STUDIES

Gender Training Portfolio

10 booklets plus reading materials.
Santo Domingo, 1993
INSTRAW/SER.B/45. (E)◆

The purpose of this Portfolio is to describe and disseminate information on women/gender and development for use in a variety of situations. Our aim is to promote the sharing and effective utilization of the knowledge about the interaction of gender relations in development planning and its effect on the status of women worldwide, to positively influence development policies and help make them more responsive to the needs of both men and women.

The Migration of Women: Methodological Issues in the Measurement and Analysis of Internal and International Migration

INSTRAW, 120 p. Santo Domingo, 1994. INSTRAW/SER.B/46, ISBN-92-1-127005-7, Sales No. E.95.III.C.1 (US$15.75)
(Second Edition) (E)▼

The Migration of Women provides an in-depth look at some of the problems contributing to the neglect of research on Third World women's internal and international migration. From a methodological perspective it focuses on the inadequacies in existing data on women's migration. The publication presents concrete recommendations on how to improve statistics and indicators on migration, by eliminating existing biases and misrepresentations, and analyzes the determinants and consequences of women's migration. This publication was prepared in collaboration with the International Organization for Migration (IOM) and the Population Division of the United Nations Secretariat.

STUDIES

Measurement and Valuation of Unpaid
Contribution: Accounting
through Time and Output

INSTRAW 124 p., Santo Domingo,

Women Environmental Management and Sustainable Development, Modular
Training Package

INSTRAW/SER.B/48,
ISBN-92-1-1270006-5. Sales No.
E.95.III.C.2. (E)▼

This publication is the first product of a major research project which examines the existing economic accounts and statistics. While the need to measure and value unpaid work was first identified nearly two decades ago at the First International Women's Conference, the research presented in this book concludes that housework, child care, elderly care, and other non-market activities are not yet valued in economic development. It describes some tools for measuring and valuing unpaid contributions to social and economic development and aims at facilitating unbiased measurement of women's contribution to productive activity.

This training package was prepared by INSTRAW, in collaboration with the International Training Centre of ILO, Turin. It was prepared in response and as a follow-up to the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development (UNCED). The package aims to contribute to an integrated approach in the organization and management of environmental policies and programmes through the integration of women's needs as well as their participation in planning, management, implementation and evaluation of environmental programmes and projects. It consists of an Introduction and four Modules (in bound volumes), plus transparencies and video cassettes and a trainer's guide.

160 p. Santo Domingo, 1995.
INSTRAW/SER.B/51,
ISBN-92-1-127051-0, Sales
No.E.96.III.C.2 (US$15.00) (E)▼

Targeting media people, the handbook aims at contributing to a more gender-sensitive media, by presenting arguments and issues concerning the power of the media and the representation of women in it. It provides a checklist designed to help people working in media programming and decision-making be more aware of the gender bias in the use of language and images. It also provides recommendations on how to promote women's participation in the media.

Based on how development planners and policy makers commonly understand and misunderstand the concept of gender, the booklet explains the evolution of the concept and how it has been addressed in development strategies. It is intended to help development planners and policy makers understand the concept of gender and introduce a gender perspective in their work. It aims at closing the gap between gender concepts and at applying these concerns in policies, programmes and day-to-day work.

This monograph presents a global overview of major credit programmes that have provided credit to women in the last decade. It includes a discussion of the importance of credit to women; women's limited access to credit from commercial sources; and the positive impact credit has on women recipients and their families. It addresses policy aspects, both for the private and public sectors, and presents recommendations for further research.

STUDIES

Valuation of Household Production and the Satellite Accounts

229 p., Santo Domingo, December 1996. INSTRAW/SER.B/52, ISBN-92-1-127053-7, Sales No. E.96.III.C.4. (US$20.00) (E)▼

This report is a sequel to the earlier publication of INSTRAW, The Measurement and Valuation of Unpaid Contribution: Accounting through Time and Output. Methods and techniques recommended in "The Measurement" were applied using data from Canada, Finland and Nepal. This report summarizes the results of the study and provides estimated values of the Satellite Accounts on unpaid household production for the three countries.

Rosa Braidotti, Ewa Charkiewicz,
Sabine Hausler and Saskia Wieringa.
Zed Books and INSTRAW, 1993.
224 p. (E) (To obtain contact Zed Book, London, England)

This book reviews the various perspectives in thinking about women, environment and development and attempts to clarify the political and theoretical issues that are at stake in the debate on this topic. The authors proposed their own ideas as to the basic elements they consider necessary in constructing a paradigmatic shift in thinking about these issues. Values such as holism, mutuality, justice, autonomy, self-reliance and peace are presented as some of the basic elements.
