

Rambus Announces Resignation of Chief Financial Officer

Robert Eulau Leaving Company to Pursue Another Opportunity; Search for Replacement Underway

LOS ALTOS, Calif., Feb 07, 2006 (BUSINESS WIRE) -- Rambus Inc. (Nasdaq:RMBS) today announced that Robert K. Eulau, senior vice president and chief financial officer, will resign from Rambus effective March 2, 2006 to pursue another opportunity. Harold Hughes, chief executive officer, will serve as interim CFO until a replacement has been found.

"Bob has made a significant contribution to Rambus for nearly five years and we are saddened to see him depart but wish him well in his new opportunity," said Harold Hughes, president and chief executive officer at Rambus. "We will immediately begin a search for a new CFO who as part of the Rambus leadership team can continue the company's track record of financial strength and solid growth."

Mr. Eulau stated, "I am extremely grateful for the opportunities I have had over the last few years. Rambus has made great strides forward since 2001 and is very well positioned for the future."

Eulau joined Rambus in May 2001. Prior to Rambus, he held various financial and marketing management positions during his sixteen years at Hewlett-Packard, most recently serving as vice president and CFO in the business customer organization.
