Surgeon General approves surgery funding for deaf boy

By Sgt. W.M. Alexander

The Surgeon General of the Navy has approved $25,000 in supplemental funding to the 4-year-old deaf son of Marine Sergeant Juan Hidalgo. The funds will help foot the bill for a $35,000 operation that would help the boy hear again.

The Hidalgo's bid for help came last year after their son Eric met stringent requirements that qualified him for the 22-channel cochlear implant. The implant is a device that allows some totally deaf people to hear by putting small amounts of electrical current near the hearing nerve.

CHAMPUS could not fund the procedure because it is considered experimental in children under 18 (Approval by the Food and Drug Administration is reportedly near completion).

Louise Kartun, the family's former Kailua neighbor, took the cause as her own and eventually sought help through the Air Station's Medical Department. The Brigade Surgeon's office put in a request to the Surgeon General for supplemental funds in January, and final approval came Friday.

The Hidalgo's have since made a humanitarian transfer to MCAS El Toro, Calif., where the procedure will be performed at the nearby House Institute in Los Angeles.

Corps' senior enlisted Marine addresses Congress on quality of life

By Sgt. Nathan Portman

In a presentation to the Defense Subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee, SgtMaj. David Sommers, Sergeant Major of the Marine Corps, spoke on the improved quality of today's Marine Corps and expressed some concerns.

He attributed the improved changes to the information revolution.

"It has impacted military life directly," he said, "and has translated into greater requirements for intelligence, initiative, and tactical creativity at much lower levels on the battlefield. As a result, we recruit for intelligence and reliability, and have done so successfully."

Along with the improved quality comes better and more realistic training and a higher overall readiness.

"Pound for pound, dollar for dollar, we have more combat-ready firepower than ever before," he said. "Real skills for real situations are being practiced and performed."

SgtMaj. Sommers emphasized that he was not trying to minimize the impact of former Marines and noted that they have always risen to the task at hand.

He expressed his concern over talk about retirees' benefits being cut as a cost-saving measure and pointed out that treatment of retirees has an impact on young men and women entering the service today.

"In contrast to the past, today's Marines have different expectations of the service," he said. "A good job and a family, which used to be long-term goals, are important to many high school graduates during their first enlistment."

In the last three years, for the first time, the Marine Corps has had more dependents than Marines. "Today, more than 42 percent of Marines are married; two out of three families have children under the age of 11, more than half of the spouses work outside of the home, and one out of three spouses is under the age of 24."

Because of these factors, SgtMaj. Sommers noted that family support cannot be overlooked, if only for the sake of combat-readiness.

Friends remember Bennetts at service

By Curtis Lum

WAHIAWA — Hundreds of people came from all parts of the island Tuesday night to say goodbye and remember a friend, family member and loved one.

"We miss her," Mable Nelson of the Peaceful Holiness Church said of Kimberly Bennett. "But God in his wisdom saw fit to call her home."

Nelson was one of several friends and fellow church members who eulogized the wife of GySgt. John Bennett, who at 36 was killed along with her 5-month-old son Cameron Friday night near Waipahu. The two were in a minivan that was struck by a semi-trailer near Waipahu.

Eight other people, including Bennett's two surviving children, were injured in the accident.

But the tragedy — at least for 90 minutes Tuesday — was set aside as friends remembered the Kailua resident in a moving, high-powered and emotional memorial service at the Tabernacle of Holiness Church, which she attended regularly.

Speaker after speaker described Bennett as a loving person who did not have a negative drop of blood in her body.

"To get on the wrong side of this woman you would have had to be the devil himself," said Audwin Meekins, a deacon at the Tabernacle of Holiness Church. "She was one individual that brought to this ministry a type of person that we haven't seen in a long time."

Several of Bennett's Alpha Kappa Alpha Inc. sorority sisters held a private service prior to Tuesday's memorial. They described her as "truly a wife, mother and sister to us."

GySgt. John Bennett of 1st MEB G-4 Motor Transportation, is comforted by a friend Tuesday at the Memorial Service in Wahiawa.

"Her everyday life showed how much she cared for others," added one woman.

Bennett's positive outlook on life was challenged several times over the past six months.

Last September, she was forced to enter the hospital because of soaring blood pressure. Within a couple of days, the twins were born — three months premature — and no one expected them to survive.

In January, one of the twins, Ian, died of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome at the Bennett home. The entire family accompanied Ian's body to the Mainland for burial.

But Meekins said Kim Bennett "loved in spite of her problems." Nelson added, "She always had a positive outlook on every situation. No matter what she was going through, she was there to help."

Bennett loved music and she loved to sing. A portion of Tuesday's service included the voices of the church's children choir, which Bennett directed. Her favorite song, "I Go to the Rock," was performed by Yvonne Cruz.

Tears of sadness were absent from most of the service, but many in attendance could not hold them back when the Tabernacle's pastor Restee Collins remembered little Cameron Bennett.

"Cameron was a fighter," Collins said. "He was well-loved and, from what I understood, spoiled. We thank God for him because he fought and was a fighter. He fought until the very, very end."

Members of the church planned to leave today with Kim's husband John and children McKenzie and Jamie for funeral services in Kim's hometown of Akron, Ohio.

Kim, a member of the church for 2 1/2 years, will be missed by fellow church members, who described her as "the girl with the laughing eyes."

Said Tabernacle evangelist Sheron Collins, "Any minute now I think she's going to come in and get her Sunday school class ready. She was more than just a church member. She was a friend."

Editor's note: Friends of Kim Bennett, along with First Hawaiian Bank and the Marine Corps, have established a "Kim Bennett Memorial Fund." The fund will be used primarily for the caring and education of six-year-old son McKenzie and seven-year-old Jaime Bennett.

Those who would like to contribute may deposit funds at any First Hawaiian Bank branch, in the name of the Kim Bennett Memorial Fund. Or, contributions may be sent to:

Recent runner accidents cause for concern

By Cpl. Gregg Marcantoni

MP Dept.

Three weeks ago, two Marines from the same unit were struck by motor vehicles here on the same day.

Complaints have been received at the Military Police Department lately about children, Marines and other residents of the Air Station riding their bicycles and jogging in an unsafe manner.

Air Station Order P5600.6b,

Traffic Regulations, applies to bicycles as well as motor vehicles. MPs recently initiated an all-out effort to promote safety by enforcing bicycle and jogger regulations. They emphasize that traffic signals must be obeyed and turn signals must be used by both motor vehicles and bicycles.

Bicyclists and joggers should use the bicycle lanes provided throughout the Air Station. If there is no lane available, riders and runners should follow the flow of traffic, always remembering to obey all traffic regulations. When crossing intersections, bikers should walk the bike across.

Station Regulations require that bike riders:

- keep at least one hand on the handlebars at all times
- ride as near to the right side of the road as possible, and

- never be towed or pulled by another vehicle.

Wearing ear or headphones while riding a bicycle or running can restrict hearing, to the point of being dangerous and is in violation of station regulations.

During dark hours, bicycles must be equipped with lights. See SAFETY/A-6

Welcome home

B Btry. 1/12 returns from UDP

By Cpl. Doris Carrero

The Marines of Bravo Battery, 1st Hn., 12th Marine, returned home "piece meal" Feb. 15-23 after a six-month deployment to the Far East, as part of the Unit Deployment Program. Families waited in the cold darkness of the early mornings or late evenings with leis, balloons, and welcome home signs made from bed sheets which were draped over their cars to greet their husbands and fathers. The deployment began when the battery took off from Hickam Air Force Base Sept. 3.

After arriving at Camp Foster, Okinawa, the Marines spent one week checking in. During that period, they received a series of indoctrination briefs on subjects like terrorism and Japanese customs and courtesies.

Immediately following the indoctrination, half the battery, accompanied by 600 Marines of 2nd Bn., 9th Marine, boarded a ship heading to Iwo Jima for a five-day amphibious exercise.

Meanwhile, the other half of the battery received an indoctrination by the Special Operations Training Group, which informed them on what to expect for the following six months.

Mid-September marked the beginning of special operational training for the battery.

Oct. 19-20, the battery, along with pilots from Marine Medium Helicopter Squadron-262, participated in a joint field exercise in the Central Training Area.

In late November, Bravo 1/12 met with the Japanese Ground Self Defense Force. It was what the Marines considered a military and cultural one-on-one exchange. According to 1stLt. Dave Andersen, Bravo 1/12's fire direction officer, those two weeks were the highlight of the deployment, but they weren't at all what the Japanese expected. "They thought that all Marines were six-foot six and hairy, got drunk every night, and beat up on our troops," he said. "But once we got away from that stereotype, we learned a lot from each other."

During the two weeks, the Marines and the Japanese gave each other classes on their equipment and training. They also conducted two days of joint live fire exercises.

According to 1stLt. Andersen, the range safety measures were more strict there than they are here on Oahu.

"Marines who have shot on the ranges at Schofield Barracks know how strict the regulations are," he said. "On Okinawa, these are doubled, because there are villages on the other side of the range. But we made the best of what we had."

He pointed out that the training on an island which is a "dot on the map" was more challenging than what they conduct at the Pohakuloa Training Area. "We know PTA like the back of our hands, so the training we perform there poses little challenge. The training we conducted while we were at Oki increased our combat readiness," he said, "and that will only benefit us in the long run."

Last month, the battery prepared for logistical and maintenance readiness evaluations and inspection by the Field Supply and Maintenance Analysis Office.

But that came to a halt when, halfway through the month, the battery received notice that it had five days to prepare for a commanding general's inspection.

"I'm proud of the Marines. No matter what was thrown their way, they were flexible," said Capt. Patrick Bristol, Bravo Battery's commanding officer. "They passed the inspection with flying colors, and after that was all over, they picked up where they left off."

According to Capt. Bristol, the training the deployment offered gave the Marines a better understanding of their individual capabilities—especially the NCOs.

"The deployment gave them an opportunity to develop as individuals and Marines," he said. "They were given more responsibility. When they were assigned a task, they had to make it work. And when they made mistakes, they had to pick themselves up and brush themselves off, because there was no one to do it for them."

More than 100 Girl Scouts and their leaders from troops aboard the Air Station came together Feb. 25 and 26 to take part in "We're Cooking" at Camp Paumotu, a girl scout camp located amidst the modern communication satellites in the Kahukus.

The campout emphasized some of the traits that girl scouting is based on—physical fitness, decision making, and building the creativity within themselves, through activities like nature hikes, the arts and crafts shop.

If the Girl Scouts weren't testing their hiking skills on the trails or learning how to make bean bags in the arts and crafts shop, the troops participated in their own activities.

According to Lydia Jaramillo, service unit manager and a Cadette leader, the service unit campout, which is scheduled to be an annual event, had a dual purpose.

"It not only allowed the girls to have fun, but also gave them an opportunity to make new friends," she said.

For adults like Debbie Samsel, leader of Brownie Troop 709, the camp allowed them to live a second childhood.

"Scouting keeps us older folks young," she said. "It's not everyday you can act like a big kid and get away with it."

For five Cadettes, the campout meant more than a fun-filled weekend. It was an opportunity to earn the second highest award in girl scouting—the Silver.

Liberty McCaty, Beatriz Jaramillo, Christin Geier, Allison Zaner, and Sandra Hildt were recognized for their efforts in a wide range of girl scout experiences and the commitment to working to better their lives and the lives of others.

The service units outing enabled them to fulfill their leadership requirement, the last of five needed to receive the award.

Each Cadette was assigned a Girl Scout troop and was responsible for guiding it along the nature trails, leading it in Girl Scout songs, and taking it from one activity to another.

The campout was different compared to the campouts that the individual troops hold. There was no cooking duty for these girls, since there were six parents who volunteered.

"I wouldn't have missed this for the world, when I see my daughter smiling and having a good time," said SSgt. Henry Craig. "I'd do it all again just to see her that way."

The parents also know that scouting offers more than just a good time. It instills a positive influence as well.

"We consider the scouts to be a good gang," said MGySgt. Curtis Hildt, brigade motor transportation chief. "So we say when a kid joins the scouts, whether it be boy or girl scouts, he or she becomes a member of a good gang."

Dorsey Jr., commander, U.S. Third Fleet, home ported at Pearl Harbor, on firing the M-16A2 rifle at the weapons range here March 9. Vice Adm. Dorsey and several officers from his staff visited the Air Station for a familiarization with Marines and their capabilities. In addition to the M-16, Vice Adm. Dorsey fired the M-203 grenade launcher, and the M-60E3 and M-2 .50 caliber machine guns. Vice Adm. Dorsey also took to the driver's seat in the F/A-18 simulator and an assault amphibian vehicle.

According to SgtMaj. Sommers, the cost of maintaining two households, the separation of the family, the burden of child care, and the increased stress brought on by more short-term deployments to Okinawa, shipboard deployments, and deployments away from their home base, are all detractors from readiness.

"Quality of life issues directly impact our warfighting capability," he said. "We have recruited good people, prepared them for combat, and now, to keep them effective and in uniform, we have to help them take care of their families."

SgtMaj. Sommers went on to point out that the Corps' Family Service Centers, in conjunction with the Department of Defense and the Navy, are helping in these areas.

"They provide employment resource centers, family advocacy programs, child development centers, and other essential services for our Marine corps families," he said. According to SgtMaj. Sommers, the Corps is requesting two more child development centers in fiscal year 1990.

He also urged the committee to support family and single housing initiatives. According to SgtMaj. Sommers, although projects initiated over the past few years have made significant inroads in eliminating the Corps' housing deficit, it remains a severe problem.

Military pay is another concern of SgtMaj. Sommers. "Despite the welcome pay increases under President Reagan, last year almost $400,000 was received in food stamps at Marine Corps commissaries," he said. "We can only speculate on how much Marines spent off-base in food stamps or, even more importantly, how many were eligible for the assistance but too proud to ask. Only when our pay approaches, and stays in line with the civilian community will we be able to assure our Marines that their reward for service will not be poverty."

SgtMaj. Sommers also touched on his concerns for medical care. "Across the country, the availability and cost of health

'Major investment of himself' helps sailor reach goals

 When Petty Officer Second Class Paul Holbrook began his tour at the Station Dental Clinic, he had no college credit. He'll leave with a bachelor's degree.

That's not all. He also earned a place on the National Dean's List twice, and was selected for the National Honor Society for business students based on his grade point average. He was accepted into the Delta Mu Delta business fraternity.

As a dental technician, he pioneered a new program that trains Red Cross volunteers in the dental field. He was the dental clinic's choice for Sailor of the Quarter for the second quarter FY-89. He was recommended for a Navy Achievement Medal for his contributions on the job, and for all this, he's been dubbed "The Machine" by his supervisor, Chief Petty Officer Stephen Houston.

"I think the guy is just amazing," said DT2 Houston. "He earned that degree in two and a half years. I don't know how he did it. Ever since he walked in this door, his eval marks have never been less than 4.0 (the highest for the Navy). He's stood every watch, I've sent him on three deployments to PTA, and he was the leading petty officer for two Eagle Provider operations. The Navy has not suffered one iota because of his off-duty classes. His work schedule has never changed. I don't know how he did it."

"How he did it," is a question DT2 Holbrook never seemed to wrestle with.

"Whatever it took, that's what I did," he said forcefully. "When I joined the Navy, I had three goals: I wanted to get my business degree by age 22, I wanted my MBA (master of business administration) at 25, and I wanted to be making a six-figure salary by age 32. These goals are not unrealistic to me. Whatever it takes to get it done, that's what I'll do. If there's a stumbling block, it doesn't matter; I'll step over it."

To "step over it," this industrious 22-year-old had to do in two and a half years what takes most full-time business majors four years to accomplish.

That meant major sacrifices, or rather, "a major investment of himself," as he prefers to call it - which meant, at one point, taking six accelerated courses in one semester when it looked as if he wouldn't reach his goal.

"I became such an efficient manager of time," he said. "I really had no choice, because I wanted to do well in school and I didn't want to slack off on the job. So the only way I could make it happen was to extend my days up to 20 hours. It was a matter of saying, 'Hey, do I really need this extra sleep?' And, as it turned out, I didn't."

"Some people say you need 25-hour days, but I learned that I was wasting a lot of time. I'd even go get a haircut and the hour I spent waiting was plenty of time for me to finish an assignment or write a paper. I've had no Saturdays since I've been here, but this was something that I wanted."

DT2 Holbrook had so conditioned himself that he was able to begin his day at 6 a.m., go to work, and at 4:30 p.m., head for Chaminda University. This, at times, meant driving to Camp Smith and NAS Barber's Point when the required courses weren't offered here.

After school, he'd spend time with his wife and work on school assignments until 2 a.m.

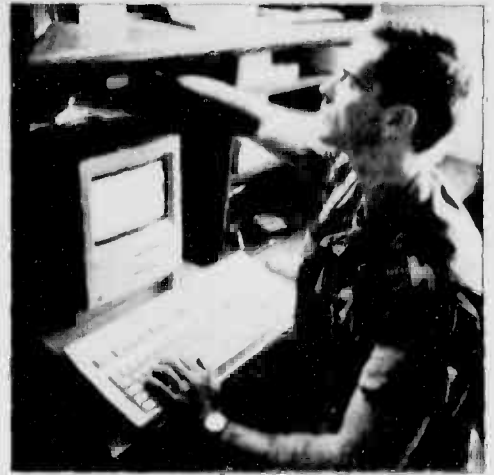

"I had gotten so conditioned to it that it was nothing for me to wake up and start fresh the next day," he said. "In fact, even though taking six classes was a literal nightmare, I managed to make six straight A's that semester."

Paying up to $600 per semester also became a nightmare. While the government paid 75 percent for two classes each semester, much of the money came from his own pockets.

"At times, I'd buy books only for my important classes, and in others, because I couldn't afford the books, I trained myself to become a profound listener. There were about seven classes like that, but I did well in them just by listening to the lectures."

The Twin Falls, Idaho, native welcomed the nightmares so long as they brought him closer to his dreams. He even remembers being "hummed-out" when Christmas leave in Idaho caused him to miss a class.

"I had gotten so addicted to school that I actually missed it," he said. "I'm so addicted now that all I've got to do is twiddle my thumbs. But I read incessantly. I'm getting ready for my MBA and I'm trying to keep up late to stay conditioned. It's hard to get into the mode where you need little sleep." After the long hours, money and work invested, DT2 Holbrook received a bachelor's in business management from Chaminda as a late Christmas present last year, just nine months after his 22nd birthday.

He re-enlisted for two years aboard the USS Arizona Feb. 6, and will begin a tour with the Naval Dental Clinic in Bremerton, Wash. He'll also pursue a double master in business at the University of Washington.

Although his work has seemed to outweigh the amount of play he's gotten these days, hard work has made DT2 Holbrook anything but "a dull boy."

An avid sports fan, running, swimming, weightlifting and racquetball keep him in shape. While he has an obvious serious side, fellow sailors said every work day is punctuated with a constant outpour of spontaneous wit, compliments of DT2 Holbrook. His knack for humor became evident when he was asked, "Who provided the steam for your big push toward education?"

"Well," he replied with a look of sincerity, "Mr. Rodgers has had a very great impact on my life, actually."

The real answer to that question turned out to be his parents. When he graduated from high school in 1984 to join the Navy, the decision was made with the welfare of his parents in mind.

"My parents had put all three of my sisters through school and they were going to put me through, too," he said. "But they are such hard-working people, and I

1) member of household or relationship test, 2) citizenship test, 3) joint return test, 4) gross income test, and 5) support test. The important thing here for the divorced family is the support test.

The exemption is only a problem for those not filing jointly. When filing separately, the custodial parent is generally treated as providing more than half of the child's support and may take the exemption. This treatment may be reversed by one of two methods.

The first way is if the custodial parent signs a written declaration stating that the custodial parent will not take the exemption for the child, and the noncustodial parent will attach this declaration to his/her tax return, the noncustodial parent may take the exemption. The second way is if a divorce decree or separation agreement executed before 1985 provides that the noncustodial parent provides at least $800 support for the child during the tax year, the noncustodial parent may take the exemption.

Alimony

Alimony is the amount paid to a spouse or former spouse under divorce or separation instrument. Alimony is deductible. You may deduct alimony that you are required to make to your former spouse. You may not deduct child support. Property settlements are not alimony. You deduct alimony from gross income. You enter the alimony on line 29 of Form 1040. You may not use Form 1040 EZ or 1040A to claim this deduction. If you deduct alimony, you must include your former spouse's last name and Social Security number.

Alcohol Incidents

A Marine was arrested for DWI off station by the Honolulu Police Department following his involvement in a traffic accident. The HPD officer smelled alcohol on the Marine's breath. The Marine submitted a breath test which revealed a .23-percent blood-alcohol content.

A Marine was arrested for theft and underage drinking off station by HPD. The Marine was initially seen removing a tire from a vehicle in Kailua and was arrested. The officer detected alcohol on his breath.

Two Marines were apprehended by MCX security and released to MPs after being seen acting in a disorderly manner and drinking whiskey in the Marine Corps Exchange.

Two Marines were apprehended for underage drinking. One of the Marines was also apprehended for aggravated assault. MPs responded to an anonymous report of a fight taking place at the Enlisted Club. Upon their arrival, one of the Marines admitted to striking the other in the face with a beverage glass. MPs detected alcohol on both Marines' breath.

 Marine attempted to board the Air Station through the H-3 gate. MPs noticed the Marine line weaving as he approached and stopped him. A breath test revealed a .18 percent blood alcohol content.

• A Marine was apprehended for being drunk in public. MPs received a report of an individual lying in the street in a station housing area. When MPs arrived, the Marine was allegedly sitting on a curb next to his bicycle. The Marine was bleeding from a cut over his eye. The MPs noticed a strong alcohol smell on the Marine's breath. When the Marine heard the siren from a responding ambulance, he attempted to flee. He was restrained and transported to the Branch Medical Clinic and was later transported to the medical clinic at Pearl Harbor for further observation.

Other events

• A Marine was apprehended for possession of an illegal weapon. During a command-authorized vehicle inspection at the Mokapu Gate, MPs found a pair of nunchakus under the driver's seat of the Marine's vehicle.

• A Marine and a civilian were apprehended for breach of peace, provoking speech and gestures, and communicating a threat. The civilian was also apprehended for fraudulent use of a visitor's pass. The civilian and the Marine were allegedly involved in an argument in the parking lot of Building 1064. During the argument, the Marine allegedly threatened the civilian. MPs learned that the civilian had been sponsored aboard the Air Station by another Marine to go to Building 1085 only. The civilian's temporary pass was confiscated and she was escorted off station.

• A Marine was apprehended for being in a restricted area, disrespect to an officer, and disrespect to a SNCO. An officer and a SNCO detained the Marine after finding him sleeping on the floor of a room in Barracks 1655. The Marine was allegedly uncooperative and disrespectful towards the senior Marines. The Marine is on appellate leave (remaining attached to the Marine Corps pending court review). The Marine was escorted off station and issued a bar letter.

To report a crime or any suspicious activity on the Air Station, call the Military Police Department's 24-hour Crime Stopper number: 257-2123. Off station, call 911 for HPD.

 ust wanted to take some of the stress off them, knowing the government would pay for part of my schooling."
 "You know, my father is the type of person that, if he found a 20 dollar bill, would go through the streets looking for the person who lost it. He didn't have a whole lot of money, but he was honest and hard-working, and it is my parents' ethics that drive me today."
 After DT2 Holbrook completed boot camp at Naval Training Center San Diego, Calif., he attended dental school and the field medicine school, then began working as a chair-side dental technician at the Air Station's dental clinic.

 He is now the leading petty officer for the clinic's Fiscal Supply Department, where he controls a $97,000 budget.
 Though his reenlistment has committed him to the Navy for the next two years, DT2 Holbrook doesn't see his growing service time as an obstacle to his goals.
 "If I have to get out and get a job with 14 years time in service, so be it," he said. "It's a matter of knowing yourself and your own abilities, and I am confident in myself. I don't mean to sound cocky by any means, but I have so much confidence in my abilities, that sometimes I think I can make the world turn a different way. Many say they can't find a job once they get out, but when I go job hunting I'll say, 'Hey, this is your chance at me.' If they don't hire me, I'll just go someplace else."

 It is with that confidence that DT2 Holbrook plans to earn his doctorate in economics, land a corporate job, and earn enough money to foot the bill for his and his parents' retirement.

SGTMAJ/From A-2
 care is a concern to many," he said. "The Department of Defense and the Department of the Navy have started a number of innovative programs such as the NAVCare Centers and the CHAMPUS innovations. Quality health care cannot be solved by any one service or even the whole Department of Defense. Competition for manpower and rising health care costs make the subject of the greatest concern not only for our dependents and retirees but for our active duty combat readiness as well. I have seen the impact of these programs on our forces and support increases in them. We can not rest until our obligations are met for all our people."

Springing into Softball

Story and photos by Sgt. T. Shearer

Spring is in the air, and all around the Air Station softball teams are gearing up for intramural and varsity level play.

This year, teams have some good things to look forward to—the biggest of which is the up-grading of Risley Annex field, a project that began last September, and is highlighted by a new lighting system.

"The new field is in really super shape," said Dave Burnett, Station Athletic Director, and coach of the Men's Varsity Team. "We've already had requests for tournaments, and foresee it getting a lot of use."

Coach Burnett and his Hawaii Marine Varsity softball players baptized the field Tuesday night, when they hosted the Navy team from Pearl Harbor in a pre-season double header. Although they could only manage a split, Coach Dave Burnett set a personal record, logging three-plus miles walking circles between the dugout and Third Base, observing his varsity team. Coach Burnett will be conducting try-outs for the Hawaii Marine Team at the end of the month.

Burnett was happy with the results of the two close games. The Marines took the first game 9-8, and the Navy won the second 10-9 with a bottom of the seventh homer by All-Navy player Jeff Morrison.

The Hawaii Marines were led by two power-hitters: John Roberts, who knocked out two and Gourney Holley (ex-retired), who went three-for-three with two homers. On the Navy side, Blake Conti powered the ball with three homers.

"We're looking for new players on the Hawaii Marine team," said Coach Burnett. "We need to fill out our rosters for the WestPac Regionals coming up in July on Okinawa."

To fill out his roster, Coach Burnett is holding a try-out next weekend, beginning on March 31 at 6 p.m. People interested in competing in varsity level play and who will be able to make the July trip to Oki are needed to come out.

"What we need is consistency, in both defense and hitting the ball," said Burnett. "The civilian leagues we play in offer some tough competition. We can't afford to have an off-night because it will cost us a loss."

Tryouts will be held at Risley Annex, and Burnett expects about 70 or more Marines from around the island to show up. Any active-duty Marine is eligible to play, whether from Camp Smith Marines Barracks or the Reserve Station.

In addition to the Men's try-out, the Women's Varsity team is also getting their pre-season started and are looking for women to fill out their team.

For more information on any softball program, call Dave Burnett at 254-2516.

Sport Shows

Women's Soccer

The Station Women's Soccer Team, which plays in the Women's Island Soccer Association, is looking for new players. Their goal is to generate some fun while developing soccer skills and fitness, so even if you have never kicked a ball, come on out.

For more information, call Kathy at 254-1375 or Peter at 254-1660.

Over-30 B-Ball

An organizational meeting for the Over-30 Basketball season will be held March 30 at 11:45 a.m. in the station Theater.

For more information call John at 254-2516.

Volleyball tryouts

Try-outs for the Men's Varsity Volleyball team will begin at 6:30 p.m. on March 16. They will run through the weekend at the Main gym to give all players a chance to show their stuff.

For more information, call John at 254-2516. Women interested in making it on the Women's Varsity Team should call Sonia Stevens at 257-3566.

Lacrosse anyone?

If you are a closet lacrosse player, looking for a chance to get out and fling the ball, your chance is here.

If you have no idea what lacrosse is, you're still in luck. Several players on the Air Station are looking to form a team, and need experienced and rookie players to take the field.

If you're just itching to try out this sport of intense excitement, call John or Dave at 254-2516.

Hickam Softball Tourney

A Softball Tournament will be held at Hickam Air Force Base for all Class C Intramural Military teams, from April 7-9.

There is a limit of 32 teams and the cost will be $150 per team. A coaches meeting will be held April 4 at 7 p.m. at the Hickam Softball Complex.

For more information call Andy Laning at 449-0650 or 422-1572.
