DONALD BYRNE MEMORIAL

Three IM Norms Earned at Donald Byrne Memorial Penn State IM Tournament

by Jerome Bibuld, International Arbiter

The Donald Byrne Memorial-Penn State IM Tournament was held in the HUB-Robeson Center on the university's campus from 20 through 26 February. A FIDE Cat. IV event. (the average FIDE rating was 2327.4), it was the first international title norm competition ever held at Penn State

Three players [Pennsylvanians Stanislav ("Stas") Kriventsov and Norman ("Pete") Rogers and FM Pascal Charbonneau (CAN)] earned IM title norms. In 30 years of conducting international tournaments, never have I seen three norms achieved in a round robin. I've never even seen two norms earned in a ten-player round robin.

This was a fighting tournament. Black won 58% of the decisive games. Not only that, 58% of the games were decisive. Almost all of the draws -- until the last couple of days, when the rankings and norm determinations had been sorted out -- were hard fought battles as well.

In the end, IM Luis Chiong (PHI, but living in Philadelphia) scored 7-2, to beat out Kriventsov and Rogers (6.5-2.5 each). Chiong won $500, while $400 was split between the two players who tied for second and third places. Charbonneau finished fourth, at 6-3. These four scored 26 of the 45 points available in the competition, which did not leave much for the other six players. In fact, the next score was 4-5, by IM Edward Formanek (a mathematics professor at PSU). He was followed by IM Oladapo Adu (NGR) and Mikhail Belorusov (RUS), at 3.5-5.5. FM Stephen Muhammad (Atlanta), at 3-6, came next, while Igor Schneider (upstate New York) and FM Ronald Simpson (State College) brought up the rear, with scores of 2.5-6.5.

I picked the brains of the players in the tournament and, therefore, am able to make the following comments concerning the winner and three norm achievers. While the considered chess judgments are not mine, responsibility for the words is.

IM Luis Chiong seemed to outclass most of his opponents, both strategically and tactically. "Pete" Rogers had a much better tournament than his play seemed to deserve. He won games mostly by exploiting serious errors of his opponents. FM "Stas" Kriventsov had a good tournament. His openings were better than those of most of the other players. He can play well in almost all types of positions, which also makes him more dangerous for lower rated players. Despite his IM norm - and, with it, the title - this probably was not a very good tournament for Charbonneau. He very well may be capable of a better performance.

I cannot conclude without acknowledging the joy this tournament brought me. Before it, I counted six of the players as friends. As a result of this tournament, I have four new friends in the players and one new friend in my Assistant arbiter and fellow organizer, Greg Vaserstein. I must thank Greg and Stas Kriventsov for their cooperation in the organization of the tournament. Ron Simpson was an amiable host, as were Stas and Greg, while I was a guest at State College.

US MASTERS 2002 by Bruce Leverett

Here are some impressions and games from the U.S. Masters, held in Chicago from Feb. 28 to March 3. The winners were Gregory Kaidanov, Alexander Onischuk, Daniel Fridman, Leonid Yudasin, and Alek Wojtkiewicz, with 5.5 of 7. Six people qualified for the 2002 U.S. Championship from this tournament, among them Stanislav Kriventsov of State College.

There is really nothing like this tournament on the U.S. calendar, for strength per square foot. There were only 101 participants, but the roster at the top was comparable to a National Open or World Open. The five winners were all Grandmasters, and at least ten other Grandmasters can be found in the crosstable.

Although I had never played in a U.S. Masters before, in a way I was returning after a long absence. I had played in the Midwest Masters tournaments four times from 1985 to 1989. I recognized the present U.S. Masters as a continuation of that bygone series, not least because it was organized by Jim and Helen Warren. Only the crosstable betrayed the passage of time. It was stronger, of course. In 1985, I had tied for first with two International Masters, Vince McCambridge and Igor Ivanov. Already in 1986, with the arrival of a carload or two of Grandmasters from New York, the tournament had become too strong for the likes of us three. But as I greeted the Warrens in 2002, I announced that I was hoping for lightning to strike again in the same place! (It didn't.)

I was also impressed by the contingent of old-timers. When I was starting out in chess, in the 1960's, the leading amateur players around the country included Viktors Pupols (Pacific Northwest), John Curdo (New England), Andrew Karklins (Illinois), and Curt Brasket (Minnesota). They were all at this tournament. This seemed to me like a rare conjunction of planets.

I met Alan Watson for the first time, though he has been producing bulletins for major tournaments for a number of years. I also learned something that chess database users have known for years about how tournament bulletins are produced. Watson does very little typing! He moves pieces around on a computer screen using a mouse, and lets the database software produce the score for him. Eureka! But no amount of computer power can enable Watson to read illegible scoresheets.

One of the flashiest games was Blatny-Goldin, from the third round:

I was particularly interested in Onischuk-Blatny, from the last round, not only because Onischuk played what looked like a daring gambit, but also because it was a must-win situation for both players; a draw would only have been good enough for a tie for 5th, and a much smaller prize. Onischuk's win put him in the tie for 1st. I am grateful to Alex Onischuk for both the game score and the light notes:

Ildar Ibragimov looked good for the first five rounds, but then lost this game to Daniel Fridman. Fridman's play was a model of calm and accuracy, getting the most from a position that seemed hopelessly drawn already on the seventh move:

Pennsylvania was represented by Kriventsov, IM Ed Formanek, and myself. Looking through the bulletins for Kriventsov's games, I thought that his three wins were not as interesting as this high-tension last-round draw with GM Yuri Shulman:

Formanek - Kreiman [D11]

US Masters, 2002 1.d4 d5 2.c4 c6 3.Nf3 Nf6 4.Qc2 g6 5.Bf4 Bf5 6.Qb3 Qb6 7.c5 Qxb3 8.axb3 Na6 Two rounds later, Formanek-Lein followed the same variation until this point, when Lein varied with 8 ... Nbd7. That game continued 9 Nc3 a6 10 b4 Rc8 11 h3 Bg7 12 Nd2 Ne4 13 Ncxe4 Bxe4 14 O-O-O Bf5 15 g4 Be6 16 e3 f5 17 Be2 O-O 18 Nb3 Ra8! 19.Na5 Ra7, and in this interesting position Formanek blundered with 20 Kd2? fxg4 21 hxg4 Bxd4. Was Lein's 8th move an improvement? Perhaps, but it doesn't solve the problem of defending Black's helpless queenside. 9.Nc3 Nh5 10.Bd2 Bg7 11.e3 Nc7 12.b4 a6 13.Ne5 Nf6 14.f3 Nd7 15.Nxd7 Bxd7 16.Bd3 e5 17.Ne2 exd4 18.Nxd4 Bxd4 Black confidently chops away, expecting that his "good knight" will handle White's "bad bishop". But it's not so simple.

How many times have you played the same opening, game after game, with little or no changes? Are you falling into the "boring" trap? Well, here is a game that is rather unconventional. This was game number 1, in a four game CC Lighting Match between myself and Mr. John Cave, of New York.

John Cave (1940) -Russell Black (2048) [B00] USCF 2000LM23, 2000.10.09

1.e4 Nc6 and Black takes a hypermodern approach. I had never played this opening, the Nimzowitsch Defense, but I was getting rather "bored" with my usual Pirc response. The idea here is that after White plays 2.d4, Black will strike immediately with 2...e5, sharper than the original 2...d5 which was played by Nimzowitsch himself. It creates an imbalance in pawn structure right off and leads to complex play. 2.d4 e5 and White has three responses, 3.dxe5, 3.d5 and 3.Nf3. Of these, 3.d5 gives White more of a fighting chance by driving Black's knight around. 3.dxe5 Nxe5 and White chooses the exchange variation which usually gives Black no problems. 4.Nf3, but 4.f4 is far more aggressive and is the way White should play this opening. 4.Nf3 allows Black to begin trading off pieces, which always helps out in the long run.
4...Nxf3+ brings White's queen out early with 5.Qxf3. The alternative of 5.gxf3 is playable, but has not proven better for White. 5.Qxf3 Qf6 (Diagram 1).

If White plays the queen exchange with 6.Oxf6, Black gets a comfortable game with 6...Nxf6 7.Bd3 d5 8.Nd2 Be6 9.exd5 Nxd5 10.a3 0-0-0 11.Ne4 h6 12.Bd2 f5 13.Nc3 g6 14.0-0-0 Bg7 15.Bc4 Nf4 16.Bxe6+ Nxe6 17.Ne2 =, or on 7.Nc3 Bb4 8.Bd2 0-0 9.f3 d6 10.Nb5 Bxd2+ 11.Kxd2 Ne8 12.a4 Be6 13.a5 a6 14.Nd4 c5 15.Ne2 d5 16.exd5 Bxd5. The game continued with 6.Qg3 Bb4+. It's been said, "...never play a cheap check with no follow up action." Here is an exception I think. Notice that White has a problem with this check. If he plays 7.Bd2 then Black plays 7...Bxd2+ forcing White to give up castling. If White plays 7.Nd2, he blocks in his bishop. The only other option, 7.c3 does a fine job of blocking the check, but takes away the c3 square from the b2 knight. 7.c3 Bd6 attacking the queen. 8.Qg5, not the normal move here which is 8.f4 with 8...Qg6 9.Bd3 or 9.Qf3 (sharper). I want to point out that Black should not be the one to make the exchange as it helps White develop the bishop on c1. Rather, Black would like White to make the trade which helps Black develop his g8 knight. Never capture your opponent's piece if it helps him develop another. That's like giving him a way to beat you. 8...h6 which puts the pressure on White to trade or back down. 9.Oxf6 Nxf6 10.f3 0-0 11.Be3 Be5 12.Nd2 d5 attacking the center (Diagram 2).

13.Bd3 and White misses the better move of 13.f4 with 13...Ng4 14.Bc5 Bd6 15.Bxd6 cxd6 16.h3 Nf6 17.exd5 Nxd5 18.g3 Bd7 which does not look so good for Black. 13...Rd8 14.0-0-0 and White sets up the classic struggle of opposite kings. 14...Be6 15.Kb1 d4 16.cxd4 Bxd4 17.Bxd4 Rxd4 18.Bc2 Rad8. Doubling rooks is always a good thing (Diagram 3). The position is about even but the pawn structure will tell the story in a few moves.

19.Nb3 Rxd1+ 20.Rxd1 Rxd1+ 21.Bxd1. Here White offered me a draw. If you were to look at the board and think that the position is equal just because the material is even and take the draw, you would be making a big mistake. Black has a won endgame. Look at the position (Diagram 4) with all the remaining pieces removed, leaving just the kings and pawns. Black wins by the following line: 1.Kc2 Ke7 2.Kd3 Kd6 3.Kd4 c5+ 4.Kc4 Kc6 5.a4 b6 6.h4 g6 7.g4 g5 8.h5 (8.hxg5 hxg5) 8...f6 9.b3 a6 10.Kd3 b5 11.axb5+ axb5 12.f4 gxf4 13.e5 Kd5 14.exf6 Ke6 15.Ke4 c4 16.bxc4 b4. Actually, it didn't matter who moved first. This type of endgame pawn structure is typically found (colors reversed) in the Colle opening. Outside of single king/pawn endgames, this is the only endgame pawn structure that I've had to learn in over 30 years of play. Why? Because once I get this structure, I only need to trade off even and I have a won game in my hands. Even a GM can't win with White (Diagram 4). Novice players (and even experienced ones), should learn to create this structure during their games and then play to trade off even. It's not flashy, or exciting, just good solid chess and it gives you a great advantage over higher rated players knowing that this is true.

Now back to the actual position (Diagram 5). The question is, can I trade off the remaining pieces and go into the known winning endgame? Another consideration is, if only two pieces are traded, which would I rather have in an endgame? The logical choice is to allow my bishop to be traded for his knight. That leaves me with a knight which can go to both colors vs. a bishop which must stay on the light squares. 21...b6 So, why not get the trade immediately with 21...Bxb2? Because it would improve the position of White's bishop after 22.Bxb3. Again, don't help your opponent improve his position! 22.Nd4 and here comes the trade I'm looking for... 22...c5 23.Nxe6 fxe6 and now I just have to lock up the position by placing my pawns on the dark squares. 24.Bb3 Kf7 25.Kc2 g5 26.Kd3 Nd7 27.Bc4 Ne5+. It would be a big mistake for Black to capture the bishop as it allows the White king access to c4. 28.Kc3 h5 29.h3 Kf6 30.b3 Nc6, the knight is going for the outpost square on d4 which is now a key square in this game. 31.a3 a5 32.Bb5 Nd4 33.Be8 h4 (Diagram 6). Black has achieved his objectives. The pawns are on dark squares, safe from the White bishop and the Black knight on d4 is in an attacking position. The game then took a tragic turn with 34.Kd3??. White blunders badly. White had to try 34.Kc4 Ke7 35.Bg6 Kd6 37.Kb5 Kc7 38.a4 e5 to hold on a little longer. Now 34...Nxb3, and White resigned. White can no longer hope to hold out against Black's 3-to-1 pawn advantage on the queenside. 0-1

This was a new opening for me at the time. I had very little reference material to draw from during the game, but since then I have put together a nice database of games. This opening appeals to me because of the unique tactical features inherent in the positions. I never would have know that had I not tried it. It has become part of my opening repertoire and I play it from time to time when I need a break from the "usual" stuff.

Try some new openings from time to time, spice up your play a little. Also, you'll learn a lot. Good luck with your own discoveries.

IM Chiong wins Philadelphia Championship

With only 21 paid entries and $1300 in guaranteed prizes ($2600 total, half guaranteed), 12 of the 21 entries took home cash prizes plus one silver cup, at the 2002 Philadelphia Championship, a USCF Grand Prix event held May 18-19 at the University of Pennsylvania.

IM Luis Chiong beat FM Boris Baczynskynj in the final round to take clear first with 4.5/5, unseating NM Elvin Wilson as the area champion. Four players tied for 2nd with 3.5-1.5: NM Rodion Rubenchek, FM Pete Rogers, Kurt Schneider, and Alex Graeffe. Kurt edged out Alex on tiebreak to take the silver cup for Top Junior as they shared Top U2200 and Top U2000.

Baczynskyj took the 2nd U2400 prize. Joining him at 3-2 were Larry Pugh (2nd U2000), Mark Chanel, and Ross Berkowitz. Mark and Ross shared 1st-2nd U1800. Tying for 2nd U2000 were Joe Mucerino Jr., Don Quiring, and Alisa Melekhina.

Before the 3rd round there was a brief ceremony honoring the Modern Chess Hall of Fame. Accepting their certificates were Boris Bacynskyj, Jim Politowski, Steve Shutt, Pete Rogers, and Dan Heisman.

Dan Heisman was the TD. The crosstable for the tournament can be found at http://mywebpages.comcast.net/danheisman/chess.htm

It is hoped that next year's tournament will also be at U of Penn, likely in late March or early April.

The Philadelphia Scholastic Championship will be Nov 3 at the JCC in Wynnewood, at City Line and Haverford Rd. -Adapted from a press release by Dan Heisman

DOS HERMANAS by Alex Dunne

Dos Hermanas -- the tournament that Kramnik, Kasparov, Anand and others play in, GM Heaven (or hell) -- this year the Internet offered thousands of chess players all over the globe a chance to qualify for a position at Dos Hermanas. Friday afternoon I sat at my computer prepared to play a nine round online Swiss. There were 334 players in my section. The time limit was fast: 8 minutes with a 2 second increment; the eventual winner was V. Popov of Russia with 8 1/2-1/2. My best game was the following against Cristhian Montero of Chile. Oh yes, I finished at 6-2 (+5 = 2 -2) and had a lot of fun!

CHESS IN CENTURIES PAST by Ross Nickel

"During play your analytical work is being continually tested against your critically-minded opponents, but in home analysis it is very easy to be unobjective. To fight this tendency, and to get away from poor analysis, it is useful to publish your individual analytical work. Then you are subject to objective criticism."-M. Botvinnik

John Lindsay McCutcheon (1858-1905) lived most of his life in Pittsburgh, PA. The variation in the French Defense 1.e4 e6 2.d4 d5 3.Nc3 Nf6 4.Bg5 Bb4 bears his name. One of his earliest successes with that variation, in a simultaneous display against Wilhelm Steinitz, was published in an article by John S. Book Reviews by Dr. Ira Lee Riddle Everyman Press (Globe-Pequot Press, P. O. Box 480; 246 Goose Lane; Guilford CT 06437; 800-962-0973) has come out with several new books, and they look pretty good. Two of them are in a series, with a third due out anytime now. mastering the middlegame by IM Angus Dunnington ($19.95) covers four main themes: Attacking the King, Defense, Opening Lines, and Using Pawns and Pieces. Diagrams are plentiful and the text is easy to read. Examples are drawn from relatively current games (mostly mid-1990s).

mastering the endgame by GM Glenn Flear ($19.95) is the other book just published. Flear explains the strategic ideas behind all important endgames. He also provides many exercises to keep the ideas flowing. As with the prior book, there is too much to absorb at one sitting. I was impressed with the sections on Rooks, but was overwhelmed when I first went through it. These two books will be for the more serious student, or for someone who wants to learn about a certain type of situation. Both are easy to read and the layout provides a lot of white space. Not only is this good for the eyes, but it leaves space for writing notes.

IM Bryon Jacobs provides an updating to the french classical ($19.95), along with explanations of the basic elements. This opening is 1 e4 e6 2 d4 d5 3 Nc3 Nf6. Games are current to 2000, including several by Kasparov and Anand. This is a detailed study, for the advanced player more than the casual one.

Nimzo-Larsen attack is by IM Bryon Jacobs and Jonathan Tait ($19.95). This one is written somewhat towards the middle-level players, as well as for the advanced ones. By opening 1 b3, Black will often be at a disadvantage, not being too sure what to respond. Nine major lines are discussed at analyzed. Games from 1927 through 2000 are used, including several played by computers! This is a good book, although the layout left a little bit to be desired.

WANTED: MASOCHISTS by Dr. Ira Lee Riddle

There is a nice custom, to which I have sometimes been a part myself, that the best way to get someone to become an officer is to wait until they are not present at a meeting and then to nominate and elect them on the spot. I trust this will not be happening this year at our annual business meeting in State College. In fact, I am praying that this will not be the case, as there is a good chance I will not be there myself!

In case you're not sure where this is leading, I do not intend to continue as PSCF President after our business meetings in August. I do not intend to exit the organization in any sense of the matter, but I just do not have the time, temperament, time, and drive to continue. I've been president for 24 years, which is longer than some senators have served in D.C.! We are on our fourth scholastic coordinator, second treasurer, several vice presidents, and still the first secretary who was willing to trust me when I started in 1978. In fact, Bobby Dudley even nominated me for the position of president (Yes, I was absent from that meeting!), and agreed to become secretary so that the western part of the Commonwealth would have representation. He is still with us as of this writing.

In 1978, when I took over from Rick Jones (I met his wife in April while judging the Del Val Science Fairs), there were 6 members on the mailing list, and one of these was a life member. We now have over 700 members, and our scholastic events have grown from Fairmount Park's hall to Waynesboro and Chambersburg H.S. to Shippensburg Univ to Lebanon Valley College to Bloomsburg (with one side trip to East Stroudsburg Univ).

The organization is in good shape, both numerically and financially. I trust the next set of officers will keep it that way. It will take some time to transfer monies around to the new officers, but that will be done as quickly as possible. I will continue running the current postal tournaments if desired.

On a personal note, I may finally get enough time to do some reading and watching of DVDs. I can recommend a new book, "Change of Heart," very enthusiastically! The protagonist reminds me of 007, but with a heart and a very good sense of responsibility. Find it and enjoy it.

Hope to see you at some of my tournaments. Ira Lee Riddle

PSCF STATE TOURNAMENT RESCHEDULED!

Look for an announcement of the new location and dates in the next Pennswoodpusher.

Watch for the PSCF State Junior Championships & PA State Bughouse Championship to be held in Pittsburgh this Fall.

by John Caliguire, PSCF Postal Champion

Welcome postal and e-mail chessplayers. This is a column dedicated to anything to do with postal and e-mail chess. I want to hear from all of you postal/e-mail players. You tell me what you would like to see as this is our column and I need your input! Be it an opening line, middle or endgame discussions ,your favorite games etc .Let me know by writing or e-mailing me at John Caliguire 110 N. Main St. Punxsutawney, Pa. 15767-1216 or jcaliguire@penn.com . I look forward to hearing from all of you.

I start it off by giving you a game of mine. I'm using it as a tribute to a great player who has passed on, Edward Laird. It's a see-saw slugfest using a little footnote in a subline of the Two Knights Defense. White looks like he is going to run Black over but a few indifferent moves and the safe White king end up more exposed than his opponent's. The game was played in the Correspondence Chess League of America's 15th Championship where I started out ranked 9th of the 11 players and was lucky enough to tie for 2nd. 10-1-1999 to 5-12-2000.

Edward H. Laird Jr.(2279) - John Caliguire (2135) [C55] CCLA Championship

1.e4 e5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 Starts out a Scotch. exd4 4.Bc4 A gambit! Nf6 It's prudent to decline as we are already behind in development! 5.e5 Modern line of the 2 Kt's 5.c3 is an aggressive alternative. ...Ne4 There are two more popular moves here ...d5 and ... Ng4 but the path is less known here. My favorite kind of trails! 6.Qe2 Another side line. The mainline is Bd5. ...Nc5 7.0-0 We are now in new territory. I wanted to try the suggestion by Estrin here which went 7.Ng5 Ne6 8.f4 and try 8..Nxg5 9.fxg5 Be7 10.0-0 0-0 11.h4 d6, and its a complicated position with white attacking, but I like black's sound position with the extra pawn! instead of following the only example I could find -Mazurenko-Usov corr 1959/60 8..Be7 9.Nxf7 Kxf7 10.f5 Rf8 11.fxe5+ dxe 12.Qh5+ Kg8 13.Bd3 g6 14.Bxg6 hxg6 15.Qxg6+ Kh8 16.Qh5+ Kg8 17.Bh6 and White has the better of it. ...Be7 8.Rd1 During this stage I felt like I was about to get washed away in the coming storm! d5 Must get elbow room. 9.exd6 Qxd6 10.b4?! 10.c3! is stronger.

Things are getting very uncoordinated. Be4 19.Ng5 Bxg2! 20.Kxg2 h6 21.h4 hxg5 Amazing how the roles have reversed. Now it is White's king on the run.

June 2002

22.hxg5 Rd5! 23.Rh1 Rxg5+ 24.Qxg5 Bxg5 25.Rxh8+ Kd7 26.Bxg5 Qxg5+ 27.Kf3 Qd2 Weak spots all over: c3,b2and f2. Major material loss can't be stopped. 28.Rf1 Ne1+! 0–1 Thank you Ed, and goodbye.

Now I want to hear from the rest of you! (So do we! -Editor)
