@WHRO Public Media

From the Chief Executive Officer

Spring is right around the corner with its arrival on March 20! Goodbye chilly mornings, hello sunshine! Our annual spelling bee, which is a highly anticipated competition at the station, was held on February 11, and featured middle school students from across the region. It is WHRO's largest yearly production, and it takes a village to put together! In this month's issue, you can meet all of the champion spellers. Congratulations to each of them. We know how much studying and dedication it takes to make it to the spelling bee!

Speaking of competitions, another exciting competition in the works right now is our Young Storytellers Contest. This annual PBS Kids Writers Contest calls for children in grades K-5 in our community to write their own original story, poem or non-fiction piece and illustrate it. Last year, we received close to 200 remarkable stories written by extremely talented kids! We are all looking forward to reading this year's stories. Entries must be postmarked by March 24. Think you may know students who would be interested in this competition? For details on how to enter, visit whro.org/writerscontest

Coming soon, the WHRO Newsroom will bring the news to your email's inbox via a concise, e-newsletter that summarizes important local news. The newsletter will be sent out Monday-Friday, as a daily workweek occurrence. We can't make choices for you, but we can help with things like knowing who's on your voting ballot or when a big storm might roll in and ruin weekend plans! This is a project we have been diligently working on and are eager to share with the public!

We have one concert left in the Sandler Center's Out of the Box Emerging Artist Series hosted by WHRO radio talent, Paul Shugrue. Join us on March 9, for the last show of the season, featuring live music from the region's best acts. Visit whro.org/events for details.

March also calls for the return of one of Missy's and my favorite PBS dramas. Sanditon returns with Season 3 on March 19! In Sanditon Season 3, the story continues with the fearless Charlotte Heywood and her friend Georgiana Lambe. What adventures, scandals, intrigue and above all else, romance, await our favorite characters? We can't wait to find out! For those who haven't watched Sanditon yet, both seasons 1 and 2 are available to stream on WHRO Passport. Catch up before the upcoming new season!

Thank you for being a member of WHRO Public Media. Your support makes all of the ongoing work we are doing possible.

Take care, and have a great month!

Music Spotlight: The Vocal Sound of Jazz

Hampton Roads Public Radio was in its infancy when Jack Frieden began producing The Vocal Sound of Jazz. This year marks 43 years it has been heard over the airwaves here, and for a time, over WUOM in Ann Arbor, Michigan. The program originally aired for 30 minutes on Friday nights. It later expanded to an hour and moved to Saturday evenings where it's been a favorite of listeners for years.

Jack was first introduced to jazz during his post college years while living in Washington. He says, "DC had a thriving vibrant music scene and the interest in jazz vocal music was a natural progression of my deep love of the vocals of The Beach Boys, Crosby, Stills and Nash, and The Beatles." Jack returned to Hampton Roads and became a featured writer on music for both the Virginian-Pilot and Metro Magazine. The Vocal Sound of Jazz came soon after, and it now has been on the air longer than any other locally produced WHRV program.

Jack says he firmly believes that vocal jazz can serve as a gateway for people to explore more jazz and he loves showcasing jazz vocalists interpreting contemporary music—and emphasizing that the music itself is a living art form.

During his years of being involved in music, he's had a long interview with Graham Nash; sat next to Art Garfunkel and Carly Simon at a party honoring the legendary Jimmy Webb; and formed his own record label, VSOJAZ Records, with releases by Diane Hubka and Laura Martier. He maintains a website that features reviews new releases and spotlights news of the genre. And perhaps most important to jazz enthusiasts, each Saturday night, he provides a relaxing evening of great music on the The Vocal Sound of Jazz on WHRV 89.5 FM.

Tune in for Jack Frieden's The Vocal Sound of Jazz, Saturday evenings at 8 on WHRV.

The Future is Female

This being Women's History Month, it might be interesting to take a look (and listen) to how far women composers have come in classical music radio. I'm happy to say they have come a very long way, and classical music radio and the compact disc have definitely helped pave the way.

Back in ancient times (my early radio years), one could only find a trace here and there of women composers being featured on classical discs (LPs at the time). A check of an old 1966 Schwann classical record catalog found one Clara Schumann, two Amy Beach discs, one Cecile Chaminade and one Lili Boulanger. Pretty slim pickings in those days.

Time shift to 2023. A recent disc I featured on my Saturday This Just In program is entitled The Future is Female. They got that right. All the way from the twelfth century to today, music by women is pouring forth. The amazing Abbess Hildegard von Bingen (1098-1179) is constantly being recorded and performed (playing her works assuredly makes WHRO FM an "oldies station"). When you tune us in, it is nothing to hear the baroque sounds of Barbara Strozzi or an overture from Felix Mendelssohn's wonderfully talented sister Fanny.

Symphonies aren't just for the guys anymore. Check out some impressive Romantic era symphonies by Louise Farrenc and Emilie Mayer. You want an amazing musical polymath? Consider Teresa Carreño, who lived from 1853 to 1917. She was a composer, a famous singer, a pianist and a conductor! Want a women's lib pioneer? Try the formidable Dame Ethel Smyth of England.

For many years, we had world-renowned composer Thea Musgrave living here in Norfolk composing world-class operas. Not very long ago, the Old Dominion University Symphony Orchestra played a symphony by Florence Price, whose fame has blossomed and whose works have entered the standard repertoire. Pulitzer Prize-winning composer Caroline Shaw has performed her music with the Virginia Symphony, and they have also brought us composers like Jessie Montgomery and Anna Clyne with music director Eric Jacobsen conducting, concerts which we were privileged to broadcast.

A young girl with long, wavy brown hair and blue eyes is looking slightly to the right. She has freckles on her nose and cheeks. She is holding a peach in her hands. The background is a soft, out-of-focus outdoor setting. The entire image is overlaid with a semi-transparent grid pattern.
