IN THE MAIL BAG

THE SPIRIT OF

76

by JOHN CLINTON

Sometime I suppose I'll learn to keep my great big mouth shut! Because I'm always getting a lecture by my betters.

This time it was on Traffic Nerves!

As you know, my company's opened a Clinic to study Traffic Nerves, even published a 32-page book about how to get rid of 'em.

I was at lunch with some of the men who operate the Clinic the other day and I said: "What's this Traffic Nerves, a gag? Boy did I get my ears pinned back!

They dragged me up to the lab and showed me graphs of what Traffic does to your nervous system — of how your pulse jumps when a guy suddenly darts out in front of you, or when you stall in the middle of the main street!

Then they showed me another stack of reports from the refinery — showing how they had blended this NEW 76 gasoline to overcome some of the causes of Traffic Nerves!

Well, you never saw more convincing proof. Union Oil engineers have really contributed something to our happiness in driving. For 76 really makes cars handle properly in modern traffic.

Look, next time you see the big orange and blue 76 sign, pop in and get a copy of "How To Reduce Traffic Nerves." It's got 32 pages and a flock of pictures. It'll help you get more fun out of driving.

"LURE OF THE ORIENT"

S. S. President Pierce,
Pacific Ocean.

Dear Editor:

Your letter of inquiry caught up with me at Kobe, Japan, after being forwarded to various parts of the Empire.

For the past two years I have been acting as principal of Seoul Foreign School in Seoul, Korea, in addition to teaching English in the high school. The school is a private one run on the American plan for the education of the foreign residents in Seoul. While the school is small (about 75 students) it is an extremely interesting group with which to work. There are nine nationalities plus several combinations of these. Most of the children have traveled extensively and come from varying home backgrounds ranging from Russian refugees, business people, consular representatives to missionaries. With conditions in the world as they are today, it sometimes required considerable diplomacy to keep everyone happy.

The opportunity to travel has been great and I have managed to crowd in a fairly satisfactory amount in the past two years. In addition to countless short trips to various parts of the peninsula, I managed three visits to Peking, a trip to the Philippine Islands, stopping en route at Hong Kong and Shanghai. Spent a month in Japan last summer and ten days more prior to my present sailing. I had hoped to return via Europe but the war has made prospects increasingly unpleasant.

"The Lure of the Orient" is far from a fabrication of the imagination. Two years is plenty of time to expose one's self to it. I fear that if I were to stay longer, I would never want to leave. Because of increasing Japanese domination, the outlook for foreign enterprise of all sorts is definitely pessimistic. In the light of events since I have left, I am definitely glad to be on my way home.

Japan is slowly but surely gaining control here in the Orient. But she is paying a tremendous price in the lives and health of her citizens. Lack of proper food has brought about a great increase in disease and death in addition to great losses on the battlefields of her young men. I feel confident that she will increase in power, politically and economically, during the next few years. The permanence of her position seems only a matter for conjecture at present.

The return journey has been very slow. A propellor shaft gave way so we have only been averaging about ten miles per hour. The trip is taking over a week longer than had been expected. The Golden Gate will certainly look good.

Sincerely yours,

Oren Freerksen, '34.

Oregon and National Defense By DONALD M. ERB

"The moral preparation of the citizenry for service in a democracy" still remains the University's most important task, concludes President Donald M. Erb in this studied story on National Defense. With the International House Conference on "Students and the Future of Democracy" in New York, with the Daily Californian's sharp rebuttal to their president's pledge of participation in the defense program, with confused ramblings on tip of the tongue talk: War!—all of this indicates bewilderment. Economizing on words, Dr. Erb crystallizes several ideas on the University and National Defense.—Ed.

On June 8, 1940, the faculty of the University of Oregon unanimously passed the following resolution:

Realizing that "national unity is the basis of national security," BE IT RESOLVED, That we, the members of the faculty of the University of Oregon, hold ourselves in readiness to serve the State and the Nation in the cause of national defense.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That a copy of this resolution be dispatched to his Excellency, the President of the United States, and to his Excellency, the Governor of Oregon.

FEW DIRECT DEMANDS

Since that date there have been few direct demands upon the University by the War Department or by any of the other agencies concerned with the National Defense Program. But the University is ready, willing and able to render a valuable service for the preparedness program. Perhaps few demands of a sort which would disrupt the normal operation of the University will be made.

There has been an attitude rather widely expressed that the higher educational institutions of the country should carry on "business as usual." Officials connected with the War Department and members of Congress most concerned with defense legislation have been quoted to this effect. The American Council on Education has urged upon the federal authorities the desirability of keeping the universities operating upon a normal peace-time plane. The American Association of State Universities, through the Committee on Military Affairs, has been working with the officials in Washington to devise a system which will preserve the universities as going educational units for the service of the great mass of young men and women who will be excluded from military service unless a conscription bill should pass which would apply to young men below the age of twenty-one.

OPPOSED TO S.A.T.C.

The American Association of State Universities has further gone on record in strong opposition to a repetition of the S.A.T.C. experiment—the Students' Army Training Corps of the last war. That experiment was notably unsuccessful, both from the standpoint of the War Department and from the standpoint of the universities. The young men in the S.A.T.C.

had too little time for military training to get them far on the road toward officers' commissions. They had too little time for academic work to get them far on the road toward a degree. Like most compromises the S.A.T.C. was an attempt to reconcile the irreconcilable—in that case, to reconcile effective army training with effective academic work.

Finally, various public officials have been publicly quoted within recent weeks as urging young men and women of college age to go ahead with their plans for college and university training this autumn on the ground that in the vast majority of cases they can best serve their country, and at the same time serve themselves, in that way. "Keep youth in school" has been a recent slogan. On all these counts, then, it seems possible that the universities, and the University of Oregon among them, will be relatively little affected by the development of the Defense Program.

PROGRAM ADAPTABLE

But to a degree not always realized the state universities have had an educational program rather well adapted to national defense needs. In a recent bulletin of the Educational Policies commission, which is an agency of the National Education association and the American Association of School Administrators, this fact was emphasized. The bulletin was entitled "Education and the Defense of American Democracy." The function of education in this time of crisis was outlined under the three heads of Military Training, Occupational Training, and Moral Defense of Democracy.

Under the head of Military Training the state universities provide a series of courses, through the Department of Military Science and Tactics, which not only give the underclassmen the rudiments of drill and of military tactics, but also, in the upper-division courses, carry the students through advanced work which equips the best of them for the immediate receipt of officers' commissions and all of them for a possible entrance upon a military career with little further training. The R.O.T.C. unit at the University of Oregon now enrolls about a thousand young men. Each year it is able to place several of the seniors in permanent army or marine commissions. Many more go on to Reserve Commissions, and the whole group gets a grade of military training which is invaluable for purposes of national defense.

OCCUPATIONAL AID

Under the second head, the technical and vocational training given by many schools and departments of the University is outstanding. When one thinks in terms of occupational training needed for a defense program one quickly appreciates the fact that this training may be in subjects which range all the way from accounting to music, or from physical education to modern languages. In this period of crisis, as in the past, the versatility and adaptability of university trained men and women make them very much in demand throughout the defense organizations.

But most important of all is the service of the universities toward the moral preparation of the citizenry for service in a democracy. This is the most difficult job because it is the most intangible, but it is the most indispensable job of all. In the defense of democracy the universities must see to it that young men and women are adequately informed on what democracy is and on how it operates. They must be imbued with an understanding of its past history and its promise. They must be taught to value the dignity and worth of the individual, but they must be taught also to see the responsibility of the individual. On the occasion of the recent Commencement Exercises at the University of Oregon in June 1940 some words were addressed to the senior class in an attempt to summarize this point. The seniors were urged to:

"dispell every thought that our world can be preserved without sacrifice on the part of all of us. The institutions which we value, the ideals which we cherish, and the way of life which we enjoy were not brought into being with a magic wand or a sophisticated gesture. Nor can they be preserved without our willing effort. They must be paid for, in one way or another, just as they were paid for in the past. Whether war comes to us or not, we must take account of our democracy and return the toughness to its fiber. Otherwise we will either lose it, or it will be forcibly taken away from us. And do not, above all, think that that makes no difference. It makes so much difference that life itself is not too high a price to pay for it. I pray that there is not one among us who has the slightest doubt that this democracy within a republic can be, if it is not already, the most humane, the most Christian, the most decent, and the most happy form of government in the world. Under no other form could we enjoy the freedom which we value."

STRENGTHEN SPIRIT

The universities can do much to carry out the injunction which is contained in the foregoing quotation. In addition to all of the military and economic and vocational preparations for the defense of democracy, the preparations of this country must bring about a strengthening of the American spirit, a nationalism which is founded upon an intelligent appraisal of the world which confronts us. The universities must serve to make democracy a workable, vital thing. If our people are to enjoy their freedom, they must understand clearly what a nation is like which has lost its freedom, even though it has gained a large part of the world in the process. If the universities can appreciate this part of their job, they will have made the most valuable contribution of all to the national defense.

Father of Athletics

By LYLE M. NELSON, '41

Emerald Editor Lyle M. Nelson editorializes on Oregon's 68-year-old "Father of Athletics" who died July 28 while hospitalized at Waldport. Professor Herbert Crombie Howe began his graduate career as secretary to Cornell's president in 1895. Since the Spanish-American squabble he had heaped up honors. Among these were membership in the American Association for the Advancement of Science, National Council of Teachers of English, Modern Language association, American Geographical society and the American Association of University Professors. The center-column verse reveals the philosophy of a professor who was far from a pedant.—Ed.

A thin, serious looking, little man, just eight years out of an Eastern college and new to the Pacific Northwest, stepped into the University of Oregon English department as assistant professor in 1901.

Through the years that were to follow and until his death a short time ago that professor, with his love of literature and fondness for athletics, was to win the admiration and respect of innumerable students and friends of the University.

He was Herbert Crombie Howe. "Prof Howe," as he was known to the students, was one of the oldest members of the University faculty. When he came to Oregon in 1901 there were two buildings where now there are 39, and Eugene was a small farming town. In his own words, "the streets were always either mud or dust and one counted all the fifth-grade children who came up to the University for an occasional music lesson in order to bring the enrollment up to around 200."

WATCHED 40 CLASSES

Included in the 40 graduating classes he watched leave the University were many who are now members of the faculty.

In 1903, just two years after he came to the campus, Professor Howe was appointed head of the English literature department, a position which he held until 1921 when he was made head of the English department. He remained in this position until 1925. He again served as head of the department from 1935 to 1937 and was acting dean of the College of Arts and Letters in 1936 and 1937.

Considered somewhat of a radical at first because he introduced the young to the works of the now immortal Ibsen and the still mortal Shaw, Professor Howe later was ranked as a conservative because he disliked some of the modern realistic writing.

Howe was perhaps best known for his love of athletics and athletic ability. He was Oregon's number one football, baseball, and basketball fan. In 1912 he was the University's faculty representative in the Northwest Athletic conference. When the Pacific Coast conference was organized in 1915 he continued representing the school and never missed a session until 1940.

For three decades "Herbie" Howe had personal contact with nearly every coach and athletic manager on the coast. As an ardent sports fan he became the personal friend and adviser of most of the "greats" in Oregon athletics.

Football was his first love and he never missed a single scrimmage session in 15

OPTIME

I cannot, Wordsworth, dwell like thee,
apart,
By lonely mountain and by mountain lake,
Nor from the morning and the evening take
Their tranquil benison upon my heart;
With toiling humankind, with truck and cart
And hurrying feet my meal I make,
And do my task and know the common ache
Of limbs outwearied in the world's great mart.
Yet poesy hath dropped her dew on me
And let me know her peace; amidst the din
Of evening hours when by my lamp I read
And let the muse my quiet footsteps lead
By pleasant paths and scenes that know not sin,
I thank my God, nor would my burden flee.

—Herbert Crombie Howe

Athletic-minded English professor, Herbert Crombie Howe, whose death in July caused many to pause and comment.

years. This, in addition to attending every varsity game played in Eugene, Corvallis, and Portland.

Today the University baseball diamond bears the name "Howe Field" in honor of the man who never missed an opening game in all his years at Oregon.

In the classroom Prof Howe made friends as readily as in the sports world. His classes were always packed. The wit and philosophy which he brought to the classroom added much to what might otherwise have been a course in "dusty literature."

For many years wherever Oregon grads have gotten together there have been stories of how Prof Howe has called some student into his dimly lit office in Villard Hall to take a make-up quiz on the "Faerie Queen" or "Paradise Lost" and has ended up by getting into a spirited discussion of the latest Webfoot offense play.

In spite of his many duties as athletic representative and teacher Herbert Howe found time to do considerable research and writing in his field. He authored a volume of poems, "Rags and Tatters," published in 1897, and contributed many articles and poems to national periodicals.

Teacher, scholar, author, and athletic fan, Prof Howe perhaps came closer to having an all-around interest in the University than any other faculty member. In the words of Robert C. Hall, "He came to the campus when the school was small, yet never lost sight of the whole development of the institution during his many years of service."

In one of his best known poems, "Our Father the Machine," Howe once wrote:

Men do not grow, or mellow; some wear out,
Some rust, and some break down; but most are simply
Soon superseded by a newer model.

Herbert Howe was one man who will never be superseded by a newer model.

Bomb Takes Toll

From Cairo, Egypt, recently report came that Dr. and Mrs. Robert Grieve, medical missionaries, were killed during an Italian bombing attack on the Doro, Sudan province in the Upper Nile, August 23.

Dr. Robert Chester Grieve was graduated from Oregon with a B.S. in '35 and an M.D. in '38. A year ago July the Spokane couple left for the Anglo Egyptian Sudan part of Africa planning on spending three and a half years there as medical missionaries. They were married June, 1936. Before their departure for Africa, Dr. Grieve studied tropical diseases in London.

Rae Leaves NEA

Arne G. Rae, '22, recently resigned executive secretary of the National Editorial association, has joined the Illinois journalism school faculty as associate professor. He is teaching courses in newspaper publishing and business problems.

Rae was on the School of Journalism faculty at Oregon for 11 years before going east two years ago. During this same time he was also field manager for the Oregon Newspaper Publishers' association. The Illinois professor is a member of Delta Upsilon.

Oregon's eighth annual rally at Jantzen Beach, Portland, took place August 20. Responsible for its great success is this committee of Mothers, Dads, Alumni and students. From left, Alumni Secretary Elmer Fansett, Student Ed Hoyt, Dad Joseph Riesch, Students Majeanne Glover and Jack McCliment, Mother Mrs. C. H. McGill, Student George Mackin, Alumnus Don McCormick, Mother Mrs. Herbert M. Clark, Student Chairman Lloyd Sullivan, Alumna Mary McCracken and Student Herbert Barber. Inset shows Dad Dr. George M. Hoffman, three-year veteran on picnic committee.

Rally Success

Nearly 4000 Oregon Alumni, prospective students, Mothers, Dads and undergraduates attended the eighth Jantzen Beach rally August 20. Chairmanned by Lloyd Sullivan, a senior, the event produced a get-together for innumerable graduates who had not met since their University days.

On the program at the lagoon were such celebrities as Sigurd Nilssen, Metropolitan Opera star and recent addition to the University faculty, Coaches "Tex" Oliver and "Hobby" Hobson, John MacGregor, student body president in 1923, Dean Vincent, president of the Portland Dads, Bert Brown Barker, vice-president of the University, and Carol Lofner, orchestra leader.

With Chairman Sullivan on the committee were Mrs. Herbert M. Clark, president of the State Mothers, Mrs. C. H. McGill, president of the Portland Mothers, Miss Mary McCracken and President Don McCormick of the Portland Alumni, Joseph Riesch, president of the State Dads, Dr. George M. Hoffman of the Portland Dads, and Alumni Secretary Elmer Fansett. Undergraduates on the committee were Herbert Barber, George Mackin, Majeanne Glover, Ed Hoyt, Jack McCliment, and Jim Davidson.

Colonel Murphy Dies

Colonel E. V. D. Murphy, 65, head of the Military Science department at Oregon from 1934 to 1938, died last June after a short illness in his Eugene home.

The army officer was in the service forty years, being active in the Spanish-American and with the A. E. F. in the first World War. He retired after his tour of duty with the University two years ago. He is survived by his wife, four daughters and eight sons in the immediate family. Five of the sons are alumni of the University: Ernest, Jr., ex-'38; Allen H., '40; Charles, ex-'39; Arthur G., '40; and Eugene, ex-'43.

Advertising Man Elected

Don Belding, '19, vice-president of Lord and Thomas in Los Angeles, was elected president of the Pacific Advertising Clubs association at the annual convention of West Coast advertising men held early in July at Vancouver, B. C. His election came as recognition of his outstanding achievements in the field of advertising, and the fact that he has become one of the Coast's most aggressive opponents of the subversive groups that have as their aim the discrediting of advertising as a step toward government control of business.

TRACK MAN

Belding majored in journalism and commerce while at the University, and will be remembered as a miler and two miler on the track squad. He left school to serve with the heavy artillery in France and returned to complete his credits for graduation, finishing his last year's work in four months. He was an expert telegrapher and used this aptitude to help put himself through school. Upon graduation he was appointed manager of the Western Union office at Klamath Falls, then the second largest office in the state.

After two years with the Western Union he responded to the call of journalism and purchased and published the old Klamath Record, a weekly. He later turned it into a daily and when his health failed sold the paper to the Klamath Falls Herald. It took one year at the Veterans' hospital, Camp Kearny, California, to put him back on his feet. He headed for Los Angeles and the office of Lord & Thomas when the medics pronounced him fit again. The only job open was that of office boy and he took it. That was in 1924.

A rare capacity for hard work, coupled with native drive and a flare for writing selling copy won him a top spot in the agency. In recent years he has personally directed the advertising of many of the agency's leading accounts in Southern California. When Don Francisco was elected president of Lord & Thomas in 1938, and transferred from the Los Angeles office to New York, Belding was selected as his successor.

When the new head of the Pacific ad group wants to get out from under pressure he heads for the open sea in his workman's yacht, a 32-foot schooner.

All Grads Pass Bar

Scoring a hundred per cent in July examinations, all of Oregon's Law School graduates of June '40 are now fully accredited members of the state bar, according to Dean Wayne L. Morse. The record is impressive since more than one-third of the 120 examined by the state failed.

Graduates of this year who passed include Jason S. Bailey, George H. Corey, Darrel L. Johnson, William F. Lubersky, Eugene R. Neill, David A. Silver, Donald R. Marshall, Robert H. Goodwin, Lewis F. Hoffman, William Huey, George J. Tichy, Kenneth M. Abraham, Denton G. Burdick, W. Austin Dunn, Darrell M. Miller, Betty L. Brown, and Sheldon Parks. William Burpee and Moon Chan, '39 graduates, also passed.

Others successful were Franklin G. Breuer, '38; Bartlett F. Cole, Jr., ex-'38; Howard N. Dietrich, '35; Charles V. Elliott, ex-'31; Wesley A. Franklin, ex-'37; Joseph M. Devers, '38; Duncan L. McKay, ex-'30; and Maynard J. Wilson, ex-'37.

1931 president of Oregon Alumni in Los Angeles, Don Belding, '19, recently assumed same title for Pacific Advertising Clubs association. Here he relaxes on his 32-foot schooner.

New Men Dominate Squad Says Athletic News Dir

Oregon likes Tex Oliver.

That fact was made very evident this summer when the University of Oregon Athletic Board extended the contract of the popular originator of the "Oliver Twist" brand of football until 1942.

A new two-year contract was signed to take effect when Oliver's original three-year contract expires following the 1940 campaign.

The genial, soft-spoken Texan came to Oregon in the spring of 1938 and after two seasons as head coach of the Webfoots has gained the greatest respect in Pacific coast conference circles for his able coaching ability. After an inaugural season resulting in three victories and four setbacks in conference play, Oliver last year piloted the Webfoots back into the first division of the coast conference standings for the first time in six years.

FROM ARIZONA

Oliver came to Oregon from the University of Arizona, where his teams won 32 and lost only 11 games in five years between 1933 and 1937. Prior to his Arizona post, Oliver coached at San Diego and Santa Ana high schools. In both cities his team where outstanding.

Oliver's own football career began at West Point, following service overseas in World War I. After leaving West Point Oliver attended both Stanford and Southern California, gaining a Phi Beta Kappa key and a B.A. degree at U.S.C. in 1930.

The "Oliver Twist" football system is distinctly Oliver's own and has fast become recognized as one of the most colorful and effective on the coast. After the inaugural 1938 season, Oliver's coaching ability really came to the fore in 1939. The Webfoots won three, lost three and tied one in conference play and proved one of the most interesting and crowd-pleasing elvens in Oregon history.

Director of Athletic News Bureau Bruce Hamby, ex-'34, interprets Oregon's 1940 pre-season plans in football on these two pages.

Offensively, Oregon ranked third among conference teams in all-around ability and second on the coast and eighth in the entire nation in forward passing. Constant attempts to spring runners for long gains, rather than relying on series of short thrusts, and a penchant for pulling the unexpected were features of the Oregon attack. Defensively, the Webfoots ranked second only to U.S.C. in all-around defensive strength.

THREE ASSISTANTS

Vaughn Corley, another southerner, will start his second season as line coach. Corley came to Oregon from New Mexico State, where he was assistant coach for six years until 1938.

Corley was a member of the first freshman class at Texas Tech in 1925 and played four years of football and track. Following his graduation in 1929, he went to Las Cruces, New Mexico, high school. His second year at Las Cruces resulted in a state championship.

Mike Mikulak, former all-American fullback at Oregon and later an all-American professional star with the Chicago Cardinals, will open his fourth season as Oregon's backfield coach. Mike played at Oregon from 1930 to '33 and turned coach in '37 after three years of professional play.

Veteran of the Oregon coaching staff is "Honest John" Warren, portly freshman mentor. Warren also is a former Oregon star, played tackle from 1926 to 1928. After his graduation in 1928 he went to Astoria high school, where he enjoyed brilliant success in all sports. He has coached freshman football, basketball and baseball at Oregon since 1936.

Head Football Coach G. A. "Tex" Oliver added this summer to his contract, the softest for three more seasons. An able after-dinner out anecdotes acquired in 17 years for Bruce Hamby, ex-'34 as Football Bounces to Life

Many new faces and new personalities will be presented in the University of Oregon's 1940 coast conference football lineup.

With only two regulars back from his 1939 lineup, Coach Tex Oliver devoted a busy spring practice to rebuilding from a promising but inexperienced squad of sophomores and holdover reserves.

At the conclusion of the spring work, Oliver came up with a light but extremely mobile unit which in the final spring exhibition contest appeared well fitted to perform capably the colorful and wide-open "Oliver Twist" brand of football.

Jim Stuart, giant red-head who was a unanimous choice of all-Coast tackle last fall, and Hymie Harris, left end, the sole returning starters, will form the nucleus of the Webfoots' 1940 forward wall. Stuart is expected to be one of the West's outstanding linemen again this season and Northwest grid fans already are boosting him for all-American ranking.

STARTING LINEUP

Of the above seven players only Stuart and Ashcom, the probable starting tackle combination, weigh over the 200-pound mark. All seven men, however, are fast and agile and should provide a sturdy defensive unit and quick-moving offensive strength.

John "Buck" Berry, dynamic triple-threatener who starred at right half last fall, will pace the Webfoot offense from a left halfback position this season. Berry, a slashing runner and fine passer and kicker, will be understudied by three first-year men, all untried in conference competition—Tommy Roblin, Frank Boyd and Hal Johnson. Larry Monroy, left halfback hope, has decided to remain out of school this year due to a summer injury from baseball.

Teamed with Berry in the backfield unit are three two-year veterans—Chet Haliski, an alternate for two seasons, quarterback; Leonard Isberg, versatile kicking and passing star with experience at both right and left halfback, right half, and Marshall "Bull" Stenstrom, 202-pound bonecrusher, fullback.

STUBBORN DEFENSE

Other backfield talent due to see action in the coming campaign includes George "Peewee" Bujan and Roy Ell, sophomore quarterbacks; Don Mabee and Roy Dyer, both lettermen, and Curtis "Curly" Mecham, right halfbacks, and Bill Rach (also considering naval reserve service), a 1938 letter winner, and Stuart "Butch" Nelson and Bob Taylor, sophomores, at fullback.

Defensively, Oregon should prove as stubborn as the 1939 team, which ranked second only to Southern California's Rose Bowl champions in all-around defensive performance among conference teams.* Kicking should be better with Berry, Isberg, Mecham and Roblin all consistent punters.

Oregon's colorful and deceptive offensive play, the "Oliver Twist" brand, is well-known to western grid fans. In 1939 the Webfoots ranked third among coast conference teams in all-around offensive strength and second on the coast and eighth in the entire nation in forward passing.*

With a promising string of fleet, strong-armed backs, Oliver spent a major portion of spring practice perfecting a well-balanced running and passing attack—with emphasis placed on doing the unexpected.

Oregon opens its nine-game schedule against the San Diego Marines at Eugene on September 27. Eight games against major opponents follow on nine week-ends—against Stanford, Washington, Southern California, Washington State, Montana, U. C. L. A., California and Oregon State.

* Rankings taken from 1939 summary of the American Football Statistical bureau.

History of the University of Oregon

BY DR. HENRY D. SHELDON

This is the story of a whole host of Mr. Chips. A series of epochal struggles. You who think you know your University will be amazed, amused and informed, when you have read this "human document."

It is literally a panorama of "human vignettes." The chapter on Colonel John Leader and the war years of 1917 and 18, is itself worth the price of this unusual book.

And WHO, we ask, is better qualified to write about the school we love so dearly, than our own revered Dr. Henry (Shelly) Sheldon? From the turn of the century Dr. Sheldon has been a moving and dynamic spirit behind the scenes, as well as in the class room. He has served under five college presidents, has seen the student body grow from four hundred to nearly four thousand. He has known personally nearly all the men and women who contributed most generously to the promulgation of learning and culture. His story of the University is something far more than a history; it is the stirring saga of pioneer folk creating for themselves and posterity a shrine, dedicated to a magnificent idea—"mens agat at molem."
