countries always vote with the Arabs against Israel. Even the European nations, who are not enemies of Israel, abstain from voting so as not to anger the Arabs. They have the oil, and as long as the world industry moves on oil nobody dares to bring down on his nation the wrath of the oil countries.

It is my perfect belief that the time is not far off when the world will free itself from the tyranny of the oil powers. But until that time comes, Arabs will have their way in the United Nations. Nevertheless the newspapers of Israel tell a different story. 1. The African nations about 20 of them, trade with Israel in spite of the Arab boycott. They give their vote to the Arabs against Israel, but they invite Israel advisers, engineers and specialists to help them develop their own industries. Hundreds of Israeli specialists are now in African countries and they bring their wives and children to live there. They even organize schools for the children to teach them Hebrew.

They know it is a lie, we know it for what it is, but they had to vote for the resolution to show their "friendship" for the Arabs.

The Africans have little enthusiasm for Hebrew culture and Jewish aspirations, but business is business. The United Nations resolutions are one thing and Jewish expertise is another thing altogether.

Mordecai Shtrigler in the Forwards quotes Israeli sources that Czechoslovakia's imports from Israel amounted to three million and 653 thousand dollars in 1974. This past year, in 1975, the trade was five million and 300 thousand dollars.

what it would have cost to have a repair garage put together a totally demolished 1976 Chevrolet Impala using new parts with a factory price of $4,438.20. The put-together cost: $20,778!

Nobody would pay more than $20,000 to rebuild a total wreck — and the same principle applies to less severe crashes.

If, for instance, the car were damaged 10 percent in a crash, the repair bill would not be $443 (10 percent of the retail price of $4,438) but more like $2,000 (10 percent of $20,000). The result, says AMIA, is that crash damage to parts representing less than one-fourth of the car's value comes out to a "total loss." Repairs would cost more than the crash value of the car.

Marshall Tito is openly opposed to Israel and is with the Arabs in all United Nations resolutions, has bought goods in the amount of twenty-seven million dollars.

Rumania, which often parted with Moscow, has done business with Israel in many millions of dollars. In fact, it deals very briskly with Israel.

What does all this show? It shows that although these countries have severed all diplomatic relations with Israel, they do not see any reason to sever business relations with Israel.

It doesn't make sense? It surely does not, but such is the world we live in, and such the realities of that world.

Recently a report of the citrus fruit market was made public. It seems that the export of oranges and lemons from Israel to other countries broke all records. As measured by numbers of citrus fruits and millions of dollars in income, this year exceeded the 1974-1975 season in both numbers of boxes and millions of dollars.

This in a year when in the United Nations Zionism was pronounced synonymous with Racism and when the Arab boycott was intensified. That apparently does not apply to oranges and lemons.

Another piece of news from the Forwards correspondent Moshe Ron was very interesting.

A lady from Egypt came to Israel with her son who is a physician to the Hadassah Hospital for heart surgery. The operation was successful and the son expressed his gratitude for saving his mother's life. The Israeli government gave the two Egyptians visas to enter the land and treated her the same as any other sick person would be treated in the hospital. They assigned her to a bed with an Arab speaking nurse so that she could converse with the doctors and they with her in Arabic.

He says that patients come constantly from Egypt, Jordan and Syria, and some come from as far away as Iraq, Iran and Saudi Arabia. The Jewish hospitals and doctors are famous for their efficiency and medical knowledge all over the Middle East.

Israel has to possess endurance, power and patience during these days of pressure from her neighbors. The time will come when hatreds will be forgotten and peace will come to the area. It looks dark now, but rays of sunlight break through the darkness.

Dr. Henry Kissinger said: In the Middle East passions run to extremes. Periods of extreme tensions interchange with periods of extreme reconciliations.

Let us hope that the Arabs have had enough of extreme hatreds and that they will enter into the other extreme, reconciliations. Israel is always ready.

Name Shagril Photo Judge

JERUSALEM: Yitzhak Shagril, senior night editor of "Yediot Achronot" and long-time Tel Aviv correspondent for the Jewish Telegraphic Agency, has been named a judge in a nationwide photographic competition. The competition is organized jointly by the government press office and the National Journalists' Association in memory of Jonathan Adam Kaminer, infant son of press photographer Eliahu Kaminer. The child was killed in an air crash in the U. S. in 1972. His father has established a memorial fund in the U. S. which is sponsoring the competition. First prize is IL 2500.

South African Board Protests Religious Program

JOHANNESBURG: The South African Board of Deputies has protested to the South African Broadcasting Corporation about the "careless, ill-informed, offensive and intolerable" action of the commentator on a Christian religious television program who recommended a book based on "The Protocols of the Elders of Zion."

The program, which followed an interview with Dr. Immanuel Jakobovits, Chief Rabbi of Great Britain and the Commonwealth on the purpose of his visit to So Africa, has evoked angry Jewish reaction and sharp critical comment in the Afrikaans press.

"The Protocols of the Elders of Zion" is banned in South Africa. The book which the commentator, Bill Chalmers, recommended and which contains quotations from the banned publication, was "Pawns in the Game."

In recommending it, Chalmers said that the quotations it contained had been included "in good faith by the author."

an enormous contribution to America's emergence as the greatest, freest nation on earth.

"America is grateful for your spiritual heritage and for those priceless contributions which you have made through two centuries of American nationhood. What those who worshipped here in Touro Synagogue heard in 1776, what all Americans heard in that fateful year, still rings with relevance today."

With the exception of the synagogue ceremony, the day's events were held at Rosecliff, the magnificent Newport estate designed by Stanford White. The program included "The American Jewish Experience: Personal Perspectives," moderated by Israel Shenker of The New York Times, with the participation of Dr. Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve System; Dr. Louis Finkelstein, chancellor emeritus of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America; Dr. Martin Meyerson, president of the University of Pennsylvania; the Honorable Bess Myerson, syndicated columnist and consumer affairs advisor; and Elie Wiesel,

When he was chairman of the committee to celebrate the 50th anniversary of Temple Emanu-El, the temple received the Solomon Schechter Award for the year-round congregational programs.

Dr. Fishbein is also on the board of trustees of the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island, the Bureau of Jewish Education, the Home for the Aged and the Hebrew Day School. He is a 32nd degree Mason, a member of the Palestine Temple of the Shrine and a past patron of Hope Link, Order of the Golden Chain.

Dr. Fishbein is a graduate of the University of Rhode Island, Temple University School of Dentistry and Northwestern University's Post Graduate School of Dentistry. He served 30 months overseas with the U.S. Army and was honorably discharged with the rank of major.

playwright and author.

A tribute to past presidents was delivered by Moses Hornstein, co-chairman, National Society of Fellows, Synagogue Council of America, followed by a presentation of the Synagogue Council's 50th anniversary Synagogue Council Statesman Award to Matthew Rosenhaus, president and chairman of the board of the J.B. Williams Company.

A major Bicentennial address, "To Bigotry, No Sanction," was presented by Dr. Paul A. Freund of the Harvard Law School.

The ceremony was surrounded by extensive fanfare and color, including representatives of the Colonial Navy of Massachusetts, the Newport Artillery, the Newport Volunteers and the Marine Corps Honor Guard, all in authentic colonial dress.

Each of SCA's constituent agencies, including the congregational and rabbinic bodies of the three branches of Judaism — Orthodox, Conservative and Reform — were represented. Other guests, coming from as far away as Texas and Louisiana, represented a wide spectrum of American Jewish life.

Single Jews Challenge Traditions Of Judaism

NEW YORK: "We have no traditions by which to be guided," Rabbi Eugene Sack said. "We're really at the beginning of dealing with the problem."

The problem Rabbi Sack referred to was that of involving unmarried Jews in Jewish communal life.

At a conference on the subject at the New York Federation of Jewish Philanthropies last week, participants said the number of Jewish singles in the New York area had increased in recent years to at least 50,000 — some estimated twice that number — as a result of such factors as increased divorce and extended education.

Synagogues and other institutions have had little experience in dealing with them, since Jewish tradition always has focused on the family.

"In the shtetl (Jewish village in Eastern Europe) being an 'old maid' was an unmitigated disaster and a single male roaming around was a dreadful danger to the family," Rabbi Sack said.

Or as Leslie Gottlieb, another participant, put it: "In the Jewish Establishment you get born, bar mitzvaed or bat mitzvaed, hurry up and get married and have some Jewish babies. How are (singles) going to plug in? The sisterhood is not for us."

An underlying concern of the conference was that Jewish single people could be, as Rabbi Shlomo Balter put it, "lost to Judaism by default."

To confront the problem, and to provide an alternative to singles' bars, the Federation in 1974 formed a Task Force on Jewish singles, headed by Rabbi Balter.

It published a newsletter, which now has a circulation of 2,000, and a manual, by Gottlieb, describing coffee houses, Sabbath dinners, discussion groups and other singles' programs that had been explored. It also organized the conference, held at the Federation's offices. The conference drew some 60 rabbis and lay directors of Young Men's and Women's Hebrew Associations and community centers in the New York area.

Rabbi Sack, spiritual leader of Congregation Beth Elohim in Brooklyn, said he had found that large mixers involved "ruthless competition" in which people came looking for "the one doll" or "the one guy." What is needed, he said, are smaller groups whose members meet regularly and "develop loyalties to each other."

One speaker described the success of havurot, informal communal groups that form to share some aspect of Jewish tradition. Others emphasized the needs of what one woman called "peripheral Jews who may only be interested in stepping inside a synagogue to meet someone."

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

DAVID R. SARGENT

NO PROFIT IN SIGHT

Q: We have 200 shares of Atico Mortgage Investors (NYSE). Is there any hope for recovery for these depressed shares? E.E.

A: With 76% of Atico's loan portfolio now producing a negligible amount or no income, it is probable that operating losses will continue this year. In 1975, a $19.5 million ($7.19 per share) loss was incurred. The prospect for resumption of the dividend is distant. Furthermore, problem loans may require additional contributions to the trust's loss reverse fund again this year. Switch to a more promising situation to recoup your loss.

Q: I am 66 and retired. I have in my portfolio some good stocks that I intend to keep. But, I would like advice on three questionable securities, all of which I hold at losses — Hamilton Corp., Addressograph-Multigraph and Value Line Special Situation Fund, bought in 1968. Thanks in advance for your help. P.E.

A: Your mutual fund — a speculative growth fund — has been a volatile performer. Having held on through several down years, I would continue to ride this one out. Net asset value increased 47% in 1975 and 38% in the first four months of 1976. This was better than the score for the Standard & Poor's 500 Average which gained 37% in 1975 and 14% in the first third of 1976. Hold Addressograph-Multigraph, a New York Stock Exchange-listed, old line office equipment manufacturer, is also worth holding. Earnings have been erratic over the years, with the trend being generally down since 1969. A recovery in the level of profits is looked for in the final half of 1976, although it probably would be well below the level of earlier years. New products, competitive prices, tighter cost controls and a reduction in inventories and receivables should begin to pay off in higher profit margins for Addressograph. Hold for recovery.

Apparently the corporate title which you listed — "Hamilton Corp." is incomplete, as I have been unable to ascertain which one of the many issues with a similar name you might actually hold. If you could supply additional information on this stock, I would be happy to give you any facts available.

DIVIDENDS IN NO-GROWTH MODE

Q: What is your opinion on Pacific Telephone & Telegraph (NYSE), RCA Corporation (NYSE) and Southwest Natural Gas (OTC)? E.C.

A: RCA has been a strong market performer of late, reflecting its continued improvement in operating results. First quarter 1976 earnings more than doubled from the poor showing in the prior year. Revenues rose 15% year-to-year. A rebound in earnings for the full year is anticipated as contributions from all divisions should be up from the recession-ridden 1975 levels. Shares are rated a buy-hold for growth.

Pacific Telephone & Telegraph is of interest primarily for its well covered, generous dividend. However, the $1.20 per share annual dividend rate has not been raised since 1962. Yielding approximately as much as Pacific Telephone, Mountain States Telephone (NYSE) — also controlled by the Bell System — has increased its dividend regularly over the years. A switch to this issue would offer you greater protection against inflation.

Southwest Gas has several problems, including an uncertain supply position, and shares should be sold. Not only has the $1.00 per share dividend rate been unchanged for a decade but the coverage is narrow. American Natural Resources, formerly American Natural Gas (NYSE), yields somewhat less. Both earnings and dividend growth has been above average. The dividend which has ample earnings coverage was boosted with the May payment. Buy.

Q: I hold 200 shares of Kaiser Industries (ASE) bought at $12.00. If the company is liquidated, how will it affect my shares? M.V.

A: The proposed plan for liquidation is not scheduled to begin until 1977. Your shares would be redeemed in exchange for those of three other Kaiser companies. Under terms of the liquidation proposal by the directors, you would receive 48 shares of Kaiser Aluminum (NYSE), 14 shares of Kaiser Cement (NYSE) and 26 shares of Kaiser Steel. The package has about the same market value as your 200 shares of Kaiser Industries command currently, somewhat in excess of your cost. This plan assumes the exercise of all stock options, the conversion of all preferred shares and shareholder approval of the proposal.

Additional distributions of net proceeds from the sale of operating units and other assets might eventually be made. However, pension and other liabilities would have to be met first. Substantial expenses are expected to be incurred from selling operations and from liquidating assets. Based on a book value at the 1975 year-end of over $22 a share, it would appear that there could be considerable other assets to be distributed. If you are willing to wait it out and take that gamble, then you should hold.

Ford Motor Bucking Boycott For Business With Israel

NEW YORK, May 16 (JTA) — The Ford Motor Company has assured the American Jewish Congress that it will "continue doing business in Israel" and will refuse to certify the Arab boycott status of its suppliers, despite company plans for a joint venture in Egypt to build engines and assemble trucks and tractors.

As a result, the AJ Congress has withdrawn a resolution calling for disclosure of company policy toward the Arab boycott that would have been presented at the annual shareholder meeting of the Ford Motor Co. in Detroit last Thursday. The assurances were contained in a letter from Henry Ford II to Rabbi Arthur Hertzberg, president of the AJ Congress, which was made public Thursday.

In his letter, Ford noted that in 1966, despite repeated Arab requests to the contrary, Ford Motor Co. authorized the Palestine Automobile Corporation in Israel to assemble and distribute certain Ford vehicles in that country. As a result of that action, Ford was placed on the Arab boycott list where it remains to this day.

"Our company has not in any way reduced the scope of this arrangement in the intervening years, nor would it accede to pressures of any kind to eliminate or undermine the arrangement," Ford's letter stated. "We intend to continue doing business in Israel as we have done for some 40 years. I reaffirmed this policy at the annual meeting of Ford stockholders in 1975 and in a number of communications to organizations and individuals since that time. At the same time, we would, of course, like to restore normal trade relations with Arab countries."

Gov. Carter's Aides Denounce Accusations

WASHINGTON: Two of former Gov. Jimmy Carter's closest aides have vigorously denounced accusations levelled against him by former speech writer, Robert Shrum, about the Jewish vote in the Georgia's primary campaign for the Democratic Presidential nomination. Carter's chief media spokesman, Jody Powell, said that Carter "has expressed concern at the lack of support from Jewish voters but 'in a completely different context'" from that stated by Shrum. Carter's national issues coordinator, Stuart Eizenstat, a leader of Atlanta's Jewish community, described the accusation as a "total fabrication." Powell and Eizenstat made their statements from Carter campaign headquarters in Atlanta in separate telephone conversations with the Jewish Telegraphic Agency's Washington bureau which initiated the calls.

The JTA asked the headquarters for its views after the charges by ex-speech writer Shrum appeared in interviews published in the Washington Post and the Washington Star. In accusing Carter of a "degree of manipulation and deception," Shrum quoted the candidate as saying: "We have to be cautious. We don't want to offend anybody . . . (Sen. Henry M.) Jackson has all the Jews anyway. It doesn't matter how far I go. I won't get over four percent of the Jewish vote anyway, so forget it. We got the Christians."

Shrum said he did not believe Carter intended that remark as anti-Semitic but rather as a concept of political pragmatism. According to the Post, Shrum, a former speech writer for Sen. George McGovern (D.S.D), Sen. Edmund S. Muskie (D.Me.) and former New York Mayor John V. Lindsay, joined Carter's speech writing team only two weeks before he quit following Carter's victory in the Pennsylvania primary.

Eizenstat responded tersely to Shrum's comments about Carter's remarks. "I was present at many of the meetings involving the discussions referred to by Mr. Shrum and they (his comments) are total fabrications," Eizenstat said. Powell observed that Shrum's "statement that Carter did not need Jewish votes is totally ridiculous and contradictory to the concern Carter has felt and expressed himself about it."

Noting that Carter commented on the Jewish vote at a staff meeting on issues in Atlanta at which Eizenstat was chairman, Powell pointed out that had Carter spoken as Shrum had said he did, Eizenstat "would have walked out of it." Powell observed that Shrum's assertions "appear to combine several different comments" of which "only a part is valid."

He added that Carter, in Shrum's presence and on several other occasions, expressed concern at the lack of support from Jewish voters but his concern "was more of dismay and bewilderment." Powell said that "of course, the idea he would not continue to make statements on the Middle East is completely ludicrous. He has made repeated statements on the Middle East and he will continue to do so."

The Carter aide recalled that the Governor's "statement of support for Israel" was part of Carter's announcement speech 18 months ago at the National Press Club here, which the JTA reported at the time. Powell added that Carter has "continued to voice that support all over the country. That's an indication that, although dismayed and discouraged in that he has not received much of the Jewish vote, he has done it not only in New York, Massachusetts and Florida but also in states where Jewish voters are not considered a large segment of the electorate."

Powell and Eizenstat are described as among the eight members of Carter's "official family" behind the "Carter phenomena" that seeks to make him the Democratic Presidential nominee and put him in the White House.

Your Money's Worth

similar pattern — one more reason it costs so much to insure today's cars.

State laws outlawing unfair claims settlement practices would be one breakthrough toward reform — and to date, 26 states have passed legislation particularly involving personal injury claims.

These new regulations also spell out other consumer safeguards, the AMIA says, which forbid the company to require you to travel unreasonably either to inspect any replacement vehicle or to obtain a repair estimate or to have your car repaired at a specific repair shop. Also two states — New York and New Jersey — require the insurance company to guarantee your repairs if you take your car to a shop the company recommends.

If a company engages in any of these unfair claim practices, it will be prohibited from doing business in states where the regulation has been adopted.

A next logical step to protect consumers would be laws by all states requiring the licensing of auto body shops and mechanics. As of now, only four states have such requirements.

Until repair shops are subjected to more scrutiny, heed these tips from testimony during recent U.S. Senate Hearings.

- In general, new car dealer service departments are well equipped to handle complex repairs, particularly if your car is fairly new. Gasoline service stations are usually okay for minor repairs, but not for complex jobs and they also charge more for parts. Franchise repair shops such as AAMCO Transmissions showed up well in a recent survey of the New York area, but beware of highly advertised "specials" that might talk you into getting unneeded repairs.

- Independent repair shops which either specialize in certain types of repairs or do general repairs have a good track record for performance. Pick one that has been in business for a long time and where the owner is one of the mechanics.

- Repair shops operated by big retailers are only as good as their mechanics. They can sell you parts cheaper, but the labor rate is the same as elsewhere.

- When you get your bill, be sure labor and parts prices are itemized. Refuse to pay if you are being charged for unauthorized parts and labor.

- Two final points on insurance: investigate the arbitration provision in your insurance policy (very few people do). When dealing with your own insurance company on a collision loss, this clause gives you the right to demand arbitration if you and the insurance company adjuster can't agree on the amount of the loss.

- And if you're not already using deductibles to hold down the cost of your vehicle damage insurance, do so.

Metallic Content Measured By New Israeli Device

HAIFA: A highly accurate determination of the amounts of various metallic elements in an alloy, presented in a convenient color television display, can now be obtained rapidly due to an instrument invented by Israeli scientists.

The first of its kind in the world, this apparatus is the result of a cooperative effort between researchers at the Israeli Institute of Metals (of the Technion) and Elscint Ltd. The Technion team was headed by Bilu Shpigler and Professor David Brandon, and the Elscint team by Josef Hochman and Artzi Yarom.

Metallurgists have long been interested in knowing the exact composition of mixtures of metals, how much of which metal is located where in a particular sample — and this quantitative micro-analysis has a vital effect on the finished product's essential qualities, such as mechanical properties and heat and corrosion resistance.

In the new instrument (called Periferol Display and Processing System for the Electron Probe Micro Analyser) the colors shown on the TV display are proportional to the amounts of the various elements comprising the sample.

DANISH GRANT
COPENHAGEN — The Danish Government has announced the grant of three interest-free loans to Egypt, each of about $7½ million over the next three years, as part of its overseas aid schemes. Repayment of each loan, spread over 18 years, will begin after seven years.

The first will be spent in Denmark on electrical equipment for Egyptian industry, and equipment for two canned food factories and large-scale chicken farming in Egypt. The Egyptians earlier received three other Danish State loans totaling some $20 million. The two countries have signed a trade agreement.

Quinlan Case Reviewed By Leaders In Judaism

NEW YORK: With the Karen Quinlan case again making news, in the light of recent judicial rulings on the euthanasia question, the opinions of clergymen have played an important part in shaping both moral attitudes and public opinion.

However, it has been automatically, but erroneously, assumed that all long-established religions would routinely demand the prolonging of life at any price.

Among Jewish leaders, however, Orthodox scholars are beginning to suggest that there might be a way out.

In an article in "Perspective" Magazine, the scholarly journal just published by the Manhattan-based Rabbinical Alliance of America, the large Orthodox group's chief judge of its rabbinical court, Rabbi Isaac Liebcs, takes a qualified view of the "prolonging life" argument.

While admitting that "hastening death out of 'mercy' according to our Torah is murder," and "removing the contact of the breathing machines is tantamount to murder," Rabbi Liebcs draws a distinction in noting that "the physician is not obligated to prolong the life of a man who is in agony and suffers, and possibly he is permitted to stop his medical treatment."

The article, "Pulling the Plug, the Torah View of Questions Raised by the Quinlan Case," is one of two articles in the magazine in Hebrew, but it is accompanied by an English summary.

Also in publication, its editor, Rabbi Chaim U. Lipschitz, vice president of Yeshiva Torah Vodaas and Mesivta, is a major piece on "The International Dateline in Jewish Life."

Other articles include, "Torah and Worldly Pursuit," by Rabbi Samuel A. Turk; "The Story of Rabbi Elazar Rokeach's Appointment as Amsterdam Chief Rabbi (in 1735)," by Rabbi Eliezer Katzman in Hebrew.

The Treasure Chest

Of Outstanding Offers and Opportunities

By Alan Shawn Feinstein

Rare coins continue to appreciate in value. But be very careful when buying in this field. Some of the 'uncirculated' coins being advertised for sale (which are the only type you should buy) often turn out to be a grade lower in quality—'Almost uncirculated.' Though virtually impossible for the untrained eye to detect the difference, the latter are of much less value. Many people getting what they think are uncirculated coins at bargain prices are instead getting stuck.

Best procedure is never to buy anything in this field unless you know the seller well.

Best opportunity of all in this field? Could well be old, used common silver coins, namely pre-1965 nickels, dimes and quarters. The way dealers are melting these down for their silver value, the remaining ones could soon be rare enough to be worth many times that.

Gold starting to look interesting. With the pounding it's recently taken, we could be very near the start of its next up trend.

Smart way to buy gold is in South African Krugerrands—one ounce gold coins of that country. Selling only slightly above price of gold itself. Has little downside risk and good appreciation potential.

For daily prices of these coins and other gold items you can call toll free—800 621-4156. (Gold desk of First National Bank of Chicago.) But check around before you do any buying from them. On May 17th they were offering Krugerrands at $137.00 each, in units of ten. Cost at another bank the same day was only $135.35. If you want some of these, check around carefully to see where you can get the best buy.

Very worthwhile book showing tremendous appreciation in certain U.S. stamps and their equally exciting future potential. $20.00, but well worth it. And comes with a money-back guarantee. You should read this! Available from GCH & Company, 225 Santa Monica Boulevard, Santa Monica, California 90401.

ARCHAEOLOGICAL DIG: This past Sunday the Bureau of Jewish Education, under the direction of Elliot Schwartz, executive director, and Samuel S. Greenstein, class instructor, sponsored an archaeological dig for the students of the High School of Jewish Studies Biblical Archaeological class. Students from Temples Beth Am and Beth Torah were also invited to attend. Students in the Bureau's archaeological class are learning about the Bible through archaeological evidence. This type of study relies on scientific proof by utilizing artifacts and advanced scientific measurement to substantiate the validity of the Bible. It also allows students to view Jewish heritage through the questioning eyes of the social historian, thus giving them a new and different perspective on Biblical life.

The dig took place in Rehoboth, Massachusetts. Methods used by students to explore Rehoboth's 16th-17th century Palmer River community were essentially the same as those used by archaeologists excavating sites in Israel. Students unearthed handmade nails, pieces of window and bottle glass, pottery shreds, bricks and the tooth of a farm animal. Activities such as this are an integral part of the Bureau's High School of Jewish Studies program. Any student over the age of Bar or Bas Mitzvah wishing to become a student in the high school should contact Mr. Schwartz at the Bureau of Jewish Education, or Shlomo Shechter, high school principal.

An Indefinite Postponement Called After 3-Year Delay

AMSTERDAM: After an unsuccessful three-year search for a candidate, the Nederlands Israëlietisch Kerkgenootschap, the umbrella organization of 40 Orthodox congregations in Holland, has postponed its plan to appoint a Chief Rabbi to project its viewpoint.

Instead, the Ashkenazi organization, with 13,500 registered members of congregations out of some 30,999 Jews in Holland, is seeking a distribution of duties among its six rabbis, three in Amsterdam and one each in Rotterdam, Utrecht and The Hague.

In particular, it wants to appoint a rabbi for representative duties because of the tendency of Dutch press, radio and television to treat Rabbi Avraham Soetendorp, of the Liberal Jewish congregation at The Hague, as if he were the rabbinical spokesman of the Dutch Jewish community.

The Ashkenazi organization feels that projection of the Orthodox point of view is required and in this connection the name of 30-year-old Rabbi Menachem Fink, the Chief Rabbi at The Hague for five years, has been mentioned.

An Israeli, Rabbi Fink was given three months' leave of absence early this year for reserve military duties in Israel, including service with the military rabbinate.

There have been big financial deficits by the Nederlands Israëlietisch Kerkgenootschap, and this is another argument in support of shelving the appointment of a Chief Rabbi for Holland.

It has been estimated that the post, with the provision of administrative staff, would cost some $500,000 a year.

Many card combinations are almost automatic the way they are handled. However, sometimes something comes up which should sway the way a sharp Declarer will attack that suit. In today's hand only one Declarer foresaw what could happen to him if a key card were in a certain hand. The bidding should have shown everyone exactly where that card had to be but the other Declarers failed to change their normal way of playing that combination. They all went down.

Go over to a high Club and ruff a Diamond, then repeat this until both of Declarer's remaining Trumps have been utilized. Then simply continue Clubs until sooner or later East ruffs one with his good Trump or they are allowed to hold. Count your tricks now.

You either have five Heart tricks, one Spade and four Clubs for a total of ten. Or if East ruffs a Club you have a Trump left in Dummy to ruff a Spade to again get to ten. Either way the game is made and the defense cannot stop it. Only one Declarer played the hand this way and was rewarded with a "Top."

Moral: You should trust your opponents to be bidding honestly and take advantage of what their bidding may tell you. If they bid badly you will usually beat them anyhow. Every once in a while you may lose this way but don't worry about those times.

East and West were vulnerable, South Dealer with this bidding:

| S  | W | N  | E   |
| 3♥ | P | 4♥ | End |

Strangely enough, almost every North-South pair reached the Heart game, probably because they were spurred on by East's overcall. Had East passed, I am quite certain most Souths would have passed North's weak response. Actually their attitude should be the same; South is not competing here, he is making a forward going bid just as if east had passed. North has the very top of his two Heart bid so easily goes on to game. The problem is to make it.

Honoring East's overcall, West leads the Diamond King which should have given the Declarers a good clue as to how best to make the hand but they ignored it. What happened at all but one table is this: South ruffed the second Diamond lead, drew two rounds of Trumps leaving one opponent with the high Queen and then turned his attention to the Spades. Naturally, the only way to play that suit is from South over to Dummy's doubleton Queen, isn't it? That is what they did but here is what happened. East, as should have been expected, won the Ace, drew Dummy's last Trump with that high Queen and led a Diamond. Declarer now had another losing Spade that nothing could be done with and as a result went down.

You might say it was unfortunate that East had the last Trump for otherwise that other Spade could have been ruffed in Dummy but he did. The card that should have been prepared better for was that Spade Ace. If the betting were different maybe they wouldn't be sure but after West showed where that Diamond King was at trick one we can be sure East has to have the Spade Ace for his bid. So what can be done to take advantage of this knowledge? Take the second Trump lead in Dummy and lead a small Spade from there to the King. If East plays the Ace the problem is solved. If he plays low, as he should, you have won your Spade

Readers Digest Article Is Termed Anti-Semitic

NEW YORK: (JTA) A Readers Digest article which repeats the allegation that Jews were responsible for the crucifixion of Jesus brought an angry protest from an official of a Jewish organization and subscriber to the mass circulation monthly and a disclaimer from its senior staff editor that either the Digest or the author of the article "is in any way anti-Semitic."

The article, titled "The End is Life," was extracted from "The Magnificent Defeat," a paperback book published in 1966 by the Seabury Press Inc. of New York. The author, Frederick Buechner, was described by the Digest as an ordained Presbyterian minister and author of several other books.

The extract appeared in the magazine's April issue, coinciding with the Easter and Passover holidays. The opening paragraph of Buchner's article reads: "Heaven knows the old men had put Pilate through plenty already: insisting that he try the man for offenses against Jewish piety when as far as he was concerned, Jewish piety could not have mattered less; then threatening to inform against him if he did not yield to their pressure and have the man executed, which, of course, he finally did, although not before announcing first that as far as he was concerned, the man was innocent..."

Later in the article, Buechner wrote that "Beneath the fear that the Jewish elders spoke about to Pilate lay another fear, the fear that the man whom they had crucified would really come alive again as he promised. That the body that now lay dead in its tomb, disfigured by the mutilations of the Cross, would start up in its grave-clothes and move toward them with unspeakable power..." At the end of the Buechner article the Readers

Digest advised readers how to obtain reprints.

Mrs. Shifra Hoffman, executive director of "Shuva," the aliya movement of the Jewish Defense League, protested in a letter to Readers Digest managing editor Edward T. Thompson that "Reverend Buechner's view of the Resurrection means revival of the infamous 'Jews are responsible for the death of Jesus' myth which, together with the equally infamous 'blood libel'...some were foolish enough to believe ecumenism had forever laid to rest." Mrs. Hoffman provided the Jewish Telegraphic Agency with copies of her letter and of the reply she received from senior staff editor Jeremy Dole who expressed "astonishment" at her protest. Dole wrote, "You have given an interpretation to Frederick Buechner's opening paragraph that we don't believe is justified. I can assure you neither Mr. Buechner nor his article nor the Digest is in any way anti-Semitic." Mrs. Hoffman, who informed Readers Digest that she was cancelling her subscription said in her letter she is urging other subscribers to do likewise to protest against "the bigotry you (Readers Digest) sanction."

Sherwin's Photography May Be Seen This Summer Throughout The State

By BARBARA WRONSKI

"When I shot the swan, I knew I could handle a camera professionally," said Rob Sherwin, a 1974 graduate of the University of Rhode Island. This was Roger Williams Park in the spring of 1968 and he did, of course, shoot the fowl with a camera, not a gun. Since then he has been refining his photographic skills and plans to make a career of photography. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell Sherwin of President Avenue, Mr. Sherwin's works will be on display in various locations throughout the summer months. He has recently completed a showing at the Wayland Square Branch of the Industrial National Bank, and these works are now being exhibited at Columbus National Bank in East Providence, opposite Wampanoag Mall, through June 12. His accomplishments may also be viewed at the Wickford Art Festival, scheduled for July 8 through 10. He will have a permanent gallery of work on display, as well, in Newport at "Seams Natural," Spring and Mill Streets. The store will be having its grand opening in mid-June and specializes in women's custom clothing, scrimshaw and sterling.

Mr. Sherwin, who intends to go into the publishing of four-color reproduction greeting cards, had some of his works pictured in "Time Magazine" about five years ago. He develops his own photography. Framing is handled exclusively by Providence Print Gallery.

Currently working with his father at Singer in Pawtucket, Mr. Sherwin was written up in the "Who's Who in American Colleges" in both 1972 and 1973.

While attending URI, he was editor of the year book for three years, a unique distinction, as well as serving as editor of the campus literary publication, "Perspectives." A member of Temple Emanu-El, he served as assistant editor of the temple's 50th anniversary promotional pieces during the summer of 1975. He also gave a color photography seminar at journalism convention for college year book and newspaper editors in Dallas, Texas, in November of 1972, where he had the opportunity to show much of his work. When residing in New York City, he did cover design for A&M Records.

- Distinguished Public Service Award, L.A. Anti-Defamation League, December 1975
- Torch of Learning Award, American Friends of Hebrew University, 1976
- Untiring Fund-Raiser for UJA

SENATOR FRANK CHURCH SPEAKS OUT ON ISRAEL...

AGAINST U.N. VOTE ON ZIONISM

Senator Church denounced the vote: "To contend that Zionism can be equated in any way with racism is to practice Newspeak. Zionism is simply the Jewish aspiration, an aspiration normal to any people for a homeland of their own...It is doubly unjust to heap on history's most frequent victims of special hatreds a slander so inaccurate."

AGAINST ARAB BOYCOTT OF ISRAEL

As Chairman of Senate Committee on Multinationals, Frank Church first revealed the Arab boycott of firms doing business with Israel, and revealed for the first time in the U.S. in public hearings the full list of U.S. firms subject to the Arab boycott...and called for immediate action to end the boycott.

CHAMPIONS A STRONG ISRAEL

Since entering the Senate in 1957, Senator Church consistently introduced or supported legislation to ensure survival of a strong Israel.

- June 1972: Introduced amendment increasing amount earmarked for Israel by $35 million over the House bill.
- September 1972: Introduced amendment increasing funds earmarked for Israel from $50 million to $85 million
- 1974: Voted against Abourezk amendment to foreign assistance legislation which would have denied assistance to Israel. Voted for additional $200 million for military sales and assistance to Israel.
- Strong supporter of Jackson-Vanik Amendment. (Soviet Emigration Bill).
- One of original five sponsors of Senate letter urging Ford Administration to supply Israel with the materiel and financial support to protect her borders.

The event will be held Sunday, June 6, at 10 a.m., at Medoff Auditorium, Congregation B'nai Israel, 224 Prospect Street, Woonsocket. Herbert B. Stern is chairman of the tribute committee.

Hy Kalus, one of Israel's leading motion picture and stage-producer-directors, will be the special guest at the tribute to Mr. Sadwin being held in cooperation with the Rhode Island Committee, State of Israel Bonds.

State Senator Richard Licht is general chairman of the Rhode Island Committee, which is conducting a state-wide effort to strengthen Israel's economy with the aid of Israel Bonds, the primary source of development funds for Israel's growth.

Mr. Sadwin has been active in the Woonsocket Israel Bond campaign as chairman and in many other communal and civic programs.

Recently elected president of Congregation B'nai Israel, he is a member of the board of directors of the Woonsocket Chapter of B'nai B'rith, the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island, the Providence Hebrew Day School and the New England Region of the Anti-Defamation League.

He is a former vice president of the Woonsocket Junior Chamber of Commerce, an incorporator of the Woonsocket Institution for Savings, a former director of the Highridge Swim and Tennis Club and a campaign worker for the Meeting Street School Building Fund.

Mr. Sadwin has been president of Sadwin Curtain Manufacturing Company, Inc., since 1974.

Members of the Tribute Committee, in addition to Mr. Stern, include Richard Ackerman, Edward Baram, Benjamin Daniels, S. Ronald Daniels, Dr. Oscar Z. Dashef, Joseph Eisenberg, Benjamin M. Falk, Dr. Harvey E. Fellman, Edward Golden, Martin Goodman, Mrs. Robert Levine, Mrs. Herman Levinson.

Also, Peter Y. Macktaz, Lester A. Macktez, Philip J. Macktez, Israel Medoff, Samuel J. Medoff, Arthur Robbins, Edward Shorr, Dr. Harvey H. Snetsky, Bentley Tobin, Alan Wayne, Dr. Saul A. Wittes and Judge Irving I. Zimmerman.

Broadcasting Authority Inaugurates Shortwave

The Israel Broadcasting Authority has inaugurated a daily shortwave North American service. Programs will be aired daily from 5:30-6:00 p.m. EST on 11645-9720-7412 KH2 and the West Coast on 12025 KH2. The programs will include news bulletins, features and music from Israel.

These programs will provide first-hand information on Israel and the Middle East. The IBA schedule will be aired every Thursday in English at 2045 G.M.T.

The IBA's new facilities make it unnecessary for listeners to obtain sophisticated shortwave sets. In general, a fairly decent transistor radio with a shortwave band(s) running from 5.9-12.1 MHz (49-25 meters) should suffice, especially if the antenna is placed in the best position in the room (e.g., window, radiator, telephone lines). Clipping a few feet of ordinary wire to the whip antenna will often improve reception markedly.

For additional information, comments, and reception reports, write directly to Israel Broadcasting Authority, POB 1082, Overseas Service, Jerusalem, Israel.

Teledate Plans Innovations For Memorial Day Weekend

Video producers Richard Raskind and Sam Hefter of Teledate, the Boston videotape dating service, have come up with an intriguing computerized dating service they feel will cut through the singles bar small talk prerequisite for gauging compatibility yet, unlike other dating services, still gives the applicant a glimpse of the potential matchee in the flesh, so to speak.

After filling out a written questionnaire about interests, preferences and personality, each applicant videotapes an informal, two-minute interview with one of the counselors... or you can simply videotape whatever you feel like saying about yourself.

The plan for Memorial Day is that applicants will be matched with the five most compatible people at the Novicks Hotel, Boston. At the Saturday night dance, the matches will be announced, along with other surprises. Matching is just for fun, and there is no obligation to stay with "matchees."

Any guests who wish to receive a free registration with Teledate will be videotaped, providing an avenue to meet new and interesting people. Videotapes of the dance and other events will be on hand, as well. Applicants are encouraged to register early as the demand is likely to exceed the capacity of the hotel.

Jewish Home Day Care Workers Making Toys For Handicapped

DAY CARE PARTICIPANTS: Jewish Home Day Care participants and residents make toys for the Meeting Street School. Pictured here are Max Fessel, Louis Mayerson, Sharon Rice, Irving Avrutsky, Sid Backman, Abbott Lieberman, Morris Blackman, Arlene Alperin, Fannie Andelman and John Marino.

Participants in the Jewish Home's Day Care Program and elderly residents of the home have been hard at work making educational toys and wooden furniture for handicapped children at the Meeting Street School. Seeing first-hand that the results of their efforts are beneficial to others creates a sense of renewed purpose and self-respect. Knowledge of their usefulness and productiveness is more therapeutic than any other medicine known to man.

The elderly residents and Day Care participants are assisted by a dedicated group of volunteers from both the Jewish Home and the Jewish Family and Children's Service.

Designs for the toys were received from the Meeting Street School by Mr. Abbott Lieberman. Wood is cut to size by Mr. Ansel Kleinman, using equipment belonging to his father, the late David Kleinman, a former resident of the home. The cut pieces are brought to the Day Care center by Mr. Lieberman and Mr. Jack Feit, where they are put together using glue, nails and screws. The senior citizens then take over.

During the workshop, separate tables are set up for sanding, painting and varnishing. Everyone has a part in the finished toy to be brought to the Meeting Street School.

Not only has this project added to each person's feelings of self-worth, but an atmosphere of increased sociability and comradery pervades the group. Each participant looks forward to Tuesday morning's work, conversation and common purpose.

TOYS ARE DELIVERED: Day Care participants, residents and staff members bring the toys made in Day Care to the children, staff and volunteers of the Meeting Street School.

House Adopts Bill To Monitor Accord

WASHINGTON, (JTA) — The House of Representatives, by a vote of 240-95, adopted the Case-Fenwick bill setting up an American commission on security and cooperation in Europe whose function is to monitor compliance with the Helsinki agreement by all its signatories, including the Soviet Union. A major feature is to advance the freedom of citizens within the Soviet orbit, including Jews and others wishing to emigrate.

The bill will now go to the Senate-House conference, since the Senate version sponsored by Sen. Clifford P. Case (R.N.J.) calls for an 11-member group while the House measure introduced by Rep. Millicent Fenwick (R.N.J.), proposes 15 members.

Mohammed, and
'The People of the Book'

By DR. JAY N. FISHBEIN

Many centuries ago a meteorite fell in the Arabian desert. People came from far and near to gaze in awe upon this mysterious black stone that dropped from the heavens, and a town grew up around it. To protect this precious, heaven-sent stone, a building was erected called the Kaaba. As time passed this town became the sacred city of Mecca, which prospered greatly from the gifts and traffic of the pilgrims that came from all over the Middle and Far East to this sacred site.

The Moslems have embellished upon the tale. When Abraham banished his concubine Hagar and their son Ishmael, the exiles wandered into the desert. The heat was intense and as they were expiring from thirst, Ishmael in frustration and despair kicked the sand and suddenly water sprung out. This became the sacred spring called "Zem Zem."

As they were satisfying their thirst, the huge black stone fell from heaven at Ishmael's feet and an angel appeared who announced that his descendants would one day become more powerful and more numerous than those of Isaac. The Moslem gleefully point out the truth of this prophecy, as they now number about 400 million against 12 million Jews. The Cave of Machpelah in Hebron is also venerated by the Moslem as it is the resting place of Abraham, the father of Ishmael. Unfortunately, it has become the source of unceasing friction, as the Moslem deny Jews the right to enter and pray at this holy site.

Mohammed, although illiterate, had an inquisitive mind and a retentive memory. On his caravan journeys he came in contact with both Jews and Christians, and became impressed with their belief in a single all-powerful deity. The Testament made a profound impression and he referred to the Jews fondly as the "People of the Book." Abraham, Moses and Jesus were equally admired. As Jesus borrowed from the Essenes, so did Mohammed, for there are at least six chapters or suras of the Koran in which practically every detail was taken from the Essenic description of the "Seven Heavens."

Mohammed was fortunate in having a loyal follower, Abu Bakr, who carefully recorded his sermons. After his death all these sermons were collected and compiled into an authoritative version, called the Koran. The religion was called Islam, meaning "Submission" and his followers were called Moslems, meaning "True Believers." It is the youngest of the great, universal religions, and in many ways the simplest. It venerates a single, all-powerful deity, and promises immediate salvation. Mohammed, its founder, claimed to be neither savior or messiah, but only the one through whom God spoke. It concerns itself as much with man's behavior in this world as with his destiny in the hereafter. Most religions evolved slowly from obscure and legendary origins. Islam rose abruptly and spread with astonishing speed and vigor.

To understand the Arab it is necessary to understand his religion. To the true Moslem, religion, faith, life and politics are inseparable. The belief that God is omnipresent ruler and omniscient judge gives the Moslem a dignity and self-confidence that renders him impervious to apostasy. The utterances of Mohammed, as preserved in the Koran, represents the final and absolute expression of the will of God. It confirms the truth of the Old and the New Testaments. Mohammed is considered the last and the greatest of the Prophets.

Haraka, cousin to his wife, had

Synagogue Council Marks Bicentennial

By BARBARA WRONSKI

A day-long convocation drew several hundred persons from across the United States to Newport this past Sunday, May 23, for the Synagogue Council of America's celebration of the American Bicentennial and its own 50th anniversary. The Synagogue Council, coordinating body of the three branches of Judaism, represents some four million American Jews. A committee headed by Ambassador Sol M. Linowitz was responsible for the highly colorful and meaningful event.

In a prepared text, Ambassador Linowitz commented on the Touro Synagogue: "Beneath the reading desk in this synagogue is a secret underground passage — constructed, some say, to provide a channel of escape if it should be needed by those who came to this new world of freedom bringing with them the dread fear of persecution and terror which had haunted their past.

"The Jews of America have never had to use this or any other channel of escape or refuge. And our mutual commitment promises that there will be no such need in the future. For our two hundred years in this country have been years of fulfillment and achievement, years of redemption of the American promise. And as we look to the future, the Jews of America pray for blessings on this land which will be forever ours as we will be forever hers."

Highlighting the convocation was a dedicatory ceremony in the historic Touro Synagogue, oldest Jewish house of worship in the United States, which was keynoted by Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller. Mr. Rockefeller's speech followed in the tradition of President George Washington's famous letter to the Jews of Newport, "to bigotry no sanction, to persecution no assistance..." which remains a central theme in the American commitment to freedom of religion.

"The Jewish experience in America is a particularly vivid illustration of opportunity for the individual being translated into freedom must be accompanied by an acceptance of moral responsibility on the part of the individual. These convictions are so much in keeping with the moral philosophy of our Nation's founding fathers that it is hardly surprising that Jewish Americans have made such

Mohammed, and 'The People of the Book'

(Continued from page 14) accepted the Hebrew faith and would read the Bible to Mohammed, which he absorbed avidly. On his caravan journeys he had also heard of the teachings of Jesus. Although he admired Jesus along with Abraham and Moses, Christianity with its concept of the Trinity, had less appeal than the pure Hebrew monotheistic faith.

Impressed with the idea of a single all-powerful deity, Mohammed developed a distaste for the idolatry of the Bedouin with its ugly idols and its numerous tribal gods. His great ambition was to unite the scattered and hostile tribes which were constantly at war with one another, under his banner. Because of its geographical position and forbidding deserts, Arabia was at no time threatened by foreign powers. Therefore, they never came in contact with the civilizations of Babylon, Persia, Greece or Rome, and their primitive mode of life never changed.

Mohammed claimed that the archangel Gabriel appeared to him in a vision one night and dictated the first sura of the Koran. Other visions followed as the revelations continued. Being illiterate, he was fortunate in having Abu Bakr, who recorded these revelations.

Mohammed did not develop a great theology, for what Islam has worthy of the name was built up long after his death. He made patriotism a part of religion. He promised his followers great booty and convinced them that if they died in battle, they would enjoy luxury and beautiful damsels in heaven.

To simplify his religion and make it palatable to his illiterate followers, he did not burden them with onerous duties. He instituted neither an organized priesthood or sacraments. It contained only the five cardinal obligations of the true Moslem.

- 1) Acceptance of the creed: There is no God but Allah, and Mohammed is his Prophet.
- 2) Prayer, five times daily, but at least three.
- 3) Almsgiving.
- 4) To observe the fast of Ramadan.
- 5) At least one pilgrimage to Mecca.

Following his death one of his disciples compiled an authoritative version of the Koran, which was approved and accepted as the canonical text, and which remains unchanged to this day. It contains many legends and traditions paralleling those of the Bible. Its primary doctrines are simple—pure monotheism and the last judgment. Mohammed emphasized Allah as the one and only God. In Moslem eyes the Christian doctrine of the Trinity is polytheistic. Far more than the Bible, the Koran is vivid and explains in detail the delights of Heaven and the terrors of Hell.

Outraged by the Mohammed's denunciation of the idols venerated by the Bedouin, and which attracted the Pilgrims and brought prosperity to Mecca, he was derided and ridiculed. As he persisted his preaching, his life was threatened and he was forced to flee. This flight from Mecca to Yathrib is referred to by the Moslems as the "Hegira," the "Night of the Flight." The Christian calendar begins with the birth of Jesus. The Moslems count time from Anno Hegira, the "Year of the Flight," which took place in Mohammed's 53rd year, when officially he became the founder of the Moslem religion. Yathrib was later changed to Medina, meaning the "City of the Prophet." Being a walled city and easily defended, it made an ideal capital.

Yathrib had a large Hebrew population which Mohammed was most anxious to convert, and he recognized as their Prophet. As the first and foremost monotheistic religion it would have added immeasurably to his prestige. The Moslem religion he preached was largely patterned after Judaism. He prescribed that his followers would also face Jerusalem in prayer, abstain from eating pork, circumcise their male offspring, and observe the Ten Commandments. As the elders among the Jews still demurred, he offered to incorporate the essentials of the Torah in his teachings. He made every effort to pacify and win over the Elders. His only request was to be recognized as their Prophet. However, when he found the Jews tenacious in their faith and stubborn in their resistance, he became as bitter as Martin Luther was to become some centuries later, when he found his hopes of converting the Jews also thwarted.

The Jews felt a kinship with the almighty and had no need of spokesmen. They took their problems directly to Jehovah when beset with grief, without the need of intermediaries, whether it be Prophet, Priest or Tzadok. Bitter and frustrated, he changed the direction of prayer. Moslems now face to Mecca instead. Mohammed vented his anger on the stubborn elders, slaughtering many of them and placed a collective fine upon the community, which was used to recruit and arm his followers.

The widows of those he ordered executed, he simply added to his harem, which was quite ample. Several suras in the Koran are devoted to the complaints of these women for his neglect of them. By this time, Mohammed was well advanced in middle age and his extensive harem was apparently beyond his ability to cope with.

(To be continued next week)

RACIST RESURGENCE

LONDON. — A resurgence of activity by Britain's foremost racist organization, the National Front, is being watched closely by leaders of the Anglo-Jewish community. The front, which claims between 15,000-20,000 members, grabbed the national headlines recently when it tried to stage a march through a district in the Yorkshire town of Bradford inhabited by many colored immigrants. Rioting broke out when immigrants and anti-Facist groups attempted to stop the march. Although the Jewish community was not involved, the affair was strongly reminiscent of the battles in the Jewish quarters of London's East End before World War II.
