Dear Colorado State University Supporters,

In recent years, Colorado State University research funding and private giving have reached record levels – a testament to the confidence that individuals and both public and private entities have in our University. Today, Colorado State is in sound shape academically, competitively, and financially, and its reputation as a top-tier research institution continues to climb. Even with the economic difficulties now facing our state and nation, we are confident that Colorado State's careful and conservative management will allow us to navigate successfully through these challenging times.

Your support continues to help elevate Colorado State toward excellence. Through the improvement of facilities, enhanced support for hiring and retaining top faculty, and a greater base of scholarships for our students, Colorado State can build on the significant progress it has made over the last two decades and continue to increase its value to Colorado, the nation, and the students we serve.

We hope you share our confidence in Colorado State and our pride in its tradition of hands-on education; research that deepens our understanding of the world, in all its dimensions; and outreach focused on sustaining and improving the human condition.

Thank you for your support!

Dr. Anthony A. Frank
Interim President

Dear Friends,

With your generous support, Colorado State University students and faculty put themselves at the forefront with a spirit of service and a passion for innovation.

The 2007-2008 fiscal year marked the second highest fundraising total in our 138-year history – $79.5 million. This remarkable milestone reflects a 51-percent increase over the previous fiscal year and an $11.69 return for every dollar invested. Our gifts have allowed Colorado State to continue to fulfill our timeless land-grant mission of educating students of character and accomplishment and producing relevant, cutting-edge research and outreach.

In difficult economic times, private support becomes even more critical. However, what remains constant, is the Colorado State family of friends and alumni who care about one another, and those less fortunate. As we face a very uncertain 2009, our optimism remains strong because of who we are as a community that together, creates tomorrow's solutions for the problems we face today.

This annual report reflects your selfless support of and confidence in Colorado State University. On behalf of all our faculty, students, and staff, thank you for all you do for Colorado State University. Please know that your gift given today makes it possible for Colorado State to make a lasting difference in peoples' lives; today and in the future.

With all best wishes and deepest gratitude,

Joyce Berry
Vice President of Advancement and Strategic Initiatives

“I will be forever thankful for the technology and incredible doctors at Colorado State. They bring hope, provide exceptional care, and find cures. I support Colorado State, for I believe that the knowledge we gain from animals relates to humans as well. In the end, we all benefit.”

– Keri Ann Prewitt

However, this support is included in the total numbers.

Supporter History

Private Support History

“When I came to CSU, I was typical of a first-generation university student – I was surprised that there were so many opportunities outside the classroom available to me. One example is the research I’ve done on suicide prevention and on breast cancer screening. My coursework makes more sense because I’ve had plenty of opportunities to use what I’m learning in the real world.”

The First Generation Scholarship Program allows Ava Carey to make school, not finances, her top priority.

“For me, the Morgan Chair is enabling new collaborative research, including a project on the history of livestock and grazing in the national parks. The endowed chair funds research-related travel and helps support our graduate students and connect them to vitally important internships.

The Morgan Chair also helps support my work to build a solid foundation for the Center for Public History and Archaeology, a center that I hope will serve a public purpose well into the future.”

Mark Fiege, associate professor of history, was named the William E. Morgan Chair for his outstanding teaching, scholarship, and outreach in environmental history.

“Our faculty has made significant contributions in the fight against diabetes, T-cell leukemia, Alzheimer’s disease, and cancer. To continue to make new discoveries in understanding these and other life-threatening disorders, it is essential that we expand our funding base. Additional funding will enable us to attract and retain top educators and researchers and to support their critical work.”

Colorado State University Foundation Investment and Distribution Policy Fiscal Year 2007-2008

Colorado State University Foundation (the “Foundation”), a not-for-profit corporation, was incorporated in 1970 for the following purposes: (a) to assist in the promotion, development, and enhancement of the facilities and educational programs and opportunities of faculty, students, and alumni of Colorado State University and (b) to receive, manage, and invest contributions, gifts, and bequests and apply the principal or income generated therefrom exclusively for charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes which will directly or indirectly aid and benefit Colorado State University. Colorado State University Foundation is recognized as a 501(c)(3) tax-exempt organization under the Internal Revenue Code. The Foundation is legally separate from Colorado State University.

Investment Objectives

The overall goal of the Foundation is to enhance the purchasing power of the University’s endowment while achieving the maximum total return consistent with the preservation of the principal. The Foundation’s Board of Directors has the fiduciary responsibility for the management and investment of all charitable gifts for Colorado State University. The investment objectives of the Foundation are designed to respond to changes in the economic environment, philosophy of the University and Foundation, and market conditions.

The current investment objectives of the Foundation are:

Quality. Investments in a wide range of assets are encouraged. A major portion of the portfolio consists of recognized high-grade investments.

Performance. The performance of the portfolio (and investment managers) over time, is expected to compare favorably with market indices as well as rank high in comparison with similar portfolios.

Liquidity. Adequate provision is made in the invested funds of the Foundation to provide for anticipated withdrawals.

Diversification. Allocation of assets shall be achieved through prudent diversification of asset classes.

Asset Allocation. Assets are allocated to generate the highest possible returns while preserving the principal.

Allocations are:

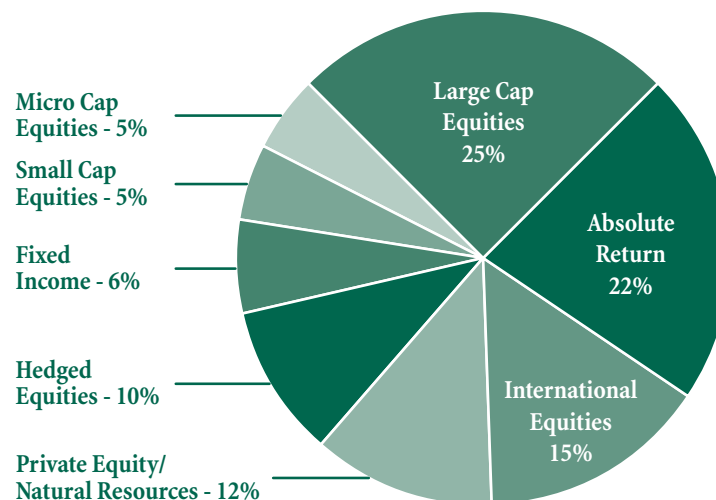

- Large Cap Equities25%
- Small Cap Equities5%
- Micro Cap Equities5%
- International Equities15%
- Fixed Income6%
- Hedged Equities10%
- Absolute Return22%
- Private Equity/Natural Resources ...12%

The Foundation’s Board of Directors meets regularly to review earnings performance. The portfolio and associated payouts may be modified to reflect market conditions.

Giving to Colorado State University

Private support provides the opportunity for Colorado State to attract and retain outstanding faculty members who will educate the future leaders of our state and nation. Private gifts have enhanced Colorado State's teaching and research facilities. Gifts-in-kind of equipment and computers are used in laboratories and classrooms across campus. Charitable donations have funded research opportunities to make the discoveries of tomorrow.

Outright Gifts

Cash Gifts

The most popular way of giving is a cash contribution in the form of currency, money order, bank draft, or check made payable to the Colorado State University Foundation. In most cases your gift is tax-deductible.

Gifts of Securities

Gifts of appreciated securities may be one of the most tax-wise ways to make a substantial contribution to Colorado State University.

There is a double tax benefit from such a gift. The full value of the securities is usually deductible and you don't have to pay capital gains taxes on the increase in value. You may give and deduct appreciated property up to 30 percent of your adjusted gross income each year. Any excess amount may be deducted over the following five tax years.

Gifts of Real Estate

There are many ways to give real estate to benefit Colorado State University. The method you choose depends on your individual circumstances and needs and how you want your gift to support the University. Any gift of real estate is subject to acceptance by the University's Land Acquisition Committee. These gifts are also subject to the Foundation's right to sell and realize the proceeds if the property cannot be used by the University.

Noncash Gifts

Many donors choose to contribute artwork, books, musical instruments, manuscripts, furnishings, animals, and other personal property as acquisitions or additions to existing University collections. These assets can be used for outright gifts. The tax consequences for gifts of tangible personal property will differ and are dependent upon the nature of the asset and the standard of "related use." The gift must be related to the University's exempt function. Generally the "exempt function" means the gift of personal property must be put to use by the University and not sold at the time of the gift.

Planned Gifts

Bequests and Revocable Trusts, Retained Life Estate Agreement

One of the easiest and most common ways to make a planned gift is through a bequest in your will. Through a well-planned will, it's possible to make charitable gifts of a specific amount, a particular property, a percentage of the estate, or all or a portion of your remainder – what's left after providing for other heirs.

A bequest in your will is an excellent method to provide a charitable gift for Colorado State University. Upon your death, the Foundation will receive your gift and utilize the funds as directed in your will. For many donors, a bequest enables a substantial gift to be made to the Colorado State University Foundation that may not have been possible to make during their lifetimes.

Important estate tax savings can result from a gift by bequest, since bequests to the Foundation may be deducted entirely from the taxable estate for the purpose of determining estate taxes.

Your bequest may be one or both of the following:

- Specific Bequest – a bequest of a fixed amount of money or specific property; or
- Proportional Bequest – a bequest of a specified portion or percentage of the residue of the estate, usually after other provisions have been fulfilled.

The proportional bequest is advantageous because it is self-adjusting to the size of the estate. A specific bequest might require revision from time to time as the size of the estate changes.

Charitable Gift Annuity

Through a charitable gift annuity, you can make a gift to Colorado State University and receive fixed annual payments for life. The payment amount is based on your age (or the age of the payment recipients) when the gift is completed. The older the donor (recipient) the larger the payments.

An income tax deduction is allowed for a portion of the amount transferred. For a period of years, only part of the payments will be taxed as income. If stocks or other property that has risen in value is given in exchange for a gift annuity that pays income to a donor and/or spouse, the realized capital gain can generally be reported at what may be more favorable capital gains tax rates over a period of time. If you (the donor) and/or a spouse are the only payment beneficiaries, the amount used to fund a gift annuity is generally not subject to estate taxes that might otherwise be due.

The payment can begin currently or can be deferred for a period of time at your determination (but no more than 20 years). You can name yourself as the sole annuitant or designate another annuitant, either solely, concurrently, or consecutively.

A sum of money or certain other property may be used to establish a gift annuity. An income tax deduction is allowed for a portion of the amount transferred in exchange for a gift annuity. Up to two people may qualify for annual gift annuity payments.

Charitable Remainder Annuity Trust and Charitable Remainder Unitrust

Charitable remainder trusts are irrevocable trusts that feature income to be paid to lifetime beneficiaries. The annuity trust pays a fixed income based on the value of assets at the time the trust is created, while the unitrust provides a fluctuating income based on a fixed percentage of the trust's market value as determined on an annual basis.

When the trust is created, capital gains tax can be postponed, and an income tax deduction is available for a portion of the value of the property. Income from the charitable remainder trust may be taxed favorably under lower capital gains tax rates. There also may be estate tax benefits.

When the trust is created, an income tax deduction is allowed for a portion of the principal used to establish the trust. Throughout the life of the trust, income is reportable to you (or another income beneficiary) based on the nature of the assets held in trust.

Life Estate Agreement

Entering into a Life Estate Agreement is another way to donate a ranch, farm, or residence for those donors who want to continue to enjoy and use their property during their lives. While an actual transfer of the future interest in the property is made to the Colorado State University Foundation now, you may still live in the home or on the farm or ranch for the rest of your life.

At the time of the irrevocable transfer of ownership of the property, a substantial income tax deduction may be allowed.

The charitable deduction is the full market value of the property minus the calculated dollar value of the retained life estate as determined by government tables.

This donation allows you the full use of your property during your lifetime and the lifetime of your beneficiary. You continue to pay maintenance, insurance, and taxes and retain other rights, including the right to rent the property. The residence does not need to be the principal residence – it can be a second residence or vacation home. If it is a farm, the donor does not need to reside on the farm when it is given to the Foundation.

For example, if you irrevocably transfer your home to Colorado State University, you retain the right to live in it for your lifetime, a term of years, or a combination of the two. You may also use a vacation home to create this kind of gift. While you retain the right to live on the property, you continue to be responsible for all routine expenses, maintenance fees, insurance, property taxes, repairs, etc. If you later decide to vacate your property, you may rent all or part of the property to someone else or sell the property in cooperation with Colorado State University.

Owner or Beneficiary of Life Insurance Policy or Retirement Plan

Gifts of life insurance have valuable and attractive benefits for the University and the donor. If you have no dependents, or when your dependents no longer need the protection of an existing life insurance policy, you can give the policy to the Foundation and gain substantial tax benefits for the year of your gift. If you make a gift of an existing life insurance policy, you can make a sizable gift without reducing your income, you may receive an immediate and substantial federal income tax deduction, you may receive deductions for future premium payments, and your federal estate taxes may be reduced or eliminated, depending on the size of your estate.

You may also purchase a new life insurance policy and name the Colorado State University Foundation owner and irrevocable beneficiary. In this case, you receive a charitable deduction for the unexpired premium in the year of the gift and all future premiums.

Another alternative is for you to name the Colorado State University Foundation as beneficiary of a life insurance policy you still control and own. Although you do not receive a federal income tax deduction now, you may reduce estate taxes because the proceeds are a charitable gift.

Giving Through Retirement Plans

Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs), company-sponsored pension and profit-sharing plans, and other methods of saving for retirement may be appealing sources for charitable gifts. If you are over age 59½ and find that you have more than adequate resources set aside for retirement, it may be wise to periodically use a portion of your retirement funds to make charitable gifts.

Amounts remaining in qualified retirement plans at death may be subject to income taxes and possibly estate taxes when received by heirs. For this reason, charitable gifts of retirement plan balances can be a gift of choice from income tax and estate planning perspectives.

If you wish to provide a loved one with income while also providing for your charitable interests, retirement plans can be designated to fund a special type of gift to meet both objectives. All arrangements must be made with the plan sponsor, not through your will.

Other Gift Considerations

Your philanthropic gifts are an investment in the current and future success of Colorado State University. Whether you make an unrestricted or designated gift, you can choose to use your gift to create an endowment fund or an expendable (nonendowed) fund.

A gift to establish an endowment creates a perpetual source of funding by keeping the principal of the gift intact forever. Only the income of the fund's earnings can be spent to support Colorado State University in the manner of your choice. A portion of the endowment earnings is added to the principal in an effort to keep pace with inflation. Your endowment gift will support Colorado State for generations.

If you choose to use your gift to establish an expendable fund, the fund may be spent in its entirety to support Colorado State University in the manner of your choice at the time the gift is made. Your nonendowed gift will be expended for current needs of programs you select.

Named Endowment Opportunities

Endowment levels indicate the minimum funding required from private sector donors. Each chair, professorship, or other endowment may need to be funded at a higher level to meet the needs of a specific program. According to the current spending policy of the Colorado State University Foundation, 4.5 percent of an endowment's market value is available for allocation each year. This policy is subject to change at the discretion of the Foundation Board.

$3 Million • University Endowed Chair

This designation is accorded to that select number of faculty judged to be truly outstanding scholars and teachers according to rigorous, nationally accepted standards. The title of University Chair is one of the highest honors Colorado State University may award to a faculty member. The reputations of recipients reflect their special creative and research contributions, as well as their efforts in shaping the world's understanding of their fields of study. University Chairs at Colorado State, as at other prestigious universities, constitute that small cadre of exceptionally gifted professors whose names evoke immediate acknowledgement and respect in academic circles. Annual allocations from the endowment are expected to fund the salary, benefits, and operational costs for the position.

$1.5 Million • College Endowed Chair

Recipients of these chairs must have demonstrated significant contributions to their fields through exceptional teaching and scholarly excellence. These individuals are expected to be of national stature with established track records of achievement. In addition to acquiring a minimum gift of $1.5 million from a donor, a college must commit an appropriate level of funding to cover salary, benefits, and operational costs for the position.

$750,000 • University Professorship

This designation is intended to enhance faculty positions held by scholars/teachers with outstanding qualifications. The achievements and qualifications of Distinguished Professors are expected to be extremely high, setting them apart from the majority of their colleagues. Earnings from these endowments supplement faculty salary lines.

$375,000 • College Professorship

Professorships are typically held by gifted faculty members whose accomplishments indicate great potential. Their efforts are focused on honing their teaching skills and on carving out areas of research or performance. Earnings from these endowments supplement faculty salary lines.

$250,000 • Endowed Visiting Lecturer or Artist Fund

This designation is reserved for those select and accomplished leaders who are invited to lecture or teach at Colorado State University for a limited period of time and are not permanent members of the Colorado State faculty.

$50,000 • Endowed Graduate Fellowship

Fellowships are awarded to students performing research on campus. These fellowships enable outstanding students to continue their pursuit of research on the graduate level.

$25,000 • Endowed Scholarship or Program Fund

Scholarship or program endowments support students or programs in any of Colorado State's colleges or units.
